Police warn of arena photographer

By Joe Bauman
staff writer

Parents of Westland Sports Arena figure skaters are being alerted to a man representing himself as a photographer and asking young girls to take their pictures.

Police in Westland, Garden City and Wayne have confirmed incidents at their arenas while a Westland police investigator said she has received reports of sightings in a handful of other communities.

"It is our understanding that this guy has been showing up all over the state," Westland Officer Laura Moore said. "To our knowledge he hasn't done anything illegal, but he certainly isn't welcome at the arenas."

She said that on at least one occasion the man asked young girls to change into leotards which he brought with him so he could take their pictures.

Garden City police Lt. William Sandman said a similar incident, with an older man posing as a photographer and approaching young figure skaters, was reported about six weeks ago at the city's Civic Arena, on the north side of Cherry Hill at Merriman, across the street from Westland.

Officers were unable to get a very good description of the man, he said, but no similar incidents have been subsequently reported.

Westland police notified the city's recreation department about the man in mid-February after receiving information from Wayne police that he was identified in that community.

"We wanted the staff to know ahead of time so they would know how to handle the situation," Moore said.

THE MAN is described as a 40-year-old white male, about 6 feet tall, 160 pounds with thinning gray hair and bad teeth. In some instances he has used the name "Phil" while talking to children.

Moore said the man visited the Westland arena on Hunter and Wildwood in late February and asked a group of young figure skaters to gather as a group so he could take a picture of them for his daughter.

Rink officials, already alerted by police to the situation, instead called police but the man left before officers arrived.

CAR PHONES II, The Sequel:

Westland City Council-administration tussling over who uses city-owned cellular telephones continued last week as several council members questioned Mayor Robert Thomas about the cellular phone in building director Mike Cullity's car.

Cullity has been using the phone instead of a two-way radio in his car ever since assuming the building director's job Jan. 1, Thomas said.

"There never been a policy of having (phones) in department director's cars before," said council member Ron Mehl.

The car phone brouhaha originally surfaced in February when council members questioned Thomas' appropriation of two of five phones obtained by the fire department through an arson grant for use by the mayor's office.

On Monday, Thomas said he has removed those phones and "everything else" installed in his city-owned car "at my own expense."

Achievement fund drive is under way in Wayne-Westland.

Money raised will be used to operate the JA programs in area schools. John Glenn and Lutheran West High Schools have 120 students enrolled in JA's applied economics program, while Stockbridge Elementary School, St. Damian Catholic School and St. Matthew Lutheran have students participating in JA Project Business.

Bill Vaughn, a Ford Wayne Assembly plant employee, will chair the drive in the Wayne-Westland area.

FOURTEEN young athletes from Wayne and Westland took home medals or ribbons from the 1990 Michigan Special Olympics Winter Games last weekend, in the Upper Peninsula Michigan town of Quinn.

Local winners included Kathy Kling and Julian and Paul Kling, all of Westland, Chris Cooper, Dearborn and Kevin Vaughn and Donna Sanders, both of Wayne.

Murder trial due to resume

Police claim Ferrari stabbed Walworth five times in the chest and back while robbing him inside the trailer. He then stole Walworth's gray 1985 Buick, police say.

The murder trial of a Westland man charged in the stabbing death of his 81-year-old neighbor is expected to continue this week.

James Vincent Ferrari's bench trial was adjourned Thursday because Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Wendy M. Baxter and attorneys connected with the case were scheduled for other matters.

As of Friday morning, no date had been set for resumption of the trial, said a clerk in Baxter's courtroom. Westland police Detective Sgt. Jerry Wright said he expected conclusion of the trial be this week.

Ferrari is charged with first-degree felony murder in the Oct. 5 stabbing of Haskel Walworth at Walworth's trailer in the Mohawk Court Mobile Home Park, on Joy west of Inkster Road.

If convicted, Ferrari faces a mandatory sentence of life in prison without parole.

FERRARI, 27, who has several previous felony convictions and was on probation from Oakland County at the time of the stabbing, was living with his mother in a trailer at the

An employee of Westland's 18th District Court has been suspended pending the outcome of an investigation into irregularities in court funds, court officials said Friday.

The employee was suspended with pay from his job on Feb. 28.

David Wiacek, court administrator, responding to an inquiry, said that an employee has been suspended and an investigation launched. Wiacek declined to reveal the identity of the employee.

An audit of court financial records in connection with the situation will begin Tuesday, according to a statement released by Wiacek.

The audit will be conducted by Phillip Agostini, audit supervisor for the Michigan Supreme Court, which handles such investigations, Wiacek

Town Hall draws crowd, questions

'What was great was that people got a chance to ask something, to get something off their chest, yet there were no fights or arguments.'
— Mayor Robert Thomas

They asked about property tax assessments, minority hiring practices, water bills, snow plowing, street and sidwalk repairs and fire station closings.

One local businessman even wanted to know why Mayor Robert Thomas "didn't like me" (Thomas said he did) and why the mayor was "harassing" him (Thomas said he wasn't).

About two dozen residents turned out at the Melvin Bailey Recreation Center Thursday for the first Town Hall meeting chaired by Thomas. The mayor, in office since Jan. 1, said he initiated the monthly meetings to help make local government more accessible to residents.

"I think it went real well," the mayor said following the session. "What was great was that people got a chance to ask something, to get something off their chest, yet there were no fights or arguments."

In fact, the meeting had a friendly, almost folksy feel to it as the mayor joked with residents and other officials several times. He drew a laugh from the audeince when he introduced city assessor Bill Schmidt as "the most popular man

Local men rescue couple from house fire

By Diane Gale

Helen Hasselbach, 75, struggled down the steps of her home Thursday night to give hugs to two local men who rescued her and her husband when the couple's Canton Township house burned.

"These are the boys who pulled me out of the house last night," she said. "They saved my life."

She and her husband, Freeman, 84, were in the home about 8:30 p.m. Thursday when the fire started.

"I heard a big bang and I said, 'Is that thunder, or what's happening?'" Helen Hasselbach said. "I said the light was on upstairs, and when I went up to look I saw that the ceiling was on fire. Then there was another boom."

JOHN MURRAY of Garden City and Doug Williams of Westland were on a lunch break from their jobs on the second shift at ProColl on Haggerty when they noticed smoke pouring out of the roof of the Hasselbach's old farm house on Van Born near Hannon.

"I could see bright orange," said Murray. "Then I saw the house was on fire. I'm from the area and know that two elderly people live in there. I saw two silhouettes in the window moving."

Williams and Murray rushed in and pulled the couple out. The Hasselbachs were taken to the hospital and immediately released.

DAMAGE TO the 74-year-old house, on land the family has lived on for more than 140 years, was estimated at $40,000, a fire department report said. Freeman Hasselbach was born and raised on the land.

Life skills curriculum to get major review

By Leonard Poger
editor

A review committee will find out that there's a lot more cooking, educationally, in the Wayne-Westland school district's life skills/home economics classes

The main reason is that the traditional home economics classes of the previous generation, which focused on girls taking sewing and cooking, are long gone.

Now the district calls the curriculum "life skills" and offers a variety of consumer education, parenting, nutrition, and health classes.

The committee of outside educators will be in the district this week for 1½ days take a detailed look at the program as part of a Michigan Department of Education peer review program.

It will be the first time that the life skills program has had an independent review and is the first segment of a district curriculum to have a detailed inspection, said Nancy Davis, the district's life skills coordinator and John Glenn High School department head.

Eight educators from the Michigan Department of Education, universities, and other districts are scheduled to visit the district's two senior highs and four junior highs to evaluate the program and needs and learn what local staff members have developed as action plans.

Davis is coordinating the details of the upcoming visit.

The program, called a peer review, is done voluntarily by the district under the direction of the state education department.

Davis, who heads the 13 life skills teachers in the district, stressed in a telephone interview that the current curriculum is planned to meet the needs of today's students.

IT'S A far cry from the stereotypical view of the previous home economics classes that emphasized sewing and cooking.

The district's life skills covers 13 topics, including consumer education, health, nutrition, parenting, and social issues like divorce and veneral diseases.

"Our curriculum is life-oriented and with hands-on experiences," Davis said.

The life skills program is the only part of the curriculum to have a complete peer review, Davis said.

The review group will spend Thursday afternoon and the entire following day, Friday, visiting local secondary schools and discussing the current and planned programs with local administrators and teachers.

At the end of the review, the committee will provide a preliminary report to the staff and administration.

While the committee's recommendations and findings are binding, they are important and helpful to the Wayne-Westland district in developing future changes, Davis said.

THE PEER review is handled for the state by the consumer home economics standards project, based at Michigan State University.

The state board of education set the curriculum and program standards in mid-1984 with the standards project staff working with public schools to evaluate their own programs.

Since then, more than 300 schools have taken part in the review program.

The final segment of the evaluation is development of an action plan for helping schools meet the review group's standards.

The committee will start its visitation Thursday afternoon, March 15, in the school board office, meeting with top school administrators and then touring the district for one hour.

The committee will start their visits to John Glenn and Wayne Memorial Highs and Stevenson, Marshall, Adams, and Franklin Junior Highs at 7:45 the next morning.

AFTER VISITS to the schools and talking to life skills teachers, the review teams will conclude their visit with a meeting with local educators in the William Ford Vocational/Technical Center.

Making the Wayne-Westland district's life skills/home economics advisory committee are teachers, administrators, and community members.

They are Davis, Jill Barnyak, Joseph Benyo, Roy Chestnut, Stephanie Hampton, Wendy Leright, Pam Przywara, Robert Seaward, Charlotte Sherman, Mrs. Russel Welldy, Elaine Webb and Mary Chames.

Photographer targets figure skaters

"We don't believe the man has a young daughter," Moore said. "He seems to use a different story at each arena."

IN LIVONIA, the recreation department is cautioning staff and parents that an unidentified man has been visiting area ice rinks in an attempt to photograph young girls.

Parks director Ron Reinke said letters were sent out to all parents with children enrolled in the city's figure skating program after he was informed by the police department of the suspicious man.

"We have had no contact with the person at any Livonia facility," he said. "But we wanted both the staff and parents to know about the person ahead of time in case he should show up and try to take pictures."

There also was an unconfirmed report that the person had been seen in and around the Redford civic arena, although police have no formal report of the incident.

Reinke said he decided to send letters to parents as an added safety precaution.

The letter stated:

"Please warn your children to avoid strangers and to report any attempts or suggestions to be photographed to you, the skating instructors, any arena employee or the police immediately.

"He (the man in question) has attempted to photograph young girls in leotards in unused or remote areas of the arenas."

Reinke said the letter wasn't intended to panic parents but to reinforce the need to talk with their children about personal safety.

"We haven't had a problem, but we wanted to act ahead of time in case there is a problem," he said.

LIVONIA POLICE Lt. Michael Murray said his department is aware of the situation but has had no complaints from city residents.

"Our recommendation is that if the person does appear at an arena that he immediately be asked to leave. If he comes back, or if he is causing any problem whatsoever, then he can be arrested for trespassing or loitering."

Murray said there is nothing illegal about taking photographs of children in a public place. But he urged anyone who has contact with the man to notify police immediately.

cop calls

A GARDEN CITY woman told police her purse was stolen by an unidentified man Wednesday morning as she entered the Farmer Jack supermarket, 8058 Middlebelt near Ann Arbor Trail.

The woman, 66, said she was walking in the front door of the store when a man who had been loitering by the entrance grabbed the purse and fled on foot through an adjacent townhouse complex.

The purse contained $34 cash, credit cards, identification and personal papers, the woman said.

She described the thief as a white man, 18-20 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall with a thin build and blond hair. He was wearing a camouflage jacket, jeans and a ski cap.

A TAYLOR man reported that a 16-year-old youth smashed the windshield of his pickup truck by throwing a tire jack stand through it Tuesday night during an argument in front of a house on the 33100 block of Alaska.

The youth also damaged the side of a house with the jack stand, witnesses said.

Witnesses told police the youth approached two men in front of the house and the three got into an argument over a girlfriend.

The youth threatened to return with friends and physically assault the other two, police said.

A RESIDENT on the 8100 block of Valleyview told police someone stole his pickup truck from the side of his house late Monday or early Tuesday.

The 1989 Chevrolet S-10 was locked when it was stolen between 11 p.m. and 9 a.m., the resident said.

LIONS CLUB members are best known to the community selling white cane lapel pins to raise money for its varied programs to help sightless and visually impaired people.

While the white cane sales in early May are the biggest source of money, Lions, such as those in Garden City and other cities, hold bingo games weekly.

A new way of paying for the Lions' programs was used last weekend when the Westland Host Lions Club sponsored a statewide bowling tournament at Westland Bowl, on Wayne Road north of Ford.

Among the 190 bowlers were two teams of legally blind men and women, members of a Dearborn Height Lions Club. They are aided by a guide rail at the side of the bowling alley.

Bill Acton, Westland Host Lions Club president, said bowlers came from as far away as Alpena, Kalamazoo and Lansing.

The tournament was the first hosted by the Westland club, which had its bid approved by the state council of district governors two years ago.

Acton was district governor at the time.

Coordinating the Saturday tournament were chairman Gerald Lunguski, and his wife, Lillian, a club vice president and one of the first woman Lions members. She joined several years ago.

Proceeds from the tournament are used to support sight-conservation programs such as the Leader Dog for the Blind in Rochester, Mich., Penrickton School for the Blind in Taylor, Kresge Eye Institute, as well as providing glasses and hearing aids.

Taking part in the opening ceremonies were Westland Mayor Robert Thomas and state Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland. A Saturday night dinner was held for the visiting Lions at the Westland Friendship Center.

Murder trial due to resume

Police claim Ferrari stabbed Walworth five times in the chest and back while robbing him inside the trailer. He then stole Walworth's gray 1985 Buick, police said.

Ferrari was arrested the next morning when police spotted Walworth's car in a field behind C.W. Best Junior High School in Dearborn Heights.

In a statement obtained by police following Ferrari's arrest, the defendant said he stabbed Walworth after the two got into an argument. The statement has been admitted as evidence.

Defense attorney Dennis Shrewsbury said the circumstances surrounding the stabbing, plus Ferrari's use of large amounts of alcohol and about ¼-gram of cocaine on the day of the incident, point to a second-degree murder conviction.

The maximum penalty for second-degree murder is life in prison with parole.

'The thing that was unusual was — we never (hang up) without saying 'I love you' — he wanted to hang up very fast.

victim's daughter

WALWORTH'S HOME was neat except for the back bedroom, Westland police officer Walter Rozen testified last week. Rozen found Walworth in his mobile home.

"The bedroom dresser was open and had been rifled through," Rozen testified.

A blood-covered eight-inch knife was found inside the trailer, Rozen said.

Lois Pappas, one of Walworth's three daughters, testifed Tuesday that she telephoned her father about 4:45 p.m., possibly minutes before he was killed.

"He sounded real happy," Pappas told the court. "But the thing that was unusual was — we never (hang up) without saying 'I love you' — he wanted to hang up very fast.

"I reminded him, and he said 'I love you, too' and then the phone was slammed down very fast," she testified.

Police believe the incident occurred in the late afternoon, said Robert Hood, assistant Wayne County prosecutor, but are unsure of what time Ferrari arrived at Walworth's home.

Men rescue couple from fire

The contents of the house ruined by the fire was valued at $30,000, the report said. The house was valued at $150,000.

A weatherbeaten sign marking the home a Michigan Centennial Farm: "Owned by the same family over 100 years" lay against the side of the house the day after the fire.

"I was all shook up, but there's nothing you can do but accept it," Helen Hasselbach said.

The Hasselbach's son, Charles Hasselbach, said he received a call from a neighbor child that the house was on fire.

THE CAUSE of the fire was the wood framing around the chimney that had cracks in it, the report said. The chimney served as an airtight wood-burning stove in the kitchen on the first floor.

The Hasselbachs have doubts about that theory.

Helen Hasselbach said she believed the fire started from an electrical source.

Murray said the incident made him think about his grandparents' well-being.

"They live on a farm, too," Murray said. "I hope that someday if something happens to my grandparents that someone will help them."

around here (city hall) at this time of year."

THOMAS AND city department heads fielded questions from 14 different residents during the one hour and 45 minute meeting. Most people stepped up to the podium with a list of three or four topics.

"I've been living on a dead-end street for 30 years and the only time it's ever been clean (plowed) was when Mayor (Tom) Brown was here – and that was a long time ago," said Olga Pegouske, who lives on Chief Lane in the Tonquish subdivision.

Thomas responded that improved snow plowing was one of his priorities.

Sharon Anderson complained about overflow parking at two churches in front of her house on Eton.

"My neighbors have to get up early Sunday morning to move their cars to the street so that they can get out later in the day," she said.

She asked for a parking ban on one side of the street.

Thomas said the city would find out if the churches had the required number of parking spaces in their lots and referred the question on the parking ban to Police Chief Paul Schnarr, who said such a measure would have to be enacted by the city council.

PAUL BRAILEAN called for an inspection and cleanup of trees and trash "overgrowing the sidewalks" along Merriman near Dorsey. "As senior citizens do a lot of walking, we have to see and make our way around all that," he said.

Marie Wheeler spoke about poor road conditions at the Cherry Hill-Carlson intersection.

"It's real bad," Wheeler said. "I've lost two mufflers on it already."

Thomas said road crews could use cold patch on Carlson, but Cherry Hill was a major road and the responsibility of Wayne County road crews.

When Edna Parker asked about the city's minority hiring practices, Kent Herbert, personnel/operations director said changes in civil service guidelines and a minority recruiting program were being considered by the administration.

Near the end of the meeting, businessman James Haverstick confronted Thomas over a personal dispute. Haverstick, who owns Haverstick Towing, claimed the mayor has been "harassing" him with unnecessary inspections and police investigations since he had Thomas' daughter's car towed last December.

Thomas denied the charge.

THOMAS LATER said there were few surprises at the meeting and that he had been warned Haverstick would be there.

One surprise, the mayor said, was when resident Nancy Froreich complimented city garbage pickup, which is subcontracted to Painter and Ruthenberg. Froreich said the trash pickups were made "competently and quietly for 15 years."

"That did catch me a little offguard," Thomas said. "I think I expected to hear mostly a lot of problems (during the meeting)."

The next Town Hall session is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday, April 12, at the Bailey Center. The meetings are open to Westland residents.

Herbert Levitt, Detroit regional administrator for the state Supreme Court, said Friday he expected the audit to take several days at least.

LEVITT SAID he "wasn't aware" of any allegations of missing money, but that the investigation concerned "discrepencies" in court financial transactions.

"My role is merely as a conduit between the court and our people in Lansing," Levitt said.

While annual audits of district courts are conducted routinely by the state, Agostini "doesn't usually go out for routine procedures" Levitt said.

Agostini was unavailable for comment Friday.

Westland police Detective Lt. John Reddy said Friday the department wasn't investigating any larceny or misappropriation of funds involving the court.

