Many juniors fail on MEAP

About one-third of Wayne-Westland high school juniors failed to meet 1998 standards for a state-endorsed diploma in math, reading and science, new results show.

ments in writing.

In a striking comparison, Wayne-Westland 11th-graders lagged behind their statewide counterparts in all four subject areas tested on the 1998 Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP).

Even so, district officials cautioned parents and students against becoming overly alarmed by new high school MEAP scores.

"It's a snapshot in time," Sam Barresi, assistant superintendent of instruction, said.

"It certainly gives us valuable information," he said of the test, "but it is not the end-all in terms of the performance of a student."

Juniors who took the tests last spring are now in their senior year, facing possible graduation without a state-endorsed diploma.

What the latest test results fail to show, Barresi said, is that:

■ Wayne-Westland educators are continuing to implement curriculum changes that should lead to an upswing in scores.

■ Universities and colleges don't use MEAP-related state diploma endorsements to determine which students should be admitted.

"I can tell you that I am not aware of any public university in the state of Michigan that uses it as part of their application process," Barresi said.

■ Juniors spent eight hours taking the new tests, compared to 11 hours the last time. A revamped exam gave

Music, art, conflict policy among committee topics

BY DARRELL CLEM

Turning attention to elementary music and art, environmental education and policies on student fighting, Wayne-Westland school board President David Cox on Monday ordered studies by three newly formed committees.

Cox publicly unveiled his new committees during a board session, seeking to continue momentum for district changes. His directive came just two weeks after he and his colleagues approved far-reaching athletic programs for middle school students and high school ninth-graders.

"We are making progress," Cox said, "and it shows."

One new committee will study possible changes to a student conflict policy that Cox said tends to punish victims as much as assailants with suspensions and other discipline measures.

Students defending themselves shouldn't be treated like their attackers, he said.

"I think we need a policy that more closely mirrors what society does in situations like this. The victim doesn't get thrown out with the criminal," Cox said after Monday's meeting.

"I don't like the way it is right now," he said of the policy. "It's not fair."

Cox appointed board members Mathew McCusker and Robin Moore to study the issue and to report their findings by Jan. 19.

A second committee will study possible educational uses for Sassafras Trails, a wooded nature area that spans more than 50 acres northeast of Palmer and Wildwood roads.

"It's the right thing to do," board member Teresa Robbins said after Monday's meeting.

$25,000 grant helps fund Family Resource Center

BY DARRELL CLEM

dclem@oe.homecomm.net

United Parcel Service has come to the rescue of a Wayne-Westland school district program that helps needy families get help for problems ranging from homelessness to domestic violence to student truancy.

UPS officials Monday unveiled a $25,000 grant for The Family Resource Center, a program in its sixth year at Lincoln Elementary School.

"That amount is probably half of our budget for the year," program director Jacque Martin-Downs said.

"This is an intermittent rescue," she said. "The school district has promised to fund the program until the end of the school year, and then we have to be totally grant-funded. This is a good step."

■ 'We know that a lot of families within our school district are going to benefit from your very generous contribution.'

UPS Human Resources Manager Lawrence Lewis, in a ceremonial check-passing, announced the grant Monday during a Wayne-Westland school board meeting.

"We know that a lot of families within our school district are going to benefit from your very generous contribution," Wayne-Westland Superintendent Greg Baracy said.

The Family Resource Center steers local families to agencies that can help them with a wide array of needs.

"Food, clothing, shelter, tutoring – it runs the gamut," Martin-Downs said. "If you have a question, we probably have the answer."

The center also sponsors a broad range of programs, such as teen support groups and parenting classes.

Research has shown that many families receiving help from the resource center live near Lincoln

She won a board seat in June after she and other citizens won a battle to protect Sassafras Trails from development.

"It has been saved, and it's a natural resource that we need to use as an educational tool for our children," Robbins said. "I'm thrilled about this."

Cox, Robbins and board member Ed Turner will form the Sassafras Trails committee, studying curriculum recommendations, program budget estimates and possible funding sources from community partnerships, foundations and educational grants.

Cox said the panel may consult with county and state environmental officials during the study. A Sassafras Trails recommendation is due sometime in February, but Cox didn't set a deadline for what he projected will be a "complicated and potentially exhaustive study."

Finally, a third committee will study Wayne-Westland's offerings in arts and music for pupils in kindergarten through fifth grade. Cox said he wants a "cafeteria-style recommendation of improvements" and budget proposals.

Cox named board members David James and Martha Pitsenbarger to the committee and ordered them to complete their task by Jan. 19.

That date also coincides with the deadline that McCusker and Moore face for issuing student conflict policy revisions.

Elementary arts and music have suffered budget cuts in recent years due to district financial problems, but officials now plan to restore programs due to better economic times that have left the district with a $10.3 million General Fund balance.

James said he is pleased that arts and music are receiving attention. "I'm proud to be a part of that."

Livonia can't draw conclusions on MEAP

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER
mchestney@oe.homecomm.net

Changes made in state proficiency tests – plus a last-minute boycott of the tests by Livonia Public School juniors in April – leave administrators with test results that are tough to interpret.

"It's difficult to draw any hard conclusions," said Marlene Bihlmeyer, director of curriculum. "Between those students who had exemptions from parents, and those who just didn't take the test, less than 50 percent (of the juniors) participated.

"It also was a new test. They eliminated portions and cut the testing time. There are differences of opinion as to whether we can even compare (with tests taken by juniors in 1997)," she said

By school, Churchill had about only 36 percent of students take the battery of tests; Stevenson had 47 percent; and Franklin had 51 percent.

Al Edwards, the curriculum department's top number cruncher, is left to analyze test results that some educators statewide now say are meaningless.

At the very least, this year's battery of test results will set a new "baseline" from which to judge improvements made in reading, writing, math and science scores in subsequent years. That's because the state made changes to the 1998 test to satisfy parents and students who started boycotting the tests two years ago.

But the widespread grassroots revolt in April against the tests, mostly by suburban school districts in southeast Michigan, including Livonia, skewed the results even further.

On the 1997 tests, close to 100 percent of juniors took the tests, Bihlmeyer said.

That means that nearly the entire junior class weathered 11 hours of tests in the four subject areas.

The 1998 test was cut to eight hours.

In upcoming strategy sessions, high school principals and administrators will discuss ways to tinker with giving the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) tests next April so that more students will take them, Bihlmeyer said.

The tests are designed to be a barometer of student achievement in high school. Districts use test scores to focus on areas of weakness, and change curriculum to beef up those areas.

One option, Bihlmeyer said, is to give the tests the first week of April, at the beginning of the testing window, and get them over before media coverage about boycotts begins.

This April, Livonia's tests were given during the third week of the time frame set by the state, after stories of boycotts in such districts as Birmingham, Farmington Hills and Northville had spread.

But whether changing the test date will boost their popularity after so much negative publicity is questionable, she said.

Edwards' first task, Bihlmeyer said, is to research the scholastic background of juniors who "opted out" of the test. Were they high achievers? What were their GPAs? What were their other test scores?

"There will be no concrete answers until we get this profile," Bihlmeyer said.

The biggest fear of juniors and their parents is that a low test score stamped on their high school transcript would adversely affect college admission.

Once word spread that the high school tests were not mandatory and that parents could exempt their children from them without a reason, many families decided it wasn't worth the risk of getting a low score on tests that educators call difficult.

For them, avoiding the stigma of a low score became more important than snagging a state-endorsed diploma, especially when the endorsements do not appear to matter to colleges and businesses.

Exemptions originally were meant for special education or learning disabled students.

"It was not intended to be a widespread exemption," Bihlmeyer said.

For all three high schools combined, there were 574 parental exemptions in math; 571 in reading; 555 in science; and 547 in writing. Parents could exempt students from one to all four subjects.

Additionally, 184 students simply didn't show up to take the math test; 221 students failed to take the reading test; 176 students didn't take the science test; and 216 students didn't take the writing test.

Entries sought for DDA logo

Attention creative types of Westland – it's time to get drawing.

The Westland Downtown Development Authority is looking for a logo design to represent the effort to revitalize the DDA corridors including Ford Road and Wayne Road south of Ford Road in Westland.

"We want something that's going to reflect the nature of the community," said Steve Guile, Westland Downtown Development Authority director.

Plans for the DDA district include streetscape improvement, a business development program, developer assistance and other programs to help establish the area as a regional shopping destination.

The logo design will be used on DDA letterhead, business cards and any promotional materials used to promote the Westland DDA.

A $100 savings bond will be awarded to the individual submitting a logo that best represents the community and the effort to revitalize the Ford and Wayne road areas.

The contest rules include:

■ The person creating and submitting the design must be 14 years of age or older.

■ All artwork must be original and compatible with the overall intent of the mission of the Westland Downtown Development Authority.

■ All designs should be submitted on an 8 1/2 inch by 11 inch matte board.

■ Entries must include name, address and phone number.

■ The decision of the selection committee is final.

■ All designs must arrive at the Westland Downtown Development Authority office no later than 5 p.m. Dec. 15. The office is at 630 N. Wayne Road Westland 48185.

For more information or to request an entry form, call the Westland Downtown Development Authority office at (734) 641-6572.

"We're giving the community the opportunity to focus and be a little creative," Guile said.

Rivers to appoint student page

Congresswoman Lynn N. Rivers is looking to appoint a student from the Michigan 13th Congressional District, which includes Westland, as a page to the U.S. House of Representatives for the spring term.

The House of Representatives has had a Page Program for more than 200 years. Pages go to Washington, D.C., and live in the House Page Residence Hall, study at the House Page School, and work as support staff for the U.S. House of Representatives for a semester. To be eligible, a student must be a resident of the 13th Congressional District, a junior in high school, at least 16 years old, maintain a minimum of a 3.0 GPA and be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident alien.

The session begins Sunday, Jan. 31, 1999, and concludes Saturday, June 12, 1999. Each student must complete and return an enclosed application to the district office by Nov. 30. A copy of the student's transcripts, three letters of recommendation and a parental consent form must accompany each application. All qualified applicants will be placed into a pool from which the winner will be drawn.

The application and the materials should be mailed to: U.S. Congresswoman Lynn Rivers, 106 E. Washington St., Ann Arbor, MI 48104. For applications or for more information, call the district office in Ann Arbor at (734) 741-4210 or in Wayne at (734) 722-1411.

districts no real tool to measure gains and losses, Barresi said.

■ Most Wayne-Westland juniors took the tests last spring while, in some other districts, large numbers of students launched boycotts. This, too, has hampered comparison efforts.

■ Local research indicated that 11th-graders who are long-time Wayne-Westland students posted better scores than juniors relatively new to the district. "It confirms that we are doing things well here," Barresi said.

Four categories

New test results are divided into four categories (see chart), and juniors who fell into the first three groups earned an endorsed diploma. Those who didn't qualify fell into the "unendorsed" slot.

Before leaving high school, however, juniors will have other opportunities to take portions of the MEAP test that they failed, amid hopes of achieving a state endorsement, or seal, for their diplomas.

Barresi cautioned that MEAP results should be viewed as one measure of student achievement – and not as a definitive yardstick for whether the district is doing a good job of educating pupils.

Even so, he stressed that new textbooks and curriculum materials, accompanied by revised classroom instruction, should begin to produce results.

"We certainly are looking at the (MEAP) results and trying to see how our curriculum reflects the state standards and benchmarks," Barresi said.

"I think it's going to take some time (to improve)," he said. "But I think we've already seen some things, such as a more investigatory approach to science."

Administrators at individual school buildings continued this week to analyze MEAP results. John Glenn High principal Neil Thomas said Monday that it was premature for him to issue statements about new scores.

Nonetheless, the latest test brought some interesting results.

■ Wayne Memorial High School, compared to Glenn High, had a greater percentage of students who "exceeded" state standards in math, science and writing. Glenn had a higher percentage than Wayne in reading. Barresi cautioned against such comparisons, calling them "typical of what people on the outside may do."

■ Wayne Memorial had higher percentages in all "unendorsed" categories except writing, where a higher percentage of Glenn students came up short

■ Of 12 Tinkham Center alternative education students who took the writing portion of MEAP, only 16.7 percent fell into the "unendorsed" category.

District comparison

That compared to 28.1 percent of Glenn juniors and 21.3 percent of Wayne Memorial juniors, although students at those schools took the test in much larger numbers.

"The teacher there (at Tinkham Center) does a tremendous amount of writing with her students," Barresi said, offering a possible reason why most alternative education pupils received state endorsements in writing

"That may have had an impact," he said. "It's hard to say."

John Glenn band makes cut for state

BY DIANE HANSON
SPECIAL WRITER

The John Glenn Rocket Marching Band brought the music from "Carmen" to life with color, marching, drama and dance at the Silverdome on Nov. 7.

The 84-member band made the cut for the top 10 Flight I bands in Michigan and scored a 76.6 for eighth place in Flight I at the Michigan Competing Band Association (MCBA) State Championship Contest on Saturday.

Other area bands in Flight I included West Bloomfield, ninth, 75.8, and Plymouth-Canton, first, 94.65. In Flight II, Farmington took ninth with a score of 74.3 and Novi took second, 87.25. Farmington Harrison took third in Flight III with a score of 84.1 and Redford Thurston took ninth, 65.65.

"The band has put in lots of hard work," said a pleased Scott Cramer, band director at John Glenn. The band puts in at least 10 hours of practice each week. Making it into the state championship contest is an achievement in itself and the Westland band has done just that six of the seven years Cramer has been director there.

There are 85 schools in the MCBA and only the top 10 bands in each of Flights I through IV (flights are determined by school enrollment with Flight I bands coming from the largest schools) make it into the state contest.

"You have to have a well-designed program that challenges your kids and that is of a high quality, both visually and musically, to allow you to advance to this point," explained Mack Pittard, executive director of the state championship contest. "Even if you have the world's greatest musicians, it will be difficult to advance to this point if you're not playing good music or marching something worth marching."

■ 'It just shows you how much effort goes into the show and how much we have achieved.'

Lance Formolo
–junior tenor saxophone player

"It's pretty intense," said Cramer. "You have to motivate the students to work hard." He said the season started in August with a week of band camp at Camp Tanuga in Kalkaska where the students rehearsed eight to nine hours each day.

For Lance Formolo, a junior tenor saxophone player, all the hard work paid off. "It is quite an accomplishment," he said of making it into the state competition. "It just shows you how much effort goes into the show and how much we have achieved. We can look back and see what we have done throughout the year and it's really exciting."

This is drum major Bethany Haver's senior year and she has been in the band all four years. "There are a lot of memories and a lot of hard work," she said. "It gets better each year. I've learned a lot of self-discipline. I have a lot of determination to reach my goals. The best part is setting goals and accomplishing them."

That's just what Cramer wants the students to take away from their band experience. "I want them to get some self-confidence – the idea that they control a lot of what they do," he said. "They have to work together so everyone looks good. If they take that attitude into a job program, they will be successful. It is a very disciplined activity."

Livonia grads sought

If you graduated from Livonia high schools either five or 10 years ago, a local business-school partnership would like to talk to you.

Graduates of the classes of '89 and '94 are invited to give ideas on career success to the newly formed partnership between Livonia Public Schools and the Livonia Chamber of Commerce. Their input may lead to changes in the way students are trained for the world of work.

Livonia alumni who are willing to participate in forums to be held on two evenings in January should call the Livonia chamber at 427-2122. One forum will be held for the Class of '89, the second for the Class of '94. No dates for the forums are set yet.

"We need to get feedback," said Donna McDowell, business partnership coordinator. "How did they make career decisions? What preparation did they have? What preparations do they wish they had had for success in the workplace? If they had to do it over again, what would they do differently?"

The partnership includes Laurene Bishop, NBD Bank; Chuck Columbus, Ford Motor Co.; Larry Diggs, Willis Corroon Corp.; Dick Isham, International Minute Press; John Landis, Bank of Bloomfield; McDowell, chairwoman; Sister Mary Renetta, St. Mary Hospital; Tracey Reynolds, Botsford Hospital; Kit Tennyson, Tennyson Chevrolet; and Jay Young, Livonia Public Schools.

Family Resource Center offers variety of programs

In its sixth year, The Family Resource Center is continuing to remain a vital part of the Lincoln Elementary School community.

What follows is a sampling of programs coming soon. Call (734) 595-2279 to register.

Unless otherwise noted, all programs will be held inside The Family Resource Center at Lincoln Elementary School, 33800 Grand Traverse.

■ At Stevenson Middle School, a parent forum on dealing with middle school children will be held from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. today. The program will provide tips on why middle school students are moody, what they're thinking, when to be concerned about them, and what to expect from them. Stevenson is located at 88501 Palmer Road in Westland.

■ A six-to-eight-week teen support group for middle school boys will begin meeting at 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. Nov. 17. The program marks a chance to air problems and difficulties of life. A parent or guardian must attend the first session. The program is free.

■ Also on Nov. 17, a program titled "Parenting Strategies That Work" will be held from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The session is designed for parents of elementary school children. Cost is $20 and includes a workbook.

■ An eight-week program on learning ways to live with and cope with teens will begin at 6:45 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Dec. 2. "Does life with a teen have to be crazy?" a program flier asks. Presumably not. Presenter David Denhouter will lead the program. Cost is $10.

■ Away from the Lincoln school site, The Family Resource Center will sponsor a free "A-plus Parenting" workshop from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Dec. 7 at Hicks Elementary School, 100 Helen, in Inkster. Free child care and snacks will be provided.

school, and some of them don't have their own transportation, Martin-Downs said.

"We're delighted to be in this neighborhood," she said.

The center is complemented by an Oakwood Health Care Center, also based at Lincoln, that serves local families.

School board members Monday welcomed the UPS grant that will keep The Family Resource Center intact – for now, at least.

"It's nice to have money coming into the district instead of going out," Robin Moore, board vice president, said.

"I am speechless," board member Mathew McCusker said, prompting good-natured jabs from colleagues who noted that he is never at a loss for words.

Martin-Downs said similar family programs would be a welcome addition at any school.

"If I had my true fantasy, there would be a Family Resource Center at every school," she said.

The Family Resource Center can be reached at (734) 595-2279. The address is 33800 Grand Traverse, inside Lincoln Elementary School.

Raczkowski, Patterson win House leadership posts

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER
trichard@oe.homecomm.net

He will be not only the House of Representatives traffic cop, but Andrew Raczkowski wants to give Michigan "the right perception" of Republicans – "openness, more compassion, a balance of sections of the state."

Raczkowski

Raczkowski, 29, will start his second term in 1999 as majority floor leader, No. 2 job in the House behind Speaker Chuck Perricone, with a number of firsts.

He's the first from the Farmington area to hold such a high post in the State Capitol since Fred Warner was governor nearly 90 years ago. Raczkowski is the youngest person to hold the majority leader's job. And he is the first Republican from southeastern Michigan to hold a top House majority post since Bob Waldron of Grosse Pointe was speaker in 1967-1968.

Patterson

In a closed caucus of the 57 Republicans who will be sworn in early next year, Raczkowski won a first ballot victory Tuesday over Michael Green of Mayville and Mary Ann Middaugh of Paw Paw.

Winning his party's nod to be speaker was Perricone, 38, a tax accountant from Kalamazoo and architect of GOP income tax maneuvers. He staved off a challenge from Mark Jansen of Grand Rapids.

The Perricone-Raczkowski ticket breaks up the stranglehold on House GOP leadership positions of the Grand Rapids-Holland bloc. "We have full balance right off the bat," said Raczkowski Wednesday morning. "And we have a better male-female balance than the Democrats."

