Tyburski describes wife's beating death

staff writer

Leonard Tyburski testified Wednesday that he beat his wife's head against a beam and flung her body into a freezer in September of

"I closed the lid on the freezer. I just couldn't stand to look at her. I felt so terrible and ashamed that I had done that," said Tyburski, 46, testifying in his defense.

Tyburski, of Canton, on trial in Detroit Recorders Court on a charge of second-degree murder, was emotionless through most of his 45-minute testimony.

His voice cracked only when he described returning to the freezer, after washing blood off of himself, and seeing Dorothy Tyburski's lifeless body.

Dorothy Tyburski's body was discovered in January, more than three years after her death on Sept. 28, 1985. The couple's daughter, Kelly, 20, pried open the locked freezer on Jan. 2, 1989, and called Canton Tyburski, a dean at Detroit's Mackenzie High School, was arrested the same day, and the case received media attention from around the nation.

Defense attorney Carole Stanyar asked Tyburski why he left the body in the freezer for three years and three months.

"I didn't mean any disrespect to my wife's body. I knew no more harm could come to her where she was," Tyburski said.

"I loved my wife too much to just dump the body. I couldn't just dump

Tyburski also said he thought his two daughters were "too young to understand what had happened."

"I felt that at a later time it would be less painful to them to understand," he said.

Tyburski testified that the argument with his wife began when he asked her if she was having an affair with Craig Albright of Westland. Albright was Kelly Tyburski's boyfriend and was living at the Tyburski

"She said, 'Yes I am. I love Craig. He's a man and you're not. You're leaving," Tyburski said:

He said his wife threw a steak knife and some plastic containers from the freezer at him during the argument. He said she later retrieved the knife and tried to stab

"I have never seen that kind of look in her eyes before. They were red," he said.

"It was a look like, 'I'm going to take you out.' For a second, I was Tyburski said he grabbed the back of his wife's head, "and I started smashing her head against the beam many, many times."

He said he then "thrust her in the freezer, or flung her in would be a better word for it."

In his statement to police upon arrest. Tyburski said his wife had fallen into the freezer.

On Tuesday, Albright testified that he had had two sexual encounters with Dorothy, Tyburski within a

Residents drive for paving of dusty road

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

A half-mile stretch of Farmington Road, between Warren Road and Hunter, has become a health hazard and an inconvenience, according to Yorkdale subdivision residents who want the dirt road paved.

Approximately a dozen residents approached the Westland City Council Monday with their request.

The council agreed to have the city's engineering consultants come up with an estimate for putting down asphalt, but made no promises.

Deputy Mayor Andrew Spisak told residents paving city streets has been an administration priority.

"The goal of this administration is to do as many streets as possible," Mayor Charles Griffin was absent.

Joseph Marinelli of Florida is the new superintendent for the Livonia Public Schools, a district that includes northern Westland.

He was the unanimous choice of the school board Monday. He will begin his new duties Aug. 1.

The selection completes a search process begun shortly after James Carli's Dec. 20 death.

Marinelli is now the associate superintendent of the Orange County, Fla., schools. The other finalist considered by the school board was Lee Hansen, superintendent of the Poudre School District R-1 in Fort Collins, Colo.

In choosing Marinelli, trustees cited a talent for working with people and legislators, comments by staff and school leaders who met both candidates and favored Marinelli, and a demonstrated ability to work hard to get things done.

"I'm just very excited about the opportunity to work with an excellent school board and a very capable staff," Marinelli said. The new superintendent said he's looking forward to "developing a district plan with the board and the community for the '90s and beyond." Trustee Carol Strom, who heads the board personnel committee, called the effort - which included visits to the candidates' home districts - "the most difficult task I have faced in my entire life."

"We hope we're doing the best thing for the district," Strom said after the Monday committee meeting

Celebrities cheer homebound boy

The Cooper Elementary School fifth grader has been so busy talking to Detroit Red Wings players lately you'd think he was trying to swing a major trade.

Really though, the only thing Brandon would like to swap is his oxygen tank. Maybe for a couple of hockey sticks and some tickets to next fall's season opener.

Brandon, 11, is chronically ill with the cystic fibrosis. The genetic disease - with no known cure - has slowly crippled his respiratory system and attacked other vital organs since it was diagnosed when he was eight months old.

Tethered to portable oxygen tanks since March, the boy who once lived for outdoor activities like baseball and hockey is becoming only a hary memory to his mother, Diane O'Gra-

The "old" Brandon has been replaced by a mostly homebound child whose diversions are computer games and movie videocassettes.