According to the statement released by Wiacek, the irregularities were discovered by court administrative personnel "based on internal accounting procedures and bank monitoring of daily deposits."

Levitt and another state court official met with court staff March 1 to begin the investigation, the statement said.

Study: Toxic waste rarely Rouge problem

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Toxic waste isn't a Rouge River problem during most times of the year, according to a surprising new Michigan Department of Natural Resources study.

The DNR study, announced Thursday, found no traces of toxic waste in the river during dry times. It indicated toxic waste only became a problem during heavy rainfall or winter thaw.

"Without rain, there appears to be no toxicity problem," DNR specialist Margaret Fields said.

The study examined water quality samples taken at various Rouge sites at four different times last year.

STUDY FINDINGS aren't considered an indication the Rouge is now safe for swimming, fishing or boating — or that the $900 million Rouge area sewer construction program is unnecessary.

Instead, Fields said, it indicates river use could begin without massive dredging of the river's bottom.

The study will be discussed at length during a June 20 meeting of the multi-community Rouge River Basin Committee.

Basin committee members, meeting Thursday, wanted more information on the study, they said. The study's results could be misleading, at least one member said.

"PEOPLE SHOULDN'T get the wrong idea, there are still substances in the river that shouldn't come into contact with human skin," said Jim Murray, Wayne County public works director.

Additional sampling might also be conducted.

"There was a feeling that data was limited," Fields said.

Study findings were considered somewhat surprising because of the large amount of industrial waste believed present in Rouge River sediment.

It is believed rainfall stirs up toxic sediment on the river bottom, but Fields said the study indicated human waste was a worse pollution problem.

"What this indicates is that industry isn't the problem," Fields said.

OUTMODED COMBINED sewer overflows dump human waste into the river as they back up during rainy periods.

Storm water runoff and other non-point pollution are also considered problems.

Toward that end, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) has commissioned a study to document the extent of water runoff pollution in the Rouge.

Special attention will be given to chemicals used in lawn, golf course and cemetery maintenance, as well as to coal, scrap iron and automotive storage areas, SEMCOG spokesman Ted Starbuck said.

In addition, the study seeks to evaluate the effectiveness of wetlands as storm water retention areas.

SEMCOG seeks to tap $1.2 million in federal Enviromantal Protection Agency grant money available for Michigan projects. At this point, it isn't certain whether individual communities will be asked to come up with matching grants.

DESPITE THE overall findings, the study indicated some areas of the Rouge may have an ongoing problem with toxic substances.

Heavy fish kills were found in the two areas — one in Southfield, the other near Livonia — but no proof was found that the fish died from toxic chemicals.

A 100-percent fish kill was recorded in the Evans Creek area, north of Eight Mile in Southfield. One-third of the fish died in an area of the river near Warren Road (on the border of Detroit and Dearborn Heights), just east of Livonia and Garden City and south of Redford.

Mediation

Programs seek alternative to court

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

In a less sophisticated — perhaps more friendly — world, neighbors would settle differences over their back fence.

Today, they usually take them to court.

As court dockets swell, several Detroit area organizations seek a return to old ways by bringing warring parties together, face-to-face, to resolve disputes voluntarily.

"The key is to help people settle their own disputes," said Jeff Mansour, program director of the Detroit Neighborhood Reconciliation Center.

"We don't act as judges and we don't act as arbitrators. We don't determine who's right or wrong but we do help both parties reach a settlement."

Mediation between hostile neighbors produces faster, more satisfying results, while freeing overworked judges to deal with more serious problems, the agencies said.

It's neighbor helping neighbor, officials said, as volunteer mediators — most without legal experience — help settle disputes.

"IT'S A three-step process," said Juanita McMullin, who coordinates the Detroit Human Rights Department mediation program.

First, opposing parties meet separately with the mediator. Then, they discuss differences face-to-face before entering the final phase — drawing up a voluntary agreement to settle their dispute.

"It's easy, at least on paper," McMullin said.

Some cases, such as dog bites, parking disputes, overgrown trees or poorly aimed garden hoses do seem simple enough. In reality, mediators must often display the wisdom of Solomon and the diplomacy of Henry Kissinger.

"WE GET cases where there have been threats," McMullin said. "The first step, meeting with the mediator, is really a chance for those involved to work out their frustration and anger — to direct it at the mediator instead of at each other."

Most parties generally live up to the voluntary agreement, agency officials said, even though the agreements aren't legally binding.

Experts debate mediation's use here

Mediation is a good idea, area legal professionals said, but it isn't appropriate in all cases.

"Because of its nature, mediation can be effective in cases where it's not important to establish who is at fault," said attorney Charles Gallagher, president of the Livonia Bar Association. "But, if finding fault is what you need to do, then it would be better to go to court, or at least to arbitration."

Area judges also gave mediation a limited endorsement.

"If it's a case where one neighbor's child has hit another neighbor's child in the head with a baseball, then mediation can be effective," said Judge Gail McKnight of 18th District Court, Westland. "Trials in cases like that can hurt a neighborhood. Often, harsh words said in court make it very difficult for either party to go back to the neighborhood."

Mediation is more risky, McKnight said, in cases involving money.

"IF ONE side says the item in dispute is worth $10,000 and the other 2 cents, then there's a big difference that mediation might not be able to solve," she said. "And while mediation doesn't cost as much as a trial, there is a cost involved in having lawyers prepare papers. That little meter is still ticking."

Cases from all area district courts can be sent to the Wayne County Mediation Tribunal, an affiliate of the county circuit court, but rarely are.

"We just don't find any necessity for mediation," said Judge Robert Brzezinski of the 16th District Court, Livonia. "Though our docket is big a lot of it is criminal cases and mediation wouldn't be applicable there."

Judge John MacDonald of the 35th District Court, Plymouth has sent some cases to mediation panels in Oakland County as well. Because the 35th judicial district includes Northville, a city that straddles the county line, "five to six" court cases are annually sent to Oakland mediation panels, MacDonald said.

"I THINK it can be an excellent way to go but there really hasn't been much done with it here in western Wayne County," he said. "Even in our Oakland County portion, it only involves a handful of cases."

Still, there are those who believe mediation's acceptance is inevitable.

"It's got to happen," said Barry Goldman, director of the city of Detroit Human Rights Department, which operates a mediation panel for city residents. "Litigation costs too much and takes too long."

Goldman acknowledged, however, that mediation has been a long time coming in gaining acceptance as a viable alternative to court.

"I've been telling my wife we're in on the ground floor (with regard to mediation)," Goldman said. "But it seems like we've been in on the ground floor for awhile."

Marriage passages: do bars meet needs?

Karyn Pasquel

Identifying internal needs can be frightening and painful, for it requires a deep examination of the self-reality which may demand action. We resist change. Even more so, we resist seeing realities which require any sort of breaking on our part. When I see a couple considering divorce, I never try to save the marriage. The result, surprisingly, is that a very high percentage that I see actually are saved as partners because they learn to identify their needs and adjust accordingly. The road is a difficult one.

My conviction is that as each marital partner dares to have the courage to identify his/her inner needs, he/she will, as a result, be able to see certain traits in others which either help or hinder his/her ability to be fulfilled. Hopefully he/she learns to more clearly focus on the positives in the marital relationship and each partner as individuals.

This can lead to a greater appreciation and flexibility within the relationship and a desire to work — with hope — toward a more fulfilling bond. Sometimes identifying one's needs can expose a long-ignored lack in the marital relationship to be able to fulfill key ones, thereby leading to either a settling for a less than fulfilling relationship or a dissolving of it.

CONSIDER PEOPLE you know. Have you ever wondered how it is that some tend to surround themselves with "losers" while others maintain ranks with the "winners?" There are two interesting phenomena which take place in the selection process of one's social world.

First, there is the unconscious identification with others based on perception of self. Second, is the conscious or unconscious desperate attempt to fill deep inner needs and longings to be what one perceives would be truly fulfilling.

It is interesting that newly divorced people who never went into bars previously may find themselves going there unusually often. Why? Let's look at some real-life circumstances.

A man finally accepts the reality that he cannot live with his "perfect" wife. He continually feels compelled to justify himself and often feels beneath her. His logic tells him this is not a good reason to divorce.

In the bar scene, he doesn't have to match up. He does not have to explain. Due to his guilty self-perception, this man surrounds himself with others who do not require a standard he feels unable to live up to.

If he identified this need while married, a demand for action would have perhaps required a lot of work on the parts of both people. If his belief level that work could actually effect lasting change was too low, he would have either ignored his needs to stay married or taken action to divorce.

IN THE divorce which is seemingly justified by a history of abuse, unfaithfulness, addiction or continuous pain, the bar holds a different attraction. In this case, it can often be characterized by an insatiable drive to dance, move around, and talk with others.

Why? Firstly, noise and movement can block out internal voices we do not want to listen to. Secondly, this person has spent years having to repress not only the more subtle needs, but the blatant ones as well.

I could go on and on. And I wish to express at this point that not every person frequenting a bar is a loser. On the other hand, I'm certainly not encouraging a bar-hopping life style.

But it's possible that many of these people are simply trying, temporarily, to find some way to feel relief from self-debasement while fulfilling urges and needs he/she does not understand.

Unfortunately, the danger in using the bar scene to grow through this searching period is that without understanding what the internal needs are, this person may fall into the perpetual trap of settling rather than daring to change.

For some, the bar scene is no longer a need.

SO HOW does one identify these inner needs? I will later discuss an exercise for persons to do in a subsequent column.

But beware that the process can be frightening and painful. The result, however, can be the most previous possession of a truly fulfilling life.

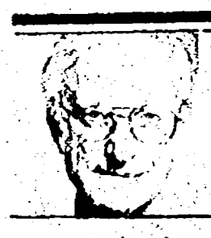
On being the parent of a teenager: Part II



Leonard Poger

Most people over 40 have been a parent of a teen-ager.

Many teens complain that their parents are suffering from "instant amnesia" and have conveniently forgetten what it was like in the golden days and nights of puberty and adolescence.

The teens are absolutely right. We forget about that period of change in our lives and our bodies.

But that's beside the point.

THE ISSUE isn't fairness or consistency of behavior and rules between generations. The issue is that parents and teens have different rights and responsibilities.

The prevailing view is similar to that of a labor union and management.

In the family setting, it is up to the teens to make requests (or demands in some households) and up to the parents to say no, or, "I'll let you know later."

Seriously, the teens feel all their requests are legitimate and have merit.

After all, doesn't every parent have an extra $100 in their wallet or purse to pass out without question? Most parents of teens I know have just sent in checks to the Internal Revenue Service and the state Treasury Department, forcing them to borrow from their kids to put postage stamp money to mail in college financial aid forms.

DOESN'T EVERY family have a extra BMW with a full gas tank in the driveway for that "special trip" to impress a friend of the opposite sex at the neighborhood mall or drive-in? In most families, there are only two cars, with one usually in the body shop because of an accident caused by a teen driver.

Don't all parents give up their credit cards with an unlimited credit limit to allow the teen to buy $500 in new clothes because of the jerky kid who sits next to your loved one in American history? Please don't tell the teenager that the outstanding balance is within $5 of the credit limit and there isn't enough to buy a new tie.

Based on comments I hear from teens, the parents should always be ready at a moment's notice to buy a new $500,000 home so the youngsters can be closer to a new friend they met at a shopping mall.

Another frequent request by teens is to install a separate telephone line so the youngsters can phone their friends and not be delayed by calls made by the adults in the house. But the parents have to break the news to their teens that Michigan Bell Telephone Co. is not a Torch Drive charity and wants more than a few dollars in return for the extra service.

FROM NEWSPAPER and magazine stories written by counselors and therapists, I have learned that teenagers are always "testing" the limits.

But when does the testing end?

Maybe when they enter college or when they start their first full-time job.

Maybe at the age of 30 or at the end of an extended adolescence.

Maybe never.

HELLLLLLLLLLP!

CDs are just another fad, reader says

To the editor:

Hey Keith. If you'd take off your 3-D glasses and put down your hula hoop, you'd see CD's for what they really are — another fad (fortunately, they don't take up much space, so you'll be able to fit them between your Rubik's cube and pet rock in your junk drawer). You claim that CD's are better than albums because they reproduce music with less noise. This is true, but since there is an average daytime noise level of 90 db in the suburbs (10 times the noise from a record), the noise is going to be reinserted when the music travels from your speakers to your ears.

You also claim that CD's are better than albums because they are portable. I suppose this is convenient if you're a thief looking through my car window, but I really don't see the advantage to the consumer. Certainly you aren't suggesting that the amazing digital sound reproduction capabilities of a CD can be fully recognized through a $2.98 pair of portable headphones. Get serious — it sounds like a snake squeezing a bag of potato chips.

As for the CD's permanence, this will end with the consumer's demand for CD recording technology. The "reprogrammable" CD will be nothing more than a viscous discus, just like the vinyl LP. So why sacrifice the art and creativity of album covers (such as Alice Cooper's "From the Inside") for tinfoil frisbees and a few square feet of shelf space?

Mediation offers alternative to court conciliation Center, serving the city's 4th Police Precinct, has a 90-percent success rate after three months, Mansour said. After one year, he said, 85 percent of all agreements are still in effect.

THE SUCCESS rate, they said, can be attributed to the mediators' own skill.

By the time they receive their first case, the volunteer mediators have already been through 30 hours of intensive training designed to improve their communication and observation skills.

"They're taught how to communicate better, including how to read body language," said McMullin, whose agency handles an estimated 90-100 cases a year.

Often, mediators are assisted by a panel of other volunteers.

"It's a panel of your peers and that's what is important," said Marlene Peoples, administrative coordinator of the Community Conciliation Center.

"If it's a dispute between an adult and a teenager, both sides are represented. If it's between senior citizens, then it's a panel of seniors."

THE AGENCY, serving Detroit's 5th Police Precinct and parts of Grosse Pointe Woods, handles 130-150 cases a year, she said.

Disputes are referred by police, church, other community groups or the parties themselves.

"Some just volunteer to come in," Peoples said.

Neighborhood Legal Services operates a mediation program specifically aimed at resolving rental disputes.

"We're a little different from the others because we deal with landlord/tenant situations," said John Robertson, coordinator of the agency's Housing Dispute Resolution Center.

"WE HAVE two types of mediation," he said. "One is the more formal kind, the other is what we call assisted negotiation."

The second option is recommended for low cost disputes, Robertson said, and accounts for roughly 90 percent of all settlements.

The center is authorized to mediate disputes through contracts with Detroit and the Michigan Department of Social Services. All told, the agency mediated 1,630 disputes last year. All cases involved low to moderate income renters, as specified by the city and DSS.

AT THIS point, mediation's impact on western Wayne County has apparently been minimal. Though agencies have operated for several years, most cases come from Detroit.

"We hate to turn anyone away, but our focus is on Detroit and, specifically, people in the precincts we serve," Mansour said.

Cost caps: key to auto insurance debate

By Tim Richard
staff writer

An auto insurer says medical costs should be controlled, but a hospital official said his costs are cheaper than long-term custodial care for badly injured crash victims.

A state cap on medical payouts is one of many thorny questions being debated before the Senate Commerce Committee in Lansing every Tuesday.

Chairman Richard Posthumus, R-Alto, said the goal is to reduce auto insurance premiums 25 percent by capping some costs.

"IN ORDER to reduce insurance premiums," said Automobile Club of Michigan spokesman Jim Hadden, "it looks for ways to control expenses.

"Since 1981, physician's services have gone up 65 percent, hospital room rates 84 percent, legal costs 79 percent, auto body repairs 42 percent.

"All the while, the consumer price index has risen only 30 percent."

Hadden, director of government relations for the Dearborn-based insurer, endorsed Posthumus' Senate Bill 712 because it would "incorporate an established fee schedule for health care providers similar to that being used for workers compensation claims."

SB 712 also would better define "reasonable and necessary expenses for medical care, rehabilitation and home modifications," he said.

As written, Hadden said, the bill would save a Livonia driver $61 a year; a Detroiter, $124; and a Kalamazooan $50, based on coverage for a 1986 Chevrolet.

A NEUROLOGIST from Grand Rapids, Dr. John Butzer, said no-fault insurance is subsidizing other patients, and limits on payouts would be "devastating."

Butzer treats brain and spinal cord injuries at Mary Free Bed Hospital — the majority occurring in auto accidents.

"Rehabilitation is cheaper than long-term custodial care," he said. "A limit on their medical care would be devastating.

"Many in our group are young, single males who do not take health insurance seriously." If insurance failed to cover them, they would have to be treated at Medicaid expense, through charity or suffer a cut in services.

BUTZER CITED Jim, 16, who suffered a serious brain injury in an accidnet. First-year treatment cost $357,000; later care, $100,000 a year.

Paul, 35, suffered brain, kidney and liver injuries. Paul was in acute care for four months, a nursing home for 11 months, acute hospital rehabilitation for five months and outpatient care for nine months. Cost of the acute phase was $320,000; ongoing care, $15,600, Butzer said.

"A nursing home for a brain injury patient is not your standard nursing home," he added.

Sharon Barefoot, director of the Brighton-based Michigan Head Injury Alliance, said the majority of injuries occur to people aged 15 to 24, more than half in auto accidents.

"Ten years ago, only 5 percent lived; today 65 percent survive," said Barefoot, the parent of a brain-injured son. "Someone must take care of these people."

She added, "Those under no-fault (auto insurance) get state-of-the-art treatment. Others get less or are sent home to vegetate. Those not covered become wards of the state."

RICHARD WILLARD, a Washington attorney representing the Michigan Insurance Federation, said the notion of a conspiracy between auto insurers to raise rates "is clearly absurd."

There are thousands of companies and no excess profits, so "widespread collusion is clearly impossible."

Willard, a former assistant attorney general in the Reagan Adminsitration, put the blame for soaring insurance rates on these problems:

- A shift of liability to "deep pocket defendants" — big businesses and governments.
- Payment of high non-economic losses.
- Excessive costs for treatment, attorneys and courts.

Willard said a rate rollback alone "treats the symptoms rather than the cause."

The House in December passed a bill ordering a 30 percent rollback in auto insurance premiums without addressing the costs that insurance covers.

Posthumus has pigeonholed that bill in his committee as he conducts a monthlong series of hearings on his bill.

Hearings set on county exec succession plan

Two public hearings have been scheduled on a proposal to change the line of succession for Wayne County executive.

Hearings are scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 3, at the Westland Freindship Center, 1119 Newburgh, between Ford and Cherry Hill roads, and 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 4, at the 13th floor meeting room of the City County Building, 2 Woodward Avenue, near Jefferson, Detroit.

The proposed change would make a Wayne County commissioner, chosen by the board, the interim executive should a vacancy occur. The current plan calls for the deputy county executive to advance to the post.

Those who seek to change the county charter have said they believe the interim executive should be someone elected by at least some of the county's voters.

Whoever receives the post would gain the advantage of running as an incumbent in the subsequent election to fill the post.

WARMING UP

When you "warm up," you increase the blood supply to your arms and legs. Bringing more blood to these areas means a greater supply of oxygen to the muscles; they can stretch farther, contract more, and return to a ready state faster than before the warm up occured.

