School board targets guns

■ Students and adults who attend sports events, dances or other activities sponsored by the Wayne-Westland schools will be greeted with a weapons search. The school board voted Monday to place walk-through metal detectors at event entrances.

Hoping to keep guns and other weapons off of school property, Wayne-Westland school officials are turning to metal detectors.

The latest move to make schools safer takes a two-pronged approach:

■ Walk-through metal detectors will be placed at entrances to ballgames, teen dances and other school events; everyone attending will be subject to the security measure.

■ Hand-held detectors, or wands, will be used in the high schools and junior highs to search students suspected of bringing weapons to school.

The school board supported the latest weapons-curbing move in a unanimous vote Monday night.

"It's a sad commentary on the times," board vice president Mathew McCusker said.

The district will test a walk-through detector in the next week, said Charlotte Sherman, executive director of secondary education. Officials will then spend $6,200 to buy two — one for John Glenn High and one for Wayne Memorial High.

Eight hand-held detectors costing $1,240 are expected to arrive in the next week and will be used at the two high schools, the four junior highs, the adult education center and the William Ford Vocational-Technical Center.

A resolution adopted Monday by the board stated that "the incidents of weapons and other dangerous instruments being brought onto school property is an increasing concern and demands an appropriate and decisive response."

Wayne-Westland has had numerous weapons incidents in recent years; in fact, several guns have been confiscated since Nov. 1 in secondary schools.

In the resolution, the board told the administration to adhere to written policies "to ensure that the intrusion of the search is not greater than necessary to achieve the board of education's goal of providing for the safety of our students, staff and citizens while on school property."

In other security measures, Superintendent Larry Thomas said the district is moving closer to hiring security personnel to watch school parking lots.

Moreover, a proposal to place a police officer inside John Glenn is still being discussed. An armed officer already has been placed at Wayne Memorial, with the school district and the city of Wayne splitting the cost.

Officials, resident square off over board member's duty

BY DARRELL CLEM

Wayne-Westland school board member Patricia Brown should abstain from voting to fill a board vacancy because she is embroiled in a court battle with one of the candidates, a Wayne resident urged Monday.

"The threat of voting with malice is regrettably real," resident Marti Molitor said during a board meeting.

Brown and five other board members are expected to fill a board vacancy during a special session Saturday morning. One of nine candidates is former board member Sharon Felan, who faces trial for allegedly assaulting Brown.

In suggesting that Brown abstain from voting, Molitor spoke critically of the assault case that Brown has pursued since she accused Felan of shoving her during a Nov. 23 dispute.

"We feel that this inquiry has gone too far already and is a total waste of taxpayers' money and the criminal justice system's time," Molitor said. "The Wayne-Westland school district deserves better."

Brown accused Felan of shoving her during a shouting match that occurred in a hallway behind the school board meeting room. Others heard the dispute, but only one witness, Brown's roommate, says she saw Felan push Brown.

The clash occurred when Brown temporarily left her seat during a meeting. It stemmed from her opposition to filling a curriculum department vacancy that Felan believes should be filled.

On Monday, Brown said she has considered whether she should abstain from Saturday's vote, but she has been encouraged by friends and political supporters not to withdraw.

Two colleagues — board president Francis "Bud" Winter and vice president Mathew McCusker — said she has a responsibility to represent voters who elected her in June. Felan

Dinner time

An all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner will be 4-7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 21, at the Wayne-Westland Dyer Senior Center, on Marquette between Wayne and Newburgh. There will be spaghetti, Italian bread, salad and homemade pie. The meal is $6.

Senior of the month

Josephine Mosiej was named the Westland Friendship Center's senior of the month for January. Mosiej, married to husband Charles for 37 years, has been a member of the Westland Friendship Center Advisory Council since 1990, a bingo volunteer for eight years and devotes time to other center events and celebrations throughout the year. Before moving to Westland, Mosiej devoted 30 years to her church when she lived in Delaware. She has also spent 25 years for the Little Sister organization, helping elderly people. A 10-year local resident, she wrote more than 50 cards and letters to service men and women during Operation Desert Storm nearly three years ago.

Sweetheart dance

The Westland Friendship Center will hold its annual Valentine celebration and dance noon to 4 p.m. Friday, Feb. 11, in the center, 1119 N. Newburgh at Marquette. There will be door prizes, live music by the Octaves, birthday celebrations, and the traditional crowning of the Valentine king and queen. Tickets for center members are $6, and $9 for non-members. Tickets will be sold at the center's main desk.

U.S. EPA searches dump for hazardous waste

A preliminary investigation found potentially dangerous materials in a former Westland landfill, which will be tested soon to determine if it is harmful to the public and/or the environment, a federal official said.

Lead, chromium, zinc and "elevated levels of volatile organic chemicals" were found nearly a year ago, said Eileen Deemer, community relations coordinator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's regional office in Chicago.

Planned testing of the site, in the northwest section of Westland, will also include testing of ground water, she said.

If the testing shows that the materials are hazardous to the environment or public, they must be removed or treated, Deemer said.

An official of a company which used the dump years ago said there is no danger unless the materials are ingested.

The site of the former 12-acre dump is behind Wilderness Park and Woodland Villa Apartments, north of Warren Road and between Newburgh and Central City Parkway.

Owners of the property are Crestwood Development Co. and Wayne County.

On Monday, the EPA named the 3M Company, Crestwood Development and Wayne County as "potentially responsible parties who must clean up" the former dump.

The 3M Company apparently is one of several businesses that once used the dump.

Under the order, the parties must "investigate further to define the nature and extent of contamination and design a cleanup plan," said the federal agency in a press release. "Activities will include the identification and proper disposal or treatment of hazardous substances found at the site."

The agency said negotiations for a consensual cleanup agreement continued through Dec. 17 but were unsuccessful.

William Nelson, 3M's regional manager for governmental public relations, said his company had paint and chemical byproducts dumped on the site when it was a landfill. It has been closed since the mid-1980s.

"We don't want the public to panic," he said, announcing that the site will be tested for six weeks after the company and EPA agree on a timetable.

■ 'A thorough investigation of the site will occur to determine the type and extent of waste disposal at the site and its impact on the environment.'

William Nelson
3M public relations

Nelson added that other companies besides 3M also dumped materials in the dump.

The dump was a municipal landfill for 20 years, handling mostly household trash.

The property is now fenced to keep people off the site, Nelson said.

The government was unsuccessful in having a "consensual" cleanup of the site, Deemer said.

Other options EPA has are to clean it up itself or order the company(s) which dumped materials there to handle the cleanup, she said.

The EPA "is in the process of exploring which avenues to follow," she added.

EPA must have oversight of the testing, Deemer said. The agency approves of the property's fencing.

"A perimeter fence was installed to secure the soil-testing areas and equipment and to control access to the work area," Nelson said.

"A thorough investigation of the site will occur to determine the type and extent of waste disposal at the site and its impact on the environment," he said.

The planned testing of the site is the third publicized environmental problem involving Westland in the past 2½ years. The most serious surfaced in late spring of 1991 on property under the Cooper Elementary School, on the south side of Ann Arbor Trail between Inkster Road and Middlebelt. The building was closed a few months later with students moved across the street to the former Whittier Junior High School.

Testing: Officials of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will begin testing soon to see if hazardous wastes at an inactive Westland dump threaten human life or the environment. The 12-acre dump, outlined above with a dotted line, is owned by Wayne County and the Crestwood Development Co. and was once used by the 3M Company and other businesses. Both soil and ground water will be tested and, if necessary, a cleanup plan will be devised.

In the summer of 1992, soil in the rear of the Stottlemyer School playground was tested, but the conclusion was that there were no toxic materials there which would endanger people.

Westland city officials have been informed of the upcoming testing and said they want to be kept informed of any actions, Nelson said.

During the testing period, there will be a cleanup of surface debris and removal of construction trailers and drum shells from the property.

Medical center expands staff, hours

The Oakwood Family Medical Center-Westland, which serves local families, has added two family-practice doctors and expanded educational opportunities for physicians to provide health-care services.

Family practice is a medical specialty focusing on complete general medical care for patients of all ages, said Oakwood spokeswoman Trish Romer. The practice covers pediatrics, general health maintenance for adults, obstetrics and gynecology, and care of older adults.

Dr. Timothy DeBlieck and Dr. Linda French are joining five other family practitioners at the center, on Merriman south of Palmer.

The five others are Drs. David Schindler, John Escott, Lynn Blavin, Christopher Pabian and Jaclyn Randel. Randel will increase her office hours next month.

The new hours are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday; and 9-11 a.m. Saturday for urgent-care situations.

Strip mall's renovation gets thumbs up

The 25-year-old center on the Westland-Garden City boundary has seen its economic ups and downs in recent years.

But the cycle is now up, according to several business people in the center, which has nine tenants and two vacancies.

"Lots of customers are commenting (on the nearly completed renovation)," said Cheryl Bashara, co-owner with husband Bill of Insty-Prints.

"We'll definitely get new customers," Bill said. "There is a tremendous amount of traffic" on Warren Road. "They are bound to notice us."

He cited the recent comment of a nearby homeowner who asked him, "How long has this place been here?"

Jerry Beale said the renovation will cost $50,000. It was planned to give the center a new look and attract customers.

Don Usher, who took over Regency Square's Sun Tan Center five weeks ago, said numerous people have inquired about the renovation.

When the improvement is completed, the center "will look magnificent and make the area more professional-looking."

"It's created a lot of comments from drivers and customers," Usher said.

Dr. Gregory Hicks, who has a chiropractic practice in Regency Square, was impressed. "I really like it," he said.

One patient quipped to Hicks that his rent will increase because of the improvements.

Beating victim remembered as 'tender soul'

BY LARRY O'CONNOR
STAFF WRITER

Friends and relatives say Jackie Ponke would often put others' needs before her own. Her selflessness, though, is something her killer would use to his advantage.

Ponke, 36, who was bludgeoned to death Jan. 8 in the Farmington dental office of Dr. Alan Bredin, had been receiving threats from her husband, Raymond Ponke.

Bredin even suggested she take a month off, but Jackie Ponke wouldn't hear of it.

"We take the week off between Christmas and New Year's; there was a lot of work piled up," Bredin said. "I said several days ago, 'My wife Judy says give you a month off, Jackie.' She goes, 'Oh yeah, and then this pile would be twice as high.'

"At lunch with the girls (other office employees) . . . she said, 'Ray and I cannot exist together on this earth. If I take a month off, he'll be here, my work will be here. I'm not taking a month off.' "

Her husband Raymond Ponke is charged with first degree murder and is being held without bond in Oakland County Jail. Preliminary examination is 8:30 a.m. Friday in 47th District Court in Farmington.

Jackie Ponke died from massive head injuries suffered after she received several blows to the head with a hammer.

Witnesses said the attacker entered the dental office without warning and began striking Jackie Ponke, who was assisting Bredin with a patient at the time. Bredin tried to stop the man, but was pushed away.

Bredin told police that as the attacker struck the victim, he said, "If I can't see my daughter (Ashley, 9), you won't either."

Bredin and the patient, who was having her teeth cleaned, went to a James Court residence to phone police.

"She (Jackie Ponke) was a tender soul, an angel," said Judy Bredin, wife of Alan Bredin. "She cared for patients, she cared for her husband. She cared for her daughter.

"She would exchange recipes with patients. It was a family-oriented office. She made it that way."

On Monday, Bredin's office was closed. Bredin wasn't sure when it would reopen.

Bredin and three employees attended a counseling session Monday to deal with the tragedy.

"The girls are really having a bad time with this," Bredin said. "Two of the three girls are leaving lights on at night time and having visions of him stalking them. . . . It's a tremendous shock."

Bredin said he made plans in case Jackie Ponke's husband carried out his threats — which ranged from "cutting her into five pieces with a chainsaw" to burning down the family's Oxford home.

He said doorknobs were covered with dental plastic, so employees could shut the door and hide. He also turned on all the locks so when doors were shut they would be secure.

"The plan was whoever saw him coming in the drive or coming up the walk, that they would give a warning that Ray was coming, and we would start slamming the doors," Bredin said.

On Saturdays, though, Bredin and Ponke worked alone for a only few hours, seeing patients who couldn't get in during the week.

"And he knew that," said Bredin remorsefully.

Friends and family have set up a trust fund for Ashley Ponke at the Oxford Bank, 60 S. Washington, Oxford 48371.

Teacher will take over as Schweitzer principal

BY DARRELL CLEM

Schweitzer Elementary School won't be getting a new principal this school year.

When principal Karen Obsniuk leaves her job Friday for a new post in Farmington Hills, Schweitzer teacher Barbara Skone will step in and serve as acting principal, Superintendent Larry Thomas announced Monday.

Only one local administrator had indicated an interest in Obsniuk's job, but didn't want to switch positions in the middle of the school year, Thomas said.

The district also received 23 applications from outside the district, but Bill Taylor, associate superintendent for employee services, said, "I would say that's not very many."

■ Given the situation, school officials have decided to place Skone in charge of Schweitzer for the remainder of the school year. The job of full-time principal will be posted again in the spring.

Given the situation, school officials have decided to place Skone in charge of Schweitzer for the remainder of the school year. The job of full-time principal will be posted again in the spring, Thomas said.

Skone has previously served as acting principal in the Wayne-Westland district and has done a commendable job, officials said.

The latest development in the Schweitzer position came Monday as Thomas, during a school board meeting, outlined a series of changes in the district.

Among the other news:

■ The district will be hiring an additional special education director, using county funds. No local dollars will be used for the position, Thomas said.

■ The district has received a grant to launch a parenting program, which Thomas said will be established as soon as possible.

■ Some district administrators will be shifted to strengthen the instructional department, which already has seen improvements this year in student scores on the MEAP (Michigan Education Assessment Program) test.

Car slams into flatbed truck in year's first traffic death

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

A Romulus man was killed in Westland early Monday when the car he was driving slammed into the back of a large flatbed truck that had stopped on Van Born, just east of Middlebelt, police said.

R.L. Wilson, 31, suffered fatal injuries when his head smashed through the windshield during the 7:38 a.m. accident, police Officer Jim Dexter said. Wilson was pronounced dead a half-hour later at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne.

The accident marked Westland's first traffic fatality of the year.

The driver of the semitrailer fled the scene after he got out of his truck and looked at Wilson's badly damaged car, witnesses told police. Police want to question the driver but don't know his identity, Dexter said.

■ The driver of the semitrailer fled the scene after he got out of his truck and looked at Wilson's badly damaged car, witnesses told police. Police want to question the driver but don't know his identity.

Westland police are asking anyone with information to contact the traffic bureau at 722-9633.

The westbound truck had stopped for no immediately apparent reason on Van Born, in front of a residential area, Dexter said. The driver had not yet reached the Middlebelt intersection.

Witnesses described the truck as a white tractor with a flatbed trailer. The driver was described as a 6-feet-tall, stocky-built white male, wearing a dark jacket.

"The driver was hauling something, but we don't know what," Dexter said.

Wilson, westbound in his girlfriend's 1979 Chevrolet station wagon, didn't have the headlights turned on, and visibility could've been reduced because of the early hour and possible fog, Dexter said.

Wilson wasn't wearing his seatbelt, Dexter said.

Police crackdown on illegal parking

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

Rude, able-bodied drivers who insist on parking in spaces reserved for the physically impaired will soon pay a price in Westland: $50.

Westland police are launching a crackdown on violators, who will be paying the fine if they ignore posted signs and grab the handicap parking spaces.

"We want to warn the people," Sgt. Peter Brokas said Thursday, announcing the crackdown. He heads the Westland Police Department's traffic bureau.

Police have received numerous complaints of drivers misusing the special parking spaces, particularly at malls and strip centers, Brokas said.

A flurry of complaints marked the recent holiday season, when busy or lazy shoppers apparently ignored the drivers who really need to park as close as possible to buildings.

It seems some drivers just didn't get the goodwill message.

Though the holidays have passed, the problem has persisted, Brokas said, and the complaints "are still coming in."

The police crackdown began this week, he said, and able-bodied drivers who commit the civil infraction will find themselves paying $50 fines.

Brokas stressed that the problem hasn't been unique to any particular mall or strip center.

The crackdown will include a citywide effort, and patrol officers will be assigned specific areas to watch for violators, Brokas said.

Some patrols will focus on shopping areas east of Wayne Road; others will monitor malls and strip centers on the west side of Wayne Road, he said.

Felan lawyer seeks change of venue

BY LEONARD POGER
EDITOR

The attorney for Sharon Felan, the former Wayne-Westland school board member charged with assaulting current board member Patricia Brown, is still trying to have the case assigned to a different court.

Attorney Michael Ostrosky said at a pretrial hearing Tuesday afternoon that he plans to file several motions, including one requesting a change of venue, within a week. A hearing on those requests is scheduled for Thursday morning, Feb. 10.

Westland district Judges C. Charles Bokos and Gail McKnight announced two weeks ago that they would disqualify themselves from hearing the case because of the longtime close ties between the court and the school district as well as Brown's having contacted a city council member, Sandra Cicirelli, for legal consultation. The council controls the court's budget.

Despite that and the naming of Thomas Van Tiem Sr. to hear the case as a visiting judge, Ostrosky said he still wants the trial moved to a different court because the same points Bokos raised last month haven't been resolved.

The other motions he plans to file are requests to reduce Felan's personal bond, set by Bokos at $5,000.

Ostrosky also wants to obtain an audio tape of the Nov. 23 school board meeting at which the assault is alleged to have occurred in a hallway behind the board meeting room. Prosecutor Donald Vandersloot said he also wants to obtain the tape for review in preparing for the expected trial.

The tape is in the possession of Brown, elected to the board in June when Felan, named to a board vacancy in mid-1992, was defeated in a bid for a new term.

Brown: 'I am always willing to forgive'

Following is the statement issued by Wayne-Westland school board member Patricia Brown following Tuesday afternoon's district court hearing:

"On several occasions I have questioned whether to pursue this matter to the extent to which it has arrived as of this date. In making this determination I discussed the issue with several community leaders who I consider friends and whose opinions I hold in high regard.

"Several factors were examined. I realize that this incident of assault is not as great as many of the other assault cases our judges are plagued with on a daily basis. I also am aware that much of the publicity surrounding this matter is due in part to the fact that I am a member of the Board of Education and Mrs. Felan competed with me last June for the seat I now hold.

"Although I firmly believe that our courts have more important cases to hear, I also believe that my past attempts to find a positive resolution to Mrs. Felan's continuous verbal attacks leading up to the incident were unfortunately unsuccessful. I am also concerned that these remarks directed at me, my friends and family continued far past what one would consider a normal period considering the election was last June.

"In early November, I made a personal effort to bridge the gaps and to try and eliminate the hostility Mrs. Felan has expressed toward me. I invited her and one other parent to represent our school district as part of a community coalition that addressed state legislators in Lansing.

"Evidently that effort was futile as I was physically assaulted — caught off guard at a board meeting, later that same month. Although the attack was one that did not inflict physical damage, I could see that the situation between the defendant and myself was not going to improve and it was now ready to be addressed by a mediator.

"The most important factor I had to consider involved the role board members and community leaders must present to the students in our school district.

"It isn't uncommon for principals at our high schools to become involved in a battle between students long after the initial instances of hatred, such as verbal attacks against one another, have begun. Our building administrators realize the importance they play as the mediators or judges if one was to compare the situation to that of mine and Mrs. Felans'.

"These same people also preach to their students the importance intervention plays. Should they be made aware of problems that exist between students, they are able to intercede before someone is hurt.

"In my situation, I must emphasize to the students of this school district that there are people they can turn to as mediators to resolve conflicts they may face.

"Nothing would make me happier than a possible positive resolution to this situation. I am always willing to forgive and to move on, keeping in mind and I hope Mrs. Felan and I do agree on one issue, and that is we must do what is best for our students."

