When the Adams Junior High ninth grader won a gold medal for wrestling at the all-city meet last month, he was cheered on by his grandfather, uncles, brother, father and mother. But especially by his mother, Lorraine Roll.

Roll, who has leukemia, delayed her chemotherapy treatment to at-tend the meet and cheer her son on.

She was his inspiration to keep going, according to Doug Warner, brother of Lorraine. Warner said he had videotaped the meet, as he does all of Martin's meets. And Martin kept looking up in the stands toward his mother, Warner said.

"He told me," said Warner, "that when he'd be getting tired, that he couldn't get tired, when his mother was more tired than he was."

Roll was diagnosed with leukemia last July, and has spent 130 days in the hospital since then for problems with her immune system. She said her son has been involved in some sport or another ever since T-ball when he was five years.

"He's always been on a ball team," she smiled during an interview from her Henry Ford Hospital

On a recent weekend, he went to church with friends, and wound up on a volleyball team that placed third in a tournament in Pontiac. "And he'd never played on a team before," she said.

New police logo dazzles some, lacks identity for others

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

The sleek, colorful graphics may dazzle some, but for many Westland police officers, the high-tech logos adorning their cars lack the "character" of the traditional shields they have replaced.

"They don't have any identity, there's nothing on the symbol to tell you it's a police officer's car you're looking at," said Sgt. William Hoch-

Hochstein isn't alone with his critique of the new red, white and blue decals.

An informal survey of officers around town last week revealed a near universal dislike for the halfmoon shaped logos, which feature three faceless profiles and water wheel over the streamlined word "Westland." items such as T-shirts and coffee mugs.

The design, which took a year to develop, was approved by the city council two years ago.

"We wanted something to express the new attitude and positive feelings people have about the city," Fassett sald.

Joseph Benyo, city consultant, said the decals are similar to ones that have been adopted by Dearborn and other communities. Although the patrol car decals don't incorporate the traditional law enforcement shield and don't include the word "police," the word does appear in large, blue letters in several places on each car. "I know that other cities are using them (similar decals) and that's part of the problem," Hochstein said. "It makes us blend in with every other department around."

HOCHSTEIN SAID the old decals. shields with the words "Westland" and "Police" prominently displayed gave us our own identity."

Executive Lt. Michael Frayer acknowledged last week that there has been some grumbling about the loyos within the department. "Anytime there's a change from some-Thing that's been part of the routine for a long time people are going to get upset," Frayer said.

Basically though, the city owns the cars and they can decorate them my way they see fit."

A WESTLAND woman and several friends Wednesday chased a man who had grabbed her purse outside the Arbor Drug Store, 1659 S. Merri-

After the man approached and grabbed her purse, the woman ran to her car. The purse snatcher then ran behind the building and apparently led in a car, she told police.

The woman then alerted friends in a nearby parked car, who chased the (leeing suspect. The chase ended on Palmer, but the woman gave a description of the ear and license number to Westland police.

A DRIVER traveling south on Wildwood escaped injury Thursday when he swerved to miss a parked car and drove over lawns and shrubs before hitting a house.

The car mowed down 10 feet of a homeowner's hedge and hit a 10-foot evergreen, knocking it down before hitting the corner of the house. There was no damage to the house.

Police said the driver of the car had been drinking.

TWO WITNESSES to a bit-and-run accident followed a trail of antifreeze to locate the suspected driver. They called police who found the car parked at the owner's home.

Police believe the car was involved in several accidents in Wayne on the same night. There was green paint on one car, and extensive damage to the suspect car. Police questioned the owner of the car, who said he loaned the car to a friend.

The owner of the car told police he was a passenger because he was too drunk to drive.

Police also had to intervene when their towing service tried to take the car away, and the owner threatened them. Witnesses said the owner had threatened on other occasions to shoot trespessors.

A Detroit high school teacher for 12 years, Taylor started a theater company at Mackenzie High School that won acclaim and the opportunity to perform with the University of Detroit's drama department. She also has taught speech and drama in Bloomfield Hills Public Schools.

"It was the first time a Detroit make drama a part of every stu- high school had ever performed in a professional setting with college theater majors," she said. During the course of the company's existence they participated in forensics competitions sponsored by Wayne State University and at the state level, scoring "super" for three years, Taylor said.

"Drama critics are people who understand classics and how they relate to happenings of importance today, and how we feel," she sald.

"Students who've studied and analyzed the greats can dig inside (themselves) and think about what they had to say," she added.

In fact, that was one of the comments on Taylor's first evaluation as a teacher at Schoolcraft. Said one student in an evaluation sheet turned in to Lawrence Ordowski, head of the department: "She knows how to dig inside; to think of wonderful quotes, philosophies . . . and try to share with students."

Another thought she was "in touch with the way students go about their lives." and seems to bring out the best in them.

It's a quality she got from her father, Taylor said. Though he died when she was 15, he was always encouraging and assuring her.

"He consistently gave me strokes from the time he got home (from work)," she said.

HER MOTHER is her best friend and mentor now, Taylor said. During her days at St. Theresa Elementary School and St. Martin de Porres High School her mother was very strict but made sure Taylor had all the extras - ballet, piano, and drama.

"She enforced education tremendously," Taylor said.

Taylor, is well-traveled educationally, having received her bachelor's degree from Mercy College, her master's from the University of Detroit, and just recently her doctorate in theater from Michigan State University.

Though she's taught both high school middle school drama classes she has no plans to go back to the secondary level.

"I have a need to connect with youth and growth," she said, "to take the discipline to its highest level."

Asked if she'd like to start another drama company, she laughed and said "That's Jim's (James Hartman, Schoolcraft's assistant professor of theater) territory." If she starts another company, it will probably be with her children's class at Marygrove College in Detroit, where she teaches theater arts dynamics on Saturdays.

Although she loves teaching, she took a brief leave from it this past summer.

"I tried to get away to see what else I might want to do," she explained.

She worked with Esther Gordy Edwards, sister of Motown founder Barry, helping to get the Motown Museum ready for opening. She found that the business world wasn't

Levin: Dispute on Tower won't harm president

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Controversy surrounding former Tayas Sen John Tower's nomination as U.S. Defense Secretary won't cause long term political damage to the president, Michigan Sen. Carl

President Bush will escape umarmed from the controversial nomination because of the president's status as a well-liked Washington insider. Levin predicted. "If it were someone else, then, yes. there might be a problem," Levin said. "But this thing will be forgotten once it's over." Levin's comments came during a breakfast appearance Monday before the Livonia and Westland chambers of commerce and one day after Tower charged Democrats, including Levin, with using the nominating process as a tool to weaken the Bush presidency.

drinking and potential conflict of interest dogged Tower almost as soon as he was nominated.

Levin, who opposed Tower's nomination during hearings before the Senate Armed Services Comittee, said he initially planned to vote in Tower's favor.

"I EVEN had the letter ready indicating why I would choose to support him." Levin said.

The senator said he changed his mind after reading confidential FBI reports of "excessive drinking" on Tower's part as well as learning about an apparent conflict of interest surrounding Tower's involvement with defense contractors.

Reports of Tower's problems with alcohol were especially damaging in light of the military's crackdown on drug and alcohol abuse, Levin said.

"The standard our military has is very high," he said. "As (Armed Services Committee chairman) Sam Nunn said, Sen. Tower couldn't even be appointed a unit leader with his record."

Levin also said he was uncomfortable with Tower's relationship with the defense industry. Tower had served as a paid consultant to defense contractors.

"AS A member of our negotiating team in Geneva, he knew what our true bargaining goals were," he said. "And our true goals were very closely held. Even Congress wasn't fully

In an appearance the day before on the CBS-TV news program "Face the Nation," Tower charged the U.S. debt, he said.

Sen. Carl Levin opposes Tower nomination

Charges of womanizing, excessive nomination had become secondary to a power struggle between the president and Senate Democrats.

Tower supporters accused Democratic senators of conducting a witch hunt against their man by using FBI reports not available for public scru-

Levin acknowledged the process of making accusations from nonpublic government files has also proved controversial, he said that problem could be avoided with future nominees. "The administration needs to make a threshold judgment about letting witnesses come forth to speak to potentially damaging information contained in the files," Levin He added the allegations against Tower came from "credible, recognizable" sources.

Despite the Tower controversy, Levin said the president has enjoyed a cordial relationship with Congress.

"President Bush is off to a fast start, at least in terms of his relationship with Congress," he said. Unlike President Reagan, he sees a role for government in solving the nation's problems. It might not be a blg role, but his (Bush's) views more closely correspond with those of Congress."

On other issues:

Levin said it was time for America's European and Asian ailies to begin paying more for their own defense.

"We are holding the security umbrella for countries that are cleaning our clock," he said. The senator said "shared sacri-

TV group applauds woman's ad campaign efforts

By Alice Collins staff writer

A non-profit organization that's been working for years to bring about appropriate and better TV programming for children applauds Bloomfield Hills' Terry Rakolta and her campaign against TV shows she finds sexually offensive, violent and anti-family.

"She's really on a roll," said Marilyn Droz, director of the Council for Children's Television and Media. But that organization would never get involved in a boycott of products produced by sponsors of targeted shows, Droz said Friday.

Her husband, John Rakolta Jr. owns Walbridge Aldinger, a Livoniabased construction company.

RAKOLTA, WHO'S become an covernight national media celebrity, said on 'ABC's "Nightline" March 2 that she planned to intensify her fight to get shows like 'Married. . . With Children' off the

"I'm not going to let this drop," she told the national TV audience. "There's going to be a huge consumer backlash." She said she planned to go to Washington, D.C. and meet with concerned groups like the American Family Association and organize a one-year product boycott. "I admire her," said Droz. "But we point of view. We point out objectional programs to the TV stations and the advertisers and hope they will act in their own best interest. We also praise them for shows we find especially good for children. We're not into destroying businesses, we're interested in improving television."

Like Rakolta, the West Bloomfield-based council has found success in letter writing and telephone calling. But it's never been able to grab the attention of the national media like Rakolta single-handedly has done since mid January.

That's when she became upset watching an episode of "Married, . With Children" on the Fox Network with her children and began writing letters to Coca Cola and 44 other companies that advertise on the show, urging them to pull their ads. Some did, others said they would review the programs more carefully.

"Married," Fox's top rated show. airs at 8:30 p.m. Sundays on Channel 50. It is a situation comedy about a blue-collar family that vents its frustration with what its critics call lewd humor - insulting men, women and children.

"NIGHTLINE" INTERVIEWER Ted Koppel asked Rakolta why she is focusing on the advertisers, especially going so far as a boycott.

"It's fair," she answered. "If they didn't have the money (from advertisers), they wouldn't be on the air." "Married" is "consistently offensive," she continued.

The Council for Children's Television and Media often complains to TV stations and sponsors, and one of the objectional shows is "Married," said Droz. "I'm sure Terry's letter is not the only one Coca Cola has DROZ SAID her organization has found stations and sponsors very cooperative and she isn't surprised at the response Rakolta received.

Just recently, Channel 2 moved the Morton Downey Jr. show from a 4 p.m. time slot to late night following complaints by viewers.

Droz said Friday she had called and left a message for Rakolta to call when she returns from her New York media rounds. She was expect-

Local groups join St. Pat's parade

Shamrocks will be blooming on Michigan Avenue Sunday when the 31st annual St. Patrick's Day Parade kicks off at 2 p.m.

Rain, snow or shine. 100 awardwinning bands, marching units and floats will step off at Michigan and Third Street, proceeding one mile to 14th Street.

The Birmingham Chrysler Celtic Pipes and Drums will join the Irish Setter Club of Michigan, Irish step dancers, the Ballet Folklorico of Corktown, Great Lakes White German Shepherd Club of Redford Township, O'Hare School of Irish Dance of Plymouth, Clowns Around Redford, Domino's Pizza ponies. Irish wolfhounds from three states and a host of others on Sunday

MARCHING BANDS from Troy and Redford Union High schools will be featured along with marching units from Dunleavy's Pub & Grub of Farmington, Monaghan Knights of Columbus in Livonia, the McCusker Family marchers and float of Westland and Donovan's Country Store of Farmington.

Chairing his 14th parade will be Michael Sullivan, of Farmington Hills. Owner and president of Waterville Construction in Farmington, Sullivan is affectionately known among the Irish community as "West Side Red."

The Rev. and Sister Mary Watson of St. Patrick's Senior Center in the Cass Corridor. are this year's grand marshals.

Michael Sullivan Along with Mald of Erin Anne chairman

Marie Cullen, Duffey and Watson will lead the parade, expected to draw more than 150,000 spectators.

Joining Cullen on the Maid of Erin court are Katherine Maye of Livonia, a student at Madonna College, and Anne Marle Staunton of Dearborn, a student at Fordson High School.

HEADING UP the Court of St. Brigid is Margaret Mary Cleary of Brighton, Court members are Ann Marie Houlihan of St. Clair Shores and Jennifer Prater of Milford.

"Celebrating the Heart of the Irish in the Heart of Detroit" is this year's parade theme.

"The purpose of the parade is to honor the patron saint of Ireland and to emphasize the contributions made by the Irish people to our nation and to our community," said Eileen Fihn, parade organizer.

Duffey and Sister Watson epi-tomize the theme of this year's parade sald Finn.

Their work at St. Patrick's in Detroit includes a shelter, soup kitchen, senior center and numerous community outreach programs.

WITH HELP from suburban parishes, Duffey and Sister Watson care for the elderly and poor at St. Patrick's Senior Center.

"No question, Father Duffey and Sister Mary Watson personlfy the heart of the Irish," said Sullivan, parade chairman. "Their lives are dedicated to giving to the poor, the unfortunate and the underdogs."

Duffey, ordained in 1949, has worked in Wayne County for 39 years. For the past 11 years, he has been the pastor of St. Patrick's Church.

Sister Watson, a Highland Park native, entered the Racine Dominican Order in 1950. A dietician, she worked with senior citizens in Wisconsin and Nebraska before coming to Detroit. She transformed an abandoned, rundown high school into the thriving center that today assists hundreds of senior citizens.

She also refurbished a dilapidated motel in the Cass Coordor and to 25 homeless men who live there. "she is like the Mother Teresa of Detoit." sald Finn.

State Rep. Michael Bennane, D-Detroit, and state Sen. John Kelly, D-Detroit, are honorary chairman of this year's parade.

St. Patrick's Week activities officially get under way at noon Friday when Maid of Erin Anne Marie Cullen and the grand marshals paint shamrocks on Michigan Avenue at Rosa Parks Boulevard near Reedy's Place.

Sponsoring the parade is the United Irish Society, an umbrella group of 19 Irish-American organizations.

Pre-parade activities include the Corktown races, a 4-mile run, 1mile walk and 14-mile run/walk to be held at 12:30 p.m. All three races begin at Tiger Stadium and finish at the parade reviewing stand. For run/walk registration information, call 544-9099.

Business program at LTU gets off to fast start

Lawrence Technological University's new master of business administration program is off to a fast start.

More than 100 students comprise the charter program, which began classes March 2. That's more than twice the number university officials earlier projected for the start-up. "We have been pleased by the extent and amount of interest in the new MBA," said Jon Huegli, the program's associate dean of management and director. Huegli said the university "realized that March was not normally a traditional starting month for academic studies.

"But once word got out that our new program had received accreditation from North Central late in 1988, interest snowballed, and we decided to begin the program this spring rather than wait until September," Huegli sald.

Students interested in the program should contact Tim Kennedy, director of graduate admissions, at 356--0200, extension 3169.

Senate blocks school tax plan

By Tim Richard staff writer

All seven Observer & Eccentric area state senators Wednesday voted against placing a school tax reform plan on the ballot as the Senate twice rejected it by narrow margins.