"HE CAN'T EVEN ride his bike in the neighborhood anymore," Diane O'Grady said last week. The calls from Brandon's hockey heroes, arranged by friends of the family including Sue Calvaird, have been a bright spot.

"He know the calls were coming so it really wasn't a surprise," Mrs. Grady said. 'But still, each time the phone rang it really picked up his spirits."

For Brandon's parents, relief is a little more elusive than a call from a local celebrity. Brandon requires constant attention and his medical care has been a financial strain on the family for years, more so since

Brandon had been attending class at Cooper School, but his deteriorating condition now requires constant hookup to the oxygen tanks.

Also, there are four breathing treatments each day. He takes special medication to help him digest food and to boost his immune system. He's constantly fighting off pneumonia, his mother said.

The city treated the road with chloride to help control the dust after repeated calls from residents two weeks ago.

"This is no longer an old country road with 10 homes," said Terry Davis, a subdivision resident. "Now we have 50 or 60 homes and a lot of commercial traffic on Farmington

THE DUST plays havoc with school children walting for buses each morning or playing in the neighborhood, and adults have complained of breathing problems, Davis said.

Road conditions have contributed to at least one major car accident and several minor mishaps during the last four years, Davis said. When a motorist hit a child on a bicycle several years ago, "the driver said he couldn't stop in time on the gravel," he said.

The resident said inspectors from the Environmental Protection Agency told him the dust situation was "out of control."

Another resident, Janet Stockwell, said she surveyed neighborhood residents who said they would be willing to share the paving costs if the road was black-

COUNCIL PRESIDENT Kenneth Mehl said the issue had come up before, but this was the first time residents were willing to share the cost.

"There's a legal problem with that," Mehl said. "What do you tell other people in other neighborhoods who say pave my street (and assess the entire city)?"

that was attended by all seven trustees, prior to the board meeting.

WHILE TRUSTEES voted 7-0 for Marinelli during the regular board meeting to show support for the new superintendent, his selection was indicated by an earlier 5-2 vote after discussion of the candidates at the committee meeting.

Trustees Diane "Pat" Tancill and Patricla Sari, who said that Marinelli was an excellent candidate, nevertheless favored Hansen.

Sari, who talked with Hansen's coworkers in Fort Collins, stressed his knowledge of curriculum. "In a fiveyear time period, he has turned that district around," she said.

And while trustees and school leaders compared Marinelli's outgoing personality with Hansen's more laid-back style, Sari sald, "After getting to talk to Lee, you see he is a very warm, caring person." Tancill, who also talked with school employees in Fort Collins, cited Hansen's "great professionalism, a real strength in curriculum."

While Strom said Hansen "does a wonderful job one-on-one and is a very powerful curriculum person, I am concerned that after five years people are telling him he needs to be more outgoing."

Trustee Marjorie Roach said that after school leaders met with both 'candidates, "most of the people seemed to be in favor of Dr. Marinel-

Roach added that with school finance reform plans being discussed in the Michigan Legislature - several of which could take money away from the Livonia schools -Marinelli "is far superior in this area," as he has worked as a lobbyist for schools.

TRUSTEE Richard McKnight of Westland cited Marinelli's talent for dealing with people, which he said was comparable to that demonstrated by Carli.

'We liked the direction the school district'was going in," he said, adding Marinelli's ability to "work with people and get them to buy into what you're proposing is important."

Marinelli is scheduled to return to Livonia today, to begin negotiating a contract with school officials. John Rennels, assistant superintendent for personnel, said Marinelli's annual salary would likely be around $90,000.

Strom joined other trustees in praising the work Carole Samples, named acting superintendent after Carll's death.

"She managed to keep this school district moving ahead during a difficult time," Strom said.

Marinelli will likely begin work by the end of the month, said Rennels. adding the new superintendent will attend a training conference for new superintendents before assuming the Job full time Aug. 1.

An employee told police the gunman entered the store at 10:20 p.m. and approached the cash register. After asking for a job application and making small talk, the man jumped behind the counter and pulled a handgun from his boot, the employee said.

Witnesses told police a second man, acting as a lookout, stood guard outside the front door.

The gunman threatened the clerk and ordered her to open the cash register and hand him the money, the employee told police. After grabbing a stack of bills, he ordered her to lie on the floor.

The gunman then walked out the door and fled on foot with his accomplice, witnesses said. They told police the pair ran behind the store and disappeared.

