Board to begin hearing appeals on assessments

By Maurie Walker
staff writer

Westland residents who feel their assessments are too high or that they should be given tax relief because of financial hardship have a choice of several days this month to make their appeal.

Westland's three-member board of review will be hearing cases in the council chambers of city hall 9 a.m. to 12:30 p. m. and 1:30-5 p.m. March 14, 15, 21 and 22, and 1:30-5 p.m. and 6-9 p.m. March 16 and 23.

City hall is closed daily between 12:30 and 1:30 p.m.

No appointments are being taken this year. Residents will be heard on a first-come-first-served basis.

PERSONS WHO don't appear before the board this month won't have the opportunity to ask for an assessment decrease until next March.

The first move in being heard is to fill out a petition that is available at city hall.

Residents are advised that in order to save themselves time, they pick up a petition, take it home and fill it out before coming in for a hearing.

Documents which will support the claims of a petitioner are necessary. An individual may represent himself or bring along an attorney, appraiser, real estate agent, family member or friend to help make a case.

In order to appeal hardship cases, homeowners are required to bring in copies of income tax forms.

The board of review has the authority to lower a property assessment if an owner can prove his property is valued at a rate higher than required by law. State law calls for all property to be assessed at one-half of fair market value.

The board can also lower tax bills if a property owner can substantiate a hardship claim.

THE BOARD doesn't make a decision on the spot. A petitioner will be notified by mail in April of the board's findings.

At least two members of the board must agree with a petitioner for a property valuation to be decreased. If a request for relief is denied by the board, a person may appeal to the Small Claims Division of the Michigan Tax Tribunal.

If the board agrees to a property assessment decrease, it will be for the 1983 tax year only. In hardship cases, a petitioner will have to return to the board next year if the conditions causing the hardship still exist and continued relief is sought.

Property valuations which are reduced by the board because they have been overassessed, are usually then reviewed by the assessor's office and adjusted permanently on the tax rolls.

According to a fact sheet prepared by the city assessor's office, a Westland property owner may receive a reduction in overassessment by the board of review if it can be proved:

- The house is recently purchased on the open market at a price significantly less than what it's been listed on the tax rolls.
- A home in the neighborhood similar to the one you own "in size, style and age" is sold for a price significantly less than your assessed value.
- A certified appraiser documents your home as being over valued.
- You consistently receive written offers on your home, if it is for sale, at levels below city assessment figures.
- You are incorrectly assessed for items or improvements which aren't actually part of the property, such as an additional bath or a finished basement.
- Severe structual damage has reduced the market value of your house.

THE FACT SHEET states a reduction for overassessment shouldn't be expected because of:

- The normal effects of inflation on housing values.
- A home is run down due to lack of proper general maintenance.
- Code violations, including noise, junked cars and dogs, at neighboring homes which you believe lowers the value of your property.
- Property taxes increase, but your income is fixed. In this case, consider going the hardship route.

Committees study future county hospital operation

By Sandra Armbruster
editor

The fate of Wayne County General Hospital — and the thousands of people who use its facilities — may well lie in the hands of several groups now studying its future.

A new group of local government officials last week began studying operating alternatives for the hospital at Michigan and Merriman roads in Westland.

Called the health and human services liaison committee, it is composed of mayors and supervisors from out-county areas who were appointed by County Executive William Lucas. Among its responsibilities is the study of Wayne County General. Casting importance on the study was a statement by Lucas shortly after he took office that the hospital may have to be closed or sold due to its deficit operation.

LIAISON committee member Charles Pickering, mayor of Westland, said that at last week's meeting Lucas made clear that he doesn't want to close the hospital.

"But if there aren't concessions (from employee groups), there will have to be a look at other operating alternatives," Pickering said the committee was told.

He added that he was concerned that the board of commissioners hadn't acted on an independent report on hospital operations that Lucas wants. At least one commissioner is cool to the idea of a new study.

"We've not even considered it. There have been beaucoup (many) studies," said Kay Beard, whose district includes Westland. "We're doing research on the number of studies that have been made to see whether the $67,000 for a new study is warranted."

Meanwhile, the commission's own human services committee, on which Beard serves, began Wednesday to hear preliminary testimony in preparation for writing an ordinance to cover the hospital's operation. That ordinance is mandated by the county's new charter.

Expected to testify Wednesday were representatives from University Medical Affiliates, which contracts with the hospital to provide physicians' services, Comprehensive Health Planning Council (CHPC) of Southeast Michigan and the county board of institutions.

BEARD SAID she wants to keep an open mind on what direction the hospital should take. She added that she wants to see the hospital stay open, although its administration and management may need "tightening up."

Writing the ordinance, according to Beard, should be "done without speed to make sure it stands up in court, and yet speedy enough so that people will finally know what its operation will be."

Also considering the hospital an "integral part of the medical care system for Wayne County and particularly

Economic woes plague facility

Publicity about the possible sale or closure of Wayne County General Hospital apparently has added to the problems the public facility faces.

"Our patient load has been down since this hit the paper," said Joseph Magda, director of fiscal affairs and hospital controller.

The hospital also has had trouble recruiting "in this environment," Magda said, especially in competitive, highly skilled areas.

But Magda agrees that the hospital does have problems, starting with a deficit operation, that have prompted Wayne County Executive William Lucas to push for concessions from employee groups or other changes at the hospital.

"We do have a deficit. We're unable to pay cost of revenue expenses for uncompensated care," he said.

Uncompensated care translates into payment for indigent patients who use the hospital's emergency room services, about 60 different outpatient clinics and inpatient beds.

Magda points out that there was an $11- to $13-million deficit in 1981 for the entire hospital complex, including

June trial date set for judge, others

By Maurie Walker
staff writer

A trial date of June 27 has been set for Westland 18th District Court Judge Evan Callanan and four other defendants who have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and violation of the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization statue.

The jury trial will be held before Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Horace W. Gilmore.

Attorneys for the defendants met with Judge Gilmore in his chambers Tuesday afternoon and agreed to the trial date.

In addition to Callanan, others facing trial in June are the judge's son, Evan Callanan Jr., an attorney; Richard Debs, a volunteer probation officer at the court and president of UAW Local 1776 in Ypsilanti; Sam Qaoud, a former Westland businessman and owner of Sam's Imports in Dearborn Heights; and Donald E. Black, an 18th District Court officer to Callanan.

All defendants remain free on $10,000 personal bond.

Black and another defendant, Louis Perry, a former Westland resident, were indicted on charges of giving false testimony to the grand jury. Perry, reported to be living in California, has not yet been apprehended. Black's trial has also been set for June 27.

THE DEFENDANTS had pleaded not guilty at their arraignment Feb. 25 before U.S. District Court Magistrate Steven Rhodes.

The indictments charge a pattern of criminal activity which included conspiracy, bribery, mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

The indictments reveal an FBI investigation which dates back to September 1980 and one in which informants were used and FBI agents posed as criminals to learn about the alleged fixing of criminal cases.

Following the indictment, all cases were removed from the jurisdiction of Callanan by Thomas Smith, chief judge of the 18th District Court.

All new cases have been assigned to Smith with arraignments and warrants being handled by Magistrate Les Hall.

All files in possession of Callanan or his staff were physically tranferred to Smith's staff.

Depressed economy feeds hospital's deficit

old, boarded-up buildings and grounds that still require some maintenance, police and fire protection.

The deficit for just the hospital's operation in 1981 was $5 million. Closing the hospital wouldn't erase either deficit figure, however, since the buildings and grounds still would have to be maintained, Magda said.

ADDING TO its budget problems has been a "tremendous turnaround" in revenue for the hospital, Magda said.

Payment from traditional third parties or insurance companies has dropped significantly. Blue Cross payments have dropped from 20 to 12 percent of the hospital revenue from patient care. One of the largest areas of deficit is in the follow-up care, clinic and emergency room care.

Most follow-up and clinic care isn't covered by insurance, Magda said. He said that now insurance companies have "tightened up" on what they're paying for emergency room visits, covering only trauma or life-threatening situations.

Cuts in funding for Medicare and Medicaid patients have further decreased funding, Magda said.

An occupancy rate of 63 percent isn't helping the hospital's ledger any, Magda admitted. The "big splash" expected after University Medical Affiliates contracted with the hospital to draw more doctors and their patients into the hospital didn't materialize.

While occupancy came up for a while, it didn't "go up where we expected it to go," Magda said.

To compensate for the occupancy fluctuation, Magda said, the hospital "doesn't staff for empty beds. We staff for average occupancy and needs. Agency nurses are used if the average is exceeded."

Magda added that the only way the hospital, which has already cut its occupancy rate to comply with the plan of the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Southeast Michigan, can save is if there are other revenue-producing deapartments in the hospital.

THE ONLY public hospital in the area with a trauma center for major disasters, Wayne County General provides the space and care that other hospitals may lack in case of a major disaster, Magda said.

But he insists that the hospital has looked for ways to cut costs. As of last October, there were 151 fewer positions than in the budget, Magda said.

Other cost containment measures have included vacating areas of the hospital, combining departments, efficiency programs, a new phone system, and contracting out for some services.

A new computer has allowed the hospital to reduce staff, record charges and improve cash flow, Magda said.

"We try to be cost conscious and energy wise. There are different ways of operating efficiently. We've been doing it with a lot fewer people," he said.

Criticism over employee wages ought not to rest solely with hospital staff, Magda said, noting that negotiations were handled "downtown" with only one observer or technical assistant from the hospital administration.

"Most raises were across the board for everyone," he said. "We stated before that in areas where we have to compete for staff, our salaries are fairly competitive. Salaries in unskilled areas are much higher."

Magda said the hospital still fights the old stigma of being known as "Eloise," the name given to the former mental institution located elsewhere on the grounds.

ASKED IF bringing private doctors onto the staff would increase occupancy, Magda said the situation could be "ticklish."

"Who would watch the patients?" he asked. "Students (from the U-M medical school) would do the work, and he (private doctor) would do the billing. It isn't easily workable."

If the state took over responsibility for indigent care, "it might be a whole different ball game," Magda said.

Cost of indigent care is about $28 million for Wayne County, Magda said, but the "next 10 biggest counties aren't anywhere near that. About $40 million for the whole rest of the state would be a lot."

Regardless of how the hospital's financial condition is resolved, Magda said that "one of the things we'll need is good, positive press about the hospital from the county executive."

"Good public relations would help immensely."

Health planner eyes area needs

western Wayne County," is Terence Carroll, executive director of CHPC which is responsible for planning health care delivery in the southeastern area of the state. Carroll explained his organization's position in a recent conversation with the Observer.

Despite recognition of the hospital's importance as a research and teaching hospital for the University of Michigan Medical School, Carroll said that during development of a plan to reduce excess hospital capacity in the area, Wayne County General was asked to reduce its number of available beds by 99 from a total of 388. Of the 99 beds to be reduced, 13 were in obstetrics, seven were in pediatrics and 79 in the medical/surgical area.

Bed reduction is a key health plan [illegible]

ners use to encourage cuts in the cost of health care by urging consolidation of hospitals or health services where appropriate.

Carroll said that as of February, the hospital had a licensed capacity of 319 beds, reducing its medical/surgical beds by 68 and pediatric beds available by one.

The bed-cutting assignment given the hospital was a "pretty heavy" one, according to Carroll.

"But we felt it was in accord with the formula used to assess occupancy and range of services," he said.

"We recognize that hospitals have different abilities to provide intensity of services for individuals with complex kinds of illness, when a variety of illnesses are present."

commending that the hospital close, but that the consolidation of services be "looked at and thoughtfully evaluated."

He noted that Wayne County is "responsible for the care of medically indigent patients. How that's met varies among counties in the state.

"Our position is that Wayne County government continue to look at and see how that can best be met," he said.

Moving patients from care in a public hospital to a private facility isn't always the most cost or patient-effective move.

Carroll pointed out that in the case of the state's mental health care system, patients needing hospitalization were moved out of public facilities costing $180 per day into private hospitals which cost about $280 a day.

Police search for 2 suspects in kidnappers

Westland police are searching for two men who broke into a home early Monday morning and kidnapped two girls after tieing up another and leaving a fourth girl asleep.

The two kidnapped girls, ages 13 and 15, were found safe in an apartment at 6679 Merriman in Romulus a little more than an hour later.

Police woman Laura Moore said warrants have been issued for the arrest of two Romulus men: Bruce Allen McGhee, 20, and Ernest Thomas Boillard, 26. They are charged with kidnapping, armed robbery, criminal sexual conduct, assault with attempt to commit rape and felony with firearms.

The two men, armed with a gun and a knife, broke into a Westland home about 1 a.m. Monday. They forced the two girls into a car and took them to the Merriman address.

One of the two girls remaining in the house freed herself and called the police. The names of the two girls, ages 17 and 18, who were left in the house are being withheld by police.

Their parents were not at home at the time of the incident.

Through information received by police, they were able to find the kidnapped girls in the apartment about an hour after the abduction.

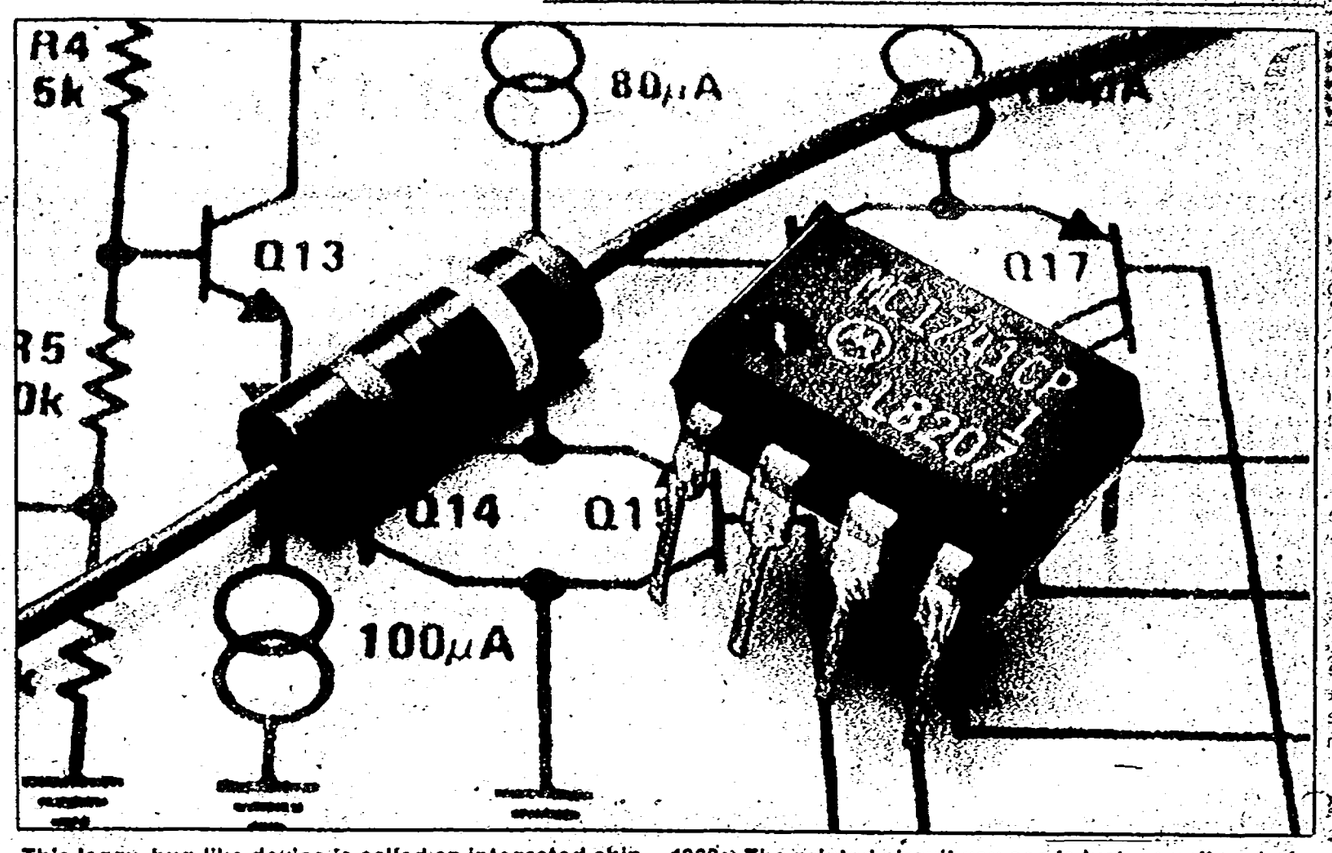
Eddie Harmon, owner of Servo Technology, explains the uses of a servo valve in such areas as robotics and flight simulators. The firm engineers and repairs electro hydraulic pumps in what may be the city's first high technology business.



This leggy, bug-like device is called an integrated chip. It may contain as many as 15 of the kind of resistors next to it that were used in technology available in the 1960s. The printed circuit you see is just a small part of what the chip contains in its tiny box.

Westland firm helps pump up progress in technology

By Sandra Armbruster
editor

If the Industrial Revolution has been replaced by a technological one, then a firm called Servo Technology may be the first to transform Westland's industrial parks into technological garden spots.

Servo Techonology, which opened in the Hix Road industrial park last November, is an engineering and repair firm whose clients range from the Big Three to the owner of a nuclear reactor in Argentina.

"The heart of the whole program," according to president Eddie Harmon, "is the servo valve. It's an electro-hydraulic device whose hydraulic output is a function of its electric input."

That means an electric motor is used to control the flow of a fluid, like oil, which is under pressure. The technology is used in the robotics industry, flight simulators and computer-controlled equipment for such fields as plastics, oil exploration and mining.

"It's like a tire," said Harmon. "It goes everywhere."

Servo valves really are like tires — they go on high-speed balancing equipment, according to Harmon.

HARMON, 35, started in the business at age 18 with Pegassus Labs, where the valves are manufactured. Harmon said he worked his way through Wayne State University, paralleling what he studied with the work he did.

Then while serving with the Army in Germany, Harmon worked with electro-hydraulic equipment for missiles and missle launchers.

"Most of what I know was self-taught. Most of it isn't published in books because companies don't want to tell you about what they're doing," said Harmon.

After working for his competitors for awhile, Harmon founded his company in 1975 in a one-room office. In 1977 he moved to a 3,200-square-foot building that he rented.

