Hockey team off to U.S.S.R.

Stingers excited over trip

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

The air was thick with excitement and a little bit of tension. For the Stingers hockey team, Monday afternoon had all the earmarks of a typical tournament game.

And that was while they were still at the airport gate, thousands of miles from the ice in Helsinki, Finland, where they were scheduled to play Tuesday night.

The Stingers 10-day exhibition tour of Finland and the Soviet Union got off the ground successfully Monday as 14 teenage hockey players from Westland and Garden City, parents and siblings and a small group of community leaders boarded TWA Flight 766 at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

After a brief stop in New York, the entourage headed for Helsinki, where they will play against 14and 15-year-olds from Finland.

Teens killed in accident remembered

By Kevin Brown staff writer

Friends and family of Franklin High seniors Craig Allard and John Shea recalled this week what was special about the two friends and athletes, who died Saturday in Florida.

Allard, 18, a football quarterback, and Shea, 17, a co-captain of the basketball team, were struck by a car at 1:20 a.m. Saturday.

The two seniors, both Westland residents, were trying to run across a roadway just outside of Orlando, Fla., where they had traveled with friends for spring break.

RECALLING HIS brother's sense of humor, Tom Shea said, "He'd call up at about 4 in the morning and wake me up and say, 'So are you sleeping?' "

"He was a leader on the court; he always knew what was going on," said his friend, Tim Dlugos, who also recalled Shea's dry humor.

"Some are taking it a little harder an others," Dlugos said about none of the youths saw a second car passing the first "at about 90 miles an hour," Vendal said.

The second car struck the youths; both died shortly after the collision.

Charged in the incident was Francisco Canales, 31, of Altamonte Springs, Fla. Canales was charged with two counts of manslaughter while driving under the influence of alcohol, leaving the scene of a fatality, and driving while his license was revoked.

By late Tuesday, Canales remained in the Orange County Jail with bond set at $10,000.

Randy Means, representative for the Florida state attorney's office. said the Florida Highway Patrol should complete its investigation of the incident next week. Further

Next week they will travel to Leningrad for four exhibition matches against Soviet teens. But first things first. On Monday, that meant Ray Gabbert's first plane trip.

"Hopefully, I'll just fall asleep until we land and everything will be OK," said Gabbert, 14.

THE SLIGHT case of pre-flight jitters didn't seem to deter Gabbert's confidence though as the Franklin Junior High student brazenly predicted he would score a goal in each of the five games.

"I don't doubt that he'll do it," said head coach Bob Valeri when informed of his left-wing/center's prediction.

Coach not apologizing for mix-up

By Tedd Schneider staff writer,

Stingers' hockey coach Bob Valeri wasn't offering any apologies Monday for his role in fundraising efforts that were largely responsible for sending his teenage hockey players on a 10-day exhibition tour of Finland and the Soviet Union.

A last-minute dispute over the origins of the trip surfaced last week after nearly two months of door-to-door sales, dinner fundraisers and other promotions had raised more than $20,000, or about three-fourths of the cost of the tour.

While the team is based in Westland, nearly half its players are from Garden City.

Westland agreed to spend about $6,000 to send Westland City Council President Kenneth Mehl to meet with the mayors of Helsinki, Finland, and Leningrad, U.S.S.R., along with a two-person cable television crew to document the journev.

"If I felt I had anything to apologize for, I would say I was sorry," Valeri said in an interview at Detrolt Metropolitan Airport an hour before departing with the group.

"I DON'T KNOW how people could have been misled (about the tour). I've never done anything illegal with this club and I don't intend to start now."

City officials believe there were "misrepresentations" in the way the trip was presented to them in January.

When Valeri appeared at a Jan. 17 council meeting he told Mayor Charles Griffin and council members that the team had just received an "invitation" from the Soviets to travel to the U.S.S.R. for exhibition matches.

Although other American teams have gone to Russia, Valeri told the council this would be the first time a youth team had gone and that the Soviets had agreed to "subsidize" part of the trip, bringing the cost down to about $1,500 per person.

Westland city officials sald earlier they were under the impression that the Sovlet government had initiated the invitation and was going to pick up a portion of the cost.

The team did receive an invitation from a Soviet hockey association, Griffin said last week.

But a March 3 letter from a New York travel agent to Sam Corrado, the local community activist who organized much of the fundralsing, suggests that the "invitation" came after Valeri contacted the travel agent. The agent, Jerry Zaborowski of Sports Sales U.S.A., arranges European and Soviet tours for American sports teams in connection with Finnair Airlines.

Bob Valeri defends actions

SPORTS SALES U.S.A. advertises in a number of hockey periodicals.

Valeri admitted Monday that he made the first telephone call regarding the tour. But he said he was steered to Zaborowski by a Canadian tournament official following the Stingers gold medalwinning performance in Riverside, Ontario, not from a newspaper or magazine ad.

"The guy said our team played incredibly well and asked if we had ever played in Europe," Valeri said. "When I told him no, he gave me (Zaborowski's) name and phone number."

Valeri said the original intention of the fundraising effort was to provide enough money_ (about $6,000) for four team members who couldn't afford the tour to make the trip. "But other people got involved and it kind of got out of hand," he said.

He said he didn't halt the effort after meeting the initial goal because "I didn't think we were doing anything that was a fraud." "Besides," Valeri said, "wo thought we could use the extra money to help pay for some of the parents who were going to come along."

Another friend, Greg Panzl, said Allard "was not the type of person who would try to hurt anyone He was a leader, everyone looked up to him."

The two best friends also were remembered as good athletes and popular with girls. Along with friends Vendal and Tad Dennis, the four were crossing the road to meet some members of a girls softball team Allard had met earlier in the day.

For most of the Stingers, the trip is their first one out of North America.

"I'm really excited about meeting kids from other countries," said Joe Huber, 14, of Garden City. "I want to see what the customs are, how they are different than us."

Brian Cronan, 15, of Canton Township wonders if Soviet teens are going to like, or even know about, the heavy metal music that he listens to through his portable tape player as he waits to board the plane.

"This is a little different," said Louie Tallerico, a 15-year-old center who has traveled with the team before. "It's not like going to Riverside (Ontario), or even Colorado.

"WE'RE GOING to be halfway across the world."

The experience should be a wonderful one, said Dan Cronan, Brian's father. "To sample the culture, especially in a place like the Soviet Union that is mostly a mystery to these kids, is going to be something." Brian is putting together a scapbook with newspaper articles and other mementoes to document the trip.

Cronan, who along with wife Betsy Cronan was at the alrort to see their son off, said there were no worries about Brian traveling by himself. He spent 12 days in Quebec on a hockey tour once before.

For Mike Pease, 15, the trip is a family affair. His mother, a sister and brother are joining him on the tour.

"It's nice to be able to share all this with my family as it happens instead of waiting until I get home," said Pease, who plays right wing.

For Garden City resident Keith Oliver, the trip took on a different perspective Sunday. Oliver, a 15year-old forward, will watch the onice action from the bench after breaking his right ankle in a pickup basketball game less than 24 hours 'Our style is more hard-nosed, and I think the first part of the game our kids could be in trouble trying to keep up with the skaters on the other side. "OUR STYLE is more hard-nosed, and I think the first part of the game our kids could be in trouble trying to keep up with the skaters on the other side," Valeri said.

"But I think the kids will pick it up and adapt."

"They're really pumped up for this whole trip and so am I," the coach said.

Police said the break-in occurred between 7:15 and 9:05 p.m. while nobody was home. The thief apparently entered the house by forcing open the front door, police said.

Abused women finding First Step Shelter helps change lives

By Diane Gale staff writer

He put his hands around her neck and the woman was convinced he would kill her.

"I was really afraid of him when he would drink and use drugs," said the woman last week at First Step, a shelter in western Wayne County for abused women and their children.

At the shelter, young boys run down the hall, too busy playing to notice visitors while "Lost in Emotion" plays on the radio and the. aroma of baking dough fills the kitchen.

The shelter looks, smells and sounds like most homes. That is, until you listen a little closer to stories of the battered women and their children.

"I thought I could get through it on my own," the woman, who asked not to be identified, said.

"I had to say to myself whatever I have to go through it has to be by myself and my mate."

SHE REALIZED nothing would change in the relationship. Contributing to those beatings were alcohol, drug use and jealousy, she said.

The woman returned home from work one night recently and "knew something was wrong." A fight started when her mate questioned her about where she was a night earlier in the week, she said.

was thinking how am I going to get out of the apartment without him jumping on me."

The argument became more heated and he threatened her repeatedly. Then he put his hands around her neck. "I thought this guy is really trying to kill me," she said.

He went to the bathroom and she ran out of the house, but he caught her and dragged her back. A neighbor called police.

She spent the night at her pastor's house and the following day her welfare social worker suggested calling First Step.

"I'm thankful for First Step, because without it I don't know what I would have done," she said. She wants to make changes in her life and "that was my first step," she sald.

She can stay at the shelter for 30 days. During that time she has to look for independent housing and make decisions about what she plans to do.

A LOT of the women are on welfare and are emotionally as well as physically beaten, said Judy Imus, First Step counseling coordinator. Sometimes they believe there's no choice but to go back to the abusive men.

"He makes promises to change," Imus said. "And she wants to belleve that this time he'll do it."

Spouse abuse affects one out of every three Michigan families, said

Judy Ellis, First Step executive director.

And unless there's intervention; the problem will continue to snowball, she said. Ninety-three percent of children who witness violence will abuse or be abused, she said.

"We try to empower women to. take charge of their own lives," Imus said, "The women come from all socio-economic levels, races and coltural levels. There is help available."

Ellis said First Step doesn't encourage women to press charges, leave the home or stay.

Whether they're ready to leave the home or not, First Step can help, said Imus explaining that in addition to providing a shelter, the agency acts as a referral service.

FIRST STEP assigns the women and their children to a counselor.

Last Wednesday there were eight women and 14 children in the shelter.

"We try to make it as much like a home as possible," said Ellis, pointing out the kitchen and laundry rooms. Foster grandparents visit the children.

"Traditionally children in shelters are considered second class," said Ellis, adding First Step believes mothers and their children are a unit.

Murals depicting Easter bunnies hang on the wall.

"The art some of the kids draw is enough to rip your guts out," Ellis said. "One had a guy coming at the mother with a knife."

Framed cross stitch hangs on the wall; Mickey Mouse smiles over one doorway.

The agency operates from private donations that come from community organizations, the state department of Social Services, United Foundation and other groups.

Even a playground set was do-nated, Ellis said.

"We've come a long way in the past few years. People are recognizing the problem. We have a long way to go."

Services are growing First Step, a non-profit organization dealing with domestic violence, is expanding its services to help woman who have been sexually abused by strangers.

"Right now there are limited services for victims of sexual assault in western Wayne County and Downriver communities," said Judy Ellis, First Step executive director.

"We're already dealing with people who come to us as part of a Ellis said. "We're adding the service to help the sex assault (by a stranger). We're beginning to do that minimally and we're asking communities to support us."

Another push is to inform police, children and abuse victims of options, said Judy Ellis, First Step executive director.

that's what he built, said Blauet. The plumbing is also inadequate. "We have quite a few backups," Blauet said. There is also a lack of places for animals to stay while their cages are being cleaned.

During a building tour, Blauet pointed out the room where animal dishes are washed.

The sink and some of the ceiling tiles had been damaged by leaks in the roof. Present kennels have no ventilation, important for the prevention of airborne diseases like canine kennel cough, and upper respiratory problems in cats.

Room for wildlife, the occasional birds, opossums, or larger animals like horses or ponies brought in, is at a premium.

The new shelter was designed to accommodate all of these, and a few more special functions.

There'll be a box stall for the larger animals. There'll also be an isolation ward for sick animals where they can be treated and returned to the adoption section. A special wildlife section is also planned, with kennels inside and out - possibly for foxes. Not that they've had any yet, but "we want to be ready in case we do have them," Blauet said.

There'll also be a place with a pool, for reptiles.

THE CURRENT ROOM for the cold-blooded critters is a catchall. Surplus cages and empty boxes are stashed in among the bricks and a blue plastic kiddle pool is provided for turtles, snakes, lizards and baby alligators that outgrow their cuteness. People have even turned in iguanas at other MHS shelters, Blauet sald.

"We really tried to think of everything, for any animal we might get in," Blauet said, "but we don't encourage people to adopt exotic animals." They're too hard to place, and people can't take care of them.

Blauet hopes to address this problem with after-hours animal care clinics in the new classroom.

It'll be a starting point for tours by school and Scout groups, and a place for educational talks about animals and how to care for them, Blauet sald.

The clinic is open to the public and provides medical as well as preventive services for non-shelter animals.

For information about the shelter, pet adoption or donations to the society, persons may contact Blauet at 721-7300.

Fast-food outlets say they don't fear new wage plan

By C.L. Rugenstein staff writer

The proposal to raise the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 an hour by 1991, just passed in the U.S. House of Representatives, is welcome, and, some feel, long overdue legislation.

But critics of the bill are concerned about its possible effect on the economy.

Opponents fear the higher minimum wage could reduce the number of jobs - some studies have suggested by 275,000 - at the minimum wage level, especially at fast food restaurants.

"I would say not," said Karen Gryllis, of Tubby's, Inc. department of operations. "We depend a lot on the teenage work force and we'll continue to do so."

Gryllis said there is a lack of workers to fill positions still available in Tubby's Submarine Shops, and said the chain already pays close to the proposed minimum rate.

"The starting rate varies from store to store, but it's up around the $4 level," Gryllis said, "We'd love to see all sorts of people come in to ap-them eliminate jobs.

"We'll have to deal with higher rates. Some stores might not be able to make their profits that traditionally they may have made," because of the rate increase, he added.

"People have believed that if you're a fast food place you make vast amounts of money," Terry said. "That's not necessarily so."

Terry noted stores with a lower volume of business as an example.

"Because they don't make that much, the minimum wage like will cut into their profits." Individual owners of small stores will probably be hardest hit, Terry said, because they'll probably have to cut back on jobs.

"There are two sides of the coin,"said Tom Lanoue, an area manager in Pizza Hut's district office. "Labor is a large chunk of the ple right now, as far as being profitable, and that's what we're in business for."

Lanoue echoed Gryllis' comment on the shrinking labor force. "There's not a whole lot to pick and choose from."

Lanoue speculated that technology

ON THE other side of Lanoue's coin is the fact that Pizza Hut already has hired a lot of people at close to President George Bush's proposed minimum wage of $4.25 ber hour.

The House rejected Bush's rate in favor of the $4.55 rate. Bush's proposal also included a subminimum rate of $3.35 an hour for six months for new employees with or without experience.

Lanoue said that service people, or employees who receive tips, hire in at less ($2.50 an hour) but are guaranteed the minimum wage. If they don't make at least minimum wage per hour, Pizza Hut makes up the difference, Lanoue said.

But "tipped employees make around $10 an hour" now, Lanoue said. If the minimum wage goes up, it would be a $1 an hour raise for them.

The proposed minimum wage hike is just that now, however, a proposal. It still has to pass the Senate, and then face the threat of a veto by President Bush.

Proposal could settle suit against university

Diploma denied over false charge, student says

By Kevin Brown

staff writer

A former student's lawsuit against the University of Michigan-Dearborn could be settled in the next few days.

Both Kevin Evans, former editor of the Michigan Journal, the university's student newspaper, and a spokeswoman for the university agreed that the lawsuit likely would be settled soon.

Evans, 25, of Livonia originally filed three lawsuits against his alma mater. They stemmed from the university's denial of his diploma and grade transcripts after officials claimed Evans was involved with vandalism at the newspaper office in May 1987.

"I should know in the next couple of days whether they'll accept our settlement offer," said Evans, who described 90 percent of the vandalism alleged by the university as "total fabrication."