Speaker pro tem will be Patricia Birkholz of Saugatuck. Two associate speakers pro tem will be Judith Scranton of Brighton and Bruce Patterson of Canton; assistant floor leaders will be Middaugh, a first-termer who succeeded her husband, and Paul DeWeese of Williamston. Caucus chair will be John Pappageorge, a freshman from Troy; and assistant caucus chair will be Charles LaSata of St. Joseph.

Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, who hosted a reception for the 1999 group, said voting numbers would not be revealed. "You can see why," he said – suggesting that it would keep those who lost from developing grudges.

Visitors to the House gallery in the north wing of the Capitol next year will see a lot of Raczkowski, who will present the calendar of what will be taken up each day. "It's a high visibility job with the ability to help other candidates with their legislation," he said.

"The job is more than a traffic cop," Raczkowski went on. In the inner sanctum of planning, Raczkowski will meet with Perricone and Democratic floor leader Mike Hanley of Saginaw.

He and Perricone are sworn not to duplicate Democratic floor tactics of stretching out sessions so that the big bills are brokered in the closing days of early July – a "calendar of constipation," he called it. Paul Hillegonds, the GOP speaker in 1995-6, made long steps toward keeping up a flow of legislation throughout the early months of the session.

Raczkowski has come a long way from his early days in politics when he was called "Cocky Rocky" and known more for coltish enthusiasm than subtlety of thought.

Perricone and Raczkowski are known as hard-nosed partisans, but Raczkowski said he has a friendly relationship with the Democratic floor leader, Rep. Kwame Kilpatrick of Detroit.

"We were classmates at Detroit College of Law," Raczkowski said. "In our first session, we were the youngest in our parties."

"We've had a good progression of what people perceived we were going to do," Raczkowski added. "We won our second term with 65.6 percent of the vote. We're very proud to be majority floor leader."

Plans for contaminated hill outlined tonight

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

State environmental officials will review comments from a public hearing tonight on Wayne County's proposal to cap Middlebelt Hill in Westland before they decide whether to approve it.

Wayne County officials want to top the hill with a 12-inch clay cap in areas where contaminants have reached the surface so the hill can be used for sledding in the winter and picnicking during the summer.

Garbage and other waste that helped create the hill more than 40 years ago also has contaminated it. The hill contains lead, arsenic and other heavy metals, discovered during sampling in 1991.

In June 1998, NTH Consultants of Farmington Hills completed a remedial action plan for Wayne County Department of Public Services to tackle the contamination problem and make the hill usable for winter and summer recreation. Wayne County submitted the proposal to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. The DEQ will conduct a public meeting tonight at 7 p.m. at Westland Council Chambers, 36601 Ford Road.

Here is a summary of that plan:

■ Before construction begins, erosion control measures will be installed around the site, which will include a silt fence, three temporary sediment traps and three drainage structures. These measures "will minimize the amount of soil and debris that leaves the area during construction in the event of heavy rain." Once construction is completed, the silt fence will be removed and temporary sediment traps backfilled.

■ During construction, the soil cover will be removed from the waste area and the 1991 fill area. Any trees, stumps and brush will be removed from the site for off-site disposal. Roots will be disposed of at a landfill. Soil or refuse will be dislodged from the roots if possible, and will be left on site for use during the backfilling operation.

■ The portion of the 1991 fill lying within the floodway of the adjacent Rouge River will be excavated and placed on the southeast slope.

■ A 12-inch compacted clay cover will be placed over various locations where the waste is located, then covered with a layer of general fill. For slope stability, the clay cover will be increased to 18 inches on the north slope. After these layers have been constructed, approximately 6 inches of topsoil will be placed over all disturbed areas, except on the north slope of the landfill, which will receive a 12-inch layer of planting mix in lieu of general fill soil and topsoil.

Once the topsoil has been placed and graded, the areas will be seeded, planted and mulched.

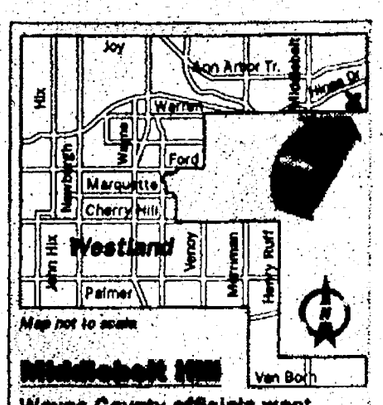
■ A warming shelter and three sets of timber steps have been proposed to be constructed. The shelter will be "slab-on grade" to eliminate the need to penetrate the hill's clay cover. Electrical service will be provided for lighting at the top of the hill and heat at the warming shelter.

A construction "quality assurance plan" also has been proposed to oversee the work. A licensed engineer will supervise the work of the field staff, which will consist of engineers and construction technicians, who will observe the work, collect material for testing and perform testing.

While the site will be inspected for erosion and the site condition monitored, groundwater monitoring will not be required.

Residents also can write comments to Steven Kitler, Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, Environmental Response Division, 38980 Seven Mile, Livonia, MI 48152, until 5 p.m. Nov. 25.

DEQ officials will act on the remedial action plan, possibly as early as December. Wayne County will need to obtain a land and water management permit from the DEQ and a building permit from the city of Westland.



Middlebelt Hill

Wayne County officials want to construct a 12-inch thick clay cap on Middlebelt Hill, which is a site that formerly housed a landfill and is located adjacent to Hines Drive east of Middlebelt. The cap will cover contaminants evident at the site.

Test samples show Hines site contains arsenic, lead

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

The contamination at Middlebelt Hill is similar to the contamination at Cooper School, an official with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality says.

"They were deposited at approximately the same time with similar materials," said Steven Kitler, who works in MDEQ's environmental response division

Both Middlebelt Hill and Cooper School were closed and abandoned in 1991. That year, soil tests at Cooper showed high levels of lead, cadmium, mercury and polychlorinated biphenyls left from a former landfill, while tests on Middlebelt Hill showed fill material contained lead and arsenic in excess of residential "direct contact" standards.

A public hearing is scheduled for Thursday (today) at 7 p.m. at Westland Council Chambers, 36601 Ford Road, for the DEQ to receive public comments on Wayne County's plans to cap Middlebelt hill.

In the 1950s, about 250,000 cubic feet of fill material consisting primarily of municipal rubbish was placed on the MIddlebelt Hill site to increase the hill's elevation and allow for sledding and tobogganing. Elevated levels of lead and arsenic "may be related to animal burrowing activities which have transported buried waste constituents to the surface," according to NTH's report.

■ A public hearing is scheduled for Thursday (today) at 7 p.m. at Westland Council Chambers, 36601 Ford Road, for the DEQ to receive public comments on Wayne County's plans to cap Middlebelt hill.

That same year, more fill was added by a contractor to the southern hill to reduce the hill's slope. While tests have shown that this fill met residential contact standards, the material was "illegally placed in a floodplain," Kitler said in a summary report.

The state took samples from animal burrows. The residential direct contact standards are outlined under Section 20a1a of Part 201 Rules.

"These rules under the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act established cleanup standards with different standards depending on its use, whether it was residential or industrial," Kitler said. "The lead and the arsenic exceed the residential direct contact standards, but it is not an acute hazard."

Wayne County officials believe incinerator ash from Detroit's incinerator is a contamination source at the site.

Kitler said the state will take the public comments and submit them to a 12- member executive committee. That committee will decide whether to approve or reject plans to cap the site.

Kitler said the state was "right in the middle" of its review of Wayne County's plan with environmental and legal people examining the plans. "We're taking all the questions and comments from the public for the committee to consider."

Kitler expects a decision by the end of December.

Studies and samples have shown that Barnes-Meldrum Drain adjacent to Cooper School also has "stained soil."

"Some of it could be runoff," Kitler said. The Cooper School site contains metals that may have created a leachate that seeps into a gully to the Barnes Drain which empties into the Rouge.

"There's nothing in there (the Barnes Drain) that I would call extremely high or a serious problem," Kitler said. "It is probably similar to drains near roadways."

The two sites are located in Westland about 500 yards apart. The hill is owned by Wayne County and lies in Hines Park along the Rouge River, east of Middlebelt Road. Cooper School is owned by Livonia Public Schools and is located on Ann Arbor Trail, east of Middlebelt.

Experts forecast job changes here

BY TIM RICHARD

trichard@oe.homecomm.net

Picture southeastern Michigan's population growth in 2025 as an hourglass instead of a bell curve.

The top bulb represents ages 55 and older. The lower bulb is people from birth to age 24.

In the middle, shrinking absolutely and as a part of the whole, are the workers from ages 25 to 54. They'll be doing the work for their kids and their coupon-clipping, pension-collecting parents and grandparents.

"Basically we'll have a full employment economy," said Jim Rogers, data center manager for the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. "(Job) growth hits the wall in 2010 and as the baby boomers age. We'll stabilize at 2.9 million jobs."

The kinds of jobs will change, Rogers told the SEMCOG General Assembly, representing seven counties, on Oct. 30. The big shifts:

■ Manufacturing already has slipped from 36 percent of the total in 1965 to 19 percent by 1995 and will drop to 13 percent by 2025.

■ Retail trade will hold steady at 16-17 percent over the next three decades.

■ Service jobs replace most of the manufacturing jobs. "Services" range from accounting to engineering, teaching, barbering, auto mechanics, attorneys and doctors.

The forecasts were made by the University of Michigan's Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations with funds from the Michigan Department of Transportation.

In the first half of the 1990s, Rogers said, job growth outstripped population growth, 118,000 more people and 155,000 more jobs. A greater proportion of the population went to work.

"Over the following three decades (1995-2025), there will

Fiscal, judicial impact of new bills debated

BY TIM RICHARD

Michigan is making massive changes in the way it sends convicted criminals to prison, but no one can say how it will affect spending and prison construction.

"The fiscal impact of sentencing guidelines and truth-in-sentencing is indeterminate," says a Senate Fiscal Agency analysis of the long-debated package of laws, which take effect Dec. 15.

"Indeterminate" is the bottom line.

Some say legislators' chant of "tough new laws" will swell prison populations, sucking money from colleges and other services for good folks. Others say the changes take too much power from circuit judges.

Here's a look at where the state has been, what has happened during the 1990s, and where we're going with the 1998 laws.

Where we've been

For decades, the state has allowed sentencing judges wide discretion – too much discretion, perhaps. So in 1979 the state Supreme Court set up an advisory committee and in 1984 adopted "sentencing guidelines" based on what the bulk of judges actually were doing.

In 1988 the high court adopted the guidelines by order. A judge could depart from the guidelines but would have to justify his departure in writing.

Two problems emerged. The Supreme Court hesitated to make the guidelines too strict because its action lacked the force of law enacted by the Legislature. And it didn't consider the effect on state prison capacity and local jail budgets.

Matters came to a head in a landmark case from Eaton County in which Judge Richard Schuster ignored the guidelines and threw the book at Scott Milbourn for terrorizing an ex-girlfriend. The Supreme Court, in a 4-3 decision, sent back the case for resentencing. Schuster gave Milbourn the same sentence.

The appellate courts became immersed in a flood of appeals based on sentencing guidelines. So the Legislature began to act.

The 1990s

In 1994 the Legislature set up a sentencing commission to recommend new guidelines. The goal: to make prison sentences proportionate to the seriousness of the crime, the convict's prior record and prison capacity.

The commission took a 12-3 vote as it approved its report Oct. 22, 1997.

Meanwhile, the Legislature in 1994 passed a "Truth in Sentencing" law ending the practice of "good time" – releasing a well-behaved inmate before he had served his minimum sentence. Often, said the critics, these parolees committed new crimes.

But the Legislature added a feature called "disciplinary time" for breaking prison rules. The inmate's sentence could actually be lengthened, not by a judge but by a prison official, for violating prison rules. Inmates call these "flops."

From 1982 to date, the state prison population more than tripled, from around 13,000 to 43,000. Social critics say the U.S., with Michigan as a typical state, puts a greater percentage of its population behind bars than almost any country in the world except Russia.

Political candidates this year spent a lot of time arguing about whether to just keep building more prisons or to release less dangerous inmates.

At the same time, the Legislature softened the 1978 "650 drug lifer law," under which young "mules" in the drug trade were getting automatic life sentences with no hope of parole. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld the law's constitutionality, but a majority of people thought it was too harsh.

The new laws

After long debates, the Senate and House Judiciary Committees produced a set of bills that passed muster in both chambers and were signed by the governor – but still have an "indeterminate" effect on the prison population.

■ Public Acts 315-317 enumerate felony crimes and set sentencing guidelines that take effect for crimes committed after Jan. 1, 1999.

■ The same laws extend these guidelines to all crimes committed on and after Dec. 15, 2000.

■ They delete the Department of Corrections' ability to issue "flops" – additions to an inmate's sentence for violating departmental rules. Instead, the inmate's prison record will be reviewed by the parole board when he is considered for parole.

■ PA 319 modifies the 650-lifer law. It requires a prison sentence of at least 20 years for intent to deliver 650 grams of cocaine or similar narcotics. Two drugs are added to the list.

■ PA 311-312 amend the penal code to increase penalties for larceny, property damage and bad check offenses.

■ PA 320 requires inmates to earn a high school diploma or general education development (GED) certificate as a condition of parole. (It won't apply to those over age 65.) Lansing hasn't heard the last of this issue, because inmates complain that schooling opportunities are too limited for the GED requirement to be realistic.

Judges' view

In handing out sentences, circuit judges will deal with a "grid" of offenses and conditions. They will have some leeway, but less than in the past, in sending convicts to prison. Here's a simplified outline:

On one side of the grid, PA 317 classifies more than 700 offenses into nine crime classes. Some attempted crimes are included. The old Supreme Court guidelines listed 100 offenses.

On another side of the grid are 19 offense variables and seven prior record variables. Was there aggravated use of a weapon? Physical injury to the victim? Psychological injury to the victim or the victim's family? Captivity? Criminal sexual penetration? Alcohol or drug abuse?

If a certain crime requires a mandatory minimum sentence, the judge must impose it – no discretion.

Prisons are to be used for offenders whose minimum sentence is greater than 18 months. For short sentences, the convict may be housed in a county jail. The law requires the Department of Corrections to reimburse counties for jail use. The Legislature will get a chance to debate this in the annual Department of Corrections budget bill.

How will all these changes affect the Corrections budget and prison population? The Senate Fiscal Agency quotes Dr. Charles Ostrom of Michigan State University and Dr. James Austin of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency. Their projection shows a 1,323-inmate increase over baseline year 2007.

But many variables are at work – the parole rate, the effects of creating new crimes, judges' behavior.

The projections assume that, on average, prisoners will serve 13 percent additional time beyond their minimum sentence for disciplinary infractions. But that's up to the parole board.

That's why the effect of this year's new laws is, in the Senate Fiscal Agency's words, "indeterminate."

State battle heats up over revenue sharing

By Tim Richard
Staff Writer
trichard@oe.homecomm.net

Business people are weighing in on behalf of older cities to preserve their state-shared revenue. It promises to be a fight down to the closing hours of the Michigan Legislature.

The Republican-controlled Senate in June passed a bill that cuts Detroit's share and gives more to growing suburban cities and townships (SB 1181). The House has passed HB 5989 giving Detroit $62.5 million a year for the next six years.

"Revenue sharing should reward those municipal governments that attempt to keep taxes low, provide efficient services and improve economic competitiveness," said Sarah Hubbard of the Detroit Regional Chamber of Commerce.

She was joined by Gretchen Couraud of the Lansing Regional Chamber and Kevin Korpi of the Michigan Chamber. In a State Capitol news conference, they called for a new and "more evenly weighted formula" protecting cities with old infrastructure.

Born in 1971, state revenue sharing has rewarded cities with "high local tax effort" – specifically Detroit with its high property taxes, personal income taxes on commuters and residents, and utilities tax.

Critics – usually conservative Republicans and the Michigan Townships Association – say it amounts to looting the treasury to reward high taxes and inefficient bureaucracy.

The chambers actually appear to be steering a middle course by giving more state aid to cities that cut taxes and become more efficient, particularly in the permitting process.

Korpi of the state chamber said he had no new formula but encouraged work on a formula that would "encourage better utilization of existing infrastructure and discourage unplanned growth into undeveloped areas."

Pat McAvoy of the Michigan Townships Association denounced the chambers'

Sheriff starts online bureau

By Ken Abramczyk
Staff Writer
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Wayne County Sheriffs have started an Internet online crime bureau that has resulted in its first arrest.

Sheriffs arrested a 34-year-old Detroit man at a Hamtramck donut shop Monday evening, after sheriffs had monitored his chat room conversations for the past four months. The suspect believed he was luring a 14-year-old into sexual activity, while in reality a sheriff's 'cybercop' was assuming the role of a young female on the Internet.

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano believes law enforcement agencies need to work together to resolve this global problem.

"Currently there are 10 million children spending time on the Internet," Ficano said. "By the year 2002, 45 million will be on-line.

"Children tend to be trusting and reveal a lot of information about themselves. They may be led to believe a person (online) is 100 miles away when they actually may be just around the corner."

Ficano wouldn't comment on how many officers will be dedicated to fighting Internet crime, which he called Michigan's first on-line Internet crime bureau. He urged parents to take an active role in protecting their children from Internet predators.

"Some (predators) are soliciting young girls and asking them to scan naked pictures of themselves, and they are sending them ways to scan the pictures and how to do so without parents or police knowing about it," Ficano said.

Ficano said Wayne County Sheriffs are working with agencies in Canada, Michigan and Florida on suspected Internet crimes. The Michigan Sheriffs Association has started to work as a central group in the fight against Internet crime.

Ficano added the crime is every bit as dangerous as a stalker or someone making harassing phone calls to a teenager.

Ficano had tips for parents concerned about their child's use of the Internet:

■ Put the computer in a central location in the home.

■ Learn the computer's capability.

■ Limit a child's hours in using the computer.

■ Monitor on-line activity.

■ Consider installing a filtering device, which is not guaranteed to be foolproof.

Ficano noticed how easy it was to access chatrooms by watching his daughter use the computer. One day Ficano booted the machine and discovered how easily accessible pornographic sites were.

"The truth is that 'on-line' child sexual predators have access to our home at any given time," Ficano said. "While a parent is watching television in one room, an Internet intruder could be lurking in the next."

STATE CAPSULES

The Michigan Supreme Court this week is hearing oral arguments in several major cases, including:

Straus vs. Governor – State Board of Education President Kathleen Straus, D-Detroit, is seeking to overturn two 1996 executive orders stripping the elected State Board of much of its power. Straus won in Ingham Circuit Court but lost in the Court of Appeals. Currently, the Supreme Court has a 4-3 Democratic majority, but Republicans assume 4-3 control after Jan. 1.

People vs. Carlin – Gerald Carlin was a captain in the Oakland County Sheriff's Department and was charged in two cases with 20 counts of misconduct, including destruction of records.

People vs. Coutu – Several Oakland sheriff's deputies, officials and guards were charged with misconduct in operating the county's work-release facility. A district judge dismissed the charges and was affirmed by the circuit court and Court of Appeals.

Power outage darkens Observer, production delayed

The Observer Newspapers were not immune from the power outages Tuesday, caused by the high winds.

Pressmen, advertising, production and editorial staff at the Observer office in Livonia lost several hours of production time after power went out at 11:20 p.m. Tuesday. Detroit Edison crews worked to successfully restore power Wednesday morning.

Canton, Farmington, Livonia and Plymouth Observer editions were expected to be printed first, one hour later than usual on Wednesday. Garden City, Redford and Westland editions may be delayed.