But supporters vowed to try again - perhaps as early as today, pugnant." - to place the massive plan before voters. They have until March 16 to get the plan on a May 16 special election.

"The problem is the high property tax," said Sen. Doug Cruce, R-Troy, summing up the feelings of most suburban senators that the proposal tried to do too much. "We're trying to solve two problems (with the proposal) — equalize school funding and high property taxes. We can't do it. It's a confusion to voters, at best; a deception at worst."

BUT THERE were signs that 26 votes - two-thirds of the 38 members — actually favor placing the plan before voters. Wednesday's votes were 21-14 and 22-14.

Senate Democratic leader Art Miller of Warren publicly asked majority leader John Engler of Mount Pleasant to deliver 13 Republican votes in exchange for 13 Democratic votes. "We ask him to put up 13 votes. We got a little wisdom since walking the plank in Democratic-supported income tax to protect Taylor and Westland, increase that resulted in the recall of two Democratic senators.

Countered GOP floor leader Phil Arthurhultz of Whitehall: "There except to introduce a city official are 15 votes for it in the minority in the gallery.

(Democratic) caucus. There are only 12 votes for it in the Republican caucus. We know all three (Democratic senators) off the floor are yes votes, and two who voted. no are yes votes."

Sen. Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford, who opposed the measure, called Miller's' remarks "offensive, misleading, insulting, obnoxious, re-

THE SO-CALLED Nye-Oxender plan, named for two rural Republican state representatives who sponsored it, would raise the sales tax two cents, yielding $1.6 billion, and cut school operating taxes $1.1 billion - an average of one-third statewide.

In addition, it would allow statewide collection of part of the property tax, resulting in tax base sharing between rich and poor school districts. It would give all districts more money, but poorer districts would be raised most.

Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, voted no because "people would pay $368 million more in sales taxes than they get back in property taxes. It's a tax hike, not just a tax shift." In addition, he said, Michiganians would pay $95 million more in federal income taxes because the higher sales tax wouldn't be deductible from taxable income, while property taxes

SMART seeks cash for aging buses

By Tim Richard staff writer

SMART, the new suburban transit system, will seek $5 million from the federal government to replace some of the fleet's aging buses.

"Monles were diverted from line buses to the (downtown Detroit) People Mover. The average years left went down from eight years to two years," said Ben Glanpettroni, a Macomb County staff member.

Gianpettroni, SMART board chairman Patrick Nowak and general manager Albert Martin told Oakland County's general government committee last week how cost overruns on the People Mover not only drained capital from the suburban system but gave the region a bad name in Washington.

SMART, BY state law, is the successsor of SEMTA, the Southeatern Michigan Transportation Authority.

As the officials told it, SEMTA budgeted the People Mover, a 2.7 mile elevated electric car line circling Detroit's downtown, at $137 million. "It came in at $200 million," sald Martin, who became SEMTA's general manager late in that period.

"SEMTA had to commit the capital costs. We were prohibited from even applying (to Washington) for capital funds (for buses) in 1982-3-4-

Eventually, SEMTA turned over the People Mover project to the city of Detroit.

Last year the Michigan Legislature dissolved SEMTA, created a small umbrella agency called the Regional Transit Commission, and left Detroit to run its system and SMART to run suburban buses.

DESCRIBING how federal Urban Mass Transit Authority (UMTA) officials greeted him, Martin said, "I used to get beaten up."

But he said SMART chairman

Nowak, a deputy Oakland County executive and active Republican, "has good standing with President Bush's Administration.

"I'm optimistic. Until we put a different face on our governing board, we couldn't get anywhere with the administration. Now there are some real possibilities."

Nowak saw no major revenue increases on the horizon. "Bush will tighten even more than Reagan. And there will be no big expansion of state funding."

Nowak said the new SMART board, which took over last months wrung out $2 million from administration expenses" to use on bus ser-

Gianpettroni added the SMART board will not ask taxpayers for new. money "until it satisfies itself it has made the most effective use of the s present money."

SEMTA WAS an umbrella agency t for the seven-county region, receiving $90 million in federal operating it grants. It kept $31 million to runol suburban buses and service to downtown Detroit and passed the rest only to the city of Detroit.

SMART, which stands for Subur->

Meanwhile, in the economic recoyery of the last six years, the suburbs have gained 527,000 jobs - 231,000 ? in Oakland, 126,500 in suburban Wayne and 126,500 in Macomb.

Matter of timing

Rate, not base, hikes taxes

ESIDENTS are beginning to get the word of increases in the assessed value of the property they own.

In almost all other instances, an increase in value of an asset is good news. But there's a negative side too. The bad news is that the increase in value likely will result in an increase in property taxes paid.

For people who don't plan on selling their home, the increase in market value is of little comfort because that "profit" won't be realized while an "expense" (property tax) will increase.

This year residential assessments are increasing citywide nearly 10 percent. That boost follows the recent trend of small increases, coming after several several years of recession-induced decreases.

... THE NOTICES of changes in value are mailed For the school board or city council, the deterto individual property owners and mortgage companies so appeals can be made in March to the Board of Review if the values are believed to be overstated or in case of hardship.

In theory, the assessment of property is a neutrai, mathematical process. Information on acjual sales are fed into computers that calculate changes in values on a subdivision and communi-

In theory, assessment is a profession divorced from the political process. Value is determined independent of the need for income. Final value is determined only after the Westland Board of Review finishes its work, and millage is not applied until all final property values are totaled.

Property tax income is generated by this basic formula: rate (millage) times base (assessed value) equals property tax due (income for city, expense for homeowner).

value be 50 percent of market value and so there hearings are held. with the millage rate.

Homeowners should protest at board of review hearings if they think their taxes are too high.

The Headlee Amendment provides that millage rates will be reduced when values rise higher than the rate of inflation. (New growth, however, is not counted when determining by how much millage must be rolled back). That same amendment provides the option to local voters to waive the rollback requirement.

INDEPENDENT OF Headlee, though, city councils and school boards always had and always will have the option of lowering millage rates to any level they desire.

mination of what millage will be levied is a function of the budget process. The budget adopted for 1989 determines the total income needed. Thus, the budget determines the millage that will be levied to meet perceived service needs.

Property owners who are upset by the amount of taxes they pay are misdirected if they pour out their wrath on the Board of Review this month. Assessors and the board aren't the ones who adopt budgets or set millage rates — they only determine value.

The proper place for meaningful input is budget hearings of the school board and city council where residents can voice their opinions about level of services they want and how much they are willing to pay.

Unfortunately, property owners too often are reacting at the wrong time. We react when we get the notice in the mail that our assessments The state Constitution mandates that assessed are rising, but don't do anything when budget is little leeway in changing the tax base. The political (decision-making) side of the equation lies this week and will continue them the next two weeks. Now is the time to make an appeal.

Democracy makes sense even on the silliest days

YOU'VE JUST got to wonder what the Soviet children staying in Birmingham think of what they've seen in the last week or so.

Oh, I'm not talking about the drugs, the crime or other maladies that commonly afflict societies around the world.

No. I'm talking about the mixed signals they see coming out of this democratic republic when it comes to free speech.

After examining a few incidents this past week in our suburbs, it's no wonder that folks of the conservative ilk never cease to confound the leftist mind — especially the minds of leftists who just now are winning the battle for free speech in their

Her tactic: Put the public opinion squeeze on advertisers for promoting their products during a program called "Married . . . With Children," aired locally on Channel 50.

Bringing her the most notoriety was Coca-Cola's vow to keep a better tab (no pun intended) on that program's content and a firm maybe on a threat to withdraw sponsorship to-

DOWN THE road in Farmington Hills we have businessman Patrick Anderson, who is seeking to pry information out of the Farmington School District, So reluctant were public officials to fork over the information that Anderson has been forced to use the Freedom of Information Act to obtain the data to which he has a perfect right.

Unlike Rakolta, he is without allies in the soft drink industry.

Readers should note that Anderson, an Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. executive, is working closely with Richard Headlee, conservative standard bearer.

ON THE one hand we have a conservative seeking to suppress free thought and, on the other, we have conservatives trying to obtain information that is being suppressed by a government body.

As a leftist who has lived all his life in a country that has gone to great pains in maintaining most forms of free speech, I feel obligated to unravel this mysterious contradiction for our guests from the Soviet against those who would rather censor ideas and information.

The guarantee of free speech is on paper, the execution of the guarantee comes from the hearts of those who have the courage to defend it.

Fear of information transcends ideology - left, right or center. Whether out of a fear of embarrassment, loss of power or threat to lifestyle, the results are the same.

Certainly, you, my Soviet friends, understand how and why governments suppress information. You've lived with that for many years. Governments in this country are often the same.

One big difference of course, is that in America Coca-Cola sometimes has more to say about what should and shouldn't be expressed than does the government.

That's called free enterprise.

Home ownership

Blanchard serves up good idea

WNING your own home. From the quaint colonials of Plymouth to the brick ranches of Southfield to the newest subdivisions of Rochester Hills, that part of the American dream has been the driving force for generations of suburbanites. For many Detroiters in the years immediately following World War II, the desire for a home on a nice-sized chunk of land at an affordable price was the motivation for leaving the city in which

The communities in western Wayne and Oakand counties were their destination, Urban flight rom crime and the resulting suburban congesion didn't come along until much later.

But the newest generation of potential suburpan homeowners — people in their late 20s and early 30s who grew up in the suburbs — may pever know the satisfaction of having a place that is truly "their own."

Their quest for a home at an affordable price is being done in by the economic realities of the ate 1980s. For many, their parents' dream has ecome a pipe dream.

THAT IS WHY we support continuation of a ull tax deduction for nortgage interest. And that is why, although we ave some reservations bout the specifics, we beheve Gov. James Blanchard's HOST (Home Ownership Savings Trust) plan for first-time home buyers is a good idea.

help keep home ownership an attainable goal for suburban residents.

Both these measures will Gov. James Blanchard The steep rise in housing prices since the early 1970s — outstripping wage gains and even the general rate of inflation by a dearly 2-1 margin — has cut deeply into the pocketbooks of most people. The $30,000 home in 1970 would today sell for close to $90,000. Unforfunately, the people who could afford that home in 1970, can now only afford a home in the $60,000 range. These people are being "priced out" of many suburban homes.

The nationwide home ownership rate among 25-29-year-olds has decreased by 7.5 percent since 1980, according to a home construction. trade journal survey. The rate for 30-34-yeards is down by 8 percent. In fact, the rate for all vear of expansion.

With interest rates headed back up the ladder home — outweighs the risk.

We support continuation of a full tax deduction for mortgage interest. And although we have some reservations about the specifics, we believe Gov. James Blanchard's HOST (Home Ownership Savings Trust) plan for first-time home buyers is a good idea.

- the prime lending rate was increased to 14 1/2 percent last week — even more potential firsttime home buyers are going to be pushed into renewing their apartment leases.

NOW IS CERTAINLY not the time for Congress to be monkeying with the tax deduction for mortgage interest, although there are some legislators who are considering just that. They believe cutting the amount of deductible interest is one way to tame the federal budget deficit.

While we applaud any effort on behalf of the deficit problem, cutting the mortgage interest deduction isn't feasible in light of the current economy. It would only manage to freeze more first-time home buyers — who use the deduction to help pay property taxes and other ownership expenses not incurred as renters — out of the picture.

The HOST plan, meanwhile, is another step in the right direction. Under the plan, first-time home buyers in Michigan would be able to save for a down payment by socking away a small portion each month with the state government for three to 10 years.

The state would invest the money-in-treasurybills and interest accumulated in the account would be tax-free.

At the end of the specified period, the state would guarantee a 10-percent down payment toward a house in a pre-chosen neighborhood, regardless of how much housing costs have in-

The plan is similar to the Michigan Education Trust proposal the state introduced last year to help parents pay future college tuition costs:

There are pitfalls. Should housing costs rise at a meteoric rate, all Michigan taxpayers would have to foot a portion of the bill for those enrolled in the program.

Society is hooked on TV

I have read, with great interest, your series on education, focusing on the Michigan MEAP test scores. I have enjoyed the comments from our leaders in education in various communities, and how most of them directed the blame to the difficulty factor of the tests. Steve Barnaby's column provoked more thoughts.

Now it's my turn, and if anybody who reads this sees the problem as I do, speak up before it's too late.

I received my education in the 1950s and early '60s. We bought a TV when I was 11 and I was hooked. My whole family was hooked. "The Honeymooners," "I Love Lucy," Ed Sullivan and Walter Cronkite prevailed over Monopoly, chess, Scrabble and family outings.

Television, however wholesome it was then, has dramatically changed our society, our nation, our leaders. and our classrooms.

Now, I do not watch much TV. But my kids do. I try to monitor their choices, but I work, and it's hard. When I do watch with them, I try to discuss the things I see that offend me, but they just think I am odd.

I grew up respecting the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule - I still do. Klds today respect money, good looks, sarcastic humor, sex appeal; and the people they imitate are actors, rock stars and sometimes athletes. The kids who don't, where parents try to focus on a more moral lifestyle, are under tremendous pressure from their peers to conform.

In our classrooms, school teachers use lots of TV to reinforce their studies. In November, my son, a seventh grader, watched for two weeks a study on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. How many times he saw this great man shot makes me sick to my stomach. Finally a permission note was needed to watch the autopsy on President Kennedy's wounds to the skull. My son was furious when I sent back a big no. Turned out I was the only parent who did. Do school districts censor a teacher's choices? Do teachers get monitored regularly? Do school districts answer to anyone? The state? The federal government? The answer to all of those questions is No. Are school boards effective? No. Do we need role models and leaders? Yes. Right now, we have TV addicts raising and teaching more TV addicts. Television is the real president of these United States. Just look at our social problems.

Open enrollment lets parent select school

Q: What is meant by open enrollment?

A: Open enrollment, in general, means that parents have the right to pick the school they wish their child to go to within the school district.

Originally I did not believe in this concept, but after having worked in two school districts with open enrollment, I am convinced that it is the appropriate way to address certain issues.

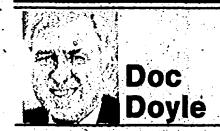

For instance, if parents can't stand a particular principal, teacher or program in a certain elementary building, they have the right to move that child to another elementary fullding. Conversely, it can be a break for the building principal and/or teacher who could be very competent. But for some reason there exists such a personality conflict between the parent and/or principal and/or teacher it rubs off negatively on the child.

IN AN EXTREME case. I knew of one child who was an emotional basket case in the third grade, having been labeled a wimp by his peers. This child was moved to another elementary school where his reputation was not known and where he blossomed into a well-adjusted, bright child with a healthy self-image. The change can't be totally attributed to a school change but I believe it played a major role:

However, caution should be exercised in districts with two or more high schools.

If one high school has a great high school football team or outstanding marching band and the other high school does not, subtle recruiting could occur. Recruiting commitment needs to be made by teachers, coaches or band leaders at the outset.

Open enrollment usually has some restrictions. In most cases, the parent must furnish the transportation for the child to the other school.

concept, but after having worked in two school districts with open enrollment, I am convinced that it is the appropriate way to address certain issues.

Originally I did not believe in this

Open enrollment is not a cure all, but it does resolve some situations to the benefit of all parties. The number of parents who take the option usually is less than 1 percent because most children and young adults don't want to leave their neighborhood or classmate friends for football, band or for whatever reason.

Women still waiting for 'potty parity' here

THIS IS about toilets, so giggle now, get it over with, and let's get down to serious business, Penny Wright and I had occasion to toast state government - unfortunately, not Michigan's - for a progressive improvement in the matter of women's restrooms in public buildings.