THE SETTLEMENT "would give me my degree and allow me to participate in the graduation ceremonles, which I have not been allowed to do," said Evans, who currently manages a Southfield restaurant and plans to attend graduate school. A college spokesman said Evans was sent his diploma following the winter 1988 semester, Evans said he never received it.

In a lawsuit filed last May in the state Court of Claims - which hears suits against state institutions such as UM-Dearborn - Evans charged he was libeled when former Dean Joseph Wright said Evans admitted to "certain violations" related to the vandalism at the newspaper offices.

Debbie Kowich, a law clerk with the university's legal department, said both sides recently agreed to dismiss that lawsult.

Robert Columbo ruled against Evans in a second lawsuit. The judge found the university could withhold his diploma - even though Evans had completed his graduation requirements.

Currently, the 1981 Livonia Stevenson High graduate has a lawsuit pending in U.S. federal court, in which he alleges his civil rights were violated by the university.

What has the experience taught him? "I've basically learned that the

In February, Wayne Circuit Judge cliche 'You can't fight city hall' is probably closer to a law than a cliche," Evans said. "It's very hard to fight a governmental institution.

"They have the money, the resources and the people, all of which I don't have."

While he won't detail how much pursuing the lawsuits is costing, Evans said, "It isn't cheap."

Before the incident surrounding vandalism at the student paper, Evans had on occasion run afoul of university officials during his one-year tenure as editor.

One incident that won international attention involved a contest he staged asking students to predict the number of fires set on devil's night in Detroit.

"At this point I am definitely considering going to law school," said Evans who originally planned to seek a master's degree in journalism.

"I really, truly, deeply miss writ-· ing. I hope I will get involved in it once again."

Assault weapon demand strong despite ban

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

Proponents of gun control view it as a first step. Opponents hope it's not the beginning of a trend.

Spurred on by national outrage over increased drug-related violence and mass killings, the Bush administration earlier this month indefinitely suspended importation of semiautomatic assault weapons.

Among the weapons affected is the AK-47, an assault rifle used in January to kill five children and injure 30 others in a Stockton, Calif. schoolyard.

Most local gun shop owners, fearing negative publicity, view the whole issue of gun control as "too sensitive to discuss." But the manager of an established Livonia gun store said that despite the changing political climate, business is good.

"Business is very strong. We pull (customers) from Livonia, Farmington Hills, Plymouth, Redford," said Roger Little, manager of Shooters Service at the corner of Six Mile and Merriman roads.

"Good gun shops - well stocket. and knowledgeable - are few and far between. There's not one on every corner," Little said.

The publicity surrounding Bush's ban on assault weapons has created a tremendous artifical demand for the weapon, Little said.

"All the collectors want them. It's that same philosophy, you tell people they can't have something and they want it," he sald.

"WHEN THE ban went into effect (March 14) the merchandise was gone - imports had already dried out. This type of merchandise had been scarce for months." Little said that no matter what happens, he believes firmly in the right of individuals to own guns. "I was raised around the proper handling of guns. Hunting and archery are things I've always done," Little said.

SGT. Alan Marble of the law enforcement division of the state Department of Natural Resources in Lansing, said a growing interest in paramilitary things like camouflage gear has made semiautomatic weap-ons popular with some hunters.

"Some are patterned to look like fully automatic weapons. It's a real adrenalin raiser. The Rambo movies and some television series have put emphasis on sophisticated firepower. But we haven't had many actual violations.

"State law prohibits the use of any semiautomatic shotgun or weapon with more than six rounds," Marble said.

"Experts say the bolt action rifles, traditional deer hunting rifles, have the highest degree of consistent accuracy."

REGARDING THE Stockton massacre, "(gunman Patrick Purdy) had seven tangles with California law," Little said. "He was never jailed. He was convicted and plea bargained down to misdemeanors. It never should have happened in the first place. Like the NRA (National Rifle Association), I believe we should go after criminals.

"Things are getting out of hand.

Government and the courts are laying blame where it doesn't belong," Little said.

HOWEVER, MANY law enforcement officials believe that going after criminals would be easler with increased gun control.

"I think control on the national level is a step in the right direction," Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano said. "Frankly, assault weapons are not for hunting, they're for killing people. Our officers are being outgunned, especially on drug raids."

Calling the import ban on assault weapons "a step in the right direction," Westland police Lt. Michael Frayer said he's not in favor of a total ban but he wants a mandatory waiting period before a handgun can be bought.

A PROSPECTIVE handgun owner has to obtain a permit from the community where he or she lives. To meet state requirements, they must not have been convicted of a felony in the previous eight years nor judged mentally incompetent.

"We check our own files and then run through the state computer," Lt. Robbin Crosby said.

"My personal opinion is that there should be a waiting period of at least 30 days," Crosby said. "We've had people come in, get the permit, purchase immediately then go out and shoot themselves. With 30 days, they'd have time to think about it."

The Law Enforcement Information Network would reveal criminal charges in other states, he said.

Once a purchase permit is obtained, the buyer can pick up the gun. The gun must be registered via the local police department or county sheriff's office. A fingerprint of the owner is taken.

HANDGUN PERMITS have remained constant in most western Wayne County communities throughout the last two years.

Ficano said the sheriff's department issued 613 handgun permits in 1988, up only one from 1987.

Other western Wayne County communities that record gun permits include:

• Westland, 752 permits in 1988 compared to 714 in 1987.

• Livonia, 508 permits in 1988 compared to 646 in 1987.

• Plymouth Township, 188 in 1988, which is the first year records were kept. By Plymouth, 50 in 1968 compared to 41 in 1987. • Canton Township, 628 in 1988

Redford Township only issues concealed weapons permits (66 in 1988); purchase permits must be obtained through the county.

Garden City does not keep records on gun permits issued.

"(Gun buyers) could also be processed through the county sheriff's department," said Westland police Lt. Alex Wilson, chief of the record's bureau, which processes the permits. "I'm not dissatisfied with the manner in which we review and process for permits," he said. "Personally, I don't like or own guns."

Area reps will seek tougher penalties for armed criminals

On the national level, five bills have been introduced calling for controls on semiautomatic assault weapons.

The most far reaching would require current owners of certain assault rifles, carbines and pistols to turn in their weapons. Other measures would simply ban the sale of certain assault weapons and current owners would have to register their firearms.

U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, will co-sponsor a bill with U.S. Rep. John D.; Dingell, a downriver Democrat, increasing gun related penalties.

"It would increase penalties for the use of a semiautomatic firearm or short barrelled shotgun during the commission of a violent or drug related crime," said Gary Cates, who works as an aide to Pursell.

"CURRENT penalties for use of a machine gun or silencer is 30 years, no parole, for first offense and life imprisonment without release for a second offense," Cates said. "Apparently this bill would add to that category semiautomatic weapons with a 10-round clip or more and sawed off shotguns."

Cates was unsure when the bill will be introduced. Congress is currently in recess.

In the 101st Congress, several handgun bills were-introduced: HR 128, mandatory registration; HR 993, to ban guns not suitable for sport; HR 1361, to restrict possession of Saturday Night Specials; and HR 1402, to set up a crime victims fund with handgun excise taxes.

HR 467 is on hold for the moment. Sponsored by Rep. Edward F. Feighan, D-Ohio, it would set a walting period for the purchase of handguns to allow time for a criminal background check on the prospective buyer.

The Brady amendment was replaced in the final version of the drug bill by a provision directing the Justice Department to develop a system that would allow gun dealers to determine whether a would be purchaser was a convicted felon and thus ineligible to buy a gun.

Feighan and other gun control proponents are waiting for the attorney general's report, due in November, before pushing their bills.

(R,W,G-7A)+9A Auto task force credited for declining thefts

By Mary Rodrigue staff writer

An auto theft task force aimed at closing down chop shops, nabbing ring leaders and putting them behind bars is being credited with a sharp decline in auto thefts in western Wayne County,

Five of seven communities polled reported drops in auto theft-in-1988 ranging from 6 to 20 percent. Of the two that reported increases, Canton Township was up just 1 percent. The other, Garden City, reported a whopping 57 percent increase and local police officials were at a loss to explain why. But officials pointed out that in 1986, Garden City recorded 155 car thefts (10 more than in 1988) so 1987 figures (82) appear unusually low.

Police officials generally had high praise for the efforts to curb auto theft.

"I think the task force is doing a great job," said crime prevention officer Bob DeVore of the Redford Township police, where auto thefts dropped off 16 percent from 1987 to 1988 — the first full year the task force team was in operation.

"They're out there in unmarked cars with surveillance efforts, impacting on high target areas." DeVore also credited Neighborhood Watch programs for the drop. "Awareness is greater. People are keeping their cars locked and off the streets."

The highest incidence of auto thefts in Redford Township are shopping centers in the extreme north and south ends, at Seven Mile and Grand River and at Telegraph and West Chicago, respectively.

POLICE spokesmen for several cities report the worst areas for auto theft are adjacent to major thoroughfares, such as the Jeffries Freeway through Redford and Livonia and 1-275 in the Plymouth/Canton area, which gives car thieves, easy gelaway routes.

Just like previous years, General Motors cars continue to be the most popular target of thleves. Experts said that's due to interchangeability of parts; GM sells the most cars so the market for parts is highest; it makes sporty cars that are popular and have higher accident rates, thus the greater demand for parts.

Lt. Bob Commire of the Plymouth police credits the task force with working wonders. Five (less car thefts) doesn't seem like a lot, but it's a drop of 20 percent."

In Westland, Lt. Michael Frayer credits his city's drop in car theft to a combination of the departments increased attention to the problem and its involvement with the consortium. Westland supplies an officer, Scott Fetner, to the 12-member team.

THE WESTERN Wayne Auto Theft Task Force is commanded by Lt. Sandy Miller of the Michigan State Police.

Headquartered in Canton Township, the team includes seven officers from the state police, and one each from the communities of Westland, Wayne, Romulus, Northville and Northville Township. Although not every western Wayne community contributes money or manpower, project director John Santomauro. chief of Canton Township public safety, said "we basically serve all of western Wayne County. The nature of the crime doesn't allow us to pick and choose."

Part of the reason the task force is making such an impact is because auto theft is multi-jurisdictional, Miller said.

"Auto theft is big business. We're here to put them out of business.

"Auto thleves are so mobile. We have the expertise and the manpower to get at the auto theft rings who are doing the majority of the crime. Hopefully, we're beating them at their own game."

To date, the team has arrested 69 people resulting in 154 charges and has recovered more than $2 million in stolen vehicles.

"I have nothing but positive things to say about the concept idea. There's no way people in the state can get better use of their money," Miller sald.

THE TASK force was created with a $250,000 state grant in August 1987. Canton provides a facility and financial management of the grant. The consortium grew through 1988, which was a very successful year for the task force.

Last June it closed down a chop shop in Canton and recovered $130,000 in parts and seven new cars reported stolen. Also last June, the task force made a raid at a gravel pit at 1-275 and Ecorse Road, recovering 19 stolen trucks worth $750,000.

In 1989, the task force operating budget is $322,366.

"Our main source (of revenue) is through the Auto Theft Prevention Authority (ATPA) and forfeitures," Miller said. The ATPA, enacted by state legislation, sets aside $1 from each insured motorist in the state.

Miller said that Wayne County has assigned two prosecutors exclusively to prosecute auto theft rings, which she sees as a boon because the issue is so complex.

"Jail time is more likely now than in the past," Miller said.

She cited a 65 year old man convicted in a car theft ring case that was sentenced from two to 10 years in prison.

"I don't know if that would have happened in the past. The prosecution worked with us hand in hand."

Many of the investigations come out of the departments the task force services. Another project that has helped is Help Eliminate Auto Thefts (HEAT), a tip line that rewards tips that lead to successful prosecutions. The toll free line 800-242-HEAT is open 24 hours a day.

ID THE Stingers hockey team get stuck by unsportsman-like conduct by its coach? It looks like it.

Opinion

Coach Bob Valeri should be sent to the penalty box for sucking Westland city officials and community leaders into promoting the team's trip to Finland and the Soviet Union and raising more than $20,000 for the $28,000 cost.

The team (made up of players from Garden City, Westland, Canton Township and other communities), Westland community leaders and parents left Monday afternoon for a 10-day series of exhibition games in Helsinki, Finland, and Leningrad in the Soviet Union.

But details on how the trip was initiated has left a bad taste in everyone's mouth.

While the city administration's investigation into the trip's origination isn't complete, there is enough information to conclude that Valeri misled the community into raising money for the trip.

Certainly, we don't dispute that the trip will be a once-in-a-lifetime experience for the players and their parents. It will give them a chance to see a fascinating part of our world, a chance that probably won't be repeated.

At the same time, the series of exhibition games will enhance Westland's civic image.

But that shouldn't get in the way of coaches acting as responsible, positive role models. Westland and Garden City parents promoted the fund-raising among co-workers.

VALERI touted the trip in January as a great opportunity for a local team to compete against teams from the Soviet Union, where "amateur" sports is big business and subsidized by the government.

But Valeri wasn't telling the whole truth when he said the team "was invited" to play in Finland completed soon so the community doesn't get and the Soviet Union, implying that the team was misled again.

A hockey coach misled everyone on how the Soviet Union invitation came to the team.

O&E Thursday, March 30, 1989

chosen for a Soviet government-sanctioned trip. The "invitation" was actually arranged by a New York travel agent after Valeri called to inquire about European hockey tours promoted by the agency.

Anyone with enough money can travel nearly anywhere in the world.

But just because a person or group doesn't have the money, doesn't mean the community is obligated to jump right in and subsidize the program.

A "smoking gun" piece of information comes in a letter to Sam Corrado, who got sucked into raising money for the trip as a civic matter, from the travel agent who is arranging the trip.

The agent, Jerry Zaborowski, manager of sports sales for Finnair, the national Finnish airline, wrote Corrado on March 3 that his company "initiated contacts in Leningrad with the Leningrad Trade Unions Sports Council. The Sports Council in turn agreed (invited) the Stingers hockey group to play 4.5 exhibition, friendly games in Leningrad."

IT NOW seems clear that the trip started out as a travel experience with the Soviet Union exhibitions added later instead of the way Valeri pictured it as the invitations coming first and the trip planned afterwards.

To prevent the problem from repeating itself, the city administration has started drafting guidelines to help it decide which deserving groups to sponsor. We hope the guidelines will be

And when I watch my son playing center for the Franklin High School Patriot football team, I'll think about Craig Allard.

Those are my memories of the two Franklin High School students. But there are plenty of others in Livonia with fond memories of the two high school athletes who died Saturday when struck by a car while crossing a road near Daytona, Fla.

Shea, a member of the basketball team, and Allard, a guarterback on the football team, were friends of my son.

And when I think about Allard, I can see him in his football uniform, with his hair hanging out the back of his helmet, bent over behind my son, ready to take the snap. I can see him

They're pretty pedestrian memories, but cars, sports and girls are the things that make up a teenager's life.

THEY ARE part of growing up. But learning to deal with death is unfortunately part of it, too.

So, when my son was awakened early Saturday morning by a friend calling to tell him the news, I reacted first as the parent of a teenager who needed to deal with death, and And those memories will have to then as a journalist responsible for getting the news in the paper.

I stood by and watched as my son was jerked out of his world of college basketball playoffs and girls and into a more adult world.

Speed limit Make it 65 mph and enforce it

ICHIGAN DRIVERS have voted with their feet - specifically, they have voted to repeal freeway speed limits. Moreover, they have put the State Police freeway patrols out of business.

We believe the law must match reality. And reality dictates that the majority of drivers disobey posted speed limits, particularly when it comes to the confusing urban 55 mph versus the rural 65 mph.

The goal is to put some sanity and effectiveness back into speed enforcement. The state should make the highway speed limit a uniform 65 mph — and than enforce it to the limit.

To understand the problem, just examine driving habits on surrounding freeways.