"I think the city of Westland ought to reevaluate what their priorities are," school board president Francis "Bud" Winter said Monday.

Thomas said negotiations have occurred with Mayor Robert Thomas's office, but the city has no money set aside in its current budget for school security. Thomas said he expects to seek help, again, during the next round of city budget talks.

School board member Patricia Brown said the proposal may have stalled because city officials don't understand the need for a police officer at school. She suggested inviting the mayor to the school to talk with administrators.

"I think we should try extending the olive branch one more time to the mayor's office," Brown said.

"I believe it's wrong to put emotional pressure like this on another deliberative body," she said.

McCusker took offense at Molitor's remarks and suggested that Brown should abstain only if Felan, in turn, withdraws from the board race. Felan, who also has supporters on the board, attended Monday's meeting but didn't address the board or McCusker's remarks.

Eileen DeHart, aide to state Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, also came to Brown's defense. DeHart said Brown, through Barns' office, requested a state attorney general's opinion on whether she should abstain from Saturday's vote.

"The verbal opinion of the attorney general is that she has the authority to vote on all candidates," DeHart said.

Brown said she also sought an attorney's advice on her own.

In another development, it was revealed Monday that Brown, within days of the dispute with Felan, got the only tape-recorded copy of the Nov. 23 meeting — and still hasn't returned it to board offices.

Brown conceded that she has the tape after board member Laurel Raisanen indicated she wanted to listen to it. Raisanen said she wants to review the board's discussion about curriculum department jobs.

Brown said an attorney has the tape, but she promised to return it to board offices in the next couple of days.

14 apply for single Schoolcraft trustee seat

BY SUSAN ROSIEK
STAFF WRITER

A vacancy on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees has attracted 14 candidates from Canton Township, Plymouth Township, Northville and Westland.

The board is expected to announce a schedule of public interviews at its Jan. 26 meeting. The successful candidate will serve the remainder of Michael Burley's term, which expires June 30, 1995.

Burley of Canton Township submitted his resignation in October. His resignation is effective Jan. 26. Burley was elected to the board in 1979 and re-elected in 1985 and 1991.

Those seeking the appointment are: Matt Berg of Canton Township, director of administrative services at Cranbrook Schools; Carolyn A. Blanchard of Northville, an attorney; Linda B. Chuhran of Canton Township, a cost accountant at General Motors Powertrain Division; Michael Dani of Canton Township, a self-employed CPA; William C. Fried of Livonia, CPA, attorney and owner of Fried & Associates, P.C. in Livonia, and Bernadine M. Horan of Livonia, a nurse at Botsford General Hospital.

Also applying for the board seat are: Harriet B. Larson of Livonia, a retired school teacher; John J. Pantalone of Westland, a retired school principal and present owner of a travel agency and motivational seminar firm; Bruce C. Patterson of Canton Township, attorney and director of planned giving at Eastern Michigan University; Kathleen E. Payne of Plymouth Township, a professor at Detroit College of Law; Michael A. Reynolds of Livonia, an attorney; Mary Y. Sieggreen of Northville, a clinical nurse specialist/case manager at Harper Hospital, Detroit Medical Center; Carol M. Strom of Livonia, a former member and past president of the Livonia Board of Education and partner in a local retail business, and Luis A. Torres of Livonia, a mechanical engineer working for a Livonia firm.

Who applied

Berg, who has lived in Canton for the last five years, said he will bring an interest and expertise to Schoolcraft in financial and operational forecasting, information technology and college operations.

"I will bring to the board a rich background in the ins and outs of how an educational institution operates. I would also bring in the perspective of someone who has had to struggle to make payrolls and has wrestled with the problems of what is takes to survive as an educational organization," wrote Berg, who holds bachelor's degrees in communication and business and a master's in business administration.

Blanchard said her background in health services and law give her an insight into the skills people will need in the 21st century.

"Acceptantce of diversity and promotion of the strengths gained from diversity is an asset I can bring to the board.

"My interest in the advancement of women and of minorities in our society and in ensuring civil liberties for all would benefit the students at Schoolcraft College," wrote Blanchard, who holds a law degree from the University of Detroit Law School, a master's of education from Tufts University and a bachelor's degree with a major in nutrition from Edgecliff College.

Chuhran was formerly a candidate for the Schoolcraft board.

"I simply wish to serve the taxpayers and my community in a capacity which I feel I have experience that would be beneficial," wrote Chuhran, who holds several associate's degrees from Schoolcraft College and bachelor's and master's degrees from Madonna University.

Why they applied

Fried said his background in law, finance and accounting will make a contribution to the board in this "process of change."

"The educational business relationship in Schoolcraft area, Michigan and the United States must evolve and change in the next 10 years for our community to survive economically in the 21st century and our present standard of living can be maintained," wrote Fried in an application.

The longtime Livonia resident holds a bachelor's degree in accounting, a master's in business and a law degree all from the University of Michigan.

Horan, a former student and graduate of Schoolcraft College's nursing program, cited health care, school funding, student achievement and community college leadership as issues of personal interest.

Horan said she want to "be more active in the community" and has the time to serve. She also holds a bachelor's degree in allied health management from Madonna University.

Larson said as a former teacher in Livonia for more than 20 years she can appreciate education concerns.

"Living in a college town in Montana lends an intimate awareness of college concerns. As one who commuted via streetcar to my junior college, flew an airplane and worked for a newspaper, I believe I can appreciate the needs and the aspirations of college students," wrote Larson in her application.

As a longtime resident of Livonia, Larson said she understands

20 arrested in gambling raid

BY BILL COUTANT
STAFF WRITER

Farmington Hills police raided a large-scale floating dice game, arrested 20 people and confiscated more than $65,000 in cash along with gambling paraphernalia and a pistol at 2 a.m. Wednesday at 31879 Kingswood Square in the Hunter's Ridge complex.

The raid followed a tip and surveillance by the Farmington Hills Police Department's undercover unit in recent days, Hills police Chief Bill Dwyer said.

After obtaining a search warrant from 47th District Court Judge Fred Harris, a task force of 15 Hills officers raided the apartment, which Dwyer said was not otherwise occupied, but was used exclusively for gambling. Of the 20 people arrested in the raid, 17 were ticketed for loitering in a place of illegal occupation, a 90-day misdemeanor.

■ Some of the people arrested have been arrested and convicted in other gambling stings.

Warrants on felony charges will be obtained for three people on felony gambling charges, Dwyer said. Some of the people arrested have been arrested and convicted in other gambling stings. One of the men had been arrested in 1990 at an address on Lake Park Drive in Farmington Hills, at which more than 30 people were arrested and more than $80,000 was confiscated.

Dwyer praised the work of Sgt. Doug Anderson, Sgt. Gil Kohls and the department's undercover unit.

"These are some high rollers," Dwyer said of those arrested. "The were cutting the pot Las Vegas-style (about 10 percent)."

Dwyer said he expects the three arrested on felony charges to be arraigned next week.

The raid is the biggest for illegal gambling in Farmington Hills since October 1990 when Hills police busted an operation at the Comfort Inn on 12 Mile and Orchard Lake, arresting 15 men and confiscating $14,000.

Health care reform is BPW topic

Dr. Gerald Robbins, president of the Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, will discuss health care reform Thursday, Jan. 20, at Garden City Hospital Medical Office Building.

The program is presented by the Garden City Business and Professional Women's Organization.

Cost is $10 per person and includes dinner. A social hour begins at 6 p.m. followed by dinner and program in Classroom 3-4 in the lower level of the office building, 6245 Inkster Road, four blocks north of Ford Road in Garden City.

Seating for the Jan. 20 program is limited. For reservations, call 458-4330 no later than Jan. 17.

Robbins, a neurologist at Garden City Hospital, will discuss how getting medical coverage for uninsured Americans and getting a handle on medical costs are priorities in whatever health plan is developed in Washington, D.C..

He was among officials from the state physicians association who met with President Bill Clinton to discuss concerns about the existing medical system and possible changes under the proposed health care plan.

An estimated 38 million Americans are without health care because they are uninsured.

A New York City native, Robbins has been a staff physician at Garden City Hospital since 1975 and had been a student doctor there in 1970 after graduating from the Philadelphia School of Osteopathic Medicine.

We hope you've heard how unstressful we try to make it for you when you visit a Saturn showroom. (Because who needs more stress, right?) Anyway, we take the same approach to leasing as we do to everything else. So if leasing a Saturn is better for you than buying one (and we can help you figure that out), then great. the concerns of the taxpayer and the desire for the availability of good educational opportunities.

Larson majored in math and French at the University of Missouri. She also has studied at EMU and Michigan State University and Madonna University. She is president of the Livonia Library Commission.

Desire to serve

Pantalone said his 41 years of experience in education at many levels has prepared him for a board seat.

"Having retired from my administrative position, I feel I now have the time to devote to this position and believe we all have an obligation to serve our communities when possible," wrote Pantalone, a former principal at the Taylor Vocational Center.

"Having run a vocational center for seven years, I was very involved with job placement, recruiting, articulation, job training, cooperative education and business partnerships," said Pantalone.

Patterson said he's interested in serving on the Schoolcraft board "because the school is an important asset for our community which deserves professional management."

"My skills include a knowledge of the law and fund-raising and considerable experience in the business world. I am articulate, analytical, organized, systematic, well-read and respected," wrote Patterson.

He holds bachelor's and law degrees from Wayne State.

Payne, a law professor, said she seeks the appointment because of her "life-long interest in education and because of my commitment to help the college continue to make its invaluable contribution to the community."

"Most of my life has been spent in schools, either as a student through four degrees or as a teacher in the public schools and now at the professional school level," wrote Payne, who holds degrees from Michigan State, EMU, Detroit College of Law and the U-M Law School.

Reynolds, an attorney, said he was seeking the appointment because "I believe in the value of public service and feel that I could give expression to my life-long interest in education and politics."

Benefit to board

"The principal benefit that a lawyer can provide is objective analysis and an understanding of concepts of public good and the benefit of compromise. I do no pretend to have answers to all questions or solutions for all problems. I do believe that I could provide mature good judgment and common sense," wrote Reynolds.

He holds degrees from Western Michigan University and Detroit College of Law. He also has done post-graduate work at U-D and Wayne.

Sieggreen said her work at two different community colleges has helped her understand the community college philosophy.

"I have a firm belief in the value of a community college education," wrote Sieggreen, who has taught nursing at the community college level.

She holds an associate's degree in nursing from Delta College and bachelor's and master's degrees from Wayne State.

Strom, who was a member of the Livonia Board of Educaiton for 16 years, said the skills she acquired — consensus building, strong belief in life-long learning, knowledge of the legislative process and finance — in her local board tenure will help her serve Schoolcraft.

"As I have watched its growth, I have often though that it would be an exciting challenge to serve as a Schoolcraft College trustee," wrote Strom who holds a bachelor's degree from the U-M. She also has studied at WSU and U-M Dearborn.

Torres said his interest in board appointment "stems from a strong desire to serve my community."

"I can offer the board skills in multi-task problem solving/management, acquired during five years experience in the U.S. Army as an engineer officer and eight years practicing the mechanical engineering profession."

Torres holds degrees from the University of Puerto Rico and Purdue University. He is currently taking computer science courses at U-M Dearborn.

Congress improves voting record

Whatever they did when they got there, members of the 1993 session of Congress were conscientious about showing up to vote on roll calls held during the 11-month session that ended just before Thanksgiving.

In the House, attendance at the year's 597 roll calls reached 96 percent, up from 93 percent the year before, according to Roll Call Report Syndicate's annual survey of voting absenteeism. Senators recorded 97-percent attendance on their chamber's 395 roll calls, up from 95 percent in 1992, the survey found.

The markedly higher turnout illustrates the need lawmakers feel to project a no-nonsense image to constituencies increasingly skeptical about the Capitol Hill work product and lifestyle. Missing a vote here and there rarely affects the course of legislation, but can hurt politically if it draws a negative editorial or a television attack ad in the next campaign.

Nearly all votes in the House, and most in the Senate, are scheduled for Tuesday through Thursday, enabling members to spend long weekends away from Washington without risking legislative truancy.

In the Senate, institutional courtesy is such that roll calls are routinely delayed to accommodate tardy members who may be as distant as National Airport on the Virginia side of the Potomac River.

Eighteen House members recorded perfect attendance, including Kentucky Democrat William Natcher, who has never missed a roll call in 41 years in Congress, casting more than 14,000 consecutive votes. Eight senators registered 100-percent attendance.

Michigan Republican Paul Henry, who died July 31 of cancer, voted only the first roll call of the 103rd Congress in January.

Among the able-bodied, the worst House attendance was that of Carlos Romero-Barcelo, the Democratic delegate from Puerto Rico, who showed up for 58 percent of the 189 roll calls on which delegates could vote. Eni Faleomavaega, the Democratic delegate from American Samoa, was second from the bottom with 62-percent attendance.

Tennessee Democrat Harold Ford scored lowest among House members other than delegates, with 69-percent attendance. He missed 184 of the chamber's 597 roll calls.

Next to Ford were Michigan Democrat John Conyers at 71 percent (169 missed votes), Texas Democrat Craig Washington at 74 percent (156), Texas Democrat Charles Wilson at 81 percent (111), Mississippi Democrat Jamie Whitten at 82 percent (106), and Massachusetts Democrat Joe Moakley and Tennessee Republican James Quillen, both at 84 percent (95 misses).

Also in the bottom echelon were Texas Republicans Joe Barton and Jack Fields at 85 percent; California Democrat George Brown, New York Democrat Eliot Engel, and California Republican Ron Packard at 86 percent; and Alaska Republican Don Young at 87 percent.

In the House, Republicans averaged 97-percent attendance and Democrats, 96 percent. The 116-member freshman class averaged 98 percent.

The Senate's lowest scorers among those still in office were Republican Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania at 86 percent, Democrat Daniel Inouye of Hawaii at 88 percent and Republican Frank Murkowski of Alaska at 89 percent. Specter was seriously ill part of the year.

Senators with 100 percent attendance were Republican Hank Brown of Colorado and Democrats Daniel Akaka of Hawaii, Wendell Ford of Kentucky, George Mitchell of Maine, Daniel Moynihan of New York, Robert Byrd of West Virginia and Herb Kohl and Russ Feingold of Wisconsin.

Grant awarded

St. Matthew Lutheran School received a $300 grant for the current school year from the Aid Association for Lutherans, a fraternal benefit organization.

The grant for the elementary school is designed to enable faculties, through in-service training, to grow in their ability and commitment to carry out the ministry of their school, said an AAL spokeswoman Nancy Glover.

The grant may be used for consultants, speakers and resource materials for in-service training, Glover said. St. Matthew School is on Venoy just north of Ford.

For dieters

The Wayne-Westland Family YMCA, which also serves Garden City, is sponsoring a program for persons who want to learn more about eating low-fat foods. A free seminar will be held by the Y at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan.18, at the Y, 827 S. Wayne Road. It will be sponsored by Body Shape of Westland.

Participants in the seminar will learn what percentage fat should be in their diet, how to read labels for fat content, and types of fat. Interested persons may call the Y, 721-7044.

Setting priorities

School chief urges attention to MEAP

■ Student performance on the MEAP is disappointing and raising MEAP scores must be given a higher priority by Livonia Public Schools, says superintendent Joseph Marinelli.

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER

Once again, a local school superintendent has criticized the performance of Livonia students on state achievement tests.

Last year, it was Clarenceville's superintendent David Kamish. Kamish called his students' scores on the 1992 Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP) tests embarrassing, disappointing and unacceptable, and made boosting the scores the district's top priority. On the 1993 test, Clarenceville students met the challenge; their scores jumped dramatically.

On Monday, ~~in a board~~ of education committee meeting, Livonia Public Schools Superintendent Joseph Marinelli called his district's 1993 MEAP scores "somewhat disappointing." He, too, urged the district to make boosting the 1994 scores "a priority."

"We've made steady progress, but based on our efforts, I would have expected better," Marinelli said after viewing this year's scores. "We must make this a priority."

Trustee Ken Timmons suggested the 1993 scores would have improved if the district had followed Clarenceville's example last year and made boosting the scores a top priority.

"The mistake we made last year was that we swept it under the carpet," Timmons said. "We had fairly low scores. It would have been better if we did what Clarenceville did and made it a challenge, with all working toward it. But that's hindsight."

On the 1993 test Livonia's students scored higher on eight of the nine tests taken. Al Edwards, the district's research and evaluation specialist, described the upward trend as "steady" but one that doesn't show "overwhelming improvement from year to year."

"The people here feel our scores should be as high as Birmingham or Bloomfield," said Marinelli. "There's a high level of expectations here."

Educators repeatedly say scores shouldn't be compared from district to district, that they should only be used for internal improvement.

But when Detroit-area results are printed in the newspaper, it is apparent that scores in Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills are considerably higher than Livonia's.

Timmons called the disparity between Livonia's scores and Northville's scores "unrealistic" and questioned why the disparity exists. Northville is northwest of Livonia, also in Wayne County.

While Livonia students scored in the 40s and 50s on the math and reading tests, Northville students scored in the 60s and 70s on the same tests.

Marinelli, who steps down from his post June 30, told trustees that they, too, must have high expectations for the district's students. "The game has changed."

Individual schools in Livonia, Marinelli said, must be held accountable for the students they graduate.

School board president James Watters asked how poorly performing schools could be penalized.

"We can no longer have performance based on how much money we spend or how many books we have in the library," Marinelli said. "We will be judged on the output of our students. I can't say how schools will be held accountable; I don't know how to do this. But we're at the beginning of looking at school-based accountability."

Livonia's elementary scores in reading and math range from the 60s at Taylor to the 20s at Washington. The reading and math scores for Webster school are in the 90s, but that school houses the academically talented.

The Livonia Observer printed a chart of individual schools and their scores in its Dec. 30 edition.

"A couple of schools have dropped dramatically; a couple have improved dramatically," said Kent Gage, director of elementary education.

This year's graduating seniors will be the first to receive state endorsements on their diplomas.

By June, Edwards said, more than 92 percent of the Class of 1994 should get endorsed in reading and science and about 85 percent will get endorsed in math.

Ken Watson, director of elementary education who becomes superintendent in July, told of one student who attended MEAP study sessions so that he could pass the tests. He now has passed all three, Watson said.

"It made him angry when he didn't pass them initially," Watson said. "This became very important to him."

It's still unknown how much weight business and colleges will put on the endorsement.

But the endorsement is just one example of the many ways the state is now setting the educational agenda, Marinelli said.

"It's clear the state's role is different than before," Marinelli said. "Outcomes accreditation will include MEAP results as part of getting outcomes accreditation. We have to pay attention to this. The state is exercising more discretion over setting the direction of the schools. By 1996, performance standards will be considered to promote students."

Tiger PR man savored glory days of baseball

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Former Detroit Tigers director of broadcasting Neal "Doc" Fenkell hired announcers Rick Rizzs and Bob Rathbun, and counted George Kell and several members of the '68 world champions as friends.

Fenkell, 71, died of cancer Friday at his Plymouth Township home.

"Doc had more friends than anybody I know," said Kell, from his home in Arkansas. "He was one of my best friends. It's tragic."

In Fenkell's tenure as Tigers public relations director, which began in 1954, he introduced the winter press tour and the Tiger yearbook, among other promotions.

"I've enjoyed the game," he told the Observer in a March 1993 interview. "I'm not a fanatic — I like to win," he said.

Fenkell, who was instrumental in forming the statewide Tiger television network and the PASS cable channel, got his nickname "Doc" as a teenager. "I had a desire to be a doctor, I'd patch kids up and put tape on them," he said last year.

Fenkell was born May 10, 1922, in Detroit. He attended Cass Tehnical High School in Detroit. After serving in the 75th Joint Assault Signal Company in the Pacific in World War II, he began promoting athletics while attending Hillsdale College. He worked in public relations for the Packard Motor Car Co. and worked briefly for the Detroit Lions before joining the Tigers.