Virginia's new "potty parity" law took effect March 1. It says that women's restrooms must have two tollets for every one in the men's restroom.

The Virginia Legislature took note of a college study that found "women take longer — 21/2 to 3 minutes compared with 84 seconds for men - because of clothing restrictions, because there's no time-saving female equivalent of a urinal and because they often must attend to small children as well as themselves," according to wire service reports.

SHUCKS, THAT'S what Penny was writing about three years ago. You remember her Our Land features on trash, conservation and toxic wastes. The Michigan Audubon Society picked her as top environmental writer of the year.

> Wright was a free-lancer, writing for us and a raft of trade magazines on a per-article basis. I am pleased to report she recently took a satisfying, full-time position as communications director of Barton Malow Construction Co. in Southfield. It began in the summer of the project I had noticed the same thing myself in the Masonic Temple, where the Metropolitan Opera used to hold forth, but I assumed women didn't mind because they didn't squawk about it. Wright was the first person I heard complain.

85 when she did a feature on Wayne County parks and came up with a 30-year-old photo of a long line outside the women's restroom, noting there was never a long Her research initiated line outside men's rooms.

"Penny's potty project" was born.

Penny Wright

HER RESEARCH showed a lot of other places had long lines outside the women's room. Pine Knob was allegedly the worst. Tiger Stadium and Michigan Stadium were pretty bad.

The Joe Louis Arena is terrible. A friend told how, at a Luciano Pavarotti concert, the women rebelled and invaded the men's room, carefully turning their eyes from the gents at the urinal as they paraded flercely to use the stalls.

Wright's research showed a lot of places had long lines outside the women's room. Pine Knob was allegedly the worst. Tiger Stadium and Michigan Stadium were pretty bad. The Joe Louis Arena is terrible.

Wright invited women to write to her. They did, and their war stories were pretty explicit and very unpleas-

We found that architects, mainly men, weren't aware of the problem. We found that women were embarrass. ed when the subject was brought up until they found we were a serious audience.

Our effort - actually, Penny did the iloness' share of the work - finally produced a meeting with the state Plumbing Board, which writes the code that is reviewed by the honorable members of the Michigan Legislature.

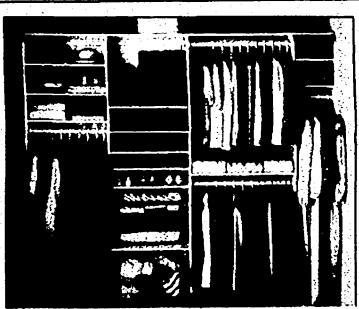

THE CHAIRMAN gave her a sympathetic ear, took her under his wing and gave her friendly advice about how to lobby for changes,

That gave us troubles. One trouble was that she as a free-lance writer and I as a salaried journalist lacked time and freedom to lobby. The other was that area women's groups, obsessed by the abortion issue, failed to pick up the ball and wage war for something that would benefit all women.

"Some women's group could do it, find it an easy victory, and have some credentials under their belt;" Wright said.

There the matter rests. Virginia has a proper law. Michigan women still are waiting in long lines.

'Med tech' work loses its appeal

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

To many, they're the invisible staff at hospitals and they're becoming even more difficult to

There's an alarming shortage of medical technologists, or med techs, according to health care experts. So much, in fact, the decrease has reached crisis levels in some parts of the United States.

That's not good news in the health care industry already beset with a nursing crunch.

A survey done last summer by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists (ASCP) found a job vacancy rate of 9.3 percent. Of 3,000 hospitals surveyed by American Hospital Association (AHA) last fall, 22 percent said they had problems recruiting medical technologists.

The shortage certainly doesn't bode well for patients, either. Waiting six weeks for the results of a cholesterol test or a month to two months for a pap test might not be uncommon, if present trends continue.

Area—hospital—officials—said—they're aware of the shortage, but it hasn't affected them in terms of patient care as of yet.

"We're not seeing as many applications or resumes as we used to," said Fred Shepherd, administrative technologist at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia. "That's where we see the shortage.

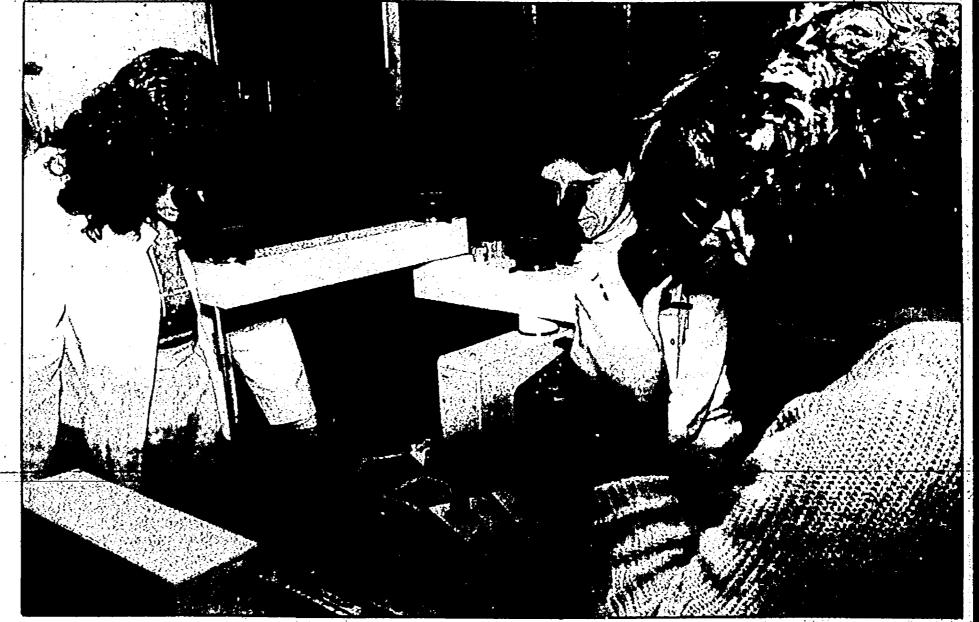

"WE'VE RECEIVED under 10 applications for med tech positions in the last six months. We used to get two to three a month."

Nancy Karnatz, lab manager at Westland Medical Center, reported similar problems filling vacancies. Karnatz said it took six months to find a registered medical technologist for a vacant position in the hospital laboratory. "That's a long time," she said.

"It (the shortage) is out there, no question," added Larry Switzer, coordinator of Clinical Laboratories at Garden City Hospital. "We're fully staffed at our institution, but we see a decrease in the number of people coming into the profession." The severity of the shortage, though, has caught many in the health care field off guard. For instance, some 73 percent of hospitals in the northeast region of country reported having trouble filling vacancies. In the south, it's even worse.

Reasons for the declining number of medical technicians are many. The fear of AIDS, women having more opportunities outside the health care profession and pay (starting pay averages between $20,000 and $24,000).

Another problem may be visi-

When considering a career in health care, most people think of either being a doctor or a nurse. Becoming a med tech usually isn't considered. Then again, how many medical technologists were featured on "St. Elsewhere"?

"When we draw people's blood we get questions like, Did you have to go to school to do that?," said Barbara Cahalan, program director of the medical technology program at Garden City Hospital.

Cahalan is out to change that. She's become involved in a grassroots approach design to have people become aware of careers in medical technology.

CAHALAN GOES to career days at junior high and senior high schools, explaining the medical technology program.

A medical technologist requires a four-year degree along with a nine- to 12-month internship in a hospital laboratory.

Garden City Hospital is one of the few hospitals that has a med tech internship program. Many health care institutions, such as St. Mary Hospital and Westland Medical Center, have had to cut back such programs.

"I wanted to go into the medical field," said Theresa Szuper of Dearborn Heights, a graduate of the Garden City Hospital med tech program. "but there wasn't a demand for doctors and I didn't want to be a nurse."

Cahalan points out that being a medical technician is not confined to the laboratory of a hospi-

People can advance to careers in research, sales, education, administration and, in some cases, even medical school. Four graduates of the Garden City Hospital program have gone on to pursue medical degrees.

Medical technology is quite challenging today. Sophisticated machines and computers can get test results in a matter of minutes where it used to take a couple of days.

Cahalan likens it to detective work. A doctor might not have a clear-cut diagnosis, but he can make one with the help of a medical technologist.

"I've never had the same job two days in a row, and I've been on the job 30 years," said Switzer, who's been lab supervisor for 27 years at Garden City Hospital.

"I've seen small pox, pollo and RH (rables). I've seen those three things disappear. To be in your career and see those things gone is quite rewarding."

This career ensemble from Units combines three basic pieces - a tank top, straight skirt and classic jacket. The entire outfit coete $70.

Finding the right component

By C.L. Rugenstein staff writer

The words sound like new housing developments, but they actually represent a building boom of another sort — a wardrobe-building boom.

Modular. Multiples. Units.

According to John Busch, manager of the J.L. Hudson's store at 12 Oaks Mall, the trend toward component dressing is "hot, hot, hot" and hasn't even begun to peak yet.

"We thought it was just a fad, and wondered how long it would last," Busch said. "But it just keeps getting stronger."

COMPONENT DRESSING is the use of several basic pieces of clothing to create scores of different looks — or in Hudson's case, at least 100 different outfits.

Hudson's stocked the most extensive number of components, accessories and categories of three stores -Hudson's, Units and JCPenney that carry component dressing at 12 Oaks. The Hudson's and Penney stores at Westland Center in Westland also feature component dress-

The main items are shirts 'sleeveless or sleeved - with a couple of different necklines, long and short skirts, pants, bandeaus and cowls. They're in easy-care knit, based on simple square shapes like a

Prices range from $6 to $8 for bandeaus and cowls, to $50 or more for jumpsuits, the most complicated of the styles.

Multiples, the line Hudson's stocks, also has accessories now to go with the basic pieces. There are watches, bags, socks, buttons, bows and jewelry to coordinate for a complete look.

THERE ARE basic colors black, white, red and gray - and the neon pinks, greens and blues for spring. And there are as many patterns as colors to choose from stripes, dots and geometrics.

The range has also extended on both ends of the size spectrum from juniors to women, girls and young children's sizes 4 to 6X.

"Even men can wear them." Busch sald. "Some do."

Units' cropped T-shirt and skirt, which costs approximately $18, or an off-the-shoulder top with contrasting band, peg pants and cowl, which costs approximately $65, can offer cool, comfortable dressing for the summer.

Tube tops can be worn as halters, bandeaus, turbans; or as several different colors and patterns together to create a complete dress, as shown on a perpetually playing videotape in the women's department.

Around the corner from the more casual pieces are easy care, loosefitting dresses, jackets and jumpsuits for a more dressy look. Called: "Singles," they're the work of designer Harley Farber.

"They've come a long way with colors and patterns since they first came out," said Charlene Jantkowski, sales manager for the department.

Sandra Garratt was the first to come out with component dressing in 1977, at her Deep Ellum shop in Dallas, Texas. She licensed the manufacturing rights to Jerell Inc., also of Dallas. In less than six months the line was picked up and marketed by major department stores coast to

THE UNITS store at 12 Oaks is a rainbow of color, with bandeaus, cowls, skirts and tops arranged in floor-to-ceiling slots. They have all the basic shapes, but have added a few variations on the themes.

There's a flared skirt, a "flip" (tight at the hips, with a ruffle bene) skirt, and a "skort" - a short. split skirt. There are long and short jackets, jumpers, peplums, scarves and shawls. And they're all in the ahead by always coming out with new colors, new pieces," said Leigh McFarland, assistant manager of Units. "We feel we are innovators."

Units gets in limited editions of their printed pieces, McFarland, said.

"We get in one lot, and when it's gone, there are no more like them." McFarland pulled a sleeved navy [and white houndstooth check shirt? from a slot, and predicted that navy > will replace black this year as a popular color.

"WE PAY very close attention to European and North American designers, what they do with colors and looks," sald Cynthia Sutton, Units'; media relations director in Dallas. "We try to translate them into what. we believe will work for the majority of American women."

Hudson's, Penney and Units allprovided brochures that show how to put the components together for distinctively different looks. Hudson's even provides a "How to Pack" brochure.

But Units goes one step further with their "Dress Thin and Slim" brochure. Women (and men?) who want to know how to dress more svelte can call 1-800-373-5948 and Units will mail it out.

COMPONENT DRESSING has become popular as maternity wear also. The components are versatile, enough to serve as before and after wear, eliminating the need for two separate wardrobes.

Jackie Górdon, publicity director for the Jacobson's stores, said a lot of non-pregnant women buy their. maternity multiple units, the only kind of component dressing they stock. We can really present a terrific (separates) knit picture," with designers like Peter Popovitch, "but we don't have multiples as such,"

she said. The fad that became a fashion fact has jumped the ocean as well. Units just combined with Laura Ashley to introduce the idea to the London area. Four stores will open there this spring, Setton said.

Socialization makes some women love too much its own holiday with Valentine's Day, would a book, entitled "Women Who Love Too Much," hit virtually every best seller list and stay there week after week?

"Because woman are socialized into being the helpmate, the good girl, being nice and sweet and never saying they're angry," said Dr. Jan Collins-Eaglin, a psychologist at Eastern Michigan University. "Consequently, we have many unhappy

Historically, women have not been given the opportunity to assert themselves and ask for what they want, said Collins-Eaglin, who runs a "Women Who Love Too Much" support group through EMU's counseling services.

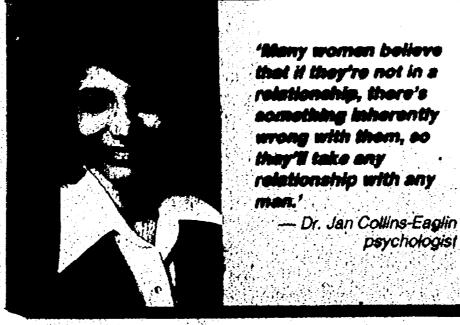

Collins-Eaglin has been running the support group for three years and said its female members go through a lot of pain learning why they repeatedly end up and then stay in relationships with men who hurt

Why, in a society that gives love them, either physically or emotion-

"A lot of them are desperate when they come to us," she said. "They come in fearing that something is terribly wrong with them and that they need to be 'fixed.' I try to stay away from that and explain that they really need to explore themselves and grow."

Collins-Eaglin believes many women end up in bad relationships because cultural values tell them that first they must be involved with 'a man to be valuable and then they are responsible for the success or failure of that relationship.

"MANY WOMEN believe that if they're not in a relationship, there's something inherently wrong with them, so they'll take any relationship with any man," she said. "Then, if the relationship isn't going well, they feel responsible and think if they work really hard and are really good people, the man will improve.

"They don't know that the man might just be a jerk."

"In spite of how far we've come, women grow up in a society that expects them to be more compliant, James McGraw, a counselor in nicer and less demanding in relation-EMU's counseling services, agrees.

ships," he sald. "In a lot of ways, these kinds of relationships. Little girls learn to please males, starting with their fathers, and they have good role models because that's what most of our mothers do.

"There's a willingness among many women to accept less and think it's OK to get so little from a relationship."

Many women who love too much also come from alcoholic homes or had parents who abused drugs, according to Collins-Eaglin. The women have "tied their worth to making people happy, smoothing things out and doing all the work in the relationship," she said.

"They are selfless, so they're attracted to relationships that are nowin situations," she added.

When Collins-Eaglin tells these women they must learn to be more selfish and ask for what they want or tell men when they're angry, many view that as very negative because it goes against their good girl image.

"A LOT OF them believe the old cliche that the love of a good woman will change these men and make them better people," McGraw said. "But, of course, that doesn't work. It's much too complicated how people get the way they are."