The outage also delayed printing of the Michigan Chronicle, a Detroit newspaper printed by the Observer, according to Jim Jimmerson, O&E production manager.

"Starting at 3 a.m., we started making arrangements for auxiliary generator power," Jimmerson said. "We ordered two generators to get computers and lights turned on."

Readers may notice the classified section in Thursday's editions looks different because it was printed elsewhere.

Since power was restored, production is expected to be back to normal for the Sunday editions.

be continuous growth in population (up 721,000) and households (up 427,000).

"Employment will grow between 1995 and 2010, for a gain of 310,000 jobs, but for the subsequent 15 years, employment will be flat."

What's happening is that the baby boomers – those born after the low-birth period of World War II – will begin to reach retirement age in 2010. They had fewer kids than their parents.

Here is the regional forecast for typical age groups in 1995 and 2025:

- Age 16-17 – up 2 percent from 142,000 to 145,000.
- Age 25-34 – down nearly 9 percent from 750,000 to 685,000.
- Age 35-54 – down nearly 17 percent from 775,000 to 646,000.
- Age 65-74 – up more than 86 percent from 333,000 to 621,000. The 55-64 and 75-and older groups also show increases in the 83 to 92 percent ballparks.

SEMCOG delegates – city, township and county officials from Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Livingston, Washtenaw, St. Clair and Monroe counties – greeted the forecasts in silence and routinely adopted the report. Next step will be for SEMCOG's data advisory council to work on small are components of the regional forecast.

Roads added

The General Assembly amended its 2020 regional transportation plan to add $17.2 million for engineering costs in mostly freeway work. Among the additions:

- I-75 from Square Lake to Featherstone roads in central Oakland County – $1.2 million.
- M-59 at Crooks in central Oakland County – upgrade interchange – $8 million.
- US-23 – widen to six lanes in area north of Ann Arbor – $3.7 million.

Crystal ball

Gloria Jeff, Detroit-born assistant secretary of Transportation in the Clinton administration, painted a buoyant picture of southeastern Michigan in the 30 years between now and 2028.

"Thirty years ago, in 1968, America and southeastern Michigan were in tremendous turmoil" as President Johnson dropped out of the campaign, interstate highways were still on the drawing boards, tanks patrolled Detroit streets during the riot, and auto plants were still booming, she recalled.

For 2028, she predicted rapid intercity rail from Metro Airport; thriving communities in Hamtramck, Dearborn, Port Huron and Inkster; a thriving downtown and theater district in Detroit; a region known for manufacturing and technology; just 3 percent unemployment; an expanding medical complex; "havens" in the Huron-Clinton Metroparks because of shorter work weeks; and women chief executives at General Motors and Ford Motor Co..

Jeff's prediction about women CEOs brought cheers from a portion of the audience.

"Your challenge is to pro-act and create that future," Jeff said. "The future is not something that happens to you. The future is something you make."

approach. "This statement merely supports the continued distribution of revenue sharing to urban areas without regard to the migration of citizens from central cities due to poor schools, high crime and tax rates and burdensome regulations."

Author of the Senate bill is Glenn Steil, R-Grand Rapids. "For a quarter century," said Steil, "Michigan's cities, townships and villages have been shortchanged by a revenue sharing formula that is biased toward one city – Detroit."

The Senate approved 30-6 Steil's new formula for sharing $1.4 billion with local units. It limits any local unit to 8 percent in one year. Most importantly, it crimps the "relative tax effort" standard, a formula that benefited units with already high taxes – namely, Detroit.

SB 1181 was supported by all area Republicans along with Senate minority leader John Cherry, D-Clio, and Alma Wheeler Smith, D-Salem.

Opposed were George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, and five other Wayne County Democrats.

Detroit won't be the only loser, objected Sen. Virgil Smith, D-Detroit. Once SB 1181 is fully phased in, South Lyon, Southfield and even Northville would lose significant chunks of aid.

The Senate Fiscal Agency said the next year's pot will be up 2.5 percent from the current year and estimates future annual increases at 3 percent.

Steil's formula would give Oakland County a boost of 7.4 percent or $23.7 million.

Wayne County would take a cut of $46 million, or 9.1 percent; Detroit would lose $306 million, or 7.5 percent. Due for the full 8 percent increases are Livonia, Northville Township, Garden City and Westland.

Other winners would be townships and "growing cities such as Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor, East Lansing, Sault Ste. Marie, Escanaba, Mt. Pleasant, Lapeer, St. Clair Shores, Midland, Farmington Hills and dozens more," said Steil.

First Citizen

'98 winner a community gem

A "community gem" has been named Westland First Citizen of the year for 1998.

Barbara Polich, this year's winner, has given of her time to benefit many people and projects in Westland.

The award, co-sponsored by the Westland Observer and the Westland Chamber of Commerce attempts to recognize a local person for outstanding volunteer service. Polich was honored at a chamber luncheon on Tuesday.

Polich, who has served on many projects for many groups and organizations, doesn't confine her work to one segment of the community. Her volunteer service benefits people on many levels and in many areas ranging from the environment to children to the disabled to the needy.

As an active member of the Westland Civitan Club, she has worked on many of that club's service projects since she joined the club in 1988.

And her service isn't confined to the local club, she is also governor-elect for the Michigan District Civitan organization.

Meanwhile, the list of her local projects is lengthy. Some of the areas where she has volunteered her time in Westland include: Westland Summer Festival, Special Olympics, Westland Therapeutic Recreation program and the Westland Recycling Committee.

Bailey Recreation Center programs also receive her help where she works with Westland Parks and Recreation staff organizing events such as the Halloween Walk, Bunny Brunch, Nursery Olympics and Fun For All.

Wayne County Parks and Recreation programs such as the Marshmallow Drop and Halloween Festival have also received her attention. Polich is also an officer in the Friends of the Rouge and Friends of the Nankin Mill organizations.

A longtime Westland resident, Polich illustrates the true meaning of community service.

Those who know her know she is someone special and know that with just a phone call they can count on her help.

At times, volunteerism seems to be a dying art. Campaigns have been launched nationwide in recent years to get more people out to volunteer on a regular basis, but busy schedules and excuses often keep people from following through.

Examples such as Barbara Polich should inspire more people to give of their time and talents. It's through people like her that many things get done to benefit others.

This year's First Citizen award honors a person who does follow through. She's a community gem who's just a phone call away, and we join with the rest of the community in congratulating her on her shining example.

Election puts GOP in charge

Nov. 3 was a bad day for political prophets. Bill Ballenger of Inside Michigan Politics fame predicted: "Higher education board – It should be an 8-0 Republican sweep, especially if (Gov. John) Engler reaches 65 percent, although SBE (State Board of Education) incumbent Barbara Roberts Mason may manage to survive the deluge. So might sitting U-M Regent Phil Power."

Steve Mitchell at Mitchell Research & Communications Inc. in East Lansing: "The Republicans will win all eight board seats this year."

Result: Republicans won five of eight posts. Although three Democrats won statewide education posts, Mason and Power weren't among them.

Mitchell: "I predict a voter turnout of 2.8 million, down slightly from the 3.1 million who voted in 1994."

Result: The vote for governor was 3.02 million, which is lower than the actual number who went to the polls since an estimated 3.5 percent didn't vote for either gubernatorial candidate.

Mitchell: "I predict that Gov. Engler will win with 65 percent of the vote or about 1,820,000."

Result: Engler got 62.3 percent though Mitchell was fairly close to the raw number: 1,882,000.

Mitchell: "I believe John Smietanka will squeak out a narrow victory (for attorney general)."

Ballenger: "Everything points to a cliffhanger ... If Engler breaks 65 percent, Smietanka could win; if the governor doesn't, Granholm has the edge."

Result: Ballenger was closer. Engler was under 65 percent, and Granholm won.

Mitchell: "I still believe the GOP may gain one or two seats (in Congress from Michigan) this year. The most vulnerable Democrats are Sander Levin (12th), Dave Bonior (10th), Lynn Rivers (13th), Debbie Stabenow (8th) and Dale Kildee (9th)."

Ballenger: "Don't count on it, although the GOP appears to have closed the gap somewhat in the 12th ... IMP's best guess: it'll still be a 10-6 Democratic majority after Nov. 3."

Result: Democrats held the congressional delegation by 10-6. But give Mitchell credit for predicting the raw Republican vote would top the Democrats' by about 100,000.

For the Supreme Court, Mitchell predicted Democratic nominee Susan Borman would replace retiring Democrat Patricia Boyle.

Corrigan won the Supreme Court seat, giving Republican nominees a 4-3 victory for the first time in a generation.

We report this to bring voters up to date, not to scoff at political pundits who were amazingly close to correct numbers in an amazingly close election at the middle and bottom of the ticket.

What is significant for the reader is that for the first time since 1983, all three branches of government – the governor, both branches of the Legislature and the Supreme Court – are under the control of one party. Democrats under Jim Blanchard enjoyed their luxury for only one year, however, as voters recalled two Democratic senators and turned the Senate over to Engler's group.

U.S. voters have enjoyed playing tricks on the federal government, electing Democratic Congresses with Republican presidents Reagan and Bush, and giving President Clinton a Republican Congress after two years.

Michigan voters have played the same trick, giving Democrats full control for only one year from 1983-90 and giving Republicans very narrow margins for just two years of Engler's eight.

As of 1999, one party will be in charge in Lansing. Voters no longer can play tricks by electing a divided government. The next two years will be time for party responsibility.

Hike sub pay, not board pay

I just finished reading an article in the Observer about an increase in pay for Livonia school board members. As a substitute teacher in Livonia, earning $60 a day, I think the board needs to adjust their priorities. These people have good jobs and are school board members in what is basically a volunteer position. Why do they need an increase in pay to cover their "dry cleaning costs," to quote Dan Lessard, secretary? How do you expect a substitute teacher to cover similar expenses including lunch, gas, mileage and dry cleaning on $60 a day? It is also a very difficult job and I challenge any board member to take a call at 6 a.m., show up in a strange building and handle a class full of children for the day not knowing anyone's name or being familiar with the room, books, plans or schedules. If anyone needs a pay increase, it's substitute teachers, a group you should be taking better care of if you want them to continue working for your district.

They sacrificed plenty

This letter is in regards to the Livonia Franklin swimmers who were originally removed from their team after participating in another school function.

Hats off to John Kuenzel, who followed the athlete handbook and handed out the appropriate punishment for the swimmers. I'm sick of reading about how the swimmers showed a lack of commitment and devotion to their team. These girls didn't have a history of missing meets. If they had, this would be an entirely different story, and the coach would have been justified, as well as those who supported her. No, according to the original article, all three girls have been on the team a total of 10 seasons. (Four seasons for the one swimmer, and three each for the other two swimmers.) Not once had any of them missed a meet at any other time. I'm sorry, but I don't call that a lack of devotion. I think that is what is being overlooked here. Whether they chose to miss the meet for another school function or whatever was a decision they made based on the consequences which were clearly spelled out in the athlete handbook. They would be required to sit out the next meet. They chose that consequence. They didn't choose to be let go from the team. It doesn't matter if you agree with their choice or not, or whether other athletes would have made that same choice. That isn't the issue. In most instances, the coaches should have the final say, otherwise how else can they maintain any sense of order? But, having rules and regulations helps to give the athletes guidelines, as well as the coaches. This is one time the coach was out of bounds.

Being on a swim team, or any other school team, involves numerous time and commitment and sacrifice by each member. I'm sure those girls have missed plenty of school functions throughout the years to be a part of that team, and yes, that is what being on a team is all about. But because they chose one time to take part in their school's homecoming activities, which being seniors would have also been their last opportunity, doesn't sound like a lack of commitment to me. I think it is an insult to the girls and their families, who I'm sure have also sacrificed plenty, to say it is!

Fueling the question

In Brazil, the farmers make their own fuel for their equipment. They are completely free of using oil and gasoline as a fuel. They make their own alcohol.

Henry Ford wanted farmers to do this in the early 1920s. He said they could use it in their tractors and sell any surplus for additional income.

The beauty of this, all that would come out of the auto's exhaust pipe would be water vapor, no pollution.

The government, in its infinite wisdom, put a stop to it because they didn't know how to tax it.

POINTS OF VIEW

Big Labor's grip on the state Democratic Party is loosening

Look for a sea change in the Michigan Democratic Party early in 1999, the biggest change in 50 years.

In 1948, G. Mennen Williams won the gubernatorial nomination with help from Walter Reuther's UAW. That group rewrote state politics and social policy.

Big Labor will continue to be a major player but without its iron fist in a steel glove. The AFL-CIO – including the United Auto Workers, Michigan Federation of Teachers and AFSCME – fielded a 1994 gubernatorial candidate who lost disastrously. Big Labor's choice for the nomination didn't even win the 1998 primary.

To the labor-dominated party, Nov. 3, 1998 was like Moby Dick's sinking of the whaling ship "Pequod." All perished at the bulk of the Engler white whale save one Ishmael, Jennifer Granholm, the attorney general candidate.

Why? Big Labor itself has changed. No longer do industrial workers dominate. Huge blocs of UAW members actually come from the field of state social workers. And Republican Gov. John Engler has pared social workers from the state payroll with welfare changes.

Geoffrey Fieger declared there is no Democratic Party. He exaggerated only a little.

Yet Democratic candidates as a group ran only 100,000 votes behind out of three million cast this year. They can't all be union people. Some are managers, accountants, architects, nurses, store owners, roofers, payroll clerks, retirees, even a newspaper company owner.

So who will make this sea change that is so obviously building up?

TIM RICHARD

Geoff Fieger is unlikely to be a major player. There are some people around him, however, who may try to do to the Michigan Democratic Party what George Romney did to the GOP in 1962 and Dick Headlee did in 1982.

Former Gov. Jim Blanchard will be around. "We need a strong, grassroots organization that needs to move out. That's why I formed the New Century Fund," he said election night. His fund helped many candidates.

Ed McNamara, the Wayne County exec who crowned Granholm, will have a role. Lansing Mayor David Hollister may assert himself.

"Elected leaders need to step up and take control of the Democratic Party," said lame-duck state Rep. Kirk Profit of Ypsilanti on election night. "Elected people control the Republican Party. But you don't have elected people in control of the Democratic Party."

Many others apparently agree. A day later, a Lansing lobbyist passed along a tip: Look for elected officials to back outgoing Democratic floor leader Pat Gagliardi for state chair early in 1999.

In the 1970s, the Michigan Education Association was bidding for a dominant role. But because it backed an occasional Republican, MEA found itself denounced as "whores" by the AFL-CIO president. It may reassert itself, especially as Engler continues to alienate the 40 percent of MEA members who have voted Republican.

Granholm? She'll have her hands full keeping Engler from chopping her regulatory budget and finding child care. Besides, her Berkeley-Harvard mind is so mired in the sociology of the 1960s and '70s – linking "criminals and big corporations" – that she's out of step with the new direction set by Blanchard, Dennis Archer and Doug Ross.

If a party so narrowly run can come within 100,000 votes, think what would happen if a few visionaries made changes.

This world trade treaty is bad news for just about all of us

Today, 51 of the world's largest 100 economies are corporations. These huge transnational corporations (TNCs) wield tremendous influence over our politics, media, economy, environment and culture. The growth of power has reached a point where TNCs seriously threaten democracy!

Our government is currently negotiating a world trade treaty called the Multilateral Agreement for Investment (MAI). This is being done in conjunction with 29 of the world's wealthiest nations through a group called the Organization for Economic and Cooperative Development (OECD), aka the "Rich Nation's Club."

MAI has been termed the corporate bill of rights and "NAFTA on steroids." It elevates TNCs to equal status with nations. In the language of the treaty, TNCs are called "investors." MAI gives "investors" many protections and no accountability.

Investors can sue nations, states, provinces, counties and cities to compensate them for any government action that might cause them to lose money because of restrictions on how they use their property. This is called "expropriation" and can include historical designation zoning, air pollution controls or even laws for public safety.

Laws, regulations, policies or any other government actions can be challenged by investors through a mechanism called the "Investor-State dispute settlement process." These disputes are heard by an international arbitration panel created by the treaty. The decisions of the panel are binding. Only the federal government can defend a challenge, not an affected state or local government.

Under MAI, governments can be liable for enacting "performance requirements" like, say, a tax abatement for hiring a percentage of local workers. Governments are at risk for procurement policies like buying products from local businesses. If a policy has the effect of excluding a foreign investor, then government may have to pay compensation.

The treaty contains language for "rollback" and "standstill" for existing or future laws that reduce an investor's potential profitability. Some laws may need to be changed, remain unchanged or eliminated.

Governments can be legally blackmailed. Democracy takes a backseat to investor's rights.

We were assured in 1994 that NAFTA wouldn't jeopardize government's ability to protect health, safety or environment. Yet U.S.-based Ethyl Corp. successfully used the "expropriation" clause to force Canada to repeal a post-NAFTA law banning a dangerous gasoline additive called MMT. Canada was the only industrialized nation that hadn't yet banned MMT. When they attempted to protect public health, Ethyl said, "Not so fast. You owe us $251 million."

Canada discovered that indeed it would be forced to pay this compensation. They settled out of court and paid $10 million for Ethyl's legal costs, repealed the law and issued a formal apology to Ethyl.

MAI offers a much broader definition of "expropriation" than NAFTA. You've probably never heard of MAI. Corporate-owned mainstream press has reported almost nothing about it. Negotiations began in July of 1995. Sitting auspiciously at the table were representatives from 447 of the world's 500 largest corporations.

Not sitting at the negotiating table were representatives for labor, small business, local government, the environment, human rights or developing countries.

The OECD expected to finish the treaty and send it to negotiating nations for ratification last April. As the details of the MAI circulated in the real world, opposition mounted very quickly. Too many objections led to a postponement until this October. Thanks to the speed of the Internet, citizen groups were able to organize hefty opposition.

State Democrats face battle in reaching voters' hearts, minds

It must be something in the water.

How else to explain the disconnect between the state of politics in Michigan and what's going on elsewhere in the country.

For Michigan Republicans, Gov. John Engler, running implausibly but effectively as a moderate conservative pragmatist, rolled up nearly a 2-1 margin over Geoffrey Fieger. The GOP also won wall-to-wall control of the apparatus of government: governor, Senate, House, Supreme Court.

Team Engler is now in a position to determine much of the politics and some of the structure of our state for the next decade. Democrats hope they'll overreach, but I doubt it as long as Engler's in control.

By contrast, the national Republican Party took a terrible beating in last week's election, culminating in the summary knifing of Newt Gingrich (a strategic and policy visionary but a lousy manager). The factional fighting in the GOP – business-oriented moderates, Christian right wingers, compassionate conservatives, hard-edge ideological conservatives – could tear the party apart.

Buoyed by the referendum on impeachment and Ken Starr and chaos in the opposition, the national Democratic Party has come a long way since the days it was preoccupied with making sure there were no enemies on the left. Bill Clinton may possess questionable moral fiber, but his success in moving the Democrats into the middle of the road and opening the party up to various different groups is a fundamental fact of our times.

By contrast, the Michigan Democratic Party seems frozen in amber.

Most people thought big labor couldn't ever do worse than picking inept Howard Wolpe to run for governor in 1994. But then, when neither Doug Ross nor Larry Owen seemed to be getting much traction last summer and former Sen. Don Riegle started making showing signs of interest in running, the folks who run the UAW panicked.

Their premature and ham-handed endorsement of Owen didn't set well with most folks and opened the way to Fieger's unexpected victory in the primary and predictable defeat in the general election. Those Democrats who worry about what Team Engler will do over the next few years won't have difficulty in finding plenty of folks to blame.