He married Juanita Diesler on Dec. 31, 1953, who survives him. Other survivors include two daughters, Ann Fenkell of Northville and Nancy Doherty of Montana; and a brother, Robert Millard of California.

Fenkell served as chairman of the board of trustees of Henry Ford Hospital's Maplegrove Clinic and was a member of the Adcraft Club of Detroit, the Detroit Advertising Association, the Justin Morgan Horse Association and the Michigan Harness Racing Association.

Funeral services were Tuesday at the Schrader-Howell Funeral Home in Plymouth. Memorial contributions can be made to Angela Hospice Home Care Inc., 14100 Newburgh, Livonia, 48154.

Ice carver finds market in Hollywood

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Among the carvers convening in Plymouth for this week's 12th Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular are professionals with some impressive credentials.

Jim Nadeau of Nadeau's Ice Sculptures, Forest Park, Ill. — supplier of the 90 hand-carved ice statues lining the streets of downtown Plymouth — works his share of hotel brunches and weddings, but is doing TV commercials and a considerable amount of work for the movie industry, as well.

"We've gotten heavily into motion pictures," said Nadeau, who's participated in the Plymouth ice fest for the past 11 years. "We worked on 'The Fugitive;' 'My Life,' with Michael Keaton; and 'With Honor,' with Joe Pesci. In each one they used us for a scene. In 'The Fugitive,' they used a double-block mermaid at a brunch. In 'My Life,' it was a simple, graceful swan for a wedding reception he was involved in in part of the movie.

"In the Joe Pesci movie, we did several foxes for a scene at a private club. One of the neatest things was an episode of 'The Untouchables,' where John Elliot's sidekick walks into a speakeasy, pulls a Tommy gun out from underneath his overcoat, and blows up a life-sized nude to get everyone's attention. There was ice all over the place; it was a wonderful shot."

Nadeau said he was lucky enough to be hired on the set as a consultant for the show, filmed in a downtown Chicago hotel.

"I think it was the best piece of film I've ever seen. There were blanks in the gun, and we had to drill holes in the back of the nude's neck, and arm. While they were shooting blanks in the gun, they were hitting explosives that blew her head off. It was a wonderful experience and kind of fun."

Nadeau's Ice Sculptures was visited recently by TV's Matt Leonard and the Today Show. "They followed us around for two days, filming us pulling blocks out of the machine, carving and setting up at a hotel; the whole nine yards," Nadeau said.

Nadeau's facility in suburban Chicago features an 8,100-square-foot studio with several carving production areas; a loading dock; and an ice plant that harvests ice.

"It's like a huge Jell-O mold. We take big tanks of ice, dip them into warm water, and let them come down on a power hoist. Then we refill them. They make 365-pound ice blocks," said Nadeau, who was anticipating starting his "big hack attacks" in Plymouth Monday.

Nadeau's 90 street hand-carved sculptures were due to arrive in Plymouth on a 44-foot tractor-trailer.

Nadeau is creating a multi-block, 100-foot-long display that will take up one entire side of The Gathering in Kellogg Park. It will feature bison, with Indians hovering above, all made from ice.

"We'll be doing others around the park for specific corporate sponsors, including Lipton ice Tea and Miller beer. For them, we're doing an original 1855 ice house converted to be the very first brewery," he said.

Nadeau credits Scott Lorenz of Plymouth with originating what's grown to be a highlight among ice carvers nationwide.

"In most ice sculptors' hearts, Plymouth definitely has a lot more credibility than virtually any other place I can think of. I don't think there's a serious ice carver in the country who hasn't participated in, or at least known about, Plymouth," he said.

"When it first started, there weren't very many competitions. It just didn't happen. If you're going to credit anyone, Scott Lorenz is the guy who really did bring the thing back to life.

Big chill offers ice fest thrill

BY KEVIN BROWN

The 12th Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular opened Wednesday under ideal weather.

"The weather's almost perfect for this type of event," said festival executive director Mike Watts.

Through today, the National Weather Service predicted daytime high temperatures in the 30s and nighttime lows in the 20s.

"During the day, people can be comfortable in winter clothing, and it's cold enough at night that the sculptures can stay hard," Watts said.

An arctic front was expected to begin coming through the area late today or early Friday, dipping daytime highs to about 15 degrees through Saturday, the weather service reported.

After the delivery of around 400,000 pounds of ice over the weekend, a team of expert Japanese ice carvers began working Monday on displays in Kellogg Park.

"We've got a full contingent of competitors coming," Watts said. "We'll have some of the best carvers in North America. With a new two-man team competition, we'll have bigger and better carvings than ever."

The expanded competition involves those two-man teams each going at 10 blocks of ice over a 20-hour period starting at 6 p.m. Friday and finishing at 2 p.m. Saturday in Kellogg Park.

Also scheduled for this festival is a new college team competition on Saturday and an individual carving competition on Sunday in the central parking deck.

"This promises to be one of the best ice shows ever," Watts said, adding there will be "a few surprises."

"The Ice Spectacular is Plymouth," said Fran Toney, executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce.

"Wherever I go, people mention the Ice Spectacular. The business community really counts on the Ice Spectacular as a second Christmas. We all know that every dollar that comes into this community turns over seven times in the community," Toney said.

Some other prime features and festival highlights include:

- A promotion in which shoppers can win free airline tickets.
- Oakland Community College ice sculptors' interpretation of "Jurassic Park."
- The "Santa Claus A Tradition" exhibit at the Plymouth Historical Museum, 155 S. Main.
- The First of America "Fantasy Land" ice exhibition in The Gathering and "The Wild, Wild West" exhibits in Kellogg Park.
- Gingerbread house and decorated cake contests at Westchester Mall.
- The Grange-YMCA cards and collectibles show at 273 S. Union.

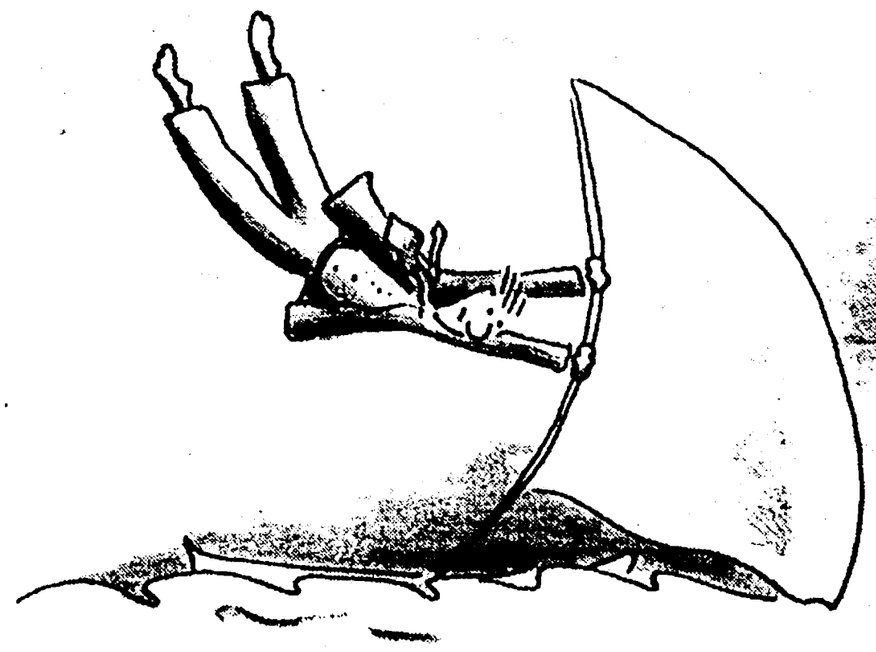
Take a new tack, Jack.



The winds of change in metro Detroit are blowing at gale force.

72% of metro Detroiters now live in the suburbs, where SPRING has twice the circulation of the Free Press--and nearly three times the circulation of The News.

And 28% of their readership is duplication!

OPINION

Getting tough

Court goals reflect progress

District judges are sometimes an invisible segment of government. As part of their work, they hear misdemeanor cases and decide if felony cases should be moved on to Detroit Recorder's Court or Wayne County Circuit Court. For most residents, the district court represents only an address where drivers mail their checks for traffic violations.

But District Judge C. Charles Bokos, recently elected chief of the two-person court, and his partner-in-justice Gail McKnight are more than just paper-shufflers and ticket-money collectors.

In an announcement, published in Monday's Observer, Bokos outlined a series of steps the court intends to carry out this year. With the support of Judge McKnight, the court is telling the community that it is serious about the social issues of domestic violence as well as gang activity and drug abuse.

Bokos, appointed by Gov. John Engler in August 1992 to replace Judge Thomas Smith, who retired several months earlier, is on target about the seriousness of the domestic violence problem.

The issue surfaces in the headlines of suburban and Detroit newspapers and on the local TV stations' newscasts much too frequently.

Bokos, who will seek election for the balance of the two-year term this November, said there is a "disturbing trend" in our society concerning domestic violence, a polite phrase which masks the brutality of a husband beating his wife or children.

In making sure the community is aware of the problem, Bokos said the district court and Westland police have adopted a tough policy that such abuse cases won't be dropped, even if a victim wants to drop the charges against the spouse or boyfriend.

Too many times, a woman files a police complaint claiming an assault or abuse, then changes her mind a day or two later and drops the complaint. In a few instances, the abuser comes back and murders the victim.

The community has to realize that domestic violence is a problem and must be controlled. The court's effort in refusing to let a complaint be dropped is a positive step forward. Let's hope that adults who are prone to flashes of abuse will learn the lesson.

In other goals for the new year, the court has come up with several other solid ideas on how to make the local judicial system more effective for the people it serves.

One is an expansion of the annual Law Day program concept in which the judges hold court proceedings in a local high school. The court said it would be happy to visit any school class or student organization to discuss the criminal justice system.

On an organizational basis, the judges want to have integrated the court's computerized records with the police department's system. One major benefit would be to free more police officers to patrol streets, they said.

The court's announcement that it wants to be more public service-oriented in the new year is a welcome sign from a branch of government that tends to be overlooked by the public.

'Big 3' can resolve area woes

Archer, McNamara, Patterson.

With the pledges of cooperation from this "Big 3" and an improving economy driven by Chrysler, Ford and GM, 1994 could be the turning point in the rebirth of metro Detroit.

The election of Dennis Archer as Detroit mayor — and his recognition of the suburbs as part of the solution to regional problems — could be the beginning of an era of political cooperation that is needed to resolve those problems.

Familiar problems include:

■ EDUCATION — March 15, the old tax deadline, will be an important date for Michigan schools. Voters will decide how the state will fund public education.

■ URBAN SPRAWL — Early in his campaign to replace Coleman Young as mayor, Dennis Archer made it a point to come to the suburbs, to address this problem. Officials here are well aware that the migration to our suburban communities will be our downfall, if we don't address the same problems as a region.

■ ECONOMIC DIVERSIFICATION — The auto is still king in the state and area. But if the North American Free Trade Agreement means anything, more than a decade of talk about diversifying industry must become more than hollow sounds.

And with the trend toward larger health care networks in a region where it is a major industry, national efforts at reform could be an opportunity regionally, with several working models of what has been proposed nationwide.

■ REBUILDING INFRASTRUCTURE — With the possible resolution of school financing, the state and region should make this a priority. Fuel prices are lower and the economy is improving, so a fuel tax to pay for road improvements (Michigan is 45th in per capita spending on roads) is in order.

Gov. John Engler's formula of increased privatization won't work when it comes to some public works projects. It takes money.

Michigan, the auto capital of the world, has roads that are an embarrassment, compared to neighboring states such as Ohio and Indiana. The governor has been announcing a lot of highway projects, but they come from federal funds, not a good, long-term source.

■ STATE PARKS — Our parks are not only a money-maker for a state that depends on tourism, but they are an irreplacable natural resource. The sad fact is that the state has put the emphasis on user fees to support the parks. And the fees have risen while the parks have deteriorated. We must find a way to preserve this resource that cannot be withdrawn, or we will face losing our state treasures.

■ PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION — Mayor Archer, in his campaign, called for putting the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority and Detroit Department of Transportation together. Regional leaders should embrace this approach and come up with an area-wide funding plan, a sticky issue in the past.

■ CITY/SUBURBAN TIES — It is a good omen that Archer has emphasized the importance of ties between Detroit and its suburbs and that our regional leaders have responded. Leaders in our communities have come to realize that the area has paid a heavy price by ignoring the plight of our core city.

With a new Detroit mayor who has embraced regional cooperation, 1994 could be a benchmark year for the area.

MEAP scores knocked

Attention Wayne-Westland parents! If you want your fourth graders to learn how to read, send them to Detroit schools. If you want your seventh graders to learn math, send them to Inkster schools. In science, fifth graders in Inkster and Detroit are scoring higher than Wayne-Westland. All of this is evident according to the recently published Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP) scores.

The monopoly of mediocrity at the Wayne-Westland Schools has done it again. Despite our paying the highest school taxes in the state as recently as 1992, the district isn't even matching the performance of low-income, disadvantaged districts like Detroit, Inkster and Melvindale on some MEAP tests.

How are the kids doing versus Plymouth-Canton, Livonia and Northville? Don't even ask! I don't think you want to know. In Northville, over 77 percent of 11th graders passed the minimum science test. In Wayne-Westland, only 39 percent passed the same test.

Only 13.5 percent of Wayne-Westland 10th graders passed the minimum math test. In Grosse Pointe, almost 66 percent passed.

In college and in life, many Wayne-Westland students are going to have great difficulty competing with students from Livonia, Plymouth-Canton and Northville — if these trends continue.

Who is to blame? Teachers blame parents. Parents blame administration. There is plenty of blame to go around. But I think the primary blame belongs to the unionized teachers.

The classroom is were MEAP scores are made.

A union hall mentality has recently pervaded our teacher corps. Good and devoted teachers are given subtle "messages" by their colleagues not to "rock the boat." If a younger teacher stays after school to help the kids — he or she could be accused of trying to make the others "look bad." Many older teachers know what they can get away with — they know the union contract inside and out. Many teachers are just "coasting" until they can retire.

There is a subtle "chemistry" in a classroom. If a teacher doesn't really want to teach, the kids will pick this up. Kids are very, very intelligent about these things. Eventually, kids and teacher are just putting in their time — fun and games are the order of the day — little is done, nothing is learned. The bell rings, and everyone goes home.

If you want your school to be a baby-sitting service, you have it. If you want your kids to at least be able to compete with kids from "the slums," go to the school board meetings and start demanding results.

Walter Warren, Westland

Feud gone too far

Most of us could hear the short-lived fracas in the hallway (at a school board meeting where school board member Trish Brown alleges she was shoved by former board member Sharon Felan). It wasn't the first time, and probably won't be the last.

Issues that run close to the heart, like the ones involved with any school board, sometimes erupt.

Over the years, we have been witness to a variety of very heated discussions among board members and among board members and their constituents.

We feel that being a member of any forum oftentimes leads to confrontations which we hope we may resolve. However, in getting to that end sometimes an individual's misplaced pride gets stepped on. We must try to not bring that to the forum.

We feel that this inquiry has gone too far already and is a total waste of taxpayers' money and the criminal justice system's time.

The school district deserves better than this.

Paul and Marti Molitor, Wayne

Structure is issue

I heartily applaud Judith Berne's recent "Point of View" column. It has been my contention, since the school funding debate began, that funding reform without cost structure reform is pointless. Regardless of how the funding is derived, if the cost of educating our children is not addressed, then we are simply pulling the same money out of different pockets.

Hailing from Virginia, I can remember cities of 300,000 with one school district and counties of 145,000 also with one school district. While here in Michigan, we have counties of 55,000 with seven school districts. Certainly this has not gone unnoticed in Lansing, or has it?

Who in our state Legislature will demonstrate the intestinal fortitude to address this fundamental issue of cost structure? While I stop short of suggesting that they have wasted their time, one can only wonder why they insist on taking a grossly overweight and inefficient gas hog of an education system to the body shop for a new paint job when it should be in the garage for an engine overhaul.

Please don't lose your focus on this issue. Your public trust will be justly deserved if you are able to make the citizens of Michigan realize that other states have far more efficient education systems than ours. I challenge you to publish a comparison of state systems showing the ratio of students to administrators and students to superintendents as well as average students per district. Should Michigan fall to the low end of these ratios, our citizens will know they are not getting good value for their tax dollar.

Give people the information they need to make objective judgments about relevant issues and our career politicians will be less able to cloud their minds with emotional appeals designed to protect themselves from the wrath of the state teachers union.

Help your child accentuate a positive attitude

Do you complain to your friends and neighbors that your child "has an attitude?"

If you feel this way, you may be one of many parents whose child seems to enjoy the unpleasant and dwells on the negative factors in his or her environment.

A youngster with a negative attitude has problems in the classroom, workplace, and frequently makes your life miserable at home.

Here are some types of negative attitudes:

Carelessness: "It doesn't matter how I do it." This child doesn't do things the way they are asked.

Laziness: "It's too much trouble." This child doesn't do school work or clean up the bedroom.

Fatalism: "If it happens, it happens." This child doesn't care about rules or the consequences of breaking rules.

Recklessness: "I'll never get hurt." This child is a thrill-seeker. Look out for criminal activity or substance-abuse experimentation.

Does your child show any of these attitudes? Then it's time for an attitude adjustment. Here are some tips to help facilitate a positive attitude in your child:

JIM MILANOWSKI

- Encourage your child to talk about positive things. If your child begins to gripe, ask for positive statements from them.
- Have them look for the good in others. If they don't like a teacher, have them identify good qualities of the teacher.
- Have them look for the good in their family. No family is perfect. Have the child identify the good and the bad in their family.
- Encourage them to not be trapped by others. Misery loves company. Encourage your child to have friends that have positive attitudes and stay away from the negative-thinking group.
- Have your child believe in themselves. Tell them the good characteristics you see in them and how unique and special they are.
- Encourage your child to set goals. It helps them stay on a positive focus when they have attainable goals to achieve.

Maybe the next time you say that your child "has an attitude," you will be pleased to report that it is a good one.

Hey ideologues, follow Flat Earth Society, quit

Politicians are more realistic to deal with than ideologues.

When a politician like George Bush or Jim Blanchard is defeated, he doesn't call out the army or the national guard to keep him in office. He graciously cleans off his desk and turns over the great seal to his successor.

Among ideologues, the Flat Earth Society was a rarity. When photos from U.S. space capsules showed the world indeed was round, the Flat Earth Society disbanded.

Most ideologues, however, refuse to quit. Take Lawrence Reed, president of the Mackinac Center, the Midland group that tried to peddle vouchers, charter schools, schools of "choice," and a variety of union-busting schemes under the guise of reform.

Gov. John Engler swallowed much of that ideology. Our state legislators rejected everything but a modified version of charter schools (public educational institutions only; a majority of certified teachers on board).

"Michigan's 'education revolution' was hijacked . . . a majority of the Legislature flunked the test," said Reed, as if the Mackinac Center had some God-given right to administer tests.

Tom Bray, editorial page editor of The Detroit News, says "it would be too soon to write off choice, politically, economically or philsophically. The lesson of California (where voters rejected choice 3 to 1) and Michigan is not that choice is dead, but that it needs a lot more thinking and explaining" because public debate "is only just beginning."

A transplant, Bray seems unaware that Michigan voters twice have rejected parochiaid and vouchers, specifically prohibiting them in the state constitution by hefty margins.

TIM RICHARD

So why did the extreme form of charter schools, "choice," parental vetoes of curriculum, alleged cost containment and various union clipping notions favored by the ideologues get beaten?

Actually, there was adequate debate. Mackinac Center, Teach Michigan and the front organization set up by Amway boss Dick DeVos spent a ton of money on propaganda, including full color reprints of the Forbes magazine hatchet job on the "National Extortion Association."