Physicians use this information. Thus, a common medical question is: "does activity make you feel better or worse?" If your condition involves muscles and tendons, then you start with stiffness, feel better while active, and note pain returning when you stop to rest.

Joint problems result from cartilage damage or joint lining cell inflammation. Impaired joints are better at the beginning of the day, become worse the longer you stand or walk, and are relieved by rest.

Another common medical question is: "are you better or worse at night?" Strained muscles ache at night because they are deprived of the extra blood supply activity brings. Joints are better at night, because the strain upon them is relieved.

A related occurance is morning stiffness. It is the result of prolonged inactivity by muscles attempting to recover from extreme fatigue. These muscles, deprived of their usual movements at night, are unable to respond to the demand for immediate motion on arising in the morning.

Seminar outshines last year's

If there's one thing Schoolcraft College's Culinary Arts and Continuing Education departments know how to do, it's how to pull out all the big guns for its second annual Chef's Seminar. These weren't just the big guns, they were the heavy artillery.

If you remember my column last year at this time, my comments on the seminar were just so-so. Not this year.

Unfortunately for Livonia's Schoolcraft College, one of the brightest names on the culinary horizon in the Midwest, enrollment was down at this year's conference. Fortunately, for those who did sign up, this meant ample seating, perfect acoustics, incredible-sized samples and an opportunity to ask many of the Detroit-area's finest chefs anything your little heart desired.

The morning began with two of our area's most respected names in chefdom, Milos Chihelka of the Golden Mushroom in Southfield and Leopold Schaeli of Machus Red Fox in Bloomfield Township. Both Certified Master Chefs, these guys trotted around the shimmering stainless steel kitchens of Schoolcraft's fabled Culinary Arts Department like ducks in water.

CHEF MILOS, in his usual low-key demeanor, stuffed a loin of veal with sweetbreads and a veal forcemeat stuffing, deglazed the roasting pan to whip up an accompanying sauce and then tossed together a mussel and vegetable soup that could easily adorn the pages of any major food magazine. His culinary tidbits and tips were being jotted down by everyone in attendance, even the back-up chef-students from the school.

Chef Leopold assembled a fabulous Spanish Paella recipe laced with saffron, shrimps the size of a butterknife, chorizo sausage fresh from the Eastern Market, mussels and Little Neck clams. The audience, consisting of an equal number of culinary students and sophisticated cooks from all walks of life, raved at the fragrance, the combination of flavors and the ease that this noted chef incorporated. With only 20 or so students in the class, plates were heaped with the delectable paella and oohs and ahs emanated from the room upon exiting.

Session number two brought in the younger professionals, knowing that following the masters would be difficult but not necessarily impossible. Chef Brian Polcyn, chef and partner at the Pike Street Station in Pontiac, created a melt-in-your-mouth shrimp mousseline with a chive buerre blanc that yielded shouts of bravo from the not-so-hungry but ready-to-learn audience. The chef's nimble hands filleted a whole salmon so as to remove every bone with about as much effort as you and I exert when we make toast.

Not to be outdone, Chef Marcus Haight of the Lark Restaurant in West Bloomfield whipped together a Chocolate Meringue Cake complete with chocolate leaves. This young chef's talent was eminent as he mastered a pastry bag to create perfectly round swirls of chocolate meringue. In addition to the sampling, one of the highlights was an opportunity for the students in the session to try their hand at making the chocolate leaves.

Lunch was held in the beautifully deocrated American Harvest Restaurant in the Waterman Campus Center (yes, it's open to folks like you and me). Then, back to the demo lab for afternoon presentations by Carol Haskins and Michael McFarlen of the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham. One might think that chefdom is dominated by the talents of men but rest assured Haskins can stand her ground with no problem. Chefs Haskins and McFarlen bounced back and forth with trade secrets while they prepared an elegant lamb Florentine en croute and gourmet green salad with a dijon vinaigrette.

A meal fit for St. Pat

By Larry Janes
special writer

ST. PATRICK'S WORK in Ireland is credited with bringing Christianity to the Emerald Isle beginning in the year 432. This famous saint used a green shamrock to explain the Holy Trinity. That's why the color green and shamrocks are so closely associated with the St. Patrick's Day celebrations we know of today.

The corned beef and cabbage dinner has become yet another symbol of this holiday. Even though the Janeses celebrate St. Patrick's Day with tours of the local watering holes, wearing plastic shamrocks emblazoned with "Kiss me — I'm Irish," we always return home to a large, upright two-gallon Everhot roaster that has been plugged in all day with a humongous piece of corned beef, shards of cabbage and an occasional onion and carrot.

If memory serves me correctly, the mind-boggling effects of the green beer hold reign to the delicious tastes of the fork-tender brisket.

To this day, I can still remember the day after St. Patrick's Day when Dad would scour the aluminum bread box looking for crusts of bread to "soak up" the warm, jellied juices of what was left in the bottom of the roaster from the previous day. Even though Momma never had a drop of Irish blood in her body, her corned beef, cabbage and broth surely to this day could bring smiles of joy to anyone with a last name like O'Malley.

THE CORNED BEEF brisket — needless to say, the most integral part of the corned beef and cabbage dinner — hails from the front part of the beef breast, which includes the sternum bone and part of the first five ribs.

A whole boneless brisket weighs in at more than 12 pounds. It can then be cut numerous ways, with the center cut being the most cherished, evenly sized and well marbled.

Before refrigeration, beef was pickled for preservation by immersion in kegs of brine (salted water). In those days, salt contained saltpeter as a preservative, so that the meat kept well and when cut still had a nice rosy color. Today, however, because of health standards and the oath that time is money, modern pickling processes inject brine into the meat by machine, lessening the curing period from several weeks to a few days. Unfortunately for the health conscious, nitrite has replaced saltpeter as the preserving agent.

Some pre-packaged supermarket types of corned beef need to be soaked in cold water overnight to rid them of excess salt. Read the label and if salt is mentioned more than once, a good soaking couldn't hurt. But be aware that salt comes in many disguises, from sodium to MSG.

When it comes to cooking techniques for corned beef, cooking times can vary, depending on the thickness and weight of the brisket. If you purchase corned beef from a grocer, in packages seasoned with brine, you can use that liquid as the base for cooking. If you have purchased the brisket from a butcher, simply toss the brisket into a large stockpot, cover with water and bring to a boil.

AS CORNED BEEF cooks, don't be surprised to notice two-inch-thick layers of scum or foam rising to the top of the pot. The scum is the fat marbling that has broken down from the pickling in addition to the corning solution. Keep a long-handled slotted spoon nearby for the first 30 minutes or so of cooking, to remove this.

Don't forget alternative cooking methods such as microwaving and crock pot cooking for the fabled corned beef brisket. You can, with limited success, microwave a brisket on medium high power, just be sure

There are a lot of ways to prepare corned beef

CORNED BEEF BRISKET WITH MUSTARD-GLAZED VEGETABLES

3 pound corned beef brisket
8 cups sliced cabbage
1 cup julienned carrots strips
3 tablespoons butter, melted
1 tablespoon dijon-styled mustard
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
3 tablespoons red currant jelly, melted

Place corned beef brisket in a large dutch oven; add water to cover. Cover tightly and simmer for 3 hours or until meat is fork-tender.

Sure and 'tis the place to buy Irish foodstuffs

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If you would like to prepare a genuinely Irish meal and don't have time for an overseas shopping spree, visit Irish Imports Inc. on Michigan Avenue in east Dearborn.

Not only will you find a grocery list of Irish items carried nowhere else in southeastern Michigan or southern Ontario, but you will have a wonderful time.

"It's a quaint little business — European style — where family and friends come in to help out," said Charlie French, in his long yellow apron dusted with flour. French, a friend of the owner, County Mayo-born Jack Derrig, was helping out one recent morning — baking and waiting on customers.

One of the customers was Livonia's Paul Molony, who used his lunch hour to pick up a tape and a book on Irish names. "I'm having a party and I want to use Gaelic spellings on my guests' nametags," he said.

Compliments of Derrig and French, Molony headed back to his office at Ford Motor with a sack of light, sweet-smelling scones, minutes out of Derrig's Blodgett oven.

"It's cholesterol heaven. They must have terrible cardiac problems in Ireland," said Molony, smiling as he headed out the door.

Pat Ronayne of Bloomfield Hills shops at least twice a year at the Irish Import Store — at Christmastime, and again just before St. Patrick's Day. He buys soda bread, Irish bacon from Limerick and 30 pounds of bangers — Derrig's homemade pork sausage and easily his biggest seller.

RONAYNE AND A GROUP of friends, appropriately outfitted in Irish kitchen attire, kick off every St. Patrick's Day at 7 a.m., serving up Irish coffee, bangers and scrambled eggs made with "cream cheese, green pepper, onion and a little pepper" for a happy houseful of family and friends. How to best cook bangers is something only chef "Ted the Wizard" knows for sure, says Ronayne. "That's secret."

Derrig's all-natural sausage recipe is 150 years old. "It's from Dublin. We make it like they make it, but much better. We use more lean meat," said Derrig, whose patrons hail from as far away as Toledo, Lansing and Leamington. "The government requires 6.5 percent protein. We use 13 percent."

To achieve the flavor he is after, it is kept completely immersed in liquid during the process.

Microwave cookbooks suggest about 10-12 minutes per pound, but for the most tender product, yours truly suggests about 15 minutes per pound. If you are thinking about crock potting it, turn the crock pot up to its highest setting and, again, making sure the brisket is totally submerged, figure on about seven-eight hours for fork-tender results in the old crock pot.

It is practically impossible to give an accurate timetable for cooking the meat because corned beef varies in thickness and weight. As a general rule of thumb, simmering at a good rolling boil will cook a six- pound brisket in just about two hours.

Corned beef that is cooked way ahead of schedule can stand immersed in its stock for a few hours with little problems. However, be aware that the vegetables are best when cooked just before serving, so if you are anticipating a sit-down St. Patty's Day celebration, toss the vegetables in 30-45 minutes before eating.

WHEN FLAVORING your corned beef and cabbage dinner, combinations abound that can add interesting tastes and textures to the St. Patrick's Day treat. My cooking library mentions noticeably different recipes for cooking corned beef and cabbage. One recipe calls for using pickling spices, dill, peppercorns and garlic while yet another calls for no garlic, clove-studded onions, a bay leaf and just a few peppercorns.

Since I am not a big fan when it comes to dirtying dishes, I will drop my garlic cloves, peppercorns, cloves, bay leaves and dill in a clean, white, kid's sock or, if I can find it, some cheesecloth. Purists will make these bouquet garni bags so that the broth won't need to be strained and, more importantly, folks like you and me won't chip a tooth biting into a peppercorn. They (the peppercorns) do have a way of slipping behind cabbage leaves.

All my sources indicate the use of only green or white cabbage, probably for tradition's sake, but I have experimented with the use of bok choy, purple cabbage, fresh Brussels sprouts and assorted greens for unique variations. To keep your cabbage leaves from falling apart during the cooking process, leave a good section of the core attached when the whole cabbage is quartered, then eigthed.

Onions, carrots and celery will improve the flavor of the broth and add important color to the plate presentation. Of course, the dinner wouldn't be Irish without the addition of the proverbial potato. The potato is an Irish staple and also serves as a salt-minimizer by absorbing the brine. As the potato cooks, it slowly breaks down and adds a starch that allows the broth to begin to thicken naturally without the addition of flour. This hearty, stick-to-your-ribs type of a broth can easily stand alone as a great soup.

Even though the vegetables add an important flavor to the corned beef during cooking, the vegetables can be cooked separately. This process will allow the shamrock-emblazoned chef to exercise complete control over the crispness of the vegetables and their accompanying flavor.

SAUTEING THE CARROTS in a few drops of olive oil and then sprinkling generously with sesame seeds imparts a sweetness and retains the crunchiness. I can remember eating corned beef and cabbage at Momma's when the vegetables were cooked almost beyond recognition, some to the point where you didn't even need teeth to chew.

I'm a firm believer that the corned beef brisket itself needs the flavor of an occasional carrot, onion and hunk of cabbage, but you can steam, saute, parboil, microwave, stir fry or braise the vegetables with a multitude of herbs and flavorings for a unique approach. Traditionalists could even pre-cook the vegetables in a favorite way and then, just before serving, toss them into the corned beef pot to marry the flavors and soak up some of the great broth.

Last but not least, for the uninitiated, after the brisket has been removed from the pot with the vegetables, remember to carve the brisket across the grain into as thin a slice as possible. Cutting with the grain will cause the brisket to crumble. Here's where a good sharp carving knife can really do its job. Of course, for the neo-traditionalists, an electric knife will suffice nicely.

Twenty minutes before serving, bring 1 cup of water to a boil in a large frypan. Add cabbage, carrots; reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Pour off liquid. Combine butter and mustard, add to vegetables, tossing lightly to coat. Sprinkle with parsley. Place the brisket of beef flat side up on a broiler pan so surface is 4 inches from heat source. Brush melted jelly over brisket and broil 5 minutes or until brisket is glazed. Carve brisket across the grain into thin slices and serve with the vegetables.

TRADITIONAL CORNED BEEF BOILED DINNER

6 pounds corned beef
1 onion, cut in half, studded with 4 cloves
6 carrots, peeled and cut into large pieces
2 celery stalks, cut into large pieces
6 peppercorns
1 bay leaf
1 head cabbage, cut into wedges
8 medium potatoes

Place the meat in a large pot with water to cover. Bring the water to a boil and skim off the scum that rises to the surface. Add the onion, carrot, celery, peppercorns and bay leaf, simmer for 1 hour 30 minutes. Add cabbage, potatoes and other 4 carrots and cook for 30 minutes. Do not add salt. Serve the corned beef on a large platter surrounded by the vegetables.

BRAISED CORNED BEEF

3 pounds corned beef brisket
3 cups dry red wine
flour
4 tablespoons oil
1 large onion
2 carrots, cut up
2 celery stalks, cut up
6 peppercorns
1 bay leaf
2 cloves garlic
1 tablespoon parsley
3 medium potatoes
½ head cabbage, quartered

Drain and rinse corned beef brisket. Place in a glass bowl and cover with red wine. Add the peppercorns, bay leaf, garlic and parsley. Turn marinating beef once during the marinating period. Remove from marinade. Reserve marinade. Pat dry the brisket and lightly coat with flour. Heat oil in a large dutch oven or frypan and brown the brisket for 3 minutes on all sides. Return the meat to the marinade and add enough water to cover. Cover and bring to a boil and boil for 1 ½ hours. Add vegetables, continue cooking until meat is fork-tender, about 30-45 minutes.

SPICED CORNED BEEF

9 pounds corned beef brisket water whole cloves
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon dry mustard grated peel and juice from 2 oranges grated peel and juice from 2 lemons
2 cups cider or apple juice

Cover meat with cold water; bring to a boil and remove scum. Cover and simmer slowly for 3 hours. Cool in cooking liquid. Place drained corned beef in baking pan; score fat and stud with cloves. Combine brown sugar, crumbs, mustard and grated peels. Pat meat with crumb mixture. Place in a 350-degree oven to brown, basting frequently with a mixture of orange and lemon juices and cider. Continue baking for 30 minutes or until heated throughout. Serve with fresh vegetables.

Stir-and-heat sauce adds zip to chicken

AP — Yogurt has an image as a healthful choice for breakfast and snacks, but it's deliciously tangy in hot foods as well. Use yogurt in sauces in place of sour cream to add rich, full flavor without fat.

In a stir-and-heat sauce such as this one, just stir in yogurt and heat but do not boil. If the sauce is flour-thickened, stir 2 tablespoons of the flour into 1 cup of yogurt before adding to the mixture. This keeps the sauce from separating.

SAVORY YOGURT CHICKEN

1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1-2 tablespoons dried minced onion
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
¼ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed dash pepper
4 whole medium chicken breasts, skinned and halved lengthwise one 8-ounce carton plain yogurt
¼ cup margarine or butter, melted
2 teaspoons sesame seed
Creamy Yogurt Sauce (recipe follows)

In a pie plate stir together bread crumbs, Parmesan cheese, onion, garlic powder, seasoned salt, oregano, thyme and pepper. Rinse chicken; pat dry. Coat chicken with yogurt; roll in crumb mixture. Place chicken, meaty side up, in a lightly greased 15-by-10-by-1-inch baking pan. Drizzle margarine on top. Sprinkle with sesame seed. Bake, uncovered, in a 375-degree oven for 45-55 minutes or until tender. Serve with Creamy Yogurt Sauce. Makes 8 servings.

CREAMY YOGURT SAUCE

In a medium saucepan stir together one 10¾-ounce can condensed cream of chicken soup, one 8-ounce carton plain yogurt, ½-cup chicken broth, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, dash garlic powder and dash seasoned salt. Cook over low heat until heated through, stirring occasionally. Makes about 2½ cups.

Irish Winner Dinner was a hit back in 1966

Betsy Brethen

It seems as if we just polished off the last candy heart and now it's time for the "Wearin' of the Green." Yes, me lads and lassies, St. Patrick's Day is almost upon us, and this week's Winner Dinner offers you and your leprechauns a tasty meal, a bit different from the traditional fare of corned beef and cabbage.

Submitted by Ida (O') Grenier of Livonia, this colorful menu promises to be a hit with the Irish and near-Irish as we celebrate the fun, mid-month holiday that is, as well, a harbinger of spring.

Grenier's recipes for escalloped crab served with green noodles amandine; a patriotic green, white and orange salad, and a lime green Jell-O mold were winners for her back in 1966 when she was one of 10 finalists in the Detroit Edison Queen of the Kitchen contest. Now, 24 years later, they are still winners and it gives me great pleasure to be able to share them with you.

The parents of two grown sons, Grenier and her husband have seven grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. Although now retired, Grenier worked for 34 years as a secretary and company librarian for the Detrex Chemical Corp. in Detroit. During those busy years, she was an officer in the National Secretaries Association and a chapter reporter for the magazine, Secretary. She is currently on the Human Relations Commission of Livonia, does volunteer work and often travels around the country with her husband to visit their family.

A TOP-10 Queen of the Kitchen finalist three different years in the '60s, Ida Grenier is a winner in the kitchen as well as in life. We salute you and thank you and, and in lieu of a crown, offer a Winner Dinner Winner apron as a token of appreciation for sharing your menu with us.

Until next week, readers, take care and Happy St. Patrick's Day. Here's hoping that this week's Winner Dinner will bring the luck of the Irish to you and yours.

Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apron with the words Winner Dinner Winner on it.

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping, or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clipings in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

ST. PATRICK'S DELIGHT

This recipe was developed in the '60s and, unfortunately, the price of king crab has risen considerably since then. Although it is possible to use canned lump crab, I found when testing this dish that the imitation crabmeat works just as well and is very reasonably priced. This dish serves 6 and may be prepared in advance and refrigerated.