Police found a handgun beside Giller's body. The gun apparently was owned by Giller. Ballistic tests by the Michigan State Police should determine if Giller fired at his killer before he was shot.

Murray said Giller owned a "house full of guns." Family members have not yet determined if one is missing. Police have not recovered the murder weapon.

Giller and wife Catherine, 64, had just returned from a shopping trip when the shooting took place. Police said Catherine Giller went into the house first; Giller was to follow with groceries.

Giller told police she walked in the door and was hit in the head.

"We don't know if she was knocked unconscious two seconds or 10 minutes," Murray said.

Giller regained consciousness, found her husband lying on his back near the garage, thought he had suffered a heart attack and called her son, who in turn dialed 911 to report a heart attack.

She told police she saw two white males in the house. Police don't know if more people are involved. "She saw two, but there might have been four or five and maybe someone in a car," Murray said. Police have no suspects. Murray said a basement window on the east side of the house had been smashed. FIREFIGHTERS ARRIVED at the home expecting to treat a heart attack victim. Instead, they found a man who showed no vital signs of life and shotgun pellets in his chest.

Firefighters left the body at the scene, awaiting the arrival of investigators from the Wayne County Medical Examiners' Office and the Michigan State Police.

Family members apparently took Catherine Giller to St. Mary Hospital, where she was treated and released.

When shot, Giller apparently had been walking south from the garage toward the back door of his house. Police said the groceries still were in the car.

From the angle of the wound, in the lower left chest area, it appears Giller was shot by someone standing in the backyard, not in the house. It is not known if Giller was walking with the gun in his hand, or if it dropped from his person after he was shot.

Giller's brick ranch house sits at the end of a long driveway off of Seven Mile, between Gill and Levan, near Bicentennial Park. The back yard, which extends southward quite a distance, contains vehicles, taxicabs and construction equipment. A white wrought iron fence stands along Seven Mile while various types of fences encircle the estate.

A spokesman for the Greater Detroit Cab Co., 143 Henry St., Detroit, identified Giller as the founder of the company but declined to comment further on a man he called a "business acquaintance and friend."

Giller apparently had been shot last year by a driver he had fired. The driver then committed suicide. POLICE ARE unsure if anything is missing from the house. Murray said it is unusual for a burglar to carry a shotgun. "Did they take a weapon? Was it someone he knew? Was it a property crime that turned into murder? We can only speculate right now," Mur-

Gary Lane resident Eleanor Mahler said she heard gunfire around 10 p.m. Gary Lane runs southward along the length of Giller's property. New homes comprising Carrington Estates subdivision back up to Giller's property.

"It sounded like a shot, but I thought, it can't be, not in this neighborhood," Mahler said. "I wondered who would be shooting.'

Luke Palushaj, who has lived across the street from the Giller home for four years, said he had never met the family.

"We saw a lot of cars pull in there, but we never had the opportunity to meet them."

Giller's murder was the first in Livonia in nearly three years. In August 1986, a Livonia businessman found the body of a man in a trash dumpster on Five Mile Road. No one was ever charged in the crime.

EpiSmile, for the smile you've always wanted.

Achieve The Designer Smile

EpiSmile is a remarkable new tooth brightener and cleanser that can give you whiteness you can measure. Safe and powerful, it is the result of years of research by Dr. Irwin Smigel, innovator in the field of aesthetic dentistry and a leading New York dentist. Having earlier developed the technique of dental bonding, Dr. Smigel was particularly determined to find a new, non-abrasive, stainremoving formula for his patients with bonded teeth, a formula he later ascertained to be just as safe and effective on natural teeth.

EpiSmile also protects against plaque. CalProx™ the stain remover in EpiSmile, works by dissolving an invisible layer. of protein that constantly forms over tooth surfaces and attracts stain and plaque. When that layer is removed, there is nothing for stain and plaque to adhere to. EpiSmile also contains fluoride so it may be used in place of regular toothpaste.

Inside the EpiSmile box is a unique measuring device that lets you measure the improvement in the whiteness of your teeth. Measure before you start, then brush twice a day as directed. Generally after three weeks, you will begin to measure the difference. Your teeth will certainly feel different right away. . . slicker, smoother ... on your way to the brighter smile you've always wanted.

EpiSmile comes in a 4 oz. pump container, $12. Cosmetics, all stores except Twelve Oaks.

Experts discover little evidence of ritual killing here

This is the final story in a three-part series examining animal cruelty.