I offer these explanations:

- Parents know kids learn from teachers, not from abstractions like the "free market" and "competition."
- The ideologues were at war with public schools, using code words like "vouchers" and "choice" to conceal the fact that nonpublic schools are prone to "cherry picking" or "creaming" — skimming off the bright kids who are easiest and cheapest to educate, and leaving the cabbage heads behind for the public schools to deal with. Legislators and the public weren't fooled by the code words.
- The ideologues, while targeting public schools, used the Michigan Education Association, with its warts and pimples, as a dummy target. For all its institutional faults, MEA is composed of many respected and respectable teachers. Also PTA types, administrators, elected trustees and allies like the League of Women Voters rallied to the defense of public schools.

Michigan's educational traditions are 156 years old: Free public education is a right of all kids. Funding public schools is the Legislature's duty; supervising public schools is Lansing's job, delegated since 1908 to the State Board of Education. Private schools have a right to exist and are protected, but never can expect to share in tax dollars — never.

The Reeds, Englers, DeVoses, Brays and other ideology peddlers should follow the lead of the Flat Earth Society: Quit.

LETTERS

An open letter to St. Mary Hospital, Livonia:

First, I must commend the staff at the hospital, for they were very professional and gave me excellent care. I have no disagreement with that; what I do have is a complaint about billing for the use of two pints of my own donated blood.

I was not informed by my doctor, the Red Cross or the hospital that I would be charged $146 for that service. After calling the Red Cross last week, I was told there could be a surcharge of $50, which some insurances pay and some hospitals absorb.

I know for an absolute fact that a nearby hospital charges nothing. I have two friends who had the exact same surgery as I, who donated three pints of their own blood, and who were not charged anything at all. They had Blue Cross Network insurance with the same coverage that I had.

I started receiving a bill about four months after my hospital stay. I would call and talk with a hospital representative who did not tell me exactly what I was being charged for except that it was being turned down by Blue Cross Network insurance. After receiving a number of bills somewhat threatening, I finally got someone to explain what I was being billed for. I think it's a shame that people are asked to donate their own blood and then months later are asked to pay a ridiculous amount of money for it.

With health-care costs being what they are, I think people should be told about charges such as these for their donated blood prior to the surgery so they may have the option to choose another hospital that doesn't charge.

Money, media, not ability doom politicos like Pursell

Carl Pursell, the former congressman from Plymouth, announced last week he was withdrawing from the race for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate.

I've known and admired Carl for more than 20 years. As a county commissioner, state senator and then U.S. representative, he was diligent, sensible, committed and honest. That's more than you can say about a lot of politicians who went as far as Carl did.

And his departure from the race speaks volumes about what has become of our political system.

First, the corrosive infestation of big money.

To mount campaigns for nomination and election to the U.S. Senate in a big state like Michigan, you've got to figure on raising something like $6 million.

Here's what that means in practical terms. If you start two years in advance, you have to raise $57,692.30 each and every week to reach the $6 million goal. Try it; it isn't easy.

Carl tried. But he told me over the weekend: "As I got more and more involved in the race, I found I had to spend so much of my time asking for money, and very little time discussing the substantive issues."

Not only that, but the reality of today's political giving is that a candidate has to travel around the country sucking up to the special interest groups and the political action committees. "I observed that legislators were traveling the country to raise millions of dollars for their races. Raising money all over the country is not my way of representing the people of Michigan."

How many times do ambitious politicians have to sell their souls to the devil in quest of the money to run? I don't know and you don't know exactly, but the majority of the American public who view the political system with distaste and cynicism has good grounds for suspicion.

Second, the vital importance of early media coverage that dubs a candidate as either a front-runner or somehow exciting.

If only because he's not particularly charismatic and certainly not a candidate for a centerfold in Playgirl, Carl got hurt by the media. Bill Ballenger, in his Inside Michigan Politics newsletter, called him "a garrulous frump." Hugh McDiarmid, in the Detroit Free Press, ended his column on Carl with a "zzzzz."

PHILIP POWER

That's too bad because Carl doesn't deserve the rap. He's bright as blazes, so much so that he was the author of one of the only plans to cut the federal deficit that had any chance of succeeding.

And he has his values in the right place; he came home every weekend to live the life of an ordinary citizen who happens to be part of the political system. "Most congressmen live year-round in Washington and return for a fund-raiser or ribbon-cutting ceremony. This system is wrong," Carl said.

And because the system is the way it is, those who want to vote in the Republican primary will be denied the chance to vote for a candidate with strong credentials and a solid background of public service. That's too bad — for Republicans, for Michigan voters and for our country.

When will we ever learn that our political system is so tainted that it threatens to destroy both the officeholders who peristently refuse to reform it and, in the bargain, the country which needs good governing and gets money-grabbers for cover boys?

Thomas was UDM's most valuable defensive player and made second-team All-Midwestern Collegiate Conference.

He helped the Titans to the school's best record ever in men's soccer. UDM advanced to the MCC championship and finished 16-4-3 overall.

The Michigan High School Football Coaches Association recently named Westland John Glenn's Chuck Gordon as Class AA-Region II Coach of the Year.

Gordon guided the Rockets to an 11-2 record and a berth in the state Class AA championship game.

Cage standout set to transfer

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Tara Overaitis, considered one of the top girls basketball players in the state, is changing her school address.

The 5-foot-10 standout confirmed reports Monday that she is leaving Livonia Ladywood High.

Overaitis

She has been accepted as a student and will enroll early next week in Dearborn Divine Child, the 1993 state Class B girls basketball champions.

Overaitis, who averaged 18 points and eight rebounds per game last season, will become eligible next fall after sitting out the second semester, which begins Tuesday, at Divine Child. (Michigan High School Athletic Association rules stipulate that parochial school transfers must sit out one semester before becoming eligible.)

Overaitis, a 4.0 student, is finishing up first semester finals this week at Ladywood.

The decision to change schools ends nearly a month of speculation that Overaitis was entertaining thoughts of leaving Ladywood.

The move comes on the heels of Ladywood's firing of coach Ed Kavanaugh in early December. Kavanaugh, at odds the past two years with Ladywood principal Sister Mary Ann Smith, was forced out after posting a career record of 289-61.

Two other Ladywood players, sisters Maura and Kerry Duggan, are also reportedly transferring to Detroit Country Day School in Birmingham. Sources close to the school also say that two other basketball players may leave.

"I just didn't enjoy Ladywood, and I was not happy with things in general there," Overaitis said. "My mom called the school (Divine Child) for me, but I initiated it. My parents left the decision up to me. I wanted to transfer earlier, but I stuck it out as long as I could."

Ladywood finished a somewhat disappointing 14-4 last season, losing to Plymouth Canton in the Class A district final at Northville. The Blazers, despite winning two of three Central Division meetings with Divine Child, were upset by the Falcons in the semifinals of the Catholic League playoffs.

Overaitis, held to 14 points, suffered a broken nose in the 49-44 upset loss to DC.

"I waited another season to see how things would go," Overaitis said, "But when things didn't turn out the way we all thought, I decided it was time to leave. I had thought about it for awhile."

Kavanaugh's firing, which stemmed from disagreements with Ladywood administrators over access to the school's newly constructed gymnasium, cemented Overaitis' decision to transfer. Kavanaugh's replacement is expected to be named later this month.

"That kind of put the final touch and an end to it," Overaitis said. "It made my decision to transfer more firm."

Overaitis, also a standout in volleyball, will not be able to play this semester under the MHSAA transfer rule.

"I really like it a lot, playing volleyball, but I'll be able to play next year," Overaitis said. "I feel bad for Tom Teeters (the Ladywood coach) because I hate to put him in a spot by

Curious sport

Does figure skating rival NFL?

BRAD EMONS

It was Thursday night — Joe Louis Arena — the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. I was sitting in the press section — 109, lower bowl.

Rudy Galindo of San Jose, Calif., had just turned in a stirring performance in the Senior Men's free skate. He covered his face and wept as the crowd gave him a standing ovation at center ice.

The moment moved me as well.

A rather rotund woman sitting in the next section over held up a curious sign: "This is my NFL." Maybe she was hoping the ABC cameras could pan a glimpse of her sign with the huge national TV audience riveted to the screens at home.

They tell me figure skating is the second most popular sport on television, second only to the National Football League.

As far as spectator sports, however, it must rank in the lower half.

JLA was only half-full Thursday night despite the immense talent of Brian Boitano and Scott Davis on display.

These guys are as good as Barry Sanders and Pat Swilling, but at $35 and $50 per pop, figure skating has its share of no shows as well.

The $38 ticket was only slightly higher than what Lions fans were forced to dole out ($38 per ticket) for Saturday's playoff game against the Packers at the Silverdome.

I blacked out momentarily, though, when Galindo was given surprisingly low marks from the judges. Now I know why they call it figure skating.

How do you figure?

It was also curious to see the national media types herd into the press section, en masse, when Boitano and Davis, the favorites, took to the ice.

And once they were finished, the scribes, like sheep, streamed out. They must have known something I didn't.

What they missed was one of the most inspirational skates of the night when Arn Nielsen of Kansas City, Mo., the last of 16 performers, vaulted all the way into third place in the final standings.

But it was not an ordinary day at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

The Nancy Kerrigan attack made it a media circus for the national press corps.

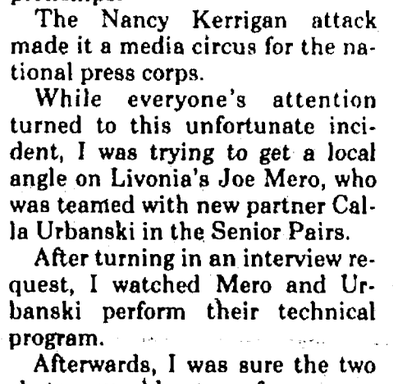
While everyone's attention turned to this unfortunate incident, I was trying to get a local angle on Livonia's Joe Mero, who was teamed with new partner Calla Urbanski in the Senior Pairs.

After turning in an interview request, I watched Mero and Urbanski perform their technical program.

Afterwards, I was sure the two skaters would return for a press conference.

But overrun and overshadowed by the events of the day surrounding the Kerrigan attack, not to mention beefed up security everywhere, my request for an interview with Mero fell on deaf ears.

The day was not totally lost, however.



GUY WARREN/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

I ventured through the snow storm and over to Cobo Arena to see the Hartsells of Westland, Steven and Danielle, compete in the Junior Pairs.

On Saturday, the Hartsells eventually finished fourth overall, while Mero and Urbanski missed out on their Olympic dreams by finishing seventh.

Maybe I picked the wrong day to catch my first glimpse of big-time figure skating. It was a major national event, but it seemed to be run in a minor league way.

In professional tennis, all competitors are required, after a 10-minute cooling period, to be available to the media.

Not so in figure skating.

"If they're so upset with their performance, they don't have to show up," explained one USFSA press officer. "The media is not allowed in the staging areas of the arenas, either."

Funny, but even guys as upset as Wayne Fontes have to face the music after ballgames.

TV crews always have carte blance, but not newspaper reporters.

Security was a joke when I visited the Detroit Skating Club in Bloomfield Hills on Monday.

All fans had to do was buy a ticket, then rub shoulders with skaters as they walked in and around the facility.

Fans could actually reach over the boards and touch the skaters if they wanted to.

Try to gain entry to the Silverdome field area without the proper credentials when the World Cup comes to town this summer, and I'll guarantee a nearby swat team will be ready for action.

Figure skating is a beautiful sport, but a curious sport for sure. The serious fans, however, must belong to some cult.

But I have to admit, at least for one night, figure skating filled my NFL void.

But the NFL, as Jerry Glanville once said, also stands for: "Not For Long."

Strong second half carries Raiders past Ocelots

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

The first half of Wednesday night's game — the first of two annual clashes between men's basketball rivals Oakland Community College and Schoolcraft College — was pretty even. Only a short OCC flurry allowed the Raiders to go into the intermission ahead by three.

The second half? Well, that was a different ballgame. OCC controlled most of it — the first 14:20, to be precise. But the Ocelots did not surrender; they made a game of it, slicing an 18-point deficit to seven down the stretch. But time ran out on their comeback — OCC prevailed, 88-83 at the Highland Lakes campus.

The Eastern Conference losses continue to mount for SC — 0-for-7. The Ocelots are 5-11 overall and have lost seven-straight. OCC evened its conference mark at 3-3; the Raiders are 5-9 overall.

It wasn't like SC coach Dave Bogataj didn't expect it. He knew what was coming. Told at halftime that his team could pull out a win, he said perhaps, then added, "But they have better guard play."

True enough. Raider starting guards Craig Martin and Harold Golson stung SC for 19 and 18 points respectively, but more importantly, they moved the ball better after the break and that resulted in some easy scoring opportunities. Center Corey Young scored all 11 of his points in the second half.

"We didn't pass the ball as well in the first half," said OCC coach Lynn Reed. "In the second half we passed it better, had better ball movement.

"Plus, they were a little flat at the start."

An accurate assessment, to be sure. SC turned the ball over three times in the first 2:11 and 10 times by the midpoint of the second half. By that time, OCC had extended its lead to 66-52.

"Once again, the inexperience at the guard position showed," said Bogataj, referring to the loss of four guards to academics after the first semester. "If they'd just learn to rotate the ball around and not turn it over, Todd (McNeil) would get all that garbage stuff."

McNeil left with a game-high 34 points. But the Ocelots funnel-vision offense, trying to get everything in to him, was costly. The game would not have been close if Steve Whitlow had not broken out of his slump to score 21 points, which included four three-pointers.

But no one else reached double-figures in scoring for SC. In contrast, OCC had five in doubles -- joining Martin, Golson and Young were Willie Payne (12) and Chris McFarlane (10) — and the Raiders' first 13 points of the second half were scored by six different players.

OCC's lead was 77-59 before SC rallied behind — who else? — McNeil and Whitlow. The duo scored the Ocelots' next 18 points and pushed them to 80-73 with 1:31 to go. But that was as close as it got until Dan Perttula nailed a pair of very long-range (over 25-feet) threes in the final 11 seconds.

It was a tribute to SC's die-hard attitude, but it came too late.

■ MACOMB CC 88, SC 68: Defense was non-existant for the Ocelots in Saturday's home game against Macomb CC.

The Monarchs (now 9-5 overall, 3-2 in the conference) got out to a quick lead, pushing their advantage to 48-31 by half-time. Quincy Bowman led Macomb with 19 points; Mike McLaughlin had 15 and Jason Kayl contributed 10.

McNeil had a solid offensive game for SC, pouring in 35 points. But Mark Cady, with 13, was the only other Ocelot to reach double-figures in scoring.

■ WOMEN — OCC 63, SC 55: The Lady Ocelots had a 48-47 lead with under eight minutes left, but managed just seven points the rest of the way in losing to OCC Wednesday at Highland Lakes.

The Lady Raiders improved to 8-6 overall, 2-3 in the Eastern Conference. SC is 6-6 overall, 2-4 in the conference.

Laurie Ales led OCC with 17 points — all coming in the second half. Becky Swan added 14. The Raiders led 29-25 at the half.

Tricia Kazyaka's 15 points paced SC. Angie Cerne had 12.

Comeback falls short for Lady Crusaders

A second-half rally fell short for Madonna University's women's basketball team, resulting in a 74-68 loss to Spring Arbor Saturday at Madonna.

The Lady Crusaders fall to 5-8; Spring Arbor is 8-6.

Poor shooting was the culprit for Madonna. In the first half, the Crusaders were 6-of-23, which translates to 26 percent. The Cougars weren't much better at 11-of-29 (38 percent), but they were good enough in posting a 35-23 advantage at the break.

"We hadn't played since (December) 30th," said Madonna coach Bill Potter, adding that Thursday's cancellation of the Siena Heights game because of snow hurt their preparation for Spring Arbor.

The Crusaders improved in the second half, but not enough: They made 15-of-40 floor shots (37.5 percent) and pulled to within 64-61 with 2½ minutes left to play. But turnovers by Meegan Marlatt and Shawn Bannon on back-to-back possessions resulted in consecutive baskets by the Cougars, pushing their lead to 68-61.

For the game, Madonna was 21-of-63 from the field (33 percent); Spring Arbor hit 25-of-58 (43 percent).

Bannon led the Crusaders with 18 points; she also had six rebounds and five assists. Mary Bieniewicz (from Farmington Hills Mercy) chipped in with 15 points and seven boards, and Vikki Koenig added 10 points. Stephanie Crelley led the Crusader rebounders with eight.

Spring Arbor got 19 points from Kristin Nobach, 16 from Deb Vereecke, 11 from Carmen Whittman and 10 from Liz Chriscinske. The Cougars were 22-of-33 from the free-throw line (67 percent); Madonna made 23-of-30 (77 percent).

Schedule change: The Madonna-Siena Heights game that was snowed out Jan. 6 will be rescheduled for either Feb. 17 or 22, depending on whether the Saints qualify for their conference playoffs. If they do, the two teams will play Feb. 22; if they don't, the game will be played the 17th . . .

Top grade: Some may look with disdain at collegiate athletes when academics are discussed, but that isn't the case with Madonna's women's basketball team. First semester grades are out, and the Lady Crusaders posted a 3.23 grade-point average.

Martin, Mullett champs as Spartans rule invite

Stat summary, 4B

■ WRESTLING

When the going gets tough, it appears the Livonia Stevenson wrestling squad only gets tougher.

The Spartans, scoring a team-high 162½ points, won their biggest tournament to date under coach Don Berg by capturing the 18-school Plymouth Salem Invitational.

Dan Borges, a 125-pounder from Portage, was voted tournament MVP, but it was Stevenson which stole the show.

"We've never had a start like this — two firsts and a third at tournaments," Berg said. "This has always been one of the tougher tourneys because you get a good cross-section of teams from around the state."

Other Stevenson places (1-6) went to Jon Sata (125) and Ben Lewis (171), third; Dan Christenson (103) and Chris Jaztrembski (135), fourth; Scott Goldman (140), fifth; Ryan Vartoogian (119), sixth.

"We have some very good wrestlers and I hope we'll be there in February," Berg said. "Everybody is going to be shooting at us. The trophies are nice now, but the big game is in February."

CC's Bill Lamb won the 112-pound division.

Other Shamrocks placing included Liam O'Donehue (152), second; John Spolsky (heavyweight), third; Dan Krueger (160), fourth; and David Gardner (130), fifth.

Salem, 12th overall with 75½ points, earned a pair of thirds — Scott Hughes (119) and John Svec (160). Canton, 16th in the team standings, got a second from 103-pounder Dan Gruenwald and a fifth from heavyweight Doug Cooper.

"We're down this year and it shows because we had only two thirds," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "But this tourney is pretty tough. Stevenson did really well. They've taken their lumps for a long time, but now they're reaping the benefits because they have a good bunch of kids."

Trophies for the tourney were once again donated by Loc Performance. Krueger also thanked the Salem parents and volunteers for running the tournament.

Chargers finish 4th

Berkley captured the team title with Redford Thurston second and the host Tractors third.

Other individual finishers for Churchill included senior Jim Stojanowski (152) and sophomore Eugene Barbu (189), second; senior David Ziober (112) and freshman Ted Begley (140), third.

Among the area teams scheduled to compete include CC, Westland John Glenn, Plymouth Canton and Livonia Stevenson.

Rockets surprise Walled Lake field

■ VOLLEYBALL

The Westland John Glenn girls volleyball team pulled off a shocker Saturday, winning the Walled Lake Central Invitational with a victory over the host team in the championship match.

The Rockets defeated Central, 14-16, 15-6, 15-13, in a match that lasted almost two hours.

"Central has some great players, but we stuck with them and played tough," Glenn coach Greg Boliard said. "The girls would not give up. The closer the scores were, the more intense we got.

