Retirement complex to reopen

By Leonard Poger
editor

The development was closed last spring when owner Cardinal Industries Inc. filed for a voluntary reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law.

A church-based housing organization is reopening a senior citizens housing complex on Cherry Hill and Merriman, closed for most of the past year after the previous owner initiated bankruptcy proceedings.

Presbyterian Village of Detroit, a private, non-profit organization based in Redford Township, has acquired the housing development previously owned by Cardinal Industries Inc., which owns and manages senior citizen housing complexes throughout the country.

The church-based group was organized 45 years ago to provide a variety of housing for elderly people, whether they need supervision or are independent, a group officer said. It owns and manages numerous other developments in the Detroit area.

The 206-apartment development was virtually completed and nearly ready for occupancy last spring when the bankruptcy proceedings began. The nearly 20 deposits were refunded to potential residents at the time.

THE NEW owners have just started taking applications from prospective tenants. The complex is on the south side of Cherry Hill, west of Merriman, on the Westland-Garden City boundary.

The Cardinal Retirement Village sign was changed about two weeks ago to reflect the new ownership.

THE CITY has given its OK to an additional $80,000 for consulting engineers working on Westland projects through June.

The budget amendment was approved unanimously by the Westland City Council last week.

The money is used to pay for special projects done by outside engineering firms during the year.

Tim McCurley, budget director, said the transfer from the general fund was necessary, even though there was less work performed by outside consultants during the winter months.

Additional interest income generated by the city during the second quarter will be used to make up the difference in the general fund, McCurley said.

THERE'S A little touch of Wayne-Westland at the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel in Romulus.

The hotel has signed an employment agreement with the Wayne-Westland Community Schools district that will provide jobs for severely impaired people enrolled in the Tinkham Center program.

The Guest Quarters Suite Hotel was formerly the Pickett Suite Inn.

THE SPRING dance at the Friendship Center, scheduled for 1:30-4 p.m. Friday, April 20, is going to be an honor-filled occasion.

Among the people receiving awards and special recogniton that day will be club officers, Commission on Aging members, Advisory Council delegates and alternates and countless volunteers.

It's also the day the center announces two Senior of the Year award winners.

The program includes light refreshments, ice cream sundaes, dancing to a live band and door prizes.

Admission is free for honorees, $3 for organization members, $5 for Westland residents and $7 for non-residents.

For information or to make a nomination for Senior of the Year call the center, 722-7632.

EARTH DAY is a big item on the agenda of Wayne-Westland Girl Scouts.

Planned projects include a cleanup of the William P. Holliday nature preserve on April 21 and cleanup and placement of bark chips at Sassafrass Park, on Wildwood off of Palmer, on April 28. The Sassafrass Park project will be done jointly with area boy scouts.

Other activities planned by local girl scout troops include making posters and petitioning school administrators to do away with plastic foam lunch trays (P.D. Graham School) and building bird houses (Kettering School).

The 20th anniversary of Earth Day is being celebrated April 22.

SOCK HOP alert!

Sixth graders at P.D. Graham Elementary School will sponsor a sock hop 9 p.m.-1 a.m. Friday, May 11 at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 35100 Van Born, to help raise money for the annual sixth grade trip.

Entertainment will be provided by Steve King and the Dittilies.

For tickets, priced at $15, or information call 595-2560 during school hours or 728-9946 after 5 p.m.

APRIL 7-14 has been designated National Community Development Week.

In Westland, the community development department will initiate efforts designed to net the city additional Community Development Block Grant funds.

Where is Waldo?

Young folks who have fallen in love with the "Waldo" books won't have any trouble picking out the Waldo look-alike in this picture. She's wearing a striped shirt and hat and her name is Jenny Whitman, a kindergartner in Christine Germain's class at Cooper Elementary School in Westland. Teachers encouraged youngsters to "come to school looking like Waldo" during the school's recent Read-A-Thon, which emphasized the joys of reading.

Court clears audit

Worker could face action

A Westland district court review showed that no funds were missing, but a court employee suspended six weeks ago may know his fate within a week, according to David Wiacek, court administrator.

He told the Observer that the employee, whom he declined to identify, violated court policy by "not making timely bank deposits" as required.

The audit was done last month by Phillip Agostini, an audit supervisor with the Michigan Supreme Court finance department.

The conclusion of the audit was that no court funds were missing, Wiacek said, although the employee involved failed to make the daily bank deposits of court money.

Wiacek said the employee remains on suspension with pay and will remain off the job until the matter is resolved.

Describing the personnel issue a "delicate matter," the court administrator said "perhaps within a week," there may be a "final resolution."

Wiacek said about $10,000 a day in checks and cash are involved in the daily bank deposits.

City officials hope to sell little-used half-acre park

By Leonard Poger
editor

Parks director George Gillies said it's hard for the city to maintain 239 acres of parkland in its 17 parks with the existing equipment and staff.

Westland recreation officials have resolved one problem stemming from under-utilized, vandalized parks, and are working on trying to settle a second.

The city resolved one problem when it removed jungle gym equipment at the Richard Street tot lot, in the city's southeast section (see map). The city now has the half-acre parcel located between two single-family homes offered for sale.

Before it was removed, the jungle gym was frequently used as a site for drug usage and other "illegal activities," according to George Gillies, park and recreation department director.

The problem over the years generated complaints from area homeowners, he said.

Gillies described the tot lot as the most vandalized recreational facility in the city, although most of the neighborhood has been supportive of the lot and equipment.

Since the jungle gym was removed, there have been no complaints about activities at the lot.

Gillies said of the 17 parks in the city, the Richard tot lot was the smallest and was in a poor location and was too small for adequate use.

Phone fund-raisers are unauthorized

By Todd Schneider

They call and ask for a donation to help public safety in Westland. They might even mention the need to get more police officers on the street or to keep the city's Fire Safety House open.

The only problem is neither the Westland police or fire departments have authorized the solicitations and neither department is currently involved in a telephone fund-raising campaign.

Police and fire officials last week reported several complaints regarding unauthorized solicitations.

"We've had one or two recent calls," said Emery Price, Westland police executive lieutenant. "We get that periodically and it looks like it could be happening again."

George Riley, Westland fire department battalion chief/public education division, said callers have mentioned the city's Fire Safety House, built adjacent to the main station in 1988 to help educate children on fire safety and prevention tecniques.

Donations to keep the facility open aren't needed, Riley said.

"THE FIRE Safety House was brought to our community by the voluntary efforts of firefighters along with support of local businesses," he said. "The firefighters support the Fire Safety House along with other fire safety programs through local events."

Riley said such fund-raising events include car-

Seminar aims to help parents

Useful tips for becoming more effective parents will be shared next month in a free seminar open to the public.

The seminar will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 24, in Churchill High School, located on Newburgh north of Joy.

Dorothy and Robert DeBolt, whose efforts in raising 20 children have been featured in Academy Award-winning films, TV specials and several magazine articles, will lead the program.

THE SEMINAR is being sponsored by the Independent Order of Foresters, a not-for-profit fraternal organization founded more than a century ago to help families.

The IOF is hosting seminars across the country as part of its public service efforts to help Americans become more effective parents.

The DeBolts, experts on how families can work together as a team, will offer their insights to parents of school-age children on how to communicate better and build self-esteem in children.

"Effective parenting doesn't happen by chance," said Robert DeBolt. "It takes a team effort and you have to work at it.

"The key is learning how to deal with the pressures and anxieties that go along with parenthood."

THE DEBOLTS have earned a wide variety of awards from business, education and government leaders, including commendations from the U.S. Congress and presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan.

"The remarkable DeBolts stand as shining examples of that spirit of compassion and generosity which has marked America for generations," Reagan said.

Besides raising six biological and 14 adopted children, the DeBolts founded and developed Aid to Adoption of Special Kids, the country's first national adoption program for children with special needs.

THE COUPLE also serves on a number of boards, including the National Committee for Adoption and the International Concerns Committee for Children.

Since 1974, the Foresters have sponsored extensive public education efforts focused on helping families.

IOF has produced films featuring Bill Crosby, Ed McMahon, and Michael Caine.

Church group to open complex the organization, said that a grand opening for the public is planned for Sunday, June 10, with tenants to move into their units in early July.

THE ORGANIZATION learned of the vacant complex through a professional contact with National Bank of Detroit, which took over the property last spring during the bankruptcy proceedings, said L.J. Peterson, Presbyterian Village's executive director.

But the bank didn't solicit Presbyterian Village to consider the development's purchase, he said.

Peterson declined to disclose the purchase price, but did say that the development is valued at $15 million for insurance purposes.

NBD will handle the long-term financing of the complex, according to the church group's annual report.

THERE HAVE been at least 10 inquiries a day since the church group acquired the complex from NBD in January, Vadasz said.

Rental for the smaller of two types of one-bedroom units is $745 a month, which includes one meal a day, van transportation, 24-hour security, outdoor recreational facilities, laundry, emergency call system and other services, she said.

A two-bedroom unit is also available. The one-bedroom units are 24-by-24 feet while the larger units are 24-by-36 feet.

THE DEVELOPMENT is aimed at middle-income people, with incomes of $15,000 a year, Vadasz said.

While the complex is described as a retirement development, the only requirement is applicants be 60 or older and meet income standards. Applicants need not be retired or church members.

In its annual report to member churches and members mailed earlier this year, the Presbyterian Village board of directors said that while the complex was originally built for another organization, it "falls well within the tolerances of the very progressive design philosophy of the Presbyterian Villages."

It cited the one-story construction, direct access to each apartment through a doorwall from a rear patio, and two large community dining rooms.

The new facility will enable the organization to continue to provide the "supportive care of retirees who do not need full medical assistance but who want the secure 'family' environment typical of all of our Presbyterian villages," the board's publication said.

The new ownership is reflected in the sign at the Presbyterian Retirement Village, on Cherry Hill west of Merriman.

THE Cherry Hill site of 26 acres consists of modular housing units, similar to the Cardinal Corp. apartments built a few feet west and on Yale near Hunter in Westland.

The development was closed last spring when owner Cardinal Industries Inc., filed for a voluntary reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law.

The Cherry Hill development is the fourth major retirement complex opened in Westland in the past two years.

Owners of other retirement developments have cited the fast-growing percentage of middle-income people in the Detroit area approaching retirement age or retirees who are returning to Michigan from Florida to be closer to their family and grandchildren.

THE OTHER problem that remains involves the Hubbard Park, on the west side of Hubbard, just south of Parkwood, surrounded by a single-family subdivision.

The city recently tried to sell the three-acre parcel, valued at $20,000, to two area residents. One had the $10,000 to pay for half, but the other homeowner didn't and the proposed purchase fell through, Gillies said.

The city is not actively trying to sell the park.

"The park's swings have been vandalized and stolen," said the recreation director.

The park problems surfaced last week when a resident complained about the maintenance problem at a federal block grant public hearing held by the city council.

Gillies said it's hard for the city to maintain 239 acres of park land in its 17 parks with the existing equipment and 5½ position staff.

"Mayor (Robert) Thomas hopes to get one additional maintenance person and a larger grass cutting machine for more efficiency and to keep up with maintenance," Gillies said.

The mayor last week submitted his budget to the city council for the fiscal year starting July 1 and will be discussing proposed spending with the council in upcoming weeks.

The administration, and council are scheduled to discuss the recreation budget tonight in City Hall, 36601 Ford.

In all, the city has three community parks and the smaller neighborhood parks. The major parks are Central City, 110 acres; Hix, 45½ acres; and Jaycees, 22½ acres. Of the 17 parks, 11 are south of Cherry Hill, although more than half of the acreage is in the north half of the city, Gillies said.

nivals, golf outings, spaghetti dinners and the annual Five Mile Fun Run at the Westland Summer Festival. Westland firefighters don't solicit contributions by telephone and have no plans to do so in the future, Riley said.

"The only time you will see a firefighter collecting contributions, he will be in uniform and you will be face to face," Riley said.

The Police Officers Association of Michigan, which is affiliated with patrol officers in the Westland department, does telephone solicitation periodically, Price said. But contributions to the POAM don't go solely or directly to the Westland police.

Another organization, the Michigan Association of Police, doesn't have ties to Westland, Price said.

PRICE SAID because telemarketing firms are often subcontracted to handle such campaigns, the person making the call has no direct tiesto the local police department.

He said the caller's concern is getting a donation, not necessarily giving out accurate information.

"If people (who are contacted) are concerned they just shouldn't give money," Price said.

Price said anyone with a question about telephone solicitations may call the police department, 722-9600.

TWO MEN, one armed with a gun, held up the McDonald's restaurant, 5235 S. Merriman, Monday night, police said.

Nobody was injured and the bandits made off with an estimated $250-$360, according to police reports.

An employee told police one man approached the counter from the corridor where the restrooms are located about at 10:15 p.m. and ordered a Coke. During the transaction he pulled a blue steel revolver with a 3-4-inch barrel, possibly a Smith and Wesson, and demanded money from the register, the employee said.

The second man then appeared from the same corridor and repeated the demand for the money, the employee said.

An employee handed the accomplice $50-$60 from the register as the gunman jumped over the counter, forced several employees in a back room and ordered them to lay on the floor, the restaurant manager told police.

The gunman then went to the office and ordered the manager to open the safe. The gunman took $200-$300 from the safe, the manager said.

During the robbery, two would-be customers entered the restaurant but left quickly when they apparently realized what was happening, police said.

Officers believe one of the customers called police from a nearby phone to alert them of the robbery.

A witness reported that the two men fled in a brown, midsized car.

The gunman was described by employees as black, 30 years old, 5-feet-7 with a medium build and unshaven face. He was wearing a black jacket, gray slacks and had a gold ring in his ear.

The accomplice was described as a black man in his 30s, 6 feet tall and 170 pounds with a slim build. He was wearing a tan parka, witnesses said.

A LIVONIA man told police he was assaulted by a Westland man and his son Tuesday in the parking lot of the Kroger supermarket, 35700 Warren Road.

The 37-year-old victim suffered a cut forehead and scratches on his chest in the assault, police said.

The victim told police he was sitting in his pickup truck at 7 a.m. when it was bumped from behind by a Pontiac 6000 belonging to the assailants.

The two men got out, grabbed him by the shirt and began to punch him, the victim said.

The victim, who knew his assailants, told police they were a 52-year-old Westland man and his adult son. The two wanted to know about an affair he had with the 52-year-old's wife six years ago, the victim said.

After they had hit him several times, the two men shoved him in the back of their car and the father questioned him for 10 minutes about other affairs his wife may have had, the victim said.

A HOMEOWNER, on the 2500 block of Bannister told police someone broke into his garage Tuesday or Wednesday and stole a snow blower and chainsaw. He valued the merchandise at $750.

The man said his garage, which had been padlocked, was broken into between 2 p.m. and 10:25 a.m.

The 1-3-year-olds were off to gather marshmallows as soon as the siren sounded.

Kevin Dye, 11 months, meets a real, live Easter Bunny.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

"Look what I found!" shouts an anxious participant.

Eyes on the prize: weather doesn't deter cottontailers

Thank goodness the sun came out Saturday morning. Otherwise it would have been difficult to find the marshmallows in the snow that came down Friday night.

The early April freeze didn't seem to bother the 350 youngsters who came out for the Westland parks and recreation department's annual Easter Cottontail (marshmallow) Hunt though.

They began arriving before noon and stood outside for a half-hour before the sirens signaled that the hunt was on in three areas next to the Melvin Bailey Recreation Center.

"I HAVE to go that way," Jessica Laurie, 5, of Westland said as she pointed to the marshmallow-filled field while waiting patiently from the back of her group.

Nancy Frizzell, one of the many parents who accompanied children to the hunt, admitted that it was "a little cold," especially for the adults.

"They (kids) certainly don't seem to mind," she said.

The Cottontail Hunt, for children 1-9, was sponsored by the Westland Civitans, Jaycees, Rotary Club, fire department and Westland Cultural Society.

The rules were simple: Wait for the siren, grab a marshmallow and then redeem it for a goody-filled bag from one of the volunteers.

"IT'S A lot easier and cleaner than using eggs," said Marie Johnson of the Civitans.

An Easter Bunny provided pre-hunt entertainment for each age group. Elizabeth DeSouza of the Jaycees handled the chores for the 1-3-year-olds. "This is fun, it's my first time," said DeSouza, who some hunt-going adults recognized as Elizabeth from the Psychic Connection.

Refreshments — to warm the stomachs of participants and spectators — were served from the nearby fire station after the hunt.

Livonia district nearing final fix on new tax rate

By Marie Chestney
staff writer

After a 10-minute meeting April 27, Livonia school district officials will get information from Wayne County that will have an impact on the pocketbook of every taxpayer.

"We'll get a fix on what our SEV is," said finance director Michael Furlong.

At the meeting, the Wayne County Tax Allocation Board will tell the district the latest State Equalized Value (SEV) figures for taxable property in the district.

At a May 21 public hearing, school officials will use this SEV figure to set its tax rate for the fiscal year starting July 1.

In 1989-90, the district levied 33.25 mills; in 1988-89 it levied 35.40 mills. For residents whose homes are valued at $60,000, the millage rate last year resulted in a school tax bill of nearly $1,000.

TO GET both the SEV information and to qualify for allocated millage from Wayne County, the district had to put together an estimated budget for its upcoming year.

On Monday, the school board approved a tax allocation budget outlining $94.7 million of expenses for the upcoming year. The allocation budget serves as a preliminary, draft operating budget for the coming fiscal year.

This figure includes both the estimated cost to run the district, $93.3 million, and the $1.4 million the district expects to spend to maintain its school facilities. The county requires the district to include both figures in its tax allocation budget.

Livonia School District

The Livonia School District includes the northern section of Westland.

Not including maintenance costs, the cost to run the district in 1989-90 is set at $86.8 million. The district's income this year is set at $86.7 million.

The district also shows a fund balance, or surplus, of $11 million.

The tax allocation budget shows a $6.5 million jump in expenses next year in the district. That's an increase in costs of about 7.5 percent compared to a cost-of-living allowance this year of 4.5 percent.

The district has had a similar jump of about $6 million in expenses for the last three years.

IN ITS tax allocation budget, the district adds up all its projected expenses.

The only figures missing from this budget are the SEV, the new millage rate and, of course, the district's total income for next year.

"The SEV is a critical piece of information," Furlong said. "We would prefer to get this in the front end, rather than after we put together our budget."

The district's current SEV is $2.4 billion. City assessor Ron Mardiros estimated it will jump to $2.7 billion in 1990-91.

"It will go up dramatically but whether it will go up that much is questionable," Furlong said.

An expected, 245 extra students next year will increase the number of classes and staff needed and, therefore, boost operational costs for the district, he said.

"We'll have 20,000 students by the year 2000," Furlong said. The district's Fourth Friday enrollment count in September was 15,914.

In September, the district also will launch its new schoolwide health-physical fitness program. The program will cost more than $1 million in 1990-91 and at least $636,132 each year thereafter.

AT THE May 21 public Truth in Taxation hearing, the school board is expected to lower its current millage. The question is, by how much?

Because of the city's rising SEV, Mardiros has said the district could lower the millage to 30.78 mills and still get an additional $5.5 million in revenue.

However, Furlong said Mardiros only includes the 36 square miles of the city of Livonia in his SEV figure, whereas the Livonia Public Schools includes covers 40 square miles.

Excluded is the Clarenceville School District (which includes taxes paid by the Livonia Mall) in northeast Livonia.

Included in the district is the northern portion of Westland.

"The SEV is higher in Livonia than Westland," Furlong said.

Produce a winner for contest

Westland's cable TV public access producers will be honored in a contest sponsored throughout this month by the city's community relations/CATV department.

The contest winners will be awarded cash prizes and be publicly honored at the department's fourth anniversary celebration and studio open house Friday, May 4. The studio is on Warren Road west of Venoy.

Six prizes will be awarded, including a first-place prize of $250. There will be three prizes each awarded in adult and student categories, said Dennis Fassett, community relations/CATV director.

Only Westland residents are eligible to compete.

Entries in the contest must be of programs produced with the city's or Ford Vocational/Technical Center's studio and equipment exclusively between now and April 30.

ENTRY FORMS, available at the department's Tonquish Center, require contestants to provide name, address, phone number, category, program title, program subject, length, date of production, crew members and positions, and signature of the Ford Voc/Tech Center faculty adviser, if needed.

The entry form must accompany the produced video tape.

The May 4 open house at Tonquish Center is open to the community, Fassett said, who can see the studio, public access equipment and tour the video production facilities.

Rules for the public access production contest are that tapes must be at least 15 minutes long and no longer than 60 minutes. Each program must have credits on the video.

Deadline for submitting entries is 4 p.m., April 30, Fassett said.

The contest prizes will be awarded by Mayor Robert Thomas and city council members.

People may call 467-3198 to reserve equipment and/or studio time or ask about the contest.

Bill supports grade school counselors

By Marie Chestney
staff writer

If education is to improve in America, students must get help with personal problems while they're still in elementary school.

With that belief in mind, a suburban congressman has introduced legislation in Congress to put counselors in elementary schools across the country.

"Drug and alcohol abuse, increased reports of child abuse, single-parent families and other factors have resulted in unprecedented challenges and stresses in the lives of our elementary age children," said U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, a former educator.

The bill was sent to the House Education and Labor Committee, of which Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, whose district includes Garden City, Westland, Canton and part of Livonia, is a member.

"These problems must be identified and dealt with during the early years if we are to improve American education. The battle is almost over when a child reaches high school. We need to focus on the years when attitudes and study habits are forming."

UNDER PURSELL'S proposed legislation, the Elementary School Counseling Demonstration Act of 1990, districts such as Livonia (which includes the northern section of Westland) could get annual grants of up to $200,000 for three years to pay for elementary counseling programs.

In Pursell's view, teachers today often "spend more time counseling than teaching."

The Livonia district's 23 elementary schools don't have "counselors per se," said Nicholas Lovich, program specialist for the elementary schools.

The schools do have seven full-time helping teacher consultants who help all youngsters, not just those with problems, and eight social workers who work in all the district's schools, from elementary to high school, he said.

"The teacher consultants are not trained in therapy," Lovich said. "They intervene if something is happening, such as name calling or teasing. If a youngster needs more help, there are social workers who serve the whole system."

In most districts, the heaviest emphasis is placed on counseling at middle and high school levels.

"If the emphasis in education is early involvement, doesn't it make sense to place our counselors in elementary schools?" Pursell asked.

IF PASSED, the congressman hopes the pilot grants eventually will spur districts to pay for their own elementary counselors.

"This bill is an investment which will reap dividends well into the future as these students complete their education and move into the workforce."

While the proposed legislation speaks of the fragmentation of the family, drug and alcohol abuse, child abuse, poverty and violence, Lovich said he couldn't cite numbers showing these problems exist to a heavy degree in the Livonia district.

"I'm not sure to what degree there is a need. Yes, there's a number of kids in broken homes or suffering from physical abuse. But to what degree, I don't know. It's hard to say this is rampant here."

IN TALKING to counselors in other districts, Lovich said he couldn't see that much difference between what they did and what the helping teaching consultants and social workers did in the district.

"Everybody would like to have more of everything, but to what degree are they needed?"

In the proposed pilot program, the federal government would spent $5 million nationwide each year for five years to fund district counseling programs.

"The federal government can help reduce the risk of academic, social and emotional problems among elementary school children by stimulating the development of model elementary school counseling programs," reads the proposed legislation, HB 3970.

Pursell is seeking co-sponsors for the legislation.

Westland chipping away

The Westland Department of Public Services will be chipping trees for local residents through June 29.

Branches must be at least 6 feet long and no larger than 3 inches in diameter. They must be neatly stacked, with butt ends facing the curb.