By Janice Brunson staff writer

Jack McMahan, a former North Carolina police officer and Florida sheriff turned humane officer, cautions against reading his employment manuel at night "'cause it's "sorta scary."

McMahan, a seasoned officer who investigates animal cruelty for the Michigan Humane Society, is the organization's specialist on ritual killing, perhaps the most chilling form of cruelty visited upon helpless ani-

While admittedly few such incidents have ever been documented in the metropolitan Detroit area, McMahan maintains it is because of a lack of evidence, not events.

"Most of my experience comes from books, not actual experience," McMahan said, because documenting ritual killing is extremely difficult. Clues are rarely left behind.

In the six years he has been an animal investigator McMahan has observed only one certain instance of animal sacrifice.

In early 1987, the body of a black pit bull was discovered on a carpeted altar beneath a makeshift arch of bricks in a deserted foundry along Detroit's riverfront. The dog had been stabbed in the heart. Nearby, the staked head of a doll was missing its left eye. Left is symbolic of Sa-

"WE THINK whoever did it knew only a little (about the occult),' McMahan said, because knowlegeable Satanists would remove the right eye that represents God.

Although an extensive investigation failed to turn up any clues, McMahan suspects the scene was the activity of teens dabbling in the oc-Steve Doran of Southfield, a former private detective who has written a handbook on the occult and now consults on the subject, agreed.

Doran said, to the best of his knowledge, there is no organized Church of Satan in Michigan. Moreover, most of those practicing the occult are bored teens, many living in rural areas with little else to do. There is no increase in occult activity now. It is simply more public, said Doran.

The common denominator of all occult activity, according to Doran, is why people become involved.

"They're after the promise of ultimate power. It's a very individualized religion; getting something for nothing. People set their own criteria, based on their own needs," he Doran first encountered the occultin 1981, while a security officer for the U.S. Marine Corps. Within two years, he encountered another two incidents, each involving enlisted men in Korea and Okinawa.

"The more I learn, the more I realize how little I actually know and understand about it all," Doran said.

OCCULT PRACTICES often include animal sacrifice, according to Detective Larry Jones of the Boise, Idaho, police force who founded Cult Crime Impact Network in 1987 after realizing "there was a tremendous lack of information on occultmotivated crime.

"Animal sacrifice sounds benign enough, until you look at some of the mutilation and torture involved, and think about the personal commitment it takes to do such things," Jones sald.

The network, which collects and disseminates national information on occult-related crime and stages workshops to increase awareness on the subject, includes law enforcement officials, members of the judiciary, social workers and psychologists who rely on one another for information on subjects little known or understood.

The topic is immense. There are countless practices, each with their own complicated rituals, symbolism and delties: Satanic cults like the Church of All Worlds, the Temple of Truth or the better known Ordo Templi Orientis (OTO), and voodoo. Santeria and Palo Mayornbe, based on primitive African and West Indies

Two-thirds of the American public believe the devil exists, and half of those see evidence that he directly affects their lives, according to an article on Satan in this month's issue of Life Magazine.

DIANE DASKALAKIS of Plymouth Township is certain that Satanic worship is alive and well, "threaded" throughout society and, in particular, the Plymouth-Canton-school district which she and others in the area who share her convictions have targeted for change.

They have organized as Citizens for Better Education. And Daskalakis, self-taught on the twin subjects of witchery and Satanism, has emerged as a leader of the conserva tive Christian group.

Some months ago, Daskalakis said she explored underground tunnels at the abandoned Wayne County Child Development Center on Sheldon and Five Mile roads. Based on a video tape of the astonishing experience, the facility, closed since 1978, appears to have hosted a myriad of activity since.

'We found two, one outside and one inside," Daskalakis sald, referring to what she sald are sites of animal sacrifice, complete with altars, skeletons, boiling pots and hides. Graffiti-covered walls proclaim "Satan lives" and "die," in addition to such satanic symbols as triple-6's and five-point stars.

The skeleton outside is likely a cat, the bones boiled clean or worn clean with time. A clot of fur hide is heaped nearby. Inside, the decomposing carcass is clearly that of a

Capt. Philip Presnell of Northville Township police said a co-investigation with Michigan State Police concluded the facility has been damaged by vandals but "there is no evidence to Indicate occult activity."

Daskalakis concludes otherwise. "Unbelievability is attached to the topic. Because we're more aware, we're more able to identify signs,' she said. The future? "There is going to be more of it, lots, lots, lots more."