"They think it's going to be magical, that one day he'll wake up and realize what a wonderful person she is and everything will be just fine," Collins-Eaglin said. "There's a lot of magical thinking among these wom-mon problem for men. "This is much more unusual among men because our society has real cultural differences for men and women in relationships," Collins-Eaglin said. "Men are more likely to just get up and go when things niaren't working out."

As evidence she pointed to an attempt to start a "Men Who Love Too Much" support group at EMU this #2 winter. It failed because of a lack of interest. The women's group, on the other hand, has thrived the last three years.

"THESE WOMEN are very surprised to learn that other women are experiencing the same things, 15 and it's a great source of support for them to learn that," Collin-Eaglin said. "Women can more readily connect to one another and the group becomes very close."

While the group therapy helps 201 many of these women, it's a very dif- je: ficult process for them. There's a lot is of tears, pain and confusion in trying to sort out the idea of why it happens to a good person.

"Once they begin to talk, these in emotions come out in a burst of en-1973 ergy," she said. "A lot of these women have a lot of repressed anger that it's they have not allowed to come up. When it does, the Kleenex box really

Madonna College.

Grant helps students get health basics

Nursing and emergency medical technology students at Madonna College in Livonia have gotten a boost in their education, thanks to a grant from Helene Fuld Foundation.

As a result of a foundation grant given last spring, the college bought hospital equipment for its Health Instruction Center.

The college bought five electric hospital beds, overbed tables, bedside cabinets, simulators, video cassettes, computers and software for the HIC.

The equipment is used to prepare students for their hospital training, according to Rita Foley, a senior nursing student who works as a laboratory assistant in the HIC. She is responsible for validating nursing students' clinical skills, necessary to complete course The new equipment prepares the students for the hospital training, which begins in their sophomore year. Understanding that practice is essential and Foley encourages students to work with the simulators, even when it's not in connection with their class

"Because of my work, I know the why behind what the students are doing as they perform their clinical skills in the lab," she said. "And this helps me keep up with my own studying."

Foley, a Dearborn Heights resident, is so enthusiastic about her nursing career, she can be found checking the blood pressure of faculty members, staff and students at Madonna in an effort to make people more "health aware."

Within MHNA there are several standing committees. Through these committees, the association is active regarding many important dissues. They include nursing practices and research, government affairs, education, special interest programs, public relations, state joint planning and ... by-laws.

MHNA operates as a non-profit corporation with the motto, "Michigan Hospice Nursing for Excellence in Hospice Care."

Two educational seminars are held annually, which are attended by nurses from throughout the state. This year's spring symposium will be held tomorrow (March 10) at the Stouffer Battle Creek Hotel in Battle Creek. The annual Michigan Hospice which hospice nurse professionals. Nurse of the Year Award will be given to the nurse who best represents the hospice nurse of today.

> THIS YEAR there are nine candidates from throughout the state, nominated by their peers, medical directors, volunteers, and family members to receive the coveted award.

> Roundtable topics at the symposium will include hospice marketing, death pronouncement in the home, pain control, quality assurance, coping with family dynamics, interdisciplinary team concepts, quality of life and spirituality.

> The fall seminar will be held on Oct. 14 at Mackinac Island.

> For additional information about MHNA membership, the spring symposium or hospice care, call the hospice office at 522-4244.

Carol Munsell, a registered nurse, is volunteer coordinator. for Hospice Services of Western Wayne County Inc., at 6701 Harrison, Garden City. For information, call 522-4244.

AAUW kicks off new partnership fund

Like the television advertisement says, the American Association of University Women isn't "getting older, it's getting better."

Just ask members of the Livonia AAUW chapter. Founded in 1971, the Day O'Connor and Dr. Jenny Bramchapter has been helping women at local colleges and a variety of community projects during the past 17

It beneficiaries have included women students at Schoolcraft and Madonna colleges and First Step, western Wayne County's Project on Domestic Violence.

The Livonia chapter also supports the national AAUW's education fellowship program, which has benefitted more than 5,000 women, including Supreme Court Justice Sandra ley, who invented the cathode ray tube for television.

Locally, Martha Jurma, a secondary mathematics teacher, used a Project Renewal Grant for training in computer science, which enabled her to teach at Schoolcraft College. AAUW is non-partisan organization dedicated to education, the advancement of women and involvement in community, state and national issues. After more than 100 years, it's still going strong.

To mark its second century of service. AAUW has established the Eleanor Roosevelt Fund for Women and Girls: Intergenerational Partnerships.

The fund will finance research and action projects on issues of importance to women and girls, especially those related to gender difference, barriers in education and the means to promote cross-cultural understanding.

THE FIRST phase will deal with problems such as the poor representation of girls in mathematics and science courses, the gender role differences in education and the special needs of minority girls.

The first step will be teacher enrichment sabbaticals. Teachers selected for the program will receive financial support for a sabbatical period to explore new ways to help girls succeed in mathematics and science courses and to keep teenage girls from dropping out of school.

Area teachers interested in the enrichment sabbaticals can get more information and application forms from Esther Friedrichs at 427-0222 or Patricia Smith at 464-6548 after April 15.

Membership in the AAUW is open to any woman who has at least a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university. Michigan has 70 AAUW chapters with more than 8,000 members. Nationally, there's more 15,000 members.

The Livonia chapter meets the third Tuesday of the month, usually at Hoover Elementary School, 15900

Its next meeting will be Tuesday, March 21, and will feature a discussion on "The Need for Recycling and Safe Disposal of Solid Wastes," with Denise Brockman and Joan Lintel-

The meeting is open to prospective members and other interested people.

"Messiah in the Passover" is a visual demonstration presented from a table that displays the traditional items of a Passover Seder. The historic and symbolic significance of each item is explained. The presentation emphasizes the Jewish origin of Communion as Jesus celebrated it with His disciples at the Last Supper, which was a Passover Seder. Whether or not you are Jewish, you will find "Messiah in the Passover" thought-provoking and informative.

The Rev. Bong Ho Kim, pastor of Livonia Seventh-Day Adventist Church, is concerned about the survival of his church.

Money woes

Korean church works to keep its doors open

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

The neighborhood church: a place often taken for granted.

But as many Catholics in Detroit have recently found out, not even a place of worship is immune to economic hardship. Such is the case with the Livonia Korean Seventh-Day Adventist Church, which is $35,000 in debt.

The church has 50 members dominately Korean. Most are first generation immigrants. As a result many work on the lower end of the pay scale, making it even more difficult to support a church budget.

"I don't know how long we can survive," said the Rev. Bong Ho Kim, pastor of Livonia Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

For many Koreans who first arrive in this country, the church serves as more than a place of worship. It provides a base in the transition to a new culture.

Through the church, they find out about job opportunities, where to find housing or schools for their chil-

Also, the church is a place where they can keep alive the traditions of their culture. Services at the Livonia Seventh-Day Adventist Church are Members usually meet for a dinner of Korean food afterward.

"To me, there is no other bigger social gathering than at church," said Myung Namm of Lathrup Village, who is a clerk at the Livonia church. "That purpose is very important. Koreans are very religious people."

KOREANS FROM the Detroit metro area, and even farther, attend Livonia Seventh-Day Adventist Church. Some even come from as far as Toledo, Ohio, to attend services that take place on Friday and Satur-

The church is one of 10 Korean churches in the area, covering many of the denominations including Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist.

The Livonia Seventh-Day Adventist Church has been at Sunnydale and Middlebelt roads for 10 years. Another 10 years there at this point appear bleak, according to church

Not helping matters any is a $11,384.35 bill from the City of Livonia for the paving of Sunnydale Road. The church, a non-profit organization, was assessed the 100 percent commercial rate.

Members of the church recently spoken in the Korean language. took their plea before the Livonia

City Council. They wanted to be reassessed at 100 percent residential or 30-40 percent commercial.

> The council only agreed to extend the payment period from 10 years to 15 years at 8 percent interest. But for a church whose existence is in question, that figure looms particularly large.

> 'Our question is that we're in a residential area. Why should we pay 100 percent commercial?," said Paul Kim of Bloomfield Hills, who is the church treasurer. " . . . As long as we live in Livonia, we're willing to cooperate. We don't agree with their decision."

> RAUL GALINDO, city engineer, said St. Paul Presbyterian Church was assessed the same rate when paving was done there.

> St. Paul Presbyterian faces Five Mile Road and Galindo said the church was also charged for the pavement of side streets. Like St. Paul Church, the Seventh-Day Adventist Church faces a main street, Middlebelt Road.

> Livonia Seventh-Day Adventist Church members contend their situation is quite different than St. Paul's Church, though. For one, they don't have 1,400 members as a finan> cial base to draw from. "Clearly, we thought it was equi table and fair," said Robert Bishop, Livonia council member. "We saw no reason to deviate. Once you start treating people differently, everyone has the right to the same treatment. .. Everyone has to pay their fair share, even churches." Joan McCotter was the lone council member who didn't agree with the assessment. "My feeling was that they were a small, minority church," McCotter said. "They didn't have commercial usage. I would at 50 percent commercial." The debt of $35,000 also includes a mortgage, parking lot, roof and basement repairs. Members want to pay that all off.

Not everyone suffers from a memory loss

Does everyone become "senile" sooner or later, if he or she lives

> Mrs. K.L. Western Reader

Dear Mrs. L.: First of all, before I answer your question, — the word senile is a meaningless word that was formerly used to describe the various aspect of memory loss that occurred in the later years. Gerontologists and other health care professionals agree that for the most part, the word should be disease. discarded. Memory loss associated with aging is now referred to as just that - memory loss. The word dementia is used when the condition is medically related.

Now, to answer your question, no - everyone does not suffer from memory loss if he or she lives long enough. Even among those who live to be 80 or older, only 20 to 25 percent develop Alzheimer's disease or some other incurable form of brain

Temporary forgetfulness in old age can be related to a number of treatable conditions such as a minor head injury, a fow grade infection. poor nutrition, adverse drug reactions, depression, stress, a high fever and loneliness. For the most part, memory loss is no longer a problem when these conditions are treated.

What is the most common cause of accidents in older persons?

... Mr. R.O. Thornbury Retiree

Accidental falls are the most common cause of injuries among the elderly - and most of the falls occur in the home. Falls can be prevented by practicing good safety habits. Homes can be made "elderly proof" by the use of good lighting, nonskid floors, and keeping living areas free of ob-

Will the population in the future have more older folks than young? Ms. B.B. Windsor Reader

This is not expected in the foreseeable future. Today, 12 percent of the North American population are age 65 an older. By the year 2030, this figure is expected to increase to 20 percent.

How's your label sense?

With resolutions to start eating better and taking better care of ourselves in general, we're all probably spending more time checking out labels. So, food shoppers, it's time for a little quiz about food labels. A lot of consumers are mystified by the information found — and not found - on food labels. So let's start with some basic information:

DO ALL PACKAGED FOODS HAVE LABELS?

The answer is a technical "yes." However, the kind and amount of information found on the label varies greatly. All labels must provide the following: the name of the product; the name and location of the manufacturer; packer or distributor; the net contents or net weight.

DO ALL FOOD LABELS PRO-VIDE NUTRITIONAL INFOR-MATION?

The answer is no. Manufacturers are only required to provide nutritional information on their product labels if one or more nutrients are added to the food ("fortified with 8 essential vitamins") or if a nutritional claim is made by the product ("provides 100 percent of vitamin xyz").

The nutritional information must include the number of calories and the amount of protein, fat carbohydrates and sodium in a specified serving of the product. The label must also show the per serving protein content and percentage of recommended daily allowances (RDAs) for seven essential vitamins and minerals.

MUST ALL PACKAGED FOODS LIST ALL THEIR INGREDIENTS?

The correct answer is "maybe." Many - but not all - foods list the ingredients on their label. There are approximately 300 foods on the market today, from jelly to mayonnaise for which the FDA has an established "standards of identity." This means that these products have specific mandatory ingredients and percentages that under the law do not have to be identified on the label. Optional ingredients in these products must be listed, however.

Also, the ingredients must be listed by their "common or usual name" for all non-standardized foods.

WHAT DETERMINES THE ORDER IN WHICH INGRED-IENTS OF A PRODUCT ARE LISTED ON THE LABEL?

Ingredients, by law, are required to be listed in order of amount in the food. The ingredient found in the largest amount is listed first, the second largest amount listed second and so on. This is to ensure, for example, that if the largest amount of a drink is water, the consumer knows this and can make a knowledgeable comparison between different brands.

Also, if the label has a picture of the product, that picture must fairly accurately represent what is inside the container according

IS SODIUM ANOTHER WORD FOR SALT?

The answer is no. There are at least 70 sodium compounds used in food. Salt is sodium chloride and is about 40 percent sodium. Salt is, however, the largest single source of sodium in the human diet.

Parents train child for a dry night's sleep

When the Wilsons first realized they had a problem, Billy was 5 years old. Now he is 10.

"Don't worry, he'll outgrow it," the doctors kept telling them. That was five years ago.

But Billy was still wetting his bed. He would wake up in a dry bed perhaps two days a week. "Five doctors had tried their best. The family doctor had prescribed some medicine which stopped his bedwetting; but then he had a relapse as soon as the drug was discontinued," says Billy's mother. "Our paediatrician examined Billy and found nothing physically wrong. He referred us to a psychologist whose comment was Billy was a fittle hyperactive, but not abnormally for his age." An internist and an urologist put Billy through many tests. Nothing seemed to work.

"Over the last 5 years, we felt fortunate if the bed was dry two nights in a row," says the boy's father. "Billy would go to visit someone and spend the night. But he might stay awake the whole time, because he was too embarrassed and did not want to wet the bed."

Then several weeks ago, the Wilsons heard of the Michigan Children's Center. They sent away for the free literature and saw their own son's story being played out. What had hit them hardest was an earlier story that linked bedwetting to a change in personality.

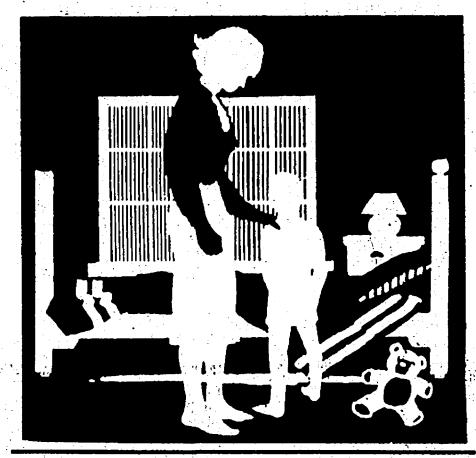

"My son tried to set our cat on fire. That's when I said I am tired of hearing 'don't worry, he'll outgrow it.' Also, I found out bedwetting is harmful physically and emotionally, if bedwetting can be stopped, why should we put our son through such a horrible experience. We did not hesitate when our daughter needed braces. The expenses have nothing to do with it."

Many don't outgrow bedwetting

Bedwetting is not life-threatening, so it's not a disease. But it endangers a child's mental health, so it's more than an Inconvenience. Its symptoms are well known, so it can't be called a discovery. It does not fit into any recognizable category as a psychological phenomenon, so it's treated as a physical nulsance. A nulsance that the child hopefully would outgrow.

But children don't always stop bedwetting. One report showed an incidence of 40 percent at three years, 22 percent at five years, 10 percent at ten years and 1 to 2 percent at twenty years of age. Girls do not wet their beds as often as boys. Bedwetting is about twice as common among boys as among girls, in 14 years the Center has successfully treated thousands of bedwetters with an enviable rate of success, and receives a great number of Inquiries from adults who still have the problem.