The city won't pick up roots, stumps or trunks, or for residents who are clearing land or having work performed by a commercial company.

To arrange pickup, call the DPS office, 728-1770.

Senate approves ban on local gun control

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Local gun control ordinances would be illegal under a Senate-passed bill aimed at giving Michigan a uniform law.

Senate Bill 813, which goes now to the House, was a defeat for lawmakers from Detroit, Ann Arbor and Flint.

"This is fertile ground for abuse of power," said the sponsor, Sen. Chris Dingell, D-Trenton, who had the support of the sheriffs' association, State Police, sportsmen's clubs and the National Rifle Association.

Senators gave the bill 28-5 approval. Among area senators, only Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, voted no.

Faxon was joined by William Faust, D-Westland, in vainly trying to amend the bill to give cities some local controls.

DINGELL, A first-term lawmaker and son of the veteran congressman, carried the three-hour debate alone. He told stories about abuses of local control:

- Detroit used to have a waiting period up to six months for a handgun permit and made an assistant county prosecutor wait the full six months.
- Detroit advertises it has a training school for gun permit applicants, but a Dingell staffer calling the number was able only to reach an annoyed water department clerk. (A senator from Detroit said the program started in February.)
- A sheriff in a southern state told him: "Don't worry about having a local permit around here. We've never heard of a white person having a problem." Added Dingell: "That was in the mid-'70s."

'It's like there's some fundamental right to buy a gun and fiddle around with it and see what happens . . .'
— Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills

Dingell argued that the amendments allowing local units to have stiffer handgun rules than state law were unnecessary because they wouldn't result in longer prison terms for the guilty.

"Michigan has a practice of concurrent sentencing. A person wouldn't get a longer sentence (for being convicted under a local ordinance). He or she probably wouldn't even be charged for the second offense," he said.

FAXON HEAPED ridicule on proponents as he argued for local-control amendments.

"We're not taking away anybody's guns. You can't measure what the (local) waiting period does because the people are still alive . . .

"It's like there's some fundamental right to buy a gun and fiddle around with it and see what happens . . ."

Supporting the failed amendment of Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor to allow cities to prohibit guns in many institutitions, Faxon said, "It's like we're sending a message: This is a free gun state. You can go into nursery schools, private schools, hospitals. Give them their guns! Give them an Uzi!"

Replied Dingell: "The demagoguery of my colleagues has hit a new low."

DINGELL SAID local ordinances were unnecessary to require training because the injury rate "has been coming down drastically through private action — not through government."

He praised sportsmen's clubs for hunter safety and gun safety programs.

Sen. Virgil Smith, D-Detroit, said his city operates an eight-hour course at the Detroit Police Academy building. Smith gave a telephone number.

This newspaper called the number and learned it's the office of Commander James Jackson in the academy; that there is a gun training program; that it is offered regularly whenever enough people sign up; that the cost is $60; and that it's open to Detroit residents only.

MSU offering alcohol-free housing

By Pat Murphy
staff writer

Michigan State University will offer alcohol-free dormitory facilities to students this fall, a move that an Oakland County legislator hailed as a step toward addressing alcohol abuse on campus.

"I am very pleased to see MSU come around," said David Honigman, a Republican from West Bloomfield who helped lead a local movement to compel universities to offer students the option of choosing roommates who don't use alcohol or drugs.

The movement was started almost two years ago and drew positive and immediate response from most state universities. But MSU did not respond as quickly, drawing criticism from Honigman as well as Federal Judge Bernard Friedman.

Honigman and Friedman say they are still upset with the state's private colleges and universities for not offering similar alcohol- and drug-free living quarters.

"I hope I don't have to again introduce legislation," said Honigman. "I hope they (private colleges) come around like MSU did."

AN MSU spokesman said the school ran into opposition from student groups when it advocated an option for alcohol-free dormitory facilities.

"Some students argued that their parents, rather than the students themselves, would end up making the decision," said James D. Studer, assistant vice president for student affairs and services.

Beginning this fall students will have a box on their enrollment forms to check if they want a roommate who pledges not to use alcohol.

The enrollment forms do not give students the option of choosing roommates who pledge not to use drugs.

"That's a matter philosophy," said Studer. "Drugs are illegal, so we see no need to offer drug-free living quarters."

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Pursell opposes child care bill

Here's how Observer & Eccentric area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending March 31:

Roll Call Report

HOUSE:

CHILD CARE — By a vote of 265 for and 145 against, the House sent to conference with the Senate a bill (HR 3) expanding federal programs to help parents of limited means obtain day care for their children, at a cost of $27 billion over five years. More than half of the cost derives from earned income tax credits for families earning up to $20,270 annually.

The bill finances school-based programs for "latchkey" children, as well as state efforts to upgrade the safety and quality of supervision at child care centers in public, private and religious settings.

It turns Head Start into an all-day occupation for preschoolers. And it provides states with block grants, to be spent mainly on operating expenses of child care centers and vouchers parents would use to secure child care. Vouchers could be spent for church-sponsored care.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, voted no.

GOP SUBSTITUTE — By a vote of 195 for and 225 against, the House rejected a Republican child care substitute that was backed by the White House.

Its costs of $20 billion was about $7 billion less than that of the Democratic bill (above). Another key difference was that it gave states more leeway in setting child care standards.

Members voting yes supported the GOP substitute.

Pursell and Broomfield voted yes. Hertel, Ford and Levin voted no.

NEW CABINET DEPARTMENT — By a vote of 161 for and 266 against, the House rejected a White House-backed amendment limiting the scope of a new cabinet-level Department of Environmental Protection. The amendment sought to keep its power in line with that of the EPA, which it will supplant. The House sent the bill (HR 3847) to the Senate by a wide margin.

Members voting yes wanted to limit the scope of the new department.

SENATE:

ACID RAIN ISSUE — By a vote of 71 for and 26 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment providing a 20-percent tax credit to utilities in mid-American states that must install coal scrubbers under the acid rain section of pending clean air legislation (S 1630). The equipment is to cut sulfur dioxide emissions.

Senators voting yes opposed the tax credit.

Michigan Democratic senators Carl Levin and Donald Riegle voted yes.

AID TO MINERS — By a vote of 49 for and 50 against, the Senate refused to provide $500 million in aid to coal miners who lose jobs as a result of efforts to reduce acid rain. The amendment to help miners of high-sulfur coal in Appalachia was offered to the clean air bill (above).

Senators voting yes supported the special aid.

Senators Levin and Riegle voted no.

GOP wants property tax cut in trade for utility tax

By Tim Richard
staff writer

State Senate Republicans want property tax relief for both business and homeowners as the price for reinstatement of Detroit's utility tax.

"It's not a Republican or Democratic, Engler or Blanchard approach," said Senate majority leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleasant, in describing the three-bill, $125 million package the upper chamber advanced last week.

"The House action ($344 million in property tax cuts for homeowners voted in March) that would have resulted in a $400 million increase on employers was bad economics. It's not the way to go," the GOP's gubernatorial hopeful told the chamber.

"We didn't set one class of the population against another. We didn't set one part of the state against another."

SENATE DEMOCRATS, joined by Republican Richard Fessler of Union Lake, failed again Thursday to force out of committee a bill to reinstate Detroit's 5 percent utility tax.

The city faces a Wednesday deadline for getting permissive legislation or Wayne Circuit Judge Marvin Stempien could order its collection to cease. The tax is worth nearly $60 million in future annual revenue and $100 million in past revenue from mid-1999 to early 1990. The House of Representatives has already passed the bill.

Republicans held a 19-17 line against forcing the bill out of the Finance Committee for the second straight week. Their message: No utility tax action until House Democrats act on GOP property and inheritance tax proposals.

The Michgian Legislature is in a two-week Easter recess. Negotiations between party leaders in the two chambers reportedly broke down Thursday.

STATE TREASURER Robert Bowman called a part of the Senate GOP package as "our" and "the governor's" bill in a brief interview.

He referred to Senate Bill 895, sponsored by Fessler, which would give income tax credits for property taxes in excess of the rate of inflation. The state treasury would pay $85 million in such relief to local units of government.

The Senate last week expanded the program from both Blanchard's and Fessler's original proposals to include:

- All property — not just homesteads.
- All property taxes — not just school operating.
- A single business tax cut of $35 million for firms whose property tax increases exceeded the consumer price inflation rate.

THE SENATE rejected, on an unrecorded vote, an amendment by Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, to grant greater relief to persons with Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease.

"The appropriations bill was here last week," said Fessler, saying that that bill was the proper vehicle to accomplish Faxon's goal.

The property tax relief bills aren't true cuts, Engler said.

"This doesn't cut anybody's taxes. This limits the increase," he said.

If the bills become law, their effect would be to take $125 million from the state general fund, pay it to local units (particularly schools) and reduce pressure on property taxes.

Both parties admitted it left unanswered the question of what in the $7.6 billion state budget will be cut to pay for the property tax relief.

DNR's fishing legalese sets 2 anglers reeling

Tim Richard

"WHEN DOES trout season open?" shouted my fishin' buddy.

I reached for the DNR's 1990 Michigan Fishing Guide. Hmmmph! No longer is it a fold-out brochure. It's a 24-page booklet.

"Last Saturday in April to Sept. 30," I read, but there was more.

"Longer on streams with extended seasons. See pages 8, 9, 10, 11. Except: (see Note 5)."

Note 5 on the same page says: "Lake trout and splake — Open season, Lakes Michigan and Huron and their tributary streams; May 1 through Labor Day."

"WHADDAYA MEAN 'extended season?' " my fishin' buddy asked.

I read from page 8: "The following streams and portions of streams from their designated upstream limit to their mouths are open to hook and line fishing for trout and salmon and other species of fish on which the season is open during the extended seasons from April 1 through the Friday before the last Saturday in April and from Oct. 1 through Dec. 31. In addition, stream sections noted with an asterisk and all non-trout streams not specifically listed are open year-round for the taking of species qualified above (exceptions noted)."

Pages 8-11 listed 150 or so streams, printed in insurance policy type.

"What's that mean in English?" my friend inquired.

"On some streams, we can fish now," I translated.

"Wanna go to the Rifle River?" he asked.

I looked it up: "Rifle — Arenac, Ogemaw — Junction of Devoe Lk. outlet and Rifle R. Note: Rifle River Closed to the taking of brown trout during extended season only." Fourteen other rivers on the four-page list had special exceptions.

I turned to my friend: "My throat's parched with all that reading. Gimme a beer." He obliged.

"SKIP THE exceptions. Just tell me the creel limit — still five?" said my buddy.

Page 13 of the rules said: "5 in any combination from inland lks. in Great Lks, Lk. St. Clair, St. Marys, St. Clair & Detroit Rs., 5 in any combination, but no more than 3 of any one species, Except pink salmon, nor more than 2 Lake trout or splake from Lk. Mich. On streams, 10 in any combination, but no more than 3 fish over 16 inches (see Note 8). Except on streams during the extended trout and salmon season the limit is 3. See Note 6 and Quality Trout Regulations, p. 18. Except AuSable River, see Iosco Co. page 16. Except: Pere Marquette R., page 18."

I took a deep swallow of the malt beverage and plowed on.

"Note 8 — The 16-inch size limit does not apply to pink salmon. 5 extra pink salmon may be taken from the St. Marys River.

"Note 6 — Possession limit on salmon: one may possess an additional 2 days daily limit, possession being: canned in a sealed container, cured by smoking or drying or frozen in a solid state."

"I GET PARCHED just listening to you," said my companion, opening himself a brew. "Skip the details. Anything about that pretty stretch of the Huron River in the Proud Lake Area?"

I found it on page 18 under Quality Fishing Regulations. "Huron River (Oakland Co.) — Moss Lake to signs 100 yds. below Wixom Rd. (2 miles) catch and release (no kill) with artificial flies only Apr. 1-Day before last Saturday in April. Regular trout rules beginning last Saturday in April-Sept. 30."

By now my fishin' buddy was smirking. "My kid is thinking about Wall Street as a career. I'm gonna tell him ferget it and be an environmental lawyer, explaining the fishing rules to poor slobs like us. He can get rich.

"Why don't we get out our cane poles and the boat and go over to good ol' Kent Lake for panfish? Anything complicated about that?"

"No," I replied, "as soon as we get our licenses, our sportsmen's book, a license for the trailer, a license for the boat, a Metroparks pass and a boat launch pass."

At that moment, my buddy opted for grain alcohol as being less injurious to his mental health than fishing rules, regulations and licenses.

Marriage passages

Open communication is stressed

This is the second from last in a series by counselor Karyn Pasquel, drawing material from her book in progress, entitled "Marriage Passages." All rights reserved.

Karyn Pasquel

Loneliness is a painful hole in a person's heart which aches with a hurt which is difficult to bear.

Loneliness is not a state of circumstance, but a state of heart and mind. You can have your arm around your spouse and still feel painfully distant. Talking can be a strained effort once a wall is built between two people. How do you break through?

Humility is a good start. Pride can do severe and lasting damage, for what . . . a point of victory? Can you truly call it victory when more distance is created in the process? There can be a fine line between humility and defeat, and I am not encouraging an unassertive person to always back down just for the sake of peace.

On the other hand, while it takes humility to be the first one to break through a wall of silence, it also takes humility to tenderly receive the one who has dared to do so.

SOME SPOUSES handle their hurts in opposite ways. One has to talk it out immediately and will not let it rest at all. This person will get frustrated with the spouse who just wants to be left alone to cool off and then discuss the problem. The quiet spouse may be actually trying to avoid blowing up by putting off the confrontation, while the other continues to try to pull discussion out of him.

How does one bring these two opposites together to solve the problem? Either way, one will surely be provoked to anger, and someone will get deeply injured. This is not a situation where someone simply has to change. This is an issue of personality temperaments combined with a measure of modifiable behaviors.

A person with a temperament prone to strong anger must recognize he/she has a short fuse and needs to avoid conflict which will bring out rage. On the other hand, he/she also needs to learn the skill of open communication, recognizing that avoidance only delays a more bitter confrontation until later on.

There is a balance, and both can benefit from taking a walk for 20 minutes or so to collect thoughts and put the issues in proper perspective so they can be discussed in an effective manner.

The key is to recognize each other's personality makeup and not to think you can change it.

LONELINESS IS experienced in a relationship when two people have distanced themselves emotionally from each other. It may be a distance created by only one of them, but it is there non the less. Bridging the gap necessarily takes two people: a giver and receiver.

Conflict isn't bad in a relationship, for it serves to bond a couple closer together. Conflict is a fact of life and a tool for learning. The sooner a couple embraces conflict and works through it, the greater will be individuals' growth and the bonding of their marriage.

The marriage is the safest training ground to learn adaptive skills and gain healthy flexibility which will benefit every area of a person's life. This is because in a marital relationship, one is allowed to "mess up" and still be forgiven — hopefully.

When a person is lonely in a marriage, it is because there is a wall built between the two, blocking communication. Who will make the first move? Does it have to be the one who is in the wrong? What if both feel the other one is at fault? Who cares?

LONELINESS IS damaging. Time is too precious to waste days in non-communicative silence and painful loneliness. If there are issues, they must be dealt with sanely, courageously, and directly. Time will not sweep an issue under the rug.

Silence will only serve to allow the one who does not want to deal with the issues to let things blow over long enough that details may be forgotten. The responsibility of confrontation is avoided. But the other one is in deep pain and loneliness. Damage is being done which will lead to greater distancing — possibly until there is severe breakdown of the relationship.

Open arguments and silent battles are not without damaging results if the issues — no matter how trite — are not dealt with. Issues tend to resurface in other forms.

HAVING THE courage to openly communicate and dare to deal directly and flexibly with touchy issues is not giving in. On the contrary, it is a mature way of taking charge to protect the relationship and each other's dignity.

Anger is a normal human emotion which needs to be allowed to vent. But causing destruction to a person's spirit is not necessary. Never let anger brew overnight as the loneliness which ensues is more damaging and painful than one should ever have to bear.

Leaders are self-serving

To the editor:

Congressman John Conyers sees a problem of voter apathy to elections and wants to correct it by linking voter registration to automobile licensing.

He is incredibly naive if he believes disillusioned voters will be persuaded to vote by such superficial bandaging of their wounds.

Let him look, instead, to reasons why voters are soured and no longer trust elected representatives.

Our elected officials love to refer to their actions with self-serving compliments like "taking a leadership role." And their stooges propagandize us to believe elected leaders are needed to balance competing rights and wishes in a democracy.

But we voters know for democracy to work, elected officials must be trusted and our trust must be earned.

Let our oddly silent political "leaders" explain how registering to vote builds voter trust in the face of political maneuvering (without debate) by our "leaders" to raise their salaries against voters' expressed protests.

How will registering them to vote convince these abused citizens their votes are important?

When honesty and integrity replace self-indulgence and greed in elected officials, there will be no need for special registration to lure voters to act.

Voters, if they trust their elected officials, will vote . . . and the millennium will have arrived. Don't hold your breath waiting for it though.

Fellow voters, protect yourself. Vote against incumbents. If you recognize the name, don't vote for it. Fellow voters you can't believe political "leaders." So in this way we can, at least, minimize their mischief by limiting their term of office.

CONSUMER ALERT
By Larry Thomas

WASHINGTON – In an effort to reduce the number of infant suffocations, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has issued a safety alert that advises parents not to leave infants unattended on any adult or youth bed.

CPSC officials said the agency received more than 200 reports of infants suffocating on such beds between 1985 and 1989, and said most occurred when the child rolled to the edge of the bed and became trapped.

"The commission staff urges that infants not be left on adult or youth beds, whether mattress type or waterbed," the safety report reads. "Preferably, infants should be placed in a crib that meets the federal safety standards and industry voluntary standards for cribs and has a tight fitting mattress."

The alert was issued in the wake of a petition filed in July asking the CPSC to require warning labels on waterbeds. The petition, filed by the Consumer Federation of America and the New York attorney general's office, asks for labels with wording similar to the safety alert.

Leather Luxury: The scent, the prestige, the durability, the eye appeal, the ease of maintenance, the economy and the feel of leather are the reasons people desire to own leather.

Leather has an aesthetic appeal. It has it's own pleasant aroma that appeals to the sensitivity of everyone in a very special way that no other product can. Leather is no longer a cold, hard product purchased only for its looks and prestige. Today's leathers unsurpassed warmth and comfort year round.

Many people feel leather will become too hot in the summer, this is not true. Leather adjusts quickly to body temperature and is comfortable year round. The natural network of fibers in the leather allows air to circulate through it.

Leather is the strongest upholstery material known to man. Leather has an interwoven network which makes it flexible, it will bend and not break.

To meet consumers demands for increased softness in leathers and expanded range of colors, tanneries have developed new processes such as aniline dyeing. Aniline dyeing, a process in which the full hide is dyed, results with leather being softer and supple. Leathers which have been semi-aniline dyed combine both the softness of aniline dyeing and the benefits of surface protection. These leathers are available in any color a home owner could want.

The finishes are permanent and the colors are absorbed by the leather and will not rub off.

Modern chemicals ensure that the leather finish will not crack or peel. Leather will not readily burn or melt, and unlike most fabrics and vinyl, it is extremely difficult to puncture.

The care of leather is very simple. Wipe gently with a solution of mild soap (such as Ivory Flakes) and water. Wipe dry and you are finished! The beauty of the hide is protected throughout processing and the natural oils of leather have been sealed in permanently.

While other materials depreciate in value, leather is found to appreciate and improve in looks each year. At the end of the 20 years, a chair most likely will be worth more than the $1,200.00 initially paid.

Leather will last forever. A leather product is not just another piece of furniture but a heirloom which could be passed down from generation to generation!

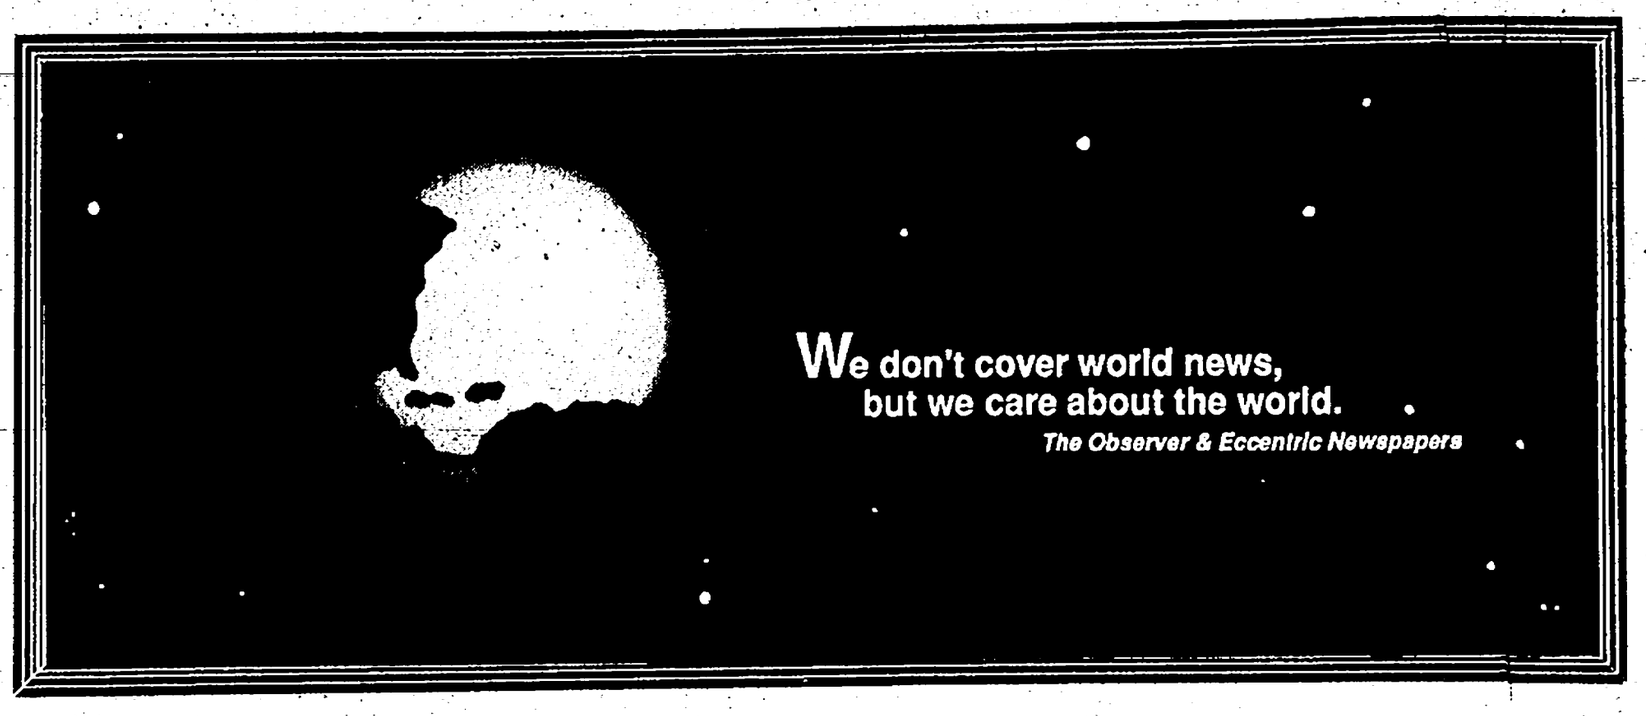
RECYCLING IS GOOD NEWS.



Overcrowded landfills. Garbage barges no one wants to deal with. Terminal trash.

News.

Bad news.

The good news? More and more people, businesses and industries are finding ways to recycle.

It takes more than 6,000 tons of newsprint each year to print The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers plus a number of other publications, so we're doing a number of things to help the solid waste situation:

1. For years we've sold our waste newsprint to a recycling firm.

2. 25% of the newsprint we print on is recycled and we're increasing this amount by another 25% this year.