Start with western I-696 in Southfield, Farmington Hills and Novi. Construction to widen it to four lanes is under way, and the posted limit is 45 mph.

The actual speed limit is 65; That's the lower speed limit, of course. Anyone fool enough to go slower is likely to find a truck the size of a whale in his tailpipe.

As soon as traffic lightens a little, someone is bound to shoot by at 75 or 80.

Next, go to I-275 from Novi through Livonia, Westland and down to Monroe. For a decade, the prevailing speed has been 72. It's a fact of life, and many go faster.

On I-96 from Livonia into Detroit, drivers used to observe a 55 limit. No longer. The prevailing speed is higher than 60. Many travel at 75.

Ditto with 1.75, the Lodge, 1-94 and any we may have missed.

IN MYTHOLOGY, alias state law, we have a 65 speed limit on "rural" freeways and a 55 limit on "urban" freeways.

No one you'll meet in freeway flight paths can tell you the difference, but the experts in the Michigan Department of Transportation are supposed to know. They were to have posted the speed limits accordingly.

In truth, one rarely sees a speed limit sign on any freeway.

Two years ago, there was a big battle in the Legislature over whether to raise the speed limit to 65 rural and 55 urban. There were hair-splitting differences over how to define the difference and whether to include such state roads built to freeway specifications as US-23 and US-131.

The goal is to put some sanity and effectiveness back into speed enforcement. The state should make the highway speed limit a uniform 65 mph — and then enforce it to the limit.

serve that speeds are greater on urban freeways than out in the countryside.

State police have become nearly invisible. Except for a few highly publicized holidays such as Memorial Day, they rarely enforce speed limits. One hopes they are out doing more important things, like busting drug dealers or staking out bank robbers.

The federal government also has been lax.

Year after year, we heard stories from Washington that federal highway aid would be cut because more than half of Michigan drivers were consistently exceeding the 55 limit.

The fact is that we're driving faster than ever, the feds haven't cut a penny of aid, and they probably won't. Michigan drivers repealed federal law, too, with their feet.

DRIVERS ARE actually doing what comes naturally. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. explained it all in his scholarly lectures on "The Common Law" back in the mid-19th century.

The lifeblood of the law, Holmes said, is not logic but experience. More simply, the law isn't engraved in granite but is constantly modified by people to suit changing conditions.

Certainly Michigan drivers have produced a late 20th century final chapter for Holmes' tome by effectively repealing our democratic speed laws.

Michigan is, as many business speakers remind us, in an international market. No longer can Americans wrap their oceans around them in splendid isolation. We are witnessing the Europeanization of our freeways.

On the West German Autobahn, for example, there are no speed limits. You drive as fast as your car will carry you. If you have a status car like a Porsche or BMW, you go like a bat out of the nether world, for that is the natural right of dropping back to throw a pass.

And when I think about Shea, I can still see his tall, thin frame sitting on a couch, with an infectious grin on his face, talking to my son. He taught my son how to change a tire. My son didn't know how, and affect it had on the neighborhood.

SMART aims to continue good service

To the editor:

This letter is in response to one recently sent to Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara and Oakland County Executive Daniel T. Murphy from a person or person(s) identifying themselves as "SMART Riders from Oakland County."

The letter concerned the SMART (formerly SEMTA) Woodward Route and registered a complaint based on a misconception that SMART passengers will no longer be able to travel into downtown Detroit without transferring to Detroit Department of Transportation (D-DOT) buses at the State Fairgrounds, Because we at SMART are concerned that this misconception might reflect the feelings of many other residents of southeastern Michigan, I would like to address that issue.

The reorganization of public transportation in southeastern Michigan was developed and has occurred with one motivation only; that of providing convenient, safe, clean, efficient, reliable, and cost-effective public transportation to the residents of southeastern Michigan.

The members of our new board of directors are Wayne County Executive McNamara, Oakland County Executive Murphy, Chairman of the Macomb County Board of Commis-sioners Mark A. Steenbergh, Chairman of the St. Clair County Board of Commissioners Mary Ann Acclavatti, Oakland County Deputy Executive Patrick Nowak, Macomb County Commissioner Harold Grove, and Wayne County Deputy Executive Mi-chael Duggan. They have all ex-pressed their commitment both privately and publicly to improve public transportation in this region, and their direction to me has been to accomplish that goal.

It is with that direction in mind that I can assure you that there are no thoughts or plans, nor have there ever been, by our new board of dlrectors to implement a procedure that would require passengers to transfer from SMART to D-DOT at the State Fairgrounds, or at any other point along the Detroit city limits. If your bus route originated in the suburbs and travelled into the city of Detroit when the agency was known as SEMTA, it will continue to do so as SMART.

Any service change initiated by our new organization will be based on passenger consideration and input. All changes in routes will be improvements in our service offerings, designed to put better service on the road to more effectively address the needs of our riding public.

It is a boon for public transportation in this region that our top elected officials are directly involved with the governance of public transportation. The collective influence of these officials and the leaders of other counties serving on the board, means that public transportation in southeastern Michigan has a very promising future.

We stand ready to address any further concerns and criticisms from our riders, and we welcome comments and suggestions on how we can further improve bus service to the residents of southeastern Michigan.

State subsidy should be investigated

Michigan taxpayer dollars for Mazda training — fact or fraud?

As a taxpayer, voter and citizen of the state of Michigan, I demand a full accounting of $19 million Michigan taxpayer dollars used to subsi-dize training of Mazda Assembly employees in Flat Rock.

According to a copyrighted article in the Automotive News Feb. 13, 1989, employees of Mazda Assembly were quoted as saying: "It was protocol to record more training hours : than actual training; even if we cut + classes short, we'd put the same total training hours on the sheets to turn into the state."

The Blanchard administration owes Michigan taxpayers full documentation of what Mazda Assembly has done with every penny of the $19 million donated between May 1988 and March 1988. If evidence of fraud exists, proper legal action should be pursued.

Neighbors' actions calm racial fears

SOME JERK spray painted racial slurs on the home of a black woman who lives in Beverly Hills. A highly visible employee of another suburb has called us frequently to complain that one of our newspapers prints entirely too many pictures of black people:

Which person do you think contributes more to racial divisiveness in suburban Detroit? Which person do you think got the publicity?

The news stories, of course, centered on the Beverly Hills incident. Neighbors, to their credit, rallied to the woman's defense. They are angry, appalled and protective.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS have been downright feisty in heaping scorn on the vandal. That, too, is an improvement.

It wasn't that long ago that some communities, such as Lathrup Village, openly boasted that only whites and Christians were welcome. Times change. A year ago a black woman ran for, Lathrup Village Council. She lost, but that is the fate of many newcomers in Lathrup elections.

You can hope that the spray painting is no more than the work of a troubled soul. A white family also had a home sprayed with paint. Ditto for a car that someone thought was speeding through the neighborhood. Perhaps it is all the work of a single, paint-happy vigilante.

Lord knows, there are a lot of troubled souls out there. Several columnists at our newspapers infrequently receive work back in the mail with critical reviews inked around the margins.

These comments are never signed and rarely laudatory. They generally start out by suggesting the writer is terribly naive, a stupid liberal (a phrasing they believe to be redundant), or hell-bent for destroying their way of life.

. Then they take off on two or three favorite themes, usually blaming blacks for crime and drugs or else claiming that Jews are the only people to profit at Christmas or other such gibberish.

YOU GET those letters, you-sigh, you show them around and then you generally forget about them.

And then some jerk starts painting the word "nigger" on a home in a community that reveres its property rights. And you wonder what it must be like to be singled but for scorn by someone who knows you only by the color of your skin.

You hope that this person is part of a small, demented minority. But then you remember the phone calls from that city official who worried that pictures showing too many black faces might distort the true "balance" of his community.

That person, by the way, has never called to say there were too many pictures of white people in the paper.

The spray painter in Beverly Hills probably feels that the neighborhood will deteriorate if blacks start moving into the community. It is a belief that is fueled and nurtured by many until it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy.

But it is not just the spray painters who cover our communities with acoat of racial hatred.

The community canvas is also smeared by the picture-counters at city hall.

THE PRINCIPAL was feeling heat from the superintendent. Naturally he took it out on the teachers,

It's tough to get parents interested

"The six-week report cards are coming up," said the principal, "and I don't want any parents hollering at me, 'Why wasn't I told my kid is failing?' No surprises.

"So I want you teachers, at the four-week mark, to send letters to the parents of all kids who are having trouble. Invite them in for a conference."

Grumble, grumble, said my kinsman, who is one of the teachers in this junior high. But he did as the principal ordered. There was no compensation, of course, And he never did hear what supplies fund was raided for the postage.

"I sent out 68 cards," said the teacher, "and do you know how many of the parents contacted me? None. That's some batting average for the parents - zero for 68."

IT'S COMMON knowledge, with no need to cite professorial research, that there's a direct link between a kid's academic success and the interest of the parents.

So the teacher hit on an idea. Because it's no longer acceptable to spank kids, he would spank the parents when the kid goofed off.

Now, one has to be fair about this. The parent wouldn't be punished if the kid did the work and failed anyway.

Only the parents of kids who came to school a second time without notebooks, pencils and books, and the kids who were repeatedly absent without written excuses, would be punished.

MORE SERIOUS infractions required more serious punishment.

Although this occurred in a small city, the local bowling establishment had a computerized scorekeeping system in which a current was broken when the pin was' moved off its place.

The bowling lane proprietor was vice president of the board of education and fully cooperative with the teachers' efforts. He had the computer programmed so that, when a bad news message arrived from a teacher, the offending parent's bowling score was cut by 90 percent.

vere punishment, but it was public, and it occurred in a place where the parent's closest associates, as well as opposing teams, would be absolutely certain to know.

The other bowling patrons, their tongues loosened by a few beers, rubbed in the sait. "Haw, haw, your kid too weak to carry his own pencil? Hardy, har, your brat can't remember how to find the school?"

What the parent said to the kid in the privacy of the home we can only imagine.

~ INTERESTINGLY, the small city actually recorded a decrease in child abuse because parents began taking an active interest in sending their kids to school prepared.

It would be a lie to say that kids' IQs improved. The small city's genetic pool remained the same.

But there were marked improvements in state proficiency tests and vastly improved scholastic aptitude scores because finally the kids were coming to class prepared and paying attention.

With fewer student absences and missed assignments, teachers had more tests and book reports to correct. That was all right. The strain of reading 20 percent more book reports is considerably less than the strain of disciplining a kid or sending 68 useless warning letters to parents.

BY NOW you have guessed there's a certain April Foolery in this column.

The first five paragraphs, however, are fact - right up to the line about "zero for 68." The remainder is wishful thinking on the part of some educators.

Mass punishment doesn't work

Q: My son is in the eighth grade. In his class there are few boys and girls who are disruptive. The teacher has a lot of trouble with the class and when these few students become too unruly she takes it out on the entire class. For instance, last week they were noisy and disruptive so the teacher assigned an extra 10-page paper to all of the students. Not all of the students are acting out just four or five and I do not think this is fair.

A: What you have here is mass punishment as it is called in basic educational psychology. It occurs more frequently with new teachers who are struggling to develop classroom management skills, or said simply, class control. What we havehere is a teacher who is most likely being intimidated by a few students. Instead of isolating the acting-out children and dealing with each one individually the teacher is doling out discipline to the whole group in hope that peer group pressure by those who are there to learn will result in a classroom behavior modification. Frankly, it doesn't work.

Indeed, what occurs is not only do the students who are acting out know they are in control of the environment but the other students who are being punished for something they are not part of become very angry. Although the "innocent" students may suppress their feelings in class they will do a real verbal number on the teacher after the class is over to peers and parents.

The teacher obviously has to be more assertive and have a reasonable, fair classroom procedure to follow. Too many teachers of this nature get into what I call a "verbal tug-of-war" with students in which the conversation goes something like this.

"OK class, quiet down." Said over and over again that statement means nothing. The statement is (if Johnny is acting out) "Johnny you do not interrupt when Mary is talking." Unless the teacher specifies and pinpoints the acting-out students, a broad statement means nothing to young adults. Many school districts are aware of a program developed by a Dr. Lee Cantor called Assertive Discipline which can be of value for a teacher in this predicament.

In any case, until that teacher confronts specifically those who are acting out and until there is an undercan snowball resulting in learning

Therefore, mass punishment does not work and is a very weak substitute for sound class management. The bottom line is a well-structured, interesting program that motivates students under a teacher with well thought out, written lesson plans. The classroom that is stimulating is still the best adherent to impulsive, acting out, disruptive behavior.

Coming to grips with their pasts Men are less Incest leaves likely to talk lifelong scars on its victims

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Susan didn't understand why her father molested her.

Some 30 years later, she still really doesn't know why.

"I confronted him by phone just before Thanksgiving," said Susan (not her real name). "I talked to him briefly and asked him why.

"He said he was just passing the time." Secrets kept, a childhood one tries to forget.

That could sum up the feelings of most adults who are victims of incest - a memory that won't go away. And many go to great lengths to erase those images of their past. Some drink. Some do drugs. Some disassociate from reality. Some even try to commit suicide.

The traumatic memories of their childhood festering subconsciously usually are manifested in other behaviors.

Adult incest victims tend to suffer from low selfesteem. They have an inability to form trusting relationships. Some experience sexual disfunction.

The victims of incest are not limited to those who were abused by family members. Victims are also molested by highly trusted authority figures, such as clergy, teachers or police officers.

It's estimated that there are 40 million adults in this country who were molested as children. The majority of victims are women, according to experts. The majority of offenders are men.

More and more are beginning to seek help.

Adults who were molested as children often feel helpless, having nowhere to turn. But while society is about abuse By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Often incest is painted as a strictly feminist issue. But one woman believes that's a mistake.

Overlooked are adult men who were sexually abused themselves as children, says Parents United representative Terri Muessig. One of seven boys are molested by the time they reach 18, according to statistics.

And if 80 percent of the offenders are said to have been molested as children themselves, treating that population is crucial in stopping the cycle of incest.

'We need to look at this as not a female vs. male issue," Muessig said. "We need to look at this as children being hurt. We have to stop this.

"Like with treating women survivors, we need to let them know they are not alone. We need for men to step forward and say, 'Yes, I need help.' "

SEVERAL REASONS could explain why men might be reluctant to admit they were molested as children. For one, males are conditioned to be tough and not to discuss their feelings as youths.

Another reason is that many victims' groups consist mostly of women. They may uncomfortable at such meetings.

"What that's going to take is for some men stepping forward and being pioneers," Muessig said.

Dr. Lynn Reynolds has treated men who were molested as children. Homophobia or a fear of homosexuality is prevalent with men who were abused by another male, she said.

"A lot of the men I've treated have done different forms of sexual molestation themselves," Reynolds said, "perhaps trying to repeat the things that were done to them.

ANOTHER aspect of incest often overlooked are; males who were molested by their mothers, according to Muessig. The incidents are far less frequent, but are

"As a society, we're just coming to grips with that," Muessig said. "We hold motherhood in such high esteem as well we should be. But it's hard for us to believe that mothers or grandmothers can molest our children."

becoming increasingly sophisticated, incest, for the most part, is still something whispered about instead of discussed openly.

"IT'S REALLY a shame about the quietness of the whole thing," said Dr. Lynn Reynolds, who is chairwoman of the Institute Against Social Violence. "It should be brought out into the open to see who owns the problem."

Often, the victim thinks it's their problem. Even as adults, they blame themselves for what took place when they were children.

"I always thought it was my fault," Susan said. "Either I didn't say no enough or I didn't scream loud enough. Somehow I must have done something to make this person do this to me."

Susan, 31, remembers the sexual abuse from the time she was 11/2 years old. Her father continued to molest her until she was 9½ when her parents were divorced.

Susan first reported the abuse to her mother when she was 4. Both parents, though, were suffering from mental illness, she said, and her mother "wasn't really aware of everything that was going on around her."