1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon seasoned or black pepper
1 pound frozen king crab or imitation king crab meat or 3 cans lump king crab, drained juice of ½ lemon
¾ cups grated cheddar cheese
3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
½ cup cornflake crumbs
1 teaspoon instant minced onions
pinch of dried dill weed

Remove crab meat from package or cans, rinse and place on paper towels to remove excess water. Sprinkle with fresh lemon juice. Make white sauce with milk, flour, butter and seasonings. Cook about 1½ minutes. Add more milk if necessary. Add cheese to hot white sauce and stir until melted. Remove from heat and add to beaten egg yolks gradually. Place crab meat in casserole in large chunks and pour white sauce over it. Mix melted butter and cornflake crumbs and sprinkle on top. Bake at 350 for 25-30 minutes. Serve with green noodles.

GREEN NOODLES AMANDINE

Although regular noodles of any kind would work, the green spinach noodles provide a nice contrast with the color of the escalloped crab dish.

6 ounces green noodles
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons slivered almonds
1 teaspoon lemon juice (optional) dash garlic powder (optional)
salt and pepper to taste

Cook noodles in boiling salted water. While noodles are cooking, melt butter in saucepan and saute almonds until golden. Add lemon juice. Drain noodles and add to almond and butter mixture. Toss gently and season to taste, heat through and serve in preheated serving dish. A delicious side dish for any occasion.

SHAMROCK SALAD

Place crisp lettuce on plate. Place 2-3 slices tomato in the center and top with about 5 steamed asparagus spears. Garnish with thin slices of cucumber and sprinkle with Green Goddess salad dressing or any dressing of your choice. Colors of this salad are green, white and orange (especially with winter tomatoes), the colors of Ireland.

LUCKY LEPRECHAUN LIME JELL-O

To complete the green theme for St. Patrick's Day, serve the following as a salad or dessert.

1 large package lime Jell-O
1 cup hot water
1 pint sour cream or plain yogurt
1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple with juice (20 ounces)
½ cup chopped nuts

Add hot water to Jell-O and chill in refrigerator for about 20 minutes. Add the rest of ingredients and pour into mold. Chill until set.

Shopping List

1 pound king crab meat
1 package green spinach noodles (8 ounces)
1 large package lime Jell-O
1 pint sour cream or plain yogurt milk
butter or margarine
12 ounces grated sharp cheddar cheese
3 eggs
cornflake crumbs
flour
salt pepper
dill weed garlic powder minced instant onions
1 lemon
1 can crushed pineapple with juice (20-ounce size) lettuce
1 bunch asparagus
1 cucumber
1 large tomato
Green Goddess dressing or dressing of choice
1 small package slivered almonds
1 small package chopped nuts

42 gallons of sap make a gallon of maple syrup

Lois Thieleke

home economist, Cooperative Extension Service

Maple syrup is one of nature's most flavorful sweets. Each spring approximately 1 million gallons are produced in the Northeastern United States. Much more is produced in Canada.

Until the middle 1800s, this native-American farm product was a principal source of syrup and sugar for Americans. Originally, the greater portion of the annual crop was processed into sugar. Today, most is marketed as syrup.

The sap begins to flow when the daytime temperature warms up above freezing. It will continue for approximately eight to 15 hours, unless the temperature drops below freezing before then. Sap will flow daily as long as the freezing and thawing continue.

It takes approximately 40 gallons of maple sap to make 1 gallon of maple syrup at the sugarhouse. The sap is heated and the water evaporated. When it reaches the correctd sugar density, 66 percent, the maple syrup is packaged and ready for use.

UNOPENED MAPLE syrup can be stored for 12 months in a cool, dry place. Once opened, store the maple syrup in the refrigerator or freezer. If you open a large container of maple syrup, heat the excess to 190 degrees and re-can in hot, sterilized jars and seal. Process 10 minutes in hot water bath.

Store in cool, dry dark place. If a sugary crust forms on the bottom of the container, set the container in a pan of hot water until sugar dissolves. If maple syrup is left open, mold will grow on top. If this occurs, heat syrup to 190 degrees and skim off the foam. The syrup will taste as good as it did when you purchased it.

Maple syrup is widely used as an ingredient in a variety of other food products. Because of its high sugar content, it can be substituted for sugar in many recipes. When substituting, use one and one-half cups of pure maple syrup for each cup of granulated sugar, plus one-quarter teaspoon baking soda for each cup of syrup used. When maple syrup is substituted for all the sugar in a recipe, reduce the amount of liquid used by one half. If maple syrup is substituted for half the sugar, reduce liquid amounts by one fourth.

A variety of sugar and confection products can be made from maple syrup simply by additional heating, stirring and cooling procedures. The more common products are hard or soft maple sugar candy, granulated sugar, and maple creams. Of course, many cookbooks have recipes for main dishes, breads, cakes, cookies, pies and more, using maple syrup.

Maple syrup can also be enjoyed over pancakes, ice cream, french toast, or cereal. To add a little different flavor to whipping cream, add a little maple syrup after the cream has been whipped. Serve on angel food or white cake. Pour a little maple syrup over apples you are baking. Maple syrup can be used for a glaze on baked ham, ham loaf, pork chops, or roasts and chicken. Next time you make baked beans, use maple syrup.

THE QUICKEST and easiest candy to make is called a maple nugget. Boil one cup maple syrup until it forms a soft ball (236 degrees) in water. Remove from heat, add one tablespoon butter and beat until it thickens. Add one and one-half cups puffed rice cereal. Mix thoroughly and drop on wax paper. So simple, but great tasting.

To make hard maple sugar candy, use a darker grade of syrup. Heat until the temperature is approximately 252 degrees. Remove from heat and begin stirring immediately. When the syrup begins to thicken and sugar crystals form, pour the partially crystalized syrup into molds to harden.

Soft maple sugar candy is made by heating the syrup to 239 degrees. Cool slowly, set pan on wooden surface to more evenly distribute the heat. When the temperature of the syrup solution drops to 155 degrees, stir with a wooden spoon. When crystalization begins, pour into molds and allow to harden.

Maple syrup is a natural, sweet treat that we begin to think about in the warm days and cool nights of spring. It is a pure product, nothing added. Only the water is removed during the concentration process. It can be said that the maple syrup is a pure, natural sign of spring.

● Syrup festival

Cranbrook Institute of Science's 17th annual Maple Syrup Festival continues from 1-4:30 p.m. Saturday-Sunday through March 25, at the museum in Bloomfield Hills.

The festival offers step-by-step demonstrations that reveal the maple syrup production process. Festival activities are included in the museum admission of $3 for adults and $2 for senior citizens and children (ages 3-17).

Visitors can walk the museum's sugar trails, see how the trees are tapped and watch the sap flow into buckets. The sap is then transported to the New England-style sugarhouse for evaporation and syrup production (often referred to as "sugaring").

Visitors have an opportunity to pose questions to a naturalist, but the highlight of the festival is tasting the sweet syrup. Museum members also can partake of the annual Maple Syrup Breakfast that includes sausage, beverages and all the pancakes they can eat.

Seminar outshines last year's event

ON THE OTHER side of the kitchen was Tom Tonapanish and Chef Chan Dech Su Wan of the Bangkok Club in Southfield. Tonapanish interpreted for the non-English-speaking chef. Watching Chef Chan swing a Chinese cleaver was almost as good as the delectable, authentic Thai cuisine that was offered.

Bringing up the rear embattlements was another major arsenal of culinary defenses led by the incomarable Chef Ed Janos of Chez Raphael in Novi. Meanwhile, in the demonstration lab, Chefs Tony Marsili and Steve Schoepen, of the Whitney in Detroit, presented new concepts and trends in desserts for the '90s. Those in attendance at Chef Janos' presentation observed crisping, roasting and braising techniques incorporating salmon, whitefish and pickerel. The guys from the Whitney aptly closed the conference with a presentation on "the Tex-Mex Red Hell Dessert," Mascapone Souffles and a Cranberry Maple Walnut Alaska that had the audience deliver a standing ovation.

Sadly, the conference is over till next year, but if you or someone you know is a sophisticated cook looking for a great way to spend a day with the best our area has to offer, you might want to get on next year's mailing list by calling Schoolcraft College Continuing Education Services at 462-4448. Rumor has it that next year will be even bigger and better. Don't put it off. Do it now. You won't be disappointed.

8 mussels (cleaned)
8 little necks (cleaned)

Using a large paella pan, cook chicken in olive oil. Reserve. Saute onions, red and green peppers and garlic. Add sausages and rice. Mix well. Add tomatoes, olives, clam juice, garbanzos and chicken. Add saffron to chicken stock. Season as needed. Pour boiling stock into the pan. Cover and cook for 10 minutes. Add shrimp, clams and mussels. Cook covered for 10 minutes in oven. Divide into equal portions.

Paella should retain some moisture. The rice should be reasonably firm, not dried out. Everything is cooked in the same pot or paella, which means pan or skillet. Paella is prepared with a variety of ingredients, usually relating to product availability in a specific area. Any reasonable product additions and substitutions can be made . . . also very expensive by adding lobster tails, scampi and oysters

MUSSEL AND VEGETABLE SOUP

18 mussels
⅓ cup white wine few parsley stems
15 bruised peppercorns
1 sprig of thyme
4 shallots, chopped
1 clove garlic, crushed

Soak mussels in cold salted water for 1 hour, drain and rinse in fresh water. In a stainless saucepan, bring to a boil the wine, parsley, shallots, garlic and herbs. Add mussels, cover tightly, and over high heat steam up until mussels open. Remove from fire, drain juice and reserve. Remove beards from mussels and cut mussels in halves.

⅓ cup unsalted butter
⅓ cup sliced leeks, white
⅓ cup scallions, sliced
⅓ cup carrots, sliced
⅓ cup asparagus, peeled, cut into ⅓-inch pieces
⅓ cup mushrooms, sliced
1 quart clam juice
1 cup heavy cream
3 egg yolks
2 teaspoons cut chives

In a heavy saucepan melt butter, add vegetables and mushrooms and saute till transparent; dust with flour, stir for 2 minutes, add clam and mussel juices, bring to simmer, cook 5 minutes. Add peas. Mix yolks with cream, add a little hot soup to it, mix and pour back into soup. Reheat a little without boiling, sprinkle with chives and serve immediately.

Area authors look at broccoli

Geri Rinschler

"Broccoli and Company" by Audra and Jack Hendrickson, Garden Way Publishing, paperback, $7.95, 1989.

"Broccoli and Company" is the latest and last in the trilogy of healthy cookbooks written by local authors Audra and Jack Hendrickson of Birmingham. Just about a year ago, I reviewed their second book, "Surprising Citrus." As one would expect, the format and style of this latest book is similar in many respects.

In the 130-plus pages, more than 100 of them are recipes featuring cruciferous vegetables. Included in this category are broccoli, Brussells sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, greens (collard, kale, mustard and turnip), kohlrabi, rutabaga and turnip.

Since the Hendricksons have been eating and cooking healthy for a number of years, Garden Way publishers decided they must be perfect candidates for authoring a cookbook about high-fiber, low-sodium vegetables.

In the opening chapters, the authors discuss the health and nutrition essentials of broccoli and the cruciferous family. The last 10 pages are devoted to the growing and harvesting of each of these veggies.

SORRY TO SAY, I personally have a little enthusiasm for these "good for me" type vegetables. Rather than prepare a baked casserole incorporating shredded rutabaga, shredded carrots, corn syrup and margarine, I will opt for a plate of fresh, raw broccoli flowerets and low-fat herb dip any day.

For those of you who love Braised Brussels Sprouts and Baked Rutabaga Croquettes, this book is for you.

SAUERKRAUT CHOCOLATE CAKE

⅔ cup margarine
1 ⅓ cups sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1 cup water
2 ¼ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
⅓ cup cocoa
⅔ cup drained finely chopped sauerkraut

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Oil and flour a 9-by-9 or 11-by-7-inch baking pan. In a large mixing bowl, cream together the margarine and the sugar. Beat in the eggs, the vanilla, and the water. Add the flour, the baking powder, the baking soda, the cocoa and the salt and beat to a smooth batter. Stir in the sauerkraut until thoroughly blended.

Turn the saurkraut mixture into the prepared pan and bake for 25-30 minutes, or until a tester inserted in the center comes out clean. Remove from the oven and cool on a rack. When the cake is completely cool, spread with Cocoa Frosting, cut into portions and serve.

COCOA FROSTING

3 tablespoons soft margarine
¼ cup cocoa
1 ½ cups powdered sugar
½ teaspoon pure vanilla extract
2-4 tablespoons milk

In a medium mixing bowl, cream the margarine and the cocoa. Add the powdered sugar, the vanilla and enough of the milk to make the mixture of spreading consistency.

Beat until smooth and creamy. Spread on cooled cake.

Local kids among Bake-Off winners

Six area youngsters were winners in the recent Farmer Jack/A&P Supermarkets Kid's Pillsbury Bake-Off 1990, held recently at Fairlane Manor in Dearborn.

Rebecca Haskin, 9, of Livonia placed first in the dessert category with her recipe for Popcorn Cake. Aaron Blatt, 11, of West Bloomfield was first in the baked goods category with Sweet and Crunchy Cornbread.

Beth Yale, 12, of Farmington Hills was second in the microwave category with Popcorn Balls; Ben Ohly, 10, of West Bloomfield, third in the microwave category with Devils Food Cream Pie; Christopher Maloney, 6, of Farmington Hills, third in the vegetable category with Vegetable Pizza, and Matthew Kaczor, 6, of Westland, third in the desserts category with Country Apple Dessert.

REBECCA HASKIN'S POPCORN CAKE

½ cup butter
16 ounces marshmallows
¼ cup smooth peanut butter
4 bags Pillsbury Microwave Popcorn popped
1 cup dry roasted peanuts
10 ounces M&M candy

Melt butter, peanut butter and marshmallows in large pan until completely melted. Cook 1 more minute. Pour over popcorn and peanuts, then mix in the M&Ms. Pour into a buttered angel food cake pan. Turn out onto a cake plate when it is completely cooled and set. Slice to serve.

AARON BLATT'S SWEET AND CRUNCHY CORNBREAD

1 can Pillsbury Cornbread Twists
½ stick butter or margarine
1 cup buttered salted pecans
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Melt butter or margarine. Set aside to cool. Chop pecans very fine and mix with cinnamon and sugar. A food processor also will work very well, but process for only 15 seconds. Dip corn sticks into butter and roll them in the nut sugar mixture. Twist and place on an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 10-15 minutes or until golden brown.

'Tis the place for Irish foodstuffs

Derrig uses no sage, just mace and nutmeg from a Vietnamese bean, and pork — finely chopped the European way, not ground.

"I'm the first and only Irishman to get a sausage product approved by the USDA and Ottawa," said Derrig, whose colorful packaging is the work of Tralee artist Mary McSweeney.

"We use no chemicals and no additives."

"It really is a big deal," said French. "It takes a big corporation five years to accomplish that. He did it in two or three."

DERRIG'S BANGERS are beginning to make Milwaukee famous. At the city's annual Irish summer festival on the shores of Lake Michigan, Derrig sells his long links in onion rolls, smothered with sauteed onions and green pepper. "We sell 10,000 bangers in two-and-a-half days, and 1,800 loaves of soda bread," says the father of six and grandfather of eight.

Derrig's breakfast-sized bangers, rolled and baked in puff pastry, are in demand among area clubs and pubs. For the recent Maid of Erin pageant at the Gaelic League, he sold 600 of them.

Bangers on the barbecue are delicious, allows Derrig, an accomplished baker who studied culinary arts at Schoolcraft College and Wayne County Community College.

"Put them on the charbroiler in the yard. They're superb."

Bangers also taste good cooked in a frying pan, as long as you use "just enough margarine to coat the pan, no water and no lid," he said.

"Roll them by hand or with a fork." Unlike sausage with synthetic casing that has to be poked, "Our casing is natural. It has its own oils." For that reason it's important that the sausage not get too hot. If it does, the spices and oils will cook right out of the meat, Derrig said.

DERRIG SPEAKS from experience. Nine months after arriving in America at age 18, the Irishman was drafted. As an Army cook in Korea, he fried eggs for 300 soldiers every morning — on outdoor grills without benefit of a spatula.

If you're on an Irish diet, treat yourself to a stop at 13251 Michigan Ave., three blocks east of Schaeffer and three blocks west of I-94.

If you're on an Irish diet, treat yourself to a stop at 13251 Michigan Ave., three blocks east of Schaeffer and three blocks west of I-94.

As the aroma of fresh-baked, currant-and-raisin-laden soda bread wafts through the tiny store, you can load up on black pudding (Irish blood sausage made from pork); McCann's Instant Irish Oatmeal; Irish sandwich biscuits; Irish Pure Seville Orange or Original Irish whiskey marmalade (great on scones); Butch McGuire's Irish Whisky Loaf; Lakeshore Whole Grain Mustard with Guinness Stout; a plethora of Irish teas, including the renowned Bewley's blend; Mayhaw jelly; salad dressings; George Killian Irish Red lager in longnecks, and cold Guinness and Harp.

And don't forget the links. "They don't repeat on you," so they're safe for older people and children to eat, said the banger maker.

This time of year is special at the Irish Import store. Derrig and his wife, Mary Ellen, company president, take 20 percent off every sale and every order the week preceding St. Patrick's Day.

The Saturday before March 17, the Derrigs serve lunch and Irish coffee during an open house.

MORE THAN 1,200 people have been known to steam up the windows and line up outside Derrig's door that day.

"His son accuses him of having a public service, he's so generous," said French.

For Derrig, it's just plain enjoyment, and a way to "pay something back."

"My customers are great people. In 19 years, I've had no bad checks. That I brag about," said the Irish entrepreneur with a wink.

Lindsey is a 5-year-old diabetic. Her daily insulin shots, diet restrictions and constant blood monitoring only provide day-to-day control over the disease. They do not cure it. So Lindsey, along with 11 million other Americans, still faces the long-term risks of diabetes — like heart disease, blindness, stroke, amputation and kidney disease. The complications of diabetes will account for an estimated 150,000 deaths this year alone.

But thanks to your contributions to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Lindsey and millions like her have something more to look forward to. In the past decade, JDF research has made great strides in isolating the causes and conditions of diabetes, bringing us closer to a cure. At the same time, diabetes increases by 6% every year. And in ten years the number of diabetics will have doubled.

So you see, your help is needed more desperately than ever before. For more information on the warning signs of diabetes and its treatment, and what you can do to help, call JDF at (313) 569-6171.

Wayne keeping eye on Cooley

By Brad Emons
staff writer

The numbers were not very encouraging for Wayne Memorial except the most important one — the final score.

Wayne sputtered in Friday's Class A district championship against a determined Livonia Churchill squad, but persevered en route to a 55-46 basketball victory at Westland John Glenn.

The Zebras, befuddled by Churchill's 3-2 zone defense most of the night, shot just 32 percent from the floor (17 of 53) and committed 17 turnovers, but they still had enough to earn a berth in Tuesday's regional at Southfield (7 p.m.). Wayne takes on three-time defending state champion Detroit Cooley (15-6).