"We did all the things we had to do to win. I have two extraordinarily hard hitters in the middle (senior Lynn Little and junior Stacy Strickler). Our blocking, serving, consistent hitting and teamwork were big factors."

Little and Strickler combined for 33 blocks, 20 of which were aces. Strickler had 28 kills and Little 27 kills, and they were joined on the all-tournament team by teammate Christi Wyrybkowski.

Wyrybkowski had a 94-percent setting ratio. Senior Yasemin Ahmed contributed 12 kills and seniors Marianne Candela and Jamie Cook added strong serving. Candela had 33 good serves in 35 attempts and five aces; Cook had seven aces and 49 of 54 good serves.

The Rockets, who were 11-17 overall last year, improved to 7-2.

Glenn reached the final with a 17-15, 15-7 victory over Seaholm in the semifinal.

Glenn trailed 12-2 in the first game before rallying for the win over Seaholm, which went through a tough 17-15, 15-9 win over Clarkston in the quarterfinal.

The Rockets rolled through pool play, winning five of six games.

Glenn beat Seaholm, 15-5, 15-9; split with Milford, 15-7, 12-15; and beat Rochester Adams, 15-9, 15-4.

Lutheran Westland 2nd

Lutheran Westland finished second in the Warren Bethesda Invitational on Saturday, losing to Birmingham-Detroit Country Day, 10-15, 8-15, in the finals.

The Warriors beat Warren Bethesda in the semifinals, 15-2, 5-15, 17-15.

Senior Erin Cicero had eight kills and 18 digs and junior Emily Schroeder had a 94-percent serving ratio with seven aces.

In earlier round matches, the Warriors beat Oakland Christian, 15-8, 15-11, and Memphis, 15-9, 12-6. They split with Grosse Pointe University-Liggett, 15-2, 10-15.

The Warriors also lost to DCD, 6-15, and tied 11-11. The second game in each of the last three matches were called after a 40-minute time limit.

On Tuesday, the Warriors won their Metro Conference opener at Detroit Lutheran West, 15-2, 15-4, as Cicero went 11 for 11 on serves, including three aces. She also had three kills.

Junior Julie Twietmeyer added two kills.

Junior setter Dena Purdy had four assists, while Ollinger added three.

The Warriors are 8-6 overall.

Wayne Memorial rolls

Wayne Memorial rebounded from a first-game loss on Monday and beat visiting Lincoln Park, 8-15, 15-7, 16-14.

The Zebras battled back from a six-point deficit in the third game to win their first match of the season against two losses. The win opened the Mega Conference Red Division season.

Senior outside hitter Toby Cain led Wayne with eight kills. Senior defensive specialist Crystal Bradley had five digs and three service aces and freshman setter Tammy Raines had 15 assists and the game-winning service ace.

Raines served the last two points of the third game to break a 14-14 tie.

Blazers block Marian

Livonia Ladywood triumphed on Monday in the Catholic League Central Division opener, beating visiting Birmingham Marian, 15-4, 15-4.

The Blazers are 6-1 overall.

Junior Anne Poglits led the way with 10 kills, two aces, three digs and two blocks. Stacey Judd and Lyndi Paling contributed three and two kills, respectively.

Central Michigan University signee Amanda Ault added 10 kills, five aces and 19 assists.

Andover cruises to win in Spartan Invitational

■ SWIMMING

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Bloomfield Hills Andover, defending Class B state champion, took the title with 259 points. But Salem, ranked eighth in Class A, finished second with 220 points, well ahead of the 188 scored by Class A's third-ranked team, Birmingham Groves. Monroe was fourth with 133, with host Stevenson fifth (118) and Plymouth Canton sixth (114).

The meet featured a unique scoring system. In each individual event, there were four heats; each team was allowed to enter one swimmer per heat. Every heat was a separate race, scoring the same number of points (example: first place in the first heat of the 200-yard freestyle earned the same number of points as first place in the fourth heat of that event).

"You have to have some depth," remarked Salem coach Chuck Olson, whose team he felt struggled a bit in its first two competitions. It was different this time.

"They had to apply themselves a little more," Olson said. "Things worked out better. It was just a lack of concentration in that first (dual) meet. This was a lot better, a lot more fun."

Salem swimmers were touched out in several races in losing their opening dual meet against Ann Arbor Huron last week.

The Rocks' best event, without doubt, was the 50 free. In the first heat, Canton's Jeff Clark (22.60, bettering the state qualifying standard) bested Salem's Fred Locke (23.36) for first, with Stevenson's Jeff Buckler (23.49) taking third.

Salem swimmers won the next three heats. David Bracht was first in the second heat (23.32), Mark Levitt won the third (24.55) and Patrick Morgan was best in the fourth (24.97). Canton's John Mogelnicki was second in the fourth heat (25.44), followed by Stevenson's Chad Crosby (25.64), and the Chiefs' Scott Mulder was third in heat No. 3 (25.99).

Canton had two firsts in diving: Jason Fowler won in No. 1 (423.30 points) and Daryl Ballios was tops in No. 2 (328.55). Stevenson's Kirk Bearer won No. 4 (169.45). The Rocks' Woodie Thomas at No. 1 (398.45) and Rob Hawley at No. 4 (130.85) were each second.

Salem did well in the 100 free, too. Patrick Morgan won heat No. 3 (54.54) and Ryan Petroskey was first in No. 4 (55.94), with Bracht finishing second in No. 2 (52.51) and Locke third in No. 1 (50.92). Canton's Clark was second at No. 1 (49.30).

In the 100 backstroke, Salem's Joe Ervin was first at No. 2 (1:00.78) and Canton's Todd Gillihan was the winner at No. 4 (1:06.67). The Chiefs' Mike Orris finished second in No. 1 (57.22); Orris was also second in the first heat of the 200 individual medley (2:03.77).

Other Salem firsts went to John McLenaghan in the fourth heat of the 200 IM (2:18.39); Mark Dettling in the third heat of the 100 butterfly (1:03.28); and Rodolfo Palma in the second heat of the 100 breaststroke (1:08.02).

The Rocks had three seconds and a third in the 200 free: Aaron Berlin was third at No. 1 (1:54.32), with Ervin at No. 2 (1:55.60), Eric Seidelman at No. 3 (2:00.90) and Matt Martin at No. 4 (2:03.59) all taking seconds.

Berlin was also second in No. 1 of the 500 free (5:09.56).

■ BASKETBALL

After three quarters it looked easy for Westland John Glenn.

Visiting South Lyon didn't have much of a bite, but the Lions restored the roar in the final quarter.

Trailing by what looked like an insurmountable 54-38 deficit entering the fourth quarter, the visiting Lions devoured Glenn with a 28-11 run en route to a shocking 66-65 upset.

The knockout blow was turned in by senior forward Jon Fraizer, who nailed a desperation three-pointer from just inside the half-court line as the regulation time expired.

The loss was the first of the season after three wins for Glenn. South Lyon improved to 3-5.

Fraizer scored a game-high 18 points. The Lions also received 15 from Scott Belsley and 12 from Justin Clayton.

Tony Goins' 17 points led Glenn. Guy Rucker had 15, and Brent Washington and Albert Jones added 10 each for the Rockets.

Glenn led 20-12 after one quarter and 38-12 at halftime, before building the 54-28 lead entering the decisive fourth quarter.

■ LIGGETT 55, CLARENCEVILLE 47: A five-minute scoreless span doomed Livonia Clarenceville in its Metro Conference opener Tuesday as the Trojans fell to visiting Grosse Pointe University-Liggett.

Clarenceville, 3-2 overall, put on a late charge by outscoring the Knights 22-14 in the fourth quarter, but it proved too little, too late. The Trojans had fallen behind 41-25 entering the quarter. They scored just four points in the third while being held scoreless for most of the period.

Seniors Mark Kalaj and John Kalaj paced Clarenceville with 18 and nine points, respectively. Joe Girant led Liggett (3-4) with 18.

■ WAYNE 57, FORDSON 43: On Tuesday, Wayne Memorial's defense carried the host Zebras to their second straight win in as many games in the Mega-Red Division.

Wayne (6-1 overall) held Dearborn Fordson to 13 points in the second and third quarters combined, while building a 45-27 advantage entering the fourth.

"I thought we played real strong in the middle quarters," Wayne coach Chuck Henry said. "It was a big win for us — Fordson is a real good team."

Freshman Lorenzo Guess and senior Gerald Adams scored 12 points each for the Zebras. Rod Hardison added nine points, while guard Courtney Howard chipped in with five rebounds. Wayne shot 44 percent from the field (24-for-55).

Ali Barakat and Matt Gac netted 16 and 11 points, respectively, for the Tractors (2-3 overall and 0-2 in the Mega Red).

■ FLAT ROCK 54, LUTH. W'LAND 41: Lutheran Westland's shooting turned cold in the third quarter Tuesday as the Warriors fell to host Rams.

The Warriors (1-4) led 21-18 entering the second half but were outscored 17-5 in the third. Lutheran Westland was its own worst enemy by committing numerous turnovers and connecting on just one of eight shots against Flat Rock's zone defense.

Eryck Stahr paced the victorious Rams (2-4) with 18 points.

The Warriors did have a good night at the foul line by nailing 15-of-17 free throws (88 percent). Flat Rock converted 8-of-11 (72 percent).

■ OAK. CHRISTIAN 87, HURON VALLEY 21: A 31-4 first-quarter run kept Westland Huron Valley Lutheran (0-6, 0-1) winless, as host Auburn Hills Oakland Christian (4-1, 1-0) cruised to victory in a Michigan Independent Athletic Conference game.

Mike Carter and Matt Davis scored 23 and 16 points, respectively, for the Crusaders.

Jason Batkoski paced the Hawks with seven.

Teeters said he will miss Overaitis.

"The family was very up-front with me, and I knew there was a chance she wouldn't be here next semester," Teeters said. "We knew all along there was a chance and a likelihood she'd transfer, but until it was official, I had to treat her fairly like any other player.

"She's a great kid, a strong athlete and a really good student. I wish her the best of luck. It was a move she felt was best for her."

Overaitis went through an application process, was put on a waiting list, interviewed and eventually accepted by DC admissions officials.

Divine Child basketball coach Mary Lou Jansen could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

"After I was accepted I told her (Jansen) I was coming," Overaitis said. "But I didn't make any calls to her before that. I wanted to do everything aboveboard."

The Falcons lose Michelle Glud, Dawn Pelc and Karen Olech to graduation off their state championship team, but return starters Mary Murray, a forward, and All-Catholic point-guard Carrie Carpenter.

Overaitis currently plays on an 18-and-under basketball team with Murray and Pelc.

Northville sinks CC

Redford Catholic Central was edged out in the last event and lost a boys swimming dual meet last week to Northville, 48-45, at the Farmington Hills Mercy pool.

The Shamrocks lost for the first time in four dual meets.

CC's 400-yard freestyle relay team of Steve Reinke, John Zarrow, James Leslie and Paul Magoulik came in second place in 3 minutes, 24.86 seconds, only .43 behind Northville. The same CC relay team earlier won the 200 freestyle relay (1:35.33).

"It was a heartbreaker because it came in the last event, but last year Northville doubled our score, 62-31, so I was proud of them," new CC coach Jeff Shoemaker said.

Reinke and Magoulik each won two events. Reinke won the 100 individual medley (2:05.04) and the 100 butterfly (55.56), and Magoulik captured the 50 freestyle in a Class A state qualifying time (22.5) and the 100 freestyle (51.35).

Shoemaker said he's waiting to have Leslie back at full strength. Leslie missed 1½ weeks because of a cut on his leg.

"All three are excellent swimmers," Shoemaker said.

The Shamrocks kept in shape over the holidays by working out at the Eastern Michigan University pool, where Shoemaker became a Division I All-American as a collegiate swimmer.

On Tuesday, the Shamrocks defeated host Bloomfield Hills Lahser, 125½-57½.

CC won five of eight individual events, all three relays and the overall diving competition.

Taking first were Brian Green, 200 IM (2:13.14); Steve Reinke, 50 freestyle (23.45); Paul Magoulik, 100 freestyle (51.33); Leslie, 500 freestyle (5:00.56); and Kevin Reinke, 100 backstroke (56.69).

Shamrocks stay perfect

■ HOCKEY

Redford Catholic Central, the No. 2-ranked hockey team in Class A, outscored Grosse Pointe North, 11-0, Saturday at the Redford Ice Arena.

The Shamrocks are 7-0 overall and 4-0 in the West Division of the Michigan Metro High School Hockey League.

Jeff Heiner had his second straight hat trick to lead the Shamrocks. Jason Couture also had three goals and an assist.

Mike Brusseau was in net for the first two periods, and John Livingston completed the shutout with his play in the third period.

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

The loud sudden ring of the telephone jogged my nerves.

It was past midnight on a cold, blustery Monday — far too late for the normal high school sports scores we receive nightly at the O&E's office in Birmingham. So when the phone at my desk began ringing I became both curious and a bit concerned.

"Sports, may I help you?" I asked as I picked up the receiver.

"There's something in the kitchen," cautioned an excited woman.

"Donna?" I asked, not sure if the soft, nervous whisper belonged to my wife or not.

"Bill, there's something in the kitchen. It's moving," she said, her voice trembling with uncertainty.

"What do you mean it's moving? What's moving," I asked as her concern bolted through the icy phone lines and slammed straight in my heart.

A frosty surprise

"There's something moving in the bag your friend left for you," Donna explained, as she bravely tried to compose herself.

"What bag," I questioned. "What are you talking about?"

"Larry brought you some fish and there's something in the bag trying to eat them," she stammered. "I'm not going in there."

A friend had been ice fishing that afternoon and stopped by my house on his way home to share his harvest with me. Since no one was home at the time, he left a plastic bag with a half-dozen jumbo perch in it draped over the door knob.

When Donna arrived home a few hours later she peaked into the bag, discovered the snow-covered frozen fish and deposited them — bag and all — directly into the sink.

Fortunately, my neighbor was still awake at the time of the frantic call and came over to inspect the contents of the bag for my wife. Moments later my phone rang again and I was relieved to learn there was no hungry wild animal lurking in my kitchen. The hardy jumbos had simply thawed and were flopping around in the bag.

The episode was an initiation into the sport of ice fishing for my understanding, but sometimes skeptical, wife.

Anglers having success

Ice anglers have been out in force on local lakes over the past few weeks. Although the first-ice frenzy has subsided, area bait and tackle shops report anglers are still having success.

At Lakeside Fishing Shop in Farmington, Bill reports anglers as having success with perch and crappie on Kent Lake at Kensington Metropark. Favored baits are wigglers and mousies. Proud Lake anglers are catching crappie on minnows while pike anglers are getting bites with tip-ups on Walled Lake and Union Lake.

Rex Haworth, of Dick's Bait and Tackle in Union Lake, reports good crappie, blue gill and perch action. Proud, Orchard, Union, Long and Williams lakes have all produced good catches in recent days.

"We had a 34¾-inch 10-pound northern come in from Lower Straights Lake yesterday," explained Haworth. "We're running a pike contest and our current leader is a 35¾-inch 10-pounder. It was caught on Loon Lake."

Richard, at The Sportsman Bait and Tackle in Garden City, reports pike and crappie success at Big Silver Lake, near Pinckney. His customers also report good luck with pike on Orchard Lake, and Winnewana Lake near Waterloo.

Anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are encouraged. Send information to Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Mi. 48009. Fax information to 644-1314 or call Bill Parker Monday evenings at 901-2573.

Actress shines in one-woman play

HUGH GALLAGHER

Playwright Willy Russell was once a hairdresser.

That explains a lot about "Shirley Valentine," Russell's one-character play about a working-class English woman who discovers at 42 that she still has a lot of living to do. Russell's knowledge of women and his empathy for them gives authenticity to every stinging witticism and warmth to every wry reflection.

"Shirley Valentine" is like a conversation in a hair salon. Shirley tells us all about her husband and her adult children "My Brian" and "My Milandra." She describes with good humor what life is like for her and for most women she knows. But there is a depth of resentment that she tells us about with wry asides, careful comments and an occasional bitter tirade that she would usually only share with the wall.

Shirley is offered a chance to escape this life for a brief vacation to Greece and she ponders whether to go or stay.

This play, which offers too easy solutions to life's gnawing problems, succeeds or fails on the strength of the actress who must fill the stage with her one character.

The Meadow Brook Theatre is blessed with an actress that not only fills but illuminates the stage. Jayne Houdyshell brings out all the subtle aspects of Shirley's growing and shifting character as she tentatively moves from the constraints of her working class kitchen to the "fulfillment" of that one great dream, to live life on her own terms.

Houdyshell is the only person on stage through three acts, but you don't notice that because she expertly captures the characters of her unconsciously abusive husband, her selfish daughter, her flakey son, her bothersome neighbors, her free-spirited girl friend and her personal "Christopher Columbus."

The actress speaks with a credible enough British accent but also handles other accents with skill. She also speaks with the slang of youth and the grunts of the callous male.

But it is in the range of emotions that Houdyshell succeeds most completely. Shirley is a good but exasperated mother. She is a woman who once loved this angry and dull witted man who has made her little more than a servant.

But underneath all this is a spirit yearning to be free and here Houdyshell shines most completely because she and director Terence Kilburn never let the essential Shirley disappear. Shirley moves cautiously to realize her dreams and we feel her exaltation and, also, her reluctance to let go of what she has.

Peter Hicks again comes through with wonderful sets, taking us from a drab kitchen in England to a sunny beach on the Greek Isles. Especially impressive are the little details of the kitchen, complete with working appliances.

This limited play is the first fully realized production of this year's Meadow Brook season. It is funny, insightful and big-hearted and the ensemble of one never fails to take us into her heart.

Drama battles AIDS discrimination

Up-and-coming young lawyer Andrew Beckett has just been fired by his prestigious law firm. His former colleagues claim he's just not good enough; Beckett says he's been fired because he has AIDS.

Determined to defend his professional reputation, Beckett hires fierce, brilliant personal-injury attorney Joe Miller to represent him as he sues his former firm for wrongful termination.

Separated from Beckett by a deep social and cultural chasm, Miller was initially reluctant to take his case. He wasn't alone in hesitating; at least nine other lawyers had already refused to handle the case.

Beckett's battle is clear. He's fighting for his reputation, for his life and for justice. Miller faces a different battle as he confronts his own fears and prejudices about homosexuals.

This is the groundwork for the powerful new drama by TriStar Pictures, "Philadelphia," opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters. The film stars Tom Hanks as Beckett and Denzel Washington as Miller. It also stars Jason Robards as Charles Wheeler, the head of the law firm that fires Beckett. Mary Steenburgen plays Belinda Conine, chief litigator for the defense. Antonio Banderas portrays Miguel, Beckett's life partner, and Joanne Woodward plays Beckett's mother.

PREVIEW

"Philadelphia" is directed by Jonathan Demme, written by Ron Nyswaner and produced by Demme and Edward Saxon. Executive producers are Gary Goetzman, Kenneth Utt and Ron Bozman.

Demme and Nyswaner first discussed the story four years ago when they each learned of people close to them suffering from AIDS.

"We said, 'Let's have the courage to make an entertaining film that is sometimes funny about this very scary subject,'" Nyswaner said.

Unlikely ally: Denzel Washington portrays personal-injury lawyer Joe Miller, who overcomes his own prejudices and fears about gays and AIDs to represent Andrew Beckett (Tom Hanks) in "Philadelphia."

he and Beckett are coincidentally doing research in a law library at the same time and Beckett is visibly showing the effects of his illness and is trying to fend off a librarian who wants him to remove himself to a private room where, it's implied, he won't be able to infect the other library patrons.

Miller still harbors his own prejudices, but now he sees Beckett as a man vulnerable and alone who is being discriminated against and it fills him with anger and compassion. Able to identify with Beckett in this instance of injustice, Miller finds himself able to ally himself with Beckett in this larger battle against the discrimination he suffered when fired by his law firm.