"My father used that to his advantage," Susan said. For a few years, the abuse stopped. But when Susan was 7, it started again.

"There were a lot of times, if he was creeping around the house at night, she (her mother) used to take me in the bathroom and we would both sleep in there," Susan said. "It was the only door in the house with a lock on it."

Such stories are not uncommon for incest victims. With adults, though, the effects of suppressing the memories for many years is often more damaging.

Jon Conte of the University of Chicago's School of Social Service Administration has done studies on victims of incest. He recently completed a survey of 500 adults in treatment. His findings will not be complete until the summer.

IN PREVIOUS studies, though, Conte has found the severity of damage not only depended on the degree and duration of the abuse, but also the disclosure.

Therapy: On the road to recovery

By Larry O'Connor

A woman who looks to be in her 40s sits pensively in the dimly-lit corridor of the elementary school, puffing on a cigarette.

She's taking the first step.

But for many adults who were molested as children, seeking help is more like a leap of quantum proportions.

Along with individual therapy, group therapy is considered one of the most effective means of treatment for adults molested as children. They can come to grips with the past and get on with living a happy life.

One such group has recently started in Livonia. LIVE, which stands for Lay Incest Victims Emancipated, meets 7-9 p.m. Mondays (except holidays) at the Newman House Campus Ministry at Schoolcraft Community College.

The group that this woman in the hallway is attending for the first time is V.O.I.C.E.S. (Victims of Incest/ Sexual Abuse, Caring, Educating and Surviving), which meets on Wednesdays at Mother of Our Savior School in Detroit.

The program, though, encountered some funding problems and was discontinued for several weeks, but will start again in late April.

One unique feature of the V.O.I.C.E.S. program is the orientation process. Victims and offenders (not those people who actually perpetrated the abuse) are put together along with non-offending parents and other support people.

AT THOSE sessions, people who were molested as children can seek answers.

"At first thought, it sounds like a cruel way to treat victims," said Sharon Barksdale, ACSW, a psychotherapist who oversees some V.O.I.C.E.S. meetings. "But it's working."

One reason it's working is that victims can confront those responsible for sexual abuse.

Victims can then let loose feelings of anger, resentment, guilt and hurt. Offenders can see the pain they've caused.

Orientation usually last six to 10 weeks. Victims, offenders, parents and non-offending parents are then placed into separate specialized groups.

V.O.I.C.E.S. is the only comprehensive sexual abuse program in Wayne County. It designed to provide group therapy for each member of the family. The program is modeled after the Child Sexual Abuse Treatment Program developed by Henry Claretto, a California-based psychologist.

"Groups tend to be very powerful, yery dynamic," said Cheryl Bedrosian, director of V.O.I.C.E.S.

Resource guide helps families cope with mental illness

By Susan Buck staff writer

"I hold myself. I look over the cliff into space, nowhere. All that exists to me is a bird, two trees and the sun. Mental illness is total isolation for me. I don't have to deal with people or the reality of the system — having to work, having to eat, having to have structure."

Those are the words of Rosario Alvardo, 23, of East Lansing, who suffers from manic-depressive paychosis - periods of depression or excessive well-being, alternating with longer periods of relative normalcy. She has had numerous psychotic episodes and hospitalizations since 1983.

Her words and illustrations are contained in a 27-page booklet, Mental Illness: A Family Resource

AMI has more than 900 local affiliates. The booklet is written for and dedicated to families who have a relative with mental illness.

"Many of us learned the hard way about mental illness and the system of services available," 'Carol Rees, president of AMI of Michlgan, said in a letter to members. "That's why the State Alliance for the Mentally Ill of Michigan undertook this project. Our objective was to ease the pain experienced by caring, close relatives of mentally ill persons."

Included in the booklet are sections dealing with family and community concerns, crisis intervention, symptoms and kinds of mental illness, hospital commitment procedures, medications and financial considerations.

Dear D.H.

Since you have been interested in having your handwriting analyzed for quite some time, I will analyze it in today's column. However, I really need a longer sample of handwriting from which to work.

The pressure of your handwriting tells me you have the vitality to pursue those goals you have set for yourself.

There is an element of restlessness in this handwriting. And you do not seem completely satisfied with the status quo. At times there is a need for solitude so you can recharge your batteries. You enjoy peace and gulet.

Your nature is sympathetic and you share your skills and time with others. Your quick wit can be an asset in relationships with others.

Past experiences have not always been idyllic and have influenced your outlook on life. Some prejudiced feelings make it difficult for you to be receptive to the ideas and/ or views of others.

Yours is a sensitive nature. You sometimes take offense when you suspect personal criticism. However, you appear to cover this quite well. So few are probably aware of it.

It seems quite possible you may have some ability for making money in investments or something of this nature,

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are helpful. And feedback is always welcome.

Victims find adult life scarred by their pasts

"In other studies where adults seemed to do well, when asked, a majority reported that when they told, someone belleved them," Conte said,

Conte has also found that the closer the relationship between the victim and the offender, the more damage that is done.

Another study of children who were molested reported that 15 percent of the offenders were fathers and stepfathers and 25 percent were other relatives, which perhaps makes it understandable that adult survivors find it difficult to trust or maintain relationships.

They, too, become victims of rape or are battered wives.

"Mistrust goes two ways," Reynolds said. "There's no middle ground. Either they do not trust at all or become totally gullible and open to everything."

Susan is on her third marriage. She has yet to tell her husband about the sexual abuse her father inflicted on her as a child. She's been apprehensive for good reason.

"I told my first husband," she said. "He said, 'That was before me. Stop saying anything more. It doesn't concern me.' He became abusive after that.

"I told the second one. He said, 'I have other things going on in my life. This is something you have to work out with him."

When trying to work it out themselves, incest is not what brings the victim into the therapist. Usually, it's a problem indirectly relating to the abuse, such as alcohol/drug addiction.

REYNOLDS treats adults who were molested as children. She said denial is usually at the core.

"One way denial manifests itself is through addiction," she said. "By drinking, they hope they can obli-terate the memory."

In treatment, Reynolds said she doesn't come out and ask a client if they were victims of incest. Instead, she inquires about any past suicide attempts and gradually gets the client to disclose the abuse.

A large amount of relief comes when a victim can reveal an abusive childhood. Susan has seen psychiatrists and psychotherapists through the years. She always remembered the abuse, but "stuffed the actual feelings so far back."

Discussing her plight with other victims like herself in a AMAC (Adults Molested As Children) group brought those feelings to the surface. The group meets once a week at Haven, a domestic violence shelter in Pontiac. Susan said the meetings are usually very casual.

"I have seen psychiatrists and and I have seen psychotherapists," Susan said. "(The AMAC group) was like finding your best friend.

"You not only can feel sympathy. for one another, you can feel empathy. There is nothing that shocks she said. "He seemed to feel that he any of us or that offends any of us. It was the first time you could say something in front of people and they wouldn't get up and run away."

PART OF the treatment involves confronting those people who abused them. Susan has taken that step with her father.

"When I confronted him, I told: him how I felt. What it did to me," did wasn't wrong and he genuinely didn't think he hurt me so much.

"When I spoke to him, I told him" he would have to think about what he., did and I wouldn't talk to him until he did.

"Around Christmas time, I spoke to him again. He had nothing to say about it. So I told him not to call. In feel comfortable with that,"

Healing process starts with therapy

Understandably, orientation sessions can become very emotional and heated. Yet, surprisingly, the meetings are usually civil.

When the perpetrator tells them why they did it, the victims say, 'That's not good enough. That's not a good reason,' " said Moses Boone Jr., a psychotherapist who also helps conduct meetings. "They don't accept that at all.

"The perpetrator might say, 'I just did it.' You can say, 'What do you think now that you see this.'"

LIVE meetings consist of prayer or meditation along with educational presentations, such as films, books or speakers.

An hour is devoted to group sharing and support. A prayer closes the. meeting.

Group therapy is recommended for adults molested as children along with individual treatment. V.O.I.C.E.S. prefers people to have had one-on-one therapy before entering the program.

Then the real healing can begin.

"I've seen people come in sobbing -who can't get out what they are feel--ing," Boone said. "By the end, not" only have they quit sobbing, they're being supportive to others.

"That's the best part of the group." They support one another."

Dressed for success. Career dressing. Investment dressing. Call it what you will, but when it comes right down to it, there's at, least one good suit in a career woman's wardrobe.

It's the suit that projects a professional aura at business meetings, job interviews and the like and has a classic look that stays in style long after the end of a fashion season, be it navy blue, charcoal gray or basic bláck in color.

It's a suit that Bowdon of Bowdon, Ga., has been manufacturing for 10 years, a suit that has put the American manufacturer in the forefront of women's suiting.

"It's a lot different than the merchandise on Seventh Avenue," said Sondra Jones, suit and coat buyer for Jacobson's. "It's not geared to a fashion trend and it's not trying to set a fashion trend.

"It looks more classic and basic in appearance, but it has the construction you would find in a man's suit."

BOWDON, KNOWN for its men's sults, got into women's suiting in the '70s when the tailored look was big in women's wear. The firm followed the lead of other manufacturers, turning out suits for career women. But unlike other women's wear

YW, Livonia Youth get Target awards

The YWCA of western Wayne County and the Livonia Youth Assistance Program are among 21 arts and human services organizations in metropolitan Detroit to receive grants from Project Family, a community service organization sponsored by Target stores.

The YWCA has received $9,000 to fund its Child and Family Neighborhood Program. The Livonia Youth Assistance Program received a $4,000 grant.

The Child and Family Neighborhood Program approaches parent education by strengthening family support systems for early child rearing. It is an early intervention program designed to prevent abuse and neglect and focuses primarily on economically and socially disadvantaged families. CFN places small groups of parents and children, ages 3 months to 3 years, together in weekly sessions with a trained facilitator. The, groups practice parenting and child development skills. During one part of the session, parents and children are separated. The children interact among them-selves, while the parents discuss rel-

The Livonia Youth Assitance Program will use its grant money for a prevention program for at-risk youth and families, director Susan Jimenez said.

Funding for the second and third years of the program will depend on a Target review of the programs' implementation.

Target has committed more than $350,000 over the next three years for the grants program.

"There are a number of well run non-profit organizations in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties with excellent programs meeting real family needs," said George Hite, Target's vice president for public and community affairs. "They deserve and need our support."

> suits. It is, according to Young, "taking a flat piece of goods and putting it into a garment that has shape."

> "It doesn't hang limp on the hanger and it conforms to a woman's body," he said. "Women are more serious about dressing for work today and they'll wear a sult until they get tired of it."

WITH THAT in mind, Bowdon uses plenty of basting to help give the suit shape. It uses three-plece sandwich collars and a chest plece - three pieces of cloth basted to the inside of the jacket and attached with bridal tape - to make the lapels lay flat for the life of the garment.

It also builds in alterability into the suit. Each suit can be enlarged two sizes because of features like telescoping sleeves.

"If you don't have those sorts of things, then you have a perishable piece of goods," Young said. "And that's what distinguishes us from other women's wear manufacturers.

THERE AREN'T many differences between the women's suits Bowdon manufactures loday and those it made 10 years ago.

"(The changes are) nuances like the width of the lapel or skirt length, depending on the market," Young said.

"We don't do anything with short skirts," Young said: "Women who want this style, don't want short skirts. They feel better with the longer skirt."

Jones, who is responsible for selecting the Bowdon suits for Jacobson stores. looks at the silhouettes and fabrics in making her choices. Wool and wool blends have been a strong product for the department store.

HOWEVER, THE most popular suit is Bowdon's Dacron polyester. The most popular color is navy blue," followed by charcoal gray, black, tan and medium gray.

That suit can cost $210. On the higher end of the price scale are silk suits, which can cost up to $350. The price might seem high, but considering its life span, Jones sees it as a good investment.

"It's the kind of suit that you buy now and it is in style forever," she said. "They're not setting any fashion trend here and we're very pleased to a resource of this kind available to us.

Church closings unlikely here

By C. L. Rugenstein staff writer

It could happen here, in western Wayne County. Catholic church closings like those in Detroit are always a possibility, said Jay Berman, director of communications for the Archdiocese of Detroit.

But "Is there any reason to believe in our lifetime any parish in Livonia will close? No?" Berman said. A church closing would have "more to do with Livonia than with the Catholie Church."

Berman pointed out a distinct parallel between the life of a person and the life of a parish.

"Every parish is born, has an adolescence, maturity, old age, and then it dies," he said. "Sooner or later, every parish will die," like the first century churches of Thessalonika or Corinth for example, Berman said. Churches closings in Livonia for instance would have "more to do with the society and culture in Livonia," Berman said. "Whatever the future of Livonia is, the church will share it."

Berman explained that parishes have a definite geographical territory. Events that impact the neighborhoods of the parish, impact the church, Berman sald. Disintegrating neighborhoods, Catholics moving out to be replaced by non-Catholics and aging parishioners are some of factors that would cause changes in parish dynamics, Berman said.

IT AFFECTS church economics, basically, Berman said. A church with no young families would be unable to celebrate the full range of sacramental life - baptism, first Communion, confirmation, confession, marriage, anointing the sick and last rites, Berman said. In addition, parishes with a handful of older members on fixed incomes would no longer able to support rarely used church buildings, like schools.

If five freeways were to converge in Livonia, it might bring about these conditions, Berman noted. And if great tracts of residences were taken for industrial development, or there was a dramatic shift in population, it would affect the life of the parish by decreasing the population.

All of these factors contributed to the declining parishes, and eventual church closings in Detroit, Berman said.

Some parishes were immediately destroyed by freeway construction - "In some cases it reduced parishes by 80 percent," Berman said.

The prosperity that built Livonia depleted Detroit, he also noted.

"Interstates allowed people to get out - migrate to the suburbs," he said. Men and women didn't need to live near their jobs. "It was the ful-fillment of the American dream, to have a house, car, yard, cocker spaniel," Berman said.

"ADDED TO that, and we do ac-knowledge it, there was also racial tension" Berman said. Not everytension," Berman said. Not everybody, but some people "wouldn't live with people of another color," he said.

It all demonstrates that a parish lives with the society it's in, Berman said — "Its future is the very closely to its neighborhood."

How does that translate for suburban parishes?

"Some parishes in Livonia/ and the western areas" not to mention Oakland County, "are still experiencing rapid growth," Berman said. "Every week more families are still joining."

They should be around for quite a while yet, if what Berman said holds true.

"They don't ask if you're effective or efficient. They don't ask if you're accomplished or productive. They ask if you're horny and if you drink. It's crazy. We've become a nation of voyeurs,'

Peter Secchia, a Grand Rapids businessman, supposedly said this after being forced to open his personal life to examination by the FBI before being presented to Congress by President George Bush for appointment as ambassador to Italy.

The background checks for political appointees have become so extensive that filling out forms, detailing all work experience, naming all work supervisors, listing birth dates of all relatives, living and dead, as well as divulging personal finances, can keep, as in Peter Secchla's experience, a lawyer busy for weeks.

Some people insist that this detail of personal life will discourage many qualified people from serving in public office. Beyond the sheer effort required to gather information from all features of one's past, there is also the reluctance to open up one's whole life for public review and fudgment.

THE DISTINCTION between pub lic and personal is not fixed, and in the political arena, one person's justification for action might well be the reason for another's condemnation

Others insist that this attention to public and personal character will establish a climate for public responsibility and that what cannot the bast of public review stand should not surprise us. Both elected and appointed public officials have been charged with ethical misconduct in recent years and trust in public administration has been seriously threatened.

What might be far more important than the investigation of personal and public responsibility and the attendant issues of privacy and propriety is the extended public interest in matters of impropriety.

Peter Secchia said "we have become a nation of voyeurs." Impropriety receives more attention that propriety and the explanation is always the same It is more interesting to the public.