Harmon, 35, now has his company in a 12,000-square-foot building that he owns. He employs 11 people.

"There is an unlimited market for this type of control," said Harmon. "Robotics is coming into its own, and the industry needs someone to repair servo valves and sophisticated electronic equipment also."

Harmon notes that 1982 was his best year yet.

THE TECHNOLOGY of which Harmon speaks uses computer numerical control, a more sophisticated form than used in the past, to control machines by inserting coded numbers. Movements are controlled by the servo systems involved.

"The technology is moving along so fast that machines are capable of self-diagnostics if companies wanted to spend enough money," Harmon said.

He noted that the Boeing Corp. recently asked him for a feasibility study on use of a robot to empty wastebaskets and to paint walls.

"In this case, it would probably be cheaper to hire someone to empty wastebaskets, but robots do create a lot of jobs," said Harmon.

In one valve Harmon showed on a tour of his labs, he explained how servo valve systems allow for "very responsive" movement with precision control that is proportional to the electrical input of powerful motors. Precision for Harmon in this particular case means anything from zero to the width of 10 hairs.

HARMON SAID that other advantages of hydraulic or fluid-controlled systems is that they run smoothly at low revolutions per minute (RPM) and allow for the use of smaller but more powerful electric motors.

New technology has provided some systems called closed loop, according to Harmon. That means they have a "feedback package" that tells an operator if the machine is doing what it was told to do. If something is wrong, the feedback package corrects it.

Some numerical-controlled units are now voice activated, Harmon said.

BESIDES RUNNING his own business, Harmon also teaches one- to three-day seminars to companies that are having trouble in operating their systems. He said he also was supposed to teach a class at Henry Ford Community College for industrial hydraulic teachers, but not enough registered for the class.

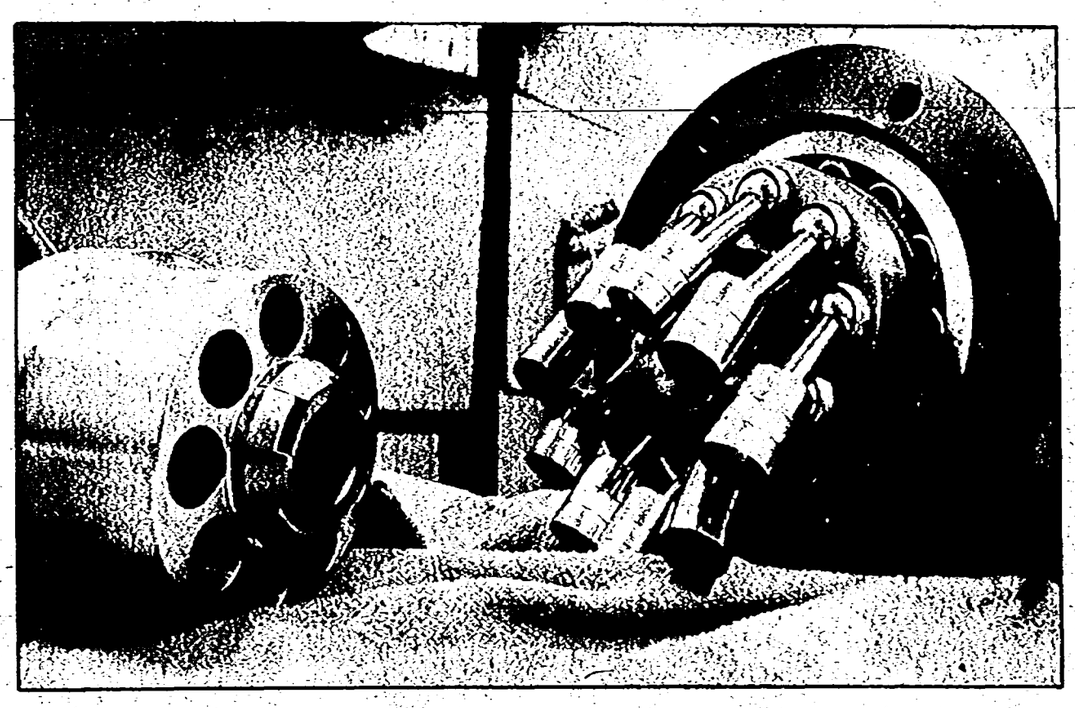
For students interested in pursuing a career in the field, Harmon advises that they study math and physics.

"To my old English teacher who may be reading this: Shakespeare didn't help me one bit," Harmon said.

"I love this business. It's challenging. There's something different all the time and it's high technology.

"Also, it fills a vital part for American industry to stay ahead of the competition."

Walt Kowalewski, one of 11 people employed by Harmon in his growing firm, tests a hydraulic pump in one of Servo Tech's labs. The firm moved into a new 12,000-square-foot building last November located in the city's Hix Road industrial park.



These two sections of a hydraulic motor represents what Harmon calls a manual dexterity test. Each of the pistons on the right section must be hand-fitted into the cylindrical holes on the opposite section. Harmon recommends that students interested in modern technology concentrate their studies in math and physics. Harmon worked his way through Wayne State University.

Don Aksamit of Canton Township designs a new equipment testing machine for the firm's use.

Bigger isn't necessarily better when it comes to modern hydraulic pumps. The pump in the foreground is capable of performing all functions done by the much larger, older version behind it. Harmon's firm helps industrial users of such pumps update their equipment with new fittings. Customers include auto companies, an Argentina nuclear reactor firm and other fields where computer numerically controlled equipment is used.

County board's hands tied on Lucas nominees

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Wayne County commissioners were split so badly last week that they were unable even to get enough votes to send the dispute to court.

They will try again in a special session today to answer the question: Does County Executive William Lucas or the commission have power to make appointments to four governmental bodies — the Drainage Board, the Areawide Water Quality Board (AWQB) and a new Solid Waste Planning Committee?

"I really don't know what your situation is," said attorney George Cross, the board's research director, when asked for advice. "There are not enough votes to pass or reject these names."

Commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, who served on the Charter Commission in 1981, said the charter is clearly on Lucas's side — whether suburban commissioners like Lucas or not.

Other commissioners said state law gives those appointments to the County Commission. There was almost no discussion of the names Lucas proposed.

COMMISSIONER Edward Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, proposed the commission ask for a Circuit Court declaratory judgment advising them who had the appointment power. His motion lost 7-5. A majority of eight votes is needed to pass anything.

Missing Thursday were Commissioners Stanley Rozycki, Clarence Young and Arthur Carter, all of Detroit. Had they been present, the guessing was that Rozycki would have joined the group of seven to form an eight-member majority against Lucas.

Lucas had nominated Board Chairman William Suzore of Lincoln Park and committee-of-the-whole Chairman Samuel Turner of Detroit to the drainage board; Duane Egeland, his public works director, to the seven-county AWQB; and a dozen persons, including Mack and Plymouth Township Trustee Lee Fidge, to the Solid Waste Planning Committee.

Lucas did not attend the meeting, and a top staff member made no comment on the situation or legal interpretations. Nor will Lucas attend today's meeting. He is in Washington meeting with state lobbyists and congressmen on economic development.

ARGUING that Lucas indeed had the right to make those appointments, Mack cited charter provisions which said the commission has power to appoint only four boards. These are the Board of Canvassers, the Metropolitan Airport Zoning Board of Appeals, the Planning and Development Commission and the County Election Board.

The charter gives the executive power to appoint "representatives on intergovernmental bodies and all other officials or representatives not in classified service."

The charter also provides that "if the commission fails to act on an appointment within 30 days after its submission to the commission, the appointment is effective."

Mack argued that since Lucas made the drainage board nominations Jan. 26, they took effect Feb. 25. Lucas's other appointments were made Feb. 8.

The committee-of-the-whole had recommended against the appointments Feb. 24, but Mack said the action had no legal consequence because "the board has not acted. It does not act within committees. It is stretching the imagination to say the board acted. The appointments have been made."

County OKs pact for 'super sewer'

"Super sewer" moved a step closer to reality as the Wayne County Commission approved contracts with 17 suburban communities to build a sewage treatment plant and 10-foot diameter sewer.

The project could be begun as early as this fall and provide 5,000 jobs for five years, said Public Works Director Duane Egeland.

"I sincerely hope," said Commissioner Richard Manning, D-Redford, "considering the dire need for jobs in this area, we act with utmost speed in getting this project off the ground."

SUPER SEWER is the nickname of the Huron Valley Wastewater Control System, a treatment plant at the mouth of the Huron River and a 60-mile interceptor along the Haggerty Road corridor in Wayne and Oakland counties.

The communities pledged $74 million as their share of the $284-million total cost. The federal government is expected to put up the rest, although the Environmental Protection Agency has raised questions about whether the suburbs from Plymouth Township northward should connect to the Huron Valley plant or Detroit's sewage treatment plant.

The city of Detroit is fighting the project. Three county commissioners from Detroit voted against it when the plan was approved by the commission's committee-of-the-whole.

THE PROJECT won preliminary approval from the Areawide Water Quality Board and the Regional Clearinghouse Review Committee of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. But the question of whether the northern portion of super sewer would flow to Detroit or the Wayne County plant is so far undecided.

Bill proposes special help for jobless in paying taxes

Jobless homeowners having trouble paying their property taxes could get help from the state under a bill that would create the Michigan Homestead Protection Authority. The Authority would sell revenue bonds to provide funds for loans to unemployed persons to pay their property taxes.

"If this bill becomes law, it could help save the homes of thousands of unemployed workers throughout the state," said Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn, a co-sponsor of the bill and chairman of the senate health and social services committee. His district includes Garden City.

"There are many people in Michigan who have worked hard all their lives but are now in danger of losing their homes because they have been without a job for a long period of time and can't pay their property taxes.

"I think the state should do everything it can to help these people during these tough economic times so that they can hold on to their homes and keep their families together," McCollough said.

UNDER THE terms of the proposed legislation, the Authority could loan money to pay property taxes or special assessments to homeowners who have been unemployed for six of the 12 months preceding their application for the loan.

The money would be lent at an interest rate one percent higher than the interest paid by the authority to borrow the money. The authority would pay the taxes to the local treasurer on behalf of the homeowner borrrowing the money.

In addition, the proposed legislation provides that the total amount of loans made to any owner could not exceed 80 percent of the equity of the owner in his or her property.

Repayment of the loan would begin after the homeowner has been employed for three consecutive months.

"This repayment provision would give the borrower a chance to get on their feet again after finding a job before they would have to start paying back the money," say McCollough.

The authority would consist of the state treasurer as chairman, the chairman of the State Tax Commission, and five other persons "with knowledge, skill and experience in academic, business or financial fields" who would be appointed by the governor with confirmation required by the senate.

Doubt in Lansing

SC negotiations may be tough

By Carol Azizian
staff writer

Schoolcraft College employee unions may face tough negotiations this year when contract talks open in April.

That's mainly because of the uncertainty surrounding state aid payments to the college.

"It's obvious that what happens in Lansing will have a definite impact on what we can offer," said Michael Petrack, who will act as the college's chief negotiator in talks with three of the four unions whose contracts expire June 30.

THE COMMUNITY college could lose nearly $75,000 in state money as a result of Gov. James Blanchard's proposed budget cuts. In addition, the governor has delayed two monthly payments totaling $834,000 to the college.

State aid accounts for roughly a third of the college's revenues. The other two-thirds comes from property taxes and tuition fees.

Lawrence Ordowski, president of the 22-member union representing assistant deans and directors, dagrees with Petrack. But he's still optimistic.

"A lot depends on what Gov. Blanchard is able to pull off in Lansing with regard to the income tax hike," he said. "If we don't panic early, we may wind up getting more than we anticipated."

BUT ANOTHER union spokesman, Bonnie Bryant, doesn't buy the argument that the college may be financially strapped this year because of the state's budget crisis.

"I know there are problems with cutbacks in state aid," said Bryant, president of the 51-member union representing secretaries.

But, Bryant said, the college gave pay hikes to faculty, non-union personnel and some executive administrators this year. The other four unions should get their fair share, she said.

"Job security will also be a big issue for us," Bryant added.

THE COLLEGE laid off eight secretaries and four custodians and maintenance workers last year.

The secretaries union, the Schoolcraft College Association of Office Personnel, is awaiting the outcome of an unfair labor practices suit it filed last year after the layoffs.

The suit was filed because the college failed to meet contractual obligations, Bryant said.

"They were supposed to give us raises in the second year of our contract. But they gave us an ultimatum last year — either take a pay freeze or face layoffs. They didn't budget for the pay increases."

Secretaries and administrators are only two of the four unions facing contract talks this year. The other two represent 30 custodians and maintenance workers and 11 food service personnel.

12 robots to join Schoolcraft faculty

They may not carry notebooks or be invited to campus parties, but Heros and Rhinos will be just as much a part of the Schoolcraft College scene this fall as the students.

Heros — R2D2 look-alikes — and Rhinos — resembling a mechanical arm — are robots. They represent the college's leap into the technological future.

College trustees last week approved spending nearly $87,000 to bring 12 robots to the Livonia campus. A state grant, which the college received to develop a robotics laboratory, will cover the cost.

THE ROBOTS will be used in the college's newly expanded robotics program.

"This program will be targeted for underemployed and unemployed workers such as tool-and-die makers and machinists," said Fernon Feenstra, assistant dean for technology.

Feenstra believes the program will be a big drawing card. "We offered three introductory robotics courses in January, and they were all filled within two weeks," he said.

Part-time instructors from area industries will teach the classes, Feenstra said. "We'll be asking for a full-time instructor for the 1983-84 school year, beginning in July."

STUDENTS MAY opt for an associate degree program either in robotics application or service.

In robotics application, students will learn how the robot fits into the manufacturing process, Feenstra said.

Classes in manufacturing, industrial management, engineering and computers supplement robotics courses.

Students who opt for the robotics service program will learn how to set up, tear down and repair robots and use a computer to control the robot's movements.

Classes in electronics, hydraulics pneumatics, systems analysis and trouble-shooting are part of that curriculum.

Robotics courses currently are conducted in the evenings and on weekends. The fall schedule has not yet been determined.

Job hunting seminar set

A job search skills seminar will be offered from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 19, at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

The seminar offers a "no nonsense" approach to what does and doesn't work in today's job market. Discussion will focus on what problems persons face, how to avoid mistakes and map out job hunting strategy.

Fee is $30. Registration information is available from the college, 591-6400, ext. 409.

Her appearance coincides with the annual Week of Prayer for Home Missions in which the Garden City Church will cooperate in reaching a national goal of $25 million for missions in America.

Dr. Ray Babb is pastor of the church.

Pax Christi plans peace meeting

Bishop Walter Sullivan will assess the impact of the proposed U.S. Catholic Bishops' pastoral letter on war and peace at a state conference Saturday of Pax Christi, the international Catholic movement for peace.

The event will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. in St. Patrick Church Center in Brighton. Cost is $10, or $5 for those with lower incomes.

A demonstration opposing the conference is being organized by the Fidelity Forum Coalition for Freedom. It claims that Pax Christi preaches pacifism, and calls upon Americans to surrender to the Soviets by preying on fears of nuclear weapons. The counter demonstration is scheduled to be held outside the meeting place.

Members of the Forum are the Eagle Forum, Michigan Conservative Union, Catholics United for the Faith-Detroit, Cardinal Mindszenty Foundation, Polish Army Veterans and Catholic Laity United.

Among the other speakers at the Pax Christi conference will be former U.S. Representative William Brodhead, the Rev. Richard Cassidy, director of the Office for Peace and Justice in the Archdiocese of Detroit, and Paul Mazur, executive director of Pax Christi USA.

Sisters Ardeth Platte and Carol Gilbert of the Saginaw Home for Peace and Justice will disuss nonviolent disobedience. The Rev. Peter Dougherty, organizer for Michigan Pax Christi, will talk on alternatives to violence, and Dr. James Anderson, associate professor at Michigan State University, will address the topic, economic implications of the arms race.

Shared responsibility shapes quality of life

moral perspectives

Rabbi Irwin Groner

A major television news network recently devoted a series of programs to an examination of crime and the criminal justice system in America today. The broadcasters focused our attention on criminals, the police, the courts, the prisions, and the victims. Valuable suggestions were made and important insights were communicated on this subject to a large television audience.

But a significant issue was overlooked. When crimes are committed, a few are guilty, but all of us have a shared responsibility. This is more than the responsibility of the police, the courts, the institutions of detention, or the government. It is the responsibility of the good people, whose collective will shapes the quality of life for our society.

Crime has become America's number one problem. It affects both the affluent and the poor, the city and the suburb, the older and the younger generations, whites and blacks.

Why are we closing down schools in Detroit, dismissing teachers, and reducing educational resources at a time when the demands of our technological society require more training for young people? We have assigned tens of billions of dollars for defense for new weapon systems and for ever more complex arms development. But there are massive sectors of our country that are characterized by poverty, ignorance social pathology, and disease — the breeding ground for crime.

Edmund Burke once wrote "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing." The greatest contribution we can make to the cause of violence and injustice is to do nothing, to refuse to assume any responsibility.

We live in a free society which, despite the current recession, is still the richest nation in the world.

Why are millions not employed when there is so much work to be done, when the core of our cities is a patchwork of blight, decay and ugliness? Why can we not take the energies, the capacities and the talents of the unemployed and rebuild our cities as the Germans and the Japanese rebuilt their cities after the destruction of the Second World War? One has yet to hear any political figure submit a bold program for revitalizing the great urban centers of America. Such a program would go a long way to reducing crime.

Our country has yet to deal with the most serious condition leading to crime — the proliferation of handguns all over this land. In order to purchase sleeping pills, it is necessary to secure a physician's prescription. In order to purchase a gun, no explanations are necessary.

I believe that the will of the majority is for gun control legislation. That will is frustrated by two elements: first the intense, highly organized and well-financed efforts of the gun lobby; and second, the indifference and neglect of the majority who have not yet emphatically expressed their collective views to Congress.

Thus, the issue of crime touches the lives of all of us. The kind of city we want is one in which each citizen sees himself as part of a community of concerned people, devoted to the common good. Only that sense of shared responsibility will enable us to deal effectively with the problem of crime.