Triumph of Bad Boys becomes good sales

By Noreen Flack special writer

> Bad is everywhere. It's on the street corners. It's in department stores. It's entered homes.

Adults, teens, small children, they've all gone bad.

BUT THE manufacturer of the Bad Boys T-shirt, Athletic Supporter Ltd. in Farmington Hills, has proved just how good bad can be.

'We're making as many as 15,000 T-shirts a day," said Bill Berris, president. "Everyone wants their goods the next day.

"Department stores are physically coming here and picking up merchandise. Bad in this instance certainly means good."

The Detroit Piston's victory over the Los Angeles Lakers for the National Basketball Association World Championship last week marked the end of the season for the Motor City Bad Boys, but it was just the beginning for the Athletic Supporter Ltd. production crew.

Only 48 hours after the championship, Berris was working with six hours of sleep, trying to keep up with T-shirt demands from distributors.

Demands will continue for at least a few more weeks, Berris said.

ASSISTANT PRODUCTION manager Debbie Bottomly clocked in over 80 hours last week. She said employees are determined to meet all requests.

"I just keep seeing cases and cases of shirts," Bottomly said. "This is the first time this company has experienced this type of growth and the growth problems that come out of

"But I'm more concerned with getting the work done and making sure things are running," Bottomly said. "It's like taking a puzzle and making all the pieces fit."

With a shortage of skilled workers. Athletic Supporter Ltd.'s 40 full-time employees will be working long hours for the next few weeks, but 20 more people are planned to be hired soon, Berris said.

Todd Robinson, screen printer, expects to work 80 hours during each week until business slows down.

"The monotony gets to you," Robinson said. "But I hope we can get something like this going again in the future. Just one design and you can make $1 million."

"How well a team does definitely affects the business," Berris said.

Athletic Supporter Ltd., a Farmington Hills Pistons logos and designs.

This is a portion of the assembly line at the company that produces T-shirts with Detroit

"Michigan has had a fantastic year with the Red Wings winning the National Hockey League Norris Division and now the Pistons.

"Sales have skyrocketed. We have had a 400 percent increase."

BERRIS AND art director Robin Brant designed the Bad Boys logo in November 1988 and began to market the design on T-shirts.

"We were sitting around trying to come up with something," Berris recalled. "We were thinking of this tough, serious image.

"I know a lot of the players and they are tough, strong winners. This Bad Boy thing got right behind them."

The Bad Boy best-seller T-shirt is designed on black, a basketball with a skull and crossbones in the center, and the lettering - BAD BOYS across the top. The T-shirt sells for about $13 retail.

AS MUCH as the design has complemented the team and pleased Detroiters, Berris' marketing strategy does not limit the Bad Boy logo to the Pistons or to the Motor City.

"Initially it was meant for Detroit," Berris said. "But now it has gone nationwide. We're selling Bad Boys stuff all over the world."

Athletic Supporter Ltd. also manufacturers a series of character designs for Pistons Joe Dumars, Bill Laimbeer, John Salley and Dennis Rodman and former Piston Rick Mahorn, the original Bad Boy.

Other championship T-shirts include "We Beat LA," "Bad Boy NBA Finals 1989," "CityScene," and "The Sweep."

MEA decides Aug. 5 which plan to push

By Tim Richard staff writer

Only one can pass. And the major supporters must decide which they will push.

Voters on Nov. 7 will decide which — if either — of two state school money proposals to support.

"We're telling our people not to oppose either one. We've supported both in the past," said Larry Chunovich, 'the former Southfield math teacher who heads the Michigan Education Association, the largest teachers' union.

MEA delegates will decide Aug. 5 whether to support Plan 1, a halfcent increase in the sales tax worth $400 million to public schools, or Plan 2, a two-cents increase with $400 million for public schools and $1.1 billion for property tax relief.

POLITICAL EYES will be on the MEA when its 60-member board meets in Sault Ste. Marie to decide where to concentrate not only its money but its member power. There is one board member for every 2,000 teachers plus others to represent higher education and support staff.

"We're looking at the polling data. We're looking at the (state aid) distribution formula," Chunovich said Monday.

"We will not oppose either one. We're having hearings in all 17 regions of the state with information on each proposal." Wayne County is Region 2; Oakland, Region 7.

"If they (local units) have a tendency to back one, we say, 'Don't oppose the other.' We need one to pass. We have to find out which."

By law, if both are approved, the one with the most yes votes will take effect next Jan. 1. A voter-approved amendment to the state constitution is required to raise the. sales tax rate.