3. Our employees have begun to routinely put office paper (memos, computer paper, waste copy paper) in recycle bins instead of waste baskets.

Of course, we still deliver thousands of newspapers twice each week. It's our business to bring you news of your local government, schools, sports scene and community events; the news you need to know.

And when you're finished reading your hometown newspaper there are places that will recycle them.

We've listed a few for you on this page because we think recycling Good News.

Here is a list of recycling centers in the Observer & Eccentric circulation area. Please call the center nearest you for guidance in preparing your recyclables—

No-buzz coffees terrific

I'm still green behind the ears when it comes to the coffee market. I've drank the best (Royal Kona Hawaiian and Jamaician Blue Mountain) and have made the worst.

Probably two of the major changes that have hit today's coffee market is the decline in regular coffee drinking contrasted by a skyrocketing rapid rise in the use of decaffeinated and gourmet coffees and the transition from wishy-washy decafs to actually great tasting non-buzzing brews.

As we speak, the coffee market is undergoing yet another major change, greatly improved decaffeinating processes, which are chemical free.

Removing the caffeine from coffee beans has been around for the last 30 or so odd years. Sales of decaffeinated coffee, however, never rose to expectations because usually the decaf process left a coffee that was watered down with hardly any flavor and almost no aroma. Couple the lost flavor and aroma with the fact that the decafing process involved using a chemical solvent (methylene chloride) employed in direct contact with the beans and you had not just a crummy-tasting cup of coffee but also one that had somewhat questionable health standards.

THE METHYLENE chloride used in most over-the-counter brands of coffee you and I purchase has reportedly caused cancer in laboratory animals and is considered a "possible human carcinogen" by the EPA and FDA. Because of these findings, methylene chloride was banned last summer for use in hair sprays and cosmetics. It is, however, still used in most lesser-quality decaf coffees because the EPA and FDA claims that "the residual level of methylene chloride in the final product is very low and therefore considered safe." Yea, OK, and someday I'm going to win Lotto 47.

So off you run to your can of coffee and with a sigh of relief, you read that your decaf coffee is processed with ethyl acetate. Coffee decaffeinated with this solvent is often called "natural" because ethyl acetate exists in some fruits. It does, but only in minute quantities like 10-20 parts per million.

Ethyl acetate is used industrially as a solvent in lacquers and varnishes and in the manufacture of artificial leather. Guess what? The FDA says that it, too, is considered safe, in the quantities left as a residue on the beans after the decaf process. And they say, "Trust me"!

But there are alternatives for those of us who really don't wish their coffee be treated with industrial solvents. Two methods that produce a great-tasting decaffeinated cup of coffee are the Supercritical Carbon Dioxide method and the Swisswater method.

IN THE SUPERCRITICAL CO2 process, coffee beans are first saturated in water and then treated with carbon dioxide that has been compressed to 200 times normal atmospheric pressure. This method is used by more upscale and slightly more expensive decaf brands, such as Sanka.

Companies boasting the Swiss water method have discovered newer technology that has the green coffee beans first soaked in water to remove the caffeine. The caffeine-laced water is then run through a series of carbon filters used to purify drinking water. As the water cycles between the beans and the carbon, the concentration of coffee solubles in the water increases until it equals that of the beans.

Once at this point, these flavor components are no longer removed from the beans because they are in balance between the beans and the water mixture. Therefore, the final product is a full-flavored coffee with only the caffeine removed.

Lamb is flavorful and tender

By Larry Janes, special writer

MOMMA ALWAYS served a whole ham at Easter, completely studded with cloves, rings of canned Dole pineapple slices and bottled-in-red-dye-number-three maraschino cherries. We ate Easter ham all week and then found it tucked between Wonder Bread in our school lunches and, finally, almost cooked beyond recognition in a large pot with great Northern beans and vegetables.

We never ate lamb. Not at Easter, never at Christmas. In my maturation years, my experiences with lamb were based solely on visits to the Detroit Zoo.

Contrary to what some say, age does have its benefits. Being all of 18, I had just been flown (my first airplane ride) to the Culinary Institute in Hyde Park, N.Y., for a shortened summer session. The first night's dinner was, and to this day I can remember it like it happened yesterday, a roast sliced leg of lamb. Tasting that lamb was like a first ride in a convertible. I wanted more.

Lamb has long been noted for its delicate flavor and tenderness. Pick up the menu at any fine dining establishment around the world and lamb will be featured in one way or another. Sliced leg, crown roasts, braised chops, broiled rack, rolled breast, you name it, and just like beef, you can accomplish it with lamb.

SURPRISINGLY, HOWEVER, we don't eat a lot of lamb in the United States. According to American Meat Institute figures for 1986, Americans eat 1.4 pounds of lamb annually, quite a difference from the 62-plus pounds of pork and the whopping 76 pounds of beef.

Granted, most butchers in the United States seldom carry all three varieties (heck, some won't even carry lamb because it's a slow mover), but the three basic types of lamb are milk fed, spring and mutton.

Baby milk-fed lamb, traditional for people of many cultures for the Easter holiday, is the most delicate, sought after and, of course, most expensive. These are annually less than three months old when slaughtered and are, because of their size, sold whole, halved or quartered for full roasting on either a spit or a very large oven.

Spring lamb can be anywhere from three to nine months old. Until the end of October, it will be stamped "genuine spring lamb." From November on, it becomes winter lamb.

Jack Ubaldi, author of "The Meat Book," Macmillan, 1987, actually comes forward and says in his book, "The worst time of the year for lamb is January to April, when the majority of lambs available to buy are yearlings, which fall into a sort of lamb limbo, too old for lamb and too young for mutton." Comments like that kind of squelch the reasons for cooking an Easter lamb, eh?

Matzoh — it's special at Passover

By Nechama Bakst, special writer

Tonight, on the first night of Passover, children in Jewish households around the world will be reciting the traditional four questions.

First of all, they will ask, why is it that on all other nights of the year we eat leavened bread and unleavened bread (matzoh), while on Passover we eat only matzoh?

Actually, it's food for thought. After all, matzoh, traditionally made of flour and water with no eggs, salt, sugar or fat, is a wholesome, low-calorie carbohydrate sold in supermarkets throughout the year.

And matzoh balls (round balls made of matzoh meal) served with chicken soup are a year-round staple on Jewish menus.

SO WHAT makes matzoh so special on Passover?

Eating matzoh throughout the year is strictly a physical experience, according to Rabbi Elimelech Silberberg, spiritual leader of the Bais Chabad Torah Center in West Bloomfield.

"Matzoh is characteristically called the bread of affliction and humility," Silberberg said.

"By eating matzoh on Passover we ask God to imbue us with the selflessness and modesty so necessary in carrying out our mission as Jews."

THESE SPIRITUAL implications are only relevant during the Passover holiday when God charged the Jews with this commandment, Silberberg said.

"It's not that you couldn't do it (eat matzoh) during the year," said Southfield resident Vera Silverstein. "But it just doesn't taste the same. There's nothing like Pesach (the Hebrew word for Passover)."

An innovative cook, Silverstein said her family of seven uses "tons of matzoh" not only for eating but in cooking and baking.

ONE REASON her matzoh tastes different on Passover is that Silverstein uses only "shmura" matzoh, a darker, coarser matzoh than the kind usually packaged year-round.

"Shmura matzoh means that the wheat has been watched from the time it was cut . . . to protect it from becoming leavened," said Avrohom Plotnik, co-owner of Spitzer's Hebrew Book and Gift Center in Southfield.

Plotnick sells close to 3,000 pounds of matzoh of different kinds during the Passover season, which starts about a month before Passover.

The store carries shmura hand matzoth (plural for matzoh) at $10.50 a pound that are mixed, rolled out and baked completely by hand.

These — the traditional round matzoth — are the coarsest.

There is shmura machine matzoth, round or square, but also dark and coarse, at $6.95 a pound, and regular matzoth at $3.25 a pound.

SOME FOODS taste better with the coarser matzoh, said Silverstein, who uses shmura hand matzoth for eating and shmura machine matzoth for cooking.

Take stuffed cabbage, she said.

Because rice is forbidden on Passover in some Jewish households, Silverstein makes sweet-and-sour stuffed cabbage with matzoh.

"Stuffed cabbage Pesach time comes out better than the rest of the year," Silverstein said.

FOR ABOUT three pounds of ground beef, she uses about one to 1½ cups of matzoh ground coarsely in a food processor.

She adds three eggs to the processed matzoh and stir fries the mixture in a little oil in a frying pan, turning it until it is sauteed.

Then she adds two diced onions, salt and seasoning to taste, along with the ground meat.

The mixture is used to fill cabbage leaves, which are then cooked, with tomato juice diluted in a little water and sugar, on top of a low flame for 1-1½ hours.

"It's delicious," Silverstein said. "The matzoh gives it a very special taste. My kids love it better than during the year."

BUT SILVERSTEIN doesn't stop at giving traditional foods a Passover twist.

Some of her recipes are pure creativity.

Would you envision lasagna made with matzoh?

"Take tuna, matzoh and cheese. Add tomato juice or tomato sauce; and you got lasagna," she said. "Instead of the lasagna noodles you use the matzoh."

THEN, OF course, there are the Passover staples.

In most families, Passover wouldn't be Passover without someone sitting down to a meal or a snack of matzoh and butter.

And at breakfast, "matzoh 'brie' is the big thing," Silverstein said.

For matzoh brie, matzoh is soaked in water and drained, then added to beaten eggs and fried in oil in a frying pan.

"I let it brown very well on both sides, so it comes out almost like a pancake," Silverstein said.

It's eaten either alone or with sugar, jelly or syrup.

LEAH RUBY of West Bloomfield uses a similar recipe, except that hers is made with matzoh meal and called a "bubeleh."

"It's a family recipe. We got it from my mother, and my sisters and I all make it," Ruby said.

Ruby separates three eggs, beating the whites until stiff. She gently folds in two tablespoons matzoh meal, the egg yolks, and salt and pepper to taste.

"It should be heated in cooking oil in a warm pan on a medium flame," she said.

It is turned when brown and then flipped onto a plate like a pancake.

It can be served with breakfast, lunch or dinner, or as a dessert and topped with sugar, syrup, honey, jelly or fruit.

"My mother always put sugar on it. It's delicious like that, but it depends what people like," Ruby said.

And matzoh balls in chicken soup, though eaten throughout the year, are extra special on Passover.

Vera Silverstein says the trick to fluffy matzoh balls is separating the eggs.

Here's her recipe for soft, fluff "knaidlach" or matzoh balls.

4 eggs
⅓ cup oil or shortening
½ cup water
1 teaspoon salt pepper
1-1¼ cups matzoh meal

Separate eggs. Add to yolks shortening, water, salt and pepper. Beat whites until stiff. Add matzoh meal to yolk mixture and fold in whites.

Refrigerate about 1 hour and form mixture into balls. Cook in boiling, salted water covered about ½ hour.

Another recipe for matzoh balls comes from "A Little Jewish Cookbook" by Barbara Bloch.

1 tablespoon freshly chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon ground ginger (optional)
salt and pepper to taste
4 tablespoons melted schmaltz (chicken fat) or oil
4 eggs
½ cup sparkling water
1 cup matzoh meal

Stir parsley, ginger, salt and pepper into chicken fat. Add eggs and sparkling water and beat to blend. Stir in matzoh meal (mixture should be moist). Regrigerate 1 hour. Wet hands and form into walnut-sized balls. Bring 8-10 cups chicken soup to a boil. Drop balls into boiling soup. Reduce heat and cover to simmer 20 minutes or until balls float on top. Serve 2-3 balls per person.

Try Raiselle Snow of Southfield's turkey stuffing made with matzoh.

One 16-20 pound turkey
8 pieces matzoh broken into pieces
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
1 large onion, diced
2 ribs celery, diced
1 clove garlic, diced vegetable oil
2 eggs
salt and pepper to taste

Soak matzoh pieces in water until soft.

Rub skillet with garlic, cover bottom pan with oil. Mince garlic and add to oil mix in vegetables, and simmer until tender.

Squeeze water from matzoh. Place pieces in bowl and add sauteed vegetables with oil. Mix in eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Mixture should be moist. Stuff cavity and neck of turkey loosely with stuffing.

Don't know what to do with all those leftovers from big holiday dinners? Here's a recipe that uses leftover cooked chicken and matzoh.

3 cups matzoh coarsely ground or matzoh farfel
2 cups chicken broth, heated
2 onions, diced
2 stalks celery, diced
1 cup mushrooms (or 2 cans)
½ green pepper
3 tablespoons oil
3 eggs
salt, pepper, paprika and garlic powder to taste

Combine matzoh or farfel and broth in mixing bowl. Let stand while sauteing vegetables in heated oil.

Add chicken and cook a few minutes longer, stirring to mix well.

Beat eggs. Add eggs and vegetable-chicken mixture to farfel. Mix well. Season to taste. Bake in well-greased casserole at 350 degrees for 1 hour.

ANOTHER CHOICE might be mutton, which is a two-year-old male sheep. This lamb has a strong taste particularly enjoyed by the English.

Thanks to modern technology and shipping techniques, much of the lamb we enjoy comes from New Zealand and Australia. Never, however, underestimate the flavor of fresh lamb, especially from one of the butchers down in the Gratiot Central market, a stone's throw across the Fisher Freeway from the Eastern Market main entrance. The metro Detroit's widely expanded Middle Eastern community has made our area a prime market for fresh lamb products.

If you are looking for the freshest lamb, look for meat with a bright and light red tinge, not a dark, deep ruby red found in beef. You should be able to see some red in the bones. If they are white and bleached out, the lamb is old.

Lamb is the smallest of the four-footed meat animals. If you have never seen a lamb before, imagine the difference between lamb and beef with a leg of beef weighing in at more than 80 pounds while a leg of lamb comes in between six and eight pounds, maximum. Lamb is a fatty animal and, unlike pork, the fat is not edible. It is more like tallow. This contributes to the high price of lamb because by the time the lamb is trimmed of its fat and other non-edible parts, the resulting meat is only about 40 percent of its weight. The fat is another reason the best time to purchase lamb is from May to November, when the lamb has developed less solidified fat than when it's older.

I HAVE CERTAINLY made up for my first 18 years of not enjoying lamb. Occasionally, I splurge and have my meat man tie up a crown roast of lamb that will serve six people. Unfortunately, this comes pretty close to a day's wages and those days are few and far between. A sample polling of some of metro Detroit's finest restaurants found a rack of lamb for one person priced between $25 and $50.

On the other hand, every now and then I get the urge to pick up a small leg of lamb. If I shop around, I might be able to find it at under $1.80 per pound. I slather on imported olive oil and then rub in rosemary, garlic and kosher salt with my hands, and roast it in a slow oven or toss on the barbecue's one-hour-old coals.

Then again, sometimes I'll just pick up a package of little lamb chops at a frightful price and pop them under a broiler for a light, low-cal dinner entree with a few steamed vegetables. Even the ground lamb patties available at most good markets easily can be made into stuffed cabbages, broiled by themselves, or mixed with rice, lemon juice and herbs for a stuffed grape leaf that would melt in your mouth.

So don't just enjoy lamb around Easter. The best lamb to hit the fresh market here in Detroit will be available beginning the first of May

ROAST LEG OF SPRING LAMB
1 leg of lamb, about 6-8 pounds
2 cloves garlic, peeled and slivered
1 tablespoon rosemary salt and pepper to taste, preferably fresh ground
2 tablespoons oil
½ cup dry sherry, dry vermouth or water

Trim the lamb, leaving only a tiny amount of fat on to keep the juices inside. I like to remove all fat.

Remove all the fat within the pelvic bone and whatever fat is on top of the round.

With a small, sharp knife, make a few deep cuts near the bone. In each, place some garlic, rosemary, salt and pepper.

Rub the surface of the lamb with oil and rub completely with garlic, salt, pepper and more rosemary.

Place the leg in a shallow roasting pan. Roast in a preheated 350-degree oven for 15-18 minutes per pound. (About 1½ hours per 6 pound leg for rare, 2 hours for medium rare, 2½ hours for medium and 3 hours for well done.) Brush every half hour with sherry or water to make a gravy.

BROILED MARINATED LAMB CHOPS
8 lamb chops, about 1½ inch thick
2 cloves garlic, peeled and chopped fine
½ teaspoon thyme juice of 1 lemon
salt and fresh ground pepper to taste

Place the chops in a deep glass dish and sprinkle them with the above ingredients. Refrigerate for at least 1 hour. Place 4-6 inches from the broiler and broil to desired doneness.

PERSIAN LAMB WITH ORANGE HERBED RICE
¾ cup slivered almonds
1½ pounds ground lamb
1½ to 2 cups chopped onion
2 to 4 cloves garlic, minced
1 beef bouillon cube juice of 1 lime
1 tablespoon dried mint
1 medium bunch fresh spinach, well washed
1 medium tomato, cut into wedges
1 ripe avocado, peeled, pitted and cut into wedges

Heat a small amount of olive oil in a large skillet. Add almonds; heat and stir until golden. Remove to a plate.

In same skillet, brown lamb with onions, garlic and bouillon, about 10 minutes. Add lime juice and mint; cook and stir 1 minute.

Line a large platter with fresh spinach. Drain any fat from lamb; place in the center of the platter. Surround with tomato and avocado wedges. Serve with herbed orange rice.

This recipe was created by Doreen Pollock at Dayton Hudson's and is featured in "Potluck for 24,000," recipes from the great Dayton Hudson cook-off, a benefit for the United Way. The book is available at most Dayton Hudson stores

ORANGE HERBED RICE
¼ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onions zest of 1 orange
1 cup water
½ cup orange juice
dash salt
¼ teaspoon dried thyme
1 cup long-grain rice

In a 2-quart saucepan, melt butter. Add celery and onion. Cook over medium heat about 5 minutes. Add water, orange juice, zest and spices. Heat to boiling. Add rice. Reduce heat to a simmer. Cover and cook 20 minutes. Uncover, fluff rice with fork before serving.

IRISH COFFEE
1 cup chilled whipping cream
¼ cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup fresh ground coffee beans
3 cups water
½ cup Irish whiskey
4-8 teaspoons granulated sugar

Beat whipping cream, powdered sugar and vanilla in a chilled bowl until stiff. Refrigerate. Prepare coffee as usual using ¾ cup coffee beans and 3 cups water. Heat 4 mugs by rinsing with boiling water; drain well. Place 2 tablespoons of whiskey in each mug and 1-2 teaspoons granulated sugar. Pour hot coffee into each mug. Top with whipped cream mix. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

COFFEE PUNCH
1 quart milk
1 quart strong coffee
½ cup sugar
3 whole cloves
pinch cinnamon
1 pint vanilla ice cream
several drops almond extract

Scald milk; add coffee, sugar and spices. Chill thoroughly. Place ice cream in a large punch bowl. Break into small pieces. Add coffee and milk mixture and almond extract. Stir.

Although spring has finally sprung, the greenest grass in town is still the shredded cellophane that will soon line Easter baskets.

Have you ever wondered who invented that awful stuff? My guess is that it was probably someone connected to the vacuum cleaner industry who cleverly knew that it would help pick up business.

In addition to Easter and Passover, which happen to fall concurrently this year, spring is always a time for many celebrations.

Mother's Day, Father's Day, bridal showers and graduation parties all offer wonderful opportunities for friends and families to assemble for brunch.

BUT, AS much fun as it is to break bread together, none of us wants to break our back doing it. That's why this week's Winner Dinner, Make-Ahead Sausage and Egg Casserole, is sure to become a favorite.

It is easy to assemble, must be made ahead, can be frozen, and is delicious and filling.

Submitted by Pat Canfield of Garden City, this is one meal that children as well as adults always seem to love. Canfield likes to serve this casserole with freshly made bran muffins, applesauce and orange juice.

THE PARENTS of four grown children and part of a close-knit family, the Canfields are looking forward to having an Easter egg hunt for their six grandchildren.

Although Canfield's husband has recently retired, she continues to work part time as a baby sitter.

In her spare time, she teaches quilting and crafts, belongs to two quilting guilds and is the coordinator of her church's parish quilt, which will be raffled off in September.

In addition to all this, Canfield and her husband enjoy square dancing, golf and camping. Their busy and fulfilling lives are enriched by the many varied activities in which they are involved.

Thank you, Pat Canfield, for sharing your tasty and timely recipes with us. The quilted star design on the apron you made for the accompanying picture proclaims you for what you are — our star Winner Dinner Winner of the week.

Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apron with the words Winner Dinner Winner on it.

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping, or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clippings in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

MAKE-AHEAD SAUSAGE AND EGG CASSEROLE

BRAN MUFFINS

APPLESAUCE

ORANGE JUICE

Shopping List

1 pound regular pork or turkey sausage
10 eggs
white bread
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
15-ounce box of Post Raisin Bran cereal
5 cups flour
3 cups sugar
baking soda milk
1 quart buttermilk
vegetable oil
dry mustard
salt
applesauce
orange juice

MAKE-AHEAD SAUSAGE AND EGG CASSEROLE

This tasty dish must be made a day in advance and refrigerated, can be frozen. It serves 8.

1 pound regular pork or turkey sausage
6 eggs
2 cups milk
6 slices white bread, cubed
1 teaspoon salt, optional
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup packed, grated cheddar cheese

Lightly brown and crumble pork sausage. Drain and cool. In a bowl, beat eggs. Add milk, salt, mustard, cubed bread and stir. Add cheese and sausage.

Pour into a glass dish, 9-by-13 inches or 1½ quarts. Refrigerate overnight. Place in oven uncovered and bake for 50 minutes at 350 degrees. Let stand a few minutes before serving.

If you would like to freeze this casserole, assemble and place in the freezer until the day you will be serving it. Thaw and bake according to the above directions.

BRAN MUFFINS

This is a recipe for a master mix that keeps up to five weeks in your refrigerator. From now on, you and your family can have fresh, home-baked bran muffins every morning. This is a tastier recipe than the one on the cereal box.

15 ounces Post Raisin Bran cereal
5 cups flour
3 cups sugar
5 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt, optional
1 quart buttermilk
4 eggs
1 cup oil

Mix all the ingredients together. Spray muffin tins with a non-stick spray and fill half full with the batter. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes.

Obviously, this recipe makes a lot of muffins and they can be made ahead and frozen. That's what is so wonderful about it. Or, store the extra batter in a covered plastic container in the refrigerator and date it. It will keep for five weeks.

How to match sauvignon blanc with foods

Eleanor and Ray Heald

Sauvignon blanc in its multiple wine styles from the Loire Valley and the Graves region of France, together with those from California, make it the most versatile of white wines to match with food.

With some wines, the type of food is the most important focus. With sauvignon blanc, it is clearly more a function of the cooking method, the acid/sugar levels and the herbs used in the sauce that determine a good matchup.

Sauvignon blanc is a fine-edged wine. Before considering food complements, you have to determine whether the wine is grassy, bordering on weedy, or if it's melony with grapefruit characters and, lastly, whether it's sweet because the residual sugar is above 0.5 percent.

Because of the wine's fine edge, if you put fresh cilantro (coriander) or tarragon with it, wine flavors are destroyed, unless the wine is grassy and herbal.

Basil works well if you don't choose the most pungent of its many hybrids. Raw, sweet basil used as the principle greens with a high-acid vinaigrette produces a salad that complements sauvignon blanc because the acidity reduces any aggressive components.

A COLD, dilled potato salad served with a well-chilled sauvignon blanc will destroy the myth that vinaigrettes don't match with wine. Certainly, white distilled vinegar doesn't complement, but vinegars made from quality wines and herb-flavored vinegars work well.