Morality and politics discussed at LIT

How moral or Christian is Reaganomics? Is there room in a religion which preaches love, meekness and peace for the competitiveness of capitalism? These and other such questions will be explored by theologian, author and educator Michael Novak at a special seminar on "Christian Faith and Economic Systems," at Lawrence Institute of Technology Saturday, March 12.

The day-long seminar will explore Novak's theories on the need for Christian sects to wholehartedly support the capitalistic system, rather than socialism or other economic doctrines. It will be held on the LIT campus, 21000 W. Ten Mile (near Northwestern) in Southfield and is open to clergy, the business community and students. The cost is $5 for clergy and students and $10 for the general public.

County must reassure public on health care

FEELING POORLY, in health as well as in the pocket, a student decided one day to take advantage of the student health center at Wayne State University.

"You have a temperature of 102," the doctor confirmed. "By this afternoon, it will be 104.

"You better see a doctor," the doctor advised, withholding treatment because the student lived in town.

That student wasn't the only one who has encountered problems in receiving medical care. More than 100,000 patients used facilities at Wayne County General Hospital during the fiscal year that ended Nov. 30. Some of those patients traveled from as far away as Grosse Pointe to receive medical care.

That figure includes nearly 88,000 from Livonia south to Ecorse who used outpatient clinics. In Westland and Garden City, the hospital served 8,500 emergency patients and about 22,000 clinic patients. That's not including inpatient care.

SOUNDS LIKE a lot of folks depend on the hospital for emergencies, follow-up care and access to the more than 50 clinics operated by the hospital.

Perhaps its most outstanding assets — clinic and follow-up care — are also the biggest causes of its deficit, which in 1981 was $5 million, a hospital official said.

But Wayne County General also is the only public hospital left in the area that treats indigent patients and is diverse enough to provide acute care and to handle major disasters.

The need for Wayne County General has been well documented, but a lot of those folks have been left wondering where they're going to go if the hospital closes or is sold, as County Executive William Lucas has threatened.

While committee members ponder what may well be a life and death matter, the uncertainty that has been created is unconscionable.

The indigent, as well as those paying customers in western Wayne County who use the hospital's facilities, must be reassured that there will always be access to medical care for them. It is unlikely the state will take over that responsibility. That leaves it up to the county to reaffirm its commitment.

THE BOARD of commissioners, the committee members appointed by Lucas and Lucas himself would do well in studying the situation to consider the following points:

- Those 100,000-plus hospital users weren't the ones who negotiated above scale, across-the-board wages with employees at the hospital. That fiasco fell to the Board of Commissioners who signed the pacts.
- Hospital users weren't the ones who sat on their duffs, ignoring deficits caused by decay surrounding the hospital. A substantial part of the large complex of buildings needs to be razed, the land sold to the highest bidder and the need for private, costly fire and police protection on the grounds reduced.
- Hospital users weren't the ones who determined that only an elite from the University of Michigan Medical School could practice at the hospital.

There is no one, simple solution to the problems faced by the hospital and those it serves. The solution is likely to include wage concessions, consolidation and administrative changes.

But every time commissioners or committee members get a cough, sneeze, see an accident or hear an ambulance siren, they had better remember that someday they could be the ones needing a Wayne County General.

Catholic history full of debates

AS THIS is written, Sister Agnes Mary Mansour has yet to begin confirmation hearings as the state's new director of social services.

On Saturday her religious order, the Farmington Hills-based Sisters of Mercy, supported her candidacy. This action came as an apparent rebuke to the Most Rev. Edmund Szoka, Catholic archbishop of Detroit. Szoka demanded Feb. 23 that Sister Mansour leave the job because she had not publicly opposed Medicaid-financed abortions.

Sister Mansour's state Senate hearing started Tuesday. Tuesday was also the day the Archdiocese of Detroit officially began celebrating its 150th anniversary with a Mass in St. Anne Church in Detroit.

It is fitting that the hearing and the 150th anniversary are linked, for Sister Mansour's saga tells us much about the Catholic Church.

Approximately 35 percent of the people living in the six-county Detroit archdiocese are Catholics. About 25 years ago, 50 percent were Catholics.

MANY NON-CATHOLICS believe the Catholic Church is a monolithic, authoritarian organization in which every person thinks the same. That's not true. Roman Catholic church history is full of debates since the days of Peter and Paul.

The Catholic Church holds that the conscience of the individual is supreme. It requires that conscience be "informed," meaning that it must be based on research and study. This philosophy was endorsed during the most important meeting of church leaders in recent years, the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65.

Recent surveys have indicated that the majority of Catholic married couples practice a form of birth control not approved by their church. Yet these couples are members of good standing in their faith and regularly receive the sacraments.

How? These couples in good conscience believe they are acting properly by practicing birth control.

Few Catholic tenets are a matter of dogma Catholics must believe. Most rules can be changed. For example, many persons remember when Catholics were prohibited from eating meat on Fridays.

It is in that environment that Sister Mansour's superiors defy the wishes of the local bishop. They argue that the work of the Department of Social Services furthers the efforts of their religious order.

They also note that Sister Mansour has stated her opposition to abortion, and "Medicaid funding of abortions would continue . . . even if Sister Mansour were to resign."

HOW WILL THE matter be resolved? I hope the bishop withdraws his opposition and lets Sister Mansour serve. In her new duties, she will help the sick and the poor — consistent with her religious mission. She has also clearly stated her objections to abortion.

It would be disappointing to see this matter decided by the Catholic Church's governmental structure in Rome.

Whatever happens, persons outside the church know that debate over important issues is alive in the Catholic Church.

As the Rev. F. Gerald Martin writes in the current issue of the Michigan Catholic, the archdiocesan newspaper, "It is in faith and love that we are united, not in our opinions about everything, not even in our opinions about how best . . . to witness to that faith and to exercise that love."

Remember that as you contemplate the 150th anniversary of this Catholic archdiocese.

A hard look at the water barons

Tim Richard

DETROIT'S WATER and Sewerage Department is more than Detroit's business. The rest of us are helping to pay the bill and ought to be looking into what used to be thought of as Detroit's "internal" affair.

That thought struck me as I pored through George Kuhn's latest speech to the Detroit City Council protesting a rate increase. Kuhn, as Oakland County drain commissioner, acts as a wholesaler of Detroit's water and sewerage services to suburban communities.

"That water board," growled Kuhn, "makes the OPEC oil barons look like amateurs." Lest we suspect this suburban politician of engaging in rhetorical hyperbole, Kuhn proceeded to back up his assertion.

OPEC'S PRICE increases raised our pump prices of gasoline from the neighborhood of 30 cents a gallon in the early '70s to the $1.30 range at their peak — the price increased better than four times.

Auto companies, famed for giving us "sticker shock," have lifted prices in the same general range.

Since 1970, wholesale sewer rates in our fair region have been increased from 32.5 cents per million cubic feet to $4.58. This means the price increased to 14 times its 1970 level.

We know, of course, that much has had to be spent on the Detroit sewage treatment plant since it was discovered in federal court to be the worst polluter of Lake Erie. But a price increase of 1,400 percent? One must respectfully suggest that it may be a bit steep.

A PROBLEM less visible to us in suburbia has to do with delinquent water bills.

To grasp it, you have to understand that the city of Detroit sells water and sewer services retail to its residents and wholesale to suburban blocs of communities.

Kuhn's data shows Detroit retail customers are delinquent in their water bills to the tune of $25 million as of last Nov. 30. Detroit councilmen confess the delinquency figure now is up to $31 million.

What happens? "Under the present system, as we understand it, the amount of unpaid Detroit retail customer balances are a charge against working capital, which is supported by the rates of all customers, city and suburb alike," said Kuhn.

"In our district," he went on, "we pay the entire bill. If there are individual retail customers' delinquencies in one of our cities, we still pay 100 percent of the billing to us from Detroit.

"The city of Detroit, however, pays into the system only the money actually received from its retail customers. Detroit does not make up the dollar amount of retail delinquencies."

UNFAIR? Assuredly.

The argument used to be that Detroit could do what it wished because it "owned" the water-sewerage system. That argument was knocked in the head when the pollution case brought out that the system is financed by federal aid, state aid and charges to customers, with no Detroit "investment." It became abundantly clear that suburban customers had a stake in the system at least equal to Detroit's.

The horror story of how suburbia is covering Detroit's delinquent bills, however, demonstrates that, financially, the suburbs have perhaps a superior right to a voice in how the system is run.

The suburbs deserve the right to pick their own members of the water board in proportion to their population (about two-thirds) and a chance to compete for jobs.

Reform will require state legislation. Detroit will resist.

To succeed, you need a dose of luck

W.W. Edgar

One evening in the long ago, The Stroller was privileged to sit as a guest on the speakers' platform at Michigan State University to hear Jimmy Gheen, then one of the country's outstanding after-dinner speakers, talk to members of the graduating class.

The wiry little Irishman held his listeners spellbound with his humorous tales of what happened to some of his friends when they entered the outside world. And many were listed among the nation's top officials.

In closing he became very serious. He told the class that while education was important to get along in the battle of life, it wasn't everything.

"You must have enthusiasm," he said, "and you must have a desire to excel, and you must be dedicated." Then he would add with a smile, "You must have all these things and a helluva lot of luck."

THE MEMORY of these remarks came bounding back for The Stroller the other evening when he saw former President Gerald Ford sitting with former President Jimmy Carter discussing foreign relations and later as co-author of a lead article in Reader's Digest.

Never was there a better example of Jimmy Gheen's warning to the MSU students.

And seldom has there been a more fortunate fellow than Jerry Ford since his college days at the University of Michigan. Jerry played football on the 1932-34 teams and had the dubious honor of being voted most valuable player on the '34 team — which won only one game and lost seven.

After graduation, he tried coaching — without great success. Then he entered politics. Even then his name wasn't anything close to being a household word. He repeatedly was elected to Congress from the Grand Rapids district. But for years he was just another member.

Then in a leadership change, he was named House Republican leader. That's when Lady Luck started to smile.

VICE PRESIDENT Spiro Agnew was forced to resign. To fill the vacancy, President Richard Nixon named Ford vice president.

Soon Nixon was under fire as the Watergate scandal was uncovered. It was said that Nixon appointed Ford in self-defense. He was quoted as saying, "Can you imagine Ford sitting in the president's chair?" Nixon was accused of using Ford as a buffer to save himself.

It didn't work. Nixon, too, was forced to resign, and Ford moved into the Oval Office — the first man to sit in the president's chair who hadn't been in a national election. It was the highest honor he could get.

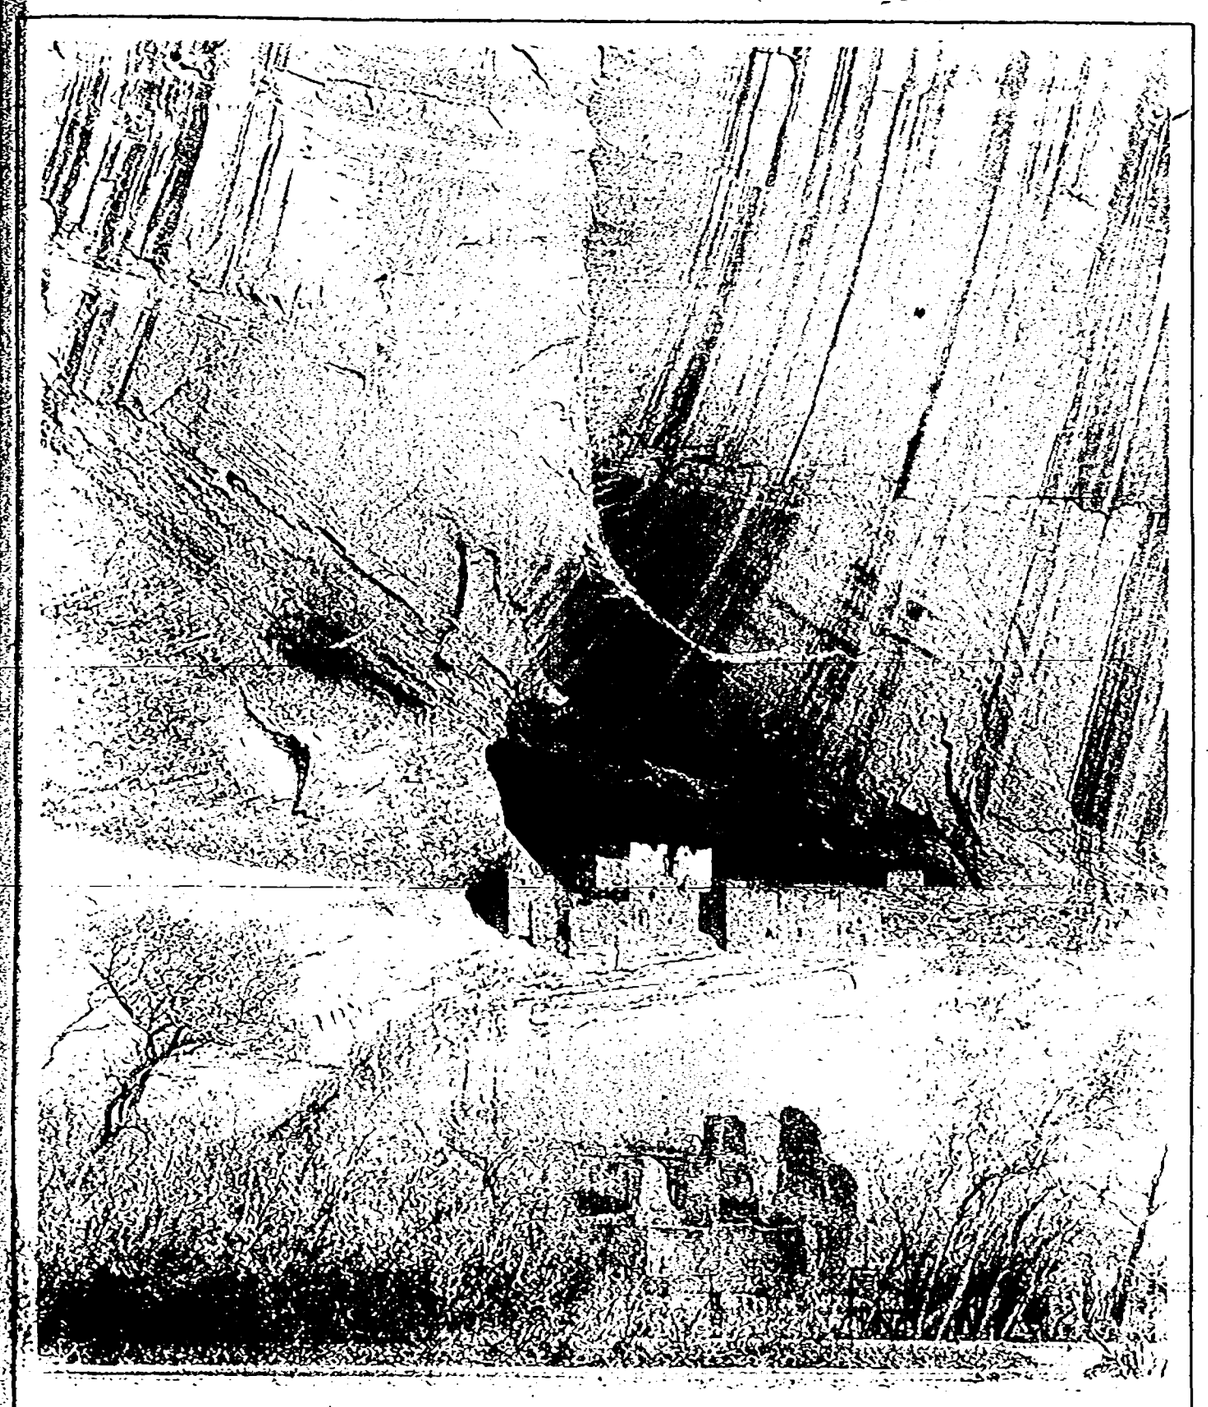
Ford had the added distinction of being president during the Bicentennial Celebration of 1976. He became one of the world leaders and will have a place in history.

HE DID WHAT was generally considered a good job as president, though he provided laughs by stumbling while getting out of an airplane.

On the golf course he hit spectators with his tee shots. Tommy Watson, the outstanding pro who tried to teach Ford, said he had two problems: "How to hit the ball and then how to find it."

But as folks smiled, Ford started collecting pensions that have amounted to more than $100,000 a year since he left office. And he is paid in the thousands these days to address groups around the country.

He proved Jimmy Gheen right when he said, "Education is fine . . . but to succeed you must have a helluva lot of luck."



'Off the tourist path'

"To get the good shots, you have to get off the tourist path of life" — that's Monte Nagler's philosophy. Braving fierce winds and a sleet storm, he hiked down Canyon de Chelley, Arizona, for this picture of the famous White House Ruins. Navajo Indians occupied these cliff dwellings more than a thousand years ago.

Picture detective solves print and slide problems

I often receive calls and visits from photographic friends and students complaining about picture problems.

From the description of the fault and at times the pictures themselves, I find most shooters don't know which to blame — the camera, the film, the processing lab or even themselves.

But by putting on a Sherlock Holmes hat and using methods of deduction, you can determine where the guilt lies.

PRINT TOO DARK? Not enough light reached the film.

First thing to check is the ASA setting. If you set it at a higher number than required by your film, you'll know right away what went wrong.

If you've set the ASA correctly and still have prints that are too dark, then look at your negatives. If there is detail overall, including shadow areas, then your exposure was correct, but the processing lab goofed. Ask for a remake of your print.

But if the negative lacks detail, then your camera's exposure meter may be at fault. The best way to check this is to stand side by side with a fellow photographer and compare light readings of the same subject. If your readings are inconsistent, take your camera in for repair.

PRINT TOO LIGHT? Too much light may have reached the film. Again, check the ASA setting first to make sure you didn't have it at too low a setting.

Then check the negative. If it looks good, request a remake from the lab. If it appears dense all over, check out your meter, as I've described, and take your camera in for repair if necessary.

Prints partially light and dark? A light leak. If the negatives match the prints, the problem lies in the camera and you should have it checked out. If the negative looks good, ask the lab to redo your pictures.