The story of the law enforcement officer who went to see "Oh, Calcutta" nine times before he could make a judgment about its violation of public laws is surely apocryphal, but It does carry a message. Our prootcupation with matters inappropriate says as much about ourselves as it says of others

YEARS AGO, Dr. Dudley White, personal physician to President Dwight Eisenhower, said "the best way to stop malpractice lawsuits in to stop malpractice."

County has summer jobs

Wayne County will offer summer maintenance and clerical jobs to approximately 450 young adults through the 1989 Michigan Youth Corps and the Wayne County Department of Public Services.

"These program provide meaningful employment to a great number of young people who otherwise would not have that opportunity," said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara.

"Their involvement in community service not only helps them personally, but also produces a higher quality environment for everyone in Wayne County."

Youth Corps jobs will start June 1, last about two months, and pay from $3.35 to $5.50 per hour.

The 220 seasonal service worker jobs offered by the Department of Public Services require that appli-cants live in Wayne County (including Detroit and downriver communitles) and be 18 years or older. Disposal of personal items can split family

By Janice Brunson staff writer

When Pearl Thiry died at age 69 on Jan. 4, her family was certain she had known that death was imminent.

Christmas, Pearl's favorite time of year, was bigger and better than ever before. Pearl showered her five children and four grandchildren with gifts. And just days before dying, she called each of them, professing her love, sharing nuggets of Pearl-styled wisdom and recalling warm memories.

But Pearl's greatest legacy is quite possibly the manner in which she distributed her most cherished personal items before dying.

"She wanted to come to your house so she could see her things and watch you enjoy them while she was alive," said granddaughter Bridget Moran, whose Canton home contains pieces of Pearl's bric-a-brac and furniture.

It is Pearl's charm bracelet that best signifies a sense of family unity and harmony. The bracelet, containing charms gathered through the years, reflects family history. Pearl dismantled it charm by charm, giving the most appropriate to each member of the family.

Moran, for example, an office receptionist in Plymouth, received a miniature golden typewriter. Moran's brother, Michael Lucas of Canton, received a watch fob with a treasure chest. Lucas is a business major at Eastern Michigan Universi-

But Pearl's way is not necessarily

"IT DREW BLOOD,"said Bloomfield Hills attorney Patricia Donaldson of a second-hand, three-speed bicycle valued at $25. The bike-was part of an estate she recently helped settle.

Donaldson, a public administrator since 1970 for estates without heirs or in dispute over distribution of personal goods, said it required five hours of group discussion to resolve ownership of the bike. It was donated to charity, a home for juveniles in Oakland County.

"What should go to whom is very similar to divorce. It produces the same deep-seated feelings," Donaldson said. "My job is to attempt to solve problems with as little bloodshed as possible. To do that, everybody has to give a little," she said.

Southfield attorney Steven Malach, who has specialized in probate law for 11 years, said family photographs are known to trigger bitter family battles.

"Pictures can be a real thorn, much more so than say furniture, jewelry or other real property,' Malach said. He was one of three attorneys recently retained by different generations of a single family to resolve such a dispute that was settled only after a series of meetings between family members and attorneys.

Robert Waddell of Bloomfield Hills, chair of the Oakland Bar Association's probate committee, said the majority of battles he has witnessed involve "a second wife and kids from the first wife." In these instances, solutions are especially difficult to come by. "WHEN PROBLEMS arise over grandma's handmade quilt or the cup and saucer 'that grandmother gave mother that I should have because I was grandmother's favorite.'

we play Monopoly," Donaldson said. A separate card lists each disputed item. Cards are placed face down on a table. Participants draw straws. The person with the longest straw chooses first. Whatever is picked is kept. No exchanges. No questions.

Malach said the dispute over family photos was resolved by a "toss of the coin. Heads went first. Tails second." Certain photos were reproduced, with reproduction costs paid for by the estate.

A toss of a coin to determine who has first choice is a common way to distribute personal items, many of which have little or no resale value. A West Bloomfield man and four brothers in California peacefully distributed contents of their recently deceased father's garage by such a method. They also agreed their only sister, divorced and less well off than the brothers, should receive the family home and its furnishings.

Compromise in such instances is essential. Otherwise, the cost of settlement likely far exceeds the value of disputed items.

"Generally speaking, values don't even come close to attorney and appraisal fees. And if push comes to shove, such things can be admitted to (probate) court," Malach said.

Such costs are not paid by the estate.

"I TELL THEM, 'You're talking principle. If you have the financial resources to bear the cost of putting this $5 item in your hands, then let's go after it.' But when I tell them there is probably going to be a substantial legal cost, and the estate does not pay for it, most back off, Donaldson said. In fact, such disputes are rare, occurring in less than 1 percent of all the way of all families. While many may have wills for disposing of major assets, few think of personal possessions that often contain little value other than emotional meaning.

Control assets with a will

Three out of four Americans die without a will. But consider this: If you die without a will, you do something that you would probably never have done while alive. You relinquish control over your assets and your survivors to the government. According to the Farmington Hills-based Michigan Association of CPAs, if you want to have a say over what happens to your family, your home and your financial assets after your death, you need a will.

If you still have doubts, consider what can happen if you die without one. The state will name an executor for your estate, appoint a guardian for your children if necessary, draw on your estate to pay creditors and taxes, and distribute the rest of your estate according to state laws. As a result, your child could end up being raised by a family member you distrust, your spouse could be saddled with exorbitant fees and taxes, and if your spouse remarries, someone else, or someone else's children, could inherit your estate.

A carefully planned will, which most lawyers can draw up after one meeting, can prevent the state from enforcing decisions about your estate that you would never have made. For persons who do not wish to consult a lawyer, but want to follow a structured form, the state of Michigan provides for a statutory will

Before you decide to write a will, take an inventory of your assets and decide how you want them distributed. Remember to think in percentages rather than dollar amounts.

Consider the implications of each provision of your will. Do you want to divide your assets equally between your two children if one of them has five children and the other none? Who would be able and willing to raise your children with values similar to yours if both you and your spouse died in an accident? Should your children have full access to their inheritance as early as age 18? Do you want to incorporate safeguards against the consequences of a spouse's futuro remarriage into your

ONE OF THE MOST critical decisions you can make about your estate is the selection of a personal.

practically speaking

tify insurance companies and collect the proceeds, arrange for your immediate family's living expenses, liquidate your assets, prepare and file all tax returns and distribute your estate.

Besides insuring that your estate is distributed according to your wishes, a will can also reduce the financial burden placed on your heirs. Tax claims on an estate can also be substantial. Under the federal estate tax law, you do have a degree of protection. If the gross estate, including the value of all lifetime taxable gifts, is under $600,000, filing a federal estate tax return is not required. But If assets exceed $600,000 even after deducting administrator's fees, funeral expenses, outstanding debts and personal representative's fees, the federal estate tax rate kicks in at 37 percent and goes as high as 55 percent.

There is one major exception to this rule. Under the unlimited marital deduction, you can leave your entire estate to your spouse without incurring federal gift or estate tax regardless of your estate's worth. But when your surviving spouse dies, tax will be charged against your estate and your spouse's combined, thus placing a potentially tremendous tax load on other heirs.

If your estate is substantially higher than $600,000, you can minimize the tax burden on future heirs by dividing your estate between your spouse and a credit-shelter or bypass trust, which can provide your spouse and children income for life and enable you to take full advantage of the unified tax credit. Another option is to divide assets equally between you and your spouse prior to death. Or you can make tax-exempt gifts of up to $10,000 (or $20,000 with your spouse's consent) per year per person. You can even consider educational or nursing home bills as gifts if you pay the bills directly. If minimizing the tax burden on survivors is a primary concern of yours, consult a tax professional or attorney about these procedures.

Keep your will up to date. Revise a will after a marriage or divorce, or when tax laws change. Keep your will in a central location with a copy of all other essential records.

Careful planning with a tax adviser and an attorney will enable you to create a will that provides for the well being of your family and insures your peace of mind in the here and now.

List can aid survivors

The death of a family member brings a whirlwind of anguish and grief. Never is this more true than with the death of a spouse. Survivors are often ill-equipped to deal with the consequences of a spouse's death; countants and doctors. Document pressing financial and practical matters seem both insignificant and overwhelming.

The Michigan Association of CPAs suggests that you prepare for the possibility of a spouse's death when your wits - and your spouse - are still with you. Your first priority should be writing a will. (See accompanying story.)

Funeral arrangements may be the hardest topic to discuss with your spouse, but an open discussion and mutually arrived at decisions can

You should also draw up a letter of instructions - a simple list of information related to an individual's financial and legal status. Include telephone numbers of lawyers; acemployee, veteran and Social Security benefits; pension and profit-sharing plans; insurance policies and their beneficiaries; unlon membership; savings and checking accounts; investment holdings such as IRA accounts or mutual funds; and any valuable collectibles.

List all potential creditors, including credit cards, the bank issuing your mortgage, and the issuers of any other outstanding loans. Note. the location of such important items as your birth certificate, marriage

Municipal, zero-coupon bonds will help

My wife and I would like to provide some money for the education of three of our grandchildren. I know the tax laws have changed, but there must be some favorable way to do this. Please give us some ideas.

Under the current tax law, a child younger than 14 may received $500 of income from interest, dividends and other investments tax free and an additional $500 that is taxed at the child's rate. Any unearned income above $1,000 is taxed at the parent's rate until the child is 14. Then it is taxed at the child's rate.

You and your wife can give each child $20,000 a year, $10,000 from you and $10,000 from your wife, without any federal gift tax consequence either to yourselves or to the child. If you set up a custodian account under the Uniform Transfer to Minors Act, you may want to use someone other than the parents as custodians so as not to bring into question any expenditure of that money that might be made.

IF YOU are seeking to minimize taxes, you might consider making the gift in tax-exempt municipal bonds. Or you might choose good- a grade growth stocks that don't pay much in dividends but have good prospects of appreciating in value. Zero-coupon bonds are another option. You could buy a $1,000 highquality 18-year municipal zerocoupon bond paying 714 percent for approximately $285. If you bought several of those bonds for each child each year for four years, you would be providing a nice fund. Another gift that would not result in any current tax would be U.S. Sayings Bonds. As long as these bonds are held five years or more, they pay 6 percent, and the interest isn't taxable until the bonds are redeemed.

ONCE A child has reached 14 and income is taxed at the child's rate, you may want to give higher-yielding investments. Stocks that have appreciated in value may be given. If the child sells them, the capital gains tax will be at a lower rate, and the money can be reinvested.

If you have prospects of a high estate tax, annual gifts to the maximum allowed tax free may be a good idea regardless of what the respective income tax consequences may be,

Once the child is 14, if the tax on your income is 33 percent and his is in the bottom bracket, the total tax paid will be less if the money is transferred to the child rather than kept in your hands.

Disposal of personal items can split family probated wills, according to Malach. Waddell said "disputes are definitely the exception" and can be avoided altogether. Michigan law allows for a letter of intent in which all personal possessions and the intended recipient may be listed. When referred to in the will, the letter becomes part of legal documents recognized by state probate courts.

At the very least, personal representatives (formerly called executors) should have authority to dispose of all personal items in the event a dispute arises, according to Waddell, because there are certain things nobody wants.

"What is treasure to one person is junk to the next. Lots of times you can't even give personal property away. Used furniture-just isn't that valuable. I mean, how much can you get for a 10-year-old TV?" Waddell said.

White Elephant Antiques recently conducted an estate sale in Birmingham, selling the home and contents of an elderly woman who died at age 89. She left all her worldly goods to an assortment of relatives and friends.

"We sold everything in the house, down to photos," said Sean Dey of White Elephant. "It doesn't necessary follow that because something is old or even valuable that someone wants it. Some people would much rather have the money."

Gasoline tax hike would help U.S. carmakers

By Dan McCosh special writer

Glaciers from the last ice age stopped approximately 50 miles north of Detroit 10,000 years or so ago, a fact that today is worrisome to the domestic auto industry.

Not that anybody these days begrudges the need for electric refrigeration for nine months of the year around here, but the receding ice also marked the beginning of a warming trend that eventually filled the Superior and Huron canyons with water, according to the rudimentary lessons learned in my old high school in Royal Oak.

LIKE MOST trends that don't know where to stop, this warming trend now threatens to move spring break festivities from Fort Lauderdale to Toledo, and continued melting of the polar ice caps could drown _ individual manufacturer.

billions worth of Japanese real estate investments in Manhattan sometime in the early 2200s.

All of which would have mainly academic interest to the rest of us except for a report about to be released in Washington by the Environmental Protection Agency that blames the continuing rise in the earth's temperature mainly on excessive fuel consumption by automobiles.

THE EPA'S position is the strongest argument unleashed in Washington in a decade arguing for a significant increase in the minimum corporate average fuel economy - the socalled CAFE regulations adopted as a reaction to the mld-1970s fuel crisis that mandate both minimum acceptable fuel consumption and an overall average, now approximately 27 miles per gallon of gasoline for an

Despite the fact that CAFE regulations were originally proposed by the domestic industry, they quickly became a noose with the rope held by imports, since most foreign-built fleets were far ahead of the domestics in overall economy.

TODAY, WITH the resurgence of interest in high horsepower and baby boomers suddenly discovering the joys of parenthood, even the Japanese-fuel economy averages are dropping rapidly for new cars, although the overall average fuel consumption per vehicle continues to decline as old cars are trashed. Only a few hand-wringers, notably including myself, remain concerned about the consumption of energy again running amok. I never really forgave the state of Michigan for tripling the cost of license plates for my VW Beetle in the midst of the energy crisis - a counterproductive policy decision if there ever was one. But I digress.

TODAY. THE concern over energy is not being driven by running out of the stuff, but the observation that burning certain fuels increases the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. Carbon dioxide, in turn, contributes to the so-called "greenhouse effect," which is similar to leaving a car with a black interior with the windows rolled up on a hot summer day.

If global warming seems a bit abstract, the proposal included in the pending EPA report is not. Hearings will soon commence on proposals that include raising corporate fuel economy requirements approximately 30-50 percent in the next decade.

THAT WOULD result in a huge shock to a domestic industry only now beginning to recover from the reluctance of its customers to buy its early efforts at fuel-efficient automobiles. Few technoids today believe there is much room left for fundamental improvements in engine efficiency.

Improving CAFE thus means cutting sales of large cars and increasing sales of small ones.

Doing this with gasoline at less than a buck a gallon means domestic automakers once again would be prohibited from selling their most profitable, popular car lines, while imports from low-labor-cost countries capable of building small cars profitably would be heavily favored.

DESPITE THE problems inherent in such a proposal, CAFE is still the route favored by an administration reluctant to advocate a gasoline tax - the main alternative that would likely also achieve the goal of improved fuel economy but leave the choice of what to buy in the hands of the consumer.

Then again, 3 maybe Toledo wouldn't be such a bad place for spring break after all.

Questionnaire helps spot workplaces hurt by drugs

By Mary DiPaolo special writer

To help identify a drug-impaired workplace, Marilyn Graham, administrator for Starting Point Programs in Sacramento, Calif., developed a questionnaire for use by business owners and managers. Respondents are asked to look for "yes" answers in clusters of two or three to create a pattern indicative of wasted employee time and abuse of privileges.

• Has there been a recent increase in theft?

• Are there more strangers in and around your building?

• Do your employees visit their cars at odd times?

• Do employees go to the rest room or locker room often?

• Are certain employees preoccupied or in a daze? • Is there an increase in accidents with equipment? • Are your workers' compensation claims rising steeply? • Are certain employees always

• Are you receiving more service complaints?

• Is afternoon work generally inferior to that done in the morning? • Has there been a rise in absenteeism especially on Mondays, Fridays and during holidays? • Are the same employees frequently tardy? Absent? Forgetful?

• Are more grievances being filed?

• Is there more illness, especially colds and "flu?"