PHILIP POWER

■ By contrast, the Michigan Democratic Party seems frozen in amber.

Which is why so many Democrats are talking so much about how important (and how overdue) it is to revitalize the party, "revitalize" in this case being a code word which really means easing Big Labor's grip on it.

"It's clear a complete overhaul of the party is needed," says former Gov. Jim Blanchard. "There are many in the party who are concerned about the need to broaden and strengthen and deepen the party" which is much too "uninclusive," says former Sen. Riegle.

This won't be easy. Obvious candidates to lead the process – Blanchard and newly elected Attorney General Jennifer Granholm, for example – have political ambitions of their own and won't want to alienate the labor movement that still provides most of the resources for the party.

The requirements – developing some attractive ideas, including groups previously kept out and persuading organized labor that it's better to win the occasional election than it is to maintain total control over the Democratic Party – are fairly obvious.

Whether Democrats can come up with a process and find the people with the will and imagination to carry it out is entirely another matter.

COMMON SENSORS

JACQUE MARTIN-DOWNS

Homelessness in this age?

Good economy, low interest rates, lower unemployment than ever. That might lead one to believe that on Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs, today's society doesn't have to deal with a lack of food, clothing, shelter, primal needs that have to be addressed before people can "self-actuate."

But you'd be wrong if you guessed that right here in our own backyard that all your neighbors are doing just fine. And for this reason, Gov. John Engler has designated Nov. 8-14 as Homeless Awareness Week 1998.

Families who are homeless often find respite at local shelters, campgrounds, in cars or abandoned buildings. And often, the only thing they bring with them is a bag full of clothes.

Statewide, more than 750 providers of shelter and services bring help to homeless families and individuals. In the state of Michigan alone, 10,000 people are accommodated in shelters each night. In western Wayne County, the Wayne County Family Center sleeps more than 80 every night.

The reality of homelessness contradicts the stereotypical chronic alcoholic and street person, suffering from mental illness. In fact, studies indicate that more than 25 percent of the homeless are working.

YWCA honors Women of Achievement

They came from far and near to be a part of an annual YWCA of Western Wayne County event: recognition of six women who have demonstrated qualities of outstanding leadership and personal endeavors.

Ouida Cash admits she was caught off guard by her nomination. Nancy Swanborg had advance warning, but was still humbled by it all.

The two women were among six to be recognized as 1998 Women of Achievement by the YWCA of Western Wayne County at a luncheon Friday, Nov. 6, at the Fairlane Club in Dearborn.

The award recognizes women who have demonstrated qualities of outstanding leadership and excellence in both their professional and personal endeavors for the betterment of western Wayne County.

"It's a very nice thing to be recognized by your peers and to be recognized by other women," said Swanborg, director of Schoolcraft College's Women's Resource Center. "It's often said that women don't know how to boast, roast and toast each other. This is wonderful praise from other women who are working for the betterment of women."

"You don't look for an honor like this and it's nice when it happens," added Cash, chief executive officer of Starfish Family Services, while waiting for the luncheon to start. "It's unusual for me to be caught off guard in such a nice way."

Six categories

Women were honored in six categories, including government/law, volunteer service, arts/communication and young woman. Swanborg was honored in business/industry and Cash in the professions.

Swanborg who was joined by her daughter and son-in-law, Kirsten and Tony Kramer of Grand Rapids, grandson Alex and staff at the luncheon, was nominated by the 15 members of WRC Advisory Board for her work. She has been director of the center since 1989.

The Women's Resource Center helps women and men explore educational, financial, professional and personal opportunities through special programs, support groups and peer counseling. Its From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips program has been designated an exemplary college program by the Michigan Department of Education.

Under her direction, the WRC has increased its in-person and phone contacts with clients from 9,500 to 20,000 annually, increased the number of scholarships given out 640 percent from 27 to 200 annually and realized increased donations and grant support for its many programs.

Jacobson's play days will introduce tracing kits to kids

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER
cfuoco@oe.homecomm.net

Creativity among youngsters is lacking, and Plymouth resident Marie Smith wants to do something about it.

To encourage kids to improve their motor skills, Smith, in 1997, created and packaged tracing kits, which include traceable drawings of ice skaters and hockey players.

The line was such a success that she is introducing three new lines – football, soccer and baseball players – during several play days at area Jacobson's stores.

"The children will learn how to play with the new production. Kids can come and draw to their hearts' content," Smith explained. "It's time to go back to the basics. Kids need something they can think about and create."

Andrea Kosiba, the buyer for children's accessories and toys at Jacobson's, said she's not sure how children will react to the product, but she knows that when she was a child, she liked to draw.

"It lets kids use their imagination; that's the best thing," Kosiba said. "They can show their artistic abilities whether they're 4 or 8 or 9. It allows the kids to be more creative and trace something."

"I think it's a very good idea and I think Marie Smith is a wonderful person. She's really nice to work with. Having her wanting to go into the stores and advertise it and have a play day is great."

All kits come with reusable tracing cards, 20 sheets of tracing paper, nine non-toxic colored pencils and a tracing pencil.

Smith created the kits after neighborhood kids enjoyed coloring the sketches she drew of ice skaters and hockey players. After awhile, she tired of holding the paper up to the windows and making multiple copies, so she started her own company, Dream Team Tracing Company.

"The kids really liked it, and the more I checked into this, I found that there weren't any art products like this for children," Smith said.

Since starting her company, Smith has hired three sales representatives, one in Michigan and two out of state. That has allowed her to concentrate on new ideas, including the boys' line and next year's introduction of girls' soccer players, gymnasts, cheerleaders and boys' basketball players.

"There's a need for products geared toward boys; there's not a whole lot offered out there," she said. "The girls, they love to draw and design clothes."

The kits, originally priced at $10, now sell for $8.

"I was able to repackage the products. Everything inside is the same. I just passed along the savings to my customers. I think it's more important for more kids to have this at $8," Smith explained.

Smith's goal is to have them available in all of Jacobson's 23 stores, and in other chains like Zany Brainy, Noodle Kidoodle, Borders Books and Imaginarium stores.

She chalks up the ability to get the kits in the seven Jacobson's stores – Toledo, Ohio, and Ann Arbor, Grosse Pointe, Grand Rapids, Birmingham, Rochester and Livonia – to pure timing.

"I was in the right place at the right time," she said. "I called the (former) buyer in toys, and she was looking for boys products for a sports page in the catalogue. So Jacobson's and I decided to do football and soccer."

Besides Jacobson's, the kits are available in 76 locations in Michigan, including Adventures in Toys in Birmingham, Marmel Toys in Farmington Hills, Toy Wonders of the World in Walled Lake, Warren Toys and Gifts in Farmington, Little Professor in Plymouth, Bee's and Play Ball, both in Westland, Dance World Shop in Livonia, Trader Jacks in Plymouth, The Goalie's Den in Troy, Perani's Hockey Store in Livonia and area ice arenas.

The kits are sold at Friends Gift Shop at the University of Michigan and Mott Children's Hospitals in Ann Arbor, Oakleaf Gift Shop at Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn and Fontbonne Gift Shop at St. John Hospital in Detroit.

This year, Smith's products also will be available at the Festival of Trees gift shop at Cobo Conference and Exhibition Center Nov. 22-29.

In looking back at the last year, Smith said her biggest joy is entertaining children.

"The kids all love them," she said. "If I had to think of my greatest reward it would be that the kids have so much fun."

Come and play

Marie Smith and Jacobson's stores play days with her tracing kits will be:

- 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, at the Rochester store, 1220 Walton Blvd., (248) 651-6000.
- 2:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, at the Livonia store in Laurel Park Place, Six Mile and Newburgh roads, (734) 591-7696.
- 3-5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 15, at the Ann Arbor store in Briarwood Mall, State Street and I-94, (734) 769-7600.

Swanborg was director of the Gabriel Richard Campus Ministry at Henry Ford Community College and the University of Michigan-Dearborn and campus minister at Macomb Community College before taking the helm of the WRC.

A Dearborn resident, she received the Susan B. Anthony Award at UM-D in 1989-90 and was named Woman of the Year in 1994 by the Livonia Branch of the American Association of University Women. She also was a finalist for the Athena Award, presented by the Five Star Chambers of Commerce and received special recognition from the Older Women's League for service and dedication to women's issues.

The work of many

And while the YWCA selected her for this newest honor, she is sharing it with many individuals who work at the center.

"It's very humbling, but one thing I most sincerely believe, it is one honor that recognizes the work of the many people who make things happen at the center – the advisory board, paid staff and volunteers who have supported my work," she said.

"Ultimately, it's the wonderful ladies who go through the Micro Chips program, and thanks to Schoolcraft College, go into the business world," added advisory board member Charlotte Adams, who spearheaded Swanborg's nomination.

This is the first time Cash was nominated for the YWCA award. She was nominated by Starfish staffers Charles Ragains, Melinda Clynes and Robin Cooke.

"We thought it would be an appropriate nomination," said Ragains, the agency's chief marketing and communications officer. "She has done a lot and certainly is a woman of achievement. It's also important to tell our story to an important audience."

"It's nice to know that the staff feels the way its does," said Cash. "Sometimes you're so busy with what you're doing that occasionally it's nice to look up and say, 'We did good.' "

Cash, a Northville resident, began her career as a psychologist with Boys & Girls Republic in Farmington Hills. She also held a variety of counseling and leadership positions with the Counterpoint Runaway Shelter, Out-Wayne County Youth Services Coalition and Youth Living Centers, where she became its executive director in 1985.

In July, she became the CEO of Starfish Family Services, the name selected to reflect the merger of Youth Living Centers and Northwest Community Services earlier this year.

Cash has received the Spirit of Detroit Award and was selected by the Michigan Women's Commission to receive the "30 Years – 30 Women" Award for outstanding service to women and families in Michigan.

"I'm so glad the YWCA had an award for the human services profession," she said. "Often what we do is a business with a mission and that that is recognized tells me we're in the right place.

"This is something you don't look for, so it's nice when it happens. It comes as a welcomed surprise."

The other Women of Achievement honorees were:

- Wayne County Clerk Teola Hunter in government/law. A resident of Detroit, she served 11 years in the State House of Representatives, including three years as the speaker pro tempore. She also was deputy director of Wayne County Health and Community Services before being elected Wayne County clerk.

A member of the Mayflower Congregational Church of Christ, she is a member of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority and serves on the boards of several business, civic and professional organizations.

- Essie Williams in volunteer services. An Inkster resident, she divides her volunteer efforts between the radiology department at Henry Ford Medical Center-Fairlane, where she received a 1,500-hour award, and St. Clement's Episcopal Church in Inkster, where she is a lay reader and member of the Episcopal Church Women.

She also is a charter member of the Omega Chapter of Gamma Phi Delta Sorority and has served in various office within the organization.

- Eleanor Eaton in arts/communications. A Dearborn resident, she is a former editor and newspaper columnist and author of "Dearborn: A Pictorial History," the only complete history of the area from the time of the native Americans to 1990.

She has served on the boards of the Dearborn Orchestral Society, Fairlane Music Guild, Fine Arts Associates of the University of Michigan-Dearborn and Friends of the Library-Dearborn. She has been a member of the Dearborn Community Arts Council, Women's Association for the Dearborn Symphony Orchestra, Garden Club of Dearborn, Zonta and Henry Ford Heritage Association.

- Genard Wright as young woman. An Ypsilanti resident, she is a member of the Inkster Alumnae Chapter of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority. During her two years with the sorority, she volunteers to be a sponsor of the Peppermints, a group of western Wayne County high school girls, and was elected financial secretary of the sorority.

She also works with a group of elementary school girls in Inkster and has chaired a reading program for preschool children, entitled Book and Blanket.

She also is involved in numerous volunteer activities at Eastern Michigan University.

The groom asked Christopher A. Fowler to serve as his best man with Steven J. Davanzo as groomsmen and Tony Sengor and Matt Pruess as ushers.

The couple received guests at Joy Manor in Westland before leaving on a honeymoon trip to Toronto, Ontario, Canada. They are making their home in Wayne.

Hope.

There's Plenty To Go Around.

Wouldn't it be great if we went through life without any problems? Well, that's not the way things are. We all struggle. But there is a way to face whatever comes along with peace, and with confidence.

We're your neighbors, the people of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, and we invite you to celebrate with us that special hope and peace that Christ alone can bring.

Bugliosi: Manson was 'heavyweight in hippy world'

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER
smason@oe.homecomm.net

He came to talk about Charles Manson, but his audience also heard what Vincent Bugliosi had to say about the O.J. Simpson trial, JonBenet Ramsey murder investigation and the JFK assassination.

Bugliosi was the opening act of Livonia Town Hall's 35th season, giving the audience with a look at what might have been the trial of the century until Simpson's acquittal in the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Bugliosi, who "dug out his faded notecards" for the talk, successfully prosecuted Manson and four members of his family for the brutal Tate-LaBianca murders in the Los Angeles area in 1969.

"Next to Jack the Ripper, whose identity is still unknown, Charles Manson is the most famous mass killer," Bugliosi said. "But there's a continuing interest in the murders, not because of the characters – they weren't that prominent. The reason for that interest is because the murders were so bizarre."

A 1964 graduate of the University of California-Los Angeles Law School and author and co-author of six books, Bugliosi was catapulted to fame as the assistant district attorney who convinced a jury that, at the direction of Manson, Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Charles "Tex" Watson brutally murdered actress Sharon Tate, Abigail Folger, Voytek Frykowski, Steve Parent and Jay Sebring on Aug. 8, 1969, and with Leslie VanHouten murdered Leno and Rosemary LaBianca the following night.

The trial was the longest murder trial in history at the time. The guilt phase took seven months and the penalty phase another two months, and the two trials consumed some 35,000 pages of transcripts.

The illegitimate son of a 16-year-old prostitute, Manson had spent a majority of his life – 17 years – in jails, reformatories and prisons when he was released from federal prison on Terminal Island, Calif., in March 1967. He didn't want to leave, but had to and headed to Haight Ashbury district of San Francisco where he found the "raw material" to work into his "family."

Average people

"Charlie was a heavyweight in a hippie world," Bugliosi said. "He surrounded himself with average young people who were convinced he was the second coming of God and the devil in one.

"When I heard they thought Charlie was Christ, I thought they were playing a game. But when I started interviewing former members who'd tell me things like, 'Even though he's not here, he still knows what I'm doing,' I realized the tremendous grip he had on their lives."

■ 'He was an evil genius, but I don't mean his IQ (of 121). He was able to discern what people wanted to see in him. He said of himself that he was a man of 1,000 faces, and the family called him the changeling.'

author and attorney

Those "average" Americans include Mary Brunner, a college graduate and the first woman to join the group, and Manson's first lieutenant, Watkins, who was viewed as an all-American hero in his hometown of Famersville, Texas.

While membership ran as high as 50, hard-core followers numbered 24; most were in their late teens and early 20s, and most members were women whose function was to procreate and service the men.

A majority of those who started following Manson drifted off after a few months, possibly because of Manson's outlandish philosophy, Bugliosi said.

Although only educated to a seventh-grade level, Manson was "very bright" and was able to gain control of every aspect of his followers' lives, using conventional techniques, ranging from sexual perversion to break down their confidence and drugs like marijuana and LSD.

"LSD played a role in getting the members to kill for him," Bugliosi said. "They would tell each other how beautiful death was but never would kill each other or commit suicide. They only killed outside the family."

Living in near isolation at Spahn Ranch outside Los Angeles, family members lived in a timeless existence, hearing only Manson's sermons about Helter Skelter.

Believing The Beatles sent out messages through the music in the White Album, Manson preached about the coming war between whites and blacks. The blacks would win, but would not know what to do with their newfound power and would turn it over to Manson and his family.

But as controlling as Manson was, not all members of the family were willing to kill for him. Linda Casabian, the family member who became the prosecution's star witness, stayed at the ranch the night of the Tate murders, but accompanied the group the next night.

Casabian didn't participate in those killings. Instead, Manson drove her to an apartment in Venice, Calif., where he gave her a knife and told her to kill an actor friend. She "frustrated him by knocking on the wrong door."

"But how did this little guy only 5 feet 2 inches tall gain unbelievable control over these people?" Bugliosi said. "It was his power of personality. He was an evil genius, but I don't mean his IQ (of 121). He was able to discern what people wanted to see in him. He said of himself that he was a man of 1,000 faces and the family called him the changeling."

"Charlie was a heavy dude, someone to reckon with."

Final decision

In the end, the jury found Manson and his co-defendants guilty of all charges – 23 counts of first-degree murder and four counts of conspiracy to commit murder. They were all sentenced to death, but a year later, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the death penalty and their sentences were commuted to life in prison.

As for possible paroles, Bugliosi believes Krenwinkel, VanHouten and Atkins will get out "somewhere down the line," but that Manson, even with "California's bad history of keeping people behind bars" will stay there for the rest of his life.

"Manson is so notorious that even in California, he will stay behind bars," he said.

And Watson has become a born again Christian and operates a prison ministry.

No longer in the public sector, Bugliosi has plenty to say about other famous cases, especially the O.J. Simpson murder trial. As he sees it, "it was a major big time bad jury and the prosecution was even worse," that Judge Lance Ito erred in letting the defense question Detective Mark Furhman if he used the N word in the last 10 years, and Johnnie Cochran's claim of police frame-up was "bogus."

"Johnnie Cochran convinced the black community, that it was racial, but it was a bogus argument," he said. "O.J. Simpson needed a road map to get back to the 'hood.

"The only good thing I can say is that there's no statute of limitations on murder."

Bugliosi also studied the JFK assassination and "believes beyond a reasonable doubt that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone" and after looking at the details of the JonBenet Ramsey murder investigation, has concluded that while "the evidence of someone inside the house committing the murder is strong, it is extremely weak" in identifying that person.

The second Livonia Town Hall lecture will be 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 18, at St. Mary's Cultural Center, 18100 Merriman, Livonia. Master gardener and host of WXYT-AM's "Green Side Up" Janet Macunovich will give a presentation on "More Than a Garden: Balm for the Soul, Glue for the Family," an interesting look at the non-plant aspects of gardening. Lecture tickets cost $15 and can be purchased at the door. Reservations for luncheon tickets, costing $12, must be made by Friday, Nov.13, by calling (248) 474-7213. A lecture ticket is required to attend the luncheon.

A big factor in their homelessness can be attributed to a lack of available low-cost housing. They may get evicted because they couldn't pay the rent or because of domestic violence, but what they find out is that their last dwelling "was the only game in town." The housing shortage is far more prevalent for low-income families than anyone else.

But, homelessness can include hungry mouths and cold bodies. Several weeks ago, I came across a treasure of a store in Wayne, called the Tried and True Thrift Shop. This store has a bountiful supply of "gently used" clothing, kitchen wares, appliances and other household items. It's a garage saler's delight.

The basement, where the donated items arrive, is filled to the brim with every item possible to stock a home. The store not only touts low prices, it offers "specials" to those who have an extraordinary need.

Headed up by Kim Marquette, this nonprofit shop is doing its part to help those who are in need as well as those who love to bargain shop.

Isn't it time that our children begin to appreciate and value what they have? The only way they will is to give back.

So how can you get involved? If you and your family are thankful for all that you have, you can give back in several different ways.

n Financial donations are always welcome at the Wayne County Family Center, 30600 Michigan Ave., Westland – (734) 721-0590 – and the western Wayne Empty Bowls Food Bank, 33800 Grand Traverse, Westland – (734) 595-2279.

n Round up a bunch of neighbors or a church group and head down to the Tried and True Thrift Shop at 35004 W. Michigan Ave., Wayne – (734) 728-9777 – to offer help in sorting the incoming donations.