Scratches on your prints? Look closely at the negatives. If the scratches are intermittent, there was probably a burr on the lip of the film cartridge or a nick on the pressure plate (part of the film transport mechanism) in the back of your camera.

If the scratches are consistent through the entire roll, the problem could be twofold: A bad burr or nick just described, or a processing lab goof-up when your film was developed.

AN OVERALL yellowish tint on your prints? The cause is most likely either old film or a loaded camera left in a hot place.

Always check the date stamped on the carton when you purchase film, and never leave your camera and film where a hot sun may bake it.

For color slides, many of the same faults can happen to you, too, and the methods of deduction I've been describing will also work for you.

Just remember, the effects of over or under-exposure are exactly the opposite from negatives because slides in themselves are positive. Thus, if a slide appears too dark, it was underexposed, and if too light, it got overexposed.

So clue yourself in to playing photographic detective. You'll eliminate a lot of the common faults in photography which in turn will improve your pictures.

Sarris runs for SC board

Sharon L. Sarris

Sharon L. Sarris of Livonia will seek election to a two-year term on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees June 13. She was appointed to the board last August when Trustee Nancie Blatt resigned.

Three full six-year posts will also be filled this year.

A former resident of Plymouth and Northville, Sarris has lived and worked in the college district for 16 years. On a seven-member board with six Livonia members, Sarris said she is "committed to being responsive to all constituents of the Schoolcraft College District." The college district includes the districts of Clarenceville, Garden City, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth-Canton and a small portion of Novi.

Sarris is the first candidate formally to announce for the board.

SINCE HER appointment, she has served on the heritage and honors subcommittee and the planning committee for the board's planning workshop this week.

After graduating from Lake Michigan (Community) College in Benton Harbor, she earned a bachelor's degree from Michigan State University and a master's degree from the University of Michigan.

She taught high school in Livonia for 13 years and was a consultant in staff development for the Michigan Department of Education. Recently she has worked in franchise development for Harron Cable TV in Southfield.

Sarris is co-chairwoman of the Second District Michigan Women's Political Caucus and is a member of the Friends of the Livonia Libraries, Livonia League of Women Voters and Schoolcraft College Foundation.

Sarris was named "Livonia Woman of the Year" in 1977 by the Jaycee Auxiliary and chosen as one of the five outstanding young women in Michigan by the Michigan Jaycees.

Cameras in court? Media, law discuss

Cameras in the courtroom? Not in Michigan, one of the few states with no policy or experimental program allowing news cameras and microphones into its courtroom.

But a new proposal, on its way to the state Supreme Court, could bring the issue to a head.

A four-member panel which includes attorneys and representatives of the print and broadcast media will present arguments for and against "Cameras In the Courtroom" at the 1983 Freedom of Information Program sponsored by the Detroit Chapter of Women in Communications, Inc.

It starts at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 23 in the Book Cadillac Hotel, 1114 Washington Blvd., Detroit.

PANELISTS WILL include:

Richard Rassel, a Birmingham resident and director of the law firm of Butzel, Long, Gust, Klein & Van Zile. Rassel is chairman of the television-in-the-courts committee of the Michigan Bar Association and a member of its media-and-law committee.

Seymour Posner, a Lathrup Village attorney specializing in criminal practice.

Thomas LoCicero, head of documentaries and special projects for WXYZ-TV Channel 7 in Southfield.

Barbara McClellan, photo supervisor of the Detroit News.

Trudy Gallant, reporter and co-host of the WTVS Channel 56 news magazine "Video Detroit," will moderate the discussion. The program also will include a 12-minute film clip of several trials in Florida.

THE EVENING begins at 5:30 p.m. with cocktails (cash bar) and hors d'oeuvres in the Lawyer's Club of the hotel.

Safe at last — battered women now have refuge

By Sherry Kahan
staff writer

TO ME THIS place is like heaven."

"The best feeling I've had in a long time is here. I feel secure and well protected. My husband can't get me."

A woman we will call Betty was sitting on the couch in the community room at the new shelter for battered women founded by First Step. It is a private agency in western Wayne County involved in domestic violence.

Her 2-year-old child was sleeping in a playpen not far away, untroubled by the hum of conversation around her.

"I wish more women knew of places like this so they could get something out of it," she said. "I was abused for seven years and didn't know there was a place like this.

"If women knew there were other options to life than depending on a man, they could take steps and get out of their sitation. A lot of them are raised with the idea they have to get a man and settle down rather than becoming independent and standing on their own two feet."

Betty then threw in several other points. "I was an abused child," she said. As an adult she was kicked by the man she married, had her hair pulled out and her head struck repeatedly against the floor.

FIRST STEP board president Gary Greenstein, who practices law in Canton, became interested in First Step because he is familiar with problems like Betty's. He runs across them in his practice.

"It's amazing, the brutality that exists out there," he said.

It was support from citizens like Greenstein, more than 150 organizations and a dedicated staff that made it possible for Betty to sit at peace, sort out her life and try to escape the trap she has been in for seven years.

After many years of work, a shelter for beaten women has not only been achieved, but staffed by both professionals and volunteers. It has been painted and filled with beds, tables and chairs donated by the community.

A child's world can be a pressure cooker

By Sherry Kahan
Staff writer

ADULTS WHO think they have cornered the market on stress are sometimes surprised to learn that rashes, bed wetting and nervous gestures, developed by their children, may reflect that they too are under pressure.

Nervous strain may cause youngsters to overreact to things, change their behavior or develop illness.

Busy with their own problems, parents may not notice their kids are often on the receiving end of parental frustration or over-emphasis on academic or athletic achievement.

In a talk to members of Parent Support at their monthly meeting at Jackson Center, Livonia, Pat Chobot of Plymouth pointed out some of the worries that weigh children down.

They might feel responsible for the divorce of their parents, or become anxious over a death in the family. In addition, they have to deal with the problems typical of their age group, reaction to bodily changes, peer pressure, making friends and career choices.

A GUIDANCE COUNSELOR for 13 years, Chobot now works at Plymouth Canton High School.

"Spend a couple of days in a high school," she suggested. "You'll find it's incredible. Kids are dealing with choices we never had. They are trying to control their lives. They need your acceptance, but won't admit it. They need to know you love them, that you won't reject them if they experiment on their own."

Psychological upheaval is normal to young adults, in her opinion. "Many disorders they have when young disappear as adults. But if not treated some can develop into lifelong maladjustment."

She is a believer in setting limits for children.

"If they can say 'Mom and Dad let me do anything,' that is really dangerous," she said. "You are not providing a structure. You must let them know where you stand so they know what will happen when they break the rules. Kids want this."

CHOBOT REMINDED the men and women in her audience of the upheavals taking place in society that impinge upon the young.

"Families are going through major changes," she said. "It is rare to find a class of 35 students that has more than half the kids living with their own parents. The kids are coping with a single parent and new responsibilities. There is stress on little kids to do well in school.

"Children are very egocentric. They think everything revolves around them. They feel guilty for everything. It is not uncommon for a child in elementary school to give up candy, and think that will bring back his dad. Or that the reason Dad left was because the child laughed at his mustache."

In the later teens, they project blame outward. Everyone else is at fault, in their mind.

"They are incredibly sensitive human beings," she said. "They come out with things that surprise you."

THE INSECURITY resulting from the changing roles in society can also impact on students.

"There used to be a right way for a boy and girl to act," said Chobot, who earned a master's degree in guidance and counseling at the University of Michgan and one in administration from Eastern Michigan University.

"That is dissolving. It is going to be healthy. But a transition like this, while it leads to more choices and opportunities, also means more confusion and stress."

Kids can no longer rely on mom being in the kitchen and dad at the office.

In an interview, Chobot created an imaginary example of the kinds of problems that come to her attention.

The mother is working and the father is at home, unemployed. In what she called "a peak moment of frustration," the man says to his son, "How can I love you? You don't do anything to help around here."

"I'D PUT HIM in his father's shoes," she said. "I'd tell him to pretend he was his father and to look at what is going on in the family. Nine chances out of 10, the student finds he would react the same way."

Chobot then tries to steer him toward ways to improve the situation.

She suggested to those at the Parent Support meeting that they too make the effort from time to time to put themselves in their child's shoes or imagine they are teen-agers.

"Try to see the world through their eyes," she advised. "People need to know they are appreciated.

"Teaching a child to think at an early age may help him to make better choices later in life. If they learn to think, they may be more likely to say no to their friends, if necessary."

Chobot believes that lecturing is not always the way to handle children.

"Find out their feelings," she urged.

'Children are very egocentric. They think everything revolves around them. They feel guilty for everything. It is not uncommon for a child in elementary school to give up candy and think that will bring back his dad. Or that the reason dad left was that the child laughed at his moustache.'

First Step opens new shelter

Its location will remained a carefully guarded secret so Betty and women like her can continue to live in safety. Those wanting information about the shelter or help from it may call First Step at 425-8000.

"The main reason for secrecy is to try to prevent a violent incident," said Gayle Mattson-Croninger, executive director of First Step.

"If a person reaches a point where she anticipates injury, and if she knows she can go to an environment where she doesn't have to be concerned for her physical safety, then I think she can prevent abuse.

"She can get out. She has a choice. She doesn't have to stay in her home."

THE DAY JANE moved in, her son told her, "Now us kids and moms don't have to be scared any more."

Sitting next to Betty on the couch Jane said, "Since I've been here I feel like a grown woman, like somebody, instead of a child. My husband gave me that idea. I had to do it like he said, like a child. I had a helpless feeling before I came here. I felt I couldn't do anything without my husband. He took away my self-image. I was not allowed to see members of my family."

"He threatened to blow my brains out if I left with the children."

Jane has changed in other ways since she walked into the shelter.

"I've gained a lot of self-confidence here," she said. "I feel much better, more relaxed and safe. I'm getting a lot of counseling and help here about my options."

The shouts of eight or nine children of varying ages playing in the yard, reminded Jane of another subject.

"All the kids here seem to be well adjusted," she said. "They don't have to wonder if mommy will get hit again."

AT THE SHELTER there is room for 20 people, including children, said Cheryl Bader of Plymouth, its director. Women go there on a voluntary basis to plan their future in quiet circumstances. Staff members are on hand 24 hours a day. The length of stay depends on individual circumstances.

The staff is augmented by the help of about 50 volunteers who work with children, drive residents to appointments, do individual and group counseling and a variety of other tasks.

"Their skill level is noteworthy," said Mattson-Croninger. "We have people with a professional background in nursing, social work and guidance and counseling."

Bader said: "Even those without degrees show a high level of skill and empathy even before training."

Anyone wishing to volunteer may call First Step.

TALKS WITH with counselors generally take place in the large, often sunny living room. This is a total reversal of Betty's previous living conditions.

"I lived in a prison," she said. "My drapes were always closed. If I left them open I got in trouble with my husband. I was not allowed to have friends or socialize with anyone. I got out of the house every three weeks."

Mattson-Croninger mentioned the importance of ending the isolation experienced by abused spouses.

"We to try to get them to talk to other women and develop relationships so they don't feel alone and isolated. It could be the first time they are able to talk about their situation. Here they have time to talk to people in the same boat."

Betty agreed about the loneliness of her life.

"There's no one you can talk to, to help you see the problem you are in, let alone get you out of it," she said. "It is hard to think on your own when you are literally kicked around."

BUT LATELY thinking comes more easily.

"I am going to learn how to raise my children," she began in a tone of confidence. "I am going to learn to cope with myself and change. I'm filing for divorce, and I'm prosecuting him for abuse. I feel very sorry for him, for what he lost in life and for what he's done to himself.

"I learned more in two weeks here than I did in the 11 years I was married."

In addition to the pain Betty received from kicks and blows, she was also hurt by what she saw happening to her children.

"They got nervous," she said looking at her child sleeping peacefully nearby. "Every time someone slammed the door, the baby jumped. If someone made a noise like dropping a book she would wake up and cry.

"After being here 11 days she is sleeping through noises. The phone doesn't disturb her at all. Coming from that cold environment into a good situation like this with warm people around made her feel more secure and content.

"My son too. He was hitting. Now he's starting to express himself by talking. All the kids are. They're sharing and working things out without hitting."

Mood therapy is Town Hall topic

Dr. David Burns, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, will close this season's Livonia Town Hall lecture series with a talk at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, March 16 in the Mai Kai Theatre, Plymouth and Farmington roads, Livonia.

Author of the best selling book "Feeling Good: The New Mood Therapy," Burns will speak about his use of cognitive therapy, which is based on the idea that when depressed or anxious, people think in an illogical, negative manner.

Burns has found this kind of therapy useful in helping patients view themselves more objectively and straighten out their twisted thinking so painful thoughts disappear.

According to the psychiatrist, a patient can get relief in as few as three or four sessions.

Tickets at $10 may be purchased at the door of the theater, or by mailing a check payable to Livonia Town Hall to Terry Hand, 15778 Riverside, Livonia 48154.

Ticket holders can also attend the celebrity luncheon to be held at the Mayflower Meetinghouse following the lecture. Tickets are $7.50. Reservations are made on a first come-first served basis. Order a lunch ticket by mailing a check to Livonia Town Hall, Box 2143, Livonia 48150.

Dr. David Burns
town hall speaker

No reservations or cancellations will be accepted after the Friday preceding the lecture. Groups of eight may request seating at the same table.

Proceeds from Livonia Town Hall lectures are given to the Livonia American Field Service chapters in Livonia high schools. These chapters send Livonia high school students abroad to study, and bring foreign students to Livonia to study for a year.

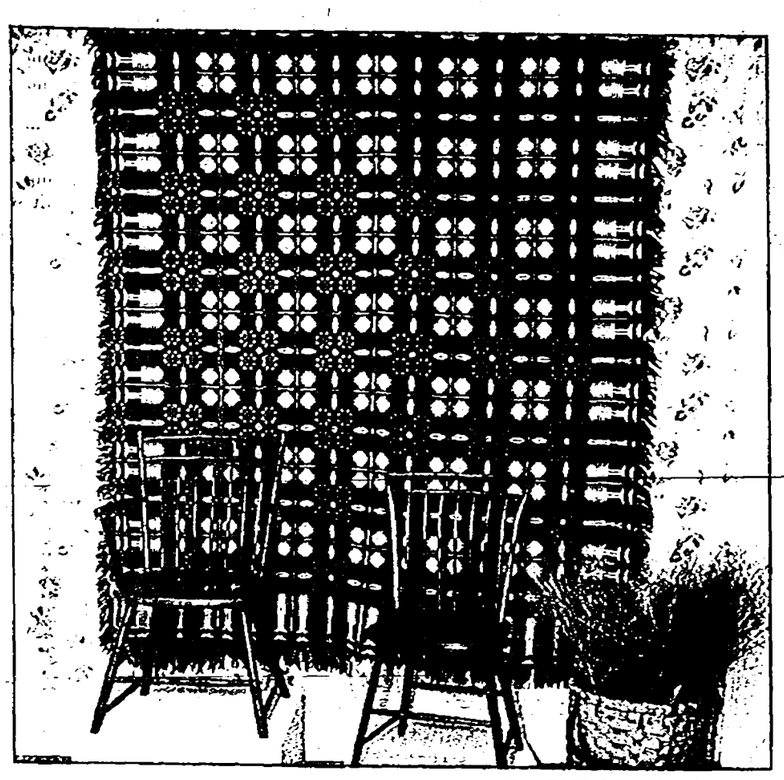
Greenmead welcomes spring with textile exhibit



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

On display is this hand-woven coverlet, circa 1825, in a five-block pattern of snowballs and pine trees. It is hand spun, dyed with indigo and cochineal. The chairs are Sheraton-style Windsor chairs with bamboo turnings, circa 1810-1850.

The Greenmead mop and bucket brigade has silently packed up its stuff and departed, leaving behind a squeaky clean Hill House Museum, freshly done from top to bottom.

But sparkling windows, freshly laundered curtains and brightly polished floor are only part of the new spring look at the vintage farmhouse that serves as Livonia's historical museum.

New displays focusing on historic textiles highlight the spring debut of the museum that traditionally closes for the months of January-February for volunteers to dig in and clean the 1841-built Greek Revival house.

Exhibits will include many handwoven, embroidered pieces and examples of various needlelaces from the collection of the Livonia Historical Commission and private collectors.

IN ADDITION, 19th century chairs will be featured, ranging from an 1810 Windsor chair to an ealy 1900 Mission chair — again from the commission's collection along with several that have been loaned by individuals.

The Depression Glass Club of Livonia has brought together a collection of depression-era toilet articles.

A cooperative venture between the Livonia Arts Commission and the historical commission has resulted in the initiation of a series of special displays featuring the work of local craftspersons.

Opening that series will be the Northville Spring Chapter of the Michigan and World Organizations of China Painters.

Highlighted will be antique hand-painted china (1880-1920) from the collections of George Leykauf and his his niece, Emma Beguhn of Redford Township. Present day china will be shown from club members, teachers and students and will trace the family progression of teaching that began with Leykauf.

Visitors will first see unfinished pieces, following through the various firings to the finished work.

The museum, at the corner of Eight Mile and Newburgh roads in Livonia, is open from 2-4 p.m. Wednesdays and Saturdays. Tours may be arranged by special appointment by calling the historical commission office at Greenmead, 477-7375. A recorder is available for the public's convenience.

Admission is $1 for adults; 25 cents for youths 10-18; under 10 and school groups are admitted free.

One of the new exhibits at Hill House Museum is the work of the Northville Spring Chapter of the Michigan and World Organization of China Painters.

Area felines spotlighted in purr-fect show

An event at the Southfield Civic Center this weekend has been characterized as the cat's meow.

What's down 'the Trail?' Cars, cars, cars, cars

Trafficking with traffic has been a major adjustment in our move to Florida.

In pre-retirement days, there weren't quite so many cars on the way to places we had to go.

I had a fairly short drive to work, and it rarely offered traffic problems. My husband drove to downtown Detroit, but at off-hours, so he rarely was jammed bumper-to-bumper.

The thing to do was try to stay out of community centers at rush hour and away from any shopping mall on Sunday. Follow those commandments and we could have it made.

NOW WE'RE SMACK in the middle of the tourist season in Florida, and we're learning to re-evaluate our traveling to avoid standing in long lines of cars every time we venture out.

One big part of the re-evaluation process is learning to deal with U.S. Highway 41, also known as Tamiami Trail.