• Does one group of employees create most of the discipline problems?

• Are employees taking longer coffee breaks and lunches?

In their book, "Drugs and Alcohol in the Workplace," Graham and coauthor Drusilla Campbell state that employees who are chemically dependent show varying symptoms of abuse, depending on the drugs being used. For instance, users of cocaine may often be the most highly motivated, creative and energetic people on the payroll. "Even after addiction, the impaired employee will still go through periods of outstanding work performance. Alternating with these, however, will be radical mood swings that make him or her difficult to work with and impossible to correct or make suggestions to."

Most common among regular users is an "I couldn't care less" attitude accompanying delusions of grandeur ("At least I made it into work today; they'd be lost without me.").

IRS prepares for nuclear war

Recently I wrote a column on what to look for in a financial planner. Today I present a chart that puts the planner selection process in a different light. I hope that you will benefit from it.

The IRS in peace and war

Believe it or not, on Dec. 14, 1988, the IRS published the following information in the Internal Revenue Manual Sec. 1 (16) 25.1 through 1 (16) 25.3:

When it comes to collecting taxes, nothing deters the IRS. Not even nuclear war. The IRS recently issued a plan for continuing its operations in the event of a nuclear attack or other national emergency.

Should Armageddon occur, survivors will be pleased to know that the IRS will be prepare to (1) assess, collect, and record taxes within 30 days after termination of the immediate post-attack period; (2) analyze and report upon emergency tax legislation; and (3) prescribe regulations and forms and issue rulings and technical information of an emergency nature.

Anticipating that it may encounter a few collection problems in the hardest-hit areas, the IRS has established collection priorities. In devastated areas, delinquent accounts will be put on the back burner while intrepid agents concentrate on collecting current taxes.

But there will be no relief for delinquent taxpayers who live in communities that are spared from conflagration. According to the plan, "in areas where taxpaying potential is substantially unimpaired, enforced collection of delinquent accounts will be continued."

So the message is clear: You will be treated with care by the IRS, whether there is war or peace.

Guild's play committee searches out special shows

By Bob Weibei special writer

EAR AFTER YEAR the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford presents some of the most stimulating theater in the Detroit area, or for that matter just about anywhere. Its shows are bold, varied and thoughtprovoking.

Judy Nakdimen, executive director, recently outlined the group's formula for success. Her comments were made against a backdrop of furious sawing and hammering, as construction workers busily transformed the stage of the Redford playhouse into New York's Central Park for an upcoming production.

TGLR is not your average community theater. This season (its 35th) opened with "Home," a sad but lovely character study of two old gentlemen in an asylum. That was followed with "Olympus on My Mind," a delightful spoof of the musical comedy genre, and "My Sister in This House," an extraordinary drama about a French murder case. About to open is "I'm Not Rappaport," a charming little comedy about two nonconformist but lovable old codgers on a bench in Central Park.

One expects that sort of season from a university theater or professional repertory company. Typical community theaters lean toward proven commercial hits (Nell Simon's "Odd Couple"), old favorites a good show. Secondly, to choose something not being done by everyone else. Our audience expects something a little different. So, we attempt to be first. Which means we take risks. We attempt things that are pretty nervy sometimes.

"WE DON'T TRY to offend people. But some excellent theater pieces have explicit language. And occasionally there is a bare bottom. In fact, 'Equus' involved full nudity, which we tastefully handled with body stockings and creative lighting."

Incidently, the guild production of "Equus," presented at the 1979 Mort Furay Festival, won awards for best production and best actor, plus runner-up awards for best actor and best supporting actor.

"We present what we like. What we think is good. We feel obligated to do shows with theatrical merit. We reject plays that use language or situations for shock value only," Nakdimen said.

Just where do you find what you like?

"We read the theater reviews in New York Magazine and Time. Pat Secor and myself go to New York and London, and to regional stages such as Actors Theatre in Louisville, Ky. They first produced 'Getting Out' and 'Talking With,' both of which won outstanding new play awards and were recently part of our season,' she said.

"In fact, I saw the musical 'Nine' twice. First time just to enjoy it, the second time to analyze ways to handle the many period costumes and reduce the large cast. Our limited space places constraints on staging, technical effects and number of performers we can accommodate.

("Charley's Aunt") and big splasny musicals ("Hello Dolly!").

NAKDIMEN SAID, "The guild's success over the years is a direct result of one important criteria that was established in 1954 by Pat Secor, the guild's founder, and executive director until retiring five years ago. TGLR would be an amateur theater that would always strive for professional standards."

To attract the best, TGLR pays its directors. And to assure good scripts, a rigorous play selection process is employed. It's so thorough, in fact, that in 35 years the guild has never repeated a show.

A play reading committee headed by the executive director recommends a choice of three seasons to the board of directors for approval. A season usually consists of four shows, one of which is a musical and the others a mixture of drama and comedy.

A little quick math indicates that a minimum of 12 shows must be analyzed. What are the most important criteria?

"Two things are paramount," Nakdimen pointed out. "First, to find "IF A SHOW has possibilities, we order a script, which everyone involved in play selection must read. If selected, we call or write the publishers for permission to produce the play. As a rule, they won't give it to you during the first year the show is on Broadway, or if a professional company is performing within 50 miles of Livonia.

"Because we're always looking for new shows, the guild is usually the first community theater to present new works ('Equus,' Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolfe,' 'Stop The World')." Often the guild is the first and only community theater in the area to produce a show ("The Championship Season," "P.S. Your Cat Is Dead," "The Club," "Getting Out") and sometimes this includes shows that even local professional companies haven't done ("The Dresser" and

Howard Egan (left), Richard Bullari and Bill Malaetti rehearse a scene for the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford production of Herb Gardner's "I'm Not Rappaport." The guild is the first community theater group in the Detroit area to present the Broadway hit, which recently played the Birmingham Theatre.

S'craft losing athletic chief

By C.J. Rieak staff writer.

Citing personal reasons, Ed Kavanaugh has resigned as athletic director at Schoolcraft College.

Kavanaugh has served as AD since January 1988. He replaced Mary successful, some weren't. We need Gans, the college's only previous AD, who was reassigned to other duties in June 1987.

Kavanaugh's resignation will become effective at the end of April.

"I've got a lot of things going on right now," he said. "Personal, outside things."

Asked if there were problems with the administration that led to his resigning, Kavanaugh replied, "Not at all, not at all."

Kavanaugh is a mathematics instructor at SC; he is currently authoring two math books. He is also involved in real estate, and his wife, Chris, is pregnant.

"IN ORDER to be successful in all the things he's doing, he had to eliminate something," said Midge Carleton, assistant dean in charge of physical education. "I admire him for his decision. He thinks enough of the college to know he didn't have the time to devote to the position."

The AD postion is part-time, and Carleton said there were "no plans" to change it." She added that she hoped a successor could be found by May, unlike the six-month stretch between Gans' departure and Kavanaugh's hiring.

"This school needs an athletic di-

THE ILL-EFFECTS have not yet been completely eradicated, but, according to Kavanaugh, the trend has been reversed. "We have to get fundraisers established," he said. "We did some things this year. Some were continuity in that area."

Several SC teams have experienced success in the past 1¹/₄ years, notably the womens teams. The volleyball squad captured the school's second National Junior College Athletic Association championship last November, and the womens basketball team was co-champion of the Eastern Conference and was ranked as high as seventh in the national polls.

But there were disappointments. For the second straight year, the mens basketball team struggled, losing four players to academic woes at the mid-season semester break. And the SC womens soccer team, the 1987 NJCAA champion, was left out of the NJCAA tournament by the selection committee last fall.

KAVANAUGH, WHO previously coached SC's womens basketball team and guided Livonia Ladywood to a pair of Class B championships, focused on the academic problems of the mens basketball team through the Student-Athlete Support System.

After the four players became academically ineligible in January, Kavanaugh implemented a weekly check system. Instead of checking athletes' grades just twice a semester, they are now checked every week. When an athlete dips below required standards, they cannot play. "There's a real solid basis for the future here," predicted Kavanaugh. "I see only bright things ahead." But now that future will now be in someone else's hands.

Taken away, yet so young

HEN I THINK of John Shea and Craig Allard, I'll think back to "Laura," the "friend of a friend" Christopher Cross sang so passionately about during the early 1980s.

Like Laura, Shea and Allard were taken away so young early Saturday morning, without a warning, trying to cross a street outside of Orlando, Fla.

I didn't know these two all that well, but I met each of them during their respective seasons and being an ex-Patriot myself, I felt a common bond.

My father, who works at Franklin, took the news hard when I called him on vacation in Lexington, Ky.

It doesn't seem fair that they left us when their lives were just beginning to blossom.

When I think of John Shea and Craig Allard, as Cross would sing, I'd rather laugh, not cry.

I know they'd want it that way.

SHEA RAN cross country in the fall for Franklin, but basketball was his sport, his passion, following in the footsteps of his brother, Tom, who graduated a year earlier.

Franklin basketball coach Rod Hanna called his basketball team throughout the season "my little french fries."

Shea stood 6-feet-2 and weighed only 145 pounds, but he was the brains of an improved Franklin which upset state-ranked Farmington Harrison and nearly knocked off

"He can pass the ball and give him a year (red-shirting), so he can grow and get stronger, and he'll be a play; er." said Donahue earlier this season after one of the Franklin games. Donahue is known for finding diamonds in the rough.

If anybody got the most out of his ability, it was John Shea. He was a steadying influence, a leader, polite and a nice guy.

He was part of a tight-knit family. His parents never missed a game, and his father, Tom, could usually be found videotaping the games. Those times will always be cherished. Shea, a 3.5 student, was planning to go to one of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association schools, most likely Adrian.

WHEN I STOPPED BY Armand Vigna's house on Saturday, Craig Allard was also in my prayers.

The longtime Franklin football coach put things in perspective for me.

We can cry that Craig Allard is gone at 18, but in the short span that he lived he had accomplished much.

Vigna saw a quarterback who was brash and cocky become mature and focused on his future. Late in the season, Allard accepted a new role which shifted him from quarterback to running back and he took it well, according to Vigna, who made the move to take advantage of his speed. The Patriots finished a respect?

rector," said Carleton. "This time I will take the responsibility. And Ed said he will assist in the transition.".

Although his tenure was short, it was not an easy period for Kavanaugh, Because there was no AD (dean of instruction Lou Reibling was given the title), the athletic programs - fund raising in particular - suffered.

two other area powers, Plymouth Salem and Wayne Memorial.

Shea was an expert passer and used every ounce of his body to rebound against much bigger and stronger opponents.

Glen Donahue, the Orchard Lake St. Mary's coach, saw something in Shea that many coaches overlooked.

Footballplayoffplan getting high marks

By C.J. Rissk staff writer

A new plan that would restructure the current four-class system now used by the Michigan High School Athletic Association to six classes for the football playoffs will likely be in place by the start of the 1990 school year.

"I have not heard any people who are opposed to it," said Fred Sible, an assistant director with the MHSAA in charge of football. "This is the first time we could expand the program without lengthening the season. I haven't heard anything bad about it so far."

The plan is to divide the state's 623 football-playing high schools into six classes instead of the current four, It was submitted by the Macomb County Athletic Directors Association and, thus far, has been endorsed by just about everyone.

"I really don't see how it hurts anybody," said Redford Catholic Central football coach Tom Mach. "It gets more people involved in the playoffs, so it would be better for the sport."

MACH'S SENTIMENTS were generally echoed by all coaches. "I think it's very good in that it gives more teams a chance to play for a championship," said Birmingham Brother Rice coach Al Fracassa. "If it's good for football, then I'm all for it. And this gets more kids involved in football."

Said North Farmington coach Jim O'Leary: "I'm thrilled to death about it because we're one of those real small Class A schools. We have to. play schools like (Westland) John Glenn and (Plymouth) Salem every year, and their enrollment is twice ours."

The reasons for the new proposal are twofold: decrease the disparity among Class A schools (the state's largest school is Detroit Redford, with an enrollment of 3,192; the smallest Class A school is Bay City John Glenn, 1,020), and increase the number of playoff participants.

The addition of two classes would allow for 32 more playoff participants (16 per class), without altering the season. It would make it easier. for teams to make the playoffs, since they would be competing against only 104 other schools (103 in the largest class) for one of the 16 berths. There are currently 178 schools in each class.

THE PROPOSAL also includes a change in the playoff point formula. Under the current formula, when a Class A team plays a Class B team instead of another Class A. it forfelts 16 potential playoff points.

To ease scheduling problems around the state - larger schools have avoided playing smaller schools because of the loss in playoff points - two classes would be grouped together. The top two classes could cross schedule and receive the same number of playoff points. The same for the middle two classes and the bottom two classes.

Balancing act

Area schools well represented this year

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

HE OUTSTANDING indi-vidual basketball talent was evenly distributed throughout Observerland this year.

The 1989 all-area team features a balanced look, with each of the seven first-team selections representing a different school.

The top two teams in the Catholic League, Redford Bishop Borgess and Redford Catholic Central, placed Shawn Respert and Terry Boykin on the squad, and Wolverine A Conference co-champ Wayne Memorial the area team to go the farthest in the state fournament — put Tony Rumple on the honor roll.

The Western Lakes Activities Association is well represented this year by league champion Plymouth Salem's Jeff Elliott, Farmington Hills Harrison's Chad Burgess, Plymouth Canton's Brian Paupore and North Farmington's Matt Hoffman.

None are first-team repeaters, but Burgess and Hoffman moved up from the second team. Paupore was a third-team pick last year, and Boykin, Respert and Elliott were honorable mentions. Rumple assumed the leadership role at Wayne from Shawn Wimberly, a member of the '88 all-area team, in his senior year. Redford St. Agatha coach Jim Murphy, who guided the Aggies to the Catholic League C-D championship and an 18-5 record, was named coach of the year.

Presenting the 1989 All-Observer boys basketball squad:

ALL-AREA FIRST TEAM

Shawn Respert, Junior, Bishop Borness: Respert was not only the top player on a talented Spartan ballclub but was voted the best player in the Catholic League,

The 6-foot-2 guard started slowly after being injured in a car accident at the beginning of the season, but he got better as the season went on and was playing his best basketball in the tournament. Respert averaged 19½ points and played his best game of the year, scoring 22 points, when Borgess, 14-10, nearly upset eventual Class A champion Detroit Cooley in the Operation Friendship consola-

'He was a marked man, and he got a lot of pressure. But he's the type of guy who makes the others around him play better."

Tony Rumple, senior, Wayne Memorial: Rumple scored 18 points per game and led the Zebras into a regional final encounter with three-time Class A champ Cooley. He was the best player on a 20-5 ballclub.

The 5-foot-11 guard scored 448 points In 25 games, shot 42 percent from the floor and made 63 of 80 free throws for 79 percent. He might play at Schoolcraft College next season. Rumple also carries a 3.6 average in the classroom and is a member of the marching band.

"He was our main offensive threat, a quiet leader who led by example," Wayne coach Chuck Henry. "He's a well-rounded kid whom any coach would like to havé."

Chad Burgess, senior, Harrison: Burgess finished his prep career as his school's all-time leading scorer with 999 points. He averaged 18 points per game this year, which included one contest in which he was injured in the first three minutes and had only two points.

The 6-foot-2 Burgess also averaged nine rebounds for the Hawks, who won the Western Division championship, were ranked in Class B all season and finished with an 18-4 record. He had season-high totals of 35 points against Westland John Glenn and 22 rebounds in a meeting with Livonia Franklin.

"The neat thing about Chad is that he was a star who didn't have to be a star." Harrison coach Mike Teachman sald. "He didn't detract from the team because of his stardom.

'Everything he got was the result of belog in the right place at the right time. It wash't like we specifically had the ball in his hands. He was a blue-collar star."

Brian Paupore, senior, Canton: Paupore, a three-year starter, set a singleseason Canton scoring record with 432 points. The former mark was 328 by Joel Mies.