It's a question of balance. You have to experiment, know the flavors of the wine and adjust ingredient amounts. You can't do it directly from a recipe. That's the trick.

Bell pepperiness is frequently associated with sauvignon blanc so the natural tendency is to avoid their use. Peppers can complement the wine as long as you heighten the citrus character with fresh lime juice and chop the peppers rather than pureeing. Bell peppers roasted over high heat are also good. Tank-fermented sauvignon blancs with little or no wood aging do well here.

With more aggressive styles of sauvignon blanc, complementing is not always the way to go because you're risking whether the magic will be there or not. In this case, contrasting is probably more interesting.

The more melony styles of sauvignon blanc pair well with grilled fish and a splash of fresh lemon juice. Acid crispness and a slight charcoal-burnt flavor on the fish playing against the rounder, softer, melony wine flavors are a duel on the palate. There's a stimulation from one focus to the other. Here, the perfect match is the foil.

COMPLEMENTARY ingredients with high acidity and low sugar levels include: Michigan sun-dried cherries, fresh vegetables salsas, mustards, vinaigrettes, fruit relishes and chutneys.

They're called food and wine marriages, but frequently in marriages, it's the opposites that attract. Wine acidity causes two effects in the marriage of food and wine: 1. Food flavors induce a reaction with the wine on the palate that is pleasant; 2. The contrast of a smooth, creamy sauce and the wine's acidity create a chalkiness or curdling effect on the palate which is unpleasant.

Cream-base sauces are difficult matches with sauvignon blanc. Classical French creams with herb infusions get lost. The tongue becomes coated and the wine disappears.

However, soured, curdled or clotted creams will work; so do butter sauces. There must be a relatively high level of acid in the sauce in order to make it work with sauvignon blanc. Sauces that finish soft are lost with the wine.

You need firmer fish, like swordfish, red snapper or pike, to match textures with the wine in the mouth.

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

1988 Matanzas Creek Winery Sauvignon Blanc ($15) is a well-styled and focused wine. Its steely yet approachable character shouts, "Bring on the oysters." Melons, vanilla and a hint of grass highlight the nose. The wine is complex with bright acidity and a crisp, lengthy finish. Excellent.

1988 Taft Street Sauvignon Blanc ($6.75) with delicate hints of melon and assorted tropical fruits is straightforward, clean and value-priced.

Chicken, because of its low-sugar, grainy mustard sauces, and mustards with a slight horseradish addition highlight textures.

Jamie Morningstar, resident chef at Inglenook-Napa Valley, is responsible for a food and wine program that markets wines through the image of sitting down and eating.

"PEOPLE HAVE different tastes and preferences, so I hesitate discussing what doesn't work and prefer to emphasize what does," she says. "Because I'm opinionated, I must point out foods that I think don't work well with sauvignon blanc.

"Smoked foods come to mind immediately. They don't usually pair well with sauvignon blanc unless the wine has a smoky quality of its own. If the wine style is steely, smoked foods accentuate dryness and acidity and make the wine puckery in the mouth.

"Plain goat cheese becomes more pungent with sauvignon blanc, so if you like goat cheese, it's great. It works because of the acidic component in the goat cheese. The high butterfat content of most cheeses coats the tongue and cancels the wine's finish. Herbed goat cheese emphasizes the herbal quality of sauvignon blanc and reduces the goaty character of the cheese."

Cajun and creole orientations work if they are not overly spicy and hot. Clean, plain, gutsy foods with good acidity do best. Defined food flavors along with clearly identifiable sauvignon blanc flavors can't miss.

Easy salad dressing tastes like homemade

Call this elegant salad amazing. The dressing is amazingly easy. It mixes right in the bottle, and it tastes amazingly like homemade. The simple arrangement of fruit and greens look amazingly impressive.

To choose a prime papaya for this salad, look for one with smooth, undamaged skin. Allow a firm papaya to ripen at room temperature for 3 to 5 days or until it yields to gentle hand pressure. Once ripe it will keep for several days in the refrigerator.

GREENS AND PAPAYA SALAD

¼ teaspoons poppy seed
one 8-ounce bottle coleslaw salad dressing
1 papaya
2 heads bibb or Boston lettuce
1 head Belgian endive
one 8-ounce can grapefruit sections (water pack), drained
⅓ cup sliced almonds

Add poppy seed to salad dressing bottle. Cover, shake well. Chill until serving.

Peel, seed and slice papaya. Line a large platter with lettuce leaves. Fan papaya to one side, endive to the other. Spoon grapefruit in the center. Sprinkle with nuts. Cover and chill until serving time.

Before serving, shake dressing; drizzle over salad. Makes 8 servings.

clarification

The recipe for Paella, accompanying the article on country club chefs in Taste on Monday, April 2, should have read 2 cups rice, not 12 cups. The Paella recipe is from Executive Chef Lon McCracken of the Meadowbrook Country Club.

Cookbook gives Passover recipes

A section on Passover is included in the cookbook "The Galilee Gourmet Book II," from the Galilee Chapter B'nai B'rith Women.

Here are some recipes in that section.

APRICOT PASTRY

½ pound softened unsalted butter (or margarine)
2 egg yolks
Pinch of salt
1 cup sugar
2 cups sifted cake meal
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind

Combine preceding ingredients for pastry. Spread ¾ of the dough on the bottom of a greased 9-by-13-inch pan and up the sides 1 inch. Bake for 20 minutes at 325 degrees. Refrigerte remaining dough until needed. Remove the crust from the oven.

STUFFED CABBAGE

14-16 large cabbage leaves
1 pound ground beef
1 matzo, broken
½ cup water
1 egg, beaten
1 large onion, diced
¼ cup lemon juice
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water
1 can tomato and mushroom sauce

Remove leaves from large head of cabbage carefully. Place in a large pot, cover with boiling water, and simmer 5 minutes. Drain. Soak broken matzo in the ½ cup water until soft. Combine this mixture with ground meat and egg. Place a heaping tablespoon of this mixture in the center of each cabbage leaf. Fold in the sides to cover meat and roll. Place cabbage rolls in a large saucepan with open sides down. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over cabbage rolls. Bring to a boil and then reduce heat. Simmer about 1½ hours, basting occasionally. Serves 5-6.

Copies of the cookbook may be ordered by calling Linda Rosenberg of Southfield at 559-6706.

clarification

"Apple sauce" appeared instead of "apple slice" (in the paragraph on oxidation) and the word "color" instead of "odor" (in the paragraph on nose) in the Focus on Wine column that ran Monday, April 2, in Taste.

Tough luck hits ex-RU standout

By Ray Sellock
staff writer

Like the Berlin Wall, things came crashing down last week for Eastern Michigan defensive back David Marshall.

The former Redford Union standout had everything going for him. He was competing for a starting job on the Huron defense and was relishing his first full season on scholarship. But a tackle would change his luck.

Marshall, attempting to bring down a wide receiver in spring drills, got his foot caught in the artificial surface at Michigan Stadium and tore ligaments in his knee.

The 6-foot-2, 185-pound Marshall will undergo surgery Tuesday. Doctors are certain it will take six months for the knee to regain its full strength.

"When the doctors told me it would take six months, I thought to myself there's no way," Marshall said. "I am hoping that I can be ready for training camp in August."

IF MARSHALL'S knee does take the full six months to recover, he should return to action when the Hurons travel Sept. 29 to face Indiana.

"I sure hope to be back for the Indiana game," Marshall said. "That is the fifth game of the season and I don't see any reason why I can't be back by then."

Marshall, who was overlooked by college scouts, walked on at Eastern Michigan in the fall of 1987. He made the team and witnessed the Hurons' Mid-American Conference title and victory in the California Bowl.

"That was a neat season," Marshall said. "Everyone got to go out to California for the bowl game. It was a lot of fun."

In the 1988 season, Marshall made appearances in two games as a backup.

"I got to play about 10 or 12 plays that season," Marshall said. "It was just enough to get a taste of the action."

Despite his progress, Marshall had not yet received a scholarship and was beginning to get frustrated.

LAST SEASON, Marshall played on special teams and the entire second half of the game against Liberty University. By the end of the season, Eastern Michigan coach Jim Harkema gave Marshall a scholarship.

"If I didn't get a scholarship, I wasn't going to come back," he said. "I wanted to be compensated for my time. Guys on the team would be asking me if I was on scholarship yet. It got to be degrading."

An All-League player at RU, college coaches may have missed Marshall coming out of high school. They showed interest, but never offered him a scholarship.

When EMU defensive coordinator Greg Satanski called Marshall at midnight and wanted him to be on the Ypsilanti campus for registration the next morning at 8 a.m., Marshall was there.

"I DIDN'T know what I was going to do at that point," he said. "Eastern showed interest, but it was a don't call us, we'll call you thing. I'm just real glad they called."

Through hard work, Marshall maneuvered himself into a position to compete for a starting job this spring. It was the best of times for Marshall.

"I can't think of a time when things were better than they were going into spring drills in March," Marshall said. "I am just going to have to work hard over the summer and try to get back into the line-up as soon as I can."

His high school coach, RU athletic director Jim Gibbons, says if anyone can be ready for training camp in August, it's Marshall.

"That guy has tremendous drive," Gibbons said. "A lot of guys talk about what they are going to do, but David just does it. We are proud of him and the progress he has made at EMU."

Mercy's Donna Wilhem (top) beats a Birmingham Marian defender to the ball during last week's 1-1 tie. Several teams played last week under cold and sloppy fields, but many prep sporting events were postponed because of the weather. For a roundup on girls soccer from last week, turn to page 3C.

Talk turns to football playoffs, hockey, tennis

Brad Emons

WHAT'S THE TALK around Observerland?

While watching it snow in April and waiting for spring sports to start, it's time to sit back and offer a few thoughts about the local sports scene.

FOOTBALL TALK: I'm not sure how to respond to the latest playoff format approved by the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

By doubling the number of classes from four to eight, and the field from 64 to 128, the MHSAA is going to make a lot more schools happy.

But by expanding the field, more first-round mismatches could occur.

I'm not really against it, but the MHSAA ought to let everybody have a chance to compete in postseason play like the Indiana High School Athletic Association does.

By knocking out the ninth week — making it an eight game regular season — and giving the top point-getters first-round byes, the playoffs could include everybody during a 13-week format (regular season and playoffs).

HOCKEY TALK: What a homecoming weekend it was for Chris Tancill at the NCAA Hockey Championships at Joe Louis Arena.

The right winger from Livonia Stevenson High was voted tournament MVP, leading Wisconsin to the title.

He scored both goals in the Badgers' 2-1 semifinal win over Boston College and added another in a 7-3 championship victory over Colgate, capping a very satisfying four-year career. He's one of seven seniors who realized a long-awaited dream.

Tancill plans to give pro hockey a shot. He is property of the Hartford Whalers, who took him last year in the NHL's supplemental draft.

Another area product, Westland native Adam Burt is currently involved in the NHL playoffs. For Hartford this season, he played in 63 games, scoring four goals and adding eight assists, not to mention a plus-3 rating.

Another area defenseman who had hoped to make his mark in the playoffs, Livonia's Al Iafrate, was sidelined for the season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee. The Toronto Maple Leaf was coming off one of his best seasons. The All-Star had 21 goals and 42 assists in 75 games.

But not all was lost for the big defenseman. The Leafs signed him to a new contract.

Another Livonian involved in playoff action is former Franklin High product Mike Donnelly, currently with first-place Rochester of the American Hockey League.

The former Michigan State All-American finished third in the AHL in scoring with 43 goals and 55 assists for 98 points.

He also played 12 games this season with the Buffalo Sabres, tallying a goal and two assists.

Yet another Livonian, defenseman Dennis Smith, played in four games with Washington Capitals this season.

Mike Modano, the rookie center from the Minnesota North Stars, drew an assist in first-round playoff win Wednesday against Chicago.

The Westland native, only 19, finished second among NHL rookies in scoring with 29 goals and 46 assists.

Modano, the NHL's first pick overall two years ago, played junior hockey during the 1988-89 season after a long contract dispute kept him out of training camp.

Even though he did not play in the NHL last season, he was unfairly compared that season to Vancouver rookie Trevor Linden, the No. 2 pick. Some suggested Minnesota made a mistake with its No. 1 pick.

Looking at the stats this season, Linden had 51 points and a minus-17 rating, while Modano had 75 points and a minus-7 rating. Minnesota also made the playoffs this season, Vancouver did not.

TENNIS TALK: Livonia Churchill High senior Carrie Cunningham is foregoing a professional career to play in college.

She is expected to choose by the end of this week between Stanford, Florida and UCLA.

"I'm undecided and I'm having a hard time right now," she said.

Cunningham is taking time off from the tennis courts for her high school prom and graduation. She will make a return appearance in June at Wimbledon.

A couple of weeks ago, Cunningham won three qualifying matches and her first-round match in the main draw at the Hardcourts in San Antonio, Texas.

MISC. TALK: It was great to see the Livonia Public Schools endorse a $1 million middle school sports program, but it's distressing to find the terrible shape the Wayne-Westland Schools are in. One can only wonder what lies in store for high school athletic programs in that district next season. A pay-to-play concept would be the last resort to save sports.

I wonder how many cinder tracks are left in the state? I do know that Redford Union still has one.

Is Farmington really the team to beat in the Western Lakes Activities Association baseball race?

I have to applaud the WLAA for cutting down its baseball and softball schedules. Instead of the Monday-Wednesday-Friday format, the league has decided to go Monday-Thursday. Should save on a few pitcher's arms.

Next in line for the Westland John Glenn boys basketball job? Don't expect Redford Thurston's Mike Schuette, who did a fine job last season with the Eagles, to apply even though he teaches in the Wayne-Westland district. Right now he is one of the highest paid prep basketball coaches in the state. The pay scale for coaches in the South Redford Schools is substantially higher than other districts.

John McIntyre, the Catholic Central graduate who started this season for the No. 1-ranked University of Missouri basketball team, was invited to play last weekend in the prestigious Portsmouth (Va.) Invitational, a tournament for NBA scouts.

I've been to the Palace enough times so it wasn't necessary to go see the MHSAA boys basketball finals. Money is why the finals were staged there this year, don't let anybody tell you differently. More seats, more revenue. I just don't know how you can stage a high school event where you charge $5 for admission and $4 for parking. Give me the Breslin Center and Crisler Arena any time. It's just a better atmosphere.

Wayne triumphs; Hardies fans 14 in Warriors win

Reggie Brandon scored in the seventh inning Friday to break a tie and give Wayne Memorial a 2-1 baseball victory over visiting Wyandotte in a Wolverine A League game.

Brandon entered the game in the seventh inning as a pinch runner for Rob Honeycutt, who drew a walk. Brandon quickly stole second and third. He scored on a fielders choice by Scott Goleniak.

Joe Coughlin pitched seven innings for Wayne, giving up three hits and striking out six.

Brent Tapp and Joe Limotte accounted for both of Wayne's hits.

LUTHERAN WESTLAND 11, LUTH. WEST 1: Mike Hardies tallied a school record 14 strikeouts Friday to lead host Lutheran Westland past Detroit Lutheran West.

The Warriors scored four runs in the fifth inning and three in the fourth inning to break open a close game.

Hardies, along with Jon Dean, Jason Zielinski and Eric Schilbe, each collected two hits for the winners.

Clarence Leavings took the loss for Lutheran West.

Frank Garlicki doesn't mince words when evaluating his Redford Catholic Central tennis team.

"We're good," he said. "I think we have a team that can go far at 'state' in all flights. I feel good about No. 3 and 4 singles, and No. 1 and 2 doubles. We're very strong at those positions."

The Shamrocks, perennial state contenders, were ranked No. 5 in Class A in a preseason poll conduct by the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association.

Grosse Pointe South, with " four solid singles players," according to Garlicki, is rated No. 1 followed by East Lansing, Catholic League champion Birmingham Brother Rice and Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Defending state champion Okemos was rated behind CC.

"We're not too young or too old," Garlicki said. "We have only three seniors, but we've got some kids who can play doubles. We should be stronger in doubles than we were last year."

Garlicki's lineup is set after an indoor scrimmage match against Saline back on March 31.

TAKING OVER for the graduated Tony Mikulec at No. 1 singles is junior co-captain Paul Bozyk, who reached the state semifinals at No. 1 doubles last season.

"Paul's a very good competitor," Garlicki said. "I think he can win 80 percent of his matches.

Moving up to No. 2 from No. 3 singles is senior Mark Habekovic. Junior Paul Thieme takes over at No. 3 singles after playing No. 3 doubles last year.

Junior Scott Hazlett remains at No. 4 singles.

The doubles teams should be dynamite, according to the CC coach, with senior co-captains Shawn Matthews and John Sheridan playing the No. 1 spot.

Matthews teamed with Bozyk last year, while Sheridan upgrades his doubles position by one notch.

Junior Jayson Terres and sophomore Chris Matson will team up at No. 2 doubles. Last year they played Nos. 3 and 4, respectively.

At No. 3 doubles will be sophomore Chip Shade and freshman Chris Alonte, who can also play singles.

COACHING THE DOUBLES teams is former CC player Greg Grabowski, who was a part of two state championship doubles teams. He is a senior at Oakland University and will end his collegiate career shortly.

Last year the Shamrocks won their regional, but stumbled slightly at the state Class A meet, finishing eighth. They also hope to reclaim the Catholic League championship won last season by Brother Rice.

"The number five (state ranking) is about where we belong," said Garlicki, who guided the Shamrocks to state titles in 1986 and '87. "The team has come together nicely. We haven't been outside yet because I want to avoid injuries. Today (Friday) was the really first day we've been out."

CC swings into action Saturday, April 21 when it hosts a three-school invitational at Schoolcraft College.

Two Ohio state champions, Columbus Waterton (big schools) and Toledo St. John's (small schools) will provide the competition. The 'B' team meet will be at the Livonia Family Y.

On Monday, April 23 CC meets University of Detroit-Jesuit in a dual meet at Schoolcraft.

THE LADIES Professional Bowlers tour is coming to town. The Seagrams Coolers U.S. Open will take place next month at Satellite Bowl in Dearborn Heights.

The big name bowlers will be there competing for $24,000 of the $120,000 prize fund. This is a premier stop on the ladies tour.

The starting field of 240 bowlers will include some ladies from the Observer and Eccentric coverage area such as Mary Mohacsi and Dawn DiVitis from Livonia, Marilyn Lueck of Canton and Tina Barber of Westland.

Among the professionals, look for names like Lisa Wagner, Aleta Sill (formerly of Westland), Dede Davidson of Southgate and Cheryl Daniels of Detroit.

The defending champion Robin Romeo, along with such stars as Betty Morris, Leanne Barrette, Cindy Coburn, Tish Johnson and Donna Adamek will also be on hand.

Prior to the tournament, there will be the Pro-Am event which anyone can enter.

IN THE PRO-AM, local bowlers can compete in a format of nine-pin no-tap doubles. They will be paired with a new bowler each game.

There are cash prizes in the adult division with a $2,000 first place award.

Youth bowlers are also eligible to play with the pro's, but in a separate division. The Pro-Am will take place May 24-25.

Tickets are also available for spectators starting at $3, $4 and $5 for the qualifying rounds on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Tickets will be $6 for the final qualifying on Monday evening. Tuesday's semifinals will be $5 and for the start of match game competition on Tuesday evening, admission will be $7.

The final two match game rounds are $6 and $8. The nationally televised finals on ESPN will cost $10.

A complete package can be puchased for $50 and are available between now and tournament time at Satellite Bowl.

Lady Spartans fall; C'ville wins

track

Plymouth Canton will be a contender in Western Lakes Activities Association girls track and field this year.

The Chiefs demonstrated that at the outset of the 1990 season Thursday by winning a triangular meet at Livonia Stevenson.

Canton, which has won the Western Division dual-meet championship the last five years, scored 63 points to finish ahead of the host Spartans, who were runners-up in the WLAA last year and are expected to be one of the powers this year, too.

Milford Lakeland won four events, including a pair of relays, but was last with 44 points.

"It was an excellent start," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "It was good to see the way we measured up against a good team and program like Stevenson.

"Overall, the times and distances from top to bottom were excellent for this early in the season and the weather conditions we had today."

Kim Gudeth had an outstanding day for the Chiefs "along with a lot of other kids," Przygodski said. Gudeth contributed to Canton victories in the 3200- and 1600-meter relays and won the open 400 run with a 1:04.5 time.

Amy Smith, Adrienne Garrow, Gudeth and Christie Saffron combined for a 10:40.7 time in the 3200 relay, and Monica Pellow, Jennifer Hartke, Kristy Brugar and Gudeth finished the 1600 in 4:32.8.

Canton's Jessica Souter won the long jump, reaching a distance of 15-5½, and freshman Stephanie Gray won the high jump at a height of 4-10.

The Chiefs had a strong finish, too. Besides winning the last relay, Michelle Dean won the 200 dash in 29.2 and Smith the 3200 run in 12:33.5.

"We scored in every event with the exception of the 400 and 800 relays where we botched handoffs," Przygodski said. "I was pleased with our overall strength and showing. It's early and we look to improve on (the handoffs)."

Stevenson won four events, with Jessann Martin winning two. She threw the discus 103-1 and the shot put 33-2½. Lisa Christensen won the 300 hurdles with a time of 50.3, and Tracy Clark broke the ribbon in the 800 run, coming across in 2:43.0.

Lakeland's victories came in the 100 hurdles, 1600 run and sprint (400 and 800) relays.

Canton will host for a four-team meet Wednesday. The Chiefs will compete against Redford Bishop Borgess, Ypsilanti and Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher.

LIVONIA CLARENCEVILLE opened its girls track season Friday with a 65-45 victory over visiting Dearborn Heights Annapolis.

Roberta Wiggle had four first places for the Lady Trojans, including three in open events. She won the long jump (15-2), the 800 run (2:41.6) and the 100 dash (13.2).

She also ran the leadoff leg of the 1600 relay, combining with Tricia Wiggle, Michelle Sroka and Jennifer Nunnery for a 4:49.0 time.

Tricia Wiggle and Nunnery also had individual wins. Wiggle was first in the 400 run (1:10.9) and Nunnery in the high jump (4-5). Clarenceville's Jennifer Loukargarvi was the 200 dash winner in 29.3.

The Lady Trojans won three of the relays. Chris Zupanic, Angela Mangers, Sue Tatom and Julie Stoliker had the best 400 time at 1:00.02, and Tricia Wiggle, Nunnery, Stoliker and Loukargarvi finished the 800 relay in 2:01.0.

● WOLVES WIN 2

The Michigan Wolves '75, an under-15 boys soccer team, moved up an age group to capture a pair of indoor titles during the second session at Total Soccer West and Central.

The Central title was secured when the Wolves tallied an 8-1 victory over the Troy Turbos. The Wolves clinched the West crown with a 4-0 triumph over the Livonia Strikers.

The Wolves, members of the Livonia YMCA Select Soccer Program, are coached by Bruce and Brian Thomas, along with Dan O'Shea.

● 3-ON-3 CHAMPION

Redford's Ann-Marie Abundis, a 21-year-old senior at the University of Michigan, was a member of the state championship squad in the Schick on-3 women's basketball tournament held last week at the Palace during an intermission segment of the Detroit Pistons-Charlotte Hornets NBA game.

Abundis, a graduate of Dearborn Divine Child High, was joined by U-M teammates Nancy Sassack (Southgate Aquinas), Kim Edelman (Lakeville, Minn.) and Kim Sigmund (Palo Alto, Calif.).

The Michigan squad defeated Grand Valley in the final after winning intramural competition at U-M.

Abundis, a sports management major, has competed in the state finals four consecutive years.