Quite often a doctor will say, 'Don't worry, your child will outgrow it." That's because most doctors don't want to worry the parents. And if we look at the statistics between the ages of five and ten, he has a better than fifty-fifty chance to be correct. A history of bedwetting in the family can reduce the chances a child will outgrow it. Also Psychologist Dr. Warren Baller of the University of California at Los Angeles writes, "Evidence accumulated casts doubts that children outgrow bedwetting. Most bedwetters hide their feel-Ings. Shame and embarassment are their constant companions. Correcting their affliction often produces remarkable results in family relationships, behavior, school work and peer contact."

Billy was dry nine weeks after the Wilsons sent for the Center's literature, and eight weeks without a wet bed, they started to notice other changes.

"My son has always been very quiet, very withdrawn. He seldom talks to us. I guess that's because he was teased a lot when someone who'd let him stay at his home let the cat out of the bag," says his father. Today Billy reaches out for affection from his family in a way they've never known. He also appears much more confident and less argumentative.

Harmful physical and emotional effects

Blily follows the pattern of many "nocturnal enuretics" as the condition is medically known. For them, the problem is more than lust a 'wet sheet nulsance.' Unfortunately It's still a closely closeted problem few p people are willing to discuss openly let alone seeking help. As a result, socially these children can develop poorly. Their bedwetting problem makes it difficult for them to Join the crowd, making friends and learning the skill in a healthy relationship. They live in constant fear of ridicule—that somebody will uncover their problem. Bedwetting is not an accepted thing to do.

The resulting shame from bedwetting during the sensitive age of a child can be devastattion." He notes that a 31/2 year study at the McGill University in Mont-accomplishing something when he's sleeping is a no-win situareal, Canada concludes that deep sleep, not the child, is the No. 1 cause of bedwetting.

Causes and effects

Bedwetting can cause serious psychological problems in a child if not being looked after quickly. After a while, the child aevelops some strongly ingrained habits and negative self-expectations which in turn make it even harder to overcome the problem.

Early symptoms of this taking place are: Temper tantrums, putting things off, avoiding responsibilities, afraid to be alone, difficulty in making friends.

Staff psychotherapist at the Center, Arnold Keller says that the worst so-called solution, without a doubt, is for parents to wait for the children to outgrow the problem. Since tollet training points out the difference between right and wrong, clean and dirty, success and failure, bedwetting naturally reinforces negative feelings and can lead to a poor self-image.

Most bedwetters hide their feelings in shame," says Keller. "They pretend that it doesn't bother them, and they stop talking about it. And when parents don't think it affects the child, and everything seems to be airight, that's when things can become serious.".

"The majority of bedwetters don't work to their full potential," he says, "They often have difficulty communicating with their parents because of the guilt associated with bedwetting. One study showed three of every four Institutionalized luvenile delinquent were or had been bedwetters."

Fortunately, bedwetting can be corrected in almost every case. The Center enjoys a success rate of over 97 percent of those accepted into the program. Using the Dry Bed Training method ploneered by the Center over the past 14 years, parents can stop their child's bedwetting problem right in the privacy of their own home.

'Don't tell us when to be open'

By Peggy Aulino staff writer

A Federal Trade Commission ruling requiring Detroit area car dealerships to be open at least 64 hours a week is "no big deal" to many salespeople - lots of them say they already put in a work week that well exceeds 40 hours.

 Most expect the ruling handed down last Thursday to be overturned by an appeals court anyway.

Still, people who sell cars in the nation's car capital say they don't want the FTC telling them when to do business. And for now dealerships will not extend their hours.

"Our position is no branch of the U.S. government has got the right to independent businessmen how many hours they must be open, and any court in the land would overturn that order and will," said Dan Hayes, executive vice president of the Troybased Detroit Auto Dealers Association. The organization represents approximately 240 dealers in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

THE DISPUTE stems from an agreement adopted more than 15 years ago by the majority of auto dealers in the tri-county area. They closed their doors to customers all day Saturday and on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings "in response to employees' requests, pressures, whatever you want to call it." Hayes said.

The FTC said that move violated antitrust laws because it increased profits and limited comparison shopping. An administrative law judge.

disagreed with the federal commission in a 1987 ruling, but the FTC overruled that last week.

"They said it reduced competition." Hayes said. "The trial proved without a doubt that there was no effect on competition and that, in fact, car prices were lower in Detroit than anywhere else in the U.S."

The DADA has 60 days from the ruling date to file an appeal. Hayes and others said the matter could be tled up in court for years.

MOST DEALERS are currently open approximately 50 hours a week, which includes evening hours Monday and Thursday. The FTC ruling did not specify that dealers open on Saturday. But it is the notion of working on Saturdays that is foremost in the minds of salespeople.

"Do you want to work on the weekends?" asked a salesperson at Bill Brown Ford in Livonia, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. Nobody in this world wants to work on Saturday."

If the requirement is upheld, not only could it ruin the weekends of the Detroit area's 6,000 auto salespeople, some said it might prompt them to go into another line of work.

"I think you would probably see a lot of people start to get out of the car business. They don't want to putin those kind of hours," said Gary Krupa, who estimated he puts in 56 hours a week at Art Moran Pontiac

John Hillman, another Bill Brown Ford salesman, followed his father into the car sales business. But he said he would abandon it if he had to go beyond the 45 to 55 hours a week he now works.

Hillman termed his father's hours "horrendous," saying he worked Saturdays and weeknights.

"I used to see my father on Sunday afternoons," he said. "It's crazy." And Hillman said if he is faced with the prospect of additional work he "would have to find a job that would provide me with less hours.

I'm not going to sacrifice my home life for a job. That's silly," he said. SALESPEOPLE SAID they hear some complaints from customers about the inconvenience of not being opened on Saturdays, but they said some shoppers take advantage of the weekend closings. "Believe it or not, people like to look around on the weekend, find what they like and do their shopping Monday or Tuesday," Krupa said. "They don't want to be pressured. They don't want to be bothered. They just want to look around." Most customers, the salespeople agree, make adjustments in their schedules when they shop for a car.

"I think 62 hours to come look for a car every three years is sufficient," sald Al Reighburg, who works approximately that many hours at Don Massey Cadillac in Plymouth.

Reighburg doesn't support the FTC ruling, but he said a few additional hours would be "no big deal to us," he said.

IF THE FTC's objective is to get dealers to open on Saturdays, the plan could backfire, Hayes said.

"I've had my car phone for four years now and wouldn't be without it. If I need something done at the office, all I have to do is call rather than holding off until I get back."

She points out another feature: a sense of personal safety.

"If you're on the way to a meeting or appointment and something happens to the car, it's encouraging to know any crisis can be handled almost immediately."

IN TERMS OF technology, cellular car phones are capable of receiving and transmitting information when hooked up to lap-top computers, on-line data bases, portable diagnostic equipment and facsimile machines. The Detroit area has always had the lowest monthly service charge when compared to the rest of the country, but as demand has grown in Detroit so has the need to build more cell sites, add more customer service personnel and enhance the overall system," Elian said.

Cellular One, under its Productivity Plus 500 package, and Ameritech Mobile, under its Time Pack 500 plan, offer 500 minutes of usage per month for a flat rate of $149-$150.

"IF YOU KNOW how much time you spend on the phone and can accurately predict future usage, picking the right plan can save quite a bit of money," Elian said. For those needing less than 100 minutes per month, service is available for about $7.50 per month and an additional 56 cents per minute during peak hours and 16 cents per minute during offpeak times.

A recent study by Technology Futures of Austin, Texas, showed that the average cost of owning and operating a cellular phone is about $131 per month for the relatively active user (250 minutes). By 1997, it will cost about $60 per month.

"I know it's been said that owning a cellular telephone is a lot like buying a razor; you get the razor for free and spend all your money on the blades," Gargaro said. "But almost everyone needs a razor, and it won't be long before everyone needs and gels a cellular telephone."

When Captain James Kirk told his "Star Trek" associates to beam him up, he wanted the crew to bring his entire body to the Enterprise, which was cruising along in outer space.

Transporting one's body may still be possible only in the realm of science fiction, but technology has been developed to "beam up" volces and send them from D.C. to L.A. and points in between.

National Satellite Paging uses such technology to keep its customers in touch with their home offices, clients and anyone else who dials an access number.

MOST PAGING services are effective only within a local range. There are a few other nationwide-systems, but-they-rely— said on FM radio frequencies.

"(Those systems) are a patchwork of FM stations throughout the country. They don't own their own network," said Helaine Bank, national accounts manager in the NSP's Farmington Hills office. "We are the only company licensed at this time with the FCC (Federal Communications Commission) to use 931 MHz, the highest frequency."

FM radio frequencies are less reliable than satellite transmission, Bank said.

"I tell people you don't know whether you're getting a page or Waylon Jennings," she said.

A person with a satellite system beeper can be tracked down whether he or she is on a subway train or in the bowels of an office building, Bank said.

BANK PEDDLES SkyPager and SkyTalk, two satellite transmission systems aimed at the business traveler who must rely on high-tech lifelines to survive in a competitive market.

With SkyPager, a caller dials 1-800-SKY-PAGE, then punches in the individual's access number. The NSP customer's beeper goes off and the number to be called lights up on the unit.

SkyTalk, which can be reached by calling 1-800-SKY-TALK, is based on the same principle, but the caller can leave a voice message. The person being beeped calls an 800 number and hears that message.

The basic monthly cost for SkyPager is $45. SkyTalk costs an additional $20 per month.

THE ORIGINAL call goes to a computer in Washington, D.C., home of the NSP headquarters, and is transmitted to an "uplink" station in California.

"From there it goes 22,500 miles up to our satellite," Bank

The signal then comes back down to transmitters set up in every major metropolitan area, representing hundreds of cities.

If a call comes in when the NSP customer is not within range of a transmitter, the message is saved until the person with the beeper enters a service area.

"We are still not in real remote places," Bank said.

But NSP will put up a transmitter for an individual company if that company agrees to use 50 to 100 pagers.

NSP HAS offered SkyPager in the Detroit area since its inception in 1987. SkyTalk was added in early 1988. With the opening late last year of the regional office on Northwestern Highway, the company has big plans for the state of Michigan.

NSP transmitters are in Detroit, Ann Arbor, Flint, Lansing and Grand Rapids, and the company plans to expand to Saginaw, Benton Harbor and Battle Creek this year.

focus: small business Mary DiPaolo

Management team can mean success

Successfully managing a business as a single entrepreneur is almost impossible. No matter how savvy or experienced, one person can accomplish only so much in a single day.

As the Small Business Administration has stressed, the primary reason for small business failure in our country is "lack of management capability and experience."

The key executive areas of most businesses include finance, marketing and production.

To best carry out the planning, implementation and control activities of these and other major divisions, a co-management team of three or more business professionals is imperative.

PUTTING TOGETHER a winning management team isn't easy. A recent survey among 170 small business members of the Smaller Business Association of New England showed that two-thirds of existing partnerships had broken up by the time the survey was administered.

About 60 percent of these breakups were due to "changing business interests or interpersonal conflict" among management team members.

To avoid this type of situation, it has been found that firms managed by two or more people with complementary business skills and experience provide the highest growth potential.

INC. MAGAZINE confirmed this in their 1983 survey conducted among America's 100 fastest-growing public companies. Two-thirds of the business owners surveyed have at least one partner, threefourths of whom were still in business together.

; Finding and attracting the right: people to help manage a new venture requires that the business' owner initially resolve two key issues tied to the recruitment effort. .

First, the owner must decide how much stock to offer his or her team members.

Second, the owner must figure out how to compensate the members before receiving large-scale financing. Because new businesses are usually cash-poor, it is impossible to recruit key managers by offering a comparable level of pay and benefits as do older and more established companies.

AS A result, the incentives offered should reflect the owner's creativity, flexibility and skill.

Overall, entrepreneurs should consider potential investor requirements before becoming overly concerned with percentage ownership. agreements or other stock allocation strategies. If money is needed from outside sources, investor support may require a 30-70 percent share in the company.

For business owners who give away too much stock too soon, the results can be devastating. But delaying the recruitment of all management team members for the sake of "stock savings" isn't advised either.

The amount of stock saved using their type of strategy isn't worth anything in the long run without investor support.

UNLESS YOU ACT QUICKLY, THIS YEAR COULD BE WORS

As you know, Congress is steadily phasing out interest deductions on most consumer loans. An exception is a loan secured by your home? Which makes it a great time to apply for a home equity line of credit at First of America Bank.

A Special Offer— All Closing Costs Waived.

When you sign up for a home equity line by May 31, 1989, we'll waive your closing costs a savings of up to $400. But you must act by May 31.

Put The Deduction Back In Your Interest.

The Federal tax laws allow you to use your home equity line of credit for any purpose you want. And in most cases, on loans all the way up to $100,000, you still get to take a 100 percent tax deduction.

You also may pay a lower interest rate along with those lower taxes.

Take Advantage Of Your Tax Break. Get your tax break with our home equity line of credit. You can use this line instead of other loans that are no longer fully tax deductible.

You can also access your credit line simply by writing a check. And the payment schedule is flexible, too.

However, using the equity in your home is not something you should do without careful consideration. Furthermore, there are some items—like normal living expenses, for example—for which a home equity line of credit is definitely not appropriate.

So stop by your nearest First of America office, or call 1.800.544.6155 for more information. We'll provide you with a free information brochure and an application. We'll also help you determine if a home equity line of credit is right for you.

In no time, we can have your good credit working in your favor.

Economist expect 2-percent growth

The month of February is typic cally earmarked for making annual predictions. This February is no exception.

in Many economic forecasters have already published their predictions. and most of them expect the economy to grow 2.5-3 percent real rate in an environment of moderate inflation.

Of these forecasts, the one made by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago is particularly interesting, since it is based on the second Annual Economic Outlook Symposium. Participating were 34 economists and analysts from major industrial firms, financial institutions, and other organizations in the Midwest.

Most participants expect the U.S. economy to complete its seventh year of expansion in 1989. The rate of growth of real GNP, which would be 2.3 percent, would extend the second-longest U.S. expansion on record (the longest was the 1961-69 expansion).

Not everyone, however, predicted a 2.3-percent growth. The range of predictions was 0.8 percent to 3.3 percent. While the group was optimistic about the continuous growth of the U.S. economy, its optimism was tempered by concerns about weakness in some sectors of the economy, the risk of higher inflation, and continued large federal deficits.

The group expects a rate of inflation of around 4 percent, although some predict a rate of more than 5 percent.

Interestingly, the group believed that further efforts to slow economic activity - in order to reduce the inflationary risk or cut the trade deficit - could put the economy towards recession, thereby ending the rosy outlook for the economy.

Japanese keep odd records

I spent the better part of a summer once making numbers for General Motors, a job that left me with a chronic crook in my right index finger and a deep distrust for any kind of statistics.

My stint in the Chevrolet Forge steel yard making little blue slashes on one-inch steel rods (there were about a zillion of them) was followed by a brief period as a rat timer in college, yet another stint at a calculator that ended when a rat bit me.

I also worked for the census bureau for a short time, and despite a lifelong dislike of things statistical, spend a long time counting cars and . preparing reports on production.

AS A result, I have a grudging respect for the tollers who keep numerical records, since without the people who keep track of sales, inventories and other critical numbers, the whole auto business would likely grind to a halt, since no one would be able to say things like, "Have that report on my desk in the morning, Jones."

Up to now, I thought one reason the Japanese were doing so well in the auto business was that they spent more time building cars than counting them — or pieces of steel in their steel yards. Likewise, I assumed auto talk Dan came to marketing methods, rather than wasting time compiling endless reams of data about hypothetical customers.

Not so.