"What brings us together," Washington said, "is our love of the law. These are two very good lawyers and once I start getting into the case with him, I can't turn back."

Hanks and Washington were cast immediately after the script got the go-ahead and both actors were anxious to work with Demme.

Immediately after he was cast, Hanks began a physical transformation for the role. Working with personal trainers to lose 30 pounds by the end of the film. He had to look like someone moving through progressive stages of AIDS, yet needed to be healthy enough to maintain a difficult filming schedule. Make-up artists and hair designers researched the effects of AIDS on appearances and worked to give Hanks the proper look at each stage of Beckett's illness.

"I talked to any number of doctors and to men who had AIDS," Hanks said. "I asked some pretty blunt questions and amazingly everyone I talked to was very forthcoming with information and suggestions and tips."

Much of the film was shot on location in Philadelphia courtrooms.

Reality was driven home in an emotional day of filming at a local clinic, ActionAIDS, where 20 of the clients, many visibly suffering from HIV-related illnesses, participated in the scene.

KEN REGAN

Dog sled races test young man's 'Iron Will'

"Iron Will," opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters, is based on a true story. The movie tells the story of a courageous young man and his loyal team of sled dogs as they embark on a treacherous cross-country race.

A boy suddenly thrust into manhood after his father's death, Will Stoneman's (Mackenzie Astin) only hope to see his family through the resulting financial crisis is to enter a grueling sled dog marathon and win the $10,000 grand prize. In a rigorous competition that could easily defeat strong men, Will sets out in the bitter dead of winter on a 522-mile course that runs from Winnipeg, Canada to St. Paul, Minn. However, nothing in his imagination could prepare him for the perilous trek ahead, and his survival depends on the strength and courage of his faithful team of dogs, led by the stalwart, Gus.

Exhausted and numb from the journey, Will must find the tenacity to continue against impossible odds and discover a way to keep his dreams — and himself— alive in Walt Disney Pictures' new live-action adventure, "Iron Will."

Directed by Charles Haid, from a screenplay by John Michael Hayes, Djordje Milicevic and Jeff Arch, the film also stars John Terry as Will's father and Penelope Windust as his mother. The producers are Patrick Palmer and Robert Schwartz.

In 1971, screenwriter John Michael Hayes was commissioned by Bing Crosby and Mort Briskin's company to write "Hartman," based on the American musher's incredible journey in a 1917 sled dog race that ran from Winnipeg to Como Park in St. Paul.

JOHN BRAMLEY

Adventure: A young man's passage from childhood to adulthood through an encounter with nature and mortality begins when Will Soneman (Mackenzie Astin) enters a grueling dog sled race in "Iron Will."

In 1988 producer Robert Schwartz discovered the material. "Iron Will" is one of the best stories I've ever read," he said.

'Shadowlands' was excellent in every way

This week's reader review of "Shadowlands" was submitted by Esther Liwazer of West Bloomfield.

The film is a stunner! Excellent in every way. It addressed issues I struggle with — death, the loss of love, the day I lose a loved one, and go it it alone.

It's all summed up for me in one line by Debra Winger: "That's the deal."

You dare to love, live life to the fullest — remember that when it's over. Can't have love without pain. That's the deal. There is no free lunch, emotionally speaking. Sometimes life is such a lonely business.

Anthony Hopkins has a great line too: "Books are written (read) to remind us we are not alone."

The film unfolds authentic, very personal feelings. You dare to live a proactive, loving existence, then you pay. "That's the deal." This film is close to the bone!

Butterflies thrive in greenhouses

TIMOTHY NOWICKI

Butterflies are not just a summer insect anymore. Many people are enjoying these beautiful creatures in enclosed houses built especially for them. These houses allow us to watch adults of many species as well as their caterpillars and chrysalises (cocoons).

Suburban residents don't have to go too far to enjoy butterflies even in the cold winter months.

A portion of one of the greenhouses on the campus of Michigan State University has been designated a butterfly house. It is on the north side of campus slightly west of the Collingwood entrance off Grand River in East Lansing.

After sliding the door open, you are greeted with high humidity and several fluttering black and yellow zebra butterflies. Their yellow stripes contrasting against a black background provide a striking image for a butterfly. Many of the zebra butterflies fluttered within inches of us and landed on plants that grow over the walkway.

In addition to flowers that serve as nectar sources for the adults, there are tables of sugar water for them to feed from. Caterpillars of the zebra butterfly feed on the passion vine. I did not find a caterpillar on the passion vine, but I did find one on a low plant next to the walkway.

Scattered around were several chrysalises from both the zebra butterfly and some monarch butterflies. I enjoyed the challenge of finding the chrysalises on the various plants in the greenhouse.

This facility is not geared for large-scale public viewing at this time. But if you are in the area it would be fun to stop in. It's free.

If you travel to Cincinnati, the zoo has a separate butterfly area complete with lush plants and several varieties of butterflies.

For the snowbirds who go even farther south for the winter, you may want to stop at Calloway Gardens southwest of Atlanta, Ga., and admire their butterfly house, or stop at Butterfly World near Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

When Mackinac Island opens this summer, you can also experience a butterfly house after you have had your share of fudge.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia. You can leave him a message using a Touch-Tone phone at 953-2047, mailbox 1874.

Household's play things are teachers

How much did those fancy, colorful, fine, often expensive toys set you back for Christmas 1993? According to a recent newspaper article, a geographic survey done throughout metropolitan Detroit (including the city and the suburbs) indicated parents spend as much as $500 or more, depending on their income/budget for toys.

In some areas, such as Romulus, the survey showed parents spending as little as $70 for commercially-made toys. While the commercially-made play things are interesting and toys that are probably best considered educational come with big price tags, young children, especially mobile infants and toddlers, need an arsenal of fun, safe toys to hold their attention. Moreover, toys should be fascinating enough to stimulate learning and encourage language development.

Many things around the house can be safe and pleasurable for baby to play with without him or her becoming frustrated and bored. And if baby puts any of these aside, you can retrieve them for your own use. Here's a list of items and their uses:

- Unbreakable mirrors - Baby looks in the mirror, recognizes himself or herself and smiles, touches image and plays peek-a-boo.
- Plastic jars and lids - Baby removes and replaces the lids.
- A set of measuring cups and/or spoons - Baby stacks the cups and/or spoons. They also make for a rhythmical instrument.
- Muffin tins - Baby puts items into the individual cups.
- Paper bags and baskets - Babies love to fill and empty paper bags and baskets. Toddlers love to carry things around with them. If the basket has a handle, it makes it easier for them to manipulate.
- Plastic clothes pins and empty coffee cans - Baby can drop pins into the can and listen for the sound it makes against the tin.
- Empty spools of thread - The baby can stack or roll large empty spools or put them into containers.
- Socks in a ball - Sweat socks rolled in a ball are great for retrieving, pushing along or just squeezing.
- Large empty boxes - Baby can crawl through a large box when both ends are removed. Put several large boxes end-to-end to make a tunnel. You can even position boxes to make an obstacle course.

Annabelle: Where now brown cow?

BY SUE MASON

Betty Monnette quickly flips open her photo album. She thumbs to pages showing Annabelle in Ochos Tios, Jamaica, in a hot tub in San Marino, Italy, on a farm in Koninkrijk, the Netherlands, and at Waikiki Beach, Oahu, Hawaii.

Along with the photographs are postcards and letters, including the first one that sent the bovine on her international adventure.

Bovine? Yep, Annabelle is a cow. Not just any cow, she's a Christmas cow. Annabelle is a pint-sized version of the real thing that after a year of travel ended up in the right spot in Monnette's frontyard Nativity scene.

"It was so much fun to come home and there'd be a letter setting on the table," said Monnette. "Everyone wanted cow reports."

Now, before you think Monnette may be a straw short of a full stack getting excited about a plastic cow, meet her brother-in-law, Jon Renaud . . . Jon "the cownapper" Renaud of Countrified: There's more to Brian Hatfield's life than piles of country music CDs. The Livonia resident has found a niche playing those tunes late nights on "Young Country," WYCD-FM.

Getting hot as a countrified DJ

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Most radio station employees don't survive one format change.

In mid-November, Hatfield was named the overnight personality for the midnight to 5:30 a.m. shift Monday through Friday on "Young Country," 99.5 WYCD-FM.

"It was the biggest thrill of my life because I survived two format changes; most people don't survive one," the 22-year-old said.

He owes his career choice to Jack Scott, a WHYT-FM 96.3 DJ he frequently listened to while growing up.

"When I was younger, when 96 was really, really big, I actually stayed up in the middle of the night to try to win prizes," Hatfield said in the studio during his late-night shift. "I talked with him (Scott) for three straight hours."

Hatfield was impressed because the DJ took the time to explain the ins and outs of the industry to him. "Just from that experience I knew that's what I wanted to do," he said.

Quick change

As a Specs Howard School of Broadcast Arts student, Hatfield began his professional career by interning at 99.5 when it was pop station WDFX-FM. Two months later he was hired as a board operator. When the station was bought out and subsequently changed to talk radio WOWF-FM, he made the cut and was rehired as a call screener/producer.

The talk radio format didn't stick around long. While the head honchos were meeting about switching the format to "Young Country," Hatfield was told to "run the board" and play songs for a few hours.

"I was scared; I was so scared. I didn't know what was going to happen," he said.

It turned out to be a blessing in disguise.

"I started this whole thing," Hatfield said with a grin. "I was the first person to play country at the station."

When the switch to "Young Country" was official, he returned to producing - this time for Jyl Forsyth's 7 p.m. to midnight show.

Then the late-night DJ quit and Hatfield was once again asked to fill in while still producing Forsyth's show. On Nov. 12, Hatfield was promoted to "on-air personality," beating out some 700 other applicants.

Had the desire

Although he's excited about his new position, he's not surprised about it because he "had the desire to do it." That's the philosophy he's maintained during his career.

"When I used to work at a hotel, I got 'employee of the month,' " he said. "I said I was gonna do it and I did it."

"It's a passion of mine, I guess I can say."

Working at "Young Country" has been like being a part of an ideal family, he said. Everyone respects each other and that goes for Hatfield as well.

"I have some of the best teachers in the world like Dr. Don (Carpenter, afternoon personality), Eddie Haskell (assistant program director)," Hatfield said. "They've been through everything; they know what this is all about.

"I couldn't ask for a finer place to work. There's no egos in this place. You can walk up to anyone and talk to them."

He's only been at it for a few months, but Hatfield said he's enjoying it immensely. It's taught him a lot about country music and erases anyone's preconceived notions about country listeners.

"There's people who think that they're rednecks and they'll kick your butt if you touch them," he said. "Country listeners are so affectionate toward each other. It's incredible. I get so many calls from people who want to help each other.

"The people in the Detroit area are so generous. That's one thing that gets kind of blanked out about Detroit, the people are very giving."

Sitting in the studio with Hatfield for a few hours, it's obvious that his listeners are just as enamored of him. Hatfield waves through his fifth floor studio to a Royal Oak police officer who flashes his brights at him to let him know he's listening.

Hatfield - a self-proclaimed "laid-back kind of guy" who loves his cat, Banjo - instantly recognizes many of the people who call to chat with him during his shift. Employees of country bars, like Diamonds & Spurs in Pontiac, visit him and occasionally country dance around the studio.

But, Hatfield says, he needs to fine-tune his skills. Actually, his off-the-cuff comments are on par with any seasoned disc jockey. He shamelessly flirts with female callers ("It's all part of the job") and gushes every time young country singer Martina McBride is mentioned.

Yet, he said, he still gets nervous when he turns on the microphone.

"At one time, a quarter of a million people could be listening to you," he said.

School's radio station gives students a start

STAFF WRITER

Sweena Aulakh, music director at Plymouth Canton/Plymouth Salem High Schools' radio station, WSDP, aspires to work in the music industry. According to local record company representatives, she's got a good start by working at WSDP.

"I think high school radio is excellent," said EMI Records Group college representative Kim Zonca. "I think for a kid who thinks they want to go into the music business or radio, it's a great way to start because they can get a jump on everyone else."

Dave Adamski, college representative for Polygram Group Distribution in Warren, agreed.

"Oh, definitely. (It's worth it) Just to learn how to run the board before anyone else," said Adamski, who while in college worked at Michigan State University's WDBM.

These teens have an edge because there aren't very many high schools that have a radio station, said Zonca, a former Livonia resident who now lives in Rochester Hills. WSDP is only one of a handful in southeastern Michigan. Other areas such as Avondale, Andover, Novi and Warren also have radio stations.

"I wanted to go into the music business since I was a kid. If I would have known I wanted to go into radio, I would have transferred," she said.

Record company reps like Zonca and Adamski use high school and college radio stations to "build a street base for our artists."

"We're not really chart-oriented," she said about her department. "Our priority is to get people aware of our artists. In high school and college, there's a lot of word-of-mouth as far as what music is popular. That's how we try to build a buzz for an artist."

WSDP (88.1) has been on the FM dial for about 21 years. Evolving from classical to Top 40, the station is now dubbed the "88 Escape" blending underground and popular alternative music with jazz, worldbeat and rap. The station also broadcasts news reports and public service announcements. It's on the air 6:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and 6:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Over the years that I have been writing this graphology column I have had several requests for more information on my work, also for a sample of my handwriting. With the entire country celebrating National Handwriting Week Jan. 17-23, I thought this might be an appropriate time to share some information with you.

Graphology, the study of one's personality from the handwriting, has enjoyed a long and prestigious history in many European countries. In the 1930s, a number of European-trained physicians, neurologists and psychologists introduced graphology to America. Unfortunately, it found its way to the entertainment field. Despite this, some research has been accomplished by American graphologists and continues to be making progress.

American studies are handicapped by the fact that there is not yet a licensing clearinghouse or caretaker agency to ensure competence of practicing graphologists. Computerized graphology for entertainment has rapidly caught on as a money maker.

However, graphology as a tool for personnel selection has moved into the field. Emotional makeup, motivation, self-confidence, sense of responsibility and other factors of character can be determined through handwriting analysis and used to supplement other psychological testing devices. Today, an increasing number of firms in the United States are using graphology in this manner. Graphology definitely has a useful future in the counseling services.

My own interest in graphology began about 25 years ago when I took a basic course. My interest immediately blossomed, and I continue to take courses and workshops in both graphology and psychology. I received my teaching certificate from the Scriptology Institute and taught graphology in the Livonia Adult Education Department for many years.

Each summer the American Association of Handwriting Analysts holds a national conference with leading speakers from all over the country. Incidentally, the 1994 conference will be at Weber's Inn in Ann Arbor this summer. These conferences are a marvelous place to learn and network with others in the field. I had often talked with people who were writing newspaper columns on graphology and thought I would like to do this.

On returning home from a conference about 15 years ago, I was inspired to write a weekly graphology column for this newspaper chain. I had strong feelings that I might be able to help people understand themselves better. So I applied, was hired and have been writing Graphology Profiles ever since.

Sincerely,
Lorene Green

Now let us turn to the handwriting for today:

Dear Lorene,

Upon reading another column written by you I decided I had to try my luck at getting chosen.

I am 37 (but still think of myself as 25 or so) years old, right-handed, a married woman with one son and full-time employment.

My handwriting changes so drastically from day to day and sometimes within one sitting, that I have even been asked to re-sign checks at my own bank! I must say, what you do seems so rare, I've never even heard of another columnist with like skills and training. Do you associate with other graphologists around the U.S.? You must save one column to tell us more about yourself.

C.M.,
Troy

Upon reading another column written by you, I decided I had to try luck at getting chosen.
I am a 37 (but still think myself as 25 or so) year old right-handed, married woman

Without seeing handwritings done at other times I cannot comment on them. Today's handwriting was written quickly. People who write fast and legibly usually do most things quickly. They think fast and move progressively forward.

This writer has been blessed with high intelligence. Her mind is always looking ahead seeking answers to daily situations and problems.

Persistence is another strong trait. She does not give up easily. She is interested in accomplishment and is a trustworthy and competent worker. In matters of importance to her, she may be inclined to insist on her own opinions.

Organizational skills are much in evidence at the time she wrote to me. She is quite capable of handling her daily routine and the pressures involved. She is adaptable and rather versatile.

This is a person who feels things deeply. These feelings remain for long periods of time and may tend to make her a tad prejudiced.

She was looking at life through rose-colored glasses when she wrote to me. At times she seems to pull herself back to reality. Mood swings are often experienced.

Regarding money, she has a tendency to spend more than she originally intended. I don't think operating on a strict budget would be a high priority of hers.

This young woman vacillates between her need for independence and a need for support and security from others. This could make her indecisive at times.

Her way with words is quite remarkable. Words and ideas flow for her. She is no stranger to charm. However, she is rather easily irritated at times and is ever-ready with a quick retort. When she finds herself in a threatening situation, sarcasm becomes her defense.

With family, friends or on the job she feels empathy and affection. While she enjoys interaction with people she also has a need for space in her relationships. She does not want to be crowded by others.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are all helpful and objective feedback is always welcomed.

Hospice schedules volunteer training

Hospice Services of Western Wayne County Inc. will offer volunteer training sessions beginning in February.

The eight-week, 20-hour training course is offered at the Hospice Services offices in Garden City and Plymouth. Day classes will be 9-11:30 a.m. at the Plymouth office, 127 S. Main St., beginning Tuesday, Feb. 8. They will meet weekly through Tuesday, March 29.

Evening classes will be offered 6-8:30 p.m. at the Garden City office, 6701 Harrison, beginning Thursday, Feb. 10. They will meet weekly through Thursday, March 31.

The course focuses on all aspects of hospice care. It provides a complete overview of hospice and summarizes several aspects of patient care. Family dynamics, medical aspects of care, spirituality and the hospice family, hospice bereavement care and physical "hands-on" care are some of the topics covered.

Hospice volunteers are concerned and caring people who donate their time, effort and talents to support those in need of the care.

"At no time is a helping hand more important than when loved ones are undergoing the stress of a family member's illness," said Yvonne Strand, Hospice Services volunteer coordinator. "Our hospice volunteers are trained in the skills of supporting those in distress."

"Volunteers are a critical part of offering hospice care to individuals with a limited life expectancy," said Flo Pulford, assistant volunteer coordinator for Hospice Services. "Without our volunteers we would not be able to offer much-needed support for our patients and their families.

"Volunteers are wonderful; they offer their services simply because they want to give of themselves."

Volunteer activities can involve working directly with patients and families, or those numerous service functions which support the delivery of patient care. The interests and skills of each individual are explored and considered when volunteer assignments are made.

Hospice Services was established in 1981 to offer compassionate, skilled home care to those individuals who face an incurable illness. Hospice offers supportive care, promotes quality of life and provides comfort and emotional healing for the patient and family members.

Through the efforts of full-time staff and volunteers, Hospice Services is dedicated to providing much-needed services to patients with any incurable illness, with a limited life expectancy, in western Wayne, Southern Oakland and Eastern Washtenaw counties.

It also offers a 13-month bereavement program for families as well as adult grief relief group meetings, children's grief support programs, mailings, telephone calls, visits and memorial services.

Like commercial stations dealing with budget cuts, high school radio has to work around millages. Students who participate at WSDP have to pay $75 per year.

"Before, since the millage didn't pass, we were only on the air until 3 p.m., but the teachers took a pay cut" and that put money back into the fund, Aulakh said. That led to the $75 fee. Aulakh said she feels it's worthwhile to pay it.

"For me, definitely; for most people on staff, it was no problem with them paying it," she said. "With sports, some people aren't sure whether they'll do well or whatever."

WSDP receives most of the same benefits that college and commercial radio receive. Within the last year, the station has interviewed the likes of Mystery Machine, Moby, Smashing Pumpkins, Swervedriver, Henry Rollins and Verve. Local bands such as Charm Farm, Jes Gru and The Exceptions have appeared on Aulakh's "Native Exposure," a show dedicated to local music which airs on Thursdays.