Paupore, a 6-foot-5 forward, averaged 20.6 points and eight rebounds as a senior. He also had 31 assists and 23 steals for the Chiefs, 11-10. Western Michigan, Kent State, Toledo, Oakland and a number of MIAA schools have expressed interest in Paupore, according to Canton coach Tom Niemi.

Shawn Respert Bishop Borgess

Jeff Elliott Catholic Central Salem

Tony Rumple Wayne Memorial

Chad Burgess Harrison

Jeff Elliott, senior, Salem: Elliott missed most of his junior year with a broken wrist but rebounded with an outstanding senior year. He began the season on a tremendous scoring streak, averaging 25-plus points and helping the Rocks to a fast start with big victories over Monroe and Southfield. The 6-foot-4 Elliott finished with a 20point average in leading the Rocks to the WLAA championship and a 20-3 record. He also had six rebounds, five assists and two steals per game. Elliott shot 34 percent from 3-point range, 47 percent from the floor overall and 70 percent at the free throw line.

"He was out on a mission this year to play well," Salem coach Bob Brodie said. "He came out with a bang. Some others took over later, but that was because teams were putting so much pressure on Jeff. Then he found the open man instead of shooting.

"Early in the year we rode the crest with him. He started us off on the right foot. We won five in a row and a lot of it was because he came out determined to show he could play the game.

"He helped us as a team to gain confidence in ourselves and the others followed suit," he added.

"He played the way he's capable of playing during the last half of the season and in the playoffs," Borgess coach Mike Fusco said.

"He has multiple skills and can do a number of things. Obviously, he handles the ball and can score. He's one of the best athletes at that (off-guard) position.

Terry Boykin, senior, Catholic Central: Boykin was the driving force behind the Shamrocks winning the Central Division crown and giving veteran coach Bernle Holowicki his 12th district title.

He averaged 17 points, four assists and two steals for Catholic Central, 15-9. The 6-foot guard was a three-year varsity player. Michigan Tech, Tuisa, Albion and Siena Heights are possible colleges where Boykin might continue his career.

"He was the person we looked to when we needed points, and he delivered consistently," Niemi said. "He showed an awful lot of heart when he broke his nose badly and risked injury to benefit the team."

After scoring 10 first-half points in a playoff game against John Glenn, Paupore removed the mask at halftlme and added another 22 points in the second half.

"He's going to get bigger and stronger and will be an excellent college player," Niemi said. "He's also an outstanding student and citizen. He typifies what you wish all athletes would be."

Hoffman, who also had three rebounds and three steals per game, set school records of 40 points against Plymouth Salem and 15 assists against Livonia Churchill. He shot 40 percent from the field and 70 percent at the line. Hoffman has been invited to participate in tryouts for the American team in the Maccabi Games - a rare occurrence for a high school player.

"First, he's a tremendous competitor," North coach Tom Negoshian said. "He played most of the year with a sore ankle. Secondly, he's a true point guard with his ball handling, passing and ability to run the show."

Hoffman plans to play for the No. 1 Sibley's AAU team this summer, and his performance will probably determine at what level he plays college ball.

"His summer will really dictate whether he goes Division I or II," Negoshian said. 'People are very interested in seeing how he progresses at that level of competition again."

Western Lakes teams to battle again

By Brad Emons staff writer

Even the best machines need a tune-up every so often.

That's the line again this spring with girls soccer in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

The WLAA has produced six straight state champions, signaling that parts can easily be replaced.

Livonia Stevenson appeared in the first three finale, withing twice (1983, 1985), while city rival Churchill has played for the title the last three years, winning once (1986).

Both are members of the WLAA.

The other three crowns also belong to WLAA members Northville (1984), Plymouth Salem (1987) and Plymouth Canton (1988).

So which school will be humming a victory tune come June?

THIS MAY be the year for Farmington, yet another WLAA member.

Yes, the Falcons have the power to make a run at the state Class A crown.

They have a nice mix of veterans and some promising newcomers.

But more importantly, they have new direction and plan a new style under Cathy Cole, who is replacing Ed Bartram.

Never in her days as the boys coach at both North Farmington and Farmington, as well as the girls coach at North, has Cole been loaded with this type of talent.

"The team to beat on paper is Farmington," said Livonia Churchill coach Nick O'Shea bluntly. But is O'Shea just blowing smoke?

Maybe, maybe not. The Falcons return two-time All-Stater Carrie Maler (16 career goals) and second-team All-Area picks Jennifer Misaros and Margaret Martin.

Two outstanding freshmen, Julie Dugan and Kim Popyk, members the '74 Michigan Hawks, one of the nation's top under-14 teams, could put Farmington over the top.

BUT DON'T count out Churchill and O'Shea, despite the loss of three first-team All-Area picks.

The Chargers, who lost to Canton 2-1 in overtime in the 1988 state final, return several standouts including scoring threats Lori Place and Nikki Johnson, along with senior midfielder Mandy Mase and sophomore midfielder Mechelle Brazin.

Meanwhile, state champion Canton lost All-Area defender Lori Stoecklein, but returns firstteamers Shannon Meath and Michelle Fortier.

The state's 1987 Player of the Year, Salem's Jill Estey, scored 22 goals last year and is joined by Michelle Minton, another blg scorer.

"Salem has those two great forwards," O'Shea said. "When they're quick, they're tough to stop." By the end of the season nobody may want a piece of Stevenson, which suffered an "off-year" in 1988, sliding to a disappointing 11-4-1 record. Norene Divens, who won 153 games and lost only 23 during her stint as the Spartans' coach, stepped down at the end of last season. She handed the job to former player Mary Kay Hussey, who led Stevenson to a pair of state crowns.

HUSSEY MAY HAVE the Spartans primed by tourney time, once her five fabulous freshmen — '74 Hawks Ragen Coyne, Tracy Morrell, Shannon Wilkinson, Lisa Thomas and Jean Barnas — get their wheels moving.

But Hussey is cautious, even though veterans Sharlene Sudek (second-team All-Area), Karen Carney and sister Michelle Hussey, the team's tri-captains, return.

"I can't imagine a team smaller," said the first-year coach. "Some of these girls are only 5-1."

But Mary Kay said, "It's not the size of the man in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the man."

Hussey did admit: "They're skilled. I think we'll be in there with the other teams."

And if the WLAA is not well-oiled enough, how about throwing in Northville and Livonia Franklin for good measure?

Franklin's hopes to join the state's took a turn for the worse when goalie Kelly Kronberg transferred to Northville, but freshman Patty Shea, another '74 Hawk, will make the Patriots no pushover.

Ladies, start your engines. See team-by-team analysis.

Expanding classes for playoffs safe

T'S TIME TO cut the camouflage. Let's put this expansion deal in its proper perspective. The idea is to make four into six. Instead of having just four classes for high school football - A, B, C and D - we have six: AAA, AA, A, B, C and D.

Why? The preferred reason presented by football coaches is it would help smaller Class A schools, like Birmingham Groves, North Farmington, Redford Union, who play in the same class as behemoths like Westland John Glenn, Plymouth Salem and Traverse City, schools that are more than twice their size.

Nonsense. There's one reason for going from four to six classes - the playoffs,

TOO MANY teams - North Farmington, for instance, which has gone 7-2 the last two seasons ("One more win and we would have been in," said Raider coach Jim O'Leary.) - have missed out on the blg, season-ending show. And they're tired of Dividing the state's 623 footballplaying high schools by six instead of four means greater opportunity. There would be only 104 schools (103 in Class AAA) per class; there are currently 178. That means less competition for one of the 16 playoff berths up for grabs in each division. playoffs are expanded without lengthening the season.

Who wouldn't love it? "I would like to see more teams get into the and so on. playoffs," said Redford Thurston coach Bob Snell. "And it would knock down the disparity somewhat,"

If anything bugs me about it, it's this disparity nonsense. If that were really the issue, something else could be done to address it.

DON'T BE MISLED. The new format does little to change any disparity problem. Birmingham Brother Rice and Southfield-Lathrup will be just 20 and 21 students above the Class AAA cutoff of 1,366, so they'll still have to battle glants more than twice their size.

The current Class A enrollment is honest light.

1,020 and over; the proposed change raises that level by just 346. The discrepancy would still be 1,826 between the largest (Detroit Redford, population 3,192) and smallest (Davison, population 1,366) in the state's biggest division.

If disparity were really the key issue, football wouldn't have been the only sport considered. "If (schools) don't think they can compete in football, why not go across the board with it?" questioned Redford Catholie Central coach Tom Mach. "It shouldn't just be football. Big Class A's have an advantage in all sports."

True enough. But football has the only state tournament with a predetermined, and limited, number of participants.

WANT TO TALK disparity? Then instead of dividing schools so that approximately the same number is in each class, use some sort of population formula, Example: If you have a total of 2 million kids in high school statewide and you want four There's the beauty of the plan. The classes of competition, divide by four. Schools making up the first 500,000 in enrollment would be Class A, the next 500,000 would be Class B.

> Certainly there are flaws in that plan (there would probably be 40 schools in Class A and 300 in Class D), but if disparity were a real problem, that would come closer to addressing it.

> It isn't. The real reason for adding two classes just for football is expanding the playoffs.

> Which isn't so bad. I wouldn't like it to get like the National Hockey League, where every Toronto and Chicago has a chance, but if 32 more teams can be cast into the playoff pot without lengthening the season, why not?

> But let's present the plan in an

Master craftsman Livonian builds bamboo fly fishing rods

OHN LONG'S father was a cabinet maker. John Long figures: maybe some of his father's craftsmanship ability was passed along through his genes.

Or maybe it's the overwhelming sense of accomplishment felt when you build something with your own hands, then utilize that creation to its fullest potential - like landing a Master Angler brook trout on a fly rod you built yourself.

Whatever the reason, Long has developed a rather unusual hobby. He builds bamboo fly rods. Long is a member of the Livonia-based Michigan Fly Fishing Club, He's been making bamboo fly rods for the last four years.

"I met Bill Waara in the Michigan Fly Fishing Club and he has been building (bamboo fly rods) for 40 years," explained Long. "One thing led to another and pretty soon I was learning the craft myself. And I had a very good teacher."

The process of hand-making a bamboo fly rod takes about 50 hours per rod. Subsequently, most rod makers are strictly amateur. Despite a price tag of $800-$1,200 most rod makers only make bamboo rods as a hobby.

"It takes a lot of time," Long said. "That's why most people only do it as a hobby. But it's quite a thrill to make a rod, tie a fly and catch a fish with it. That's the excitement of it all."

FLY FISHING is a finesse sport in that anglers must present their bait to a finicky trout in the most natural manner possible. To accomplish this, an angler must know the potential and the feel of the rod.

An experienced fly fisherman knows the feel of his rod as well as a concert violinist knows the feel of his bow. They seem to become one.

On fast rivers or when fishing for big fish, a heavy, sturdy fly rod is usually preferred. On a placid body of water, or when using very small flies, most anglers prefer a long, light, thin rod. The difference between the two rods lies in the taper of the shaft.

"The heart of the rod is the bamboo," Long explained. "The soul is in the taper of the rod. The taper allows you to get the flex the way you want it."

LONG CREDITS former president Richard Nixon with contributing to the rebirth of the art of making bamboo fly rods.

"It was almost a lost art during the China trade embargo," Long explained. "Bamboo rods are only made from Tonkin bamboo, from the Tonkin province in China. When the embargo (was in effect) you couldn't get the bamboo. But thanks to Richard Nixon (who improved relations between the U.S. and China) the embargo was lifted and a number of people are making them now."

Several bamboo rod makers will be among the exhibitors this weekend at the Midwest Fly Fishing Expo at the Southfield Civic Center. The show speakers Mel Krieger, Gary Borger, Dennis Bitton and Jim Teeny. Exhibitors include Able Reels, 3M, Browning, Paul H. Young Co., River Bend Orvis Shop, Ted Hebert Tackle and others. Show hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. ***

WHEN YOU'RE through at the Midwest Fly Fishing Expo, don't forget to stop by the Palace of Auburn Hills for the Greater Detroit Sportfishing Expo which begins today.

The show is the Palace's first consumer-oriented show and features more than 300 exhibitors.

Show goers can see the Michigan Department of Natural Resources' 40-foot display of some of Michigan's state record gamefish. Species included in the display include salmon, trout, pike, whitefish, muskie, bass, gills, grayling, pumpkinseed and walleye.

The world'a biggest largemouth bass, an 86inch long, 62-inch around model built by Hartland artist Tom Wolfe will also be on display along with winning photographs from America's greatest outdoor photographers.

There will also be a 45-foot aquarium, the "Hog Trough," stocked full of live gamefish which seminar speakers will attempt to catch.

Among the many guest speakers are Babe Winkleman of "Good Fishing;" Al Lindner of In-Fisherman Magazine; Bud Riser of Walleye Magazine; Jerry McKinnis of The Fishin Hole and Dave Richey, outdoor writer for the Detroit News.

Admission is $5 adults, $3 for children age 6-12, and children under five will be admitted free. Show hours are 4-10 p.m. today; noon-10:30 p.m. Friday; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday.

The parking fee at the Palace will be reduced to $3 all weekend.

Several yesterdays ago it was safe to say "A Rose Is A Rose Is A Rose." Today, we're faced with flowers of different petals.

The rose on the left is indeed a rose. The rose on the right is man made—of silk.

You can't always see the difference in kitchens either. That's why you need to invest some time examining Merillat Kitchens in our KSI Showrooms. We will demonstrate how Merillat craftsmanship is more than skin deep-the many innovative features such as the Whisperglide® Roller Drawer System— and best of all how Merillat gives you the custom look without the custom price tag.

Speedskater John Coyle did not have an enjoyable trip to Bulgaria in March when he competed in the World University Games. On the bright side, he overcame do-or-die pressure to make the U.S. team and earn his trip to the games.

At the U.S. trials in February, Coyle fell in two events and needed to win the final event, the 3,000meter race, in order to make the squad.

"I was freaking," he recalled. "I ... was really nervous. I knew I could do it because I had skated well in all the previous races and the heats. I had won all my heats. But when I got to the finals I had fallen in two of them, just collisions with people; there's nothing you can do about it. So I didn't have the points that the other people had even though I'd skated real well."

Coyle, who says he thrives on pressure, proved it by winning the race.

COYLE'S BIG mistake in Bulgaria came off the ice. He and two U.S. teammates became ill after eating a restaurant meal. None of the three made an individual final at the University Games. Coyle did skate on the bronze medal-winning U.S. 5,000 meter relay team, but that placing did not satisfy the Americans.

His illness was "a big disappointment," said Coyle. "Especially for the whole team, because we had a really good relay team. We were really set on winning the gold and then we all got sick and we only got the bronze.'

Coyle's inability to perform at his best in Bulgaria was not his first dis-

I've never burt myself.

Coyle still competes in cycling, but now the roles are reversed. His warm-weather cycling helps him stay in shape for speed skating. Covie competed in the Junior

World Cycling championships but has not attained that status in senior competition.

"The senior ranks are really, really competitive," he said. "I've been cycling just as much but I haven't been at the top . . . I'm still serious about it but I don't have the results, not like my junior years."

COYLE HAS gained success in skating despite a full-time college schedule at Stanford. Not only must he divide his time between skating and school, he also has no track there - although he does skate at area rinks — and has no coach to work with while he is in Callfornia.

"I'm not getting nearly as much training as I could if I were living, say, at the Olympic Training Center. in Northern Michigan So after I graduate (next year) I'm going to do something full time for the sport until the Olympics."

After the World Championships in April, Coyle may do little serious skating for over a year. He will concentrate on his senior year at Stanford, beginning next fall. Coyle may try out for Stanford's ski team to help him stay in shape next winter. He expects to graduate with a degree in mechanical engineering next year, Then he will focus on France and the 1992 Winter Olympics.