I HAVE IN MY possession a docu-ment entitled "Surgar Report on Awareness and Current Status of Users of Imported Vehicles," a 36page document that arrived in the mail written in the kind of English you used to find on the tissue-paper instructions that came with your new camera.

It is a study of the attitudes of Japanese consumers that buy "foreign" cars - the 400,000 or so vehicles sold in Japan produced outside that country, currently mainly Volkswagens.

At first glance, the report seems full of ambiguous information typical of U.S. marketing studies — the they operated on instinct when it kind that leave you feeling as though you've eaten too much cotton candy after reading them.

> BUT THERE is a zen-like quality to some of the categories studied. Several graphs refer to the "culture rich" as opposed to the "classic rich," for example, groupings that have almost operatic overtones.

The classic rich lifestyle includes "rooms decorated with objects that are worthy of being shown to guests." The culture rich take a lot of holidays, according to the study, while the classic rich keep their houses clean.

A second cultural schism: The classic group believes safety is withstanding impact, while the cultural group finds security in the notion that a car is fast enough to escape risk. Sort of like Ralph Nader vs. Car and Driver.

Most perplexing is a graph describing "domestic vehicle users intimate feeling toward imported vehicles," which determines that 51 percent of the respondents "do not feel imported vehicles near themselves." Only a cold draft of air.

OTHER CATEGORIES hint at Japanese expectations that would bewilder any American, such as whether a dealer "renders kind service, such as offering a substitute car and picking up and delivering a repaired vehicle." You wonder howyou would say, "And that's just an estimate, buddy," in Japanese.

Getting to the hard facts, there are 935 imported cars operating in the Shimane prefecture, compared to 20,132 in Hokkaido. Of 818 people surveyed, 68.5 percent have "apprehension toward parallel-imported vehicles." Now that I think about it, so do I.

The Japan Automobile Importers Association, who sent me this wealth of data, likely knew it would touch a

County parks chief resigns, heads for job in Lansing

Though he said he leaves with "good personal Eric Reickel acknowledged there were "phifeelings" for current County Executive Edward | losphical differences" between the two over McNamara, Wayne County parks director R. park restoration and development.

By Wayne Real staff writer

The man who headed Wayne County's parks system for the past four years is leaving for a position with the city of Lansing.

County parks director R. Eric Reickel announced his resignation Monday to become director of the Lansing city parks. His last day on the job will be Friday, March 17.

An initial appointee of former county executive William Lucas, Reickel's tenure was marked by the struggle of keeping parks viable in the face of county budget cuts.

"When I came here it was with a goal and a promise," Reickel said. The goal was to restore the Wayne County Parks to the way they were when I was child. The promise was that there would be a millage to do so. But he (Lucas) never went out for the millage."

Though he said he leaves with "good personal feelings" for current County Executive Edward McNamara, Reickel acknowledged there were "philosphical differences" between the two over park restoration and development.

"I LIKE Mr. McNamara and I believe his administration is committed to parks," Reickel said. "But it's a question of how long it's going to take. I guess you could say I wanted to do it the quick and dirty way - to go for a millage."

Michael Duggan, deputy county executive, said Reickel will be missed.

"It's a real loss. He's one of the best in the state," said Duggan, who added that Reickel was "destined to be frustrated as long as he was here. He had $30 million ideas and a $3 million budget,"

Duggan said that the administration plans to move quickly to replace Reickel. One candidate will be interviewed this week. Two others are scheduled for next week.

In his State of the County address two weeks ago McNamara announced a major park development plan. Details of that plan, including financing, haven't yet been released.

The county parks system includes Edward Hines Park, which stretches through Livonia, Westland and Plymouth and Canton townships. It also includes Lola Valley and Belt-Creek parks in Redford Township, as well as Elizabeth Park, Trenton and Veterans Memorial Park, Ham-tramck. Reickel, a Rockwood native, said he was considering considering moving to Trenton before the Lansing job came up. During his tenure as Wayne County parks chief, Reickel lived in Northville Township.

"There was a consideration of whether to make a long term commitment to commitment to the Wayne County Parks or to move on,"

Counselor writes plays about people in a crisis

By Cathie Breidenbach special writer

iRMINGHAM playwright Kitty Dubin's latest play, "The Last Resort," will soon have its world premlere at the Live Oak Theatre in Austin, Texas.

is a counselor. She said her job sidetracked and, one way or another, serves "as a constant reminder of the internal journeys people go through. It's real fodder for my writing." Several days a week she works as an independent therapist, helping "adults going through the normal crises and transitions of life."

Dubin holds a master's degree in counseling from Oakland University Rochester Hills. She has been a Terapist for the last 12 years. In her writing she never lifts people wholesale from real life to become characters in her plays. Inand she pieces together parts of her own experiences and those of friends when she creates dramas.

SHE STRIVES to write plays anchored in reality, that have a natural organic quality. The everyday traumas and troubles of ordinary midiffe-class, mid-American people in crisis lie at the center of her plays.

Everybody needs a good crisis," she said of her belief that crisis situpulons work as catalysts in people's lives, both for the real people she knows and for characters she creales. Teddy Spain, the protagonist of her newest play, faces a crisis when her ex-husband initiates a fight over cystody of their teenage son.

As a last resort (pun on the play's title intended), Teddy retreats to a summer resort in Michigan where sire went as a child. There she hides but, deliberates her course of action and, to add love interest and complication to her dilemma, she meets an attractive man.

Dubin said of crises, "People don't come into therapy just for fun." The desperation brought on by a life crisis drives them to seek counseling, and when they successfully work through problems, they have a "positive transformation." They're exhilarated about having increased control of their lives. "I like to write about people who haven't been in control and are coming up to a point where it's now or never," she said. That point often arrives sometime during middle age when the ticking of biological clocks grows louder and people become acutely "aware of their own mortality. Their need to realize unfulfilled dreams becomes more urgent."

SUCH IS the case with Teddy

'My plays are all funny but they're not comedies.'.

- Kitty Dubin

Besides being a playwright, Dubin Spain, who has blamed others, gotten never before taken responsibility for her own life.

> The ultimatum of "now or never" makes "The Last Resort" sound like heavy drama of the wet handkerchief variety. Not so. The play capitalizes on humorous situations and delights in funny people. Dubin saidof her dramatic style, "My plays are all funny but they're not comedies."

"The Last Resort" is Dubin's fifth play and, in many ways, she believes it is her best. "It's crafted better and is less talky." She said she can think more visually now and make points without words more often than she did in earlier works.

Her first play, "Cookies," won a Detroit Motion Picture Playwriting Contest Award while she was a student earning her master's degree in English from Wayne State University in Detroit. "Time's Up," a play about a therapist and her client, followed. It had three professional readings but no full-scale production.

'Mirrors," her next play, was produced with costumes, sets and the regalia of a full production in 1986 at the Michigan State Fair Theatre in Detroit. Critics praised the play, and it came close to being produced in Los Angeles, which is how Dubin-met her mentor, Don Toner. He was set to direct the L.A. run of "Mirrors," and even after production plans fizzled, he and Dubin remained TONER READ scripts, critiqued her work, gave her valuable feedback. In his opinion, "The Last Resort" is her best work to date. When he recently took a new job as artistic director of the Live Oak Theatre in Austin, he decided to put her play in his first season.

In the last six years Dubin has written three plays. When a new idea is-fermenting, "It takes you by storm," she-said. The first draft takes three to six months to write. "Then there's all the rewriting."

An early version of "The Last Resort" won her an individual Artist Grant from the Michigan Council for given a staged reading at Wayne ent."

Clintondale nips Bishop Borgess

By Brad Emons staff writer

Staggered and nearly on the ropes, Mount Clemens Clintondale proved it could take Redford Bishop Borgess' best shot Wednesday, advancing in the state basketball tourna-

The Dragons pulled out a 56-53 victory over the Spartans in the Class B regional at Warren Woods-

After falling behind by as many as 19 points in the third quarter, Clintondale appeared down for the count as the Spartans staged a furious fourth-quarter rally.

Junior Shawn Respert sparked the comeback-for Borgess by scoring 17 straight points after Scott Nielsen's layup with 6:02 remaining gave the Dragons a 39-20 advantage early in the third quarter.

But by the end of the third quarter Borgess had cut the deficit to nine, 48-39.

Borgess then made its move. Clintondale missed three straight one-and-one free-throw situations between the three and two-minute mark as Borgess pulled to within one, 54-53, on Charles North's threepointer with 1:23 remaining.

BORGESS THEN came up with a steal, but missed two shots in the final 20 seconds. Clintondale's Jerry Howard grabbed the second miss and dribbled to midcourt where the ball was slapped out of his hands.

With the ball being inbounded and only 10 seconds left, Borgess was forced to foul Nielsen, who calmly connected on two free throws to seal the victory.

Following the free throws, which gave Clintondale a three-point cushion, Howard stole a Borgess pass and ran out the clock as the Dragon fans streamed onto the floor, jubilantly hoisting Nielsen (15 points) and 8-foot-10 center Greg Grant (15 points, 17 rebounds and eight blocks) on their shoulders.

"Nielsen is probably our second best free throw shooter, but in the clutch he's our best," said Clintondale coach Tom Simon, whose team will take a 20-3 record against Detroit Benedictine in Friday's final. "We didn't make any foolish passes; we didn't do anything foolish. They (Borgess) had a good ballclub and have the ability to come back."

BORGESS DUG ITSELF a hole by shooting only nine of 42 (including 0for-7 on three-pointers) from the field in the first half.

The Spartans had a hard time solving Clintondale's zone, which featured the 6-10 Grant on the wing

"When we play a tough team we play zone," Simon said. "We protect Greg in so far as his stamina is concerned. We don't want him running all over the floor. They're going to try and make him foul and take him out of there, and we don't want to put the pressure on somebody else."

Grant, bound for the University of Detroit, put plenty_of pressure on Borgess early, scoring 12 points, to blocks. Teammate Mike Daniloff tallied eight of his 15 in the opening perlod as Clintondale led 18-14.

The Dragons then held Borgess to four second-quarter points to make it 31-18 at the half.

"They (Clintondale) were extending their defense the first half, and we couldn't hit any shots," said Borgess coach Mike Fusco, whose teambowed out with a 14-10 record. "We didn't do anything to stop them in the first half, but the kids showed a lot of heart and character coming RESPERT BEGAN to find holes in the Clintondale zone and put on a spectacular display of offense by scoring 17 of his game-high 25 points within an eight-minute span.

But the 6-2 sharpshooter couldn't get a shot off when Borgess made its bid to take the lead in the final minute of play.

"Give them (Clintondale) credit," Fusco said. "They played a good game, and they're a good team. I knew all five of their players could hurt us at any time. They came in confident, poised and ready."

Only four players scored for Borgess - Respert (25), North (16), Artie Brown (six) and Carl Woods (slx).

"I thought Rashawn Sumler and Carl Woods did a good job against Grant," said Fusco. "We hit the boards hard and went to the glass, but we just couldn't put it (the ball)

Meanwhile, Grant showed he could put the ball down, even fromlong-range, hitting a couple of key shots from 18 feet.

"He can shoot from outside," Simon said, "but he has a tendency to get our there and stay there. We don't want him out there."

"That's my shot - the free throw line - right there," offered the senior standout.

Hixon stalls Edsel; Wayne gains finals

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

When coach Chuck Henry sauntered out of Wayne Memorial's locker room Tuesday night he was flanked by assistant coaches Wayne Woodard and Joel Lloyd.

Fittingly, the threesome left the gym and boarded the team bus together after Wayne blasted Dearborn Edsel Ford, 66-45, in a Class A regional semifinal basketball game at Southfield Lathrup. Wayne did things in threes all night long against the outmanned Ford team. Wayne bombarded Ford, making eight 3-point shots, six in the third quarter when the Zebras turned a 31-20 halftime lead into a 55-32 rout.

The win was Wayne's 11th straight and sends the Zebras (20-4) into the regional final at 7 p.m. Friday against the winner of Wednesday's Redford Catholic Central-Detroit Cooley game.

This is the first time a Wayne team has advanced to the regional finals in seven years under Henry.

"IT'S NICE when the 'threes' are going in," Henry said. "That has to be the season-high for threepointers, easily for one quarter. They're (Ford's) the team that's notorious for threes so it was kind of a Ford finished the season at 21-3 and coach Richard Angelo was satisfied in making it this far.

"They beat us at our own game," Angelo said. "We usually get hot and hlt 'threes,' but they did. That's the way it goes. I thought we could stay with them, but they got hot and played good defense, I'm really proud of my kids. Anything we got after (winning) the district was a bonus, I thought."

Chuck Henry has his Wayne Memorial basketball team in the regional final.

Tony Rumple sank a trio of 3point shots during the third-quarter surge and Pierre Hixon, who had a game-high 24 points, made two triples in the quarter. Leonard Wade had the other 3-point basket and scored five points.

Rumple finished the game with 18 points, but Hixon, who nailed four 8pointers throughout the evening, earned most of the praise afterward from Henry.

HENRY SAID Hixon brought about a "four or five-point" scoring

More regional action, 2D

"This was by far his highest scoring game," Henry said. "He gave us no indication before the game he was going to do that. He plays hard, especially defensively. And tonight he had the flow on offense and he felt it and let it fly."

Ford trailed only 15-12 after one quarter, but poor shooting in both the second and third quarters didn't help the Thunderbirds.

Wayne scored the first eight points of the second quarter and led 23-12 before Jason Swafford finally made a field goal with 3:42 left in the half for Ford.

Wayne put the game out of reach in the third quarter, scoring the first 11 points, including three 3-pointers, to take a commanding, 42-20 lead with 5:02 left.

SWAFFORD, FORD'S point guard and best player, finished with 14 points while backcourt mate John Tobin led the team with 17. Shane Cameron, a double-figure scorer for Ford, finished the night with only seven points and the Thunderbirds could come up with only three offensive rebounds.

Kevin Hankerson scored only eight points, but was one of the giants on the boards for Wayne.

--- "I-think-we had more depth and getting up and down the court and making them run may have affected their shooting," Henry said. "We didn't go in trying to shut down Swafford. The scouting report said he was their best player, but they had four kids who could score.

"We didn't do anything special. We just tried to play the best defense we could to win. I think it was our best performance of the year."

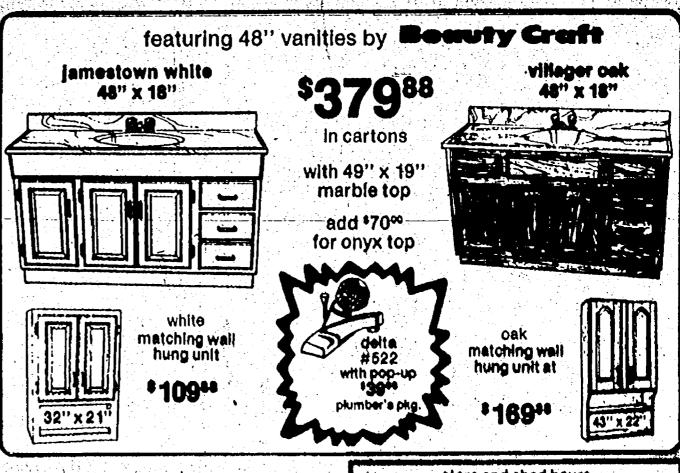

The Zebras might need an oven superior effort Friday in the regional

Cooley Cardinals eliminate Shamrocks in state tourney

By Stave Koweleki staff writer

Bill Vittl was there, but all he could do was cheer.

Redford Catholic Central could have used the former Shamrock star Wednesday in a Class A regional semifinal basketball game against Detroit Cooley. The two-time defending Class A champions ran away from CC, scoring an impressive, 64-43 win at Southfield Lathrup.