Who knows, maybe you'll find that little treasure you've been hunting for.

Jacque Martin-Downs is the coordinator of the Family Resource Center in Westland and has a private counseling practice. If you have a question or comment, write her at the Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Friends host Kienzle at Nov. 15 talk

The Friends of the Livonia Libraries will sponsor a lecture by William Kienzle at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 15, at the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile.

Kienzle, the author of numerous mystery novels, such as "The Rosary Murders," "Death Wears a Red Hat" and "Mind Over Murder," will speak about "Awards and Other Bric-a-Brac."

He was born in Detroit and served as a priest in the area. Detroit and places and parishes throughout the area have served as a backdrop for many of his novels.

The lecture is free of charge to members of the Friends of the Livonia Libraries. Yearly memberships cost a minimum of $5 and will be available at the door.

'ROCK OF ISRAEL'

Come and praise the Lord in a worship celebration with Douglas Carmel, a Jewish missionary from the Rock of Israel Ministries, at 10"45 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 15, at Riverside Park Church of God, 11771 Newburgh, Livonia.

Raised in a traditional Jewish home in New York, Carmel turned to Christ in 1989 at the age of 21. With his family very upset over such a move, the family rabbi and other Jewish men tried to persuade him to renounce his newfound faith. When that failed, his family rejected his belief and asked him to move out of their home permanently.

He now shares Christ in churches around the Midwest and teaches from the Old Testament, showing Jesus from the Jewish feasts and tabernacle perspective.

Nursery care will be provided for children through age 4. For more information, call the church at (734) 464-0990.

'LASTING IMPRESSION'

For more information, call the church office at (248) 348-7600.

Trinity hosts evening of Celtic music

In keeping with its mission to engage culture in a relevant, yet distinctively Christian manner, Trinity Church of Livonia will host the highly acclaimed Celtic band The Crossing.

The seven-member band, which hails from the Chicago community of the Jesus People USA, will offer an evening of Celtic music – redemption and reconciliation, hope and healing – at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, at the church, 14800 Middlebelt, south of Five Mile, Livonia. Tickets cost $8 each and are available by calling the church at (734) 425-2800.

After several independent releases, The Crossing has shown itself to be a seasoned Celtic group which can hold its own among the best of the genre. The band is devoted to playing Celtic music with genuineness and integrity.

According to Tony Krogh, piper and vocalist, the appeal of the band stems from "the diversity of the instruments – highland and uileann pipes, harp, fiddle, cello, bodhran, whistles – and the variety of characters you meet in our songs – fishing families in Scotland, street people in Chicago, people wrestling with life ... and a certain carpenter from Nazareth."

In concert: The Crossing engages culture in a relevant, yet Christian way in its concerts.

Billboard magazine describes the group as a "wildly eclectic" Irish/Scots sound in which "fiery jigs and reels vie with melancholy laments and Gaelic-flavored originals."

It isn't just the music that compels the musicians. They also are driven by another mission: serving God by serving the poor. They all live in a Christian community of 500 people in an old apartment building in Chicago's rundown Uptown neighborhood.

The community runs a shelter for homeless women with children, a food pantry, a daily meal for street people, crisis pregnancy center and a retirement home for low-income senior citizens.

The work keeps the band honest and is wholly consistent with the Celtic Christian spirituality, according to Krogh.

"You don't have to be Irish, Scottish or Welsh to enjoy Celtic style music," said the Rev. Michael Van Horn, pastor of Trinity Church. "Celtic music and ideas are enjoying something of a revival in the current culture. Folks are finding within this style of music a kind of honesty and integrity about all of life – both joys and sorrows – with which they can empathize deeply.

Parkview Baptist hosts Deaf Awareness Sunday

The Parkview Baptist Church in Livonia will let hands do the talking as part of its Deaf Awareness Sunday on Nov. 22.

The Rev. Fred Adams, the pastor of the Deaf Missionary Baptist Church in Mason, Ohio, will preach at the 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services.

Located near Cincinnati, Ohio, the church was established in 1989. About 50 members of the deaf community attend services and about 100 attend fellowships.

Adams, who is deaf, is a powerful gospel preacher, using his voice so that his messages can be understood by the hearing as well as the deaf.

Joining him will be Deaf Missionary Baptist Church's choir, the Hands of Praise, as well as Parkview Baptist's sign language class.

There also will be Sunday school at 9:45 a.m.

Parkview's Bethesda Ministries is dedicated to meeting the spiritual needs of the deaf and disabled. Its mission also is to help family members and care givers who have many needs of their own.

The church is mostly barrier-free and accessible to all people. It is at 9355 Stark Road, between Plymouth Road and Hines Drive in Livonia. For more information, call (734) 261-6180 or by TTY at 261-8281.

Our Thanksgiving traditions: the myths and realities

HOOKED ON HISTORY

VIRGINIA PARKER

Picture our Pilgrim ancestors. It's an easy task. After all, our very traditions rest on the bedrock of knowledge that Pilgrims dressed in black with plain, white linen trim, and they ate turkey for the first Thanksgiving. We're confident of this from the truths we learned in earliest grade school.

One wonders how close the legend is to reality.

There's a fun place to discover what the Pilgrims were really like, how they dressed and what they ate. It's Plimouth Plantation in Massachusetts, a living history museum where historical interpreters take on the roles of actual colonists.

They enjoy drawing visitors into their world. One Pilgrim woman asked us where we came from, but, of course, since it was supposed to be 1627, she had never heard of Michigan. It was simply wilderness far to the west. She concluded that our untamed place of origin was the cause of our being shamelessly clad in shorts and sandals.

The villagers' colorful clothes surprise many. Modern misconceptions may be traced to the Puritans (the Pilgrims were a splinter group) describing their clothes as being of "sad" colors. In the 17th century, this meant dark or deep tones. Russet, olive green and even scarlet were popular!

Here and there, a woman has fashionably tucked a corner of her olive green skirt's hem into her waistband to reveal a scarlet underskirt. Puritans were no exception among 17th century males who had an eye for full figures.

Color is not the only surprise. Re-enactors portraying prominent citizens wear lace. It was costly – the Rolex watch of the 1700s. The leaders began passing laws to restrict the wearing of lace. They curtailed excesses in apparel, which the Puritans frowned upon, and reserved it as a distinguishing mark of the wealthy.

Common observance

Back to the first Thanksgiving dinner. The Puritans commonly held days of thanksgiving that they observed with prayer and feasting. They also frequently observed days of penance with fasting. That said, our modern Thanksgiving dates back to the Pilgrim's three-day festival in 1621 when those who survived the harsh new climate celebrated their first successful harvest.

Turkey was not the entree, although wild turkey was probably served, maybe even duck, goose and swan. If anything, the first thanksgiving featured lots of venison a gift from the Native American guests who feasted with the Pilgrims – and fish, especially cod. They also ate vegetables, berries and nuts. Adults and children alike washed down the meals with their standard beverage, beer.

Our Thanksgiving dinner traditions are more a Victorian invention, with foods that enlarge upon the Pilgrims' fare. In addition, the date we celebrate has a history of political overtones. In November 1789, George Washington proclaimed a nationwide day of thanksgiving to pray and give thanks to God as a way of cementing all denominations into a spirit of shared heritage. Yielding to the urgings of editor Sarah J. Hale, Abraham Lincoln declared it a national holiday in 1863.

Ever confused about which Thursday it falls on, Lincoln made it the last Thursday in November. In 1939, Franklin D. Roosevelt moved it up a week to bolster holiday shopping. In 1941, by joint resolution, the Congress set the fourth as the official date. In certain years, the fourth Thursday is the last Thursday, so some of us will never get it straight.

Modern traditions

Well, we began by taking a peek at the Pilgrims' world, Let's imagine what they would think, if they could look in on our Thanksgiving traditions.

The picture-perfect, stuffed turkey, plump-breasted and mild-flavored – drawn from our modern oven – confuses them. They expected the gamy wild fowl they plucked from the sky. They try other strange but tasty foods – sweet potatoes and stuffed olives.

The visitors are astonished at our abundance of lace that covers the table and graces the windows. The bone china is a far cry from the wooden trenchers most of them used. Some of our guests forego the unfamiliar fork in favor of the knife to slip food into their mouths. The utensil has served them well enough until now, although the narrower blade proves unwieldy.

The whole community has not gathered, yet our extended families have joined us, along with a few special friends. Many have brought food as the colonists did.

Our Pilgrim friends might comment that prayer is not as prominent. Yet, at the table, they would hear us give thanks, both as we say grace and as we gratefully recount our blessings in conversation.

To be sure, they might not recognize the trappings, but they would certainly recognize the spirit.

Historian and author Virginia Bailey Parker has a bachelor's degree in history and a master's degree in historic preservation. She lives in Canton Township.

Stevenson wins 8th straight title

Kern, Makowski Clark individual champs in WLAA

■ GIRLS SWIMMING

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

The cast, even the method used, has changed. But the results didn't.

Another year, another Western Lakes Activities Association championship for Livonia Stevenson's girls swim team. This time the Spartans scored 614 points to perennial runner-up Plymouth Salem's 412.

North Farmington was third with 387 and Walled Lake took fourth with 311, with Northville fifth (260), Plymouth Canton sixth (258), Livonia Churchill seventh (202), Farmington Harrison eighth (187), Farmington ninth (130), Livonia Franklin 10th (122) and Westland John Glenn 11th (76) (see statistical summary).

If there was a difference between this Spartan team and its predecessors — the title was Stevenson's eighth-straight and 12th in the WLAA's 16 years of girls swimming — it was the lack of overall dominance. In the past, the Spartans would sweep all three relays and would finish first in half the individual events.

"This time we had more depth," said Stevenson coach Greg Phill. "We only won five events. I don't ever remember that happening."

Indeed, the Spartans won just one relay: the 200-yard medley, with Lindsay Dolin, Marti McKenzie, Katie Clark and Jessica Makowski combining for the victory in 1:53.59. Walled Lake collected top honors in the other two relay events, with Sheryl Wrobel, Megan Sparling, Jessica Martin and Laura Kaznecki teamming to win both the 200 freestyle (1:40.26) and 400 freestyle (3:43.24).

What Stevenson did differently was find more ways to score — 34 ways, to be exact. The Spartans had 36 total

Polanski headed for Texas Christian

■ GOLF

The state's top junior golfer has made his decision.

Michigan Amateur runner-up and Division I state champion Steve Polanski of Livonia Stevenson signed an NCAA letter-of-intent Wednesday with Texas Christian University.

He will be the recipient of an endowed Ben Hogan Scholarship.

The choice came down to perennial NCAA championship contender Oklahoma State and TCU. Polanski also made visits to Georgia and Wake Forest.

"My heart told me TCU and I just think I fit in better with the kids there," Polanski said. "The small class environment was also a big plus for me.

"It was pretty tough telling the other coaches."

TCU, located in Fort Worth, Tex., competes in the Western Athletic Conference (WAC).

The Horned Frogs' men's golf program also has emerged as a top ten team during the past five years under the coaching of Bill Montigel.

Although OSU has a more storied history in men's golf sending several well-known players to the PGA Tour, Polanski looks at TCU as an opportunity to bring the program to greater heights.

"I could be another in a long line of good players at Oklahoma State, but at TCU I look at it as a chance to make a name for myself," Polanski said. "They really haven't had any big names come through the program. A guy named J.J. Henry just got his tour card."

Polanski, who is leaning toward majoring in business, also liked the fact that TCU uses five different country clubs as its home course, including the prestigious Colonial.

"They play a lot of sweet courses," he said. "And the WAC is a good league. They play UNLV, which is a very good golf school."

Polanski's next competition will be Nov. 20-26 at the two Disney Courses in Lake Bueva Vista, Fla. in the AGJA Polo Junior Classic.

Late Catholic Central TD stalls Tractors' upset bid

■ PREP FOOTBALL

The defining moment in Saturday night's Class AA football regional semifinal between Detroit Catholic Central and Dearborn Fordson came with the score tied 6-6 and 10:45 remaining.

The scoreboard clock doesn't move after touchdowns but whoever had on a wristwatch knows it took more than five minutes for Fordson to kick the extra point after a four-yard touchdown run by senior tailback Rendell Winston tied the score.

CC was assessed two offsides penalties and Fordson one for illegal procedure before the Tractors' placekicker Kassem Anani finally put one through the uprights for a 7-6 lead.

Watching how fierce both teams battled for the extra point, so often taken for granted, showed the game at Pontiac's Wisner Stadium, which ended in a 12-7 win for CC, was more like a war.

"The extra point meant the difference between winning or losing at that point and we wanted to block it, they wanted to kick it," CC coach Tom Mach said.

For the second-straight week, CC needed a touchdown late in the fourth quarter to rally for victory.

Steve Ivy's 46-yard yard punt return, following the blocks of Justin Cessante and Eric Tessier, gave the Shamrocks possession at Fordson's 38 with 3:30 remaining.

Following a one-yard run by Kyle Entsminger, CC quarterback Dave Lusky found Matt Loridas open in the secondary for a 30-yard gain to the 7.

On first down, Entsminger took a pitch and followed the block of Kava into the end zone for a 12-7 lead with 2:19 left. A two-point conversion pass was intercepted.

Fordson had a final chance but a fourth down and eight pass from its 42 was knocked down by CC linebacker Casey Rogwoski.

"My heart right now is pounding, last week it was pounding," Mach said, referring to the Shamrocks' 22-15 comeback win over Orchard Lake St. Mary's in the Catholic League championship game. "This team will not quit. Two weeks in a row our backs were to the wall and we put ourselves in position to win. Dearborn Fordson deserves a lot of credit, playing a great game. We expected that. It's never an easy

Madonna rules WHAC; SC eliminated

■ MEN'S SOCCER

And then there were six.

Madonna University's men's soccer team advanced to the six-team NAIA Great Lakes Regional Championships on Saturday with its 2-1 victory over Tri-State University.

The victory gave the Crusaders their second consecutive Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference soccer championship (in just two years in the league). Madonna, now 19-2, finished a perfect 14-0 in the WHAC.

The Crusaders will be seeded second and play Friday against the winner of the University of Rio Grande (Ohio)-Indiana Wesleyan University game. Friday's game will be played at the University of Illinois-Springfield, the region's number one seed.

In the win over Tri-State, senior forward Scott Emert (Walled Lake Central) opened the game's scoring at 14:57 of the first half. It was the only goal of the first half.

Lael Bryant made it 2-0 for Madonna with 15:06 remaining in the game. Tri-State answered with its only tally two minutes later, but failed to get the tying goal.

Schoolcraft ends season

Don't tell Schoolcraft men's soccer coach Van Dimitriou that teams aren't out to get you when you're on top.

After winning the Inter-regional Tournament last season, the Ocelots had an opportunity Saturday to make their second straight trip to the NJCAA Tournament in Trenton, N.J.

But Schoolcraft ran into a determined Springfield College (Ill.) squad in the semi-final and lost to the host team 2-0.

The loss ends Schoolcraft's season at 18-4, the team's second straight 18-win season.

"I know how the Red Wings feel," Dimitriou said. "We played against Cincinnati State last Sunday and hadn't seen any one come at us like that since last season. It was obvious they we wanted to dethrone."

According to Dimitriou, Springfield was the best team Schoolcraft played all season.

"They were charged up and their talent really showed," he said. "They were the better team that day."

There were several things working against the Ocelots, Dimitriou said. First, the field was shorter and narrower than most which works against Schoolcraft's strategy of spreading out the field and focusing on defense.

Another factor working against the Ocelots was the officiating, according to Dimitriou. Shannon Lamb (Livonia Stevenson) was hacked several times in the first half without a call made. When a foul was called 10 minutes into the game, Lamb made a remark to the official and was given a yellow card.

"I didn't want to take a chance of playing short a man for that long so I took him out of the game, which really hurt us," Dimitriou said. "Later in the half, Ryan Konley (Plymouth Salem) was taken down in the box and had to leave the game injured."

Even though Konley later returned, the Schoolcraft offense struggled. With the game scoreless late in the first half, the Ocelots had their best chance to score when Scott Hurlbert broke free against the Springfield goalkeeper and had most of the right side of the net. But the goalkeeper recovered and stopped Hurlbert.

Springfield got its break 10 minutes into the second half when one of its players tried to drive around Rob Gumber. Gumber slid and cleared the ball, but the official said Gumber got part of the Springfield player. Springfield took advantage of the call and drilled a shot past Schoolcraft netminder Eric O'Neil (Stevenson).

"We had our opportunities several times on corner kicks and throw ins but just couldn't convert," Dimitriou said.

Lady Crusaders wrap up perfect year in WHAC

■ COLLEGE VOLLEYBALL

Madonna University stormed into the postseason Tuesday, completing a clean sweep of the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference with a 15-11, 15-2, 15-11 women's volleyball victory over host Cornerstone College in Grand Rapids.

The Lady Crusaders, now 38-6 overall and 12-0 in the WHAC, will be the host and top seed in Saturday's four-team conference tournament.

Cornerstone, which could have clinched a tie for the regular season title, dropped to 20-13 and 10-2.

"There was a large crowd and they came in fired up," Madonna coach Jerry Abraham said. "But we played super, one of our best matches of the year.

"We played at a fast tempo and caused problems at the net. We attacked, blocked and served very well."

The Lady Crusaders had a balanced hitting attack with Brandy Malewski (Redford Thurston) leading the way with nine kills, four solo blocks and seven block-assists.

Rayna Vert added seven kills, while Nicole Burns, Erin Cunningham and Stephanie Uballe had six apiece. Burns also had three solo and seven block-assists.

Setter Deanne Helsom contributed 26 assists, while Cunningham and Jennifer Russell tallied 15 and 10 digs, respectively.

Senior Leslie Hartlen led Cornerstone with 10 kills and 11 digs. Sarah Haney had 25 assists and four aces.

The pairings for Saturday at Madonna will be Madonna vs. Tri-State at 10 a.m. and Cornerstone and Siena Heights at noon.

The championship final is at 4 p.m.

Lady Ocelots bow out

Schoolcraft College ended the season at 12-27 after splitting four matches (Nov. 5-6) in the NJCAA Region 12 Tournament at Grand Rapids Community College.

Schoolcraft opened with two wins, defeating Kalamazoo Valley (13-15, 16-14, 15-13) and Lakeland (15-9, 15-10).

Kellogg handed SC its first loss, 15-9, 15-11, and St. Clair eliminated the Lady Ocelots, 15-9, 15-5.

Megan McGinty (Livonia Churchill) was the top SC attacker during the regional with 33 kills, while Cindy Maloof and Melissa Plave contributed 23 and 21, respectively.

McGinty had a team-high 11 block-assists, while Plave had a team-high 40 digs. Danielle Wensing (Livonia Franklin) and Jenny Laidlaw (Churchill) had 51 and 34 assists, respectively.

Sarnia ties Whalers

OHL REPORT

Harold Druken's third goal of the game salvaged a 4-4 tie for the Plymouth Whalers Sunday with the Sarnia Sting in Sarnia.

It was the second tie in two nights between the two Ontario Hockey League rivals. On Saturday at Compuware Arena, the two battled to a 3-3 draw.

The two ties, combined with Friday's 5-4 triumph over Owen Sound, retained the top spot in the OHL for the Whalers, now 15-2-2.