Although he said "nobody knows" how the 1992 team will be selected; he plans to be ready for any possibility, hoping to avoid any more off-ice disappointments.

Catch wheelchair racer make opening day pitch

Opening Day next Friday at Tiger Stadium won't begin until Livonia's Gene Root gets there.

Root, 33, and Dale Hart, 26 of Detroit, will arrive at Tiger Stadium with the game ball and hand it off to former Tigers star Willie Horton. The handing off of the ball to Horton will end the second l staging of "The First Pitch is for CATCH (Caring Athletes Team for Children's and Henry Ford Hospitals)."

Horton and a guest will enter the stadium through the centerfield gates and run the ball to the mound for the ceremonial first pitch involving Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and Michigan Gov. James Blanchard.

The event includes taking the baseball on a state journey, beginning Sunday in the Upper Peninsula side of the Mackinac Bridge in St. Ignace.

A TEAM OF three cyclists, including many celebrities, will take turns transporting the baseball, with stops and events scheduled in Petoskey, Traverse City, Cadillac, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Lansing, Flint and Pontiac.

By 4 p.m. Thursday, the caravan will have reached the Holiday Inn on Telegraph Road in Bloomfield Hills where the ball will be presented to Hart and Root.

Hart, a marathon runner who works at Henry Ford Hospital, and Root, a wheelchair athlete, will travel side-by-side the last leg down Woodward Avenue.

Hart was a sixth-place finisher in the 1988 Detroit Free Press Marathon, while Root competed in last year's wheelchair division of the Free Press Marathon.

The benefit is expected to net about $120,000 this year for CATCH, which raises money for sick and needy children at the two Detroit-based hospitals, Henry Ford and Children's.

Poorer school districts start state funding suit

By Tim Richard staff writer

A group of the state's poorer school districts is asking Wayne Circult Court for permission to sue the state over what they see as "substantlally unequal" funding of public education.

"We're asking the court to rule on the use of public funds to challenge the constitutionality," said Dr. Rich-ard W. Wilson, superintendent of the Brandon School District in northern Oakland County. Wilson chairs the coalition of 250 "in-formula" districts whose administrators say. they're underfunded.

The districts are trying to win permission for the suit from the circuit court because it is against state law to use public funds for a lawsuit.

"Currently, it's not lawful," Wilson said, citing a remark in a 1984 Court of Appeals decision. "But if it's carefully examined, the court may well reverse it. The Supreme Court has never ruled."

"IN-FORMULA" districts receive state appropriations. "Out-of-formula" districts have larger local propefty tax bases and receive no state aid.

In-formula districts say that, even with state aid, they are treated unequally. Per-pupil spending ranges from about $2,000 to more than $6,000. The smaller amounts are spent in rural and poorer urban districts with little industry. The larger amounts are spent in the high-technology suburban districts of Oakland and western Wayne countles.

Oakland districts included in the group asking for permission to sue are Brandon, Clarenceville, Clarkston, Ferndale, Holly, Oxford and Pontiac.

Wayne County districts include Flat Rock, Garden City, Ham-tramck, Lincoln Park, Redford Union, Rockwood Gibraltar, Southgate, Woodhaven and Wyandotte.

Officers of the group, besides Wilson, are Byron Love, deputy superintendent in Pontiac; Gene Karrow, superintendent of Bridgeport Spaulding Community Schools in Saginaw County; and James Brady, superintendent of Bear Lake Schools in Manistee County.

WILSON SAID that should the coalition be allowed to continue, a second suit would be necessary to win a court decision that Michigan school funding is so unequal that it violates the constitution.

He said statewide equity would cost $2.5 billion to $3 billion under a formula the caucus will propose. The group's goal is to place 85 percent of students under a state aid formula.

Currently, only 60 percent are in-formula, he said.

In contrast, House Joint Resolution B, rejected by the state Senate March 15, would provide only $500 million in new money to education, although it would have resulted in statewide property tax base sharing.

"The caucus believes that the current method of funding is so unequal that it will not stand serious judicial challenge. However, it is necessary first to ascertain the legality of utilizing public funds for such a purpose," the caucus said in a statement.

It has hired John P. Jacobs of the Detroit law firm of Plunkett & Cooney to file the first suit today.

THE CAUCUS said it is "dismayed over the lack of statesmanship on the part of the governor and the Senate" for the stalemate in Lansing.

Gov. James Blanchard, a Democrat, is expected to seek a third term. His likely Republican challenger is Senate majority leader

REAL OAK VENEER

John Engler of Mount Pleasant.

During 1987-88, the Legislature wrestled with more than a dozen dif- 2 ferent versions of plans to cut school property taxes, raise the sales tax . and raise state funding to poorer districts, but could reach no agreement.

Three other efforts are under development on the school funding front:

• State leaders again are asking Edgar Harden, former president of both Northern Michigan University and Michigan State University, to ... help them reach a compromise on,... another proposal that could be put before voters.

• Engler allies are preparing petitions for a ballot question that will? require larger and larger percentages of the state general fund budget to go to education.

• The In-Formula Caucus said it is considering its own ballot petition " for 1990 "to provide constitutional language to make clear the state's constitutional responsibilities in this matter."

stirs ingenuity

By Joan Boram special writer

HE GENERAL public thinks of decorating as a 'fun' job, with unlimited funds available to indulge your own personal taste," says Joanna Doyle.

"Not true," insists the Farmington Hills decorator with a sigh-

"It is more like decorating your own home, but with added complications. You have the same budget problems, but it's a compromise between your own and the client's taste. And, in a model home, you and the client must second-guess the public. The model's decor is often a factor in the buying decision, so there's pressure on both of us to do the right thing."

The "right thing" in the Green Valley subdivision model she was hired to decorate was a combination of modern, traditional, and art deco. Key colors throughout the model are easy-on-the-eye lavender, pink and white. Shiny black accents add art deco sparkle.

"I did more shopping at T.J.Maxx, and they just love me at Pier I. One cause it all looked so sharp," she said. Proudly, Doyle points out a pair of Royal Doulton figures she picked up at T.J.Maxx "for practically nothing."

IT TAKES MORE than shopping at discount stores and flea markets to get the right effect for the right price. Like most decorators, Doyle has a cadre of talented artisans who create items according to her specifications for a reasonable fee.

For instance, an Italian artisan and his son make pottery of a fiberglass-plaster mixture. Sometimes they use existing molds, and sometimes they make molds to conform to Doyle's drawings. She paints the pottery whatever color her project calls for.

In the Green Valley model, Doyle painted two medium-sized pots white and topped them with glass circles from Pier I. The results are elegant and unique coffee tables at a very reasonable price. In the family room, an Ali Baba-sized pot was painted pale pink, and filled with stiff grasses spray-painted pale pink and lavender,

THE HOUSE SITS on a partly wooded lot on Curtis Road in Salem Township, north of Territorial, and has been the object of attention ever since building began last fall.

Actually, the whole thing began as an "interim project - something do while several other real estate ventures were waiting to take shape," the $2-year-old Ronayne said.

Involved in the project with him is his business partner, Andrew Lendrum Sr. As Lendrum-Ronayne Development Co., the pair is also developing a residential site, Fox Creek Meadows, at Seven Mile and Newburgh in Livonia, and a condominium project, Crystal Pond, at Joy and Newburgh, also in Livonia. Construction on both is scheduled to start next month.

But in the meantime, came "the challenge of this project," which started by an individual who contracted for the home and then was forced to drop it because of personal problems.

Use of a tripod helped Monte Nagler to think out and plan the composition and exposure of this winter pictorial.

Tripod's hidden advantages

In the past, I've written about the benefits of using a tripod when you photograph. You'll recall that one advantage is that it steadles your camera in a low light situation. This enables you to get the shot when hand-holding just won't work.

Another advantage is that a tripod allows you to shoot that waterfall using a long time exposure to obtain a feeling of movement and mood in your picture.

No question, these are two major benefits that will really work for you.

But did you know there is another advantage to putting a tripod to work for you, an almost intangible advantage, that is equally important? It's really quite simple - a tripod forces you to slow down.

You may ask why you should slow down and what benefit you derive by photographing more slowly.

Well, a lot. First, slowing down will force you to think out and plan your shot more carefully. You'll find yourself paying more attention to your subject and getting to know it better. You'll compose more thoughtfully and be more meticulous in determining correct exposure.

Heed the words of the old-time sea captains "slow and steady as she goes." I wonder if they weren't really talking about photography.

Log home recaptures best of bygone era

When he heard of the house, Ronayne said he was immediately interested. "There is a growing interest in this kind of house and a particularly strong attraction, espcially in this area, as evidenced by the growing number beginning to crop up in the still-rural areas around here," Ronayne said, " Besides, we were looking for something to do in between our two big projects."

AS A RESULT, the winter was exciting, beginning with the delivery of two semitruck loads of the logs - literally stacked sky-high --- right up to the final finishing details that have turned the log structure into something of a showplace.

"We had no idea of the complications of building a log house," Ronayne said with a half-grin.

Authenticity in details perhaps set the house apart from other log houses, he said.

For instance, he said, "chinking"- the process of closing up cracks and openings between the logs - is very a key factor in the insulation process. In pioneer days, the grouting was sandbased. Today it is a man-made product that blocks any possibility of air flow between the logs.

"Ours was done by husband-wife team who only do about 30 houses a year. They know what they're doing."

The size of the logs in the home are special too, he said. The logs - all hand-peeled - average 24 inches in diameter, with some as large as 36 inches. Normally, the diameter of logs used in similar homes is around 11-14 inches, but at the owner's request, larger ones are provided.

Hand-peeled logs are perfectly round in contrast to "kit home" type logs, which are machined-milled and flat on one side.

The logs are Michigan red pine and came from a Grand Rapids manufacturer, Maple Island Log Homes, north of Muskegon.

"Actually, the house is built twice. Once at the manufacturer's site where the logs are cut, hand-peeled and assembled to make sure everything fits. They are then marked and and hoisted by crane onto trucks for shipping to the building site where they again are reassembled."

ONCE INSIDE THE house, people are "surprised at how modern the house really is," Ronayne said.

But there's one important throwback to earlier times. It's the floor-to-ceiling fieldstone fireplace, the focal point of the great room-living room combination as you enter.

That was done by a 75-year-old stone mason who lived nearby.

"He happened by one day and indicated he was interested in building the fireplace," Ronayne said. "And he did it all by himself."

The house has three bedrooms and two full baths and a partially finished basement, a two-car garage and a covered oldfashioned country porch that runs the full length of the house that just begs for a porch swing and log rocker.

It is open for viewing from 1-5 p.m. Sundays. For more information, call Ronayne or Lendrum at 422-6030.

As for the optimism mentioned earlier, Ronayne's doesn't all stem from his real estate projects. Some of it comes from his recent election as president of the Livonia Optimist Club.

Designer meets budgetary challenge

Concepts in Farmington Hills, does custom formica work. Doyle had him create a step table about four inches deep to fit a narrow space. The three tiers match the purple, lavender and turquoise painting that hangs over the table. This painting, and others in the model, were created by Bloomfield Hills artist Mary Ann Hall. Doyle frames all artwork herself.

In the living room, the richly ornamental hand-painted pillows are another of Doyle's finds. Hand-painted fabric is very expensive if it's perfect, but if it's flawed, it can be very reasonable. She managed to find some that was less-than-perfect, and had pillowcovers made, turning the flawed side of the pillow toward the couch. In this room, Mary Ann Hall created two large abstract paintings in the pink, white and lavender tones of the pillews.

"THERE'S NOTHING like plants to make a house look richly decorated?' Even here, Doyle goes the extra mile. Before visiting Elliots, in Livonia, to buy artificial plants, she went to a greenhouse and studied the real thing, making note of how their branches fall. Then, when the artificial plants were in place, she bent the branches to imitate nature. "All they lack are brown edges along the leaves." Doyle noted.

The textured walls in the family room were achieved by applying a mixture of plaster and paint with a broom. The final effect is pleasing to the eye, and "not as messy as it sounds. The dining room is a testament to Doyle's ingenuity and frugality. She bought plain white fabric for the chair seats and hand-painted it herself. "Any fabric can be hand-painted," she claims.

A van conversion shop was the source of raw material for the metallic gold-and-black placements. They cost less than $2 apiece, and are selling for $20 in better stores. "We couldn't afford custom carpeting, so I bought a square off-the-roll, and bordered it with left-overs from the living room."

A square mirror, framed in black, looks very art deco hanging in a triangular direction. "I overheard one woman say, 'Now, where do you suppose they found a triangular mirror like that?"' said Doyle. "People just don't notice that it's hanging sideways."

THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE, Doyle used inexpensive wallpaper for borders on painted rooms. "It's the only way I can get the colors I want, and I can vary the width from room to room." In one of the bathrooms, a delicately patterned wallpaper is hung horizontally around the room. It gives a more ethereal effect than the standard vertical application, gently leading the eye around the wall rather than up and down.

Even the elements complicated Doyle's life. Last summer's drought created a shortage of carpet in the United States. It seems that the South is a major source of carpeting, and that a great deal of water is used to rinse carpeting after it is dyed.

There was a shortage of water in the South, and therefore a shortage of carpeting. Designers were scrambling for in-stock carpeting from the previous year - Doyle included. Green Valley homes are located in Farmington Hills, on eather adds elegance.

ASTE IS almost impossible to define because it is so personal, yet everybody has it.

The road to satisfying design begins with determining just what your taste is - what kind of furnishings you prefer.

If your way of life includes formal entertaining, you would probably be happy with traditional or soft, contemporary decor. If your lifestyle is informal, casual and full of friends who drop in for buffet suppers, then the simplicity of contemporary may be your favorite.

When I think of provincial homes, I think of a cozy, warm and friendly atmosphere. What I like best - and you have heard me say this before --is a mix of styles. In that way, there is something to please everyone, not just the people who live in the house, but those who visit as well.

'A reader asks: Since we have no formal living room, our great room serves as living/family room. I don't want to sacrifice elegance for practicality in our sofas, what do you suggest?

Answer: Leather is not only practical, but it can be very elegant. While the cost of leather may exceed the price of some fabrics, the years of service will more than pay for the extra initial cost. For me leather is "forever," it mellows and looks even better with time.

In purchasing leather be sure to use hides from a reputable source. There are natural imperfections that come with all leather. A good furniture upholsterer will know where to place these hides.

Eve Garvin has been an interior designer in the area for many years. She welcomes comments and questions from readers. Send those to her in care of this newspaper, 36251 Schoolcraft Road. Livonia 48150.

Artist Edee Joppich to hold studio sale

Edee Joppich, Farmington Hills Leelanau Peninsula, flower and figartist, will open her home for a studio tour and sale from 1-4 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 7-8.

Joppich has gained recognition for her abstract collage paintings as well as for her watercolors of still life subjects, landcapes of the ures.

She has had 16 one-woman shows and has received numerous prizes and honors including the artist in residence award for the cities of Farmington and Farmington Hills in 1978. Her work is included in the city of Livonia's public art collection.

A teacher with the Visual Arts Association of Livonia (VAAL), she will be a principal speaker at the artists workshop sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission on Saturday, April 15 in the Livonia Civic Center library, open to all area artists.

A large selection of her work will be on view at her home, 24547 Creekside Drive, Farmington Hills. Creekside is 11/2 blocks north of 10 Mile and one block west of Middlebelt.

'Requiem' to highlight Schoolcraft choir concert

The 60-voice Schoolcraft College Community Choir will present its spring concert at 4 p.m. Sunday, April 9, in Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 1160 Penniman Street, east of Sheldon Road, in Plymouth.

Artistic director and conductor David Jorlett has chosen the "Requiem" of Gabriel Faure as the choir's principal work, a rarely performed original chamber orchestration, edited by contemporary British composer and arranger John Rutter.