The game will be a rematch of last year's regional championship at Southfield-Lathrup in which Cooley won convincingly 80-53.

"We've definitely got to be loose if we're going to shoot well against Cooley," said Wayne coach Chuck Henry, whose team is 21-1 overall. "We'll be out-matched inside. We have to convey the fact that we're playing the three-time defending champion and the pressure is on them. All we can do is give it our best shot. After you win your league and district, anything else is just icing on the cake."

CHURCHILL WAS in a similar underdog role against Wayne.

The Chargers, who finished 11-10 overall, proved to be a stubborn opponent.

Although falling behind 11-5 after one quarter and 26-16 at intermission, the Chargers made things interesting, pulling to within four points late in the third quarter and within seven with 2:19 to play in the game after being down by as many as 15 only 2½ minutes earlier.

But each time Wayne repelled the Chargers.

"We had some good shots and I thought we played hard," said Churchill coach Fred Price. "I thought we played the game we wanted to play. With a basket here and there, or maybe even a three-pointer, we could have really been in it."

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Larry Ryles (right) of Wayne throws up a one-hander over Churchill's Russ McQuaid.

Kevin Hankerson, a 6-foot-4 senior center, paced Wayne with 15 points, including a pair of dunks.

Teammate Larry Johnson, who suffered through a dismal shooting night (3 of 17) and missed a dunk, finished with 13. All three of his field goals were from three-point range. Seniors Pierre Hixon and Reggie Brandon added 11 and 10, respectively.

"WAYNE'S a decent ballclub with some quickness," Price said. "And Hankerson is tough inside."

Churchill's high man was 6-3 senior Mike Juodawlkis, who finished with a game-high 21. Kevin Hannigan was next with seven.

"Churchill played hard in their zone," said Henry, who captured his third district crown. "We got shots, but couldn't hit them. And we did not seem we were able to run. We did not get easy baskets, and when you're not shooting, it's a struggle."

But Wayne was able to hang its hat on defense. The Zebras forced Churchill into 21 turnovers and 33 percent shooting from the floor (16 of 48).

"We didn't panic, normally we stay pretty cool," Henry said. "We've won a lot of games with solid defensive play. That could be our makeup."

The Zebras took advantage of Mike Thomas' absence after the 6-2 junior forward picked up his third foul near the end of the first quarter.

With the Chargers' top scorer, ball-handler and passer out of the lineup, Wayne built a 12-point advantage by capitalizing on a couple of Churchill turnovers.

"He's our driving force," Price said of Thomas. "If anybody can take it to the basket and score, he can do it."

THOMAS FINISHED with six, while 6-6 junior Randy Calcaterra contributed five.

But despite those abnormally low offensive outputs, Price was elated with his team's defensive play.

"We did a nice job for the most part of keeping Brandon (Wayne's point-guard) out of his penetration areas," said the Churchill coach. "We dared them to beat us from outside, and I thought Randy and Mike were outstanding at taking away the baseline. Defensively, we played well. We moved our feet and got we back on the transition.

"This has been a fun team to coach. There have been some nights were they didn't give as good an effort as we'd like, but not tonight."

Henry, meanwhile, knows his team must "come to play" Tuesday against Cooley. The statistical totals will have to change.

Salem survives Stevenson run

Plymouth Salem changed the course of history Friday night in the championship game of the Northville district basketball tournament.

The Rocks didn't have a very good record in big games involving Livonia Stevenson, suffering a pair of one-point losses in last year's district final and last week's league final.

That's why senior guard Tom Noonan, who played an excellent floor game in addition to scoring 15 points, called it double revenge when Salem defeated the Spartans 79-68 to win its first district title since 1987.

Ryan Johnson, who was a major factor with 20 points and 14 rebounds for the Rocks, was more vocal about the outcome.

"We wanted to prove to ourselves and all the other teams in the conference who the real champion is," he said. The Spartans beat Salem once in four games this year, but the lone victory occurred in the Western Lakes Activities Assocaiton final, 61-60.

"When Stevenson beat us for the conference championship, we sat there and watched them get their medals. They must have known who the real champion is, because they didn't stick around to watch us get our medals."

SALEM TAKES a 21-2 record into the Ypsilanti regional tournament and will play Ann Arbor Huron at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The final is slated for 7 p.m. Friday. The Spartans finish the season 15-7.

The Rocks got solid play from guards Jeff Gold and Noonan, who keyed Salem's offense with their passing inside to Johnson and Jake Baker, who scored 22 points to lead the Rocks and also grabbed 13 rebounds.

"I give credit to the guards," said Johnson, who sparked Salem to a 43-31 halftime lead with 14 points in the first half. "They're the ones who attacked the defense and did what they had to do, and that's what opened me up inside."

The Rocks decided they couldn't allow themselves to be intimidated by Stevenson's 6-foot-9 Glenn Szeman, according to Baker.

"The last time we were pump faking and were worried about getting our shots blocked," he said. "This time we didn't worry about that. Coach told us to take the ball up and not worry about drawing the foul."

Szeman picked up two first-quarter fouls and started the second period on the bench. He missed much of the fourth after getting his fourth foul with 6:24 to play.

SZEMAN STILL finished with 14 points, second to teammate Ron Baran's game-high 25, which included six triples. Rick Laven got most of his 11 points in the last quarter.

"I thought Z played an outstanding game under the foul situation," Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre said. "He still attempted to guard the basket as well as he could, knowing the next one would be his fourth."

Baran carried the Spartans in the first half when he sank four treys and had 15 points. Szeman, who took a pass from Baran and to score the game's first basket with a dunk, had 10 first-half points.

"Ronnie picked up all the slack in the first half," McIntyre said, "but he was probably forced to score too much too soon. Then he's no longer shooting against one kid but two."

Baran and Laven, who was cold early in the game but hit three triples in the last quarter, tied the score at 65 on consecutive treys with 4:52 to play.

But the Spartans missed four of their next five shots, and Salem resumed what it was doing well early in the game, taking the ball inside.

WITH SZEMAN still on the bench, Baker and Johnson pushed the Rocks into a 69-65 lead with layups. Szeman returned but the Johnson-Baker combination sandwiched two more layups around a triple by Laven for a 73-68 lead with 1:15 remaining.

"They were trying to pressure us a little more, because it was getting near the end of the game," Baker said, "and the guards started looking inside."

The guards were instrumental in Salem's success, as evidenced by Noonan's 10 assists and Gold's eight. Noonan also had seven steals, Gold three.

"Our game plan was to get better penetration from the guards and look for the big guys, and they were to attack the basket," Salem coach Bob Brodie said.

"If you have guards who can pass as well as ours do and shoot as well as ours do, it puts pressure on the defense. We didn't force them to guard our guards in past games.

"The plan wasn't to draw fouls on Szeman, but (when Salem did) that was great," he added. "It was irrelevant whether he was in the game or not. We were going to attack the basket."

WITH LESS than a minute left, the Rocks went to their delay game, and Noonan made the free throw and bonus twice for a 77-68 lead with 20 seconds on the clock.

"They hit a couple threes to get back in the game, but coach said not to panic," Noonan said. "(In the league final), we panicked. Tonight we didn't."

The Rocks went on a roll in the first quarter as the fouls mounted for Stevenson. Forward Phil Woods had three in the opening period and Baran two. The Spartans lost some of their physicalness and defense on Baker with Woods on the bench.

"That took us out of some coverages we had worked on along the Redford Bishop Borgess continued to prove it can carry its own weight without scoring leader Shawn Respert, outmuscling Detroit Renaissance Saturday for its third straight Class B district basketball crown, 88-70.

The host Spartans came out with a physical brand of play to notch their 20th victory in 23 games. Renaissance's Cinderella tournament run ends at 2-18.

Senior guard Artie Brown paced a balanced Borgess scoring attack with 21 points. Starters Randy White and ReShawn Sumler contributed 15 and 12, respectively.

Christopher Fields of Renaissance led all scorers with 29.

But the 6-foot-4 sophomore was not much of a factor in the first half. He had only eight, as he was held in check by 6-3, 220-pound Borgess senior center Dennis Parker.

It was pretty much over at halftime as Borgess mounted a 40-20 advantage. The Spartans led by as many as 28 in the third period before coasting home.

"THE REFS let both teams play," said Borgess coach Mike Fusco. "It almost looked like a Big Ten game the way they were letting things go underneath."

Borgess has regrouped to win five straight games since Respert, the 6-3 All-Stater headed for Michigan State, went down with a knee injury during a loss last month to Southgate Aquinas in the Catholic League playoffs.

"We have different goals before each season and we've accomplished every one so far with the exception of the Catholic League," Fusco said.

RANDY BORST/staff photographer

Artie Brown (left) starts the fast-break as teammate ReShawn Sumler trails the play.

"Good teams still can overcome adversity, but we still have a lot to overcome."

Borgess is doing it with tough inside play led by Sumler, a 6-5 junior, and White, the 6-3 senior.

"The thing about Borgess is that they have good athletes and they're in good physical condition," said Renaissance coach Gary Teasley. "That's their normal style of play. Tonight, rebounding was the phase of the game where it made a difference."

Brown, for instance, grabbed 10 rebounds to go along with his game-high 21 points.

"I THOUGHT Artie played really well," Fusco said. "He's been shy recently, for whatever the reason. Right now we're trying to get everybody to be more assertive.

"It started Thursday in the second half of the (Detroit) Benedictine game (a 76-55 victory) and it carried over into Friday's practice, and into tonight's game. It took a while to get the confidence level up after the Aquinas loss."

The Spartans seem to be playing with a lot confidence. Lamar Westbrook, who is starting in place of Respert, scored eight points, while senior Tim Lackey came off the bench to contribute eight as well.

They more than offset the Phoenix supporting cast of Chrisopher Hardeman and Cornelius Henderson, who tallied 13 each. Renaissance shot 40 percent from the floor (26 of 64).

"Certain intangibles also determined the outcome of this game," said Teasley. "With the kind of deficit we faced early, we had to rely on some things that put us at a disadvantage. But our team is growing. We're blessed to have some young players back. We've got kids that hopefully are going to be in that same type of mode as a Borgess."

BUT THE FUTURE for the Spartans is now. They advance to the regionals at Warren High School to face St. Clair Shores South Lake (13-10) at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The other regional semifinal, 7 p.m. Tuesday, pits Detroit Country Day and Mount Clemens Clintondale.

The regional championship is set for 7 p.m. Friday at Warren.

After taking nearly 80 minutes Saturday to finally eliminate Livonia Stevenson (13-15, 15-6, 15-11) in a regional semifinal, Ladywood breezed past Detroit Henry Ford, 15-1, 15-3 in the final.

The win was the third straight regional title for Ladywood (45-9 overall), the defending Class A champion. It sends the Blazers into the quarterfinal round at 5:30 p.m. Friday at Nazareth College in Kalamazoo.

Although it took the Blazers less than a half hour to get past Henry Ford, Ladywood coach Tom Teeters still resembled a man who had been through enough in one day.

"NO GAME IS a breather now," Teeters said. "One match and you're out. I had not seen Henry Ford all year, but we served consistently and they had trouble handling them. This feels real good. We've had a change of talent each year, but the kids get real good experience on the freshman and junior varsity level — good coaching from Beth Wesman."

Junior Keli Haegar, who led Ladywood with 19 kills on the day, knew ahead of time that Stevenson would be the Blazers' toughest obstacle. Henry Ford also had a tough semifinal, narrowly beating Ferndale, 16-14, 16-14, but it was evident the Trojans didn't have enough talent to match up with the experienced Blazers.

Henry Ford, the Detroit Public School League champ five of the last six years, ended its season at 43-21-8 overall.

"I knew it was going to be hard against Stevenson," she said. "Henry Ford — they're a good team — I think they just died. It was a relief, relaxing."

If the Blazers were worn out from the semifinal match with Stevenson, they didn't show it.

Sparking Ladywood's lopsided win over Henry Ford were Kari Domanski and Haeger, who had six and four kills, respectively. Mary Jo Kelly led all servers, collecting five aces, and Marsie Spender delivered several fine assists from her setter position.

STEVENSON STARTS only one senior, Renea Bonser, but the Spartans still took Ladywood to the limit before losing the semifinal.

Stevenson, 25-8-9 overall, led 4-0 in Game 2 and 5-0 in the third game but failed to hold onto either advantage.

Sophomore middle hitter Teresa Sarno led Stevenson's attack with six blocks, eight kills and nine digs. Bonser had 12 kills, Patty Diamond 18 assists and Collette Rockwell two serving aces for the Spartans, who are probably a year away.

"Our starting players have come a long way from being a team that lost a lot to a team with a winning attitude," Stevenson coach Lee Cagle said. "I've been excited about this team all year. But Ladywood had the experience, was tough and that made the difference.

"We had too many unforced errors and allowed (Ladywood junior) Rebecca Willey to serve eight points on two rotations in the second game. That's a bad habit of ours, getting in the hole and trying to catch up."

Ladywood got fine net play from Haegar (15 kills), Domanski (14 kills) and senior Peggy Knittel (10 kills). Haegar also had 12 digs and Spender eight.

"The Stevenson win was more satisfying," Teeters said. "Haegar really came through for us hitting, and Kari and Rebecca did a good job serving. That's what our team is always about. If one of them isn't on, someone else picks up."

Wayne rules regional final

Zebras off to Kalamazoo

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Chants of "Beast, Beast" rang throughout the Wayne Memorial gym Saturday, and rightfully so.

The Beast is 6-foot junior Brandy Caincross, who along with the rest of her Zebra teammates, captured the Class A regional volleyball title at home with a 15-6, 15-3 victory over Dearborn Edsel Ford in the championship final.

Wayne, now 40-4 overall, moves into the state quarterfinals. The Zebras will meet the West Bloomfield regional champ at 4 p.m. Friday at Nazareth College in Kalamazoo.

"What a great experience for a young team . . . just great," said Wayne coach Ann Kolnitys-Gincentini. "We have the power. I feel personally that with eight teams left we can play with anybody."

Caincross, who is slowly recovering from a hip pointer, proved to be too much for the Thunderbirds (25-15-5), who reached the regional final with a 13-15, 15-7, 15-12 win over Trenton.

"Their hitters did a nice job," said Edsel Ford coach Sue Sanson of Wayne. "And all the way around they did a nice job."

CAINCROSS, who does not start, had 10 kills against Lincoln Park in a 15-12, 15-2 triumph in the other semifinal.

She came back with six to go along with a pair of serve-blocks against Edsel.

"Her legs are getting stronger and she's starting to dominate," said the Wayne coach of the junior. "She can win a game before it even starts the way she kills the ball."

But while Caincross has a flare for the dramatic with her big hits, 5-11 senior Evette Sluder quietly makes it all happen.

She led Wayne with 22 kills on the day.

"When she's 'on' she makes the other players better," said Kolnitys-Gincentini. "When she runs the show, she's all over the court."

Sluder and the Zebras have made "tons of progress," according to the Wayne coach, since being ousted in last month's Schoolcraft College Invitational.

"I was kind of scared and shaky there," Sluder said. "I've lifted my confidence level up. People were injured at Schoolcraft and nobody knew what they were doing. The team has come a long way since the beginning of the season. Everyone is talking and playing together. There's not as much pressure on me."

HELPING TO RELIEVE the burden has been sophomore setter Laura Fisher.

"The sophomore is doing the job," said Kolnitys-Gincentini. "And we have the outside hitters now that we can set to."

Fisher had eight digs and 19 assists in the Lincoln Park match, while Gerri Ruffing, a 5-10 junior, added 20 digs on the day. Another starter, Denise Walsh, contributed six digs against Edsel. Jenny Tibbals, a steady senior, helped run Wayne's attack along with Sluder.

Serving was a big factor for Wayne in the win over Edsel.

The Zebras, who missed six in the first game against Lincoln Park, did not make an error in the championship final.

"I told them that we had to serve to win," said the Wayne coach. "That's the one thing we had to clean up."

Edsel, meanwhile, misfired on seven serves in the championship.

"Our serving killed us," said Sanson. "We just missed too many to stay in the match. But this is the furthest we've gotten. Our girls did a good job."

But Edsel's biggest offensive threat, 5-7 senior Dawn Woods, simply could not match the front-line power of Wayne, led by Caincross, Sluder and 5-10 reserve Vicki Rohraff.

Borgess in, Eagles ousted in semifinals

By Mike Stewart
staff writer

Thursday night's semifinals in the Class B district basketball tournament at Redford Bishop Borgess offered a pair of surprises.

Detroit Renaissance, inspired by the strong play of sophomore trio David Davis, Christopher Fields and Michael Staples, shocked the 15-6 Redford Thurston Eagles, 92-80.

Borgess, after struggling through a jittery first half, exploded in the third quarter, outscoring Detroit Benedictine 22-10 on its way to an easy 76-55 win.

The host Spartans held leads of 13-12 after one quarter and 35-33 at the half, though they managed to convert on just five of 19 field goal attempts in the first quarter, and 11 of 37 in the first half. But in the third quarter, behind the strength of junior center ReShawn Sumler's eight points and Randy White's six, the Spartans jumped out to a 57-43 lead and never looked back.

Part of the Spartans' success came when coach Mike Fusco stopped trying to go to White inside, and instead began feeding him the ball 15 to 20 feet from the basket. White responded by mixing a variety of drives and short jumpers that Benedictine couldn't stop.

WHITE FINISHED the night with 20 points and 10 rebounds.

"Randy really came through," Fusco said afterward. "We got the ball to him twice in a row inside and he had the ball slapped away. So we moved him out to the perimeter. When we started getting the ball out to him we were clicking."

For his part, White doesn't care where he gets the ball. "Either way, I just try to get a good shot," he said. "In the first half we were a little bit hesitant, we weren't playing hard."

White said the Spartans are still adjusting to their Respert-less lineup. "We're getting our confidence back," he said, adding, "We're still a good team without Shawn."

Senior guard Artie Brown had 18 points and five rebounds for the Spartans. Sumler added 12 points and six rebounds.

For the Ravens, senior guard Willie Taylor had 13 points. Junior post James Mosley added eight points and 13 rebounds.

IN THE FIRST game, Thurston simply couldn't handle the Phoenix sophomore upstarts.

The 6-foot-4 Fields did the most damage, accumulating 32 points and 22 rebounds, many of them on the offensive glass.

The 6-3 Staples added 16 points and 11 rebounds, while point guard Davis canned nine points and ran the floor like a seasoned veteran. Senior guard Christopher Hardeman tallied 22 points.

The Phoenix led 18-6 after one quarter, 43-31 at the half, and 66-54 after three quarters.

Renaissance seemed shaken early in the third stanza when Thurston hit three quick hoops to narrow the Phoenix lead to four, 50-46. But Renaissance coach Gary Teasley called a quick timeout and gathered his squad back together. Whatever he told them worked. The Phoenix retaliated, scoring nine of the next 11 points to take a 59-48 lead, and finishing the Eagles for the night — and season.