Druken, who now has a league-leading 24 goals, knotted the game for the fourth time when he scored with 9:44 left in the third period. Adam Colagiacomo and Eric Gooldy assisted; for Colagiacomo, it was his second of the game.

Jamie Lalonde got the Whalers' first goal, tying it at 1-1 5:47 into the second period. Druken took over after that, tying it at 2-2 at 14:38 of the second and at 3-3 with a short-handed goal with just 39 seconds left in the second.

Peter Sarno scored two goals and assisted on a third for Sarnia.

Rob Zepp made 33 saves in goal for Plymouth. Greg Hewitt had 21 stops for the Sting.

On Saturday at Compuware, it was much the same — neither team had more than a one-goal lead. Nikos Tselios scored one goal and assisted on the other two for the Whalers; David Legwand added a goal and an assist. Paul Mara's goal 7:57 into the third period gave Plymouth a 3-2 lead, but the Sting knotted it with just 1:06 left on a goal by Jeff Heerema.

Hewitt and Zepp each made 24 saves for their respective teams.

Parker finishes 10th in 'A' girls

Michigan International Speedway became a fast track Saturday for the state Class A girls country meet.

With dry conditions, semi-mild temperatures and little wind, times dropped dramatically on the 2.1-mile course.

Livonia Stevenson was the area's top finishing team earning ninth out of 27 teams.

The Spartans, led by junior Andrea Parker's 10th-place individual finish in 18:28, scored 307 points. The individual winner repeated as sophomore Katie Boyles of Rochester Adams won in 17:51.

Rockford won the meet with 25 followed by Sterling Heights Stevenson, 96; defending champion Ann Arbor Pioneer, 133; Grand Haven, 150; Traverse City Central, 220; Grosse Pointe South, 251; Mount Pleasant, 281; Brighton, 302; Stevenson, 307; and Troy Athens, 327.

Other Stevenson finishers included senior Kim McNeilance, 88th (19:35); senior Christie Tzilos, 111th (19:46); senior Katie Sherron, 127th (19:59); junior Leslie Knapp, 138th (20:04); junior Julie Sachau, 212th (20:51); and freshman Marissa Montgomery, 218th (21:01).

Stevenson also finished third a year ago and second in 1996.

Individually, junior Alison Fillion of Churchill was 90th in 19:36, while Wayne Memorial sophomore Kristi Wheble was 187th in 20:34. Senior Dawn Daniels of Wayne was 229th in 21:11.

In Class C, Lutheran Westland ninth-grader Tess Kuehne took 54th in 20:19.4. Teammate Jessica Montgomery was 106th in 21:11.5.

STATE CROSS COUNTRY MEET

CC earns top 3 finish

BOYS ROUNDUP

Redford Catholic Central sophomore John DiGiovanni led the Shamrocks to a third-place finish at the Class A boys cross country meet Saturday at Michigan International Speedway.

DiGiovanni finished 14th in the team race in a time of 15 minutes, 39 seconds and CC earned 179 points for its highest finish at the state meet since 1992 when the Shamrocks were second.

Novi and Rockford finished one-two with 82 and 87, respectively.

Senior Dan Jess was 22nd (15:55), sophomore Matt Daly, 32nd (16:06), and senior Jim Curtiss, recently returned from a knee injury, 44th (16:22).

Rockford's Datha Ritzenhein was second overall (15:11) but CC coach Tony Magni doesn't rule out DiGiovanni catching him sometime soon.

"The kid that's second overall is a sophomore and I told John that kid can't get much better but you can," Magni said. "That's a long ways away. I thought John would be in the top 20."

DiGiovanni is also aware of what he has to do to catch the best times in CC history. Magni keeps a record book as thick as a phone book with him and DiGiovanni is constantly asking to see it.

"He can tell you what Joe Leo ran every race, what Andy Dillon did," said Magni, shaking his head.

Magni said the dry conditions made the course faster than past years. Plus, high school runners are getting faster because more are running and more are training year-round.

"It hadn't rained in a week, plus the kids are just getting faster," said Magni, estimating that DiGiovanni's time may have been good enough to finish in the top five 10 years ago.

Jess just missed earning all-state honors, which was disappointing for him at first, until he learned of the team's results. Magni was hoping for a top 5 team finish.

"He missed all-state by less than a second but once he found out we were third overall as a team he was satisfied," Magni said.

Daly, according to Magni, has been "probably our most consistent runner all year. He's always been our third man."

Curtiss didn't compete most of the season because of a car accident that injured his knee. He returned only for the Catholic League, regional and state meets, making up for lost time, according to Magni.

Brian Kuszynski was 67th (16:42) and Jeff Haller 85th (16:52) and the Shamrocks' seventh best time came from Bryan Buchanan (17:16).

Buchanan's time was his best of the year.

"I told them 'One of you have to run the race of your life,' " Magni said. "Kuszynski really stepped up, ran well. Haller was right there too. It was Buchanan's first time on the varsity at the state meet."

Individually, Livonia Franklin senior Josh Burt was 37th overall in 15:58. Teammate Brian Klotz, a sophomore, took 63rd in 16:17.

Livonia Churchill's Jason Richmond, a junior, was 50th in 16:09, while teammate Paul Mercier, also a junior, was 258th in 17:50.

In Class C, Lutheran High Westland finished 17th out of 21 teams with 403 points as five of the team's seven members ran their fastest times of the season.

East Jordan and Jonesville finished one-two with 145 and 165, respectively. The Warriors did defeat regional champ Erie-Mason, which edged Lutheran Westland a week earlier in a tiebreaker.

Steve McFall was the Warriors' top finisher with 38th-place finisher in 16:51.6.

Other Lutheran Westland finishers included Ken Broge, 56th (17:14.8); Jason McFall, 77th (17:31.4); Clark Covert, 115th (18:14.8); Steve Borden, 117th (18:16.0); Brian Block, 119th (18:16.7); Matt Rae, 140th (19:11.1).

"We have five juniors and two sophomores on this team so things look good for next season," Lutheran Westland coach John Gerlach said.

Brzezinski finds niche for Shamrocks

By Steve Kowalski
Staff Writer
skowalski@oe.homecomm.net

As much as Nick Brzezinski loved kicking a soccer ball throughout childhood and halfway through his high school years, it was best to give it up to concentrate on football.

His great hands aren't of much use on the soccer field but they do wonders for his football career.

A former travel soccer player, the 6-foot-5, 245-pound senior has become one of the state's most feared receivers as Detroit Catholic Central's tight end.

Brzezinski, who has 18 catches for 425 yards and four touchdowns, will help the 9-0 Shamrocks advance further in the state playoffs when they meet Troy (9-1) in a Class AA regional final at 1 p.m. Saturday at Pontiac's Wisner Stadium.

Brzezinski grew up playing soccer, trying every position but goalkeeper, starting with teams in the Livonia Family Y. But as he grew bigger, soccer felt more awkward, making football an easy transition.

Brzezinski entered CC in the fall of 1995, two years after his older brother, Doug, made all-state as an offensive lineman for the Shamrocks. Doug is now an All-America candidate as a senior at Boston College.

The CC coaching staff put Nick at tight end the first week but he didn't earn a starting job until his sophomore year on the junior varsity.

"The joke was they were going to put me at tackle no matter how big I was because of Doug," Nick said.

Not only was soccer Nick's sport growing up, it also was Doug's. Neither played football until high school.

"It helped a lot with my footwork, speed and endurance," said Nick Brzezinski, acknowledging that comes as a surprise to some of his teammates who think football is more macho than soccer. "Of course, they try to make fun of me."

Surely, only the big guys try.

Weights before school

Brzezinski added nearly 40 pounds between his junior and senior years and he hasn't gotten complacent about his size, even as the season goes.

Every morning he and CC senior defensive back Justin Cessante arrive at school at 6:15 a.m. to lift weights before their first class, which starts at 8. Tim Henry, who runs the book store at school, greets them at the door.

Brzezinski's bench press is up to about 360 pounds and Cessante's is around 300.

"I've been able to hang with him in leg workouts, that's about it," Cessante said. "It's something inside, what CC football is all about. Nick and I always want the edge. Somebody in, say, California may be working just as hard and, you never know, it could come down to you and him for a scholarship."

Peanut butter sandwiches have helped, too.

"Two years now, that's all we eat at lunch, tons of it," said Cessante, 6-1, 205 pounds. "It puts on weight quick, sticks to you."

Brzezinski's combination of size and speed has made him highly-sought after by major colleges. His 3.3 grade point average and a 28 on the ACT also are attractive.

He already has scheduled official visits to Duke, Ohio State, Indiana and Northwestern. Seniors are allowed five visits and Brzezinski is undecided about the fifth, counting Boston College and Michigan State as possibilities.

Some teams have already offered scholarships. In October he received a letter with an offer from Ohio State coach John Cooper.

His brother's career at BC has been a success individually but coaching changes and a gambling scandal involving teammates has hurt the program.

A picture of Boston College's stadium adorns the Brzezinski's family room.

"Who knows what the next one will be?" said Brzezinski's mother, Chris, a marketing coordinator at Detroit College of Business. "(What happened at Boston College) has taught Nick not to pick a school just because of a coach, because there's no guarantee he's going to be there. School has been very good for Doug. It's made him more self reliatant and mature and also more confident in his own abilities. There were players asked to leave (after the gambling scandal)."

Eye on the future

Having one son star in college and another in high school at the same time, with both playing games on Saturdays, presents problems.

Their parents can't attend games together.

This Saturday, it's Greg's turn to watch Doug play for BC and Chris' turn to watch Nick's game.

"We're hardly ever at the same game," Chris Brzezinski said.

Doug Brzezinski wears glasses but Nick has exceptional eye sight. He has 20-15 vision, which is considered better than 20-20, prompting his father to kid him about an Air Force career.

"He can read street signs four blocks away that we can't even see," said the elder Brzezinski, an Air Force veteran who works as general manager of Motor City Fasterner in Hazel Park. "I kid him and say he could be the next Chuck Yeager."

"I don't think that's going to happen," said Nick, smiling, not thrilled about a 10-year service commitment.

Brzezinski's trademark catch is a diving grab on a post pattern about 35 yards down field. He's still sporting a rug burn from a catch he made in a 22-15 win over Orchard Lake St. Mary's in the Catholic League championship game at the Pontiac Silverdome.

"We always mess with him about making catches look harder than they are, but that's Nick," said Cessante, glad he only has to cover him in practice. "Quick DBs can stay with him but when the ball's in the air there's no path to take. He takes up too much space."

His parents remember Nick as an active child around the house, sometimes a show and tell item for guests.

"When he was little he'd jump up and down on couches, do flips," his mother recalled. "We had narrow halls in our other (previous) house and he'd have his hands on one wall, feet on the other and climb to the ceiling. I was so amazed I'd have him do it for people."

Modest, humble star

Brzezinski is serious in class but he has a sense of humor. Super Prep Magazine, which ranked him as one of the top tight ends in Michigan, sent him a questionnaire asking him to name his top opponent, among other questions.

Brzezinski, not sure of the names of his opponents, put down "Clubber Lane," famous for being the boxing opponent of Rocky.

"I doubt if Nick knows who he is knocking down in games," Cessante said, laughing. "He's nonchalent, not cocky at all, kind of like a Barry Sanders. My mom loves him. He's a favorite around our family."

The phone at the Brzezinski house rings often with calls from agents wanting to sign up Doug for a possible professional career and coaches recruiting Nick.

It's legal for agents to recruit players as long as the player doesn't sign with the agent before his collegiate career is over.

"Even though they get bad press, 99 percent (of agents) are above reproach and go by the book," Greg Brzezinski said.

Although Nick and Doug have different talents on the football field, CC coach Tom Mach notices similarities in their work ethics.

"They are really great individuals, very humble in their assessment of their abilities and attributes," Mach said. "They are very coachable and constantly trying to improve. Everything they've gained, they've earned. There are a lot of great options for them, which is great because they're outstanding kids."

[illegible] five shutouts during the regular season and CC quickly learned why, managing only 76 yards in the first half.

A 56-yard touchdown pass from Lusky to tight end Nick Brzezinski in the first half was taken away due to an illegal man down field. Fordson missed a 38-yard field goal attempt and also had a pass on fourth down from CC's 31 batted away at the 1 in the first half.

There was no secret to the Tractors' offense as Winston had 30 of their 35 carries for 100 yards.

Kava led the Shamrocks with 94 yards in 21 carries and Entzminger, who hobbled off the field afterward with a knee injury, had 46 yards in 14 attempts.

Lusky was sacked twice and completed four of nine passes for 91 yards with two interceptions. He hardly came off the field as he also played in the CC secondary and handled the punting and most of the placekicking.

"I'll tell you, they're probably the hardest hitting team we faced all year," said Rogowski. "They hit and play hard."

The Shamrocks threatened to break the scoreless tie late in the third quarter but a fumble at the Fordson two was recovered by the Tractors, ending a drive that started at CC's 39.

The Shamrock regained possession, however, with an interception by Lusky, who returned the ball to the Fordson 3.

Kava scored on the next play but a two-point conversion pass after a bad snap was no good, leaving the lead at 6-0 with 11:48 left.

Fordson's Moussa Hamka returned the ensuing kickoff to the CC 7 and a face mask penalty on the Shamrocks put the ball at the 3.

Two plays later, Winston scored on a sweep, tying the score at 6-6, leading into the two teams' epic struggle for the extra point.

A 45-yard pass from Lusky to Brzezinski gave the Shamrocks their first chance to regain the lead but the drive stalled and Lusky's 30 yard field goal was wide left with 7:39 left.

CC finished with 259 total yards to the Tractors' 131. Fordson finishes with an 8-2 record.

"I can't compare that effort to anybody, the whole season," Fordson coach Jeff Stergalis said. "We just weren't strong enough. People look at Rogowski and Brzezinski but the outstanding thing that makes CC so good is their front three (Lou Willoughby, Jon Abshire and Jeremiah Hicks) are incredible. People don't realize it but that T-T (tackle to tackle) is awesome."

Lady Crusaders optimistic about moving up in WHAC

[illegible]

[illegible] in a little height, with an abundance of depth, a dash of experience, and mix in some new talent and you have the recipe for what could be the best Crusader squad in some time.

At least that's what third-year coach Marylou Jansen is hoping. Jansen took over the Madonna program two years ago and led the Crusaders to a 14-16 mark, which included a surprising run in the postseason playoffs.

Then came last year, Madonna's first season in the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference. The Crusaders finished 18-13 overall and in a four-way tie for second place in the with a 7-5 mark.

"Our goal every season is to improve on the previous season," Jansen said.

Winning the WHAC is Madonna's goal this season, but the Crusaders will have thir hands full trying to beat out defending leaguue champion Spring Arbor College.

The Cougars are the preseason favorite to win the league and are ranked 14th in the NAIA Division II in preseason rankings. Madonna is picked to finish third behind Spring Arbor and Aquinas.

"Spring Arbor returns a lot of talent, height and experience, but I think they are beatable and we are one of those teams that can beat them," Jansen said.

Lost from the last season's team is a pair of starters: Dawn Pelc (10 ppg., 5 rpg.) who graduated and Angie Negri (8.5 ppg. 3.5 rpg.), who opted to play soccer.

But the Crusaders return a strong group of players with three key newcomers.

Leading the returnees are senior point guard Katie Cushman (12.7 ppg.), junior guard Chris Dietrich (13.3 ppg.) and senior forward/center Mary Murray (11 ppg., 5 rpg.).

Dietrich was the team's leading scorer last season and was one of two sophomores to be named to the All-WHAC squad.

Cushman, Murray and forward Courtney Senger will provide the senior leadership for the Crusaders both on and off the court.

Jansen is excited about the addition of two sophomore transfers from Henry Ford Community College – Kathy Panganis and Kristi Fiorenzi (Plymouth Canton) – who will see plenty of playing time.

[illegible]

[illegible], a graduate of Plymouth Canton, will add another talented body in the post. As a freshman, she averaged about 10 points per game at Henry Ford CC.

"Kathy is extremely talented, a great ballhandler and may be the best pure shooter on the team," Jansen said. "We're fortunate that we have several players who can create scoring opportunites for themselves or for others. We're very excited to get two players as sophomores, coming in as experienced players and not first-year players."

Another newcomer grabbing attention is freshman point guard Carissa Giricki.

"We've been very pleasantly surprised with her," Jansen said. "She sees the floor extremely well and is a great playmaker and passer. I expect her to get considerable playing time."

Key players underneath for Madonna will be sophomore center Lori Enfield (8 ppg., 5.5 rpg.) and junior forward Jennifer Jacek.

Enfield is the team's only 6-footer.

"Lori was on the league's All-Rookie team last season and we expect her to be more of a threat and to be more comfortable in the post – both of which that happen with experience," Jansen said.

The Crusaders can play numerous players at a variety of positions which helps allow Jansen to tailor her lineups for certain game situations.

"We have depth on this team like we've never had before," Jansen said. "We will be able to rotate players more freely and be able to play hard for 40 minutes without dropping the level of play.

"We'll be looking to push the ball upcourt, create turnovers and simply play hard. Half the team is a threat from the three (point range)."

Even though no lineup is set in stone by Jansen, the coach does believe that a regular lineup will probably be developed as the season progresses. Making sure everyone is happy with their playing time will be a challenge, she admitted.

"It's a nice problem to have; one we haven't had to worry about in the past," Jansen said. "Team play will be the key for us. Even though we are getting more size, other teams are getting bigger as well. Team defense, team rebounding and boxing out will be very important for us."

Spartans sent reeling, 48-26

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Livonia Stevenson couldn't face the music Monday at Walled Lake Central in a Western Lakes Activities Association girls basketball semifinal.

In a game originally scheduled for Tuesday, but mysteriously moved a day up because of a conflicting band concert, host Central roared into Friday's championship final at Livonia Churchill with a 48-26 triumph.

Both teams are 11-8 on the season.

Leah Douglas scored a game-high 19 points, including eight in the second quarter to ignite a 16-4 run. Teammate Cassie Stewart chipped in with 13 points.

Stevenson, which trailed 27-12 at halftime and 39-17 after three quarters, made just three of 16 free throws.

"They used their big people well in the second quarter," Stevenson coach Wayne Henry said. "We got very impatient offensively. The ball was flying all over the place and we were giving it up on turnovers without getting a shot off.

"We were going down to the other end and giving up easy baskets, and things got out of hand very quickly."

Stevenson couldn't maintain its momentum from Thursday's 52-33 upset win over No. 1 seed Farmington Hills Harrison.

"The other night against Harrison, we passed the ball with short, crisp passes until there was a gap in the defense," Henry said. "In the first quarter we did that. After that, we were just too impatient. It's very easy to lose your rhythm out on the court.

"Harrison did that last week. And with a team with all their experience can fall apart, I guess you can understand how it can happen to our girls, too."

Stephanie Dulz and Kim Giller each scored six in a losing cause. Becky Smith added five.

"We played better than anybody expected us to against Harrison and tonight we played worse than anybody expected us to," Henry said.

•JOHN GLENN 56, FRANKLIN 50: When coaches preach how important free throw shooting is, they know what they're talking about.

On Tuesday, host Livonia Franklin clung to a slim 49-48 lead over Westland John Glenn as the two teams headed into the fourth quarter.

But the Rockets proved to be better at the free throw line where they made five of nine attempts down the stretch. The Patriots watched their lead slip away as they hit only one of seven tries.

Leading the way for Glenn (8-10) was Samantha Crews, who poured in a team-high 20 points. Stephanie Crews added 14. Rola A Junior Tera Morrill netted a game-high 26 points for Franklin (2-15). Sophomore Lisa Balko chipped in with eight points.