CHUNOVICH DECLINED to say how much money the MEA would put into the campaign.

It has been widely reported the Democratic-leaning union didn't buy into Gov. James J. Blanchard's fund-raisers, first because it was saving its cash for the money campaign, second because it was miffed the governor didn't back any school money proposal sooner.

Blanchard is expected to support Plan 1, which came out of a committee he called together. He considers Plan 2 to have no chaffee of voter approval.

Chunovich estimated the total campaign would cost "in the neighborhood of $3 million. We look to a lot of groups," he said, citing associations of school boards, school administrators, manufacturers and a coalition called Equal Partners composed of 28 groups such as the

The MEA will provide the most field workers. "We are probably the only organization with members in every precinct," Chunovich said. "It will be similar to a millage effort — 568 local efforts.

Lawmakers split on plans

It's not 100 percent certain those proposals will be on the Nov. 7 ballot. They are tied to five House bills amending business property taxes and taking the sales tax off some utility bills. The House has approved them, but the Senate Finance Committee has been sitting on them since March 7.

Faxon sees an opportunity for mischief. "I question whether you fect is unknown," he said, calling R-Plymouth the step a "substantial flaw."

SEN. FAUST and Rep. Kosteva both lean toward the second plan.

"It's fundamental, long-term change. It addresses the complete problem - schools and the property tax." said Kosteva. He said the 2-percent plan was supported by in-formula districts such as Wayne-Westland but not by out-of-formula

While Senate majority leader John Engler, the probable 1990 gubernatorial candidate, voted no, such leading Republican lights as Dan DeGrow of Port Huron, John Schwarz of Battle Creek, finance chairman Norm Shinkle of Monroe and William Sederburg of East Lansing voted

Program offers jobs to area youth

The Michigan Youth Corps, the nation's largest state-funded youth employment program, begins its seventh year by providing jobs for more than 20,000 18- to 21-year-olds at thousands of work sites.

An applicant must be 18 to 21 years old, unemployed and a Michigan resident. Applicants from households headed by an unemployed person are given first hiring priority.

Workers earn $3.35 an hour, supervisors earn $5.50 an hour. Jobs are full time and last an average of 10 weeks. Jobs are sponsored by units of government, educational institutions and public or private non profit agencies.

Applications are available at Private Industry Corp., 33057 Schoolcraft, in the I-96 office center, and the Whitman Center on West Chicago in Livonia. In Redford Township, applications are available at 25200 Five Mile; in Westland at John Glenn High School on Marquette and Employment Training on Wayne Road south of Joy; and in Garden City at Garden City High, Middlebelt Road between Warren and Ford roads. Plymouth and Canton residents are serviced by the Livonia offices. Information also can be obtained by calling a special hotline number: 421-9033.

Applications are also available at any Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) office and all Department of Social Services (DSS)

The types of jobs range from outdoor maintenance, YMCA daycare programs, clerical positions in district courts, city halls and parks and recreation departments.

"The Youth Corps provides experience and training for Michigan's unemployed young men and women and contributes to a quality workforce for the future, said Gov. James Blanchard in a prepared statement.

"CORPS MEMBERS provide valuable community services in parks, forests, hospitals, libraries, museums and other public sites. And this year, corps members began early by planting trees along interstate highways throughout the state in a continuing project that improves the beauty and quality of the environment," Blanchard added. Corps members planted more than 60,000 fir trees in highway beautification efforts. Trees were planted along I-75, I-94 between Detroit and Metropolitan Airport, and in the Kalamazoo, Lansing and Grand Rapids

The program was launched by Blanchard in 1983. More than 130,000 young men and women are expected to find summer employment as corps workers.

Last year, 14 percent of corps members were high school dropouts, 33 percent were on public assistance and 47 percent were from families with incomes at or below the poverty level.

"This summer the Youth Corps will again emphasize hard work, team work, getting high school diploma and building good work habits that lead to permanent private sector jobs," said Youth Corps director Betty Howe, who also heads the department of labor.

A major effort of the Michigan Youth Corps is ensuring that Michigan summer recreational facilities and beaches are in tip top shape for tourists. Youth Corps members have been at work for a month at numerous beach sites from Warren Dune State Park to Traverse City State

FOR THE second year, the Youth Corps also chose special blue ribbon projects for outstanding community projects that involve private sector support and quality work sites for corps members, Howe said. Thirty blue ribbon projects were selected this year and $1 million in state money was matched with an equal amount of private sector support.