● SOFTBALL LEAGUES

● Girls ages 16-18 interested in playing slo-pitch softball this summer should call Larry Bowerman at 455-6610 (days) or 459-0077 (evenings). The team will compete in league play and tournaments.

● Sign-ups for the Suburban Senior Softball League (55 years and up) will be 1 p.m. Saturday, April 17, at the Livonia Senior Center, Farmington and Five Mile roads. (Practice begins in April, league play begins May.)

A new men and over league has also been formed.

For more information, call Mike Palizzi, 478-3820.

Triple play spurs Borgess sweep

Softball victories have been hard to come by the past few years at Redford Bishop Borgess, but on Thursday the Spartans opened the 1990 season by sweeping a double-header from Detroit Benedictine at Korvette Field, 20-3 and 16-3.

The Spartans, in fact, pulled off a triple play in the nightcap.

"We're really coming along," said first-year coach Bob Denstedt. "I'm really proud of them, especially with the weather we had. I think we have a pretty good team."

Although it was not quite Catholic League Central Division competition, Borgess did win impressively, invoking the mercy rule in both games.

In the opener, senior right-hander Cathy Alcala allowed one hit over four innings, while striking out 10 and walking five.

Borgess collected 11 hits, paced by junior third baseman Kyra Woodard, who went 2-for-2 with two RBI. Senior shortstop Teri Renker scored four runs and had a hit and three walks.

In a 12-run fourth-inning outburst, Amy Cox doubled in a pair of runs and Lisa Loss contributed a bunt two-run single.

Borgess had 12 hits in the second game, led by Mary Clancy's 2-for-2 effort, including a three-run triple. She finished with five RBI.

Sophomore right-hander Adrienne Kroll go the victory. She struck out six, walked three and scattered four hits over four innings.

In the third inning, freshman second baseman Stacey Jolly caught a pop fly, and doubled off the runners at first and third for a triple play.

Winning pitcher Christy Pydyn helped her own cause with two hits and three RBI. She worked five innings, allowing five hits and two walks while striking out nine.

Kristen Strang contributed two hits, while Sarah Love added three RBI.

LADYWOOD 10-10, DIVINE CHILD 5-0: Livonia Ladywood opened its season impressively Friday, sweeping visiting Dearborn Divine Child in a twin bill.

The Blazers out-hit the Falcons 12-10 in the opener as sisters Krista and Rachelle Campeau combined for six hits and three RBI. Lisa Blelenda and Michelle Wilson added two hits each.

Junior pitcher Staci Kowalczyk, the victor in the opener, scattered 10 hits, walked seven and fanned seven in seven innings.

She tossed a three-hit shutout (five innings) nightcap. Kowalczyk struck out four and walked two.

Wilson and Kim Supron each contributed two hits and two RBI. Andrea Crichton also had two hits.

Divine Child fell to 2-2 overall.

LUTH. WESTLAND 17, LUTHERAN WEST 6: Lutheran Westland took five innings (mercy rule) Friday to dump visiting Detroit Lutheran West in the season opener for both teams.

CLARENCEVILLE 15, ANNAPOLIS 7: In its opener on Friday, host Livonia Clarenceville unleashed a 17-hit barrage to bury Dearborn Heights Annapolis.

Junior center fielder Rhonda Saunder led the way with a solo homer, triple and two singles in six at-bats. She knocked in two runs.

Other hitting heroes for the Trojans included winning pitcher Kari Watson, who was 2-for-4 with a triple; Angie Stevens, 3-for-4; Kelly Kelbert, 2-for-5; Danielle Rose, 2-for-4 and three RBI; and Christie Hunter, 2-for-3 and two RBI.

Watson went the distance, allowing four hits and 14 walks. She struck out five.

DEARBORN 13, CHURCHILL 9: On Friday, visiting Dearborn outslugged host Livonia Churchill in the season opener for both schools.

Dearborn collected 16 hits off losing pitcher Marilee Grom, who walked two and struck out four.

"Errors killed us," said Churchill coach Frank Bremmer. "The kids hit the ball (eight hits), but errors hurt us. I think we played a super game except for a couple of errors. We might have had opening day jitters, but I think we'll have a good season."

Churchill's top hitter was Jackie Hebert, who went 3-for-5 with three steals. Vickie Lucas and Heather Stevenson added two hits apiece.

Hebestreit pilots Stevenson club

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Softball coach Chuck Hebestreit hopes some of the same success he enjoyed at Livonia Franklin will rub off at rival Stevenson High this season.

Hebesteit, who returns to coaching varsity softball after an nine-year absence, inherits a young Spartan team from Patricia Solarz, who resigned at after last season.

"It's tough for me to judge . . . I can't gauge anything until we've played a few games," Hebestreit said. "But I think we can be comparable to those teams I had at Franklin."

Hebestreit won three Northwest Suburban League crowns at Franklin and finished second three other times during his seven years (1975-81). His Patriot teams compiled an overall record of 83-42.

"Our pitching is adequate," he said. "If we can hit and run the bases, and play good defense, I think we can be competitive."

The Spartans are coming off a 6-19 season.

"Defense, I'm told, was a sore point last year, but it was a young team and it's still a relatively young team with only two starting seniors."

Among the leading returnees are senior catcher Ann Nascimento and senior shortstop Kelli Miller.

The pitching duties will be handled by junior Kelly Cotter and sophomore Nicki Italia, who can also play third.

Among the promising newcomers: Lori Shingledecker and Gina Renko, a pair of freshman outfielders; Molly Hussey, a junior outfielder; and Alexis Pearce, a sophomore outfielder.

"All we have to do is have a game to see where we are," said Hebestreit.

The Spartans had a pair of non-leaguers called off last week because of the weather and will try it again Tuesday at home in a make-up against Redford Union. (Game time is 3:30 p.m.)

REDFORD ST. AGATHA, under second-year coach Bob Sowden, hopes to improve on its 9-9 record of a year ago.

Sowden believes the Aggies can challenge for the Catholic League C-D Division title, particularly after the departure of ace pitcher Jill Klein (Florida State), who led Waterford Our Lady of the Lakes to the Catholic League C-D Division title and into the state Class D semifinals.

"We're hyped up to have a good year," Sowden said. "Some people might say we're in a rebuilding year, but this is it. Without Klein, it should open up the league."

The Aggies lost Rachel Isbell, Colleen Rooks and Amy Rau to graduation, but return seven players, including All-Catholic C-D Division pitcher Laura Rakowski, a senior.

Rounding out the starting lineup will be three freshmen: shortstop Laura Williams, second baseman Amy Winn and freshman first baseman Laura Venning.

"I think we're good defensively and pitching is not a problem with Laura (Rakowski) back, but we've got to score some runs," Sowden said. "We've got to score some runs."

Chargers trip 'A' kings

Livonia Churchill knocked off defending state Class A girls soccer champion Troy Athens, 2-0, in a non-league encounter Wednesday night.

The host Chargers scored during the opening minute of play as Mechelle Brazin booted in a corner kick from Nikki Johnson.

Churchill's Lori Place then scored an insurance goal with three minutes left in the match to secure the win.

"I'm pleased with the way we played," said Churchill coach Nick O'Shea, whose team is 1-0-1 overall. "I thought we had a few more chances, although we missed them. Last year we had trouble scoring, but at least we scored in this game. And our defense was holding tough."

One of the keys to the victory was the play of Fran Priebe, who helped keep Athens All-Stater Lisa Grace off the scoreboard. Sweeper Stephanie Speen also played a key role, according to O'Shea.

"They sent up an extra attacker in the second half and they had a couple of good shot," said the Churchill coach. "It took some time for us to adjust."

NORTHVILLE 7, LADYWOOD 1: On Wednesday, host Northville scored three times in the second half to down Livonia Ladywood (1-1-1) in a non-league game.

Nicki Hill paced the victorious Mustangs, last season's Class A runners-up, with two goals.

HARRISON 3, REDFORD UNION 0: Senior Jenay Willer scored twice and sophomore Rachel added one Wednesday as Farmington Harrison blanked host Redford Union (0-1-1).

Goalie Shanie Kallen posted the shutout as the Hawks outshot the Panthers, 15-5.

Harrison ended a long dry spell after going winless in 1989.

Be careful how you treat those Easter Eggs

Lois Thieleke
home economist, Cooperative Extension Service

Foods don't make people sick, bacteria does.

Any raw food of animal origin, meat, poultry, raw milk, fish and eggs may carry salmonella.

This bacteria can survive to cause food poisoning if these specific foods are not thoroughly cooked.

That means, no more servings of "Sunny Side Up" eggs. Instead, cook them until well done to be sure the salmonella bacteria is destroyed.

It is also important to stress Easter Egg safety. Decorated eggs are typically hard-cooked but many people abuse them by storing them improperly at room temperature.

Thus the eggs become a haven of bacteria and have potential to create food-borne illnesses.

Food safety starts when you buy the eggs from your local grocery store. The Federal and State inspectors have taken the guess work out of choosing a bad egg.

The eggs are inspected and graded by size for us. However, no inspector is able to detect if salmonella bacteria is present, but the potential is there.

Just remember that this bacteria is destroyed by heat, so cook eggs thoroughly and don't eat raw or undercooked eggs.

Before you place your carton of eggs in the shopping cart, open the carton and visually inspect the eggs.

Only buy ones that are clean and uncracked. Then be sure to refrigerate the eggs as soon as possible.

The best quality of eggs are maintained when refrigerated in the original carton.

If not, the porous egg shells pick up strong odors that exist in the refrigerator or they may lose moisture through the shell if they are left uncovered in the egg tray provided in most refrigerators.

REFRIGERATED RAW eggs in the shell need to be used within five weeks and hard-cooked eggs in the shell or peeled must be used within one week.

As the egg ages, the white clears and spreads thin when broken into a dish. A blood spot in a raw egg is harmless.

The next step in food safety is to cook hard-cooked eggs properly. Place the raw eggs in a pot of cold water. Heat the eggs over medium heat until the water boils. Immediately reduce the heat to keep the water simmering and simmer for 20 minutes. Never boil eggs. The dark ring that forms around the yolk after hard cooking is harmless. It's an interaction between iron and sulfur in the egg.

Air-cool the eggs in their shells in an open container in the refrigerator. Water cooling is not recommended because of the possibility that germs in the water can penetrate the egg shells.

After the eggs are cooked and cooled, you can decorate them with pure food colorings or dyes formulated with food-grade pigments.

Decorated hard-cooked eggs should be stored in the refrigerator before decorating, after decorating and after the Easter Egg hunt. Decorated eggs should be eaten within two or three days if they were out of the refrigerator a total of two hours or less for coloring, hunting and displaying. If the two-hour limit is a problem, you may want to color two sets of eggs, one for hunting and one for displaying. Be sure to label each set clearly.

EGGS ARE sometimes called "nature's pre-packaged convenience food," but there are some additional tips for egg usage. Keep the heat down as high temperatures and overcooking toughens eggs.

If you plan to separate yolks and whites, do so as soon as you remove eggs from the refrigerator. Cold yolks are less likely to break. Egg whites whip to a larger volume at room temperature.

Either medium or large eggs may be used in most standard recipes. To cut down the cholesterol, substitute two whites for every whole egg.

Cutting out all egg yolks may make some baked goods and other dishes dry and tasteless, so use two whites plus one whole egg instead of two eggs.

Keep cold foods cold and hot foods hot. Just because something is cooked does not mean it can't contain bacteria. Cleanliness and proper storage temperatures are the answer to safe eggs and a safer food supply.

Apples popular since Garden of Eden

AP — From Adam and Eve to Johnny Appleseed to your family, apples have delighted all who sampled them.

Store large quantities of apples in a cold (34 to 40 degrees F), moist place.

VARIETIES

- Red Delicious: Named in 1894 when a nurseryman exclaimed, "My that's delicious." Sweet and juicy. Best for snacking; poor for baking. Available year-round.
- Golden Delicious: No kin to Red Delicious. Slightly elongated; sweet and juicy. An all-purpose apple, great for snacking, cooking and baking. They discolor slowly when cut and make wonderful applesauce without added sugar. Available September to June.
- Granny Smith: Maria Smith nurtured first seedling in the 1800s. Mildly tart. Best for snacking; good for baking. Available year-round.
- Jonathan: Deep red; mildly tart, rich flavor. Versatile apple, excellent for snacking, pies and other baking. Available September to April.
- McIntosh: First apple tree planted by John McIntosh about 1811. Two-toned red and green. All-purpose apple. Available September to June.
- Red Rome (Rome Beauty): Named for an apple-growing area in Ohio, not Italy. Slightly tart. Best for baking. Available October to August.
- Winesap: Granddaddy of American apples. Winelike flavor. All-purpose apple. Available November to July.

STORING

- Store large quantities of apples in a cold (34 to 40 degrees F), moist place. Small quantities of fruit should be stored in a plastic bag in the refrigerator away from the freezer section. Be sure the bag has holes to allow the fruit to breathe.

APPLE ARITHMETIC

- 1 pound apples equals 4 small or 3 medium or 2 large apples.
- 1 pound apples makes 3 cups diced or 2¾ cups sliced apples.
- 1 bushel apples equals 126 medium apples or 18 to 20 quarts of canned or frozen apple slices or 16 to 20 quarts of applesauce.
- 2 pounds of apples makes enough sliced apples for one 9-inch pie.

NUTRITION

- A medium apple contains about 80 calories, vitamins A and C, soluble fiber, and no fat.

Adapting to human intrusion means animals have to live in some strange places — even under a car's hood.

nature

Timothy Nowicki

Man's encroachment on the natural world has been relatively recent, compared to the length of time most animals have been around.

Changes on the land by man have been broad based and rapid. Too rapid for many animals. They have not been able to adapt to loss of habitat, intrusions of man and foreign products such as chemicals.

Woodland caribou that once lived in Michigan need large expanses of forest. Prairie chickens need undisturbed, open fields in which to survive. These are but two of several animals that cannot tolerate changes brought about by man.

SEVERAL ANIMALS, though, have adapted well to man's intrusions. Their requirements for survival were general and plastic enough before man arrived, that man's modification to the land were adapted to quickly.

A small, insect-eating bird known as a chimney swift once nested on the vertical walls of hollow sycamore trees. Today, chimneys are substituted for trees.

Animals with narrow food or habitat requirements are not as likely to fare well. Omnivorous animals that eat both plant and animal matter, like raccoons, opossums and skunk can find food around man more easily than animals that eat only other animals. Coupled with a nocturnal activity cycle, omnivorous animals incur another advantage for their survival.

Loss of natural habitat forces these animals to seek food and shelter wherever they can. This may often be an attic, or under a deck or some other man-made structure.

NOT LONG ago, I went to change the spark plugs of my car. In order to get at them I had to remove the air cleaner. When I removed the air cleaner, I saw several pieces of acorn shell around the carburetor. This same thing happened when I left my car outside an old farmhouse I lived in while going to college.

White-footed mice seek shelter from the cold winter in garages and find the warmth of the engine an added benefit. While staying warm, they also enjoy eating.

The other day, I started the car and drove a mile or so down the road and had to stop. When I stopped, I saw a mouse run from the direction of the car. I think I caught him napping and when he got a chance, he headed for good old terra firma.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

Medicaid's changes on her mind

gerontology

A. Jolayne Farrell

Q. My husband is in a nursing home. He is on Medicaid. I still live in our home. What are the new laws concerning the amount of money I can keep to maintain my home and myself?

A. As of Jan. 1 the amount of income allowed a person living in the community who has a spouse in a Medicaid nursing home is $815 per month. In addition, Medicaid has also increased the amount of countable assets, such as Certificates of Deposit, Money Markets, stocks, bonds and savings accounts that the spouse remaining in the community may keep. For those nursing home residents admitted on or after Sept. 30 their spouses may keep the greater of: the first $12,000 of the couple's countable assets or one-half of the countable assets but not more than $60,000.

As a result of the change in income limitations, the Patient Pay Amount, which the nursing home resident pays to the nursing home, will be lowered. In order to change the Patient Pay Amount, the spouse must make his or her request, in writing, to the Department of Social Services.

For additional information or assistance call Citizens for Better Care, 962-5968, Monday-Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. or toll free 1-800-284-0046. When you call it will be helpful for the operator to know if your spouse is presently in a nursing home and the name and location of the nursing home.

Q. My elderly neighbor has cancer. He is on a fixed income and has to spend a large portion of his money on medical supplies. Can anyone help him?

A. The American Cancer Society will provide durable medical equipment such as hospital beds, wheel chairs, commodes, over the bed tables, etc. and medical supplies such as blue pads, sheepskin or egg crate mattresses, and dressings for cancer patients. Some of the supplies are covered by Medicare; however, there is no direct charge to the patient. The society also helps women who have had mastectomies and are on a limited income to obtain a proper fitting prosthesis. Limited transportation to hospitals for chemo or radiation therapy is available in Oakland and Macomb counties.

Support groups are offered for the patient, family and friends in various locations throughout Oakland, Wayne and Macomb counties. There is also a program called "Reach to Recovery." Mastectomy patients, through their doctor's request, are visited in the hospital following surgery by trained personnel to help the patient through this difficult time. In Oakland County home visits are possible without a doctor's order.

For additional information call the following offices: Oakland County, 557-5353, Wayne County, 425-6830, Macomb County, 758-7800. All offices are open Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

RHEUMATOID ARTHRITIS & THE LUNGS

Since rheumatoid arthritis affects more of the body than the bones and joints, a better designation of this condition might be rheumatoid disease.

For example: rheumatoid 'arthritis' can cause inflammation to the lungs. The lungs have a covering like a single layer of plastic wrap, and are similar to the cells that line joints. The cells lining the lungs can become irritated by the same stimuli that affect joints. When inflammed, the lung lining cells impinge on nerve endings particularly upon deep breathing.

You become aware that a problem exists when taking a breath results in sharp chest pain. You may think you are having a heart attack, but the pain continues at rest and decreases when you walk, an indication that the pain is not cardiac in origin. Connecting your lung pain with your arthritis is difficult since lung involvement may occur when the rheumatoid arthritis is not flaring, and the joints are not particularly inflammed.

Steroids are the treatment of choice for rheumatoid inflammation of the lung. This therapy provides rapid relief and prevents a recurence; no other medicine gives equal results in such a timely manner.

Summer day camp at UM-D

Nature walks, art, music, movies and crafts highlights the activities to be presented at the summer day camp for young children, sponsored by the University of Michigan-Dearborn's child development center.

Three two-week sessions are scheduled: July 9-20; July 23 to Aug. 3; and Aug. 6-17. Sessions meet Monday-Friday.

Full day schedules, 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. are $190. Half-day schedules, 9 a.m. to noon, are $105. Full day enrollees have schedule priority. Eariler and later hours can be arranged.

The day camp is taught by certified teachers with a specialization in early childhood.

Daily activities included guided walks through UM-D's Environmental Study Area, as well as science projects, music, dancing and exercise. Children will also create a personal memory book of camp experiences to take home.

Registration forms are available by calling the child development center, 593-5424. Registration is limited to 16 children per session.

The center occupies the former guest cottages at the Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane.

Fewer calories doesn't mean less fat

consumer mailbag

Q. I've been eating more salads recently. How much better are the reduced-calorie and lite-type dressings?

A. You'll be surprised to learn that all those virtuous vegetables you're crunching are being swamped in more calories, fat and sodium than you need or want -- even the "reduced-calorie" and "lite" varieties.

Two tablespoons (a typical serving amount - not the one tablespoon serving listed on the bottle) can have as many calories as a candy bar! For example, if you use one 12-ounce bottle of dressing in a week and 9 out of 10 people do, by the way, half of your total fat allowance may be coming from the dressing alone. Two tablespoons of regular dressing contain from 10 to 16 grams of fat.

According to the FDA, a salad dressing can only use the term "light" or "reduced-calorie" if it has at least one-third fewer calories than the regular version. Fewer calories does not mean less fat or sodium, however. Many low calorie versions contain as much fat as the brand's regular variety.

Most "light" variety dressings are even more confusing because the term "light" (in any spelling) is not as closely monitored as the "reduced-calorie" labeling. Most "light" dressings are really reduced-calorie dressings in disguise.

Two rules of thumb, according to recommendations from Nutrition Action, to help you sort out the dressing dilemma: One, look for dressings that have no more than two grams of fat per two tablespoon (one ounce) serving. This isn't difficult if the dressing has nutrition labeling on it. If it makes a "reduced-calorie" or "low sodium" claim, it must have hutrition labeling, otherwise, it's the manufacturer's choice.

If there's no nutrition labeling, check the ingredients label. All ingredients must be listed in descending order by wright. So, if the ingredient listed first is oil, you can be pretty safe in assuming that it's got more than two grams of fat per serving.

Two, look for dressings that have no more than 300 milligrams (mg) of sodium per two tablespoon servings. Unfortunately, the ingredients list isn't going to give you any help with sodium and without nutritional labeling, you'd be guessing. Most, however, have more than the 400 mg. of sodium per serving especially the non-creamy Italian varieties.

Remember, don't assume lower fat also means lower sodium -- it usually doesn't. Some lower fat brands have a lot of sodium while some super fatty varieties have less than 300 mg. per serving.

The Consumer Mailbag answers your questions. Address mail to The Consumer Mailbag, Concern Detroit; One Keunedy Square, 4th Floor, Detroit, Mi 48226.

Bowlers raise funds to feed the homeless

Strike Against Hunger, a fund-raiser for the area's homeless, is continuing through Sunday, April 15, at bowling centers throughout Oakland and western Wayne County.

Bowlers receive a free game by bringing canned goods to local bowling centers.

The goal is to collect more than 1.5 million cans of food for Gleaners Community Food Bank of Greater Detroit.

Western Wayne and Oakland County sites include:

- Super Bowl, 45100 Ford Road, Canton.
- Bel-Aire Lanes, 24001 Orchard Lake Road, Farmington.
- Drakeshire Lanes, 35000 Grand River, Farmington Hills.
- Silver Lanes, 5651 Middlebelt, Garden City.
- Wonderland Lanes, 28455 Plymouth Road, Livonia
- Woodland Lanes, 33775 Plymouth Road, Livonia.
- Town & Country Lanes, 1100 S. Wayne Road, Westland.
- Westland Bowl, 5940 N. Wayne Road, Westland.

A few scents

Magda Moursi certainly knows her scents. She can explain how the sandalwood tree functions as a parasite, how Captain Cook's Australian settlers used the leaves of the "teatree" in lieu of traditional tea and the characteristics attributed to the various oils. You see, those are all part of the work Moursi does. Find out her aromatic work on Page 8D.

Shins are an easy moving target for slashing sticks when the floor hockey action gets fast and furious.

Wall-to-wall

Floor hockey: It's fast and furious at EMU

By Pat Schulte
staff writer

Take a rectangular utility gym with rounded corners, throw in some lumber, a puck and a bunch of savage college kids and you have the ingredients for a furious intramural activity that pits student against student in a battle of aggression release.

Floor hockey is one of the most popular and definitely the rowdiest intramural sport at Eastern Michigan University. It's expected. At the team managers meeting, Tom Vocke, the court supervisor, said, "If you want a non-contact sport, try modern dance."

Certain steps are taken, though, to throttle the aggression and ensure player safety. First off, all players must wear a helmet. And two student officials watch over the action, calling penalties just like a National Hockey League official would.

"We allow checking, but you can't put someobody's imprint on the cement walls," said Vocke.

Still, as in any contact sport, the occasional fisticuffs break out.

"Shoves lead to dropped gloves and we tell players just to stand back and watch," Vocke said.

EMU doesn't have an intramural ice hockey program, so many of the students there with an ice hockey background show up for floor hockey. The new ones are surprised at the fierce action of floor hockey.