THURSTON was paced by senior D.J. Kellogg's 22 points and eight rebounds, both team highs. Junior guard Danny Perttula added 18 points, and senior guard Jason Muller canned 17 points and added five rebounds.

"We couldn't keep them off the boards," Thurston coach Mike Schuette said. (The Phoenix held a 50 to 31 rebounding edge.) "They play all city teams all year long. They know how to get up and down the court."

Teasley said Renaissance was getting stronger throughout the year, though its record (2-17) may not reflect it.

"All the time we were dealing with adversity," said the Renaissance coach. "These kids would show up to practice almost in tears. But they never got discouraged. They never quit. They played against very tough PSL teams. Watching them develop is more fulfilling to me than this win."

Aggies eliminated by St. Mary, 71-41

By Mike De Villing
staff writer

Orchard Lake St. Mary's guard Joe Jefferson should plead guilty.

The best lawyer in the world couldn't get Jefferson acquitted of the thievery he committed Thursday night.

The 5-foot-9 senior guard robbed Redford St. Agatha seven times in the first half to spearhead a relentless full-court press and lead the Eaglets to a 71-41 district semifinal triumph. St. Agatha finished the season with a 6-15 overall record, while St. Mary's advanced to its own district championship which was scheduled for Saturday.

In all, St. Mary's recorded 13 first half steals as it jumped to a 39-14 halftime lead.

"We did a good job in the second quarter with our trapping defense," Eaglet coach George Porritt said. "I think the first couple of minutes we didn't play that well. Then we went to the press and it got us going."

Jefferson provided St. Mary's with its only scoring punch in the first six minutes, hitting two 3-point baskets, a driving lay-up and an assist as the Eaglets claimed a 10-8 lead with 1:32 left in the first quarter.

"Joe's a good perimiter shooter," Porritt said. "He gave us a lift early. He's still not back to shooting the way he was last season, he's been hot and cold, but he's a solid shooter."

JEFFERSON'S shooting was enough to keep the Eaglets on top until the press kicked in. St. Mary's notched eight straight points capped by a 3-point basket by Dan Heath to take an 18-8 lead at the end of the first quarter.

St. Mary's dominated the second quarter, outscoring the Aggies 21-6 and putting the game out of reach.

"We haven't been very good against the press all season," said St. Agatha coach Jim Murphy. "I don't know what to think. We just panic every time we face the press."

St. Agatha didn't do itself any favors from the free throw line. The Aggies notched just 34 percent of their free throw attempts.

"We went to the line 29 times and only made 10," Murphy said. "You can't win ball games that way. I can't go to the line for them."

The Aggies put together a run at the start of the third quarter. Junior center Jeremy MacNicole hit two jumpers to ignite a 14-4 St. Agatha run and make the score 41-26.

BUT PORRITT called timeout and got the Eaglets back on track. After both teams traded baskets, Greg Palmer hit two straight lay-ups to spark an eight-point Eaglet run.

"We started doing some things in the third quarter," Murphy said. "Getting our kids to believe they can play like that has been a problem all year."

baseline with Baker," McIntyre said, adding it was hard for Szeman, after sitting most of the fourth quarter, to come in cold and pick it up late in the game.

"He got bombarded entering the game without getting into the flow," he said. "We wanted him to get a sweat going, but he never had the chance."

Salem led by as many as 16 points in the second quarter (39-23) but, remembering last year's district final when it blew a 20-point lead and lost 71-70, knew it couldn't rest a 12-point halftime lead.

"WE KNEW they'd make their run," Baker said. "They shoot the three if they're 10 up or 10 down. All we had to do was hold our ground and make sure we didn't get caught up in their run-and-gun game."

The foul situation turned in favor of Stevenson in the third quarter, and the Spartans made 10 of 11 free throws to get within 57-54. Laven's hot hand in the final period helped keep it close until Salem rediscovered its inside game.

"I think we gave up more stuff along the baseline (than in the WLAA final)," McIntyre said. "They were much more active along the baseline than they had been. We didn't stop the guard penetration, and once they do that it opens up a lot of things."

K.C. Kirkpatrick added nine points for the Rocks, and Woods and and Steve Leonard chipped in eight apiece for Stevenson. Salem was 30-of-62 from the floor and the Spartans 22-of-67.

"You play so great in the regular season and feel you're the best in the league," Brodie said, who gave Stevenson its due as league champion. "A team that is 21-2 has to show it somehow. You do it in key games, and we did it tonight."

Al Harrison

ABOUT THIS TIME every year, the American Bowling Congress sends out its ABC yearbook and media guides. These publications update ABC records, individual statistics and oddities.

The release parallels with the start of the ABC National Championships, which began last month in Reno, Nev. If you cannot find some of your local bowling heros, they are probably at the ABC Nationals.

The fun part of the book is the section on oddities. Here are a few examples: The oldest performer in the ABC National was Joe Detloff of Chicago. He participated in the 1965 event.

The youngest ABC champion was Ronnie Knapp of New London, Ohio. He participated on the 1963 booster team at age 16.

George Geiser's team won the title in 1917 and Geiser came back 21 years later to help another team win the title.

Last year, Bob Powell of Wichita, Kan., rolled a 289 game. He must have thought about it too much, because he followed with a 129 effort in the next game. That was a record decrease.

Left-handers have won six ABC single titles, including five doubles championships and four all-event crowns.

In 1936, Moffat's Ale team of Syracuse, N.Y., had all five members of the team fire 192 games.

League season records are also listed in the publication. Leagues offer a far greater range of oddities. The highest game ever rolled without a strike, spare, split or foul was 90. Mike Daugherty of Wooster, Ohio, accomplished this.

PROFESSIONAL BOWLER Pete Weber rolled a 300 game in his first sanctioned effort at age 15.

The oldest active bowler is 101-year-old John Venturello of Sunrise, Fla. He has appeared on the Tonight Show with Johnny Carson. There have been older bowlers than Venturello but not in sanctioned leagues.

The largest bowling center in the United States is Showboat Lanes in Las Vegas, Nev. It has 106 lanes. Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park is the second largest with 94 lanes.

George Steiber of Detroit carried a 157 average into a game and rolled a nine. It is the most pins below average. Maybe he was ill.

So far in the ABC National Tournament, Bel Vista Draperies No. 1 from Seattle, Wash., leads the regular team standings with a total pinfall of 3134.

Bob Hochrein of Dubuque, Iowa, is the singles leader with 791. He leads all-events with 2148. The doubles leaders are Bob Griffith and Vince Mazzanti of Indianapolis with a 1347 total.

The tournament ends June 5 and, hopefully, some of our area bowlers will make their mark.

● Today on the Oakland Bowling Round-up: The $280,000 Society Bank PBA Tourney from Toledo. Also Bob Chamberlain. Listen to the show on WPON 1460 A.M. at 7:30 p.m.

Jim Beebe led Garden City with eight goals.

Goaltenders Matt Kemppainen and Jeremy Niemiec also stood out, combining to stop 114 of 122 shots.

The GC Midgets are 35-5-2 overall, qualifying for the state tourney with a 3-0 record in the three-team district tournament last month at the Garden City Ice Arena. They captured the West Division of the Little Caesars League with a 22-3-2 record.

Others members of the squad, coached by Rick Wilson, include defensemen Brian McCormick, Tom Janda, Tom Kostora, Jason Terpevich and Rick Hund; along with forwards Rick Wilson, Jeff Niemiec, Mike Beesley (Taylor), Rich Singletary, Greg Bradley, Al Acosta (Canton), Greg Griffin, Rod Fowler (Wayne) and Shane Shisler.

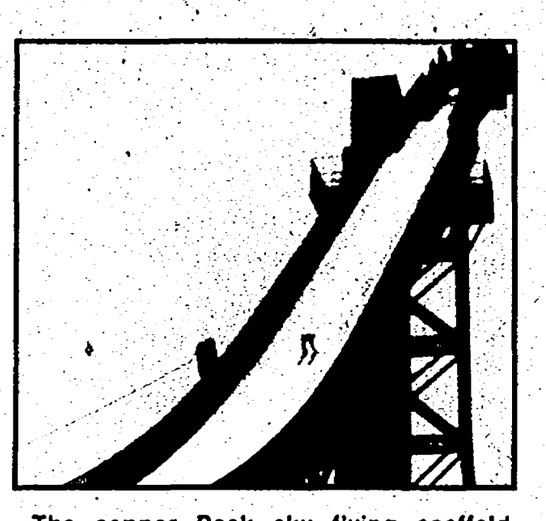
'Call me Mr. Bond'

The wonderful gadgets that seem to get super spy James Bond out of 007 trouble are more than glitzy Hollywood special effects. There's a company that offers everything from wristwatch cameras to anti-kidnapping devices. For a price, of course. Find out more on Page 6D.

Look at me, I'm flyyyying



The copper Peak sky flying scaffold rises up 421 feet above the 364-foot summit of Chippewa Hill and has a vertical drop three times greater then that of Niagra Falls.

With his final destination in sight, Team USA Member Jim Grahek starts down the in-run where speeds exceed 60 miles per hour.

According to Team USA member Kris Severson, a Colorado transplant who grew up in Grosse Pointe, "when you take off, you concentrate on technique and faith . . . because you can't see where you're going to land."

Vasko Stanislav of Czechoslovakia shows off his sky flying form in the process of setting a new Copper Peak record of 156 meters or 512 feet and winning the Continental Cup competition.

The winner is . . .

Copper Peak is quiet now. The ski flyers have packed away their skis, but the excitement they generated still lingers in the air. For the record, Vasko Stanislav of Czechoslovakia finished first in the Continental Cup competition and in the process of winning set a new Copper Peak record of 156 meters or 512 feet. The old record was 505 feet, set by Alois Lipburger of Austria.

Second was Stefan Horngacher of Austria, followed by fellow Austrian Franz Wiegele in third.

The top finishers among American competitors was Mark Konopacke of Iron Mountain, who finished seventh, with Mark Hammel of Team USA 11th and teammate Kris Severson 14th.

Skiers soar at the 'peak'

By Pat Schutte
special writer

IRONWOOD — Some sports are pretty wild like fighting bulls or SCUBA diving with sharks. Other sports are rather insane, like jumping out of an airplane with a parachute or jumping a motorcycle over a bunch of cars.

And a couple are just plain nuts, like running kicks in the NFL, or, in most cases, stepping into the ring with Mike Tyson.

But there's one sport that is so far up the list of crazy things to do that to top it would be as close to death as one could come.

If you've ever skied before, or even just jumped off the ground once or twice, you know what it's like to "catch air."

Picture yourself standing at the end of a football field, looking down toward the other end zone. Around 300 feet away is the other goal line. A good Olympic skier can leap that far on a pair of skis.

At Copper Peak in Ironwood, guys on skis fly almost twice as far. And last weekend the best in the world were here to compete in the Continental Cup International Ski Flying Event.

"Flying" is actually the word for it. Ski flying is closely related to its Olympic cousins, the 70- and 90-meter ski jumps. Yet, at 120 meters, you might call ski flying the "grandfather" of the ski jumps.

The Copper Peak ski flying scaffold rises up 421 feet above the 364-foot summit of Chippewa Hill in the western corner of Michigan's Upper Penninsula. From the tippy top of the scaffold, if you spin around in a circle, you can see Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota as well as Canada.

WITH A vertical drop three times greater than that of Niagra Falls, it took more than 300 tons of steel to complete the scaffold in 1970.

OK. It's your turn to go. Picture this. You're standing . . . er . . . shaking at the top of the scaffold, hands griping the starting rails so tight that they're sweating (as well as the rest of your body) in the subfreezing temperatures.

As you look down the long, narrow takeoff chute, you think to yourself, "Heavens, I'll be traveling in excess of 70 miles per hour before I hit the air." And looking down to where you're suppose to land is even scarier . . . You can't see it.

Time to go. You let loose the white-knuckled grip you have on the starting rail and there's no turning back. SWOOSH . . . 10, 20, 30, 60, 70 miles per hour in a matter of seconds. Once airborne, you actually slow down a bit. If you're good, you can travel the length of two football fields. If you're bad . . .

"All right Detroit, it's 7 a.m. Time to wake up." right. You're dreaming.

The fans had their feet planted firmly on the ground in the landing area of Copper Peak, raising their hands in a unified cheer for each and every competitior.

MOVING PICTURES

Tom Hanks plays Joe Banks and Meg Ryan is Patricia, one of three roles she plays, in "Joe Versus the Volcano."

'Joe Versus the Volcano' romantic fairy tale to see

Dan Greenberg

If you think they don't make romantic fairy tales any more, you're wrong. "Joe Versus the Volcano" (B+, PG, 102 minutes) is just that — a fairy tale for all ages — and parents can feel comfortable taking their children to see Tom Hanks' latest film. There's no nudity, no foul language and none of the unpleasant, unnerving violence so prevalent in today's films.

The film opens with a fairy tale setting — "Once upon a time there was a guy named Joe who had a lousy job." There's no doubt from that point on that we're in for a another romantic fable from Spielberg, a delightful comic adventure.

Joe Banks (Tom Hanks) is a super hypochondriac, a dingy, frayed sort of guy who works for a manufacturer of surgical tools ("Home of the Rectal Probe"). His dank, scummy office features cold coffee, fluorescent lights that buzz and a generally drab outlook — no future whatsoever.

Couldn't be any worse, right? Wrong. Joe's trip to Dr. Ellison (Robert Stack) reveals that he has a rare disease, a brain cloud — and only six months to live. Joe now has a physical cloud joining the psychological one that's been hovering over him for years.

One of the nice things about "Joe Versus the Volcano" is the symbolic use of visual patterns — the indirect paths people walk in the physical world represent Joe's tortured, indirect paths through life.

WHY WASTE the last six months of his life in a dingy office for $300 a week. Why not follow the age-old Faustian fantasy and sell yourself for a brief but beautiful moment?

No sooner said than Graynamore (Lloyd Bridges) turns up with a fist full of gold cards to offer Joe three weeks of high living. In return, Joe must jump into a South Pacific island volcano to appease their native gods. That will make the Waponis tribe happy and their chief (Abe Vigoda) will then grant Graynamore mineral rights he needs to produce super-conductors.

Live like a man and die like a king! Everybody's fantasy, particularly when there are pretty girls to send Joe on his way.

Only in a fairy tale are all those pretty girls one and the same : DeDe, Joe's office sweetheart, plus two half-sisters, Angelica and Patricia, who encounter Joe on his round-the-world, high-living trip on the way to jumping into the volcano. All three dramatically different roles are extremely well portrayed by Meg Ryan.

So there you have it, a romantic, comic fable — fantasy and adventure for all ages.

"Bad Influence" (B, R) lumbers along for the first 30 minutes or so but stay awake because when it finally finds its feet, the film is an effective thriller.

The problems with "Bad Influence," however, are too big to allow it to be the intense psychological rollercoaster it might have been.

ROB LOWE is excellent as the slimy Alex, a man without values or conscience who insinuates himself into Michael Boll's (James Spader) staid but successful life. Spader delivers a powerful performance in the role on which this film hinges.

Despite some insipid dialogue — "You want to know why I took your stuff? To show I could." or "Things like this never happen to me." — "Bad Influence" is well-plotted and nicely directed by Curtis Hanson.

The audience is left breathless trying to figure out if Boll will learn the first lessons of being a player in Alex's league. Can you out-think, out-slime and outwit your opponent?

"Bad Influence" misses the mark when it tries to tell of the internal, psychological changes in Spader's character — but still manages to be interesting and stylish. Reviewed Susan Fincham.

"Body Chemistry" () (R), "House Party" (R) and "The Last of the Finest" () (R) promise various aspects of the worst human experience — erotic danger, partying as life's ultimate goal and, of course, violent drug wars. No one much sings in the rain anymore.

"The Last of the Finest" stars Brian Dennehy as Frank Daly, head of a suspended, undercover narcotics squad that takes matters into its own hands. "House Party" is about a grounded teenager sneaking out to his friend's house party while "Body Chemistry" is billed as "an erotic journey into the sexual danger zone." The geography is not at all clear.

Michigan premiers 'Kite'

By John Monaghan
special writer

Young Ozab Bilen plays a young boy incarcerated with his mother in a Turkish prison in "Don't Let Them Shoot the Kite."

With "Don't Let Them Shoot the Kite," Ann Arbor's Michigan Theatre offers its biggest film booking coup this year. The 1989 drama, Turkey's first-ever entry into the Academy Awards race, marks its United States premier this Saturday night.

Simply put often movingly directed by Tunc Baasaran, "Don't Let Them Shoot the Kite" focuses on Baris, who spends the first few years of his life in jail. Strange but true, in Turkey, children are often incarcerated along with their criminal parents.

Baris is amazingly bright and inquisitive. His mother, arrested for drug peddling, loves the boy but treats him with little emotion. It's with a political prisoner named Inci that he finds a true bond.

One afternoon, Baris sees a kite flying over the walls of the prison. He coos with excitement until the warden shoots it down (Not the subtlest of messages, but effective just the same). Inci assures the boy that they too will fly kites as soon as they are released.

MUCH OF the film focuses on the day-to-day routine in this maximum — reportedly a common subject in Turkish films and books. Instead of the violence and masochism that you'd expect from a woman's prison picture, the film handles its subject with understanding and occasional moments of joy.

Fights often erupt, usually stemming from edginess and boredom more than anything else. The prison is broken up into two units. On the one side, educated political prisoners. On the other, petty thieves, many of whom can't read or write and whose speech consists mostly of subtitled profanity.

Though not a message film, "Don't Let Them Shoot the Kite" vividly captures the political climate of the early '80s, when a Turkish military crackdown imprisoned countless artists and intellectuals.

And while brisk, the film is also an affirmation of life. In another not-so-original sequence, one of the women gives birth behind bars. The bitchy, bun-haired prison matron offers little help, so the inmates boil water, rip clothing for towels and deliver the child themselves.

The performances border on remarkable. As Inci, Nur Surer has very little dialogue, but is both playful and calming — certainly more maternal than the boy's own mother. Screenwriter Feride Cicekoglu based the film on her own four years as a political prisoner, when she met a young boy very much like Baris.

YOUNG OZAB Bilen, who was four when the movie was shot, is rarely cloying and amazingly at home in front of the camera. Most of his dialogue comes in the form of questions, as he learns about life in the most unusual setting.

This isn't an easy film to watch. The dreary locals and slow pacing quickly lose their existential appeal. As in recent films from South Africa or the Soviet Union, however, the once-repressed emotions behind "Don't Let Them Shoot the Kite" almost outweigh the heavy-handed symbolism.

Cuppa Joe

Cuppa Joe includes Dave Faddri on drums, Steve Wilke on bass, and Rick King on vocals and 6- and 12-string guitar, and Kelly Collins, singer and percussionist.

Just a neo-hippie pop band

By Jill Hamilton
special writer

Cuppa Joe is a bunch of serious musicians who don't take themselves too seriously.