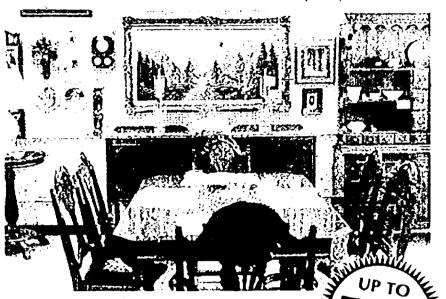

Blue ribbon projects range from building a canoe livery on the Rouge River to restoring the Sand Point lighthouse in Escanaba in time for the 200th anniversary of lightnouses in the United States.

A number of businesses supporting the program, the Youth Corps employee honor roll, again this year will guarantee job interviews to . Youth Corps graduates to assist them in finding jobs.

The youth corps program runs June 1 to Sept. 30. All Youth Corps work sites are with non-profit agencies and units of government.

Pollack bill would make polluters pay for cleanup

By Tim Richard staff writer

An environmentalist effort to make polluters pay for toxic waste cleanups ran into tough questioning in the state Senate Natural Resources Committee.

But Senate Bill 375 was stoutly backed by Department of Natural' Resources director David Hales, the attorney general's office and the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM).

"The cost of cleanup should be borne by those who caused it when they're identified and collection is possible," said the sponsor, Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor.

"This is not meant to be punitive," she said of the fines and treble damages her bill would enact. "We have them as a stick."

An opening hearing in Lansing last week was cut short by pressure on the Legislature to put school money proposals on the ballot and clear the Capitol for extensive renovations. No vote will be taken for some weeks, said chairman Vern Ehlers. R-Grand Rapids.

THE PRESENT 1982 toxic waste law is weak, Pollack said.

"The state has no direct authority to order a polluter to clean up a toxic site. The money that is recovered is deposited into the state's general fund; there is no requirement that it be used for toxic waste cleanups."

The $640 million bond issue approved by voters in 1988 should be aimed at "orphan sites, where no viable responsible party can be found." she said.

Her proposal would make the DNR director, rather than the governor, responsible for cleanups; give DNR officials better access to propoerty; and seeks to replace court cases with administrative orders.

BUT SEN. JOE Mack, D-Ironwood, predicted "a lot of court litigation," something Pollack is aiming to avoid.

Mack was displeased that wastes from World War II war production would be covered. "I worked in the shops. There was a mandate from the (federal) government. It was a wartime emergency . . . No one knew about it (contamination)." he Added Sen. Harry Gast, R-St. Joseph: "I have a concern with 'threatened release' of contaminants." Gast also was bothered by sanctions against chemicals' that "may become" injurious to public health.

"You need the word 'threatened,' " Pollack replied, "because DNR sometimes sees an accident about to happen."

DNR's Hales said the bill would speed cleanups rather than cause litigation. "We've spent years dealing with lawyers rather than cleaning up contaminated sites," he said.

ROBERT REICKEL of the state attorney general's environmental protection division said the Pollack bill would correct several defects in the 1982 law.

"The law does not identify who's legally responsible. The amendment provides standards of responsibilitv." he said.

"There are no (present) incentives to clean up. There is no way for the state to recover the costs of cleanups."

To Mack's objections, Reickel said, "The defendant must have exercised due care. Regardless of when a problem was in place, someone is responsible."

Reickel said SB 375's standards are the same as in a federal statute. But to recover state cleanup costs, the state cannot use the federal law in federal court; it needs a state law.

PIRGIM program director Andrew Buchsbaum sàid Michigan has more than 2,000 toxic waste sites "with only a handful of completed cleanups in the past decade.

"DNR estimates the costs of cleanup up existing sites will be between $3 billion and $8 billion." He added that the federal "superfund" may assist in cleaning up only 80 of the worst sites.

High court to rule on state PAC case

By Wayne Peal

staff writer

PACs, political action committees, could be a thing of the past depending upon an upcoming U.S. Supreme Court ruling on a case involving the Michigan Chamber of Commerce.

The high court could make it legal for some political advocacy groups to make direct contributions to candidates without having to create a PAC. Such contributions would be exempt from record-keeping and reporting requirements of state campaign finance law.

In 1985, the state chamber bought an advertisement in a Grand Rapids newspaper on behalf of Richard Bandstra, a Republican state House candidate with money from its general operating budget, not its PAC. A federal judge ruled the direct, non- and state Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-

PAC, purchase was illegal. The 6th Northville, were among the candi-U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the ruling last September, paving the way for the Supreme Court ruling.