"IT'S A LOT tougher than I thought it would be," said Derek Delacourt, 18, of Westland. "It's a lot more choppy (stick swinging) and the puck tends to bounce a lot more. Also, there's not a high price on passing."

The scoring average is considerably higher than an NHL game, sounding more like a football game. And with NHL-sized goals, a no mercy rule and three eight-minute periods, a good team can beat a lousy team by 20-30 goals.

The utility gym that the games are held in looks as if it was made specifically for floor hockey. About 80 feet long and 30 feet wide, the rectangular room features rounded corners to keep the puck traveling easier.

The puck itself is a light, hollow plastic version of a regulation puck that "leaves welts but doesn't break bones," said Vocke.

"The old puck we used had iron pellets in it . . . one broke a goalie's nose right through his mask," he said.

The sticks are required to have a plastic blade attached to where the wooden blade used to be. This protects the players from splinters, yet lends itself to the sport like a scalpel to a surgeon.

Injuries are at a premium and the players accept it.

"Last year we had a wide variety of cuts and stitches," said Vocke. "The worst happened in a fight when one punch opened a guy up for 18 stitches."

BUT A MAJORITY of the bloodshed happens below the shins.

"If they want to slash and take chunks out of each other's shins, that's fine," Vocke said. "We just tell them to keep the sticks down."

"It gets a little out of hand," said Brian Harlow, 18, of Westland, whose shins were dripping blood after the game. "They dropped the puck and this 'hack' (an inexperienced player who just runs around swinging his stick at anything) cracked me right across the shin."

Sounds wild, doesn't it? Sure.

'If you want a non-contact sport, try modern dance.'
— Tom Vocke, court supervisor

Even the helmetless student officials who are enclosed with eight stick-swinging players, find the action amusing.

"We just try to keep the action going as fast as we can," said student official Jeff Thomas, 18, of Farmington. "There's never a dull moment."

That's for sure. Take the time an official named "Bob" got popped with a high stick.

"You could hear it CRACK all the wway across the hall," said Vocke. "Bob had his nose broken and wasn't even going to kick the guy out of the game until he said the magic word."

Besides blatant high sticking and excessive rough play, the only thing Vocke and his officials do not tolerate is swearing.

"I just eject them from the game and tell them how it will be from now on," said student official Domenic Serra, 18, of Croswell.

EMU'S FLOOR hockey penalty system works on the same concept as the soccer red and yellow card system. For fighting or very abusive language, the guilty party is given a red card and suspended for a game. The yellow card is for slight official slander . . . two yellows equal one red.

Guys are getting cut up and loving it. Even the guy who wears the most padding, the goalie, gets his share of welts.

"I get it around the wrists," said Pat Boyle, 19, of Redford. "When I smother the puck with my gloves, guys always try to chop it out."

Of the 32 teams that participate in the floor hockey program, they're spilt up into the residence, independent and fraternity leagues. A women's league and co-rec league are offered, but "nobody shows up," Vocke said. And the most unruly of all the leagues is the frat league.

"They bring all their people (and they have to pack them like sardines in a small room at one end of the court to watch)," Vocke said. "And when a scrape breaks out, the next thing you know, there's 30 guys piling out of the stands to join in. And the frat guys are the biggest complainers, too. They're like talking to a 5-year-old when they're mad."

It's fast, furious and sometimes bloody. And they love their floor hockey at EMU.

'Designing' shoppers find best for less

By Charlene Mitchell
special writer

Gone are the days when resale clothing shops catered mainly to mothers looking for inexpensive outfits for their kids or previously owned maternity wear.

The sale of used clothing has come out of the closet. Forget the neighborhood garage sale. It's out in the open and attracting buyers whose incomes allow them to afford higher prices, but prefer to save.

The latest addition to the resale business scene is Encore Encore in Farmington. While most resale shops locate in free standing buildings, Encore Encore has opted for a mall, which automatically attracts other shoppers who may not have an interest in shopping in a resale store.

"People's attitudes about resale shops have changed," said owner Lois Griffin. "When I was a child, buying used clothing insinuated that you were poor and most of the time the merchandise was available only at rummage sales."

'When I was a child, buying used clothing insinuated that you were poor and most of the time the merchandise was available only at rummage sales.'
— Lois Griffin

One thing that is drastically different about the resale stores of the '90s is that the merchandise is practically new in most instances and a peek at the designer labels lets you know immediately that these duds came from some pretty high class closets.

"We have some spectacular evening dresses that cost anywhere from $300 to $1,000 when they were purchased new and we're selling them from $65 to $150," said Griffin as she carefully arranges the silks, chiffons and sequined pieces on the rack inside the store.

A TWO-PIECE Calvin Klein pantsuit was one of the first ensembles scooped up by a Livonia resident. Perfect for her college-bound daughter, the camel colored wool suit was marked $68.50, about $250 less than when it was new.

The Saks Fifth Avenue, Stanley Blacker, Missoni, Yves Saint Laurent, Gucci and Vittadini labels are

ALTERNATIVE VIEWING

'Cinema' deserves honor

By John Monaghan
special writer

A beam of light shoots from the sculpted lion's mouth that frames the projection booth window. Look at it long enough and the lion comes to life, breathing fire.

For Toto, the 7-year-old hero of "Cinema Paradiso," the movies have this powerful, mesmerizing effect. Director Guiseppe Tornatore's reflections on a lifelong love affair with the movies was quickly booked into the Maple Theatre after winning the Academy Award for best foreign film. It's a touching tearjerker, full of memorable characters.

In a tiny Italian village shortly after World War II, young Toto falls asleep as an altar boy but absolutely adores the movies. He watches curiously as his puritanical church pastor screens upcoming movies privately, signaling the projectionist with a bell for the scenes that must be cut.

As the film unreels for an audience the following weekend, a lover's embrace leads to an awkward cut and an entirely different scene. The villagers don't see a screen kiss until the mid 1950s.

Toto's interest in movies grows into an obsession. When the projectionist (wonderfully played by Philippe Noiret) almost perishes in a fire caused by the films' flammable silver nitrate,, Toto gets his chance to run the machine. The relationship that develops between the boy and the old man, now blind, becomes the most powerful part of the film.

Three actors play Toto at various stages of his life. Salvatore Vascio fares best as the young boy. Later, the film dwells on the teenage Toto's quest for a beautiful young woman only to be separated from her by the military conscription.

Most fascinating, "Cinema Paradiso" paints a vivid picture of the power of movies. The rowdy audience at the Cinema Paradiso gets the same enjoyement out of the movies as the blacony denizens of "Children of Paradise" did from the theater. Glimpses of films from Ford, Visconti, Renoir and Chaplin also appear on the screen.

Director Tornatore isn't the first filmmaker to compose a love letter to the movies. In many ways, however, he has written an obituary for the local moviehouse, showing it in the halicon days (when it was a village's sole and very popular entertainment) to decay and demolition in the impersonal age of videotape.

Philippe Noiret plays the projectionist and Salvatore Cascio the young Toto in Guiseppe Tornatore's Academy Award-winning "Cinema Pardiso."

Kevin Kline is bright spot in 'I Love You to Death'

the movies

Dan Greenberg

The first third of "I Love You to Death" (C-, R, 96 minutes) shows great promise.

Pizzeria owner Joey Boca (Kevin Kline) is rendered with masterful strokes. Kline's portrayal exudes joy of life and living as this incredible and very happy man makes pizza, fixes plumbing in the apartment building he owns and makes love to half dozen or so women every week — all the while maintaining a respectable family life.

He has two slightly overweight and undistinguished but generally acceptable children, Carla (Alisan Porter) and Dominic (Jon Kasdan), and a very funny Yugoslavian mother-in-law, Nadja (Joan Plowright).

A nephew-like relationship is maintained with the pizzeria's busboy, Devo (River Phoenix), a slightly vacant and out-of-place hippie-type spiritualist.

But most of all, Joey has a wife, Rosalie (Tracey Ullman), who loves Joey so much that scenarist John Kostmayer and director Lawrence Kasdan would have us believe she doesn't notice Joey's numerous infidelities. Even when Devo tells her what her eyes have seen, she passes it off as "all men look at girls."

Ullman's slightly ditzy, old-world woman living in and adapting to America is more than one could (or should) expect given the writing and directing. Rosalie's character, however, as written, is so unbelievable that NOW and other feminist groups ought to protest the insulting stereotype.

When Rosalie finally confronts irrefutable evidence of Joey's infidelity, her bumbling, confused and indecisive attempts at revenge wipe out any hope for an entertaining film.

The last two-thirds are muddled and murky and the impossible plot complications are solved by a matriarchal morality as unpleasant and offensive as the macho-masculinity with which the film begins.

To make matters worse, the pacing falters so badly that even the promise, however male-oriented, of the film's first third is never fulfilled. It's a shame to waste so many fine performances on a weak script interpreted by such poor direction.

Another disappointment this week is the mediocre "Crazy People" (C-, R, 90 minutes) which opens Wednesday, April 11. Emory Leeson (Dudley Moore) goes round the bend while working in the Drucker Ad Agency. He is struck with a novel idea, advertisements should tell the truth. Naturally he is rapidly committed to a mental institution, Bennington Sanitarium, where he quickly gains the confidence of a number of disturbed individuals.

Not unexpectedly, in this murky fable about who is crazy and who isn't — and how nuts advertising is — Emory's honesty campaign catches fire and the nasty ad agency boss, Charles Drucker (J.T. Walsh), must depend on Emory and all the mental patients up at Bennington Sanitarium.

None of the relationships or situations are clearly developed. Certainly Leeson's instant appeal to the Bennington inmates goes unexplained while his romance with Kathy Burgess (Daryl Hannah) is similarly under-developed. As with so much of "Crazy People," audiences are forced to take it or leave it. I suggest the latter. This clever idea falls flat as a one-joke film with a great deal missing. There is, and should be, much more to a story about life and love and people and advertising.

"The First Power" (D, R, 95 minutes) is an unpleasantly violent story of a serial killer, Patrick Channing (Jeff Kober), who is executed for his crimes but his spirit returns and possesses other bodies in a quest for revenge against the detective, Russell Logan (Lou Diamond Phillips), who put him away in the first place.

In his mission to rid the world of Channing's evil spirit, Logan enlists the aid of a psychic, Tess Scaton (Tracy Griffith), who conveniently enough is the film's romantic involvement. Sound trite? Right.

After the first 30 minutes, the tension evaporates and "The First Power" is bloody and inconsistent as it meanders through a variety of repetitious fights between Logan and the various bodies Channing's spirit inhabits.

Ever listen to a fairly bright kid make up a story to explain why he missed curfew — the kind where the facts and events fit neatly on the surface but the whole story collapses with one or two timely questions.?

"Impulse" (D+, 120 minutes) is a lot like that. Theresa Russell's emotionally complex character and performance trip over bulky, unbelievable plot devices. This thriller about a female undercover cop who gets caught on the wrong side of murder by being in the wrong place at the wrong time is overlong and unrelentingly dark.

So dark in fact that director Sondra Locke rarely shows any character's full face unless the situation absolutely demands it. The technique is interesting at first, frustrating for a while and irritating in the end. Kind of like the film as a whole. There are some entertaining and suspenseful moments but Russell and Jeff Fahey can't save enough of "Impulse" to make it worth while.

When "Cry-Baby" (B-, PG-13,) Johnny Depp steps into focus the female audience swoons, as in any heart-throb, teen-age movie. After the first few minutes, however, viewers soon discover that with its spirit of the '50s, "Cry-Baby" has potential as a cult classic.

The plot is altogether common but director John Waters is determined to make everything else fantasy in this world of teenage juvenile delinquents who call themselves "drapes" who are juxtaposed to scholastic-minded, clean-cut "squares."

Johnny Depp, in the title role, is a drape who falls in love with Allison (Amy Locane), a square. His challenge is to win her love and keep it. As the plot develops, wild and bizarre characters reflecting and satirizing the '50s are introduced.

The movie relies heavily on '50s music with an Elvis style voice dubbed in for Johnny. Exaggerated costumes and make-up along with unusual personalities and simple dialog quite likely will make a success of this teen-age trip down nostalgia lane.

Covingtons: Not quite the '60s

By John Logie
special writer

The Covingtons' story starts with Fred Munchinger's mother.

"My mom bought me this electric guitar for $2 at a garage sale, and it had a sticker on it that said 'Covington,'" Fred recalled. In a twisted echo of Arthurian legend, the guitar signified to Fred that there should be a band called the Covingtons and that he should be the lead singer for this band.

Munchinger had been discussing forming a band with drummer Greg Bowes. The pair hooked up with guitar player John Michaels, and the Covingtons were born.

After trying to secure the services of other bass players, Munchinger, with nominal competence filled in when the trio opened for Captain Dave and the Psychedelic Lounge Cats at the Halfway Inn in Ann Arbor.

"We were just a three-piece with seven songs," Michaels said. "In order to fluff up our set list we had to have one song like 'Interstellar Overdrive,' — a 15-minute song — to make a half-hour long show. It was really raw and raunchy. '60s-based guitar music."

Both Munchinger and Michaels recall being happy with the original, stripped-down Covingtons' sound. But it wasn't long before the band started expanding their line-up. Having to play bass "kind of held Fred down," Michaels said.

"At one point, we were playing with the Victims of Circumstance, and Fred sang 'You're Gonna Miss Me,' with them and just went nuts," he said.

From there, the band moved to a quartet, adding a bass player to allow an unencumbered Munchinger to sing lead. And then the band decided to add a keyboard player.

"WE GOT THE keyboard before we even had keyboardist," Michaels said. "We said, 'OK, we're going to get this Farfisa, and then we'll find someone who will play it for us.'"

The band expanded to a quintet with the addition of a keyboard player. Then, after the bass player's departure, the Covingtons recruited two ex-members of the Victims of Circumstance — bassist Bob Kaufman and guitar player Tom Conway. After a few shows as a stage-clogging sextet, the keyboard player quit.

The band is now a quintet, with Michaels, Conways and sometimes even Munchinger playing guitar.

The band plays grungy garage music, mixing covers with originals. The band is true to Munchinger's original inspirations, the "Nuggets" albums, and bands like the 13th Floor Elevators, the Seeds and the Count Five.

But the '60s inspiration doesn't end there. The Covingtons sometimes dress "funny," favoring suit jackets similar to those sported by '60s geek rockers like the Nightcrawlers or the Vectors.

"We dress up nice to play wild rock'n'roll," Munchinger said.

Munchinger and Michaels write most of the Covingtons' originals. Their first song, Munchinger's paradox-ridden psychodrama "I Hate You, Baby," is characteristically simple, but undeniably entertaining.

"FRED USUALLY writes about losing some chick, but he doesn't care because he's too cool to lose any chick," Michaels said. "It kind of sounds like 'Stepping Stone.' With four chords, you're bound to end up with that. It's the excitement that makes it fun."

Conway recently bought the eight-track recording equipment that was used at the now-defunct Garageland Studios, and the Covingtons hope to have a recording available this summer.

Until then, they are looking to continue churning out forgotten garage classics, bizarre psychedelia like Dave Allen and the Arrows' "Blues Theme" and an increasing number of originals. If they do that, Michaels said they will have surpassed their own expectations.

"We started out because we figured out that instead of just going out and getting hammered on weekends, we could go out, play, and get hammered. It gave us one more thing to do. And the beers are sometimes half-off, depending on how we play."

The Covingtons include Fred Munchinger, Greg Bowes, John Michaels, Bob Kaufman and Tom Conway.

The Freemasons find niche in music

By Jill Hamilton
special writer

The guys in the Freemasons are into using aliases.

No less than two of the four members of the band choose to go by stage names instead of their actual names.

So, did they take the Gun N' Roses route and choose glamorous and vaguely dangerous alias like "Slash" and "Axl?" Well, not exactly. They picked the tamer monikers of "Mitch Matthews" and "Van Biesal."

Mr. "Matthews" said he uses the alias for a several reasons — his real name "sounds like a weather forecaster's name" and because it's sort of fun to have an alias.

The Freemasons pride themselves on having no former members of Bitter Sweet Alley, Halloween, Toby Redd or Flash Kahan among their ranks. The band does, however, consist of former members of The Good Catholic Boys, Red September and Dancing Smoothies. Officially, (aliases included) The Freemasons include Greg Marten on vocals and guitar, Mitch Matthews on vocals, basss, mandolin and harmonica, Mike Crimmins on lead guitar and Van Biesel on drums and percussion.

The band is only six months old, but already the members think they have found "it" — that elusive combination of musicians where everything seems to work.

The Freemasons include Greg Marten on vocals and guitar, Mitch Matthews on vocals, bass, mandolin and harmonica, Mike Crimmins on lead guitar and Van Biesel on drums and percussion.

"WE DID some jamming on some songs, like some Replacements tunes, and we were on the exact same wavelength . . . just like that," Matthews said. "It was rough, but it sounded good."

Their pounding, guitar-driven rock sound apparently hits the spot for the band members. Even though they all have quite varying musical tastes — ranging from polka to Neil Young to the Red Hot Chili Peppers — they all like the Freemason's sound.

"It's the first band I've been in that, even if I weren't in this band, I'd go see it all the time," said Matthews, happily.

This synchronicity came in handy at a recent gig at Finney's Pub when the P.A. system blew up and the band was left without sound. Marten, suggested that they do something acoustic and proceeded to play a song that he had written.

"It was so cool because it wasn't loud and it was all improvised," recalled Matthews, "It was the first time any of us besides Greg had heard the song."

The audience loved the songs and now it has become part of The Freemason's regular song set. This type of thing is business as usual for the band — they know their job is to do what the audience wants.

"The people who come to see a show want to get up and dance," Matthews said. "If you're paying four or five bucks, you want to laugh and have fun. We're there to entertain."

THAT'S WHY you'll find a Freemason's concert short on political diatribes. If you don't have anything to say, don't say it, Matthews said.

"A band like U2 has traveled around the world so they can write about these things," he said. "'Everyone writes about South Africa, but I say go down to Detroit — we've got it just as bad.

"I see 18- and 19-year-olds singing about politics . . . they probably haven't even voted yet. They should write about something they know, like something that is irritating them at school."

The Freemasons, on the other hand, presumably know better because, as Matthews puts it, they "are degreed people." Marten is working on a history degree, Biesel is an engineer at Chrysler, Crimmins is the head video editor for a cable channel and Matthews is a teacher at a center for troubled boys in Farmington Hills.

"We're really serious about the band but we know there's a million to one chance that we'll make it," Matthew said. "We wouldn't do it without something to fall back on."

In the meantime, the band plans to continue playing the local club circuit and making demos on a trusty old four-track.

LIVE REVIEW

SECOND SELF — Saint Andrew's Hall

A true sign a band has made it: A record deal? No. A wall-to-wall crowd at Saint Andrew's? No.

A group can tell if it's reached the pinnacle in local circles when people start professing longtime associations with them. Like, for instance, everyone and their mother in this area is a friend, knows friend, went to school with or played basketball with Bob Seger.

In the line-up outside at Saint Andrew's Hall recently, people were trying to outdo one another in the who-knows-who department. "We know the drummer, Jeff," said one group. "Yeah, we're friends with Andy," added another.

Once inside, everyone got to meet the music of Second Self. These are fine times for the Detroit quintet — A recently-released LP "Mood Ring" on a major label, a healthy push from EMI and rumblings of a big breakout.

No doubt, this fueled Second Self on their homecoming. The band tore through a 12-song, hour-and-10-minute set with vengeance.

This was the Mark Gastineau dance after the quarterback sack, the lap around Wembley after winning the F.A. Cup.

Exuberance, at times, interfered with music. Rough edges were exposed, sometimes guitars and vocals were a bit out of sync. But it was soothed with the talc of the home crowd's acceptance and the moment itself.

One thing is apparent. Second Self has arena-sized visions as a support act. The show was complete with the obligatory drum solo, incessant gesturing and a hastily called encore. At times, the band looked like Donald Trump locked in as manager of a travel lodge.

As a front man, Michael Nehra goes the physical route. He struts and chews off the lyrics to rockers, such as "Dream Train" and "Ghost Dance," and spits them out. The highlights of the evening, though, come when he carefully sings the words to stellar numbers as "Red October" and the set-closing "Lose Those Shadows."

Brother Andrew Nehra flew around the stage on bass and Jeffrey Fowlkes flailed away on drums, providing a bevy of movement on stage. Only Greg Giampa was grounded, providing some piercing guitar work that has become the trademark of the Second Self sound.

When it was over, Fowlkes tossed his drumsticks into the crowd. On this night, at least, there was somebody who wanted to catch them.

FLOOD — They Might Be Giants

Remember those quirky guys in junior high who named their fetal pig Dennis and played chopsticks with their feet in music class?

They're grown up now, and they're in a band called They Might Be Giants, and they're as quirky as ever.

They Might Be Giants enjoyed reasonable success with a minor hit last year, "Ana Ng." The duo's latest, "Flood," their major-label debut, is a 19-song LP that would make a fine EP.

About one-third of the album is thoroughly enjoyable, fun music with insightful, often amusing lyrics. The required single is the infectious "Birdhouse in Your Soul," a rhythmic jaunt that gets fairly decent rotation on MTV, if that's any barometer of success.

"Your Racist Friend," another highlight, is a big college radio song about an uncomfortable encounter with a bigot to which most can relate. The meeting ends on a sour note, and the "racist friend" apologizes, saying it was all in jest, but that's no consolation to the Giants, who conclude in their frenetic nasal twang, "Can't shake the devil's hand/And say you're only kidding."

The humor shows in "Dead," where the speaker is reincarnated as a bag of groceries "accidentally taken off the shelf before the expiration . . . I won't ever be around anymore/I'll be up there on the shelf at the store." One regret he has is that he "didn't apologize for when I was eight/and I made my younger brother/have to be my personal slave,"

The biggest problem with the rest of "Flood" is that so much of it sounds like the soundtrack for an old Disney cartoon, particularly "Whistling in the Dark," a baritone tale with full orchestration that could have been lifted from "Jungle Book."

They Might Be Giants have a lot of good things to say on "Flood." But, in the end, they say too much.

COVER ME — Various artists

This is one of Bruce Springsteen's best albums — and he doesn't even show up.

Instead, Rhino Records has compiled 15 cover versions of Springsteen tunes, drawing on artists from Johnny Cash to the Pointer Sisters, from the Replacements to the Hollies.

Because of the personal, highly stylized nature of his work, Springsteen isn't the easiest artist to cover. But no one embarrasses themselves here. On the whole, it's a pretty enjoyable album for Springsteen fans and non-fans alike.

Some of these records — the Pointers' "Fire" and Gary U.S. Bonds' "This Little Girl" — even made it big on the pop charts. Likewise, Patti Smith's "Because the Night" was a late '70s FM radio staple.

Then there's Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, who made a career out of recording Springsteen-penned tunes. Inclusion of "The Fever," "Talk to Me" and others, almost makes this their greatest hits album as well.

While those South Jersey bar band buddies stayed pretty close to Springsteen's own style, the Hollies polished the rambling "Fourth of July, Asbury Park (Sandy)" into a shiny pop bauble. The British Invasion band was one of the first to recognize Springsteen's songwriting talent, covering his songs as far back as the mid-'70s

One of the album's few disappointments is the absence of Hollies vocalist Allan Clarke's near-impossible-to-find cover of "Born to Run." (Thankfully, Natalie Cole's dreary, high tech "Pink Cadillac" is also absent.)

That aside, what's left is quality stuff. The best moment belongs to U.S. Bonds and '60s soul mate Chuck Jackson, who turn the obscure "Club Soul City" into a four-alarm burner. Neither man has a record contract today, which just shows you where talent and good taste will get you.