Formed from the remains of an old band also called Cuppa Joe, this new version of Cuppa Joe started out in January 1989. The new line-up includes Dave Faddri on drums, Steve Wilke on bass, and Rick King on vocals and 6- and 12-string guitar. They found the final member, singer and percussionist Kelly Collins, through an ad in the Metro Times.

"We auditioned a lot of people," recalled King. "We got all kinds — very old, very young, experienced, inexperienced, people who said they were a friend of a friend of someone who used to play with Mitch Ryder — Kelly played a tape for us and we loved it."

By April, the band got its first gig at Paycheck's. After the promising start, things got a little tough.

"It's hard to get gigs at first," said King, "Our first one was so soon. We didn't really start playing well until August."

That's perfectly fine with King.

"Now, we don't take it as seriously . . . we have different expectations this time," said King, referring to his nine-year history of playing in Detroit. "We all know we're serious musicians only because we can't get out of it. We know we don't have some other yuppie aspiration to fall back on so we're giving it more."

"The band is fun," King added, "and there is a tightness in the band. We have the same attitude . . . we're insistent on doing originals. Of course, with some audiences, this can be detrimental."

CUPPA JOE in concert is, well, fun. Collins sports the loose clothing and long, flowing skirts typical of the 1960s flower child look while King, with his wild haircut vaguely reminiscent of Simply Red's lead singer Mick Hucknill, looks more like a man of the 1990s.

The combination of style is reflected in the band's music as well. It's a sort of neo-hippie blend of catchy pop tunes. Not pop, as in Milli Vanilli, but pop as in Elvis Costello. The band lists their influences as "everything . . . late '60s San Francisco bands, Frank Zappa, The Monkees, Burt Bacharach, classical and jazz.

King and Collins take turns on lead vocals and throw quite a few duets and some great harmonizing into their act. When Collins is not singing, she occupies herself — and the audience — by playing a vast array of strange looking, and stranger sounding, percussion instruments.

She and the band dance around and jump up and down to the bouncy melodies and appear to be having a fabulous time. Their enthusiasm is contagious and most audiences find it hard to stay in their seats.

King gives most of the credit for that to their drummer.

"A drummer has to be solid and get people to dance," he said. "Dave does a fantastic job."

King started out writing most of the lyrics for the band but now Collins is beginning to take over a bigger chunk of the job.

"Kelly writes lyrics that more people can relate to," said King. "I was writing more about personal jokes . . . things only I could understand."

KING SAID that his favorite part of being in music is playing with other bands. He is pleased with the cooperation and mutual respect between Detroit musicians.

"Well, most other bands," he amended. "We're all in this together. No one is going to get anywhere saying 'We're the best band.'"

Unlike more than a few musicians, King has only kind words to say about Detroit's support of the local music scene. "It's amazing that Hamtramck is still the main point for local music — it's really cool," he said. "And the actual city of Detroit is getting more places for local bands to play — like Finney's Pub and Rock'n'Bowl.

"We'll find out about radio support when the tape is released."

The tape he is speaking of very, a seven-song cassette recently released on Rolf Records. Cuppa Joe just got the tape back "with the shrink wrap and everything" and are enlisting the help of a friend to distribute it to record stations throughout the country.

Previously singles released by the old version of Cuppa Joe received airplay on WDTR and WDET in Detroit and on college stations as far away as Oregon and Wisconsin.

WHETHER OR not very is accepted by the record buying public doesn't seem to matter much to Cuppa Joe; they have already decided to devote 1990 to writing a lot of new songs and are satisfied with the way things are going so far.

"It's great the way we've been accepted," said King. "I can tell when people say we're good because they think they have to, but people honestly seem to like us. We're having fun right now because we really like to play.

"It doesn't take too much to make us happy."

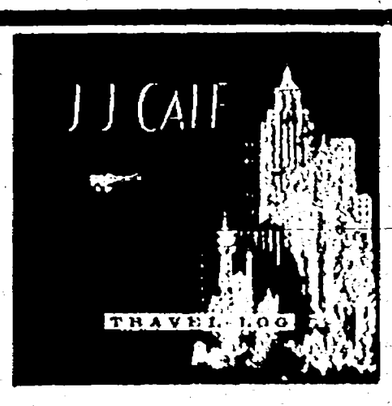
REVIEWS

TRAVEL-LOG — J.J. Cale



J.J. Cale has been making music for more than 35 years, but he is still best known for writing "After Midnight," and "Cocaine," both of which were hits for Eric Clapton. "Travel-Log," recorded during the last six years, is Cale's first record for Silvertone, an affiliate of RCA.

While there is a clear desire on the part of the record company to position Cale for a ride on the resurgent Clapton bandwagon, this isn't quite fair to Cale.

Unlike Clapton, Cale is an extraordinarily understated musician. This record is a testament to Cale's restraint. Cale's production is whisper quiet. Instruments never hurtle out of the mix and announce themselves. Even the solos remain part of an integrated whole. While the quality of the recordings sometimes wavers, this is in keeping with Cale's front-porch jam-session sensibilities.

Cale's music is an amalgamation of blues, folk, western swing and '30s guitar-based jazz. Cale is by no means a great singer, but his voice is suited to the languid, flowing tone which he coaxes from his guitar. He is backed by a strong band, featuring Jim Keltner on drums, percussion and organ.

"Travel-Log" is, to a limited extent, a "concept record," revolving around themes of physical and spiritual journeys. Three songs specify their locales — "Shanghaid," "New Orleans" and "Tijuana," — and these are among the best on the record. They draw on the implied musical traditions and feature particularly strong storylines.

Over the course of "Travel-Log's" 14 songs, one can grow tired of Cale's approach. While most of the songs are individually strong, their collective impact is water down by similarity, almost to the point where the record might be better with a few judicious deletions.

Even so, "Travel-Log" remains an impressive effort from a unique American voice. More often than not, Cale's limitations work to his advantage.

RIVERSIDE — Luka Bloom

Luka Bloom is no ordinary cry-in-your-beer ballader. "Riverside" (Reprise) is a stunning debut.

Brother of well-known Irish performer Christy Moore, Bloom has set out on his own with his own name. Which is why, perhaps, there is nary a mention of his famous sibling in press notes or on the album.

Bloom is an intense, introspective lyricist. Only Pete Townshend can pack more wallop within the confines of a three-minute acoustic song.

He's Irish. He doesn't ignore it nor, to his credit, does he milk it for every cliche about lush green hills and girls named Colleen. "An Irishman in Chinatown," an upbeat narrative about a chance meeting, provides the only hint of an Irish lilt in his voice.

Otherwise, Bloom booms with resounding vocals that are only matched by stinging acoustic guitar work. An Iranian finger drum and a bodhran can be heard here or there. For the most part, though, it's just Bloom and his guitar.

He's enamored with America and its people as "Dreams in America" and "An Irishman in Chinatown" would suggest. His best moments come when he's observing others along with himself.

"The Man is Alive" is a number about his father who died when he was 18 months old. The realization comes later that his dad still lives in him. The song is simple, yet riveting.

Too often the folk crowd can get bogged down sociological and political messages. Bloom doesn't.

WELCOME TO — The Beautiful South

A couple of years ago, a band called the Housemartins were topping the British charts frequently with their brand of light, "happy" pop, tinged with caustic, social commentary lyrics. For some reason, their music did not travel much across the water so they did not earn a lot of recognition in this country.

They split up and The Beautiful South is the first evidence of the re-emerging of Housemartin members.

Those who were familiar with the Housemartins will find some similarities on "Welcome To" (Elektra Entertainment), but perhaps with the success of bands like They Might Be Giants on the college circuit, the atmosphere is more receptive to this style of music.

Starting off with a somewhat laid back, almost lame, sounding "Song for Whoever" a wrong impression is easily read. But upon further inspection, particularly of the lyrics, it is a wonderfully satiric examination of "Love Songs" with vocalist Sean Welch's tongue firmly planted in his cheek:

"Oh Shirley, Oh Deborah, Oh Jane, I wrote so many songs about you, I forget your name/Deep so deep the number one I hope to reap, depends upon the tears you weep, so cry, cry, cry."

Brilliant.

There are 11 songs here dealing, intelligently I might add, with subjects as diverse as sleazy boyfriends ("Girl you must resist, don't let him squirm his way into your heart"), sexist music videos ("Legs are where the heartbeat starts, it's low in neckline and high in charts"), frustrations ("Midnight, a husband getting ready to fight, a daughter sleeps alone with the light turned on, she hears but keeps it all in"), fashionable politics ("I'm out tonight and I can't decide between Soviet hip or British pride")

Musically, piano and brass abounds aided occasionally by drums and guitars, and topped off by some marvelous vocals melodies. Their strength lies in the intelligence and "tongue-in-cheek" humor of their lyric writing and we ought to make them huge stars.

FEAR & LOAFING

Perpetual motion

Karl Nilsson

Don't look now, but I'm pretty sure we're in for a recession.

Forget all the good news about strong economic indicators and a bull market. I've got inside information about a disastrous domino effect that's already in motion.

And, please, when things finally do collapse, don't blame George Bush, the Federal Reserve or the Japanese. Blame me. It's my fault and I want to apologize now, in advance.

You see, according to government figures, one out of every six Americans has a job directly related to the auto industry. That means if you have even a shred of decency, you'll buy a new car every year for the sake of the economy even if you're too broke to buy gas for it. Just because you can't afford it, or never learned to drive or don't have arms, or some other flimsy excuse is no reason to put your neighbors out of work.

For most of my life, I did the patriotic thing and bought at least one new car per year. Some years I had to pitch in and buy three just to make sure the midnight shift didn't get laid off.

Then back in 1982, I did the unthinkable. I decided to keep my one-year-old car a few extra months. So instead of buying a new 1983 model, I sent the UAW a check and skipped the middleman.

BELIEVE ME, I never meant to destroy the economy. I was only trying a financial experiment to see if there wasn't some arrangement where I could actually afford to buy food and shaving supplies in addition to making car payments.

The experiment worked. I gained weight. I paid bills. I moved out of the trailer park and into a beautiful home, a home vacated by an auto executive who could no longer afford the payments because of selfish people like me.

WARNING: Like any addictive behavior, staying out of debt sneaks up on you slowly and before you know it, you're hooked.

Soon, two years had slipped by since I last signed on the dotted line. Then three. Still, I told my friends that I could quit anytime. In fact, I promised myself I'd dump the aging car at the first sign of mechanical trouble.

Little did I know I was driving "The Car That Refused to Die."

Year after year, mile after miles, this car broke every unwritten rule of automotive ownership:

(1) A vehicle may not, under any circumstance, outlive it's loan payment coupon book.

(2) The drive train will automatically explode into shrapnel three days after the warranty expires.

(3) If the engine should happen to exceed normal life expectancy, the body itself is obligated to corrode into a pile of rust flakes.

BY DEFYING the laws of planned obsolescence, my freakish car was becoming a source of embarrassment. As body styles changed, I tried to ignore th chuckles and sneers. Soon my friends in desirable zip codes began requesting I park around the corner when visiting.

Still the stubborn machine rolled on, clocking 100,000 miles without a hiccup. Finally, in desperation, I broke into a dealership one night and jimmied the lock on a display model. For hours, I just sat on the front seat, sucking in the great lungfuls of new car smell.

By the time my car reached 150,000 agonizingly trouble-free miles, I was already wearing the Farmer Jack bag over my head. But even without peripheral vision, I began to notice that the drivers of the other older cars didn't avert their eyes, didn't wear disguises and actually waved as they passed.

Strange as it sounds, a new form of reverse snobbery was being born. Just as ripped-up blue jeans became a fashion rage, worn-out cars started catching on. Social status was being redefined:

OWNER: My car is older than yours.

INVESTOR: OH yeah? My car's worth half as much as yours.

COLLECTOR: Eat your hearts out, my car has higher mileage and more dents than both of yours put together.

Today, boredom on wheels is eight years old and despite neglect and abuse it still hums along. But don't worry, Wall Street. When it finally expires, I'll be right back in the showrooms to pump up the sagging gross national product.

I only hope it quits in time to turn things around.

STREET SENSE

Rude teen is the problem

Dear Barbara,

I read your column regularly and certainly do enjoy it. Usually, your advice is good, but once in a while you miss the point. You were so far off in your response of Feb. 12, I must ask you to consider a different perspective.

The problem in this family is not the adult son; it is with the friend's 16-year-old rude and difficult daughter. The son is an adult, Barbara, not a child or even the girl's peer. How much would you bend yourself out of shape to accommodate the 16-year-old rude and difficult child of your parents' friend?

In your response, you said the young man is:

(1) Socially insensitive. He is not the only one. So is the rude girl, her parents and the frustrated father for tolerating the rude behavior.

(2) His behavior embarrasses. Questionable. How much acceptance of rude behavior is required to be socially acceptable? This was an optional activity that did not include the second family. His refusal was not out of line.

(3) Father gets angry. Father is angry at the wrong target. Remember, it is the rude and difficult 16-year-old whose behavior is wrong.

(4) Stop humoring him. Who is humoring whom here? The father's expectations for his son are completely unreasonable, yet it seems that this young adult continues to humor his father by accepting and "putting up with" a considerable amount of someone else's bad behavior.

(5 and 6) If he doesn't see it your way, separate with him — but don't worry, sometimes the child will return. This advice absolutely blows me away! Barbara, even in out throw-away society we don't throw away our children! Children aren't discarded like some ill-chosen friend or mate. Children are loved, cared for, accepted forever.

Where is your sense of family? Your sense of values? Your priorities?

Who is the father really angry at? The son? Himself? The girl? Her parents? They, too, bear responsibility for this uncomfortable situation, too, you know.

Please give this father another answer before he does lasting damage to his family.

Jeri

Dear Jeri,

Thank you for your interesting letter. Just as you have to respond in keeping with your beliefs (which I respect), so too I have to respond with my convictions. These are based on the experiences that I have had in working with such problems.

I am publishing your letter because it contains many helpful ideas and because many readers will agree with you.

Barbara

Dear Barbara,

I've been reading your column since it began appearing in Street Scene and for the most part agree with the advice you offer. However, I think you missed the point with the "Frustrated Father."

You were correct in advising a choice of staying home or joining the family on the outing and on not dumping the problem on the other family. But the rest of your advice was geared for a problem between a parent and much younger child.

The son is 21 and, I'm sorry, Barbara, that isn't almost adult. He is an adult and as such has his own opinions and makes his own decisions. And there are going to be times when those decisions won't be agreeable to his parents.

The son's decision was not to have anything more to do with an apparently obnoxious person. Let's face it, most of us would probably make the same decision. His initial decision was to cut his vacation short, a very mature way of handling the problem. His parents, however, were insensitive to him in planning a "going away party" and wanting to involve the person who prompted his decision in the first place.

The father wants his son to be more tolerant. Well, that's a two-way street. The father should be more tolerant, and understanding, of his son's feelings and decisions.

It's also time he accepted the fact that not everything his adult son does will be in his father's best interest. Dad got into the position he did because he, not the son, chose to lie to his friends. The best tactic would have been to cancel the party.

I think the "frustrated father" should learn a lesson from his son and start acting in a more mature manner.

A disappointed reader

Dear "Disappointed,"

I am truly sorry that I let you down. But, as indicated in the above response, I have to state what I believe is correct. It may help you to understand the basis for my opinion. Even if you don't, I appreciate your letter and your opinion.

Consider these ideas. First, in psychotherapy, when a person has an overly strong reaction to another person, we recognize a problem in the overreaction and attempt to help the person resolve this defect. Often it is true that the overreactor is as obnoxious in his own way as the person that he can't stand.

Second, your statement is that the son is 21 and so should be considered an adult. However, this is a chronological age, not an emotional one. If the boy were emotionally an adult, he would have been able to handle the younger peer with greater tolerance than he did.

As you are overprotective of this young man, you are putting a stamp of approval on his social inadequacy and thus, not allowing him the opportunity to mature to his chronological age.

Do you want the son to remain intolerant? A person can mature and become an adult in a creative way. Rebellion toward one's father is not necessarily a sign of independence and growth. Do you think the parents aren't people, too? Do they not have rights to their feelings?

Should the mother of the girl in question have written to me, I would be saying the same things to her about her obnoxious daughter, and probably would get a letter from a disappointed reader.

Jumpers go flying at peak

Let's allow someone who has actually flown off Copper Peak give us a first-hand definition on what goes down.

Kris Severson, a Colorado transplant who grew up in Grosse Pointe, is one of only a handful of Americans who brave the jump.

"YOU TRY to close everything out, but you can hear your heart pounding," said Severson, a member of the U.S. Ski Team who flew for the first time two years ago. "When you take off, you concentrate on technique and faith. You have to because you can't see where you're going to land.

"As you travel through the air (close to 30 feet off the ground at 65 miles per hour) everything you do is magnified. You move your hands slightly, like rudders, to keep yourself on course. The feeling is similar to when you stick your hand out the window of a speeding car and use it like and airplane wing."

At this point, now that you have a general idea on how it feels to fly on a pair of skis, let's get into what can go wrong. In other words, what happens when these human missiles crash.

Fortunately, at this year's competition there were no serious crashes. And even though the high rate of speed that flyers are traveling at can lead to some very spectacular falls, the injury rate at Copper Peak is very low.

But many of the fans come to Copper Peak to see the mishaps. And the ideal crash? Spectacular with no injury to the skier seems to be the consensus at Copper Peak.

"The wipe-outs are harsh, but nobody likes to see anybody get hurt," said Thor Seaborg of Marquette.

"I GO TO ski flying events to see the 'agony of defeat' crashes," said his brother Eric. "Yet, the magnitude of the jumps is enough to impress those who come just to see blood."

"Impressive" is the first word that comes to mind when you visit Copper Peak for the first time. Impressive jump. Impressive athletes.

"The relaxed attitude of the jumpers before they take off of a jump that will send them over 500 feet down a hill is what impresses me most," Eric said.

"I'm impressed by the sound of the flyers . . . like a jet landing," added Thor. "They're really whistling."

So the next time you head out to one of the local ski areas, stop for a minute at the top and try to picture yourself flying at more than 60 miles per hour through the air and down to the base of the hill.

Not only will you find it hard to believe, but you might want to check out the action yourself next year at Copper Peak. Seeing is believing, yet you won't believe your eyes.

Pat Paulsen 'one lines' it to presidency . . . he hopes

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Want one liners? Comedian Pat Paulsen rolls them off like bocci balls down a slanted table.

"Hey, I was through Livonia once. I went to the library and borrowed their book."

Ta dum.

"People criticize me running for political office. They say I'm unqualified. I resent that. I'm as crooked as the next guy."

Ta dum.

Hey, and this guy wants to be president? Such material might not fly in the Oval Office. Ask Dan Quayle.

But the routine tickles them in comedy clubs around the country. Paulsen's comedic platform is simple: Let's not get too cerebral, Let's not get raunchy. Just make them laugh.

Reviewers have said Paulsen's stage show of silly one liners and corny folk songs is quite underrated.