"Most people assume that we're a college station, but when they find out that we're not, nothing changes," said Aulakh, who hopes to get a job at the University of Michigan station WCBN when she starts there in the fall.

The station also has shows centered around music industry gossip ("Backstage Pass" on Tuesdays), movie reviews ("Silver Screenings" on Fridays), newsmakers ("Community Focus" on Wednesdays), reviews of books or music ("What's Up With That" on Thursdays) and grunge music ("Hardlines" on Fridays.)

Detroit.

Somewhat of the family jokester, Renaud engineered Annabelle's escapades after taking her on New Year's Eve 1992. She was the newest addition to Monnette's Nativity display and had only been around for three weeks when she disappeared.

A nurse at Children's Hospital in Detroit, Renaud, armed with a ransom note made up of words clipped from magazines, cruised by Monnette's Redford home on New Year's Eve. Worried someone might be watching, he pretended to knock on the door before taping the note to it, then picked up the cow and headed for his car.

It wasn't an easy task. Renaud felt the whole neighborhood was watching, made easy by a house that was "lit up like it was daytime."

"I started walking and the cow got snagged on the light; I forgot she had a light in it," Renaud said. "And when I pulled the light out the ear detached and the cow fell on the ground."

STAFF PHOTOS BY JIM JAGDFELD

Laugh, laugh

Monnette's sons discovered the note and when she saw it, she "right away knew it had to be a joke," although she admits to accusing everyone at their Rose Bowl party New Year's Day.

"Jon was one of our prime suspects," she said. "But when I called him, he played it good. Everytime I'd mention it, he'd say, 'That's a good idea, I wished I'd thought of it.' "

Renaud stashed Annabelle at his house and sent another ransom note, including the ear and a Polaroid of Annabelle with a bloody bandage where her left ear had been.

The "cownapper" demanded $500,000 be left in a briefcase on the U.S./Canada border in the Windsor Tunnel along with two Egg McMuffins. He closed on an ominous note: "If you don't comply, I'll be eating steaks until the cows come home."

That was how Renaud began involving friends at work. One gave him the camera that recorded Annabelle's adventures and others provided the trendy postmarks although the cow never ventured too far from "home."

Stumped as to where to mail the first letter from without tipping off Monnette, Renaud wrote the letter and had a friend mail it from Jamaica. The friend went so far as to copy it onto hotel stationery and include a little sand. Renaud took a photograph of Annabelle dressed in a flowered shirt and hat he and his wife Cindy had bought at Kmart.

Before long, he was asking everyone at work where they were going for vacation and had a lot of offers. The Italian hot tub photo was taken by a friend at his new home. Her grazing in the grass in the Netherlands was taken on a friend's parents' farm in Ontario.

'Moo' time

"Once I was a month or two into this, I was committed to going a full year, but towards the end I was thinking of keeping her another year to do all the things I didn't get to do," he said. "I wanted to take her to Tiger Stadium and take a picture of her wearing a Tiger cap . . . And there's this doorway I pass on my way to work that's littered with empty liquor bottles. I wanted to take one there, showing her on the skids."

"I think my favorite was the letter from Hawaii," Monnette told her brother-in-law. "You know, the "Milk 'em, Dano.' "

If Monnette was having fun with the joke, so were her friends. They showered her with cow T-shirts, checkerboards, plaques, even an ice cream scoop that moos. A dental hygienist, she'd find her new patients were stuffed cows. And her boss even took up a collection to have Annabelle's picture put on milk cartons.

But she's says the best may have been the surprise 40th birthday party her husband and two friends threw for her. Yep, you got it; it had a cow theme. The men wore hoods with cow heads on them and the women wore ears; when Monnette walked in they yelled moo. And the guy in the cow suit (complete with utters) turned out to be her 19-year-old son who had left for college the day before.

"I think the best gift was from Jon," she said. "I got this big box and assumed it had the cow in it," she said. "When I opened it up, it was a cooler filled with beef bologna, beef necks, hamburgers, everything beef."

Renaud decided to return Annabelle on Christmas Eve and did it with the same type of flourish as when he took her. Renaud's wife, Cindy, asked that he give a special present from the Renauds to their respective parents. Again, it was a big box.

The packaging may have fooled Monnette, but when her mother flipped the lid, she knew her prized possession was back.

"I think Jon thought I was going to kill him," Monnette. "I was screaming and going at him to hug him."

Monnette admits that it hasn't been the same since Annabelle came home. In fact, she talks about the disappointment of not getting letters from Annabelle.

The Bible, being God's Word, should be read carefully because GOD SPEAKS TO EVERY AREA OF LIFE. Only God can deliver us from doctrinal delusion, Satan's deception and moral defeat. "Therefore I esteem ALL thy precepts concerning ALL things to be right, and I have EVERY false way" (Psalm 119:128) We will send a free "Bible Reading Guide" to all requesting one.

Rosedale's music-maker says bye

BY SUE MASON

GUY WARREN/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Shirley Harden is a woman in need of a church. It's not that she's new to the area and doesn't know where to go. She's been active in the same church for almost 30 years.

She needs a new church because, after working with three generations of churchgoers, Harden has resigned as music director at Rosedale Gardens Presbyterian Church, effective Jan. 1.

"It (attending the church) wouldn't be professional for my replacement," said Harden. "It's too important of a part of my life and working with the church choirs . . . I've already had inquiries from other churches."

It's not surprising. Harden has developed a solid reputation for the music program at the Livonia church. She had been doing some youth choir work at a church in Detroit in 1963 when she heard about the job at Rosedale Gardens. At the time, there was just a high school and an adult choir but by the time she took a three-year hiatus several years later there were 12 choirs — six vocal and six handbell.

"I needed a break," Harden said. "I never expected to come back." She did and by the time she resigned the number of choirs had dropped to eight. But membership is growing at the lower age range and before leaving she added another youth choir to the roster.

During her tenure at the church, Harden developed one of the first handbell choirs in the area in 1964 when the Rosedale Gardens was given two octaves of handbells. She also organized children's and women's choirs that are still in existence.

"This is a very stable church, a very stable area," she said. "Families that have left are buying back into the area where they grew up. One of the neatest things about this job is the many families who are in the church now I had as children in the children's and high school choirs. Now I'm working with their children.

"I was there for their weddings and baptisms . . . that's one of the nicest things about the job."

Many talents

Harden studied music education at Michigan State University and received her master's degree in music from the University of Michigan — after her children were in high school.

With her church job a part-time position, Harden plied her musical skills in other ways. She has done conducting seminars around the country and has taught courses in the method of teaching handbell ringing at Indiana and Michigan State Universities and U-M.

She also teaches each summer at Villanova University in suburban Philadelphia and music appreciation and a continuing education class on attending the opera at Schoolcraft College. And if that's not enough, she is a writer, trainer and consultant in training materials and software documentation manuals for High Performance Inc. in Southfield.

Harden was dean of the Detroit Community Music School for seven years. At one time a music conservatory, the school is now a part of the Center for Creative Studies.

She also has been active in the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers, participating in festivals and major events around the country. She's a member of the professional handbell group Classical Bells, which presents an annual spring concert and performs in schools through Young Audiences Inc.

"Handbell ringing is really an art," she said. "It's a very different challenge to be able to play advanced music, but it's also satisfying at the beginner's level because anyone can play music with handbells or handchimes."

Branching out

While Harden was instrumental in the start of the church's annual musicals, and appeared in the first production, "The Sound of Music," she gives credit to the congregation.

"You lay the groundwork by creating a musical community that has the ability to do it," she said. "You create it and get it going, then you can stand back and let it go.

"You always have to be aware; you always have to be open to ideas that you might try with your groups."

Harden has no idea how much time she devoted to her part-time church position, but likened it in some ways to teaching. A teacher needs a lesson plan to teach and she needed a plan for each rehearsal.

But the challenge of the job was to do music that spoke to the congregation, to be in step musically with the times and draw on the best church music possible.

"Church music has changed through the years; music that was suitable for junior high girls back then isn't suitable now because music speaks to them," Harden said. "But you don't give up Brahms, Bach and Mendelssohn; you add to them."

Harden's involvement in church music is shared with her three children. All have been involved in music programs and two daughters now conduct and direct handbell choirs at churches in Ann Arbor and Baltimore, Md. They turn to their mother whenever help is needed in planning performances.

Harden is looking forward to a less hectic schedule — "I'll have an opportunity to take a trip at Easter and take my daughter to France. I never could do that before." She admits she will miss the church. She mentions all the people, their children and grandchildren she has come to know and the young man who admitted to playing tricks like picking up and moving her VW while in the high school choir.

"There's a joy in doing this," she said. "My belief is that this is a noble profession. I serve it by giving and in turn, it gives me joy in doing it."

With right choice, good will prevail

MORAL PERSPECTIVES

REV. DAVID STRONG

■ The key element in our encounter with the enigma of evil is personal choice. Whatever is the source and power of evil, we still have individual choices.

The enigma of evil is a disturbing issue. We see the face of a child who has murdered a person. How is this possible, we ask? We read of a man who has randomly shot people on a train. How could he do this, we wonder? We witness the resurgence of racism. What is the source of this evil?

There was a time when we believed that government and other institutions would solve our problems. We blamed the politicians and the mayors for failing to engineer solutions to crime, poverty, homelessness, joblessness, rape and murder. We easily believed that others would rid our world of evil. We now know this is not true.

Where has all this evil come from? No one has an answer. It would be easy to blame it upon bad, brutal childhood experiences. The way a child is raised and the social conditions he or she experiences have a large influence. Yet environment is not the only factor.

The personal stories of two of the most evil persons in this century, Hitler and Stalin, do not explain where their evil originated. Both persons were raised by caring mothers and not untypical fathers of the time. Stalin was given a church-sponsored education. From where did their evil arise?

The Bible tells us that each of us is responsible for evil. The source of evil is rebellion against the will of God. The condition of this rebellion against God is what the Bible calls a "hard heart." Those who have a hard heart cannot hear God speaking within their lives. Therefore, they continue to rebel against God. Their rebellion is seen in their evil deeds.

A second biblical view regarding evil is that evil is seductive. The Bible sees evil as attractive. Evil appeals to us. Evil tempts us with pleasure, promotion and power. In the Bible, evil begins in small amounts which gradually lead people to larger evils and eventually to final corruption.

The key element in our encounter with the enigma of evil is personal choice. Whatever is the source and power of evil, we still have individual choices. We each have choices, however, only when we are able to discern the nature of an evil situation. This means that we must have prophets in our midst.

In order to choose between good and evil we must have prophets, such as Martin Luther King, who are able to reveal to us the nature of an evil, such as racism.

Racial and ethnic hostility are surfacing again around the world. We are more able to recognize the terrible nature of this evil only because its nature has been exposed by courageous persons.

Next Monday, we will celebrate the work of Martin Luther King Jr. This is a man who has helped us to see the nature of evil in our world. In a letter written 31 years ago from jail in Birmingham, Ala., Dr. King spoke about how he had initiated nonviolent actions so that the evil of racism could be understood by the larger society.

The images of hate, violence, police brutality and the resulting tensions of good and evil initiated by Dr. King helped our nation to make positive steps forward against this evil of racism. In his letter from jail, Dr. King instructed the nation about the difference between just and unjust laws. Dr. King also expressed his disappointment that most of the churches of the country had failed to act against the terrible evil of racism. He was revealing the evil that existed unseen in churches that thought they were following the law of love.

Racism, with all of its destructive and insidious ways, is a perfect example of the enigma of evil. It is an evil that can lay dormant and invisible until an incident reveals its terrible power. It is an evil that hides behind the pride of culture and status. Racism is an evil that reveals hard hearts and human rebellion against the Creator's wisdom of having created people with diversity.

The prevalence and power of evil is such at times that we might wonder how is it possible that good will prevail? There is no final answer except for the belief that God is good. The popular film series "Star Wars" dramatized this belief. The "Force" of good was never destroyed by the terrible power of the dark side. It is not possible that darkness will overcome the light. This is the biblical view of the enigma of evil. With human enlightenment and right choice, God will prevail.

Skating center looks to expand

STAFF WRITER

West Bloomfield is receptive to a proposed 8,000-square-foot expansion of U.S. Blades, the family centered skating center, according to a spokesman from the township planning department.

"There are some preliminary concerns such as traffic congestion," said Thomas K. Bird, township planning manager, but nothing that can't be worked out.

U.S. Blades is a 50,000-square-foot facility that opened in February on Drake south of Walnut Lake Road. While it offers a variety of activities, its unique attraction is in-line skating, more commonly known as Rollerblading, a word that comes from a brand of skates.

■ 'We offer a full range of family oriented activities, including miniature golf and a 1950s-style dinner.

Robert A. Wolfson

"Business has been very good in the first year," said spokesman Robert A. Wolfson prior to Tuesday's meeting of the township planning commission. "Good enough that we want to expand to meet the needs of our customers.

"We offer a full range of family oriented activities, including miniature golf and a 1950s-style dinner. The expansion will enable us to add 10 conference rooms to accommodate private parties," said Wolfson, co-owner of the Walnut-Drake Limited Partnership, which operates the recreation center.

Tuesday's meeting was to be an informal work session during which both sides "just bounce ideas around," according to Bird. "Usually both parties just talk about plans and voice initial concerns."

After the work session, the petitioner — in this case U.S. Blades — has as much time as necessary to address any concerns and to return for a formal presentation with detailed plans, he said.

"There's no set time frame," he said. "But at that presentation, the planning commission can approve the expansion at that session. No public hearing is required."

Bird said the recreation facility had some difficulty with traffic congestion when it opened last year. "I don't know that congestion is still a problem, but that is likely one topic to be discussed."

Folk painter captures ice festival on canvas

The marquee on the Penn Theatre in Kathy Jakobsen's painting, "Ice Sculpture Festival," says that Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life" is playing.

Just as that classic movie caters to the imagination, so does Jakobsen's artistic interpretation of Plymouth's famous winter fest.

The Dearborn Heights native is a contemporary folk artist with a passion for detailing her artistry with splashes of whimsy, family and memories. Not surprising, she also writes and illustrates children's books.

The spirit of Americana, in all its innocence and warmth, inspires her. The landscape of her canvas evokes such folk art favorites as mills, farmlands, horses, town squares, carousels, children, F. W. Woolworth's, sleighs and snowmen.

Jakobsen will visit Creative Framing, 853 W. Ann Arbor Trail, from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, during the 12th annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular to sign newly released posters made from the original oil painting. The poster sells for $20.

"Much of her work reflects her rural Midwestern upbringing," says Chris Burke, Creative Framing owner. "Her detailed outdoor scenes span the seasons of the activity and energy of everyday life."

Fairy-tale wonder

Burke invites you to stop by and enjoy the fairy-tale wonder of "Ice Sculpture Festival." No purchase is necessary. The poster is available at both Creative Framing and the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, 386 S. Main, each of which ordered 100 copies from Wild Apple Graphics Ltd. in Vermont.

Burke learned about the painting from Nancy Horst, a Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular committee member. A friend had shown Horst a copy of the December 1993 issue of "Country Home" magazine featuring Jakobsen's paintings and books in a story titled "Joy to the World." The subtitle says it all, "Welcome to the imagination of Kathy Jakobsen — a perfect place, where children breathe clean, country air and even New York City cab drivers smile."

"My paintings and books don't have sad people in them because I want to promote joy and harmony. I have to do whatever I can from right here in my studio to help make this a better world," Jakobsen told "Country Home."

The story includes a picture of "Ice Sculpture Festival," which, like many Jakobsen works, depicts family and friends. All of her paintings illustrate someone she knows or something she has seen personally or in a photograph.

'Visions of Cranbrook' in Livonia

Experience the beauty and tranquility of Cranbrook Educational Community's picturesque grounds by visiting an installation by James R. Gilbert at the Livonia Civic Center Library.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Artist James R. Gilbert believes in George Booth's ethic, "A life without beauty is only half lived." That's why he's bringing the Cranbrook experience to the Art Gallery on the second floor of the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

"Visions of Cranbrook," an installation by Gilbert of fiber and watercolor artworks abstractly mirroring the picturesque grounds of the Cranbrook Educational Community, continues through Feb. 12.

A walk through the exhibit hosted by Gilbert, an instructor at the Bloomfield Hills school for 12 years, will take place at 3 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 12. The public is invited.

Gilbert's vision represents Cranbrook's sculpture and gardens in real and abstract forms. As visitors enter the gallery a 10-foot-long corridor of green weaving reminiscent of the forest at Cranbrook leads to vistas of beauty — an oriental garden, sculpture by Carl Milles and the breathtaking architecture of Eliel Saarinen.

"Walking through the green wall of weaving that's focused on vista views that can be found all around the grounds, you really do get this feeling of special moments. Two centaurs introduce you to the garden area. Half man, half horse; they introduce you to the woods," said Gilbert in an interview at the weaving studios of Kingswood School.

"There'll be images — some photographic, some painted. A waterfall of yarn and metal streaming down will greet visitors further along."

Gilbert, who has worked in watercolor 25 years, paints Chinese elms for the imagination to dream by. Whether you're familiar with the grounds of Cranbrook, or a first time visitor, he provokes you into experiencing the Cranbrook environment, tempting with snatches of serenity.

When it comes to Cranbrook, he's an amateur historian tempting you with tidbits about founders, George and Ellen Scripps Booth as well as Cranbrook resident architect Saarinen, who used to walk the grounds with legends like Frank Lloyd Wright.

Mixed media art paces Garden City show

SPECIAL WRITER

Mixed media reigned in competition when the Garden City Fine Arts Association held its sixth annual exhibition and sale at Sheridan Square.

From a field of 49 artworks entered in two categories of media, Fran Fletcher of Inkster took three honors. All were awarded for mixed media pieces. Best of Show and the People's Choice Award went to Fletcher for a large-scale work rendered in pen and ink and colored pencil titled "Bedpost Fence."

Award-winning artist Barbara Demgen of Livonia served as juror for the show Dec. 6-11. Demgen has been a professional artist for more than 30 years. She earned her master of fine arts degree from Marygrove College in Detroit.

Demgen retired in 1992 after teaching art for 27 years in Livonia and Birmingham schools. For the last four years of her career, she taught gifted students in CAPA, the Creative and Performing Arts program run by Livonia Public Schools. She's represented in Michigan by Atrium Gallery in Northville.

Demgen awarded cash prizes to first- ($40), second- ($25) and third-place ($15) winners in both dry and wet media.

First place in the dry category went to Laurel Raisanen of Westland for "It's My Birthday," second place to Bob Sheridan of Livonia for "Portrait in Purple" and third place to Henrietta Orzechowski of Dearborn Heights for "Hugging Time." The three winning paintings were done in pastel.

First place in the wet category was awarded to Denis Scott of Westland for "Boatyard II," an oil painting. Scott won top honors in this category at the GCFAA's spring show.

Second place (wet) went to Norma

GARDEN SPOT

MARTY FIGLEY

It's always exciting to tell you about new plants and offers that will be available each year. Last August I described the three All-America Rose Selections winners, "Secret, "Caribbean" and "Midas Touch." Look for them when you are shopping for new roses.

All-America Selections has chosen three winners for 1994, and for the first time an herb is included. Lavender Lady (Lavandula angustifolia) is a perennial that produces an abundance of flower spikes early in the season. She will flower the first year provided seeds are started early enough. The end of February is the time to show the seeds indoors. "Lady" shines outside in a sunny location in well-drained soil that has relatively low fertility.

Two vegetables (tomato and cucumber) made the winners circle.

The Big Beef (Lycopersicon lycoperiscum) tomato matures in about 73 days with high yields and grows five to six feet tall. The meaty, large, flavorful tomatoes produce best when staked and pruned to two growing tips. This can be started from seed in a south window. Follow package directions.