"The Trail" in "the season" is a force to be reckoned with and well known to any vacationer who has motored along the state's west coast. In a recent newspaper article, I read that the highway used to be known as Banana Road in Sarasota, where we now live.

Many drivers driven bananas in its stop-and-go traffic probably would say the name never should have been changed.

You see bumper stickers about the horrors of Tamiami, and we have one retired friend who tells us he absolutely refuses to get anywhere near the Trail between December and April.

BUT TAMIAMI is our not-too-distant neighbor and main artery now, and really it's not that bad. We just have to learn to live with the highway and the time of year.

Gradually, we're figuring out the byways that I'm sure most residents know by heart. We appreciate the traffic light system here that provides for left turns in a safe manner.

And we're learning to redefine rush hour. It extends, we've found out, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. That seems to be the time when retirees and vacationers go out on their errands. At 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. you can make good progress.

One other thing: As we used to stay away from shopping malls on Sunday, we now are resolved to use the same system whenever it rains for a long time.

As one resident put it after a frustrating rainy Saturday at the nearby mall, "Every disgruntled northerner who couldn't go to the beach or play golf was in that mall all day."

Traffic has its snarls, but doesn't need to tangle life completely.

Margaret Miller is the former Suburban Life editor of the Observer and is retired and living in Florida with her husband Joe where she continues to write her MM Memos.

Cozumel a diver's paradise

Cruise reveals Mexican isle's once-hidden charm

1-of-a-kind traveler Iris Jones contributing travel editor

COZUMEL, MEXICO — You can learn a lot about a destination during a one-day stopover aboard a cruise ship. Our first port of call aboard the cruise ship Mardi Gras was Cozumel, on the Caribbean coast of Mexico. It turned out to be the best port of call, because we saw Grand Cayman two days later in the rain and were unable even to dock at Ocho Rios, Jamaica, because of rough weather. That kind of bad luck doesn't happen very often.

Cozumel is an island 12 miles off the Yucatan Peninsula. The people are from the same Mayan stock seen by Cortes and other early Spanish explorers in the 16th century. It was a village known only to a few lucky divers until Jacques Cousteau discovered black coral there in the 1960s.

It is still a diver's paradise. The lagoon of the Sol Caribe Hotel, across a narrow strip of water from our cruise ship, is a 'bunny pool' for beginners. The water in the lagoon is only waist high.

More experienced snorkelers make a school of yellow life jackets in the sea beyond the lagoon, getting a face-down view of colored fish, pink conch shells and the coral reef off-shore. Scuba divers go out by the boatload.

Some cruise ship passengers never get beyond this point. Others taxi to San Francisco beach, where you can swim in front of the El Presidente Hotel and snorkel around a plane sunk 30 feet below the surface by a Hollywood movie team. The rest of us go by taxi or motor scooter into the town of San Miguel, two or three miles away.

The motor scooters cost $15 a day at the dock. Smart shoppers found them for $7 a day at the Hotel Lopez on the town square. A taxi into town cost $3 no matter how many people ride, so most of us waited for other passengers to share the fare.

THE HOTELS stretch out on this side of town, most of them no higher than a palm tree. The downtown area of San Miguel runs from the dock and waterfront street about 10 streets back past the town square and the market.

It is a very polite and friendly town. The faces are Mayan, flatter and broader than those seen around Mexico City. From the dock, where a glass-bottom boat leaves every half-hour for the cruise ship docks, the town spreads out in either direction: palm trees, stucco buildings, sand and boats.

The cruise director typically recommends one or two shops in a port of call; usually the better known and most reliable ones, but not necessarily the most interesting shops or those with the best prices. Our most memorable stop was at Bazaar Cozumel, where we found an ex-Detroiter called Hazel Mrock managing the store. Hazel came down here 11 years ago and stayed.

She drew us a map marked with places we wouldn't find on our own, especially on the other side of the island: "It's still like Adam and Eve in the garden over there, a few restaurants and ranches, lots of empty beaches, but don't snorkel or swim there unless the beach is marked for it." You can ride a motor scooter around the island easily in a couple of hours or rent a Volkswagen mini-moke for $30 a day. We explored the restaurants and the people in town instead.

Local people told us that the best restaurants to visit at night were: El Ranchito, good food and service with Mexican decor; Such Is Life, good Mexican food, the best salads on the island, and Mexican jazz musicians and singers; Las Tortugas, Yucatan pork chops under a rain roof on an open patio; and Casa Denise, where you need advance reservations and a minimum of six diners for the Yucatan food (no menu).

Rolandi's Pizzeria, where an Italian family taught local Mayans how to cook their food, has "great spaghetti, lasagna, salad, pizza dough bread and sinful desserts." Pepe's is very popular among the tourists. So is the San Francisco restaurant, several miles out of town, "where you can get shrimp shish kebabs and live music for about 450 peso" ($3).

THE YOUNG are very lively at discos called Scaramouche, Hippopotamaus and Grips (Grips has a good restaurant, mixed menu). And young to not-so-young throng to Carlos 'N Murphys, one of a chain of funky restaurants in Mexico.

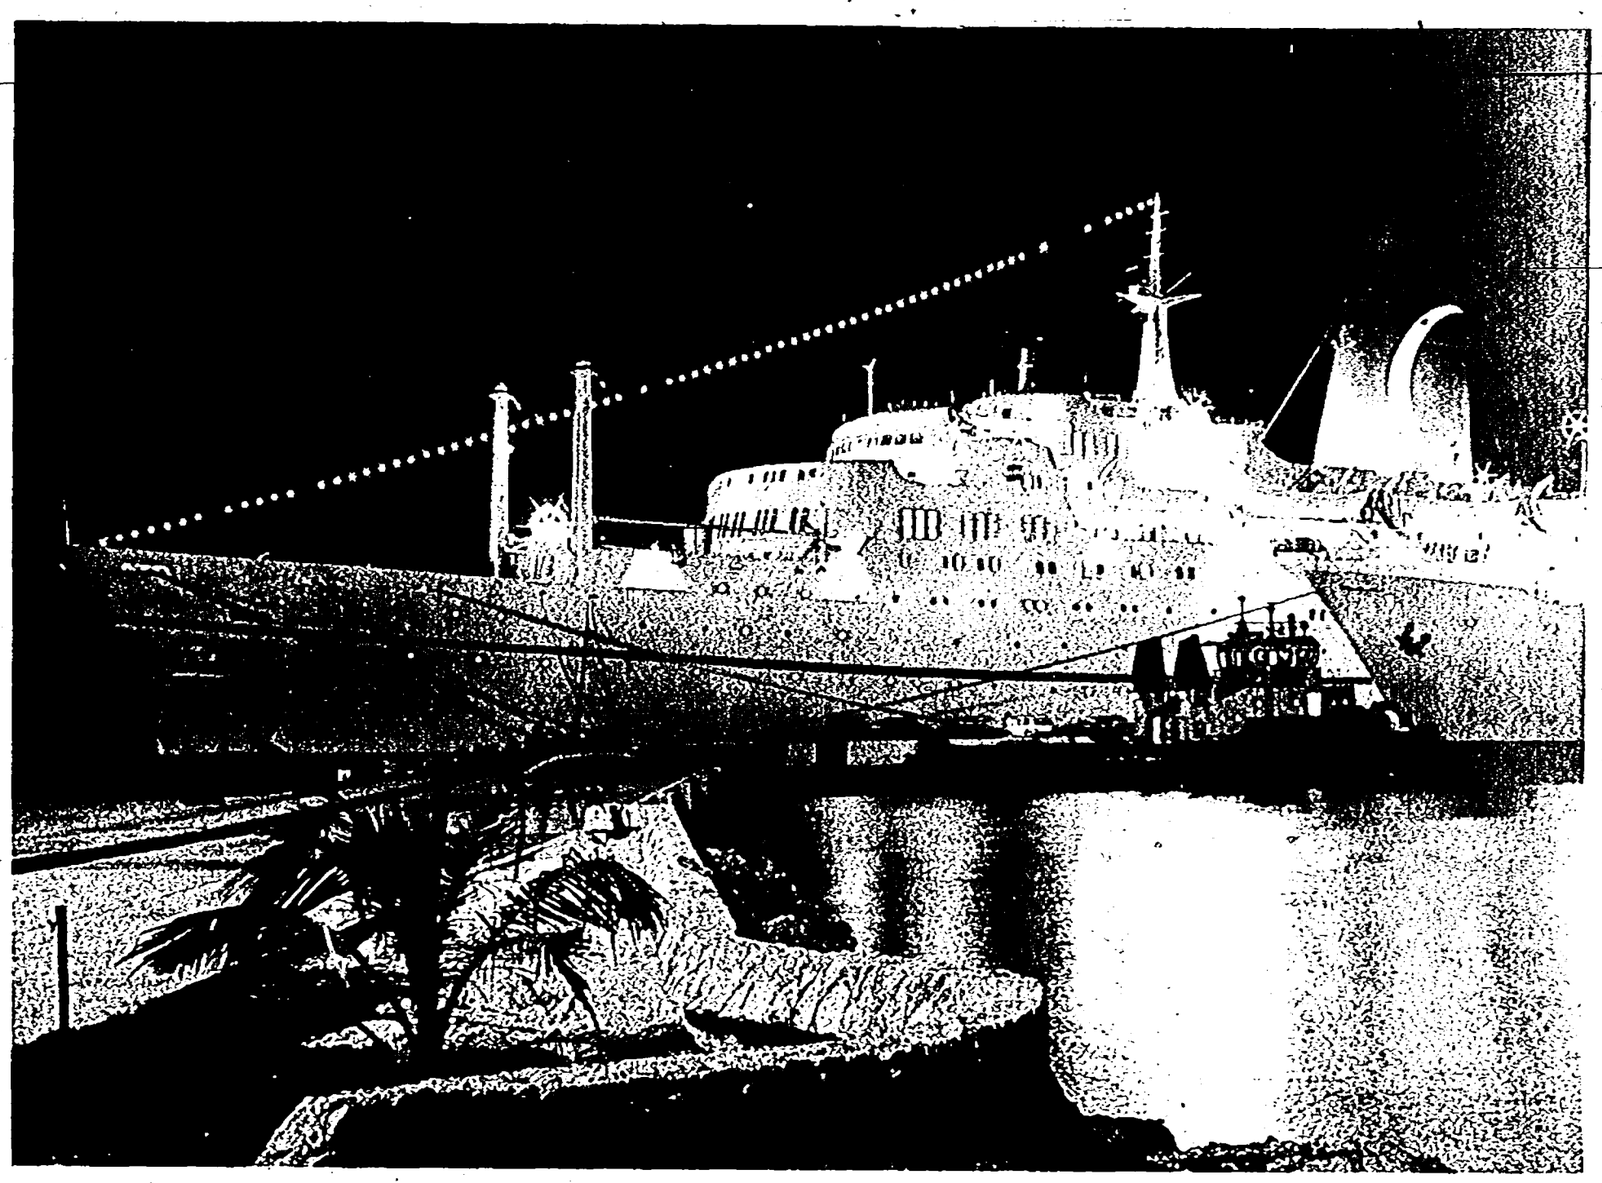
You go up the crooked stairs in a wash of sound to Carlos 'N Murphys: music and laughter from the bar end of the room, the clink of dishes from the dining end. Young tourists crowd around tiny tables, drinking margaritas and Mexican beer. It's a great meeting-and-mingling place under a ceiling draped with T-shirts from around the world.

A man with a glass wine decanter goes around the room sending streams of red wine into any willing customer's mouth, and sometimes down the customer's neck.

Back aboard the Mardi Gras, we found a disgruntled group returned from an all-day, expensive tour to Playa del Carmen and then to the single Mayan ruin at Tulum. Savvy tourists in Cozumel go by air instead to Chichen Itza for about $25, where they can wander a whole Mayan city in ruins. Either way, Mayan ruins are a major attraction in the Cancum-Cozumel area.

For information on the Mardi Gras, contact Carnival Lines or your travel agent; on Cozumel, your travel agent or the Mexican Government Tourism Office, 233 N. Michigan, Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Cozumel is an island 12 miles off the Yucatan Peninsula in the Caribbean. The people are from the same Mayan stock seen by Cortes and other early Spanish explorers in the 16th century. It was a village known only to a few lucky divers until Jacques Cousteau discovered black coral there in the 1960s. And the divers have been coming back ever since.



MICKY JONES

The cruise ship Mardi Gras makes for a dazzling sight on a balmy night in Cozumel, Mexico. Cozumel was the first port of call on the ship's Caribbean cruise, and it turned out to be the best.

MICKY JONES

Mexican musicians entertain during lunch in Cozumel. Although one side of the island is built-up, with hotels, fine restaurants and even discos, the other side offers a more primitive environment, with lots of open beaches.

Cruise is rated best vacation value

A cruise is probably the best value today for your vacation dollar. With one payment, you can cover your air fare, floating hotel, more food than you can eat, transportation to several ports-of-call, and a variety of entertainment to suit most any taste.

Best of all, because you're in the care of an experienced captain and crew who see to your safe transportation all the way, you only have to unpack once. Your only extra expenses will be bar bills, laundry, shore excursions, personal purchases and tips (which normally average less than 5 percent of your cruise fare).

We recently returned from a Caribbean cruise aboard Royal Caribbean Cruise Line's new M/S Song of America and can recommend her to you without qualification. The newest ship afloat (until mid-May, when Holland America's Nieuw Amsterdam appears on the horizon), she's one of the first of several great new vessels built (or under construction) primarily for the American market (cruising the Caribbean, Mexican Rivera, West Coast or Alaska). For the first-time cruiser or a veteran of many voyages, she's sure to be a favorite.

SONG OF America departs her home port of Miami every Sunday for calls at the three most popular ports in the Bahamas and Caribbean. In Nassau, we enjoyed a glimpse of the easy-going Bahamian lifestyle, with visits to various historical sites, shopping in the vivid native market near the dock, and the option of several hours lounging on an inviting white sand beach.

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, we found a completely modern resort city with English spoken nearly as much as Spanish. We strongly recommend a visit to Old San Juan (easy walk from the dock) with its elegant colonial architecture, faithfully restored El Morro Fort, and exellent shopping.

St. Thomas, while known primarily for its bargains from all over the world, also has some of the most breathtaking vistas in the Caribbean. Megan's Bay is considered by many seasoned travelers to be one of the most beautiful beaches in the islands.

THE SHIP itself, though, proved to be our favorite "port-of-call." Her 703-foot length and 11 decks encompass a self-contained resort city with a staff large enough to maintain a ratio of one to every three passengers. One of our favorite spots aboard, the Viking Crown Lounge, a bar and observation area unique to RCCL ships, encircles the funnel at 120 feet above sea level. It can accommodate about 150 people and guarantees an overall view of the ship and surrounding ocean that makes it the most popular spot aboard for a sunset cocktail.

Song of America staterooms are compact (as they are proving to be on most of the newer ships), but very well arranged, and we found ours to be more than adequate for the short time spent there. The food is good to excellent, and the service proved to be of the high standard already established on RCCL's other three ships, the Song of Norway, Nordic Prince and Sun Viking. Dress is generally casual, with two or three "dress-up" nights where a cocktail dress and coat and tie are the accepted norms. Black tie is appropriate, but certainly not mandatory.

Fares range from $1,085 (per person-double occupancy) for an inside stateroom during the off season to $1,965, the seasonal rate for an outside suite. For more information, contact your travel agent or Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines, 903 South America Way, Miami, Fla. 33132. The toll-free number is (800) 327-4368.

Pre-Columbian art shown

More than 300 works of pre-Columbian art are being shown at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Sunday, May 22.

The exhibit, first of its kind to travel from Costa Rica to North America, is called "Between Continents/Between Seas: Pre-Columbian Art of Costa Rica." The exhibit features objects in gold, jade and stone, created before Christopher Columbus' 1502 landing in Costa Rica and evoking the archaeological mystery of ancient civilizations.

From small gold alligators and compelling axe-god pendants to monumental stone spheres, the objects represent three physically diverse regions within Costa Rica. The objects express the matching cultural diversity, inventiveness and artistic vitality of the people who inhabited this land bridge between North and South America.

Spanning the centuries from about 500 B.C. to the mid-16th century A.D., the time of the Spanish conquest, the ceremonial, decorative and utilitarian objects in the exhibit include:

● Finely wrought gold pendants and other gold ornaments formed to portray birds, reptiles, insects, animals and supernatural creatures;

● Jade sculpted into pendants depicting animals and dieties, so flawlessly executed they seem to defy the limits of the primitive string-sawing technique.

The exhibition occupies two levels of the Art Institute's Ford Wing with entry via the South Court. It is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1 for students with ID and senior citizens.

Oakway announces its Cabaret Concert

Oakway Symphony's annual Cabaret Concert will be staged at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 19, at Madonna College's Activities Building in Livonia.

Featured as master of ceremonies will be Fat Bob Taylor, area radio personality and Ann Arbor's "singing plumber."

Francesco Di Blasi, Oakway's conductor, has engaged as guest conductors Sister M. Francilene Van De Vyver, president of Madonna College, and Ernest A. Jones, Detroit-area guest conductor and chairman of the board, D'Arcy-MacManus & Masius, Inc., of Bloomfield Hills.

Guest soloists will include Julia Broxholm, soprano who has appeared in leading roles with the Michigan Opera Theater and at the University of Michigan, and Holly Marable, violinist, concertmaster of the Grand Rapids Symphony who next year becomes associate concertmaster of the Phoenix (Ariz.) Symphony.

PERFORMING Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" will be Alice Berberian Haidostian, pianist, who is well known in Detroit music circles and who holds a master's degree in music from the University of Michigan.

Haidostian is vice president of the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony and serves on Oakway's board of directors.

Reservations may be made by contacting Sally Olds, 2354 Dorchester, Apt. 207, Troy 48084, or by calling 649-6715 or 476-6544.

Single admission to the concert is $7, with reservations also being taken for tables of eight at $48 and tables of 10 at $60. Snacks and desserts will be available, along with a cash bar.

Molly McGuire's, new restaurant-lounge in Westland, will be the scene of a benefit for Easter Seals on St. Patrick's Day.