— Wayne Peal

SETTLING FOR LESS — The Colors

The Colors are oldtimers of the local music scene. They started back in the early days of the 1980s — 1984 to be exact — when the members were just starting high school.

Since then they have released two records — "Vivid Colors" and "Malos Colores" — and had songs featured on three compilation records, "It Came From the Garage" on Metro-American records and "End of the World A Go-Go" and "Folksongs from the Twilight Zone" on Tremor.

Of these, "Malos Colores" was the most successful and allowed them to garner some tour dates with such luminaries of the alternative scene as The Dead Milkmen, The Bolshoi and The Saints.

Now, The Colors have started working with Rage Records, a New York independent label that also handles local rockers Crossed Wire, to work on promoting this latest nine-song LP "Settling for Less."

The songs are of a strange breed that can be angry and out of control at one moment then swiftly become beautiful and philosophical in the next. In other words, these guys want to play punkish, wild music but find that they are too talented to make truly ugly music.

The best reason to throw "Settling for Less" on the turntable is for Dan Manion's cool lyrics. He writes pretty depressing stuff but always manages to lighten his words up somehow with a cleaver turn of the phrase or strange, twisted metaphors.

But, don't be misled by the sound of the lyrics, "Settling for Less" is not a gloom-o-rama album. The music is powerful and tight and makes for a good driving-the-car-with-the-music-blasting listen.

Raising baby: Know his signals

Dear Brabara,

I am a new mother, 23 years old. My son was born six months ago. Am I supposed to pick him up when he cries or will this just make him cry more? My mother-in-law says that I will teach him to cry more if I pick him up, but my mother disagrees. She says that it is mean to let a child cry.

My son is a pretty good boy, although it took him a long time to sleep through the night. Again, my mother-in-law said that was because I didn't let him cry.

Obviously, I am confused. I'm on maternity leave for a year and I will need to tell whomever is going to take care of my son how I want him handled when I am away.

"New Mom"

Dear "New Mom,"

You have a lot of insecurity about caring for your child. That is often the case and understandable in a new young mother. There is considerable research on this subject, some of which is contradictory. I will try to help sort it out and give you an opinion.

The question you are really asking is: "What should I do to help my son grow up to be his healthiest, happiest self?"

During the '50s, your mother-in-law's views were widely held. They are based on the principles of behavior modification, which state that the more reinforcement you give a behavior, the more the behavior will occur.

Thus, mothers were taught not to pick up crying babies, just as your mother-in-law advocates. Th logical outcome of picking them up would be a monstrous crybaby.

At about the same time, other researchers started looking at mother-child bonding in other ways. Their findings contradict those of behaviorists. These other researchers are called "attachment theorists" and they favor a completely different style of mothering.

They say that their experiments show that mothers who are more responsive to feeding signals and crying of their infants raised more secure children, not crybabies.

The conclusion of this research is that warm, sensitive care does not create dependency, but autonomy. At present, this research appears valid.

But still, in spite of the validity of this research, each parent must try to understand their own unique child. What do you see and feel about your son? Be alert to how he reacts to different situations. In that way, you will gain confidence in providing him with the individualized approach that is most appropriate for him.

FEAR & LOAFING

Blissful eating: 'Where's the beef?'

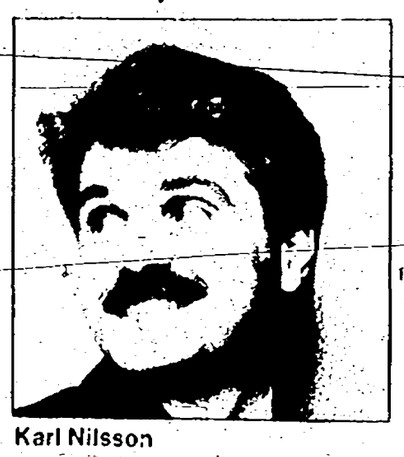
When it comes to nutrition and health, what you don't know can't hurt you . . . At least that's the theory behind my new diet.

This "ignorance is bliss" principle is demonstrated every time a cartoon character runs over the edge of the cliff. Instead of falling, he hangs suspended in mid-air — until he makes the fatal mistake of looking down. Once he knows he's in danger, he instantly plummets to earth.

But don't take Wile E. Coyote's word for it. Think about your own family tree. Who lived the longest? I'll bet two Twinkies and a King Don it's the relative with the worst eating habits.

At our last family reunion, I let the roast beef pass by without taking any. Noticing my mother had fainted into the gravy bowl, I decided to explain my beef boycott with reliable information taken directly from the pages of newspapers sold only in supermarkets.

As discretely as possible, I delicately, tastefully, cheerfully mentioned that someone in America dies of a heart attack every 45 seconds. That most heart disease was caused by high cholesterol linked to red meat. That in 1988, Meat Board spokesman James Garner had quintuple coronary artery bypass surgery.



Karl Nilsson

Before I could get to the part about antibiotics in livestock, someone piped up, "Your grandpa Schultz lived to be 87. He ate steak and eggs every morning."

Above the snickers, another voice rose, "What about Uncle Floyd? He's 84 and eats T-bones three times a day. Between meals, he chews beef jerky."

BY NOW people were shouting. "Don't forget Cousin Erma. Ate meat all her life. Then her smart-alec-boy doctor made her cut back. She went into a coma. Only thing that saved her was a transfusion of bacon grease!"

No doubt you've heard similar stories around your own holiday table. I used to think they were merely exceptions that proved the rule. But slowly, a pattern began to emerge: The only thing these octogenarians had in common was their ignorance about the dangers of a bad diet.

Think about it. All through the '50s and '60s, a whole generation grew strong and tall on a steady diet of burgers and fries. Nobody on "Happy Days" worried about cholesterol or high blood pressure. Nah, they worried about important stuff, like hiding a hickey from their parents.

In those carefree days, "grease" was something good. You ate it. You wore it in your hair and packed your wheel bearings with it. And we felt great.

Later, in the '70s, the local malt shop was replaced by the golden arches. Charm was replaced by convenience, but the basic fat-salt-sugar ratio was left intact. Burger consumption hit the billions. And we still felt great.

Then the lettuce growers hired someone to ruin our lives. For the last 10 years, we've been bombarded with reports that anything you could possibly enjoy eating causes heart disease or cancer.

Terrified by each new medical bulletin, we switched from artery-clogging cheeseburgers to the salad bar. Hoping to add back the years beef tallow had robbed from our lifespan, we lined up three deep behind the sneeze guard.

THEN WE discovered those fresh-looking veggies were loaded with sulfating agents. The shiny fruit was sprayed with Alar. The salad dressing contained more fat than a room full of fritters. And the artificial bacon bits made laboratory rats talk backwards.

Need more proof? The first actor to play Ronald McDonald was Jeff Juliano. He was earning mucho McBucks until he heard the bad news — one Big Mac contains 541 calories, 31.4 grams of fat, 75 mgs of cholesterol and 963 mgs of sodium. Today, Jeff is an unemployed vegetarian.

No wonder my relatives would rather have me set fire to the tablecloth than hear how I kicked my junk food addiction. Once they know the facts, they'll be as miserable as I am.

VIDEO VIEWING

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

If it's true that there are only 100 basic plots and the difference between success and failure is how the story is told, then HBO Video has a winner with their April 11 release of "Perfect Witness" (1989, color, 101 minutes). Although bloody enough to earn an R, it is not rated.

But this mob-killing-and-now let's-terrorize-the-witness film is a cut above what one ordinarily expects from such a plot line.

Good performance throughout are a major plus as Sam Paxton (Aidan Quinn) is the unlucky character of the title. Sam runs a restaurant in Manhattan's meat-packing district. Late one night in Costello's Bar, Sam witnesses Kevin O'Rourke (David Proval) carrying out a mob contract killing. Costello (Ken Pogue) looks the other way.

Unlike the street-smart folks in the neighborhood who are conveniently blind during the killing and quickly disappear afterward, Sam agrees to testify against O'Rourke when asked to do so by District Attorney Berger (Delroy Lindo).

But it's not that simple. Enter U.S. Attorney James Falcon (Brian Dennehy) who is trying to wrap up a major racketering case against a mob, The West Side Boys, who routinely shake-down the entire meat-packing industry. Falcon needs Sam's testimony.

But the mob would rather Sam shut up and they take appropriate steps, including beating up Sam's nine-year-old son Danny (Neal Lancaster) and terrorizing Mrs. Paxton (Laura Harrington).

There's enough pressure on Sam so he finally refuses to testify. Falcon has him jailed for contempt and matters settle down for a while in a mild "Innocent Man" vein.

COMPLICATING the situation is the animosity between Falcon and D.A. Berger who thinks, as many do, that Falcon is positioning himself for a political career. Further complicating things is Falcon's affair with Assistant U.S. Attorney Lynn Sapperstein (Stockard Channing).

The latter involvement, besides its awkward implications, simply doesn't ring true. The former complication, however, is a convenient lead into a pretty literate discussion of the political uses of the legal system and the politics of justice.

What is the nature of a citizen's duty and how far may officers of the court go in seeing to it that citizen's do their duty? At best, a difficult question, particularly in these days of widespread, organized violence.

At times, Falcon's lectures on these issues become uncomfortable sermons, especially when directed at his lover, Attorney Sapperstein. But, for the most part, Dennehy's acting — and everyone else's performance as well — overcome such deficits.

The film has an effective, gritty, urban look and some pretty tough music which support these excellent performances.

For those who enjoy crime stories, there's a score to be released April 12 by Republic Pictures Home Video. A comic interpretation of crime is represented in eight of those 20, first-time home video releases of "Car 54, Where Are You?"

These eight originally aired in the fall of 1961 and are available in four volumes (two programs per tape) at $14.98 or $59.98 for the entire set.

The 12 feature length crime stories star many legendary Hollywood names and include three available on home video for the first time: "The Finger Man" with Frank Lovejoy, Forrest Tucker and Peggie Castle is a story of a bootlegger with a choice, life in the pen or undercover work for the Feds.

"HOODLUM EMPIRE" also features Forrest Tucker along with Brian Donlevy and Claire Trevor. It develops the same theme, a top gun goes straight and threatens to testify against Mr. Big. The third of these never-before-released on video cassette, "When Gangland Strikes," is also about mobs and public prosecutors but its cast, Raymond Greenlead, Marjie Millar and Anthony Caruso, are not as well-known as the others.

The remaining eight titles, now re-released at a reduced price ($19.98) are "Force of Evil" with John Garfield, Thomas Gomez and Marie Windsor, "Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye" with James Cagney, "Riot in Cellblock 11" featuring Neville Brand, "Crashout" with William Bendix and Arthur Kennedy and "Try and Get Me" with Frank Lovejoy and Lloyd Bridges.

William Conrad, Dick Powell and Rhonda Flemming star in "Cry Danger," "Cry Vengeance," "Plunder Road" and the "City That Never Sleeps" completes this package of old time gangster movies.

Class clowns: This college helps turn yuks to bucks

By Pat Schutte
staff writer

Question: Where do the best of the high school class clowns go when they graduate?

Answer: Some go to jail, some get serious and successful, some don't, some go into sales and some go to college.

"Dad, guess what? I'm going to college after all!"

"Great son, where did you decide to go?"

"Roundhouse Comedy College, Dad!"

"What?"

Yep. That's what happens to some of the Detroit areas' funniest class clowns, along with a wide variety of other quipsters who want to hone their comedic talents to a point of going on stage to make people laugh.

And, thanks to guys like Jonathon Round and his Roundhouse Comedy College (formerly Chaplin's Comedy College), students of laughter can learn everything from writing their own material to performing in front of an audience.

Roundhouse Comedy College is split into several different humor channels. Called "Smart Comedy" workshops, due to the scientific approach used, Round begins by helping students write their own material.

'It's like learning to walk and talk again . . . shaky at first, but once you get it down, you're on your way.'
— Jonathon Round

"WE START by helping students recognize and organize their resources," said Round, a hulking, bearded gentleman cast in the Santa Claus mold, who got his start in show business 20 years ago. "We don't just stamp out comedians here, we give people hints on understanding their resources and broadening their comic horizons."

Students at Roundhouse Comedy College are taught to steer away from the norm.

"Monology is out," said Round. In other words, the standing joke teller is a thing of the past. Audiences want innovation, which makes comedians like Gallagher and Steven Wright so popular.

At Roundhouse, not only will you find young hopefuls emulating the likes of Sam Kinison and Andrew Dice Clay, but you'll also find an engineer from General Motors or the a vice president from Shearson, Lehman and Hutton trading laughs and techniques with Round and his students.

"The college did two things for me," said Ken Brown, an industrial engineer at General Motors, who at 28, has been touring the country for two years as a professional stand-up comic. "Jonathan's course gave me more knowledge on how to write material and it also gave me some valuable stage time."

"The first thing you learn is that this is no 'la-de-da' course," said Lenny Weiss who is with Shearson, Lehman and Hutton in Birmingham. He retired from stand-up comedy at the tender age of 37 after 25 shows.

"HIS COURSE is a lot like college, Jonathon talks, and talks, and talks, you take notes and notes and then you get to work on your routine in front of the class," Weiss said. "I still keep in touch with some of the people I met."

One of Weiss' contacts is Gilda Hauser, who also graduated from the college with a degree in hardy-har-har.

"I probably wouldn't have done it if it wasn't for Jonathon's courses," said Hauser, a University of Michigan graduate from Southfield who's been working on the local open mike circuit for six months. "I was really chicken and even went as far as to say that I was finding out about the course for a friend, so they wouldn't think it was me."

After students have discovered what they're about, what their resources are, and ways that they can create material, they work on coming up with a 10-minute act. That's phase-two of the course, or, the performance bit.

"While learning to write material, the students develop a routine," said Round, who, after a stint with the "Second City" comedy troupe in Chicago, began teaching improvisational comedy in Detroit in 1980. "We then videotape their routine and later discuss delivery, mike use, facial language and prop use."

THE COURSE costs $240 and meets eight weeks, one night a week, for three hours.

"The class helps you with becoming more aware of daily things that may be funny, and Jonathan helps you translate that into material," said Brown.

Comedy student Jennie McNulty of Westland agrees and also points out that students aren't spoon-fed by Round.

"He'll give you a different twist to add to your material, guiding you along by asking you questions to get you to think," said McNulty, who has a degree in psychology and a master's degree in kinesiology from the University of Michigan. She's been touring across the states as a stand-up comic for four months.

Round believes that the ability to successfully perform on stage depends entirely on the person's confidence in the material they've developed.

"It's like learning to walk and talk again . . . shaky at first, but once you get it down, you're on your way," said Round.

"In my first show, I went through these two killer sets," said McNulty. "The audience was way into it, and I looked down and saw my heart beating through my shirt . . . very inspiring."

Not only does Round lend himself to building talent, he also sees to it that his students get a fair crack at local jobs which can lead to quite larger engagements. Just ask Comedy College graduate/electrical designer Nick Paredes.

"OUT OF THE whole class, I'm the only one who's gone on to headline status," said Paredes who isn't shy "about blowing my own horn."

"Round's classes knocked off two years of open mike-style roadwork for me," he said. "You have to be hungry though."

Hungry, in a sense, but not hungry due to the lack of money. Beginning comedians can make from $250 to $375 (roughly) for several nights work, depending on the nights.

Once established, a stand-up comic can make $500 to $600 for just a couple of nights work . . . and that's just top shelf local talent. Couple that with income from a daytime job and you're making some pretty good bucks.

Humor processed with byte

It used to be that comedians found their material in bathrooms and bars. But this is the 1990s. Now they can conjure up material via a computer.

Computerized comedy, yeah, that's the program.

The "Humor Processor" is a piece of software put out by Responsive Software of Berkeley, Calif. The program, written by Alan Macy, uses a cross-referencing technique that puts hundreds of thousands of word and phrase association possibilities at the comedian's fingertips.

Built around a collection of bits of data — i.e., people, movies, places — the "Humor Processor" program is, what they call in the business, "incomplete set-up lines."

The program appears on the computer screen in the form of two columns. The column on the left offers words and phrases associated with one topic, and is manually advanced by the user. The column on the right of the screen has another list of words and phrases associated with a different topic, and advances on its own every five seconds.

The trick is to pull out a phrase from each side and create a comparative joke . . . sort of. Here's an example:

LET'S TAKE cars as the topic and cross-reference it with . . . say . . . cows.

Under cars, you'll find things like bring 'em back alive, hula dancer in back window, going to traffic school, teaching husband to drive and fuel pump. Under cows, taking the bull by the horns, roll in the hay, grazing in the grass, meanwhile back at the farm and chocolate milk.

Now, using comedian math, you could come up with 15,525 joke possibilities with these 10 phrases. With 50 to 400 phrases in each of the 25 different categories, a good comedian could come up with a joke for every person on the Eastern Seaboard for the next 37.4 years.

IN REALITY, what the program does is aid in the thought process when writing material, not only for comedy, but for speeches, articles and memos.

"We don't have any really famous comedians using the program . . . yet," said Macy, who said the original idea for the program came from "America's foremost humor consultant," Malcolm Kushner. "We have sold programs to Toyota, Proctor & Gamble and the Disney Corp."

Locally, Jonothan Round of Roundhouse Comedy College has been using the program, which runs for $49.95, for around three months.

"The program, if used correctly, can raise the consciousness and add to the ability of the comedian to be effective," Round said. "It also works well as a lap-top program which would make it a useful road companion in a comedian's developmental stage."

If you think of it, the program is like a simplified thesaurus, lending itself as an electronic aid to those who put the word to paper or over a microphone. It was inevitable.

"As long as comedians understand why and how a joke works, I'd say it's a very useful tool," Round said. "I doubt they'll declare another Easter holiday about it, though."

This comic is for women only

By Pat Schutte
staff writer

She's known as the only comic in America who shares the same birthplace as Jesus Christ . . . Bethlehem. Her tour is also one of the most controversial on the stand-up circuit — men are not allowed inside the club when she is appearing.

At a time when a high price is paid for innovation in stand-up comedy, Jenny Jones has struck it rich.

Jones' show, "Girls' Night Out," plays to sold-out audiences across the country and can best be described as a two-hour group therapy session that has evolved from a 25-minute stand-up routine.

Women are encouraged to participate, to open up and involve themselves in the act. Men have gone underground, dressed up in drag to review her show. They have surfaced not quite understanding what went on.

"We laugh at things inside of us, women of all ages," said Jones, who has been recovering from a bout with the measles. "The shows get very personal, but not dirty. Men may be curious about what goes on, but they wouldn't be comfortable there."

At just a few years of age, Jones (who's real name is Jenny Stronski) moved with her parents (who met in a bread line in Poland) and sister from Bethlehem to London, Ontario.

She first got into the business as a model, her face gracing the cover of a facial soap called Select. She also did what she believes to be the first topless bathing suit ad in Canada, for Catalina swimsuits.

Half-naked?

"YEAH, BUT I had long hair at the time," Jones said. (Hint: Picture Darryl Hannah in the movie "Splash.")

After a successful Las Vegas act called "Jenny Jones and the Cover Girls" — the first all-girl act to do the Nevada circuit — in which Jones played the drums (after only three months of practice), she was spotted by Wayne Newton and worked for him as a backup singer with the Jive Sisters. She then dropped her musical career and took on stand-up comedy.

With less than five years of comedy experience, Jones gave the stand-up comic portion of the TV show "Star Search" a shot. In the end, she was $100,000 richer, and to this day, the only woman ever to win the comedy portion of the show.

Sheesh! A hundred grand. "What did you do with the money?"

"Oh, I bought cars for my parents and I bought them a house," said Jones, whose parents were in the wedding gown business when Jenny was growing up.

Jenny Jones had arrived.

Within months, she was touring with such headline acts as Tony Bennett, Sammy Davis Jr. and the Pointer Sisters. She became a regular on "Hollywood Squares" and appeared on such stardom launch pads as "Arsenio Hall," "An Evening at the Improv" and the "Super Dave Osborn Show" on Showtime.

During this time, Jones came up with the concept for "Girls' Night Out."

"IT'S A LOT of fun," said Jones. "It moves so fast that the two hours seem like about 20 minutes."

While the audience is made up mostly of young women — and an occasional cross dresser — older women seem to add the most to Jones's show.

"The ladies in their 60s to 80s really get into it," Jones said. "They've all done and seen so much more."

Mark Ridley, owner of the Comedy Castle, where Jones will be appearing tonight, couldn't be happier with the controversy surrounding the all-woman show. (Complaints of sex discrimination have been filed in Boston and Seattle and a Los Angeles agency refused to sell tickets to one of her performances.)

"I think it's fantastic what she does . . . just another way of taking talent and putting it to good use," Ridley said. "This is the kind of thing that can be around for a long time."

Jenny Jones and her show "Girls' Night Out" will be appearing Monday, April 9, at the Comedy Castle, 269 E. Fourth, Royal Oak. Show time is 7:30 p.m. For more information or reservations, call 542-9900.

Jenny Jones and her show "Girls' Night Out" will be in town tonight at the Comedy Castle. Sorry, guys, this one's for ladies only.

Make the most of good scents

By John Logie
special writer

For patrons of Magda Moursi, treatment begins the moment they walk into her Birmingham office.

A small machine hums quietly on a shelf in the corner. At first glance, the machine appears decorative. A delicate glass bell, filled with translucent liquid, rests atop a nondescript blue base. The base, despite its bland appearance is busily diffusing the contents of the bell throughout the room.

The odors, spread about the office by the diffuser, combine with the smells from various plants Moursi has selected to create a pleasant blend. But Moursi means to do more than just refresh her visitors.

Merely sitting in her office serves as a subtle introduction to aromatherapy — the art and science of using nasally and topically ingested plant materials to treat the body and the mind.

The blending of the odors is changed every three weeks to fit the needs of Moursi's patrons. Typically, she gears the blend to relax her visitors.

"People are really in such a very intense, fast type of life that I have yet to find a person that doesn't need to relax," Moursi said.

Aromatherapy is, to some extent, an ancient discipline. As early as 4,000 years ago, Chinese doctors were documenting the curative powers of certain plants. Moursi cites the work of the Greek physician Hippocrates and the burial practices of ancient Egyptians as ancestors to her practice.

"THE EGYYPTIANS used many different oils to embalm bodies," Moursi said. "In fact, in some of the tombs they found alabaster jars with ointments that are still valid today, if you analyze them."

Moursi remembers becoming interested in plants and their curative properties while growing up in Egypt.

"As a person having a deep respect for th earth and whatever the earth has to give us as far as plants, I felt that there was a remedy in the plant world for almost every kind of ailment," she said. "So I started to study plants and herbs and aromatherapy, and I've been practicing this for over 25 years."

Moursi studied aromatherapy and skin treatment in France and practiced in Paris before moving to Southfield 18 years ago. She moved her office to downtown Birmingham in 1983. She returns to Europe annually to keep abreast of new developments in her specialty.

The modern practice of aromatherapy is popular in Japan and Europe — particularly in England and in France — but it isn't especially popular in the United States.

MOURSI IS one of, at most, a handful of practitioners of aromatherapy in the area and she combines it with more common skin and beauty treatments.

At present, Moursi uses 30-40 different oils but hopes to increase that number.

"In my learning, I get to know more and more plants and more and more oils," she said. "If you come see me in two years, I'll probably increase that to a hundred."

Moursi keeps her oils in a medicine cabinet in her reception area. They are stored in tiny brown bottles, which, she said, are necessary to preserve the odoriferous molecules of the essential oils. The diminutive bottles each have their own faint aroma and each features a tiny label.

SOME LABELS are handwritten, but some are elaborate tiny advertisements, with miniscule drawings of the plants from which the oils were derived and references to the special properties of the oils.

Moursi also keeps a shelf of books, including a polyglot guide to plant names and book by '70s natural food enthusiast Euell Gibbons.