That can be a testament to Paulsen's comedic ability, or speaks to an oversaturated medium where pure funny men are becoming harder to come by. Take your pick.

Paulsen's humor is timeless. So is his political platform. On crime: "We need to stop crime." On war: "War is bad. We shouldn't have wars." On the deficit: "The deficit should be brought down."

Paulsen has been a presidential candidate in elections since 1968 (no mention of the 1976 election), running on both the Democratic and Republican tickets at various times.

ALREADY, Paulsen is gearing up for the next election. His slogan: "Pat Can Do in '92." He'll run as a Democrat because "there's already a lot of comedians running . . . I figure why not one more."

His aspirations for the highest office are quite clear.

"I like the idea of being president because if I mess around with another man's wife, and he comes looking for me, the Secret Service would shoot him."

Ta dum.

Some would believe his comedic career started on the first run of "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour." The hit show of the late '60s is where he first announced his candidacy for President. Not so.

Actually, Paulsen used to perform as a folk singer in San Francisco. He worked in the same clubs (Ann's 44, Jack's Waterfront Hangout and the Purple Onion) as Lenny Bruce

"The cops used to wait in the back of the room," Paulsen said. "If he would say one word, just one word, they would come up and grab him and throw him in jail. Now Andrew Dice Clay sells out Madison Square Garden with worse."

Unlike some comedic moralists, Paulsen doesn't begrudge Clay and partner in profanity Sam Kinison. He believes their success is well-earned, although he wouldn't use the same type of humor.

"I watch Andrew Dice Clay and Sam Kinison and laugh my ass off," Paulsen said. "Then I put it back on and leave."

Ta dum.

LAUGHS ARE ONLY part of the Pat persona. He's a successful wine maker with Pat Paulsen Vineyards, which produces 30,000 cases of premium wine a year.

He's also a producer. He co-owns 700-seat Cherry County Playhouse in Traverse City where Don Knotts, John Forsythe, Vicki Lawrence, William Shatner and Phyllis Diller have all performed.

Business brings him to the state often, including a regular tour of the club circuit. His latest stop will be Saturday, March 17, at the Holly Hotel.

"I'm going to be looking for Michael Moore, too," said Paulsen, speaking about the well-known Flint filmmaker. "I keep up on these things. I'm going to find out what he's done with all of the money he's made from that movie.

SpyTech: Taking care of the 007 in you

By Greg Kowalski
staff writer

Remember James Bond's car, the one with the machine guns behind the headlights, the one that pumped an oil slick on the road and tossed a bad guy into the air via a passenger-side ejection seat?

Guess what. You can have your own Bondmobile that "is completely impervious to bullets, bombs and attack. Available options include tear gas, oil slicks, anti-kidnapping systems, hidden gun portholes, remote starter and other customized systems."

So reads item No. 332 in the Spytech Co.'s catalog of "sophisticated security (devices) at sensible prices."

Spytech is a New York-based firm that, despite the seemingly melodramatic trappings of James Bond, deals with the deadly serious business of security.

"Deadly" is not too strong of a word. The company was founded in 1984 by Ed Sklar, a former real estate and investment professional. After the father of a colleague was assassinated in Latin America, Sklar began investigating ways to protect his friend.

What he found was a business waiting to be filled.

The growing firm employs about 32 people and deals with a host of suppliers.

Here's a sampling of the devices that Spytech sells, as described in its catalog:

- WRISTWATCH camera: It's fitted into a working, ordinary-looking, fully operational wristwatch. "It's easy to operate, has a high resolution, a precision lens and focusing depth from one millimeter to infinity." Cost is $1,5000.
- Portable telephone scrambler: It mounts on any telephone and garbles speech so only the person with the scrambler can understand it. Similar devices are available for FAX machines and computers. Cost is $300 and it's portable.
- Letter bomb visualizer: This spray product makes the contents of letters visible, then evaporates within seconds without a trace. Cost is $25.
- Bug vibes: This unit fits in your pocket and vibrates when it electronically detects listening bugs in the area. Cost is $950.
- Miracle T-shirt: Light enough to be worn under any garment, it can stop a bullet from a .357 magnum handgun. Cost is $550.

Other items include a stun gun ($50), tape recorder detector ($4,000) and a variety of listening and microphone detection devices. There's also Cat's Eye, which attaches to your camera so you can see in the dark, not to mention an anti-kidnapping unit which can be hidden in a small piece of jewelry or a watch that when set off provides a homing signal for rescuers.

SOUNDS PRETTY exotic. Actually, Sklar said, the devices are becoming routine business tools. While some of his clients are government agencies and foreign firms, the growing market is average businesses and even individuals.

"The bulk of what we do is surveillance and counter-surveillance," Sklar said.

Consider this. Business nationally loses an estimated $60-120 billion a year because of loss of productivity or worker compensation claims due to drug abuse on the job.

A worker slips into a bathroom and does a line of cocaine. Eventually, his ability to function is gone and the company must pay to rehabilitate him or pick up the pieces of the mess he left after he left. Or worse yet, the company may end up with a dealer on the premise.

One way to cut the problem short is to catch the user in action. One company, cited by Spytech, used a mini video camera in a smoke detector. Every time the door opened, the recorder silently activated and documented the identities and activities of anyone entering the room.

As a result of the surveillance, 13 employees were suspended.

It's here that a moral and legal question arises. Does a company have the right to spy on employees in the bathroom?

SURVEILLANCE laws vary from state to state. Further distinction is made between visual and audio surveillance. Complicating matters, the federal government has its own guidelines.

Most states allow recording conversations if just one of the parties is aware that a recording is being made. But since that person usually is the one with the recorder, the law is viewed often as so much paper.

The American Civil Liberties Union is livid. It charges that spy devices are being used to entrap estranged spouses, business partners who have had a falling out, and anyone someone else doesn't like.

Sklar takes a somewhat non-commital attitude, as if to say let the legal cards fall where they may. But he and his staff note the positive side of spying.

Thanks to spying, the child was spared abuse and the abuser was apprehended.

Spying, in fact, occurs everywhere. Speed down a highway and it's likely the state police are watching with radar. Go to the mall. TV cameras monitor parking lots and those curious gates at many store entrances are "theft busters" that sound when merchandise is taken illegally from stores.

BIG BROTHER is watching — albeit with good intentions.

While the spy-privacy argument rages, Spytech's business just keeps getting better.

"Business is growing by leaps and bounds," said Sklar.

And if you're wondering where Spytech gets the ideas for many of its gadgets . . . they come from clients.

Got your own idea or interested in doing some surveillance? Spytech can be reached at (212) 268-4568. Oh, by the way, Spytech has some pretty nice offices — the 80th floor of the Empire State Building on illustrious Fifth Avenue in the Big Apple.

Weir's direction in 'Poets Society' will get him the Academy Award

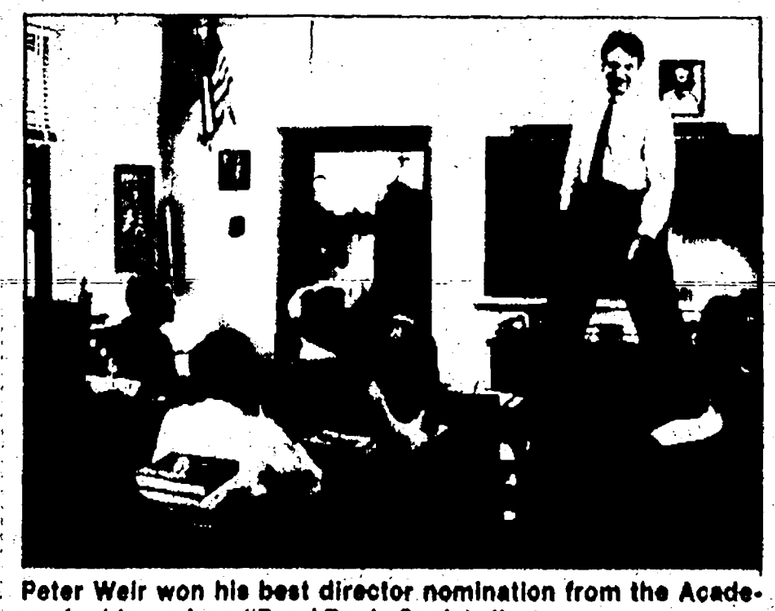
By Dan Greenberg
special writer

The best director helms the best picture, right? If that's true then the Academy should have nominated a number of pictures and their directors in those two categories.

Well, that's exactly what happened with the directors of three films nominated as best picture receiving the Academy nod — Oliver Stone ("Born on the Fourth of July"), Peter Weir ("Dead Poets Society") and Jim Seridan ("My Left Foot").

The remaining two best director nominees, Woody Allen for "Crimes and Misdemeanors" and Kenneth Branagh for "Henry V," were justifiably disappointed not to received best picture nominations as well.

Woody Allen is in the running for an Oscar for best director with his film, "Crimes and Misdemeanors."



Peter Weir won his best director nomination from the Academy for his work on "Dead Poets Society."

The Oscar process is a shadowy one. This year's nominations were unusual and unexpected, much like the Academy's voting process. Even from the relative comfort of my prognosticator's chair, it's hard to second-guess this best director category.

Oliver Stone's work helming "Born on the Fourth of July" is both searing and sensational, drawing out Tom Cruise's magnificent rendering of the tortured agony of a crippled, gung-ho Vietnam vet, Ron Kovic.

Despite the excellent direction and fine performances, the political value of Vietnam films passed with Stone's previous Oscar-winner, "Platoon," so "Born on the Fourth" is not in the envelope.

Kenneth Branagh's "Henry V" is another fine film that runs contrary to Oscar's interest in popular success. The Academy looks to the box office and "Henry V" isn't turning out quite as popular and broad-based as Branagh intended.

DESPITE EXCELLENT story telling, "Henry V" viewers still need the kind of historical understanding devotees of Shakespearean theater bring to performances. Lacking that historical knowledge, plus having to deal with British dialect, reciting Shakespearean language takes this one out of popular, Oscar contention.

Jim Sheridan's work directing "My Left Foot" and that film's celebration of human courage and spirit has a lot going for it but, again, it tends to reflect many of the same "art-house" values that are working against a boffo box office for either it or "Henry V." It is rather surprising that these two were even nominated. But then it's an unusual year.

Brenda Fricker plays the mother of writer Christy Brown, who has Cerebral Palsy. She was nominated as best supporting actress. My rejection of her there rested on the fact that she changed not at all over 20 years of poverty, abuse and childbearing. The defect, the lack of realism in such a rendition, must be laid at director Sheridan's doorstep, so scratch another one.

Personally, my choice is Woody Allen for "Crimes and Misdemeanors" but he falls in the Academy's suspect crowd. He won't show up in a tux or, for that matter, at all. Same reason "Roger and Me" didn't get nominated — the Academy doesn't want Michael Moore in his baseball cap beating up on the sponsors.

BRANDO IS okay now because he's run out of Indian princesses. Vanessa Redgrave is still a no-no because she'd deliver a pro-PLO acceptance speech.

The bottom line is that the Academy wants an upbeat, high-concept, family show to celebrate the industry. No politics and no anti-establishment behavior.

If Woody Allen would stop spending Oscar night in a New York jazz joint, he might have a chance. There is hope, however, because Allen didn't mention his mother once in "Crimes and Misdemeanors."

Peter Weir's direction of "Dead Poets Society" has all the winning ingredients — multi-million dollar box office, a warm, personal story about youth and individuality versus the establishment and Robin Williams in an unusual, bravura performance.

All-in-all, a touching, memorable film with finely etched characters and rigorous pacing. Directors are blamed when those factors are missing or poorly done.

Peter Weir is best director for having seen to it that all these elements were so well done in the "Dead Poets Society."

Oliver Stone brough the life of paralyzed Vietnam vet Ron Kovic to the screen in "Born of the Fourth of July," work that won him an Oscar nomination.

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

Q. I was recently divorced and must support myself. I have a job now but it doesn't pay enough and I don't particularly like it. I am considering going back to school, but have no idea what to take or how to go about organizing my future. Can you help me?

A. You are smart to seek help at this strategic turning point in your life. It's not advisable to pitch right in and make changes without a clear idea of what you want to do with the rest of your life. First, I would recommend you read some goal setting books. While generic and not just attuned to divorce situations, my favorite is Alan Lakein's "How To Get Control of Your Time and Your Life."

Before you act on your goals, however, it is imperative to identify your talents and weaknesses so you can mesh your own unique strengths with your objectives. You also need to find a way to exist now while you plan for your future.

An ideal approach would be to have career testing done by a psychologist who can help you deal with your transitional adjustments along with guiding you toward appropriate schooling and/or a satisfying career.

Cynthia Fishman, a psychologist at Montgomery and Associates in Birmingham, is one such counselor. She gives a battery of tests tailor-made to the needs of the client which includes measuring interests, personal needs, personality factors and verbal or performance abilities. Armed with the results of these tests and her considerable counseling experience, Fishman can guide you through the maze of possibilities and offer creative recommendations that would work for you.

Fishman believes there should be a movement to have career testing made a part of every divorce settlement when either party has been out of the work force for some time.

Another possibility would be to restructure your present job into a better paying or more enjoyable position. Fishman states, "Positions take on the personality of the person doing the job" and says there are often ways to reshape a career to make it more satisfying. Testing confirmed one woman needed autonomy, for instance, but she worked for a large corporation who emphasized teamwork. She solved her dilemma of needing to work alone but being forced to work with large groups by offering to take responsibility for certain parts of projects and reporting back. No one else even noticed this subtle change but she felt much better about her job.

Whether a person is being divorced, is unhappy in a present position or if he or she is re-entering the job market, career testing can be a helpful and rewarding experience.

You can still enroll in Dorothy Lehmkuhl's last two Organizing for Success Classes at Schoolcraft College. Organizing Your Environment will be held March 14 and Paper Paradise! on March 21, both from 12:30-3 p.m. Call 462-4448 to enroll.

Aura talk

Your aura can be a powerful key to your personality — and a remarkable tool for self-expression and growth. That will be the focus of a talk at 7:30 p.m. Thursday night by author Barbra Bowers in Birmingham Unitarian Church, 651 Woodward at Lone Pine Road. Admission is $5. Bowers is the author of "What Color Is your Aura?"

Building project: It's 'for the birds'

By Doug Funke
staff writer

This contest, one for the birds, has drawn a flock of interest from seventh and eighth graders in the northern and western suburbs.

That includes Ed Burger, a volunteer drafting teacher, and six students at St. Valentine School in Redford.

Their mission — to construct birdhouses and learn about design, tools, and it is hoped, a little something about birds and their habitats.

Entries will be displayed and winners announced later this month at the International Builders Home, Flower and Furniture Show at the Cobo Conference Center.

"At this point, most aren't too articulate with their hands," Burger said of his students. "That's what they're learning. Kids need an opportunity. They need an outlet."

FORTUNATELY, Burger lives nearby and has a basement well-stocked with tools.

The six builders had to come up with $4.50 for materials and commit to working ¼ hours once a week after school until the projects were completed. It took five weeks.

Burger devised a blueprint and templates from a birdhouse he recalled his father building many years ago.

All six students from St. Valentine worked from the same plan.

"I did some of the difficult cuts," Burger said. "They used a band saw, drill press, hand-powered drill, saber saw, power sander, hacksaw and, of course, all hand tools."

The birdhouses were fashioned from plywood. A hinged door on the bottom allows for easy cleaning. Shingles are stapled to the roof. The students added their own decorative touches like flags, mailboxes and antennae.

THE STUDENTS spoke highly of the experience.

"I enjoyed it, just being able to work with power tools," said John Doonan. "You have to have a lot of patience."

Doonan's dad is a carpenter, but young John said he'd rather work with wood as a hobby than for a living.

Chris Prysok had built a birdhouse and stained glass craft projects with his grandpa.

"I just like working with my hands," he said. "I like helping out as much as I can. I like learning things. It comes easy."

Damien Fron didn't let the setback of drawing some bad wood and having to rework part of his birdhouse get him down.

"It didn't really bother me much because I knew I'd catch up," he said.

Fron is thinking about becoming an architect or draftsman.

Amy Watroba was the only girl at St. Valentine to build a birdhouse.

"IT'S PRETTY much the first thing I ever built," she said. "I enjoyed it so much. I'm going to build shelves for my closet."

Watroba, an outstanding student who excels in math and science, envisions a career in engineering.

Michael Danic, son of an electrical/heating contractor, has helped his dad with some projects around the house, so he isn't exactly a novice when it comes to working with tools.

"It allowed me to use power tools and be with friends," Danic said of his involvement in the contest.

Jason Kieltyka said he never really built anything before attempting a birdhouse. "It was harder than I thought," he said.

He accomplished what he set out to do — building something by himself.

Burger, a retired designer/draftsman for Ford Motor Co., seemed to get as much out of the project as the students.

"I guess I'm really a teacher at heart," he said. "I told them, 'When we're born, we have an empty box. Every time you do something, you put a block in the box. Pretty soon, you have enough blocks to build something.'

"They have so much confidence they can do something, they won't hesitate to start something on their own," Burger added.

All birdhouses entered in the contest will be displayed in the Hall of Gardens during the run of the builders show, March 17-25.

Entries will be judged on accuracy, design, creativity, materials, assembly, decorations and suitability for intended bird.

The contest is sponsored by the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan and the state Department of Natural Resources.

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Damien Fron hopes to impress contest judges and perhaps later attract a wren to his birdhouse with decorative touches like a miniature flag and a "For Rent, Cheep," sign.

Shingling is an important part of any residential project, as even young builders know. Here, Amy Watroba handles the staple gun and Mike Danic holds a spacer to ensure correct alignment.

Don't offer too much earnest money for condo

Robert M. Meisner

How much earnest money should I have to deposit on a condominium?

As a purchaser you normally want to put down as little down as possible. Most purchase agreements provide that you will forfeit the earnest money deposit if you breach the terms of the contract. Obviously, the less you deposit, the less likely exposure you have in the event of a default.

On the other hand, some deals will not be made unless the seller is convinced that the purchaser is serious about the deal so that you will have to put down enough to satisfy the seller that you are serious about consummating a transaction.

I am a purchaser at a tax sale and want to know whom I have to give notice to in order to protect my title. I have had conflicting advice in regard to that. Can you help me?

Failure by you as a purchaser of land at a tax sale to serve notice of the tax deed on the last recorded grantee in the regular chain of title bars you from asserting title under the tax deed and tolls the statute and the 6 month redemption period for redeeming the property.

The fact that the interest of the last recorded grantee in the regular chain of title may have become void or extinguished does not relieve you as a purchaser of the tax deed of the necessity of serving proper notice on the last recorded grantee.

Also, serve notice on the person or persons in the actual open possession of the land as well as the grantee or grantees under the tax deed issued by the State Treasurer for the last year's taxes when appearing of record in the Register of Deeds.

You are best advised, therefore, to consult with legal counsel in order to insure that you have provided adequate and proper notice to all parties required under the statute.