Vitti, who watched from the stands, used up his eligibility last year when CC nearly upset Cooley in the regional final, and now he plays for Saginaw Valley State.

CC didn't have much of a chance this time, with 6-foot-7 center Daniel Lyton and 6-6 forward Kenneth Conley roaming the paint for Cooley.

The win sends Cooley (21-1) into the Lathrup regional final at 7 p.m. Friday against Wayne Memorial (20-

"CC HAD A chance to play the way it wanted to last year (against us)," said Cooley coach Ben Kelso, recalling last year's scare, 58-52. "They had Vitti, but they didn't have him this time, and I think it wore on them trying to handle our 210-pound

But Bernie (Holowicki) is a very, very good coach, and he knows what his team can do and what it can't do. He did not have the manpower, so we put him in a situation where he couldn't use any tricks."

CC, the Catholic League champion and winner of its own district last week, ended the season at 15-9. The loss also ended the fine high school careers of five Shamrocks seniors, including point guard Terry Boykin and center Ray Richards.

"This was a senior-oriented team," Holowicki sald. "I had five seniors (Scott Hauncher, Jeff Schaner and Pat Fuelling were the others) and we had great senior leadership. They're outstanding players and outstanding gentlemen. The district title was another nice notch for these guys."

Boykin returned the compliment, but wishes he could have ended on a finer note. He finished with five points. Hauncher led CC with 12 points and Richards added 11.

LYTON PACED Cooley with 19 points, and guard Michael Talley, a leading candidate for Mr. Basketball, added 13.

"I didn't set a good tone and that threw everyone off," Boykin said. "Cooley's real talented and they crashed the boards. They've got a lot of experience and that's what counts

We were so close last year and said we'd get 'em this time. It didn't work out and I feel bad for coach Holowicki because he's a great coach. We just came out flat."

CC led 6-4 early in the game, but (Boykin) and Jeff (Schaner)."

Cooley scored 17 of the next 21 points to take a 21-10 lead after one

Cooley made 58 percent (15-for-26) of its first-half shots and built a 14-point lead, 33-19, by halftime. CC, meanwhile, shot 35 percent (8-23) in the first half and 32 percent (13-41) for the game. Schaner, the Shamrocks' best 3-point shooter, made only one of nine shots and finished with five points.

CC PLAYED ZONE most of the game because of Cooley's height and quickness, advantage, and Cooley countered by holding the ball much of the third quarter in its half-court

"We were in control of the ball game, and the clock was running out on him (Holowicki), not me," Kelso said of his decision to slow the tempo in the third quarter.

The Cardinals outscored the Shamrocks 8-4 in the third quarter and took a commanding, 41-23 lead into the final quarter. "They cat-and-moused it on us, and that was a smart move," Holowicki said. "We knew going in we needed a perfect game and wanted to be within eight or 10 coming into the fourth quarter.

"Cooley did some good things against us. They tried to alter our shots instead of blocking them, and they played tough against Terry

Woodhaven eludes Spartans' upset bid

Chris Nazelli grabe this rebound for Stevenson. He scored 13 in the loss to Woodhaven.

By Brad Emons staff writer

It didn't take lunch pails or hard hats to figure out what kind of basketbali team Livonia Stevenson brought into Tuesday's Class A regional at Willow Run.

The hard-working Spartans took unbeaten Woodhaven to the limit before falling, 71-68, as senior guard: Eric Higgs won it on a three-pointer as time expired.

The Spartans proved that Friday's come-from-behind 71-70 upset victory over Western Lakes Activities Association champ Plymouth Salem in the district final was no fluke.

Stevenson, which trailed by as many as 12 points during the second period, rallied in the second half and made things interesting right until the final horn.

Higgs' game-winning shot eluded the out-stretched arms of 6-foot-6 Stevenson center Mike Vrooman.

The Spartans' Rick Laven forced Woodhaven's hand when he nailed his fourth 3-pointer of the night,

"WE'VE HAD quite a few games go right down to the wire like this." said Woodhaven coach Michael Krogel, whose team is 23-0 overall. "When we called the timeout (with 24 seconds to play), what we wanted to do is take the first available shot with four seconds left. We didn't want to shoot any earlier and take a chance by letting them come down and get off a 3-pointer."

Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre and his staff countered with a zone defense with a man guarding Dustin Snell, Woodhaven's long-range shooting threat. But Snell was nearly the goat earlier when he launched an illadvised jumper in the key, setting up Laven's game-tying basket.

"We tried to cover Snell and we were upset that he got the ball," said the Stevenson coach. "It wasn't like he (Higgs) wasn't being guarded. We'll take that shot against us any day of the week. The kid just hit it."

It was a free-wheeling, wide-open game from start to finish.

Stevenson fell behind 26-17 after one quarter and 33-21 with 4:38 left in the second period after a free throw by Vernon Crump.

And despite missing six straight free throws, including four one andones in the second period, Stevenson last forever!

Great things CAN

clawed back to trail by only six at intermission, 34-28.

THE SPARTANS, helped by a half-court zone trap which forced numerous Woodhaven turnovers, began to make their move in the third period. An acrobatic layup and free throw by Chris Nazelli with three minutes to play in the quarter pulled the Spartans to within one, 42-41.

Stevenson then took a brief lead (45-42) on two straight hoops by Scott Kosikowski.

It was 49-all after three quarters, but Woodhaven regained the lead and appeared to have the game clinched when Higgs scored with 1:29 left to make it 68-63.

But a nifty layup by point-guard Eric Schwedt, coupled with Snell's poor decision and Laven's threepointer, forced the Warriors to into the final shot.

Krogel said he was leery of Stevenson's never-say-die attitude, particularly after hearing the scouting report on the Salem game where the Spartans erased a 20-point thirdquarter deficit.

"I showed the Salem game film to our team, and I told them they never give up and never to think you've got the game won," said the Woodhaven coach. "We were fortunate to win. I don't know how we won."

DeANTHONY HARTMAN, a junior guard, paced Woodhaven and all scorers with 24 points. Higgs added 14, while Snell and Max Reck each Laven, who did not start, paced a balanced Stevenson attack with 14. Three others were in double figures including Nazelli (13), Schwedt (12) and Kosikowski (11).

If the Spartans let down in any area it was at the free throw line where they made only eight of 18. (Woodhaven was 17 of 29).

"We told the kids that to stay in the regional, you'd have to shoot 75 percent to win the ballgame," said McIntyre, whose team bowed out with a 16-7 record. "Maybe we should move the line back to the top of the key and shoot free throws from there."

McIntyre may have been joking, but he was partially right as the Spartans outgunned Woodhaven from the three-point range, 6-4.

But the Stevenson coach couldn't kick about his team's effort, spearheaded by Schwedt and Nazelli, the "Nazelli couldn't get the ball to roll, and he had several (shots) spin 47 off," said McIntyre. "They ". (Woodhaven) did a smart thing and made him go to the other side (his right), but he was outstanding.

"And it was good to see Eric becoming more and more comfortable as a scorer and penetrator as the ". season went along. He played very hard."

McINTYRE SAID he will miss this cast of players.

"Sure, we made mistakes and gave up things we shouldn't have, but I think we came with the intent to win," he said. "The kids came to play every night and that's what was so enjoyable about coaching this 5 group. I know we had a chance every time the ball goes up. This was a fairly talented group. Each kid had something to offer."

The Spartans offered Woodhaven everything and more, but it was Higgs' three-pointer which sends the Warriors into tonight's regional final against Ann Arbor Huron, an 18point winner over Romulus in the other game of the doubleheader.

Blazers, Borgess eye regional

By Brad Emons staff writer

Some familiar faces are back in the state volleyball regionals this weekend. (See tournament pairings.)

Catholic League Central Division members Livonia Ladywood, last year's Class A champs, and Redford Bishop Borgess, the state Class B runner-ups, each won district titles last weekend.

Ladywood, the Catholic League champions, defeated Livonia Churchill (15-4, 15-11) to capture the Livonia Franklin district, while Borgess upended Dearborn Divine Child (17-15, 15-10) to grab its own district. Churchill never got going in the first game, but made a run in the second game after Ladywood had built an 11-3 lead. The Chargers, behind the hitting of Jenny Sproul and the setting of Christy Clark, closed the gap to 11-10 before Sarah Adzima (nine kills) unloaded on a big hit to stop the Churchill run.

"Sproul gets up high and just pounds the ball," said Ladywood coach Tom Teeters. "But we have two good hitters in Sarah and Stacey Girard (four kills) and we just needed to keep the ball down. And we just needed to pass the ball."

THE BLAZERS got a couple of key hits from sophomore Rebecca Willey and 17 assist kills from Kari Domanski. Teeters also said he liked the serving and defensive play of Peggy Knittel.

Ladywood's toughest test came in the semifinals where a young Livonia Stevenson team, under .500 most of the season, made an upset bid.

The Spartans lost 15-4 in the opening game but came back to win the second game, 15-12, behind the topspin serving of Collette Rockwell, the setting of Christine Slanaker, the hitting of senior Sharlene Sudek, and the blocking of Jenny Melia and Renea Bonser.

But with the match even at one game apiece, Ladywood ran off 15 straight points in Game No. 3 without a Stevenson answer to advance

"Ladywood is very powerful, and we couldn't pass very well in that third game," said Stevenson coach Lee Cagle. "Sometimes we look very good and other times we look awful. That happens with a young team.

"Ladywood is always consistent. They never get rattled and they're a reflection of Teeters' personality."

"I WAS JUST-hoping they wouldn't serve like that in the third game because in the second game they just served us off the court," Teeters said. "They served some tough and low shots to the net. That's what they had to do. They served aggressively."

But the win was costly as Lady-

The home-court advantage might be the best thing Wayne Memorial has going for it Saturday when the Class A regional volleyball tournament begins.

Wayne meets traditional-power Temperance-Bedford in one of two regional matches at 2 p.m. Saturday. The other match at Wayne pits defending Class A champion Livonia Ladywood against Dearborn Edsel Ford, also at 2. The two winners will decide the regional title at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Wayne outlasted Adrian, 15-8, 4-15, 17-15 Saturday to win the Romulus district and advance into regional play. Coach Ann Kolnitys hopes momentum and the homecourt can carry Wayne in regional Wayne, the Wolverine A League champion, is 35-6 overall.

"THE HOME COURT can be an advantage," Kolnitys said. "But a big advantage, I don't know. We need a lot of help from the crowd. We'll see what happens.

'We're fired up. We have to be. It's the only way we can have a good day. We always know we have a chance. It's up to the girls and how they play. We're young but we have a lot of experience."

Wayne looked impressive last weekend, sweeping three matches en route to the district title. The Zebras beat Plymouth Canton, 15-7, 15-12, in an opening-round match and routed Westland John Glenn in the second round, 15-2 and 15-11.

Adrian extended the district title match to three games before Wayne prevailed. Kolnitys said the Zebras woke up after Adrian's 15-4 secondgame win tied the match at 1-1.

Wayne took a 5-0 lead in the thrid game and eventually won, 17-15, as Nicole Fisher served the last two son at 27-18.

"ADRIAN HAD a few excellent players," Kolnitys said. "After the first game, I think the girls said, 'Wow, this is going to be an easy day.' But Adrian came on and we didn't have it so easy."

Tiffany Goodlow led Wayne's front-line attack with 15 kills Saturday. Brandy Caincrosss and Evette Sluder had 11 and nine kills, respectively.

Fisher made only one service error in 15 attempts. Jenny Tibbals did an admirable job off the bench, collecting four aces with no errors in 13 serves.

"She did a great job for us," Kolnitys sald. "She's like our seventh player and wherever I need help she's got to fill in. She was a spark and did much better than I had hoped."

Edsel Ford advanced into the regional after posting a grueling 15-13, 13-15, 19-17 win over Garden City in the championship match of its own district. The loss ended Garden City's sea-

FORD LED 13-5 in the final game, before Garden City rallied to tie the home team, 14-14.

Garden City coach John Groves was excited about his team's performance and already looks forward to next season. Sarah Young, who had eight serving aces Saturday, is the only Cougar senior in the playing group. Garden City beat Detroit Chadsey (15-2, 15-4) and Dearborn Fordson (15-11 and 15-3) to advance to the district final.

"Considering I have only one senior, this was an outstanding performance," Groves said. "They all played at what I considered 110 percent. I'm very happy with the way they played. They showed what I considered a lot of guts to come back. That's extremely rare for a young team."

Junior Diane Allison, an All-Northwest Suburban League firstteam selection, had seven serving aces, 16 kills and eight blocks during the district run.

Juniors Diane Malone and Colleen Owsley added 10 and eight aces, respectively, for GC.

North overcomes Glenn ace

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

A longstanding tradition was extended and another may have been started Thursday at the Western Lakes Activities Association gymnastles meet.

North Farmington continued its dominance in the sport by winning its 13th consecutive league championship, including the last five in the WLAA.

On an individual level, Westland John Glenn sophomore Wendy Minch won every event and captured the all-around title. With two years of high school competition still ahead, she has the potential to dominate the WLAA for some time.

North had all but wrapped up the championship by the time it completed the four events, making the eighth and final rotation of teams a mere formality.

Up to that point, it was a close meet between the Raiders, Glenn and Northville, and North needed a strong showing in its last event, the bars, to secure a safe lead.

THE RAIDERS, with their secondbest score of the season at 137.45, finished ahead of Minch and the Rockets (134.55) and host Northville (132.95).

Going into the seventh team rotation and the last one for North, the Raiders had accumulated 103.55 points, Glenn 101.75 and the Mus-

North scored 33,90 on the uneven bars to strengthen its lead, but the Raiders needed some solid performances from Heather Kahn, Kim Heller and Kristin Szutarski after a slow start in that event.

Kahn and Heller had their seasonbest scores on bars with 9.25 and 8.95, respectively, and Szutarski was around her average with an 8.60. Kahn was runner-up to Minch, Heller placed fourth and Szutarski was eighth.

THE STRONG FINISH on bars meant Glenn had to score 35.70 on the bars, its last event, to catch the Raiders. That would have meant getting the highest single-event score by

"I think that would have been very tough," Glenn coach Pam Yockey said. "We had a bad floor set (of scores), and we had too many falls on beam. Had the girls stuck their beam routines, we would have been more solid going into the last event."

North had the best team scores on vault (35.55) and floor (34.60), was second to Northville (35.05) on bars and third behind Canton (33.90) and Glenn on beam. Rita Dunn, Jameelah Gater and Ellen Wesselman were important to North's team scoring, too.

"WHEN YOU have to count four scores, it doesn't matter if you have one or two superstars," said North coach Jeff Dwyer. "It's the third and fourth scores that make or break it for the team."

Minch gave a spectacular performance, scoring 9.60 on vault, 9.15 on floor, 9.45 on bars and 9.55 on beam for an all-around total of 37.75. Heller and Kahn tied for second at 35.80.

"I scored best on yault but felt really good on beam," Minch said, adding Thursday was the first time she performed a new mount on beam. "It's a round-off, layout move. It was so scary. If you do one little thingwrong, you're off."

Minch's favorite event is the bars. At one time it was her weakest. But during 10 years of training at the club level, she turned it into a strength by practice and increased physical strength.

"THAT'S WHAT I do the best on." she said. "I feel like I'm in control. I practice that the most.

"I go to practice (with the high school team) and then go to practice at another gym. I've had so many meets this year, I'm not even nervous anymore."

Yockey was Minch's coach when the latter was a beginning gymnast years ago, and she knew then Minch. who has scored 38.00 or better in the all-around twice this season, had potential.