Moursi's international background, and her ability to read in four languages is especially helpful as nearly all of the oils she uses must be imported from other countries.

Most of the oils in her cabinet hail from India, Malaysia, Tunisia or some equally distant locale. The only domestically produced (from Michigan) oil in Moursi's office is peppermint oil.

When a client visits Moursi for the first time, she begins a process of determining an appropriate blend of essential oils for that particular client. The factors governing the blend can range from the particular complaints of the individual to the condition of the skin, even the shape of the face and the plant leaves or the flower petals being used.

"I do something called intuitive blending," Moursi said. "I work with many different formulas and also really use my intuition as far as blending oils." She refers to the resulting blends as "synergies," which develop special properties when used in complementary combinations.

THE BLENDS reach Moursi's patrons in several ways. The can be applied topically as part of a face or neck massage. Oils also are directed at the nose through the use of a steamer, a devise resembling a small teapot with a trigger handle and nozzle which draws oil and water from separate chamber and mixes them into a fine mist.

She also places blends into bottles so that patrons can apply or smell their blends at home.

Aromatherapy is a field where, to a certain extent, customer satisfaction is guaranteed. Smell is a personal matter and what smells pleasing or refreshing to one person might offend the nose of another. But Moursi has never sent a customer home with a blend that was, to the customer's nose, malodorous.

"In assessing and evaluating the client, this is all taken into consideration," she said. "If the person doesn't like the smell of something, there's no way they're going to use it. It will be doing a counter-effect."

While aromatherapy's name suggests a nasal focus, Moursi stressed the role of the skin as a receptor for essential oils.

"The skin is the largest organ of the whole body, so we don't want to exclude it," she said.

THAT PROPERTY is perhaps the most important for Moursi's practice. Essential oils are fat soluble and because they are derived from nature, easily transported from the skin throughout the body, she said.

"Within 20 to 60 minutes, these oils are penetrating to the deepest layers of the skin," Moursi said, "taking with them all these beneficial ingredients of each plant into the deepest parts."

She added that the oils are helpful in stimulating hormones, cleaning the pores, rejuvenating dry skin and even aiding people suffering from insomnia.

Michelle Guisewite, a vice president/associate creative director with Ross Roy Advertising in Bloomfield Hills, visits Moursi regularly for facials and aromatherapy. She feels that Moursi's methods have been at least as helpful as other therapies she has employed.

"My skin has really cleared up dramatically," she said. "I've been to dermatologists. It's not like I have terrible skin, but I tend to be one of these people that breaks out a little bit, and I find that my skin is just in better condition . . . my complexion's a little rosier."

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Magda Moursi work the essential oils of rosemary, lavender, rosewood and geranium into the skin of Carolyn Hefner of Birmingham as part of her aromatherapy.

The basics . . .

As the names implies, aromatherapy has to do with scents.

Its main ingredients are the potent distilled plant essences, called "essential oils, derived by placing plant material like flower petals in a special receptacle and forcing steam through the material.

The mixture is allowed to evaporate, then cool. Water is then drawn from the material, leaving a highly concentrated oil, containing more than 100 complex constituents or ingredients.

Over the years, aromatherapist Magda Moursi of Brimingham has become somewhat of an expert on the lore behind various flora. She is adept at explaining how the sandalwood tree functions as a parasite, feeding from the roots of other trees without ever developing its own root systems.

She also tells the story of how Captain Cook's Australian settlers despaired at the absence of traditional tea and finally settled for boiling the leaves of an indigenous plant, calling it "teatree."

Moursi also has knowledge of the characteristics attributed to the various oils. Lemon oil, for example, tightens blood vessels and strengthens tissue. And pine and eucalyptus oils aid in respiratory metabolism by helping the skin to breathe better.

But knowledge about plants and there characteristics doesn't mean you can do aromatherapy. Forget do-it-yourself aromatherapy by simply surrounding yourself with the appropriate plants.

According to Moursi, the plants themselves do not provide powerful enough concentrations of their special properties.

And novices shouldn't dabble in the oils either since some of them are toxic. Moursi has elimated all toxins from her practice, but an amateur might not know enough to do so, she said.

an indication of Griffin's goal of filling the racks with good looking clothes that are in tip-top condition.

Another outfit that quickly caught the eye of several customers was a red wool trumpet skirt the owner had matched with a red sweater, accented with black leather piping and black mink at the shoulders. The two pieces weren't by the same designer, but the colors were identical and the young lady who bought them for under $75 was elated.

"I'm going to wear this to my in-laws for dinner," she said, adding that her husband would never believe that she spent so little. "This was such a good price, I was able to pay cash and leave my credit card in my wallet."

Like every customer we talked with, this 32-year-old school teacher preferred not to give her name. The anonymous shoppers aren't embarrassed to be seen in the store, but they'd just as well not publicize the fact that Mrs. So-and-So of Bloomfield Hills once owned the dress they're buying.

Although the stigma of resale clothing stores hasn't completely disappeared, Griffin feels the '90s will be a time when shops like hers start popping up in affluent areas all over the country.

'We have some spectacular evening dresses that cost anywhere from $300 to $1,000 when they were purchased new and we're selling them from $65 to $150.'

— Lois Griffin
Encore Encore

"JUST TAKE a look at Los Angeles for example," she said. "The celebrities wear their beautiful gowns to the Academy Awards, then ship them off to the high class resale shops where the up and coming actresses buy them for less and don't mind saying that the dress is used!"

Even though none of the dresses on the racks at Encore Encore were ever worn by Joan Collins or Elizabeth Taylor, there are several pieces on consignment that have been worn by Detroit area socialites and media personalities as well as wives of major sports figures.

Griffin hopes to convince some of the more well known ladies who consign clothing or buy at her shop to have photographs taken for her "Celebrity Corner."

The idea is still in the planning stages, so when a customer asks if a particular item belonged to anyone special, the saleswoman simply says "Shhh, we're not allowed to tell."

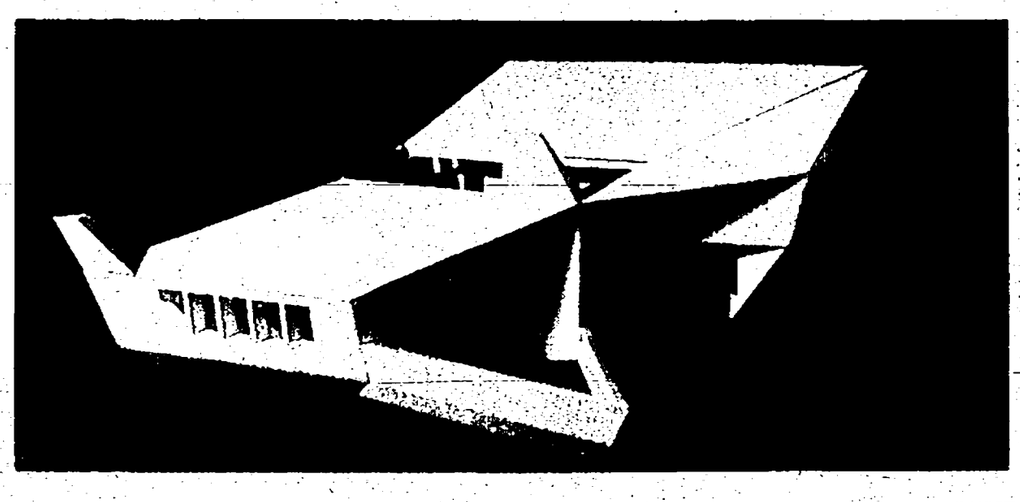
The form of the Museum of Glass in Corning, N.Y. (left) is an analogy to glass itself, which flows in its molten state, but is highly structured crystal when cool. (Below) The model of the Marge Monaghan House on Drummond Island illustrates how the architect drew on natural forms in the landscape. The structure will be wood frame sheathed in copper.

Gunnar Birkerts closes one door, opens another



By Joan Karner
special writer

A building, according to Gunnar Birkerts, is more than four walls and a roof. It is symbolism and metaphor created by an architect combining site, budget, finances, technology and his own background, said Birkerts, an internationally known architect, based in Birmingham.

Buildings lasting a hundred years or more become part of history, he said.

Birkerts, professor of architecture at the University of Michigan, spoke recently at the Chrysler auditorium on North Campus. The College of Architecture and Design honored the retiring professor by selecting him to present its John Dinkeloo Memorial Lecture.

Birkerts elaborated on his technique of building design which creates buildings of symbolism and metaphor designed to fit specific situation.

He said, "I refer to my design methodology as organic synthesis, synthesizing all the factors that need to be considered in the design project in order to arrive at the appropriate architectural solution. It has the ingredients . . . of the building site, its location, the regional position, geographical position, its orientation, the building program, the building budget, the available technology."

THE FINAL INGREDIENT he said, is zeitgeist, a combination of "the recognition of the time we live in" and the background of the architect. All of these factors combine or synthesize to create the buildings which are metaphorical and symbolic and fit in the place selected for them.

One example of symbolism and metaphor in Birkerts' work is the Corning Museum in Corning, N.Y. Created for the Corning glass company, the outside of the building features reversing half-circles in an amorphous design, much like an amoeba. This apparently wandering design represents, according to Birkets, the molten form of glass. The museum is built entirely of glass.

"If we could have used cat's eye marbles instead of gravel on the roof, we would have," he said.

Illustrating his lecture with slides, he demonstrated several meanings of the circle. For example, the circular library at Cornell University, represents the extent of knowledge. Protrusions in the circle show the continuing search for knowledge.

In Wyoming, the circular shape of the historical center represents the circle of the wagons formed each evening by the settlers crossing the state. The Iowa law school library Birkerts created based on a circle represents the law as one of the purest professions.

A building representing both metaphor and the use of the site and local building materials is the U.S. Embassy in Caracas, Venezuela, he said. The building is "not traditional federal architecture" rather, it blends with the mountains in the background. The blending is reinforced with the use of local granite in its facade. The design of the building reflects the shapes of the mountains and accommodates the chosen site.

Birkerts explained that the house he designed for Mrs. Mohaghan uses copper on the outside and wood on the inside utilizing two of Michigan's natural material.

HE ALSO DESCRIBED his design of a soccer stadium just outside of Venice.To aid crowd control, he created a spider-like building with eight entrance-exit ramps to funnel crowds in and out effectively.

A native of Latvia, Birkerts received the Diplom-Igeneur Architects from the Technische Hochschule in Stuttgart, Germany in 1949. Following graduation, he came to the United States and worked for Perkins and Will in Chicago. Prior to opening his office in Birmingham in 1959 he worked for Eero Saarinen in Bloomfield Hills and for Minoru Yamasaki in Birmingham.

Gunnar Birkerts

He has taught architectural design at the University of Michigan since 1960. He also holds the position of Thomas S. Monaghan Architect-in-Residence Professorship. Birkerts will retire form the university May 31 and receive the title emeritus.

Birkerts, always in demand as architect and teacher, said that while his retirement from the U-M faculty won't actually give him any "free time," he will be able to consider answering the many requests he has from all over the world to speak and give workshops and seminars.

New leasing concept can ease work load

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

Q: I started a small retail shop two years ago which has become very successful. I have two clerks and now I'm having to spend so much time doing book work, tax forms, etc. that my sales volume is suffering because I can't devote enough time to it. How can I spend more time doing what I want to do and less time on bookkeeping drudgery?

A: A simple rule for success is to concentrate your efforts on the work you do best and delegate tasks you don't do as well. This would seem especially desirable in your case.

A recent Small Business Administration report estimated the average manager spends from seven percent to 23 percent of his/her time handling employee-related government requirements. To avoid this huge time commitment, you have several alternatives. 1) You can hire a new employee to do your payroll or 2) pay an outside bookeeping service to do it for you.

A third alternative is a fairly new concept of leasing employees. Not to be confused with temporary help services, leased employees work for you but are technically hired and paid by an employee leasing company. All you do is write the leasing company one check periodically and it handles all the payroll, worker's compensation insurance and taxes (FICA, FUTA, MESC) including quarterly reports, W-2's, etc. It also offers the opportunity to be included in a choice of benefit plans which you could not afford to provide on your own, along with a myriad of other advantages. In turn you can attract and retain better employees.

Employee leasing began in 1972 and was considered a legal loophole while "Safe Harbor" laws were in effect from 1983 through 1985. It now offers legal tax advantages to employees and employers, but is no longer considered a tax shelter.

The National Staff Leasing association has some 135 accredited company members in the U.S. who must adhere to a standard code of ethics. Tom Dennis, president of the new Staffco Services Inc. of Bloomfield Hills, says his company can not only relieve you of payroll headaches while saving you time, it can actually decrease your employee dollar outlay in most cases.

Employee leasing began in 1972 and was considered a legal loophole while 'Safe Harbor' laws were in effect from 1983 through 1985. It now offers legal tax advantages to employees and employers, but is no longer considered a tax shelter.

Dennis and vice president Pamela Zawicki told me that, among still other advantages, they can reduce exposure to employee/government lawsuits, assist in screening applicants and even handle severance notification when asked to do so. This contract arrangement can be utilized by businesses with one employee or several hundred.

Whichever alternative you choose, I strongly encourage you to assign your payroll and bookkeeping tasks to someone else and focus your talents on sales.

The Crossings At Canton.
Apartment living just got better.
We're making The Crossings a better place to live and a better value. You'll feel it in the new hallways and newly refurbished clubhouse. You'll see it in the plush landscaping when you enter the grounds. And that's just the beginning. It's the new look and feel of The Crossings at Canton—and it's for you.
The Crossings at Canton offers 19 different floorplans with 1 to 4 bedrooms. And whether you choose a 2-level townhome or a luxury apartment, the renewed beauty of this charming rental community shines through in every one—the result of our recent "Capital Improvements & Upgrading" program. These apartments and townhomes are the largest in the area, yet are still incredibly affordable.

Discover these features at The Crossings at Canton:
- Dens & Fireplaces
- Fully-applianced Kitchens
- Patios or Balconies
- Central Air Conditioning
- A Clubhouse with sauna, indoor pool, exercise room, a new party room, and more!

Visit The Crossings at Canton today. We're just 20 minutes from Ann Arbor and downtown Detroit, yet comfortably away from it all. From I-275, just exit Arbor Rd. West to Haggerty Rd., follow south to Joy Rd., then east to The Crossings. Open Mon.-Fri., 10-6, Sat. 10-5, Sun. 12-5 Phone 455-2424 today.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Before someone commits to buying one of these (above), the first step is walking through a model (photograph at right) to determine what is the best style. Builders often will sell models to buyers at a lower cost, with added options.

Model homes: top amenities at a lower cost

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Buyers of new houses or condominiums frequently can get more for their dollars by looking at models in residential subdivisions.

Models, although generally not cheaper in and of themselves, usually have upgraded features that would cost more if they were to be included in the same kind of unit built on another lot in the sub.

"They end up getting a package cheaper than they probably could do putting the stuff together," said Angelo Spagnoli, president of S&S Homes of Plymouth.

"You'll get some wallpaper, some drapery. Carpeting probably will be a better grade, appliances a better grade," he said.

Price discounts on models may be available, depending on market conditions, when a builder wraps up a project.

"A builder wants to sell," Spagnoli said. "He doesn't want to sit on it. He may be willing to bargain."

BUT DON'T expect a steal unless some unusual circumstances surround a buy.

"It's not a fire sale," Spagnoli said.

'A builder wants to sell. He doesn't want to sit on it. He may be willing to bargain.'

— Angelo Spagnoli
S & S Homes president

Sheldon Rott, national sales and marketing manager for Lifestyle Homes of Farmington Hills, projected that a buyer probably could get a condo model for about $205,000 that would cost $220,000 if built from scratch.

"They get a lot of amenities they normally wouldn't buy or get them gradually over the years," Rott said. "I can't say we don't charge anything, but we don't charge what it costs us."

Landscaping, security systems and fireplaces generally are included as upgrades.

MODELS, MANY of which are furnished at the builder's expense, most often appeal to transferees, people searching for a specific decorative look and investors.

They may prefer not bothering with the piecemeal approach to buying and furnishing.

"It's someone who wants new but doesn't want to buy from scratch," said Ellen Whitefield, director of marketing for The Selective Group of Farmington Hills.

Then there are impulse buyers who just fall in love with models and feel compelled to buy, she said.

"You have wallpaper up, light fixtures up, some upgraded things like faucets, maybe appliances," Whitefield said. "It's done, you can see it, you can move into it. You're there."

Models almost invariably are clean and well cared for because they serve as signature pieces for a builder's work.

"Anyone would be crazy to let a model get out of hand," Rott said.

Pulte Homes of Michigan in Royal Oak, like most area builders, doesn't necessarily discount models, but does offer good value for the money, said Deen Hyde, marketing director.

"WE WILL normally put a model on the market three to six months before close-out," she said.

"We don't do a lot of extra built-ins because we want people to see what kind of house they're going to get delivered," Hyde said.

Buyers of Pulte models could expect to get wallpaper, drapes, a landscaped lot and a sprinkling system.

The big draw Hyde finds is "no hassle moving in."

Jo Vincenti, marketing and sales manager for Tri-Mount of Novi, speculated that condo buyers could get $10,000 to $15,000 in discounted extras buying a $200,000 condo model than building and decorating on their own.

"They pay more than the base price but not as much as extras are worth," she said.

"We might tile the kitchen, which isn't standard. We may put marble on the fireplace, put up mirrors. Then we wallpaper, put in window treatments. They might like certain pieces of art.

"Instead of paying full value, they get extras for way below," Vincenti said.

BUT BUYERS should know that market conditions at a given time usually determine the value of a property.

"Models are strange," Vincenti said. "It depends on how fast you sell out, how quickly you turn over, how much prices go up."

"In some cases, a builder builds (and holds) a model and three years later, prices are up $50,000," Spagnoli said. "If it's a buyer's market, you'll probably get a better deal."

condo queries
Robert M. Meisner

With the recent increase in tax assessments across the board, is there anything a condominium association can do to help the individual owners with their assessments?

As you know, in most instances the condominium association does not normally own any of the real estate and the assessments from the local assessor are imposed on the individual co-owner.

On the other hand, I have seen situations where the association has been recognized as a representative body of certain co-owners who authorize it to go to the city or township assessor in an effort to make an adjustment for the condominium units in the project as a whole.

The association may be in the position, perhaps, to retain counsel to assist it more economically in advancing the interests of the individual co-owners and by providing information which would be of benefit. That approach can be taken only if there is no conflict between the individual co-owners vis-a-vis the individual assessments.

In any event, the condominium association can serve as a clearing house for information between the individual co-owners and can provide assistance by way of economic information to the individual co-owners regarding the tax assessment so long as that action is authorized by the members of the association.

In short, while the association can be of assistance in this regard, it should be undertaken only with the advice of the association's legal counsel so as to insure that the association is not stepping on anyone's legal toes in the association.

I understand you handle a number of construction defect lawsuits for associations. Can you brief me on the present status of the issue concerning fire retardant plywoods that can be treated to the point of becoming unsafe.

According to a report on fire retardant plywood published by the National Association of Home Builders, the problem was discovered when some townhouse owners began reporting excessive waviness in their roofing near the firewalls.

In some cases, further inspection showed that the sheathing had deteriorated to the point where the roof was unsafe to walk on. It appeared that heat and moisture in and around the roof was contributing to a chemical reaction which caused the plywood to become extremely brittle and deteriorate.

Plywoods treated with ammonium phosphate formulas appear to show the greatest amount of deterioration. When exposed to wide variations of heat and humidity, the phosphates break down and in the process dissolve the middle lamella of the plywood. I am advised that drywood often has a charred brown appearance which is similar to a condition caused by a brown-rot fungi.

An industry task force on fire retardant plywoods is studying the extent of the problem, researching methods for repairing structures that have damaged fire retardant plywood and investigating options to fire retardant plywood.

Apparently even after the current test and study results are available, the long-term ramifications of using fire retardant plywood may not be known for years.

In the meantime, community associations which have responsibility for the maintenance, repair and/or replacement of this condition should be exploring the situation and determining whether there is any liability a..d who will bear responsibility for same.

Real estate firm expands its scope

Uniprop Inc., a Birmingham- and Denver-based real estate equity investment firm, is expanding to include medical/professional office development and management activities.

Uniprop president Paul Zlotoff called the progression from manufactured housing to hospital expansion and neighborhood "satellite" offices as "a natural progression."

Financial lenders and investor groups are increasingly interested in this type of investment vehicle because of the stability of the income properties, he said.

Uniprop currently owns and manages the Novi Professional Village in Novi; the Maple Park Office Center in West Bloomfield, which was co-developed with Nosan/Cohen Associates of West Bloomfield; and the Bloomfield Medical Village in Bloomfield Township.

Robert Morris Realtors has opened its office at 7071 Orchard Lake Road, Suite 300, in West Bloomfield, according to owner Robert M. Schuman.

The firm will handle residential and commercial properties. It is a member of the Birmingham/Bloomfield Board of Realtors' multi-list system.

Michael Bramson and Judith Westlund have joined The Selective Group, a Farmington Hills-based development and building firm.

Bramson is the new residential sales manager, responsible for coordination of all residential sales plus developing programs for corporate sales.

Westlund was hired as sales coordinator, responsible for all sales at St. Lawrence Estates, a condominium community in Northville.

The Michigan Association of Life Safety Equipment Contractors recently announced its campaign against proposed Michigan House Bill 5168, which would require technicians handling low-voltage equipment to become licensed journeyman electricians in order to work in a structure regulated under the state construction code.

The association is a newly formed group representing 4,800 Michigan residents employed by businesses that install and service low-voltage equipment.

This equipment includes intercoms for hospitals, burglar, fire and security alarm systems, closed-circuit television, data processing equipment, sound systems and, in some instances, telephones.

Don Maillatesi called the adjustable rate mortgage plan advantageous to home buyers.

"Our flexible underwriting guidelines and 10 percent minimum down payment make it easier for borrowers to qualify," he said.

"With loan amortizations as long as 40 years, larger-than-average maximum loan amounts and initial interest rates currently as low as 7 ⅜, even first and second-time buyers can now afford more home for their money."

First-time home buyers continued to be a major economic force in the U.S. housing market in 1989, according to statistics compiled by Century 21 Real Estate Corp.

First-time buyers represented 38 percent of the more than 400,000 transactions recorded by the Century 21 system in 1989. There has been no significant change in that percentage for the last year fives.

Century 21 Real Estate Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., is headquartered in Irvine, Calif.

Wood requires limited heat, humidity, sun

Fine wood furnishings need more than dusting and polishing: They need a healthful environment.

To avoid unnecessary weathering, aging or damage, Better Homes and Gardens magazine recommends placing precious pieces away from excessive exposure to these natural furniture foes:

- Humidity: Wood easily absorbs moisture, then dries out just as readily. A friendly atmosphere in the 30 to 40 percent relative humidity range will reduce drying and warping, splitting, or loosening of joints.
- Heat: Furniture experts say 68 to 70 degrees is the ideal indoor temperature for wood pieces. Keep the temperature consistent and that will help pieces avoid wood stress.
- Sunlight: Keeping wood furniture away from direct sunlight protects against the ultraviolet-light fading that the sun's rays cause. It also reduces the exposure to the rapid heat changes produced by the sun.
- Liquid: To avoid finish damage, wipe up liquids immediately after a spill. The worst offenders are solvent-based fluids, such as alcohol, paint thinner and nail polish remover. Also, be careful of dripping candles.

Give special furnishings a vacation when taking one. When leaving home for a season or a couple of months, put favorite pieces under wraps. Otherwise, dust will build up, blow about and contribute to scratching and dulling finishes the next time furniture needs polishing.

HOLY SPIRIT you make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen. D.C.M.