•CHURCHILL 58, N. FARMINGTON 43: After jumping out to a quick and commanding lead Tuesday, the Livonia Churchill girls basketball team had to finish strong.

The Chargers dominated visiting North Farmington early, taking a 19-2 lead and extending that margin to 30-12 at halftime.

The Raiders, however, went on a charge in the third quarter, outscoring Churchill to cut the deficit to six.

But the Chargers, led by senior Kersten Conklin, took over and put the Raiders away in the fourth quarter.

Conklin scored 18 points — 11 in the first quarter run and seven down the stretch. The Chargers (10-9) also received 10 points apiece from seniors Nikki Lewis and Stacey Supanich.

Junior Lauren Ruprecht added nine.

Katie Vihtelic kept North in the game by scoring 13 of her 16 points in the third quarter comeback. Samantha McComb added 13 points for the Raiders (8-11).

•WAYNE 47, FORDSON 41: Senior forward Tonya Crawford scored 12 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked five shots on Tuesday as host Wayne Memorial rallied from a six-point deficit to beat Dearborn Fordson in a Mega Conference Red Division game.

Senior center Beth Molitor scored eight points with 10 rebounds and senior guard Elisabeth Kleitch had six points for the Zebras, who celebrated Senior Night by improving to 6-14 overall and 4-8 in the Red.

Fordson fell to 12-8 overall, 8-4 in the Red.

•HURON VALLEY 40, MACOMB CHRISTIAN 29: Westland Huron Valley recovered nicely from a scoreless first quarter Tuesday, rallying for a Michigan Independent Athletic Conference upset victory over Macomb Christian at Marshall Junior High.

Macomb Christian led 8-0 after one quarter but Huron Valley had a 10-6 second-quarter advantage to cut the deficit to 14-10.

Huron Valley outscored Macomb Christian 17-10 in the third quarter and 13-5 in the fourth.

Junior forward Jessie Cherundolo led Hawks with 16 points and sophomore guards Rachel Zahn and Mandy Cherundolo added nine and six points, respectively.

Kim Kidwell led Macomb Christian with eight points.

The win improved Huron Valley to 4-15 overall. Macomb Christian slipped to 11-8.

•LUTHERAN NORTH 38, LUTHERAN WESTLAND 32: Metro Conference champ Lutheran Westland (16-3, 15-1) couldn't run the table Tuesday as host Macomb Lutheran North (10-9, 10-6) scored the upset victory.

Chrissy Dryer had 13 points and eight steals for the Mustangs. Teammate Heidi Reband added 11 points.

Anna Schwecke led Lutheran Westland with a game-high 16 points.

•LIGGETT 52, CLARENCEVILLE 35: Even though Livonia Clarenceville dropped its Metro Conference game Tuesday, a pair of seniors played their final home game of their careers and turned in strong performances.

Senior Christina Skrela recorded season high totals with 16 points and 13 rebounds. Fellow senior Danielle Sledz added 13 points and 10 boards.

The Trojans (2-17 overall, 1-14 in the Metro) trailed by only seven, 36-29, heading into the fourth quarter. But fatigue took over as the Knights outscored Clarenceville 16-6 down the stretch.

Another key factor was the free throw shooting. Liggett made 16-of-26 attempts from the foul stripe, while the Trojans made it to the stripe only four times, making three.

Sherma Brown led the Knights with 15 points.

•NOTRE DAME PREP 67, LADYWOOD 61: Sophomore center Michelle Harakas scored a game-high 20 points, but it wasn't enough Tuesday as Livonia Ladywood (9-10) fell to host Pontiac Notre Dame Prep (11-8).

Junior guard Bobbie Bleszki led the Fighting Irish with 15 points.

Ocelot men's cagers talented

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER
bemons@oe.homecomm.net

Second-year Schoolcraft College men's basketball coach Carlos Briggs has to keep reminding himself to be patient.

As the Ocelots enter Friday's season opener at the Macomb Tip-Off Classic, Briggs is trying to sort out perhaps SC's most talented team in school history.

"On paper, we're good, but we've got to see if we can put it together," said the former NJCAA All-America and Baylor University standout. "We have a lot of depth, but last year we had good continuity. The kids loved each other and loved the game of basketball. This year it's going to be a new learning system both offensively and defensively."

Briggs, who came back to his alma mater from an assistant's high school job in Texas, guided SC to a surprising 24-7 season, second place in the Eastern Conference behind Flint Mott.

Last year the Ocelots were picked last, but this year they could be the team to beat.

Briggs, however, lost three quality players — 6-6 Kevin Melson, the nation's second leading scorer (28 points per game) who is expected to start this season for Wright State; 6-4 Emeka Okonkwo, now at Northeastern Oklahoma; and 5-11 point-guard Pete Males (Garden City), now at Rochester College.

Three holdovers return, led by 6-3 sharpshooter Derek McKelvey, who averaged 18.5 points per game and led the country in total three-point field goals (127). He also shot the three at an impressive 47.1 percent clip (ranked among the top 10 nationally).

"Derek is stronger this year and is stroking the ball well," Briggs said. "We're looking for a little more rebounding from him. We're also looking for more scoring from him as far as taking the ball to the basket."

The other two returnees are Mario Montgomery, a cat-quick 5-8 point-guard who backed up Males last year, and 6-3 David Jarrett (Westland John Glenn), who averaged 10 points and six rebounds per game before being declared academically ineligible for second semester.

"Mario is one of our better success stories," Briggs said. "Three years ago he was walking the streets, but he got his GED and is carrying better than a 2.0 grade-point average.

"The main thing here is that we want them to leave here as better students and better people, and help them move on. That's how we rate success. It's not the number of games we win."

Jarrett, could start, but will come off the bench to start the season.

"We're looking to him for his leadership off the bench and he brings experience," Briggs said.

The Ocelots' biggest question mark is at point guard.

David McGlown, a 5-9, 160-pound freshman from Pontiac Notre Dame Prep, will get the call.

"That's a spot we're worried about," Briggs said. "But Dave is solid. He has a good head on his shoulders and you'll see him get better and better. He just needs to be more aggressive and assertive as far as running the basketball team."

Mike Peek, a 6-2 signee from Wright State who was not cleared academically by the NCAA just prior to fall classes, could compete for a starting job at the point.

But the Cincinnati Woodward product missed nearly two weeks of practice because of the chicken pox.

"We expect a lot out of him when he comes all the way back because he's one of our better athletes," Briggs said. "Once he learns the system, he can compete for the No. 1 spot."

The forwards will be 6-5 Lamar Bigby, who averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds at Detroit Northern, and 6-5 Dashawn Williams, who was a standout at Detroit City High.

"Dashawn is our most aggressive player, a (Dennis) Rodman type of rebounder who can run the floor and score," Briggs said. "And he might be our best defender.

"Bigby is probably our best athlete. He was one of the top 20 (high school) players in the state. But he has a lot of basketball to learn as far as playing defense and running the floor."

SC's most highly prized recruit could well be 6-8 Matt Bauman (Livonia Franklin), who played last year for NCAA tournament qualifier University of Detroit Mercy.

He could be the best big man ever to come out of SC, according to Briggs.

"He has a very good skill level, he's smart and strong," Briggs said. "I think he could be the best big man in the conference. He just has a great attitude and we're lucky to have a guy like that."

Briggs also has plenty of firepower in reserve led by 6-2 Mike Murray, who averaged 28 points per game at Detroit Rogers Academy; 6-4 swingman Quentin Mitchell (Detroit Cody), 6-7 Chris Colley (Hazel Park), 6-6, 235-pound Dwayne Holmes (Taylor Truman); 6-2 Reggie Kirkland (Romulus); 6-1 Corey Bates (Detroit Murray-Wright) and 6-5 Jim Rebbeck (Clinton).

"We'll play up-tempo and try to score as much as possible off our defense," said Briggs, who has two capable assistants in Dave McKelvey (Derek's father) and Scott Newman.

Country singer Randy Travis just can't wait for this year to be over.

As the first country artist signed to DreamWorks SKG label, he's been busy promoting his album "You and You Alone." Travis wrapped up two films, "Black Dog" with Patrick Swayze, and "The White River Kid" with Antonio Banderas and Ellen Barkin.

"This year has been going unbelievably fast. But when you work non-stop, it seems to go faster. We seem to be going from just one project right to the next, combining projects, writing music and recording," Travis explained.

On top of all that, death has surrounded Travis.

"It's been a strange year. My horse, the descendant I had from Trigger died. My mom died in May. I had a little strange incident with a limo driver who picked us up a month ago, he died when we were leaving the Los Angeles airport."

"It's been an odd year."

When told the year is almost over, maybe next year will be better. He responded with a hearty laugh, "They have to be picking up."

Despite the ups and downs, Travis was able to shoehorn time to record "You and You Alone."

"Because of the time restraints and filming, we recorded that while we were finishing filming 'Black Dog.' We recorded some in Los Angeles, some in Nashville, some in Las Vegas and some in North Carolina. Usually I don't do that. I usually record everything in Nashville," Travis explained.

Life was made a little bit easier, however, when he showed up to the "Black Dog" soundstage in Wilmington, N.C. There was a recording studio 100 yards away. All he needed then was material to record.

"We were looking for material throughout filming 'Black Dog.' James Stroud and Byron Gallimore, the two producers, and myself constantly looking for material for 'You and You Alone' album. They would come and visit and we'd sit and listen to songs that they had found, or I had found. Slowly but surely, it took about five months, we put it all together," Travis explained.

While on the "Black Dog" set, Travis invited Patrick Swayze to sing background vocals on "I Did My Part," while Alison Krauss and Dan Tyminski lend their talents to "I'm Still Here, You're Still Gone."

Although Travis prefers to work at a slower pace, he is adamant about continuing his film and music career. Eight years ago, he and his wife, Lib, proposed the idea of venturing into film.

"I had some friends on the 'Young Guns' set and we visited them. I did a small little nothing part. I think 'fire' is the word that I said, or shoot or something like that. It was fun to do."

"But I've been a singer since I was 8 years old. I started working before an audience at 9. It's something I have to do," Travis explained.

Eight-year-old enjoys playing role in 'Evita'

Hayley Lauren Niederquell tried out for "The Christmas Carol" at Meadow Brook Theatre and got called back. She didn't get the part, but she's not too disappointed.

"It's a blessing that she didn't get in," said Hayley's mom, Leslie. Something else came along – "Evita" playing at the Masonic Temple Theatre in Detroit through Sunday, Nov. 22.

The stage manager of "Evita" called Shirl Harris, publicist for the Fisher and Masonic Temple Theatres, on Monday, Oct. 26, and said they were looking for two children between the ages of 7 and 9.

Harris called Terry Carpenter at Meadow Brook Theatre and Cate Foltin at Stagecrafters in Royal Oak to get the names of some children who might be interested. Eight-year-old Hayley, a third grader at Martell Elementary School in Troy, was one of the 12 she talked to. "She was so adorable and seemed so at ease." Hayley and her mom met with Harris on Thursday, Oct. 29, and began rehearsals for the Nov. 3 opening on Friday, Oct. 30.

While her friends were out trick-or-treating, Hayley was at the theater rehearsing for her three scenes – a girl scout at the Charity Concert and peasant girls in the Casa Rosada and Santa Evita scenes. She doesn't have any lines but has to know how to move on stage.

"I like the cast a lot and really like my director," said Hayley. "Everyone is so generous and nice."

Hayley and her family live near the Ridgedale Players playhouse in Troy, and enjoy going to shows. Hayley's been going to the theater since she was 2, and performed in her first show, a Junior Ridgedale Players production – "The Royal Easter Ball," when she was

'You ain't heard nothing yet': Burstyn plays Jolson

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

Actor Mike Burstyn has appeared on stage as such bigger-than-life showmen as Mike Todd and P.T. Barnum but none bigger than his current role as "The World's Greatest Entertainer" – Al Jolson.

"He was gifted with an enormous God-given talent," Burstyn said. "He was unique for his time and any time. No one came up with the things he did. He simply used his talent and his ego to pioneer things in our business which we're benefitting from today."

Burstyn opens as the great singer in "Jolson: The Musical" Nov. 17 for a week run at the Fisher Theatre.

Burstyn said Jolson was to show business what the Wright Brothers were to aviation and Picasso to painting – an innovator who changed things forever.

He ticks off the Jolson firsts: first person to do a one-man show; first millionaire entertainer, pulling down $17,000 a week in 1912; first singer to have a million-selling record; first entertainer to entertain troops during World War II; first entertainer to have two movies made about his life while he was still living; and, of course, first movie star to talk on screen.

Jolson first stepped on the stage in 1899 when he was 13. By 1912, he was

"I was always like I want to be in a play," she said. "I got just a little part, but people said 'wow, she's really good.'"

Hayley performed in the Junior Ridgedale Players annual Christmas play in 1996 and 1997, and the Easter play in 1997. Last April she was a member of the youth chorus for the Village Players of Birmingham production of "Bye-Bye Birdie."

She doesn't know where her acting talent comes from but says "it's just a special thing." Her mom says she was always acting and singing and goofing around. "She's very outgoing," said Leslie. "She's not a timid person. She didn't even care if we stayed when we took her to the Junior Ridgedale Players. She just went right up on stage, she wasn't afraid."

Seeing Hayley perform on stage at the Masonic Temple was a moving experience for Leslie. "It brought tears to my eyes. I thought she was great."

Performing at the Masonic Temple Theatre is Hayley's dream come true. "When I was a little girl my mom used to take me to shows," she said. "We went to see 'Annie,' and I leaned over and told her, 'mom, someday it will be me on stage,' and it is. I thought it would happen when I was 18 or 19, I never thought it would happen so fast."

Leslie remembers that moment and leaning over to tell Leslie, "I know it will be you on stage someday."

Hayley is having fun, even though it is a tough schedule. She starts school at five to nine, comes home at 3:40 p.m., has a snack, does her homework, eats dinner, and leaves for the theater at 7 p.m. She's home by 11 p.m.

"I was always like I want to be in a play. I got just a little part, but people said 'wow, she's really good."

Hayley Lauren Niederquell

Her mom, and dad, Brad and older brother, Derek, 13 are supportive. "My brother, said, 'Wow Hayley, I'm so proud of you,' and he tells all his girlfriends and friends," said Hayley with a giggle. One of her brother's friends even asked for her autograph.

Three weeks ago Hayley started voice lessons at Guszoppi's Music Center in Sterling Heights. She likes the oldies. "Leader of the Pack," is one of her favorite songs. "I love the singing, it's so perfect," she said. Her other favorites are, "My Boyfriend's Back," "Soldier Boy," "Johnny Angel," "Wild Thing" and "One Last Kiss."

Eight is a little young to know what you want to be when you grow up, but Hayley said she's like to be a teacher and an actress so she could teach and do acting.

Her favorite part about being on stage is seeing different people smiling "at what we do. I want to show other people how easy it is," she said. "I want other people do to say they 'can do this too,' so I can see them on stage."

Sisters have fun working together

When Patty Ward, who is choreographing "She Loves Me" for the Village Players of Birmingham, heard the soundtrack, she called her sister Jeanne DeLong, and said, "I think you should listen to this."

Ward encouraged her sister to audition for the leading part, Amalia. "I fell in love with the music, and the lady's voice sounded just like my sister," said Ward. "She fell in love with it too, and I talked her into auditioning for the part."

DeLong is active with the Avon Players in Rochester Hills and always wanted to work with her sister who is active with Village Players. "She Loves Me," opening this Friday, gave them the opportunity.

DeLong got the part, and Ward worked with her and the other cast members staging the movements that will bring the musical by Joe Masteroff with music by Jerry Rock and Sheldon Harnick, to life.

"There are a lot of songs where you have to stage movements such as a scene in a cafe with a waiter setting up tables," said Ward. "It's more of a singing song."

For Ward, whose first love is performing, working behind the scenes is a new experience. "It's interesting to see the whole puzzle, as opposed to just concentrating on what you're doing on stage," she said. "It's been really fun."

Working with her sister, the youngest of 13 children, is also fun. "We trust each other's judgment, and have been doing practice auditions for each other for years," she said. "It's nice to have another actress in the family, and to have that support."

Both women agree "She Loves Me," is a "like a little jewel no one's discovered. It doesn't have a hit song, but all the songs are precious, fun and romantic. All the characters are likable, even the villain, is a charming villain," said Ward.

Each song tells a story. There are hundreds of props, and for Ward, the challenge is designing movement to enhance the songs, and not get in the way.

For both women, working in the theater is a treat. They're both busy moms. Ward has three children ranging in age from 11 to 15, and DeLong, two, ages 6 months and 4 1/2.

DeLong is enjoying working with her sister. "She was kind of my mentor," said DeLong. "She's my big sister and encouraged me."

Working on the show has been an interesting experience because DeLong said she hadn't thought about auditioning.

"It's going to be great. I'm thrilled to be doing this with my sister. She's a wonderful choreographer, very creative. We have a wonderful cast. I think it's going to be a dynamite show," said DeLong. She describes "She Loves Me" as kind of an old-fashioned boy meets girl story. They meet through the Lonely Hearts Club column of a newspaper, which is what we refer to as the Personals today.

They start writing letters to each other and fall in love, not realizing that they work in the same perfume shop. At work, Amalia and George (portrayed by Jamie Mistry) don't like each other, and are always bickering. The show takes place at Christmastime, making it a nice way to begin the holiday season.

"I think it's delightful, it's the cutest show," said DeLong. "There's a lot of singing, it's a really wholesome musical, you could bring your kids to it. There are no swear words, it's a family show."

As opening night nears, the sisters are excited and a little nervous, but not worried.

"The opening night magic will happen," said Ward. "And everything will be perfect."

the toast of Broadway. His dramatic emotional singing style, his black-face minstrel showmanship and his enormous, nonstop energy made him the biggest star in show business. In 1927, he made the transition to movies in the first talking film, "The Jazz Singer," uttering the immortal phrase, "You ain't heard nothing yet!"

Burstyn comes from a theatrical family with ties to Jolson. His father Pesach'ke Burstein performed in the New York Yiddish theater and knew Jolson.

"My father was similar to Jolson except he performed in Yiddish. He came to the United States in 1924 and appeared at the same theater as Jolson. He became a recording artist for Columbia and performed Jolson's hits in Yiddish," Burstyn said.

When Burstyn was 10 he bought a Jolson recording and he's been a fan ever since.

Burstyn began performing, himself, like Jolson, as a child. He started touring with his parents and sister when he was 7 years old.

"We traveled everywhere there was a Jewish community that spoke Yiddish. I switched to Hebrew theater when we moved to Israel in 1962 and have been working there all my life," Burstyn said.

In addition to living and performing in Israel, Burstyn has performed on and off Broadway and throughout the world. He won an Outer Critic Circle Award nomination for his portrayal of Todd in "Ain't Broadway Grand" and a Drama Desk Award nomination for his portrayal of Mayer Rothschild in the musical "The Rothschilds." He has also played Barnum, Tevye in "Fiddler on the Roof," Nathan Detroit in "Guys and Dolls" and other roles.

"Jolson: The Musical" was originally produced in Britain. Burstyn is now on a 34-city national tour before going to Broadway. It's a physically demanding role and one that begs comparison with Jolson, himself, and with Larry Parks, who memorably played the singer in two film biographies.

Burstyn said the musical uses a brief film clip of Parks toward the end, when the success of the films brought Jolson back to the limelight.