"She's a little, feisty character," Yockey said. "She has a determination that doesn't quit. She has the

In addition to Minch, senior Debbie Williams also had a good meet for Glenn, placing among the top 10 in every event and fourth in the allaround (34.35).

Anti-surrogate loophole plugged

By Tim Richard staff writer

The state Senate moved to tighten Michigan's anti-surrogate parenting law by prohibiting surrogate gestation for pay.

"We're making criminals out of people eager to have children," protested Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, who opposes the measure.

The current law, passed in 1988, prohibits paying a woman whose ovum is artificially inseminated with the sperm of a man who would later adopt the child.

The new bill, on its way to the House, extends that law to cover an already-fertilized egg of one woman being implanted in a surrogate who is paid to bear the couple's child.

PASSAGE CAME on a 32-5 vote Wednesday after an hour of sharp

Among area senators, only Faxon

Supporting the Binsfeld bill were Republicans Doug Cruce of Troy, Richard Fessier of Commerce, Robert Geake of Northville and Rudy crats William Faust of Westland and tation mother, but it was rejected. George Z. Hart of Dearborn.

The legislative efforts are aimed directly at Dearborn attorney Noel Keane, who is paid by couples without children to match them with a woman who will bear a baby for Keane, $10,000 for the surrogate

MOST OF the debating was done by opponents, who called it "antifamily."

"I don't think the state should be in the business of making adoption more difficult," said Sen. Joe Con-roy, D-Flint. "It's very difficult to adopt a baby other than one from Mexico or South America. "We have couples who get marrled at (age) 27 or 29 and find out too late they can't have children."

Sen. John Kelly, D-Detroit, called the bill "anti-nuclear family."

Faxon said the child is that of the sperm donor and egg donor, even if gestation occurs in a second woman. "That should not be prohibited," he said. Faxon offered an amendment to declare that the "natural" mother Nichols of Waterford; and Demo- is the "egg" mother and not the ges-

"WE WENT through all those arguments for five years," said Binsfeld. "This amendment clarifies the intent of the law." She noted the law was passed with them. Typical fees: $10,000 for 30 votes in the 38-member Senate and 90 of the 110 House members. Binsfeld said there is a bond between the woman who has borne the child and the child.

Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor, supported Binsfeld, saying the law doesn't prohibit surrogate gestation - "as long as there is no compensation. The sponsor (Binsfeld) is trying to outlaw the exchange of money. You shouldn't rent your womb."

IN OTHER ACTION, the Senate gave $5-1 approval to Fessler's bill to expand the state Law Enforcement Training Council from 11 members to 15.

New members would represent the Michigan Association of Police, police women, the Wayne County Association of Chiefs of Police and the Detroit Police Officers Association.

There was no debate, and all area senators voted yes.

Artist's rendering of the first house in Woodlynne, the future Detroit Symphony showhouse, shows how New York City architect Robert A.M. Stern kept a strong midwestern look in his design.

Woodlynne

Showhouse composed for Midwest audiences

ly Corinne Abatt

AVID JENSEN, Birming-ham-based builder/de-veloper, talks like a philosopher and a visionary. That's because he is. And these days his vision is focused on his 23-acres development, Woodlynne, Bingham Farms, a community of million-dollar residences.

The acreage isn't visible from the road, but it came with a 60-foot wide access strip that is now paved, attractively landscaped along both sides and christened Woodlynne Drive.

A cobblestone gatehouse part way down the drive was just completed. A 200-year-old black walnut tree stands as a sentinel on the other side because Jensen had the road curved to save it.

The 14 building sites front on a cul-de-sac. Three will border on a small pond that is being created in terrain that is a natural for it near the south boundary.

All of the houses are or will be designed by New York City architect Robert A.M. Stern. All of the landscape architecture is designed by The SWA Group out of Boston, Mass

"This is a development by design with a master plan," Jensen said as he drove slowly along Woodlynne Drive, describing the thinking that went into each step.

"We had to have a very special architect on this project, Stern has a love affair with Cranbrook. He was there for a week in 1980. He asked me to take 35mm pictures of everything I liked around here."

AFTER STERN had studied Jensen's photographs, he asked Jensen, "Why not do something that spins off Frank Lloyd Wright's Winslow House in Chicago?"

"The Prairie style had its inspiration in that kind of look.....
Stern is a traditionalist with a modern interpretations," Jensen said.

Stern was aware and concerned about maintaining a Midwestern identity in his designs, Jensen said, In his book, "Years with Frank Lloyd Wright," Edgar Tafel said

In his book, "Years with Frank Lloyd Wright," Edgar Tafel said the Winslow house (actually in River Forest, Ill.) was Wright's first independent commission after leaving Adler and Sullivan in 1893. Tafel said the setting for the entrance and front door are reminiscent of Louis Sullivan, his former employer. In any event, the much admired design brought Wright many clients.

So, the first Woodlynne home (5,4000 square feet) now being completed, with its red brick exterior and cedar shingle roof, has a traditional look and a historical legacy, somewhat reminiscent of Wright's early style with its broad eaves and signature urns at the entrance.

AS THE 1989 Symphony Showhouse, it will be seen by many visitors when it is open later this spring. It is a true family home with a circular staircase in the entry hall, a second staircase in the back of the house.

One of Stern's trademarks is his use of windows to take advantage of the light, the views and the elevations, and at the same time enhance the architectural line and look.

A large fanlight (window) high above the front entrance allows the two-story entry hall to be bathed in natural light. There are windows on three walls in the living room, a bank of bay windows in the dining room and even slim vertical windows tucked into unexpected places such as a storage area or a child's bathroom.

The flooring in the large living room and the detailing of the fire-place suggest the elegance of Eliel Saarinen's designs at Cranbrook. The oak floor is laid in a herring-bone pattern with darker detailing around the perimeter.

An interlocking pattern of carving runs vertically across the front of the fireplace. Great attention is being paid to the cove molding, wood trim around the doors and installation of interior pocket sliding glass doors.

The second house, already well under way, is a 7,000-square foot, triple-gabled English country house. There will be no makeovers of floor plans or modifications of styles from one house to another, Jensen said. Each will be a completely individualized residence that will be compatible with, but distinctly different from, the oth-

A LOOK through a catalog of buildings and projects that Stern did from 1981-85 erases any doubt about his versatility. This 300-page book of color photographs of finished projects, floor plans and elevations shows the tremendous body of work he has produced in those four years, from the East Coast to as far west as Alaska, where he did the Performing Arts Center in An-

Stern's transformation of a 19th century factory in Voorschoten, The Netherlands, to the headquarters for Mexx International, a Dutch fashion company, is the subject of an article and pictures in Architectural Record, May 1988. In it, the writer refers to Stern's "signature eclecticism."

Jensen wrote in his purpose statement for Woodlynne, "To provide an inspired environment which balances the sensitive issues of the land, the building (or structures) and the gardens. Our effort is to create a wonderful sense of place, where a neighborhood is experienced, where the sum of the total parts is greater than the individual parts."

STERN, HOST of the PBS-TV series, "Pride of Place: Building the American Dream," and professor of graduate studies in architecture, at Columbia University, is also a stern will be here for the opening of the Symphony Showhouse. He will speak to the students at Detroit Country Day School and be the guest at a banquet in his honor. "Believing as I do in the continu-

"Believing as I do in the continuity of tradition, I try to create order out of the chaotic present by entering into a dialogue with the past, with tradition," he wrote in the introduction to his book.

". . . I do not believe that the past offers a cure for the ills of the present; I do believe it offers standards for evaluation."

Jensen can already picture the formal gardens that will surround the homes. He likes the idea of single drives into secluded courtyards. On one site, he pictures a fountain. He has many drawings and paintings of how the landscape will look. His vision is taking shape.

Woodlynne created on historic site

Woodlynne, the 23 acres of land in Bingham Farms, comes complete with a well-documented history. Had things gone differently, the University of Michigan, might be on 13 Mile Road instead of in Ann Arbor.

Developer David Jenssen bought the parcel of land from Semon E. (Bunkle) Knudsen.

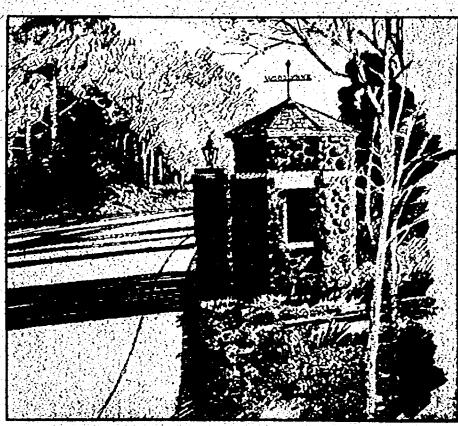

He had kept it after the Knudsen home was sold to the David Hermelins when the Knudsens moved to Cleveland, Ohio, in the early '70s when he became chairman and chief executive officer of White Motor Corp.

The property is first on record as part of a government land grant to John Daniels around 1832 when Michigan'was still a territory. An 80-acre parcel of the larger piece was "reserved for the University of Michigan" in compliance with an act of Congress approved in 1826 "concerning a seminary of learning in the Territory of Michigan."

However, Daniels bought that 80 acres from the state of Michigan in 1852 for $400 when the state apparently decided on another location for the university. Descendants of the Daniels family owned the acreage until the Depression, when Knudsen acquired it.

So instead of the University of Michigan, there is Bingham Farms and its newest development, Woodlynne.

Drawing of the gatehouse, which is now in place, shows how it will look when spring arrives and what it says about the homes beyond the curve of the drive.

"Our effort is to create a wonderful sense of place, where a neighborhood is experienced, where the sum of the total parts is greater than the individual parts."

OLEMAN YOUNG, William Milliken, Walter Reuther — three dynamic, powerful, influential men — each destined to play a role in Michigan's volatile political history. The good news is that books about each of these fascinating men have been published within the last few months.

The bad news is that, in all three books, we're showered with roses, roses, roses - with barely a prick of the thorn. The very nature of their life's work, the complexities of their personalities, the times that shaped their ideologies are all issues begging for objectivity.

In the Young blography ("Coleman Young and Detroit Politics - From Social Activist to Power Broker," by Wilbur C. Rich, Wayne State University Press, hardbound $21.95), we see public relations hard at work, and the results are predictable: a biography that is, ultimately, a boring piece of apologia.

To have to concede that a book about Coleman Young is a yawner is pretty incredible, considering Young's own, carefully constructed toughguy impression: the profane, irascable countenance; the seldom-appropriate, often-hilarious wit; the never-back-down stance, whether he's dealing with the military as a Tuskegee Airman during World War II, Harry Bennett and the Ford union busters in the 1940s, the House Un-American Activities Committee in the 1950s, or fiscal decline, the dismantling of Poletown, the abandonment by the Reagan administration and the sleaze factor in his own administration in the RICH, A PROFESSOR at Wayne State, may have been hobbled by the fact that this project grew out of a luncheon discussion with members of the Coleman Young Foundation.

The book was written over a four-year period with their unflinching support — though, according to notes at the end of the book, Rich was only able to interview Young on two occasions.

In "American Dreams: Lost and Found," Studs Terkel's 1980 chronicle of 100 American Lives, Young talks about his own life and brilliantly, idiomatically, profanities intact, tells it all in only 14 pages. Too bad he didn't allow Rich more time. Too bad he didn't write his own book.

"THE MILLIKEN YEARS, A Pictorial Reflection," is written by Joyce Braithwaite and George Weeks, published originally by The Traverse City Record-Eagle and Village Press Inc., and released recently in large paperback by Wayne State University Press ($17.50)

What you see is what you get: An endearing picture book with lots of hand shaking, lots of bappy faces — about what you would expect from two former Milliken staff members.

Braithwaite was Milliken's campaign manager and executive assistant for 14 years; Weeks. a Detroit News columnist, served as either press secretary or chief of staff for all of Milliken's 14

But it, too, is pretty boring, except for a page or two of political cartoons near the end of the book break Mona book - most of them connecting Milliken with - guess who? - Colèman Young.

IN THE Reuther blography, it is a loving daughter, Elisabeth Reuther Dickmeyer, who does the telling.

The book is called "Reuther: A Daughter Strikes" (Spelman Publishers, Box 3333, Farmington Hills 48333, $21.95 Hardbound, $14.95, softbound), with a forward by Doug Fraser.

In all fairness, I have not seen the review copy. I can only quote the press release and wish that all it says is true.

"The blast from a would-be assassin's shotgun ..., plunged all Reuthers into a lifetime of strict security, constant bodyguards, bulletproof windows and vests, barbed wire - and constant fear. Brother Victor was shot next.

"Then there were the anonymous threats and charges by J. Edgar Hoover. But there were good times, too. All are described in Elisabeth Reuther Dickmeyer's 400-page account of Walter Reuther's two lives — as UAW president and as a devoted husband and father."

ALONG THE way, the family was exposed to figures like Eleanor Roosevelt, JFK, Martin Luther King and India's prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru. Then, in 1970, it all came to an end when Walter Reuther and his wife, May, were killed in a plane crash. Dickmeyer suggests possible sabotage.

Partly because of an enlightening trip to India with her father, Dickmeyer became a Hare Krishna devotee and collaborated with Alfred Ford, great-grandson of Henry-Ford, to convert the Fisher Mansion into a Hare Krishna temple.

It has not been my policy to mention a book until I've seen the hard copy, and I hesitate to do it now. Objectivity aside, much of what I want from this book may be wishful thinking.

SO, IF I haven't read the book, why am I even bringing it up? Because any book about the Reuthers is important; because I wanted to mention it along with the other two biographies the lives of all three influential men interconnected at crucial periods in Michigan's history - and because this will be my last column for a while.

I'm taking a sabbatical of sorts — for how long, I can't say. The fiction world beckons and I've been wanting to explore its possibilities for a long time. I may well get lost - hopelessly lost!—but I wouldn't miss the trip for anything.

But not to worry - Book Break will continue and an interim columnist will be announced within two weeks.

Political profiles sadly lacking Animal life is focus of exhibition

Twenty area artists are featured in an animal life art exhibition and sale in progress at Somerset Mall in Troy.

Participating artists include watercolorist Elbert Weber of Commenting on the show, its coordinator Carol Piligian said: "Although there are many talented, innovative contemporary artists working today, relatively few portray animal life in their work as a theme.

"Reasons for the comparative scarcity of this imagery are no doubt multiple, but one major factor is that of a society becoming increasingly more urban, technological and less agrarian resulting in a physical remoteness from our fellow creatures."

Somerset Mall is at 2801 Big Beaver, on the southeast corner of Big Beaver and Coolidge. The exhibition continues through March 12 and is open for viewing during normal mall business

To build a lasting home, you need a solid foundation. You also need quality materials, experienced craftsmen and an attention to detail that never compromises. And that's exactly what Selective Homes provides.

Eleven million people in the U.S. have diabetes. But almost half of them don't know it.

Untreated, diabetes can lead to heart disease, kidney disease, blindness and gangrene.

And for 150,000 people each year, it leads to death.

That's why you should be aware of the symptoms of diabetes: blurred vision, excessive thirst and frequent urination are just some of the warning signs. Because the sooner you find out if you have diabetes, the more likely you are to get it under control, before complications set in.

Finding out you have diabetes can be scary. But not finding out can be fatal.

"I finally found a townhome as large as a home."

"I looked long and hard to find a 2000 sq. ft., cathedral ceiling elegant three-bedroom townhome. (Of course, I could have chosen a two or three-bedroom ranch.) With my own two-car attached garage, my own private basement and patio. And luxury touches like deluxe kitchens and whirlpool tubs plus landscaping that I love. Nothing could get me to move from Covington, Nothing.