'Irish' to celebrate at Molly McGuire's

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

Picture Molly McGuire's. It's an Irish pub and more, with English Tudor decor — a million-dollar funplace in the family-tavern style. Grand opening is on St. Patrick's Day, Thursday, March 17, as a benefit for Easter Seals.

Ken Lux, who is a partner with Dario Tomei, in this new venture, said Molly McGuire's opened at the first of the year. The restaurant-lounge is at 34290 Ford Road (actually on Marquette), Westland, just down the street from Tomei's other business properties, the Coliseum Racquet Club and the Forum Health Spa.

Lux said, "We tried to create a fun place to come to, whether you're age 25 or 50." The name Molly McGuire's was picked, partly, because "Irish pubs are synonymous with good times."

The casual atmosphere welcomes patrons in sportswear, as well as in business clothes. Total seating is 400, with a bar and grill seating 170 and four dining areas seating 230.

THE INTERIOR has high beamed ceilings and nostalgic signs and other memorabilia. There's lot of stained and beveled glass, some of it from old churches in the Detroit area. Old-fashioned, frosted glass lighting fixtures and chandeliers help set the mood.

To appeal to dining patrons, Molly McGuire's has engaged Ernie De Michele as executive chef. Lux said he hired De Michele away from Gianapolis at 12 Mile and Middlebelt.

Menu changes are being planned, to suit the new chef's ideas.

"The food is moderately priced," Lux said. Beef, seafood and Italian dishes are featured. "We try to get, as much as possible, seafood fresh. Pastries and bread are homemade."

He said Molly McGuire's management "is creating a character of a fat Irish lady who's a great cook — a little overweight — who samples everything that comes out of the kitchen."

ON ST. PATRICK'S Day, there will be an Irish jig dance contest, open to the general public. The couple that wins first price will receive two six-month memberships to the Forum Health Spa. Lux said the total value of the prize is $400.

Second prize will be two portable radios for the winning couple.

"We hope to have celebrity judges for the dance contest," he said.

At Molly's McGuire's, on St. Patrick's Day, partygoers will be able to kiss and sign the Blarney Stone, with donations going to Easter Seals. The Easter Bunny will be there, too.

Lux and his partner will also be donating part of the day's proceeds to Easter Seals.

"We'll create a couple of Irish dishes and desserts and have green beer that day," Lux said. A bagpipe player will perform, along with the regular entertainment by Bill Kahler. That night, however, singer-guitarist Kahler will do 40 Irish songs.

CONTINUING THROUGH March 17 at Molly McGuire's is Coffee Day, where a $1 donation for each cup goes directly to Easter Seals.

The restaurant-lounge is open from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. 7 days a week. Entertainment by Bill Kahler continues through March.

In April, McGuire's plans to have a record spinner so dancers can move to the beat on the parquet dance floor.

"This area in Westland has nothing around here. We felt it needed some nice type of fun place to come," Lux said, explaining why the location was chosen.

Roth family reaches musical milestone

Sarah Cleveland, cellist, will perform with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra at 4 p.m. Sunday at Plymouth Salem High School Auditorium, Joy and Canton Center roads. Cleveland will play Haydn's Concerto for Cello and Orchestra in C major. Tickets are $6 for adults, $3.50 for senior citizens and full-time college students. All students kindergarten to 12th grade are admitted free.

By Jack R. Bell
special writer

When Sarah Roth Cleveland appears with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra as guest cello soloist Sunday, it will be another musical milestone in an unusual association with the orchestra for a Livonia-based family.

Cleveland is principal cellist with the Toledo Symphony, but she began her career with the Plymouth Symphony.

And so did her six brothers and sisters, all following in the musical footsteps of their father and mother, William and Louise Roth of Livonia.

How did all of this musical blossoming for a single family come about?

"I HAVE TO blame it entirely on Father, the teacher," Louise Roth said. She explained that she was an "Army brat" when she met her future husband in Florida, where she was a voice major in college.

William Roth was teaching music in the Florida system, and chance brought them together for various musical programs — she as a bass violist and he as a violist.

"Then I went to play in the Florida West Coast Symphony," Louise said, "and there he was."

Louise, who plays the bass viol, is still with the Plymouth Symphony, an affiliation that goes back seven or eight years.

William, 62, and now retired, had a long career as a violist and violinist and as a public school orchestra director and was a violist with the Plymouth orchestra for six years.

Two others of the family are with the Plymouth Symphony now. Paul, 20, is principal cellist. Edwin, 18, is in the first violin section. Paul also plays the guitar, favoring rock and progressive jazz at the moment, according to his mother. Edwin is just finishing studies at Schoolcraft and serves as stage manager for the Plymouth orchestra.

IN ADDITION to Louise Roth and her two sons currently playing in the orchestra, there are a married daughter, Eleanor Bursill-Hall, 28, now playing violin with the San Diego Symphony; a son Charles, 25, of Ann Arbor, who was principal second violinist in Plymouth and now is associate concertmaster of the Toledo Symphony; Peter, a cellist who was in the orchestra through high school; another daughter, Irene, 22, also a violinist, now majoring in architecture at the University of Michigan; and Sarah, next Sunday's soloist.

The three oldest children — Eleanor, Sarah and Charles — were born in Florida. The four other children were born in Michigan when the family moved to Livonia and a new school music position for the father.

William Roth, with a master's degree in violin, became orchestra director at South Redford High School. He had a number of violin students, mostly his own children, except for a few master's students he took on.

The Roth offspring began their music lessons when they were in the fifth grade.

"IN LIVONIA, they start music in the fifth grade," Louise said, "and we had our children start with the others. If they wanted to begin a little in the summer before, my husband worked with them, but he felt there wasn't really any sense in running them too far ahead of what was going on in school."

Natural ability and a carefully developed interest in music, reflecting a strong parental influence, brought the Roth youngsters along quickly. By the time they were high schoolers, they were playing well enough to become members of the Plymouth Symphony. Everyone was with the orchestra at least three years, and some of them four.

In their growing-up years at home, the Roth children, with their parents, made more music together vocally than instrumentally, although there were times, says the mother, when there were instrumental quartets playing in the living room.

"That was very nice, and what a thrill — Mozart, Haydn, Dvorak, all the 'big guys,'" Louise recalls with a smile.

"When they were all home," she said, "we used to sing, because they all sang a lot. We did sing some choral music together, but we never performed together, other than go out to carol. With our combination of voices, we could put out eight-part music."

NOW WHEN the Roth clan assembles, which is infrequently, there's so much to catch up on, it's talk, talk, talk rather than music, music, music.

"They're a close corporation and very fond of each other," Louise said.

Individually, for most of the Roths, the music goes on. Sarah Cleveland, Sunday's soloist, has been married 3½ years. She and her husband, John, who is manager of Northville Charley's restaurant, have a 20-month-old son. She commutes from their Ypsilanti home to Toledo for her role as principal cellist with the Toledo Symphony.

Cleveland is a graduate of the University of Michigan where she studied with Samuel H. Mayes. She also is active in the Amati String Quartet.

Her older sister, Eleanor Bursill-Hall, 28, who is the violinist with the San Diego Symphony, is married to that orchestra's principal flute player, Damien Bursill-Hall.

The Roths have something in common other than their exceptional musical talent. That is physical height.

LOUISE ROTH IS 6 feet tall, a height that can't help but be an asset when it comes to toting around and playing a bass viol or lugging stacks of music as the Plymouth Symphony's librarian.

Son, Peter, 24, who is sous chef at the Renaissance Club in Detroit, stands 6 feet 8 inches, to hold honors as the tallest of the family. Edwin, the 18-year-old who is known as "Buck," is 6 feet 7 inches tall. Paul, also known as "Duke," is 6 feet 2, as are Sarah and Irene. Charles who is the Toledo Symphony's concertmaster, is 6 feet 4, and he is to be married in May. Eleanor is the shortest of the seven children at 5 feet 11 inches.

They measure up in more ways than one, this musical family of Roths.

review

Peter Weiss intended that his play "Marat/Sade" sock you in the gut and at the same time turn your mind inside out.

"Marat/Sade" is brilliant theater. The play fuses thought and action, marries history to imagination and shapes the whole with music and mime.

Anyone interested in serious drama will not want to miss the Actors Alliance Theater Company's excellent production of this bizarre masterpiece. But be forewarned. "Marat/Sade" is not for the genteel of mind or heart.

The play catapults the audience into Charenton Asylum where the inmates, a twitching, howling band of loonies, enact a play written by a fellow inmate, the Marquis de Sade, infamous master of kinky sexual tortures. The play topples cherished traditions, attacks the church, assaults the foundations of government and morality and relentlessly exposes hypocrisy.

"MARAT/SADE" ASKS, what is a human being? "A mad, man animal," one inmate answers, as they re-enact terrors of the French Revolution.

De Sade watches his play from a velvet settee and engages from time to time in philosophical sword play with his main character Marat, who was a leader in the bloody French revolution.

Marat sits on stage nearly naked in his tin bathtub, waiting to be stabbed to death by Charlotte Corday.

This is a play within a play, and a nouveau-riche family from post-revolutionary France joins the modern audience. The family sits in satins and lace in a back row of the theater and watches crazies on stage clamor for revolution in De Sade's play. The ladies' ample bosoms quiver with excitement when there's torture and torment in the play, but when the mob rages against inequality they eat bonbons in smug complacency.

David Fox and his ample companions are wonderful as conspicuous consumers of another era.

IT'S HISTORICAL fact that Marat suffered from a psychosomatic skin disease which was soothed by constant bathing, and that he was murdered in his bathtub by Charlotte Corday. The historical De Sade was, in fact, committed to Charenton Asylum and produced plays which fashionable folk of the time attended.

In reality, Marat and De Sade never met, but Peter Weiss engineers their confrontation to put De Sade's philosophy of extreme individualism against Marat's activist socialism.

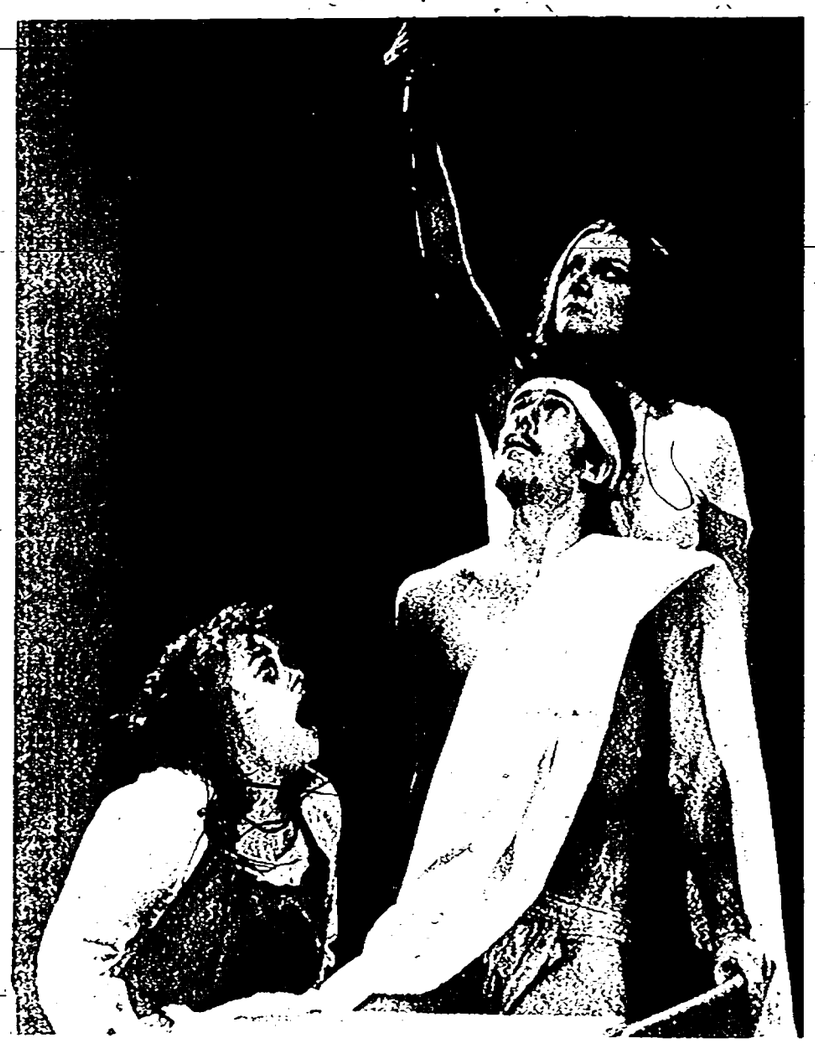
The tormented crazies at the asylum play the "poor who stay poor" and the uncompromising truths of history anchor philosophy to reality. This is not a talky dialectic play. Rather it's a maelstrom of activity, a dramatic happening with verse and mime and song.

Director John Urbinati expertly adapted the play to theater-in-the-round for the Alliance Company.

There are 25 members in the excellent cast. William Paul Unger is a wonderful De Sade — jaded and compassionate at once. Carol Purdon is a lovely, if more refined than usual, Charlotte. M. Lee Burden is good, if not charismatic, as the paranoid inmate who plays Marat.

THE CRAZIES slobber and twitch grotesquely well, but they seem to act insane on cue rather than carry on like animals out of control. Perhaps the immediacy of theater-in-the-round demands that the crazies tone it down, but not so much as to lose the dangerous wildness that deliberately sets the audience on edge.

The music is good and always complements the story. Thanks to John Urbinati's good directing, the cast moves from drama to song effortlessly without the disruptive pause that signals a "musical number" in some plays. "Marat/Sade" is unsettling innovative theater, and praise goes to the Actors Alliance Theatre Company both for daring to produce it and for doing it so well.



Maggie Morrell (left), M. Lee Burden and Carol Purdon appear in "Marat/Sade," presented by the Actors Alliance Theatre Company.

Cancer is often curable.
The fear of cancer is often fatal.
If you're afraid of cancer you're not alone. But some people are so afraid that they won't go to the doctor when they suspect something's wrong.
They're afraid the doctor might "find something." This kind of fear can prevent them from discovering cancer in the early stages when it is most often curable.
These people run the risk of letting cancer scare them to death.

"The Professionals" (1966), 1 tonight on Ch. 7. Originally 117 minutes.

Fine performances from Lee Marvin, Burt Lancaster, Robert Ryan, Jack Palance, Woody Strode and Claudia Cardinale propel this western adventure beyond the realm of standard, shoot-'em-up, cowboy fare. A clever plot twist at the midway point assures continued interest, and director Richard Brooks keeps the film moving.

Rating: $2.90.

"The Silencers" (1966), 4:30 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 50. Originally 102 minutes.

How about Dean Martin and Ali MacGraw in the remake of "Casablanca"? Nah, it probably wouldn't work. Dean, in fact, like Ali, must be considered one of the worst actors of all time, and three of Dino's films — "The Silencers," "Murderers' Row" and "The Ambushers" — make the list of all-time bad flicks. All are Matt Helm films, takeoffs on the James Bond pictures but with none of the personality or perspicacity of those genuine adventure thrillers. This film's main attractions are Stella Stevens, Daliah Lavi and Cyd Charisse; Victor Buono also stars.

Rating: 50 cents.

"The Big Broadcast of 1938" (1938), 1 Wednesday night on Ch. 50. Originally 90 minutes.

"Big Broadcast of 1938" is the last of four "Big Broadcast" films made in the '30s. All featured popular radio stars — Kate Smith, Burns and Allen, Jack Benny and Amos and Andy, for instance, appeared in the first three pictures — and the 1938 film stars W.C. Fields and introduces Bob Hope, who sings "Thanks for the Memories." There's little plot but several skits and musical numbers; Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour and Ben Blue also star.

Rating: $2.70.

"Equus" (1977), 7 and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Punch & Judy, 21 Kercheval, Grosse Pointe Farms, phone 882-7363, $2.50. Running time 138 minutes.

"Tootsie" director Sidney Lumet directed "Equus" but did nothing to personalize the picture; the film is as wooden in structure and feel as was Peter Shaffer's original play. Richard Burton, Peter Firth and Jenny Agutter lead a fine cast, though, in a film that's at least loyal to Shaffer's play, and that's nice to see every once in a while.

Rating: $2.65.

C.J. Risak

'I predict' — so says gypsy

GYPSY AT WORK.

I didn't know you were a gypsy.

Of course I am. My father's name was Risak — just like mine. Actually, my grandfather changed it by adding the 'a'. We used to be just 'Risk', as in 'Take a . . .'.

So, you can read the future, eh?

Read the future, the stars, a palm or tea leaves. I can also steal a wallet, charm a lady and tell lies expertly — anything a good, red-blooded gypsy can do.

With such talents, no wonder your grandfather changed the family name. Anyway, I have a few questions for you.

I wasn't there. I had nothing to do with it. Call my lawyer!

Calm down. These questions have to do with sports predictions.

My specialty. Shoot — figuratively, I mean.

Of course. 'March Madness' is upon us. What do you forsee for the season?

Confusion. It's always been a confusing season. Emotions run at fever pitch and common sense takes a back seat to dreams of grandeur.

March Madness always hit hardest on the basketball hardwood. Until recently, anyway.

What do you mean?

I mean until some group of millionaires figured they could play football in the spring. Now everything will be screwed up. People won't know whether to don Hawaiian shirts and head for the ballpark or load up the station wagon for a tailgate party at the stadium.

Let's concentrate on basketball for now. Any surprises ahead?

Detroit Southwestern will not win the Class A title. The Prospectors will lose before the semifinals.

Wow, that is surprising. Southwestern is rated eighth in the country by one national publication. Any other predictions?

Certainly — I'm full of them. I forsee the weather slowly warming until July and . . .

No, no, I mean basketball predictions. Like who's going to win the district tournaments in the O&E coverage area.

Now why would you want to ask me that? You realize, of course, that by the time this is published I'll probably be wrong already. And without even enough time to get out of town. Oh well, we gypsies have always been gamblers and life is full of gambles.

And gamblers who lose can forfeit their lives.

You had to say that, didn't you? Anyway, here goes:

Troy Athens district: Who knows? I pick Utica.

Southfield-Lathrup district: Host-team Lathrup is on a streak.

Southfield district: No problem for 18-2 Southfield.

Detroit Catholic Central district: CC on its floor has a narrow edge.