The Fanfare (Cucumis sativus) cucumber yields an excellent slicer in only two or three feet of garden area. It is disease tolerant and is suitable for growing in a large container; a trellis will provide support.

Plants will be available this spring for these three winners. For a list of AAS seed sources, write to Garden Spot, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham 48009, and include a business-size, stamped envelope.

Made to order

Catalogs are arriving and as I look through them, many have special offers and/or something new for us to try. Here are a few of them.

Johnny's Selected Seeds, Foss Hill Road, Albion, Minn. 04910, has seeds for three new grains suitable for dry arrangements: Triticum durum ("Black Tip"), T. aestivum ("Black Eagle") and Triticale ("Silver Tip").

Burpee (1-800-888-1447) has an interesting new flower, Lisianthus ("The Blue Rose"). It begins with purple and lilac buds that open to resemble a rose, except the color is bright ocean blue. This herbaceous annual blooms from June through September.

From Thompson & Morgan comes "Freckles," a Viola (Sororaria) that was found growing wild in Wisconsin. Seeds aren't produced from the flowers but are found in seed pods just below the soil line. Botanically the plant is cleistogamic — self-polinating inside a flower that doesn't open. T & M's sunflower "Valentine" grows to only five feet.

This company is offering these seeds at special prices. For "Freckles," send $1 and your name and address on two pieces of paper to Thompson & Morgan at Dept. 514-4, Jackson, N.J. 08527-0308. For "Valentine," send $1 and your name and address to Dept. 512-4. The company offers a gift certificate for $5 that it will double the gift value to a $10 certificate for seeds. Write to Dept. 512-4 for a free catalog.

White Flower Farm is contributing proceeds from the sale of their new lily "Standing Ovation" to a summer camp for critically ill children in Connecticut. Call 203-496-9600 for a catalog.

Spring Hill Nursery, 110 W. Elm, Tipp City, Ohio 45371, offers free hibiscus with an early order. Jung Quality Seeds (1-800-297-3123) has an Oriental lily, "Mona Lisa." Free seeds with every order.

Shepherd's Garden Seeds, 30 Irene, Torrington, Conn. 06790-6627, has a catalog that is a joy. Recipes are included. The company has a large selection of sunflowers and artichoke seeds that yes, can be grown here.

Goldsmith Seeds, Gilroy, Calif., is a wholesale breeder of hybrid flower seeds. Its products can be found in our marketplace. New this year is a dwarf carnation series named "Monarch," which will brighten your bedding plant area.

Burke thought "Ice Sculpture Festival" would be a great promotional piece for the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular and she played a key role in having it published on a poster.

Jakobsen eagerly accepted Burke's invitation to make a public appearance at Creative Framing, an easy drive from her parents' Dearborn Heights home. "We hope to get nonprofit groups interested enough in the poster to sell it as a fund-raiser," Burke said.

Before the poster even was in stock, Burke got her first order — from a man in Altoona, Pa. "He said his wife was from Plymouth. He said he had read about the poster and found out from Wild Apple Graphics that we were going to sell it."

Other orders have come from Florida and California as well as Michigan.

A framed print of the poster will be included in a Basket of Plymouth Hospitality, containing $3,000 worth of gifts and certificates, that downtown Plymouth merchants will give away in a free drawing during the festival.

Working from a flat table rather than a conventional easel, Jakobsen also has painted historic Nankin Mills in Westland. "We have several of her country prints framed for public viewing and purchase," Burke said.

New York art dealer Jay Johnson ignited Jakobsen's career as an artist when he exhibited her work in his America's Folk Heritage Gallery. Museums, collectors and businesses now display her artwork. Frank J. Miele Gallery In New York represents her. Originals of her work command prices ranging from $2,000 to $22,000, according to "Country Home."

Burke, a Milford resident, has been a Plymouth merchant for nine years. The ice festival, she says, is integral to the fragile economy in downtown Plymouth:

"Just the people it brings to town — we have over a half-million people who come here. A lot of people plan to come here just because of the festival. We've added more attractions, like a light show each night.

erything was designed with what the Greeks referred to as the golden means or golden section, a rectangular measurement, a naturally pleasing shape to the eye," said Gilbert who's been weaving since the late 1960s.

Three self portraits, photo-silk screens and three images of "Europa and the Bull" by Milles will trigger thought and a longing for discovery.

"I've fallen in love with the place," said Gilbert as he led a tour of the Cranbrook grounds. "Traditional tapestries and weaving are part of the history."

Down a path toward the lake a Japanese garden complete with an island in its midst leads to a waterfall. The garden is like a maze, each path wrought with stepping stones, enticing the visitors with yet another winding path. There's a peacefulness to the grounds here. The well-thought-out architecture meant to stimulate the art community fascinates unlike anywhere else.

"There are many secrets to find," Gilbert said. "The beauty is discovery."

Gilbert, who earned a bachelor of fine arts degree in ceramics from Center for Creative Studies in Detroit and a master of fine arts degree in fiber design from Cranbrook Academy of Art, first came up with the idea for the show after former Livonia arts commissioner Jack Olds approached him to exhibit his work.

Gilbert created the aerial fabric sculpture "Nebulas Terraqueous," suspended in the atrium of the Civic Center Library. He was commissioned in May 1992 after a statewide search by the Friends of the Livonia Library of which Olds is a member.

Not until September, when an inspiration woke him in the night, did Gilbert finally realize a method for actualizing his concept for the exhibit.

"Cranbrook came out of the arts and crafts movement of the 1920s and 30s. What they did here, lives. I hope people who've never been here before will say, 'Cranbrook, I have to find out about this place.' Those who've been here, I hope get a good feeling to want to go back again. You can never come back here enough."

Livonia Civic Center Library hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday and 1-4 p.m. Sunday.

■ 'Walking through the green wall of weaving that's focused on vista views that can be found all around the grounds, you really do get this feeling of special moments. Two centaurs introduce you to the garden area. Half man, half horse; they introduce you to the woods. There'll be images — some photographic, some painted. A waterfall of yarn and metal streaming down will greet visitors further along.'

The Garden City Fine Arts Association was founded in 1982. It provides a forum for visual artists to exhibit their work in shows held twice a year.

GCFAA offers support for fellow artists by way of meetings held the first Wednesday of the month at the Maplewood Center when either a demonstrating guest artist or visual display is presented. ■ AWARD WINNER

James L. Young of ERA Accent Realty, Livonia, has won an individual award from the ERA Real Estate Network for customer satisfaction.

Young

He was nominated through use of customer satisfaction surveys, said David Owens, broker at ERA Accent Realty.

"It's always satisfying to be recognized for a job well done," Young said. "This award is a special honor because it represents the opinion of the people we serve."

The ERA customer satisfaction award program is designed to encourage the spirit of service by recognizing ERA Member Broker offices and sales associates who go above and beyond the call of duty to satisfy the real estate needs of their customers and clients.

"Members of the ERA Real Estate Network realize that superior service can set us apart from others in the real estate industry," Owens said.

■ NO SMOKING

When tenants returned to work at Pruduential Town Center in Southfield after the New Year's holiday, they found a smoke-free policy in effect at the five-tower, 2.2-million-square-foot complex, announced PREMISYS Real Estate Services.

The new smoke-free guidelines designate public restrooms, elevator lobbies, hallways and the indoor tropical garden area as off-limits for smoking.

"An overwhelming majority of tenants want Prudential Town Center's common areas smoke-free," said Michael R. Scadron, vice president/general manager of PREMISYS.

"In a survey conducted earlier this year, almost 80 percent of the respondents indicated preference for smoke-free public areas. Interestingly, about the same amount of respondents tell us that their offices are already smoke-free."

PREMISYS is offering temporary smoking lounges within the complex to assist building occupants with the transition.

New leaders at helm of realty boards

The changing of the guard has occurred.

Four real estate professionals with an aggregate of nearly 75 years experience took over as presidents of realty boards servicing Observer & Eccentric communities earlier this month.

Gladys Corbin, an associate broker with Weir Manuel Snyder and Ranke in Rochester Hills and a resident of that city, heads the Rochester Area Association of Realtors.

Curtis Shinsky, owner broker of Remerica Suburban Realtors in Livonia and a resident of that community, assumes the presidency of the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors.

■ Realty boards generally arise to provide educational opportunities for members and to lobby lawmakers on issues of interest to the membership and industry.

Jane Griffin, a Realtor associate with Chamberlain Realtors in Royal Oak and a Berkley resident, takes the reins of the South Oakland County Board of Realtors.

Realty boards generally arise to provide educational opportunities for members and to lobby lawmakers on issues of interest to the membership and industry.

"We're going to a regional multi-list as of Jan. 1," Corbin said. "We're combining administrative functions."

"Our goal is to bring this about more completely, see greater support and union of the various boards as we move ahead to broaden a better delivery system for all members," Griffin said.

"It's a whole new ballgame from the past," said Savoie-Huff. "This is really a time of transition. One of my goals is to make this transition as smooth as possible."

Sales agents also will begin looking at joining boards of choice rather than being required to join the board where the office is located.

School financing plans and the possibility of a real estate transfer tax has been proposed in recent weeks.

"This year, we really are dealing with a lot of new issues," Shinsky said. "One is agency. It's something that's extremely new. Now we're defining agency, who we work for.

"Disclosure, absolutely, is another issue, not only on houses through multi listing services but those for sale by owner," he said.

"I think it's exciting, very challenging, getting a buyer together with a seller and making it work for them," Corbin said. "I think it will be a positive year in terms of housing affordability and people being able to buy."

"I do a lot of hands-on real estate," Griffin said. "I like all aspects of problem solving and really like trying to assist the organization maintain professional standards."

"There's such a satisfaction helping someone reach a goal, help define what they want, what they can afford," Savoie-Huff said. "By helping them meet their goals, I automatically meet mine."

"I take great pleasure in taking care of peoples' needs," Shinsky said. "People need a lot of help in the process. There's a lot of new things out there and available to them."

Money Matters in Real Estate

By Rich & Carole Halmekangas

LEADING SHELTERED LIVES

Without a doubt, shelter is one of the primary concerns of our lives. Having a roof over one's head involves such practical considerations as the structural integrity of the building and the condition of its mechanical systems. Beyond that, there is a desire for houses and buildings to give a good appearance and be well situated. Regardless of whether buyers and sellers are dealing in single-family homes, condominiums, co-operatives, commercial real estate, or rented apartments, locating the right property, negotiating a price, obtaining financing and completing the transaction are key elements. The goal of this column is to shed some light on the issues and trends that surround the biggest investment most of us are likely to make.

Welcome to our new column. ONE WAY REALTY LTD. has pledged to further and maintain the highest ethical standards of the real estate industry, so whether you are a single buying your first home, a family looking for a larger home, or are planning to sell your property, we will give you the proper guidance every step of the way. Our outstanding reputation over 25 years in the business has been built on complete client and customer satisfaction. Here at 34441 Eight Mile Road, we are available 6 days a week. Please call us at 473-5500 or 1-800-500-SELL.

HINT: A real estate professional can provide clients with accurate and up-to-date pricing information which can then be used to set realistic purchase and sale limits.

Solid construction season forecast

■ Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan looks back and ahead in an attempt to gauge the status of the residential construction industry here. Good things apparently will follow good things.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Builders in southeastern Michigan expect to pull some 13,000 single-family residential permits this year, a 10 percent increase over what was reported in a seven-county area, including Wayne and Oakland, during 1993.

Last year's number, about 11,800, represented an increase of nearly 6 percent from 1992.

Residential construction activity translates to jobs and economic spinoff activity including the purchase of appliances and furnishings, builders say. Construction activity also increases the local tax base.

"As the builders grow, maybe they start from five houses and go to 10," said Sam Kreis, construction loan manager for Sterling Bank & Trust of Southfield. "They double their labor staff - carpenters get the work, electricians get it, plumbers get it."

Bernard Glieberman, a West Bloomfield builder, said he expects to have a busy 1994.

"We had a record year in '93 and we'll have another one this year," he said. "We did 280 (units) last year and will do 400-470 this year."

Glieberman said he's even noticed a shortage of workers recently in some of the building trades, especially carpentry.

"It's not severe. I don't see it as a big problem," he said. "During a recession, people relocate. Now we've got to get them to come back."

Spinoff business also is affected.

"If you have a $150,000 house, usually that means spending $5,000-6,000 in the secondary market on new pieces of furniture, appliances that don't come with the house, landscaping, window treatments," said Janet Compo, a Farmington Hills builder.

Compo said she expects that her company will increase dollar volume work by about 20 percent this year.

In addition to the usual handful of expensive, custom-built houses, she's looking at constructing less expensive models in Detroit and perhaps Pontiac.

"Certainly I think new housing is important to the economy, tax base," Compo added. "You have income taxes (from construction jobs), sales tax (spinoff purchases) and property tax that helps local government agencies and school taxes."

Market specialty: meat, produce

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

There are good meat markets that sell some produce, and some good produce stores that dabble in meat.

But what happens when a meat packing/retail operation joins forces with a produce retailer to set up a total shopping experience for the bulk buyer and drop-by customer?

A deli is available for good measure.

Other Cattleman's stores can be found in Taylor, Hamtramck and Detroit. The transformation of Oak Farms in Oak Park into a Cattleman's is expected to be completed by March. Plans call for a new store in Roseville next October.

Following are edited excerpts from an interview with Rohtbart, who lives in West Bloomfield, and Martin, a Novi resident:

Rohtbart: The concept is value. By very high volume operations, we're able to keep prices down. We're a packing house. We cut fresh beef.

We run a little over two million pounds a week. About 85 percent has been geared to hotel, restaurant supplying and other wholesale distributing . . . about 15 percent retail.

Martin: On produce, . . . large displays help with large volume. It's how you handle merchandise, quality control in the process, to cut down spoilage. And value purchasing.

There must be other things involved.

Martin: We don't do loss leaders, which is typical in the industry.

Rohtbart: Say we had a special on whole fryers for 49 cents a pound. First you pay $22,000 for advertising. The value of chicken goes up and we sell eight to 10 times more than we usually do. The entire department has to pay for it. Then you have to raise prices.

Customers can come into the store whenever they want to and get a fair price.

Martin: I think another saving is we share overhead.

Rohtbart: We've eliminated the middleman - distributors, brokers. We don't accept coupons. We don't charge vendors slotting fees. We just want suppliers to give us their best price on original purchases.

Our accounting department, business management is all under one roof. We don't have two or three steps.

Speaking of suppliers, where do you get your goods?

Martin: For produce, it's two predominant services. One is Eastern Market. Farmers from Michigan and Ohio come sell their produce every morning. The other is Detroit Union Produce Terminal. That's where wholesalers bring in things from California, imports, Florida.

Rohtbart: All of our beef is western grain fed. It comes in carcasses. We get it in quarter cuts.

Who are your retail customers?

Rohtbart: Our typical customer is value oriented. Some people will buy two steaks, a head of lettuce and two cucumbers for dinner tonight. Another customer comes in and stocks up for a month or two.

How did you guys happen to get together?

Rohtbart: He approached me about doing a joint venture.

Martin: We wanted a third store and, to give value, offer meat as well. I wanted David to sublease space.

Rohtbart: I don't believe in two retail companies under the same roof. You don't have a cohesive message. I didn't want the Cattleman's name, which I worked hard to build up, I didn't want to have quality control different from ours.

I proposed a merger. Since our company was larger and publicly held, the deal was structured as an acquisition.

A little history, please.

Rohtbart: My father, Markus, started a packing house in Detroit near Eastern Market in 1972. He brought in carcasses and turned out cuts to hotels, restaurants, supply houses. He also sold to retail chains.

In '86, we added a (walk-in) retail addition. Hamtramck opened second in September of '88. We opened our third store in Taylor in February of '92.

We went public two years ago just to give us another avenue to raise capital. We're a tightly held public company. Our family owns about 88 percent of the stock. There are about 305 stockholders.

Martin: We, Tim Collins, who is now vice president for produce merchandising, Vito Capizzi, now head produce buyer, and myself started Oak Farms in 1982. We opened in Farmington in 1988.

What will make the Cattleman's/Oak Farms marriage work?

Rohtbart: Management. The key word is team. The group must have focus and believe in the same thing. Then you need to put the structure in to make it work properly.

The guy running the meat department and the produce department can walk into each other's department and look critically and the other thanks him for the criticism.

Martin: Sometimes it takes outsiders to make us see what the customer sees. We want this philosophy to permeate the company — the team.

Rohtbart: We run an inverted style. I'm at the bottom of the pyramid. The top is the customer. Who has the most contact with the customer? Salespeople, stockers and cashiers. They're the next most important step. We employ about 400 now.

Rex Rosenhaus, a Farmington Hills builder, said he expects to increase his activity by at least 10 percent this year. Westland and West Bloomfield are target communities.

"I think it's good for everyone, not only suppliers, but consumers, too," he said. "It gives more product to choose from and competition forces builders to put out better product."

Kreis gave another example of the ripple effect of a flourishing residential building industry: "Realtors say for every new house built, five sell."

That, in turn, stimulates other spinoff activity.

Two main factors — low interest rates and the relative affordable nature of new housing stock here — will continue to fuel growth, the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan forecasts.

Robert R. Jones, a West Bloomfield builder and BASM president, urged his colleagues during a recent membership luncheon to "delight" rather than satisfy their customers.

"It's not always easy, but I think it takes us to a new level of building in this community," Jones said.

Two issues — wildly fluctuating wholesale lumber prices and a big jump in the state real estate transfer tax — could present problems in the future, Jones said.

Irvin H. Yackness, BASM's executive vice president, urged builders to include clauses in sales contracts that buyers will pay for the revenue stamps while he analyzes competing tax proposals.

"One reason prices rise so much I really do think has to do with (President) Clinton's forest policy," Seiders said. "It pretty much shuts down traditional sources we've had in the market."

Canton, which issued 468 single-family residential building permits through the first 10 months of 1993, and Troy, which issued 339, were among the hot growth spots last year, BASM reported.

"Canton will continue to go very well, Troy will hold its own and there will be a step up in Oakland and Commerce townships," Jones predicted.

While BASM predicted a 10-percent increase in single family housing starts this year, Seiders forecasts little growth here.

"Interest rates have basically hit bottom," he said. "They will continue to support the current level of activity, but won't be a driving spike."

Job growth also will be moderate, Seiders said.

One reason the two forecasts don't match is that BASM looked at a larger area than the national association considered.

Ford honors 4 workers

■ The program recognizes a select group of employees for first-of-a-kind or industry-leading achievements.

Four Plymouth residents earned Ford Motor Co.'s highest honor — the Henry Ford Technology Award — for breakthrough innovations and technological achievements.

Timothy Feldkamp, Brian Lizotte, Rainer Mueller and David Yeager were among 45 employees to receive awards.

The award "is our Nobel prize, our Pulitzer, our Academy Awards all rolled into one," says Ford chairman Alex Trotman. "It's a demonstration of the importance we place on our technical experts and the role they play in the future of our company."

The awards program, now in its 13th year, recognizes a select group of employees for their first-of-a-kind or industry-leading technical achievements. Fewer than 400 employees have received the honor in Ford history.

Feldkamp was part of a four-person team honored for designing and devloping a sophisticated computer-based, on-board diagnostics system that monitors misfire performance. The technology helps Ford meet new government-al regulations and already is being used on the Ford Thunderbird, Mercury Cougar and 3.8-liter Ford Mustang.

Lizotte and Yeager were part of a five-person team honored for the design, development and production implementation of a friction-reducing, solid-lubricant piston coating. The innovation reduces the friction generated by an engine's pistons by about 20 percent and thus helps to improve a vehicle's fuel economy.

Mueller was part of a four-person team honored for the design, development and production implementation of a new high-speed, high-volume electron discharge machining drilling process. The innovation provides Ford with a way to drill the small deep holes needed in today's engines and transmissions. It also improves vehicle quality and cuts costs.