"He had artistic and script approval over those films, which were caramelized, sugar-coated versions of his life, the life he wished he had lived," Burstyn said.

The musical doesn't pull punches, as it deals with the two sides of Jolson.

"On stage, he was magic, he made love to the audience. Off stage, he had an enormous ego and he wasn't liked by many people," Burstyn said. "We try to suggest where it comes from so that he doesn't become a monster."

Burstyn said the loss of Jolson's mother when he was still a boy had a strong effect on his life.

"He was really a scared little boy all his life," Burstyn said.

The great songs associated with Jolson and composed by some of the leading song writers of his time are used in the production, including "Let Me Sing and I'm Happy," "I'm Sitting on Top of the World," "Blue Skies," "April Showers," "Sonny Boy" and "Swanee," George Gershwin's first hit.

Burstyn said Jolson was famous for ending his shows by sending other cast members home and then singing for two or three more hours to a mesmerized audience.

"He had such charisma, he was magic to an audience. Everyone thought he was only singing for them," Burstyn said.

The Farmington Players are presenting an early holiday treat – an entertaining and lively production of the zany comedy, "A Tuna Christmas."

That's tuna as in Tuna, Texas (the state's third smallest town). One suspects Tuna has another record of sorts, the whole burg is dysfunctional. At least that's the impression one has from meeting 22 of them, played by two actors. Therein lies much of the fun.

Hank Bennett and Frank Markus are a hoot playing loony, but lovable good old boys and their women folk. Co-directors Margaret Gilkes and Vicki Grulke are to be congratulated for encouraging them to take chances in creating an attitude for each role.

Bennett and Markus play off each other like a comic team with years of experience reading each other's moves, timing and expressions. Very impressive. Especially, when there are only so many ways to effect male and female versions of a Texas drawl.

Clever costuming by Barbie Amann and Marge Wetzel plays a major role. Dressers Mike Smith and Sue Rogers certainly earn their curtain call (as Tuna Helpers) performing the many changes.

In a series of sketches, the play asks the questions: Who is the "Christmas Phantom" that's desecrating yard displays (and who will win first prize); and, Will the lights be turned out on the local theater troupe's "A Christmas Carol" for not paying its light bill?

The answers are unimportant. Tuna, Texas is the most conservative town in the USA. Creators Ed Howard, Joe Sears and Jaston Williams purpose (as was the case in their earlier hit "Greater Tuna") is to satirize the moral majority, narrow-mindedness, et al.

Arles Struvie (Markus) and Thurston Wheelis (Bennett), announcers at the local radio station (OKKK), alert citizens that the "Smut Snatchers" will be censuring hymns (Christians shouldn't be singing about "round young virgins"). One of Markus' more riveting characters is angry, wheezing, Didi Snavely, gun owner with a motto, "If we can't kill it, it's immortal." Markus gives new meaning to taking a drag on a cigarette.

Bennett has a jolly good time as Bertha Bumiller, long suffering wife of a drunken husband and three bratty kids (all played deftly by Markus). Bertha is especially proud of a tree ornament made by her son, Stanley, in reform school. Daughter, Charlene, (with about the largest pear-shaped bottom ever seen) wants to be a cheerleader, an actress, or something.

Other exquisite Bennett characterizations include good 'ol boy Sheriff Givens and Joe Bob Lipsey, gay director, direct from the big time (Lubbock, Texas). Perhaps his best is Pearl Barras, senior citizen with an ongoing battle with wildlife. "Only way to have animals is stuffed on the wall. Just dust 'em once a week."

Bennett and Markus give us the bachelorettes view of life as two daffy waitresses at the local Tastee Kreme. With biting humor, they poignantly try to get a life in Tuna for the holidays.

Mary Lynn Kuna's sewing machine was humming Thursday night as she worked on costumes, designed by Nancy Adams, for the Plymouth Theatre Guild's production of "Anything Goes" opening this Friday.

"I help out wherever needed," said Kuna who is president of the group and co-producer of the show.

■ A quick tempo, and familiar, catchy music, are some of the things you can expect when the curtain rises on "Anything Goes."

"This is a phenomenally terrific cast and crew," said Kuna. "There's a lot of dancing and music, and the humor is excellent. The exuberance of the cast really comes through. They're having a good time with their parts."

"Anything Goes" is a musical comedy set in the 1930s on an ocean liner. The cast ranges in age from 18 to 65. A seven piece band, led by music coordinator Steve Woznicki, provides musical accompaniment.

A quick tempo, and familiar, catchy music, are some of the things you can expect when the curtain rises on "Anything Goes." You'll recognize a lot of the songs, including "I Get A Kick out of You," "Friendship," and "Anything Goes."

As she stitched costumes, Kuna said they're blue and white with accents of red. "Nancy's a real stickler for details. Everything works together. She takes into account everyone's body shape, and designs costumes that people feel good in. Everyone loves her."

Jamie Richards is directing. The cast includes Emily Raymond of Farmington as Hope Harcourt, and Mike Hammonds of Canton as Elisha Whitney.

Performing in supporting roles are Cynthia Lewandowski; Emily Zahm, Kristin and Nichole Mellian of Canton; Alyson Adams of Farmington Hills; Barb Schafranek and Jeremy Hargis of Garden City; Kathleen Rembacki of Livonia; Rebecca Touchstone of Wayne; and Philip Lukasik of Westland.

Rosedale Players present comedy

While getting his teeth cleaned, Dennis Day of Livonia learned about the Rosedale Community Players from the dental hygienist.

"She asked me if I had ever auditioned for them. When I said no, she said she'd give me the phone number, and two weeks later she did."

Day is in the current production of "The Sisters Rosensweig," which continues 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, Nov. 13-14, Nov. 20-21, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 15 at the Upstage Theatre, 21728 Grand River, (near Lahser) Detroit. Tickets are $10, group and senior rates available, call (248) 532-4010 or Margaret Boss (313) 537-7716.

"They're very nice people. It's like your own dinner theater. People bring food to eat. They make you feel warm and welcome."

"The Sisters Rosensweig" by Wendy Wasserstein is the story of three sisters who get together for one of the sister's 54th birthday. "The oldest sister, Sarah, lives in England, and she invites her other two sisters for a family reunion, and to celebrate her birthday."

During the visit, the sisters relive memories, and cope with problems. Day portrays Tom, the boyfriend of Sarah's daughter, Tess. "It's a great role, a lot of fun," said Day. "All the characters are strong. During their visit all of these strange funny characters show up."

Day, who owns his own medical equipment servicing company, and also works as an actor and model, said the show is very entertaining and will make you laugh and cry at the same time. "It's about life, the trials and tribulations, and how you look back," he said.

The show also features Steve Evans of Bloomfield Hills and Barbara Mathers of Walled Lake.

'Waterboy' quenches thirst for football fun

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

I laughed; so sue me. Adam Sandler's ambition to be the next millennium's Jerry Lewis has made him easy pickings in films like "Billy Madison" and "Happy Gilmore." That won't change with "The Waterboy." But it will be harder, at least, to deny that the writer/actor is for real.

Using his "Cajun Man" character from "Saturday Night Live" as a springboard, Sandler's big screen version is one sorrowful schnook. It worked for Lewis as "The Bellboy," "The Errand Boy" and "The Geisha Boy." Why not "The Waterboy"?

Bobby Boucher is a socially inept, 31-year-old stuttering simpleton from the swamps of Louisiana. His mama (the wonderfully-loud Kathy Bates) has home-schooled him right there on the bayou, with only a toilet-drinking live-in mule as a classmate. Typical science lessons: Happiness comes from the sun's rays, alligators are mean because they have so many teeth and no toothbrush, and Mama herself invented electricity. Don't mess with Mama if you think otherwise.

Bobby lives to dispense "high quality H2O" to the local college football players, who rag him mercilessly. When our waterboy ("I'm a Water Distribution Engineer") is fired by the coach (country's Jerry Reed), he gets a similar job with Reed's rival, Coach Klein (Henry Winkler), whose Mud Dogs have amassed a 40-game losing streak.

Bobby is put on the team when his imagination morphs the faces of opposing players into those of his tormentors – including Mama – and he becomes a lean, mean tackling machine. The lanky linebacker is a one-man highlight film. He delivers such bone-crushing, breath-sucking sacks that the team makes it into the Bourbon Bowl, his chance for ultimate redemption covered by ESPN. That is, unless Mama finds out; she doesn't approve of Bobby "playin' no foose-ball."

All right, Sandler stiffens his lower lip and stays in one groove the whole film through. All right, almost all the big laughs stem from those sound-enhanced hits on the field. And all right, almost none of the many "Airplane"-style quick-cut sight gags even approaches funny.

But there are an awful lot of young filmgoers who are going to find enough to like to make "The Waterboy" a big hit in this pre-holiday season.

Sandler's character, after all, is a lot more reachable here than in "The Wedding Singer," which has taken in $120 million at the box office and video stores. He's a dope who wears his daddy's old leisure suits, but he's our dope.

Winkler's droopy-dog coach looks at life like it's a third down, and very, very long, and who hasn't been there? And Bates' swamp queen might be the one person rejected by The Jerry Springer Show.

"Forrest Gump" it isn't, but when the stadium crowd roars "Wa-ter-boy, wa-ter-boy," you don't want to be the one staring at him across the line of scrimmage.

JON FARMER/BUENA VISTA PICTURES

British band Candyskins plays on Backstage Pass

BACKSTAGE PASS

ANN DELISI

Detroit is a city that welcomes diversity in the arts, and here at Backstage Pass we do the same.

The ability to take completely different styles of music, art and any other form of entertainment you could think of and bring them all together is not easily accomplished. At Backstage Pass, on Detroit Public Television, we strive to bring you the viewers a little taste of everything, and I do mean everything. On this week's show we will go from a British pop band to the beauty of Pewabic tiles.

The Candyskins are one of Britain's best loved pop bands. And they are stopping by Backstage Pass to give us a live demonstration of just how musically talented these five guys are together. It has been five years since their last U.S. release and their fans were definitely ready for another Candyskin fix.

■ 'The Candyskins are a band in the great tradition of British Pop. They are inventive, energetic and have their own unique world views that make their songs consistently interesting.'

Gary Graff
Backstage Pass

Q Magazine has praised the band's "driving pop-rock energy, tuneful choruses and sparkling melody." That was not the end of the media attention for this group. Vox commented, "Like some chancer in a rowing boat pitching up in Calais and announcing he's discovered France, these Oxford types have laid a claim on Britpop."

This band has really stirred up a frenzy when it comes to praise, but I am not done yet. I spoke to segment host Gary Graff and he also had nothing but great things to say about the band. "The Candyskins are a band in the great tradition of British Pop. They are inventive, energetic and have their own unique world views that make their songs consistently interesting."

Pewabic tiles are not something new to the Detroit area, probably because they were founded in Detroit in 1903 by Mary Chase and Perry Stratton. This was a major part of Detroit's Arts and Crafts movement between the 1900s and 1910s. The goal of this movement was to produce handmade, practical works of art. And another major goal was to stress craftsmanship and uniqueness over a mass-produced object. Segment producer David Toorongian will take us all through a more in-depth look at the Pewabic tiles on this week's Backstage Pass.

All this and much more on this week's Backstage Pass on Detroit Public Television. Check your local listings for dates and times.

Farmington's Aks Mamma CD spreads ska energy

CHRISTINA FUOCO

When 1996 Roeper School graduate Paul Royal joined Aks Mamma, he wasn't schooled in the genre of ska, a speeded up form of reggae.

"When I joined the band I didn't know what ska was. I didn't click with it at first. But I love it now. It's fun," explained Royal, bassist.

"It's a celebration of life. You can sit back and listen to something that makes you feel good. It just energizes you."

Aks Mamma is having a celebration of its own on Saturday. The Farmington-based band is releasing its debut CD "Jolly Holidays" on the Wisconsin label Kick Save.

The album, recorded the summer of 1997 and spring of 1998 at Sound Camp studios in Warren, is a collaborative effort between every member of the band – Jeff Gandolfo, lead vocals/guitars, Pete Thrubis, backing vocals/baritone and tenor sax, Kevin Hall, trombone, Brian DeLeon, keyboards, and Jason "Skippy" Spitsbergen, alto sax, all of Farmington; and Matt Thomas, trumpet, and Arthur Curtis, drummer, both of Livonia.

"I think it reflects a lot more every member of the band. We all have creative input," said Royal, who is studying architecture at the University of Detroit-Mercy.

Celebrating release: The local ska band Aks Mamma – from left, Jeff Gandolfo, lead vocals/guitars, of Farmington; Pete Thrubis, backing vocals/baritone and tenor sax, of Farmington; Paul Royal, bass, of Detroit; Kevin Hall, trombone, of Farmington; Matt Thomas, trumpet, of Livonia; Mike Connor, who has been replaced by Arthur Curtis, drummer of Livonia; Brian DeLeon, keyboards, of Farmington; and Jason "Skippy" Spitsbergen, alto sax, of Farmington – play St. Andrew's Hall.

The band formed in 1994 as a four piece but added a horn section a year later. Already Aks Mamma has had plenty of opportunities to be heard. It was nominated for two Detroit Music Awards and shared the stage with top acts The Toasters, The Pietasters, The Suicide Machines, Mustard Plug and The Pilfers. Coolie Ranx of The Pilfers, formerly of The Toasters, makes a guest appearance on "Jolly Holidays."

Recently, the group played Coney Island High, a legendary punk club in New York.

"I heard a lot about it. It was really cool. The Stubborn All-Stars were playing upstairs."

Over the past four years, Royal explained, Aks Mamma's music has been fine tuned.

"It used to be a lot more abstract and harder to orchestrate. Now it clicks and we're real happy with it."

Aks Mamma celebrates release of CD with party and performance, with special guests The Mad Butchers and Do It 4 Johnny, 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Tickets are $5 in advance for the all-ages show. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT or visit http:// www.961melt.com. Aks Mamma's Web site is http:// pilot. msu. edu/ user/spitsber

Returning to Ferndale

"Everything" is an apropos name for the Sperryville, Va., band who scored a hit with "Hooch." Mixing turn-table scratching, R&B, funk, rock and soul, Everything has something for everyone.

"The essence of pop is popular. We mix all those styles together. We've having good success with it. People like that too. It's refreshing. People who have only heard 'Hooch' will show up at our shows not knowing the other material. But they hear some of the more crazy songs and they're hooked into it," said lead vocalist/guitarist Craig Honeycutt.

Honeycutt's influences are just as varied. He grew up listening to rock 'n' roll – "AC/DC and whatnot" – but his parents instilled in him the melodies of show music and church music.

"Then later on I got into funk and hip-hop and world beat and jazz."

The six band members – Nate Brown, Wolfe Quinn, Rich Bradley, David Slankard, Steve Van Dam – began playing together six years ago at James Madison University in Virginia. Everything released three albums, which sold more than 50,000 copies, before signing to the Sire Records-affiliated Blackbird Records.

In recording its latest CD "Supernatural," the band retreated to a converted pre-Civil War manor house/studio in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

"Hooch" is the first hit single for the band and has given Everything some pretty interesting opportunities.

"We've been able to hang out with some big people. We went to Rick Dees morning show in Los Angeles. It was bizarre for a band like us to go into a pop station. We were playing 'Hooch' on there with Lionel Ritchie. (Stuff) like that makes your day."

"This guy's written some of the most amazing songs in the last 30 years. It was really encouraging to have him play with us. One thing I've noticed is the bad ass cats are really down to earth."

Everything and Far Too Jones perform Saturday, Nov. 14, at Magic Bag, 22920 Woodward Ave., Ferndale. Tickets are $8 in advance for the 18 and older show. Doors open at 8 p.m. For more information, call (248) 544-3030 or visit http:// www. themagicbag.com. Everything's Web site is http:// www. ecolon. com

VAST history

Jon Crosby knew early on that he just may have a career in music. At age 13 the now 22-year-old musician was spotlighted by Guitar Player magazine.

"I think it made me realize there were people who were out there making music. They weren't superheroes, they were regular people," said Crosby who know performs under the name VAST (Visual Audio Sensory Theater).

"I got letters from all over the world. I also got 20 letters from a guy in prison. That was a little creepy."

Crosby takes his influences of goth, metal, classical, electronic and pop, and infuses samples from the Bulgarian Female Choir and the Benedictine Monks of the Abbey of Saint-Mauer, Cleraux on his self-titled debut.

Although his album was released earlier this year, Crosby has a few ideas for his sophomore effort.

"I feel like we're growing. I didn't have a band making the record. So the next record is going to be a lot more of a live thing because I have a band. It was VAST with an orchestra and computers or whatever. The next one will definitely be like more of a collaborative effort."

VAST performs Saturday, Nov. 14, at The Shelter below St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Tickets are $7 in advance for the all-ages show. Doors open at 7 p.m. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT or visit http://www.961melt.com.

Garbage backs 'comfortable' sophomore CD

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER
cfuoco@oe.homecomm.net

When the pop band Garbage pulled up to St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit in November 1995, guitarist Steve Marker admitted it was a nerve-wracking experience.

"That was our fourth show ever. We had not the slightest idea what we were doing. It was scary to actually see lines of people outside. We had people showing up looking for autographs and stuff," Marker said.

At the time, Garbage was touring in support of its self-titled debut. When the band recorded the album, it hadn't planned on touring or playing the material live. So the attention was all a bit of a shock to the foursome of Marker, drummer/loop guru Butch Vig, vocalist/guitarist Shirley Manson and guitarist/keyboardist/ six-string and fuzz bassist Duke Erikson.

"It (touring) hadn't even occurred to us," Marker said of playing live. "The record company gently suggested that it might be wise to play a few dates to support the thing. We agreed to that. That was four years ago, and we basically haven't stopped since."

Garbage is once again on the road. This time supporting "Version 2.0," its appropriately titled sophomore effort. Marker explained that when the band recorded "Garbage" the three men and Manson were just getting to know each other. The trio recruited Manson as their lead singer after Vig saw her video with the band Angelfish on MTV.

With "Version 2.0," the quartet felt more comfortable with each other.

"It was different because we had played that year and a half (together live). We made the first record and we didn't really know each other very well. We didn't know Shirley that much. So we were a bit more tentative," Marker said.

"The new record's more of a real band. It felt like we were an actual rock band. We had spent all that time on the road. We wrote it more as four of us in one room rather than individuals bringing pieces of songs and putting it together. We just set up our live stage gear in our room and started making noise and improvising and seeing without much thought being put into it just sort of making noise again. Gradually some sort of songs emerged out of that muck."

This time around, Manson contributed lyrics.

"The first record was the four of us putting ideas in the head, and cutting and pasting them together. She felt more secure with writing entire songs. She was putting her viewpoint more strongly together. I think that comes across in her performance too."

"Version 2.0," he added, was "a long process." It took "one day less than a year" to record, master and mix.

"Part of it is because equipment is blowing up all the time and we have to get it fixed. We enjoy being in the studio. It's always been our goal to take pop songs and give them an interesting sonic twist. We try to make them sound interesting to us and that involves playing around in the studio. That's what we like to do."

Marker said that listeners have had varied responses to "Version 2.0" but the bottom line is beneath all the samples, guitars and vocals, Garbage is still dark.

"Some people say, 'I can't believe how upbeat and happy this record is. Some people say it seems more positive and some people say they can't believe how dark it is. Different people get different things," Marker said.

Garbage and Girls Against Boys perform Thursday, Nov. 12, at the State Theatre, 2115 Woodward Ave., Detroit. The all-ages show is sold out. Showtime is 7:30 p.m. For more information, call (313) 961-5451.