Redford Bishop Borgess district: Detroit MacKenzie's got the talent.

Plymouth Salem district: Salem's hot. The Rocks are rolling to the quarterfinals — after they beat Southwestern in the regionals.

Livonia Churchill district: Livonia Stevenson's got the greatest arsenal.

Oxford district: Unbeaten Avondale will go a long way in the Class B tourney.

St. Mary's of Redford: Look out for Detroit Country Day, a team with title dreams.

Novi district: Royal Oak Shrine should take it.

What teams will go the farthest?

In Class A, Southfield and Salem. Avondale in Class B and Country Day in Class C.

Well, I guess I've got your neck stretched out far enough in basketball. See anything else in your crystal ball or tea leaves or whatever it is you use when you make these silly predictions? What about best sports school overall?

Catholic Central. They won the Catholic League basketball title and have one of the best teams in the O&E coverage area. But more impressive is the Shamrocks' Class A state wrestling victory and a hockey team that has reached the state quarterfinals. And last week they won the league's swim championship, too.

How about best athlete?

Salem's John Beaudoin. He won the state Class A 138-pound wrestling championship and went 49-0 for the year. Last year he won the state title at 132. He's lost only three matches in two years.

Impressive. Anyone else?

I've always had a lot of sympathy for swimmers. It's really an impossible sport. Swimmers can't even see the guy they're supposed to beat in the water next to them. And if they do win their race, it may not be good enough. The clock is their real opponent.

Seaholm's Scott Christie and Al Kovach, Rochester's Jim Bruzzese and Rochester Adam's Doug Cleland are the best in the area.

Well, I guess that covers just about everything. Or does it?

Not quite. Sports in the not-too-distant future will be controlled by the most potent force ever to invade our lives.

What's that?

Television.

Some prediction. TV already controls us. The first words a kid learns to say these days are "Coke is it" or "Everything you always wanted in a beer. And less." Anything else?

Yeah. You owe me 10 bucks. We gypsies are a practical people. In other words, we don't do anything for free.

OK, OK, here's your money. Hey, where's my wallet?

Cracked backboard halts game

Catholic Central leading Thurston

By Brad Emons
staff writer

There were no dreams shattered last night — only a backboard.

A jam-packed crowd of 1,400 will have to wait until tonight to see who advances in the district basketball tournament at Detroit Catholic Central.

The host Shamrocks were leading Redford Thurston, 16-9, with 7:55 to go in the first half when the glass backboard shattered, compliments of CC center Mike Maleske.

The 6-foot-6 senior batted a shot out-of-bounds on an attempt by Thurston's Bob Davidge. But Maleske's right hand carried into the glass frame, which instantly crystalized into a white sheet.

There was no replacement available.

With play stopped, tournament manager Bob Santello consulted with the referees, Thurston coach Gary Fralick and CC coach Bernie Holowicki.

After a five-minute discussion, Santello announced to the crowd that the game would resume at 7:30 tonight at CC.

After the announcement was made, spectators filed out and were given rainchecks to be readmitted for tonight's game.

"THE BACKBOARD is probably 20 years old," said Santello. "It came over from the old school (in Detroit)."

Maleske, ironically, was off to one of his best games of the season. He scored six points, all on tip-ins.

"My right hand hit it (the backboard) with my knuckle," said Maleske, who had two slight cuts on his hand. "I just hope the score stays the same.

"I don't think coming back (tonight) will matter. This team can get up for anything."

Fralick was against waiting to resume play until tonight.

"We wanted to go to Thurston tonight (Wednesday)," he said. "It was open and available. And nobody was over at Bishop Borgess (High School), but they (CC) want to play here.

"We wanted to play on the night it was scheduled. I thought something could be worked out."

"THE GAME WILL start at the point of interruption," said Fred Sible, Assistant Director of the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA). "It's covered in the rule book.

"Ultimately, it's the tournament manager's responsibility as to when and where the game will be resumed."

When the crowd cleared out, Fralick took his team (18-2 record) back to Thurston for practice.

Meanwhile, the CC contingent (17-3 record) went home for the evening.

The Shamrocks had things going pretty much their way in the first quarter behind the shooting of Tom Malone (four points) and Maleske.

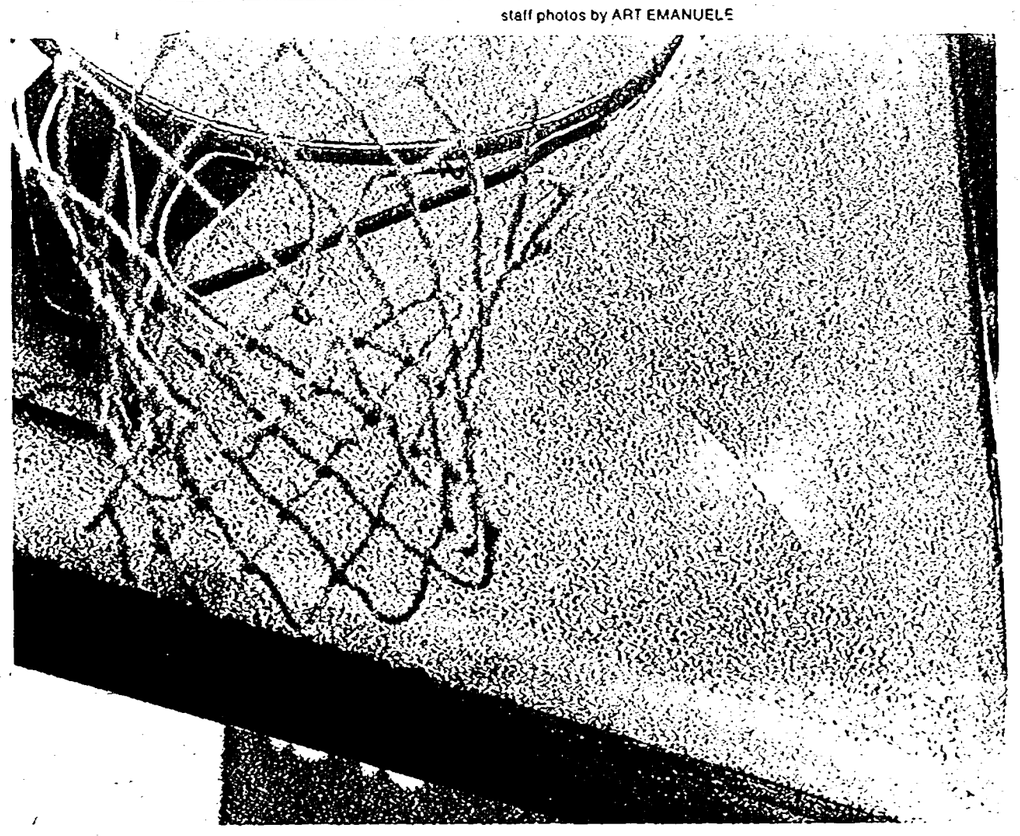
"Another first," said CC coach Bernie Holwicki, "I thought we were playing well.

"They (Thurston) did what they normally do — a 2-3 zone (defense) — and we were in our zone press."

OFFENSIVELY, Thurston seemed tight, especially high-scoring George Sibel, who missed all five of his attempts. Teammates Jim Weiss and Dan Starkinsky each had four points during the period.

Defensively, Thurston was concentrating on stopping CC's long-range bomber John McIntyre, who attempted only one shot.

"We did an excellent job on him, but we didn't check out down low on Maleske," said Fralick. "I thought we'd come in loose. We had three loose practices in a row coming in."



A discussion takes place (top photo) after Catholic Central center Mike Maleske shattered the backboard (lower photo) during last night's district final clash against Redford Thurston. Play will resume at 7:30 tonight with the Shamrocks leading 16-9 with 7:55 to play in the second quarter. Thurston will inbound the ball under its own basket. The Eagles are also in a one-and-one free throw bonus situation.

Spartans rip Bentley, face Pats for crown

By John Raby
staff writer

Twice was nice, but Livonia Stevenson's third victory over Livonia Bentley this season was the sweetest one of all.

The Spartans nailed the coffin shut on the Bulldogs in the third quarter last night and went on to win handily, 77-43, in a Livonia Churchill district semifinal contest.

Stevenson will meet Livonia Franklin for the district title Friday at 7:30 p.m. Franklin took care of Garden City, 65-52, in last night's first game.

For Stevenson (19-3), it was the third victory without a loss over Bentley (9-12), two coming during the regular season in the Western Lakes circuit.

After holding a 35-27 halftime advantage, Stevenson exploded and outscored the Bulldogs 25-8 in the third quarter to take a 60-35 lead with a quarter still remaining.

AT ONE TIME, the Spartans put together 25 unanswered points in the second half, while Bentley was desperately trying to regroup its offense that had made a game out of it earlier.

"They (Bentley) played well early," said Stevenson Coach George Van Wagoner. "They did what they wanted. They wanted to stay in a slow game and wanted to play a zone. They felt if they could stay in a slow game they could do a job on us.

If games were only two quarters long, Bentley might have had a shot at it. The Bulldogs crashed the boards and established their inside game in the first quarter to keep the score close. They took a 20-16 lead early in the second quarter before Stevenson came back to take the lead for good.

"I told them at halftime to pick the tempo up, push it at them and play better defense," Van Wagoner said.

Tom Domako led Stevenson with 14 points. Pete Rose chipped in with 12. Mike Palmisamo and Bob Sluka had 10 points and nine rebounds each. Sluka also had four blocked shots.

Phil Graczyk and Jim Thorderson had 13 and 12 points respectively for Bentley.

IN THE FIRST GAME, 26 points by Franklin's Bob Stebbins wreaked havoc on Garden City. The Patriots put the game away early as Stebbins hit for 16 first-half points to lead his team to a 35-19 advantage at the intermission.

Garden City's relentless fourth-quarter comeback cut the lead to eight points, 57-49, before Franklin scored the last eight points, six from the free throw line, in the closing minutes to ice it.

Mike Johnson bagged 14 points for Franklin (12-9). Scott McCloskey hit for 20 points for the Cougars (14-7), while Tom Ferrell added 14.

Kelly hat trick puts CC in 'A' semifinals

By Paul King
special writer

Senior forward Mike Kelly's hat trick lifted Detroit Catholic Central past Ann Arbor Pioneer, 5-3, in a state hockey quarterfinal game before 600 fans last night at Wyandotte's Yack Arena.

The Shamrocks will carry a 19-5-2 record into tomorrow's semifinal against Portage Central (15-2-1). CC, making its farthest trek in state tourney play, will face-off at 8 p.m. at the Flint IMA Arena.

The final is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday in Flint.

After a scoreless first period, Kelly tallied CC's first goal at the 22-second mark of the second period.

He also scored at 12:37 of the same period to give the Shamrocks a 3-1 lead, and at 48 seconds of the final stanza for a 4-2 CC advantage.

"We played well against Trenton (6-0 victory in regional), but we weren't sharp tonight," said CC coach John Gumbleton. "Pioneer is a much improved team since we played them in December at Yost (2-1 CC victory)."

The Pioneers bowed out with a 9-14-3 record, worst in the school's history.

Dave Mancari, Sean Judge and Ken Cain scored goals in a losing cause.

Joe Hamway and sophomore Scott Bozyk got the other CC goals.

CC dominated play, outshooting the Pioneers 42-14.

Defensemen Joe Kley and Eric Socia made it easy for goalie John Bebes, who had to make just 11 saves.

State champions

Titlists Alcala, Raedle power Shamrocks

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Seniors Jeff Alcala and Matt Raedle were the key figures Saturday as Detroit Catholic Central won its sixth Class A wrestling title under coach Mike Rodriguez before 6,000 fans at Lansing Eastern High School.

The two champions combined for more than half of their team's point total of 69. Mt. Clemens was second with 63½. Hazel Park, the state's top-ranked team, finished fourth. And Temperance-Bedford, which beat out CC two weeks ago for the regional crown, gained eighth.

"At a pep assembly I told them that we'd win it," said Rodriguez, who guided the Shamrocks to championships in 1969-70-71-74-78. "We did it before with only four wrestlers. It was 1969."

Raedle, one of four CC state qualifiers, defeated Carl Kinkade of Waterford Township for the 185-pound title, 12-6. He finished the year with a 54-1 record.

In a 3-2 semifinal win, Raedle snapped a 40-match winning streak held by Niles' Greg Logsdon. The CC wrestler, bound for Notre Dame, opened the tourney with an 8-4 win over Mike Tulip of Holt followed by his 29th pin of the year in 5:00 against Craig Brooks of Chippewa Valley.

ALCALA, meanwhile, rallied in his 155-pound match to beat Tim Hadley of Mt. Clemens, 11-8.

"He came off his back to beat him (Hadley)," Rodriguez said. "He was down 5-0 near the end of the first period."

Alcala, who finished with a 36-3 record, also scored wins over Richard Pachert of Lansing Eastern, 11-7; Ken DeWitt of Holly, fall in 5:33; and Ken Lucas, Dearborn Edsel Ford, 3-2. He is leaning toward a wrestling career at Michigan State.

The third cog on CC's title machine was 112-pound junior Mike Palajac, who finished third. Both of His losses occurred against Birmingham Brother Rice's Todd Shooks by scores of 8-6 and 8-5, respectively.

PALAJACK, who finished at 40-12, scored wins over Dave Constantine of Anchor Bay, 9-3; Al Wall of Clarkston, 7-2, John Young of Clio, 9-2; and Deron wrestling

Mellinger of Portage Northern, pin in 5:00.

A fourth CC qualifier, 145-pound junior Mike DiManno, won one of three matches. He decisioned Joe Kaplan of Bloomfield Hills Andover, 6-1.

Rodriguez now shares the record for most state titles by a coach — six — with Don Johnson, now the principal at Lansing Eastern.

"Don was a fantastic, super person," said Rodriguez. "I wrestled against him in high school. "I'm going to try to beat his record next year."

KEVIN RICHARDSON, Garden City's standout, reached the finals of the heavyweight division before losing to Tim Ridinger of Hazel Park, 7-1.

En route to the finals, Richardson defeated Steve Kieras of Grand Rapids Creston, 5-4; Dana Robinson of Clintondale, pin in 5:58; and Andy Helka of Holly, by default.

Westland John Glenn's Robb Paciocco, a senior, won four of five matches to place third at 145 pounds. He won his first match by default and then gave West Bloomfield's highly regard Bob Petrillo all he could handle before falling, 6-4.

Paciocco then ripped off wins against Howard Hopkins of Lansing Sexton, 6-2; Adam Siedlicki of Bedford, 5-2 (overtime); Marty Schnepp of Holt, 10-4; and Harold Brenizer of Hazel Park, 9-2. The Glenn senior finished with a 46-6 record.

Glenn's two other qualifiers, Don Forchione (155) and Tom Gibson (105), each won a match but did not place.

"We're very happy with these three," said Glenn coach Tom Buckalew. "Both Robb and Don had over 100 wins in their career and Tom finished with 99."

Another 105-pounder, Paul Doulette of Livonia Bentley, did not place as did teammate Abe Yaffai at 119.

Borgess exits at 51-6

A volleyball team sporting a 51-6 record is usually in line for a state championship.

But that's not the case this season for Bishop Borgess coach Jerry Abraham and his spikers, who lost in the district final Saturday to host Wayne Memorial, 15-12, 15-13.

"We were disappointed because we had hoped to go far," said Abraham. "But we played in a very tough district.

"They (Wayne) are an outstanding team. They don't bend. Give them credit."

Wayne, the defending state Class A champs, led all the way in both games although Borgess, led by seniors Julie Burton, Johna Gambotto, Megan McCarthy, and Mary Wood, put up a stern fight.

"Wayne is a solid, well-coached team," Abraham said. "They have great setters and all six players are good hitters."

THE SPARTANS opened play by beating Westland John Glenn and then staved off a match point in the second game, rallying to beat stubborn Livonia Bentley in the semifinals, 10-15, 16-14, 15-11.

"We had a war out there with Bentley," said Abraham. "They were outstanding."

"All of our players played well," said Bentley coach Dana Hardwidge. "We made very few mistakes. We had solid serving, aggressive defense and smart hitting.

Sophomore Sheri Wolfe scored 15 ace serves in the match. Hardwidge also praised the play of setters Angela Porter and Sue Pozan.

"They (Pozan and Porter) controlled our offense," said the Bentley coach. "They enabled us to keep attacking with the ball.

"We played our best match of the season. We went there to win. We played Borgess two times before and didn't do anything against them."

Bentley earned a rematch with Borgess by ousting Redford Union in quarterfinal play, 15-5, 15-11.

LIVONIA STEVENSON defeated Livonia Franklin in the quarterfinals, but then was eliminated by Wayne in semifinal play.

Livonia Churchill, sparked by the net play of Ladonna Sevakis and Beth Wesman, gave Wayne a struggle in the quarters before losing 15-12, 8-15, 15-4.

The Chargers won the second game as Teri Evans served nine points. Her sister Cindy, meanwhile, was a spark-plug defensively.

Passing errors cost Churchill in the third game as Wayne advanced to the final four.

Stevenson outruns Churchill in opener

By Brad Emons
staff writer

A familiar refrain among basketball coaches: "It's tough to beat a team three times."

But Livonia Stevenson did it Monday night in the first round of the Class A district with a 78-53 victory over host Livonia Churchill.

The Chargers, who bowed out with a 12-9 record, had all the incentives. They lost a one-point game in January followed by a 10-point loss to Stevenson last week in the Western Lakes playoffs.

Meanwhile, Stevenson was coming off a tough loss to Plymouth Salem in a league title game just two days earlier.

"Their kids came out sky-high," said Stevenson coach George Van Wagoner, "and we were down."

Churchill, looking inspired, carried the play for much of the first half.

The Chargers, however, lost the momentum in the final minute before intermission. They were outscored 6-2 as Stevenson took advantage of a lane violation, a technical foul and an untimely personal foul.

The Spartans led 36-29 at the half.

"THAT WAS a very critical part of the game," said Churchill coach Don Albertson. "We lost our composure.

"It was a tempo-setter for them because they were in their delay-game (offense)."

In the second half, Stevenson got its running game in gear, outscoring the Chargers 14-10 in the third quarter and 28-14 in the fourth.

Bob Sluka, Stevenson's 6-foot-6 sophomore center, burned Churchill inside for 17 points and 12 rebounds. Four of his baskets came on offensive tips.

HE WAS followed by Curt Ullstrom (14 points), Tom Domako (13 points and six steals) and Pete Rose (11 points).

"Bob played super," said Van Wagoner. "That's what he's capable of, but he's still a sophomore."

John Merner, Churchill's 6-7 senior center, closed out his career with 15 points. Fellow senior Tim Luch, playing his best game of the season, tallied eight of his 10 points in the third quarter to keep the game close.

Stevenson made 20 of 27 free throws compared with Churchill's one of three.

"That's a very important part of our offense, going to the free throw line," said Albertson. "One for three at the line — that says it all.

"Our philosophy was to take it to them and get them in foul trouble. We didn't execute our game plan."

White fouls out; Country Day romps

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Is a Class C basketball title in the works for Detroit Country Day?

The Yellow Jackets took their first step with a 72-47 district win over Redford St. Agatha in a game played Tuesday night at Redford St. Mary's.

The victory propels Country Day (18-2) into Friday's district final against the Pontiac Catholic-St. Mary's winner (Wednesday night).

In the win over Agatha, the more talented DCD quintet got off to a slow start.

Agatha, sparked by the play of 6-foot-6 senior Joe White, trailed by only one point, 24-23, with just two minutes to go until the half.

But from that point on, the Yellow Jackets swarmed all over the shaky Agatha backcourt and eventually led by nine at intermission, 32-23.

White then fouled out with 3:23 to go in the third quarter and Country Day was in business.

Rich Goldberg's three-point play with three seconds left in the period gave DCD a 47-29 advantage and the rout was on.

GOLDBERG a 6-1 junior guard, was instrumental in pulling DCD out of its first-half doldrums. He led the winners with 16 points.

Ed Hudson, Goldberg's running mate, added 13 points. Center Chuck Adams and reserve forward Reg Holmes chipped in with 12 and 10, respectively.

White scored 15 in his final game. Pat Haran added 14.

"They (Agatha) played a real nice game until they lost White," sa coach Kurt Keener. "We wanted to emphasize that every time they had possession, we would really make them work.

"Rich did a nice job. He came up with some steals and some heady plays. He really put the pressure on them.

"And Adams really picked us up defensively. People think he's just a football player, but he can shoot the ball and put them in."

AGATHA coach Joe Charnley, whose team bowed out with a 7-13 record, said his team ran into a familiar problem.

"The pressure bothers us all the time and that's why White has to bring it up," he said. "When he got four (fouls), I couldn't bring him out. He goes to it, and it doesn't really matter if he's in

Cody nips Borgess in OT

Trailing by as many as 13 points in the fourth quarter, Redford Bishop Borgess fought back to send the game into overtime, but lost Monday at home to Detroit Cody in a Class A district basketball opener, 73-72.

The Spartans (11-10) were beaten in overtime on Rod Heard's basket with four seconds left.

Vernon Carr, a 6-foot-6 senior headed for Northern Illinois, led the winners with 33 points.

Junior forward Gary Dziekan topped Borgess with 23. Chuck Gregory added 18 and senior Lewis Scott, whose shot with four seconds remaining in regulation play sent the game into overtime, finished with 17.

CATHOLIC CENTRAL 70
REDFORD UNION 35

The Shamrocks got rolling after a sluggish first-quarter Monday night at home.

Winless RU (0-21) trailed by only three, 18-15, after one period. The Panthers were then outscored 12-2 and 16-8 the next two quarters as CC rolled into the district semifinals.

Center Mike Maleske scored 14 points and grabbed 12 rebounds for the winners. Sophomore John McIntyre added 12 points, Tom Malone netted 10 and Stan Heath made four steals and nabbed six boards.

Keith Ruloff paced RU with 12 and Rick Williams tallied eight.

NOVI 59
LIV. CLARENCEVILLE 49

Forward Chris King, a 6-4 senior, scored 11 of his game-high 24 points in the third quarter Monday as the host Wildcats advanced in the Class B district.

It was Novi's second win this season over the Trojans, who finished the year with a 5-15 record.

Clarenceville, trailing by only a point at halftime, lost the momentum in the third quarter as King led a 17-6 Novi spurt.

"We really struggled again in the third quarter," said Clarenceville coach Paul Clough. "Tim Spencer got into foul trouble and that hurt us.

"But with about three minutes to go we cut it to four (53-49) and then we missed a one-and-one (free throw)."

Larry Weigand, a 6-3 senior center, scored 22 points in defeat. Spencer, a 6-4 junior forward, scored 13 before fouling out.

Grazulis sends Glenn into orbit

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Westland John Glenn proved to be too big an obstacle for Plymouth Canton to overcome in last night's district semifinal at Plymouth Salem.

Paul Grazulis, in particular, was the obstacle.

Grazulis, a 6-foot-8 senior center, powered in a season-high 32 points to pace the Rockets to an 81-72 victory over the Chiefs.

In the second game of the district double-header, host team Salem pounded Northville for the third time this season, 61-36.

Glenn, now 14-7, and Salem, 20-2, will meet for the district championship Friday at 7:30 p.m.

"HE HASN'T DOMINATED a game like that all year," said Glenn coach Dan Henry of Grazulis' performance. "Definitely, it was his best game."

What helped was that Canton had no one capable of guarding Grazulis. Canton's tallest starter was 6-2.

"We just couldn't match up with the big kid inside," said Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner. "That was the key — our inability to match up."

Glenn's size advantage resulted in a rebounding advantage and a big lead by the time the fourth quarter rolled around. Grazulis and 6-5 forward Jack Walker combined for 16 of the Rockets' 27 first-quarter points as Glenn opened a 27-12 lead.

Glenn increased its advantage to 19 after three quarters and seemed to be in control. But the Chiefs kept coming back and twice in the fourth quarter surged to within seven. A 9-0 streak, sparked by Ron Rienas' six points, closed the gap to 72-65 with 3:13 to play.

Rienas fouled out moments later, however, and starter Jim Schlicker followed Rienas to the bench moments later as the Canton comeback fizzled.

"We couldn't stop their penetrating guards," said

basketball

Van Wagoner. "I really wasn't happy with our defense in the first half. But we made a tremendous, gutty comeback."

Rienas' 17 points topped the Chiefs. Mark Bennett hit for 16 and Gary Thomas and Schlicker added a dozen apiece. Mike Scarpello had nine.

Greg Gill and Walker netted 12 each for Glenn, with Todd Jennings scoring nine.

IN THE SALEM contest, the Rocks were never threatened after a 10-0 surge midway through the second quarter. Salem led by four, 16-12, with 4:55 left in the opening half before the streak pushed the Rocks to a 26-14 halftime advantage. Their lead was never less than 12 the rest of the way.

"Now we're in the district finals," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. "That's where we wanted to be at the beginning of the week.

"Now it's time to play hoops."

Thomann pointed to three things he felt Salem had to deal with in Friday's confrontation with Glenn: "No. 1, their big guy; No. 2, their quickness at guard; and No. 3, we have to neutralize their (fast) break."

Henry was "impressed with (Salem forward Glenn) Medalle. (Dave) Houle's really strong, everyone knows that. But what's really good is their bench. (Rick) Berberet and (John) Cohen are as good as anyone who starts."

The Rocks' win over Northville proved Henry's point. Erich Hartnett (10 points), Jeff Arnold (10) and Cohen (eight) all contributed heavily off the bench. Houle topped Salem with 13. Bob Pegrum's 12 points was high for Northville.

Leonard on 700 binge

in the pocket
by W.W. Edgar

No official records are kept on such things, but Tom Leonard's streak of six 700 series this season at Bel-Aire Lanes is thought to be the best showing by a Detroiter in a single season. His sixth came last week when he rolled a 267 middle game and finished with a 737 series.

ON THEIR ANNUAL visit to the Women's State Tournament, the Detroit All-Stars took over the top positions in each of the four divisions with scores that may bring the major titles to the Detroit area.

When the action ended last weekend at Jackson, Penny Behn's Bonanza team was out in front with a 2,801 pin count. The Road Runners were second with 2,741, Lodge Lanes was third with 2,690 and Stroh's Light was fourth with 2,688.

It was the first time in years the Detroit-area teams dominated the team event in such fashion.

Leona Obruchowski and Cora Feibig made the invasion a greater success by leading the doubles with 1,249. Judy Griwicki paced the singles with 662, with Mary Mohacsi fourth (622). Kathy Haislip topped the all-events category with 1,762.

THE ROCKETS from Detroit's east side took over the top place in the team event in the annual Detroit City Tournament which opened last week at Yorba Linda Lanes. The team totalled 3,120, including a 678-pin handicap.

While Leonard was setting his season record, he had to take second place in the Bel-Aire Classic to Ken Marlich, who posted a 782 with a 279 high game.

WESTLAND BOWL strengthened its claim to the highest scoring house in the area with four more 700 series during the past week. Two came in the Classic, when Mike Lee fired a 781 and Jay Dishong rolled a 703 with a 290.

The others came in the Monday Morning Men's League. Rick Farr set the pace with a 763 and Keith Swaffort followed with a 718.

OTHER GOOD PERFORMANCES: At Bel-Aire, Jay Vanderwill fired a 278 game in the Ladies Classic; at Garden Lanes, Wes LaPlame had a 694 series; in the St. Linus League, Dave Bothriga finished with a 639; at Woodland Lanes, Tim Henry joined the 700 club with a 278 in a 750; and at Merri-Bowl, Al Tilly opened with a 289 in a 692 series.

Livonia boxers bid for national Gloves

Only one victory separates a trio of Livonia Boxing Club (LBC) members from a trip to the National Golden Gloves finals March 19-20 in Albuquerque, N.M.

Mike Dardini, competing in the 125-pound open class, scored a unanimous decision last Saturday over Antoine Bell of Detroit Kronk in the semifinals held at Dearborn Fordson High School.

He will join teammates Sanjay Batra, a 147-pounder, and super-heavyweight Craig Payne in the Detroit-area finals, slated to begin at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Oakland Community College.

"Mike looked really sharp and he beat a guy with five years' experience," said LBC coach Paul Soucy.

THE LBC'S other hopeful, Matt Swift, lost a close decision in his 156-pound semifinal match against John Baker of Detroit Martens Club.

"Matt may have been a little rusty because he hasn't fought since he hurt his hand at the Ohio State Fair," Soucy said. "But he'll be going to Cleveland for the National PAL Tournament (April 20-23)."

Dardini, Payne and Steve Darnell (156-pound division) will accompany Swift to the PAL event.

Saturday, Dardini will face another Kronk boxer, Myron Walker. Payne, the No. 2 ranked U.S. amateur heavyweight, takes on LaVon Banks of Detroit Powerhouse. And Batra meets Dougals Brown of Powerhouse.

Midgets rule playoff field

The Plymouth Midget B hockey team clinched the Inter-city championship by blanking Redford, the American Division winner, 6-0 and 2-1 in the playoffs.

The Plymouth squad advanced to the playoffs by defeating Southfield, 3-1, and Dearborn, 8-1, for the National Division title. The wins gave Plymouth an 18-1-3 overall record.

Dog shows improve breed, good place to shop

By Lem Mesee
outdoors writer

If marriages are made in heaven, then Cobo Hall in Detroit is heaven for dogs. It's also good for prospective dog owners.

Next Sunday is the annual Detroit Kennel Club dog show, billed as the largest one-day, all-breed benched dog show in North America.

No one gets rich from dog shows. Any proceeds from the DKC show go to charity. You have to like dogs to get caught up in the madness.

"A dog show," writes Roger Caras in "A Celebration of Dogs" (1982) "is a cross between an office picnic, a bloodless bullfight, root-canal work, a Miss America pageant, and a tax audit by an IRS person who is jealous of you, as they all are."

Dogs win points in "conformation" matches — judgings in which experts decide how closely an individual matches breed standards for height, shape and general appearance.

After breed winners are selected, they are judged in groups — 24 breeds in the sporting group, 20 in hounds, 18 working class, 23 terriers, 15 toys, 11 nonsporting and 14 herding.

Win enough points and your dog earns the title of champion.

CHAMPIONS are used for breeding. That's why a show is a place where doggy marriages are made.

Two years ago, we were puppy shopping to replace the valiant poodle who had been our "alpha wolf" for 16½ years. A show like the DKC's, with several thousand dogs and most of the nation's 125 recognized breeds, is an ideal place to shop.

Moreover, Cobo Hall on the Detroit River is a whole lot closer than New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Harrisburg, Kansas City or 'Frisco, where the other benched shows are held.

In a "benched" show, dogs are stationed on benches the entire day except during judging. There is a display of dog photographs and directions on where breeds are stationed.

Admission is $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for kids, plus a couple of bucks for parking. It's a tiny cash investment when you're picking a companion who will live with you for 10, 15 or more years.

We were able not only to check out breeds but meet breeders and get to know dogs as personalities — and after all, you're really buying personality. We picked up cards and leaflets from several breeders and even had a chance to play with some prospective mothers. We fell in love with a rollicking member of one of the northern breeds.

The next couple of weeks we culled the library shelves for background books, confirmed our hunches about the northern breed, and in one telephone call placed our order for a puppy — the daughter of an American champion sire and an American and Canadian champion dam.

Result: The champion dogs produced a textbook-perfect litter, and we got exactly the kind of pup we wanted. Purebred sure beats random-bred.

ICE FISHING has been out of the question for two weeks, but the sucker run has started on the Clinton River in Macomb County. The ol' "whistlemouth bass" starts spawning runs in the closing days of winter and can give you quite a scrap on light tackle at this time of year.

Perch fishermen are having some luck in Lake Erie off the wall at the Hoffman Access Site at Bolles Harbor.

Salmon and trout are being caught in the St. Clair River by anglers trolling with downriggers.

'Paranormal venturing' at SC

Interpreting your own dreams will be the topic of a workshop planned from 7-9:30 p.m. beginning Friday in Room F100 of the Forum Building at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

The workshop, "Paranormal Venturing: Aspects of Our Existence," will be presented by Delavan Sipes, former president of the Detroit Council of the Association for Research and Enlightenment.

"Reincarnation and Karma" will be discussed March 25 and "Existence in Materialist and Non-Materialist Worlds" is the topic of an April 8 lecture.

Fee for each session is $15, payable at the door.

HOW TO MAKE A TAX DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTION TO YOURSELF.

Open a Standard Federal IRA plan.

Every working person with earned income from performing personal services is now eligible for an Individual Retirement Account. Contributions to this account are TAX DEDUCTIBLE each year and earnings are also TAX DEFERRED until retirement (age 59½). A working person may contribute up to a maximum of $2,000.00 per year. A husband and wife who are both working may EACH contribute up to a maximum amount of $2,000.00 (total $4,000.00). A working person with a non-working spouse may contribute up to $2,250.00 per year.

You actually save money two ways:

1. Tax Deduction

A $2,000 annual contribution to your IRA can mean real savings right NOW.

For example, even though an actual cash contribution has been made in the amount of $2,000, it will cost the tax payer (in the 40% tax bracket) only $1,200 in actual dollars because of the $800 tax savings incurred.

TAX BRACKET	20%	30%	40%	50%
IRA ANNUAL CONTRIBUTION	$2,000	$2,000	$2,000	$2,000
ANNUAL TAX SAVINGS	$ 400	$ 600	$ 800	$1,000
YOUR ACTUAL YEARLY NET CONTRIBUTION	$1,600	$1,400	$1,200	$1,000

2. Tax Deferral

1½-year certificate account — Current rate: 9.25% per year—paid and compounded quarterly; 9.57% effective annual yield

A $2,000 annual contribution to your IRA also means tax-deferred savings until retirement when tax brackets are usually lower. Here's what you'll earn with our 1½-year fixed rate certificate at 9.25% if reinvested at the same annual interest rate.

YEARS OF CONTRIBUTION	10	20	30	40
IRA ANNUAL CONTRIBUTION	$2,000	$2,000	$2,000	$2,000
FUNDS AVAILABLE AT RETIREMENT	$34,224.60	$119,630.18	$332,755.04	$864,596.25

Many other savings plans are also available for IRA.

Call or visit us today to learn how Standard Federal Savings can help you save TWICE for retirement.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal from certificate accounts, and withdrawals from your IRA prior to age 59½ may result in tax penalties. When you withdraw the money in your IRA Account at retirement after age 59½, your withdrawals will be taxed as ordinary income at a time when your tax rate is likely to be lower.

IRA Accounts are insured separately to $100,000 by the FSLIC.

HEART TO HEART
Find that Someone Special when
HEART TO HEART
debuts Monday, March 21, 1983

If you are looking for a special someone who will enrich your life, our exciting new service, "HEART TO HEART" could be a great beginning. Here is an example of the kind of message which will appear in "HEART TO HEART" —

Young woman, 24 with interests in sports, dancing, fireside conversations, good wine, gourmet cooking and long walks in the twilight, wishes to meet gentleman who shares similar interests. Must be between 25-30 years old. Please send photo, phone number and address to Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 48150. BOX 0000.

We will keep your name and telephone number confidential; the box number will allow us to identify your replies. We handle all correspondence in strict confidentiality. Special O & E Reply Boxes will be set up to receive your responses.

Studies have shown that people who read the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers are high income, educated professionals. So, if you are into ballet, opera or Shakespeare as well as the usual dining, dancing and theatre, "HEART TO HEART" is a great place to start.

FREE ADS
There will be no charge for ads appearing when "HEART TO HEART" premiers on March 21 — so compose your message now, give us a call and become a "charter HEART TO HEART-ER" (All future ads will carry a charge).

"HEART TO HEART" will appear every Monday in the Classified Section of your hometown Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

If you wish to reply confidentially to an Observer & Eccentric "HEART TO HEART" ad you may rent your own private reply Box. The charge for this service is $10 for 30 days, payable in advance.

"HEART TO HEART" ads will cost $1.50 per line with a minimum charge of 12 lines or $18. This $18 charge also covers rental of your own "HEART TO HEART" reply box and we'll mail your replies. Additional lines cost $1.50 per line or ask about our money saving multiple insertion plan.

Call a friendly O & E Ad-Visor today to place your "HEART TO HEART" advertisement.