Despite its potential effect on campaign financing, the case has attracted little outside interest.

"As far as I'm conerned, the two expenses should be kept separate." said John White, executive director of the Livonia-Chamber of Commerce. "But that's a decision our directors would have to make."

The Livonia chamber supports candidates, both in conjunction with the state chamber and through its own PAC.

"We mostly support candidates in county and state races," White said. "We try to stay out of local politics."

State Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, dates receiving support from the Livonia chamber PAC in 1988 races, White said.

The Michigan Association of Home Builders, which also maintains a PAC, hasn't yet discussed the ruling's potential outcome, according to Lynn Egbert, the organization's executive vice president for governmental affairs.

Love of politics, leadership prompted run for SC board

By Mary Rodrigue staff writer

Graduating first in his class from the University of Detroit with a major in political science probably helped Thaddeus McCotter snare his first elected office this month.

It certainly didn't hurt. McCotter, 23, is now midway through law school at U-D and embarking oh a new part-time career - that of board trustee of the Livonia based Schoolcraft Community College.

Son of Livonia City Councilwoman Joan McCotter, the new school trustee is quick to point out that while name recognition may have helped with Livonia voters, he was virtually unknown throughout the remainder of the district, which includes Plymouth, most of Canton Township, Garden City, Northville, part of Westland and a small section of Novi.

"If a person wants to succeed in the public arena, they have to stand on their own. No amount of family support will get you there," he said.

"PEOPLE in the (Republican) party and a (Schoolcraft) board member approached me about a position on the board," added McCotter, who in true political fashion refused to divulge which trustee asked him to run for office.

A two time precinct delegate who also took off a school term to work for the re-election of U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, McCotter is no stranger to the political process. Nor to rock and roll.

Posters of Winston Churchill, Bobby Kennedy and the Rolling Stones decorate his room. Music - he plays guitar and writes songs - and politics help define who he is.

A few years back he was part of

"That was just before (creation of) WCSX, which plays that kind of music," he recalled. "No heavy metal, no punk, no junk, no funk. We did all right for awhile. I still write songs."

Although college board trustee isn't the type of position an aspiring politician may dream about becoming, McCotter said "it becomes a question of when do you run (for office) and what do you run for. If you don't get involved, you may never get involved."

McCOTTER likes to draw differences between his generation and those who came of age during the tumultuous 60s.

"At least we want to work within the system, do constructive things," he said. "We're not just out there criticizing. We're out there doing things. If you don't stand up and express ideas, offer yourself for leadership, you can't accomplish what you set out to do. We're willing to get out there and help take responsibility for the future."

Mayoral campaign to heat up

7ESTLAND VOTERS will get a strong dose of political medicine this fall, if the mayoral campaign launched by challenger Robert Thomas is any indication of what's to come.

Thomas' initial campaign comments indicate that voters will have to do a lot of thinking about what direction they want the community to go.

While Mayor Charles Griffin hasn't formally announced his intentions to run for a second term, he has dropped numerous hints that he will be a candidate.

In the upcoming campaign, Griffin will stress that he has provided leadership in attracting commercial and industrial developments and creating a renewed sense of community pride.

At the same time, he and the city council have added civilian dispatchers to allow six police officers to be freed up for road patrol duties.

But it won't be easy to convince voters.

In his opening statement, Thomas, a longtime city public services department employee, covered several issues which will probably set the tone for the fall campaign.

For example, Thomas believes there is an overemphasis on commercial development.

Griffin has made retail growth a cornerstone of his campaign. He earlier pledged to make the city the commercial center of western Wayne

But Thomas says that the administration has paid too much attention to commercial developments and overlooked other public services such as police and fire protection.

Another part of the challenger's complaint is the perceived overbuilding of apartments. Thomas wants more effort put into single-family housing.

WHERE DO voters fit into this political equa-

Challenger Robert Thomas fired the opening shots in the upcoming mayoral primary.

Traditionally, residents want a status quo with little change.

If they moved into a rural area of the city, they would oppose any new developments.

They would also complain that new developments create traffic jams and increased demands for additional police officers and firefighters. But what voters sometimes forget is that apartment and commercial developments traditionally pay more in property taxes than they receive in public services, confirmed in a 1974 planning department study which concluded that city and school services for homeowners are subsidized by retail, industrial and apartment developments. Another issue which has been raised by city council candidate Richard Ringer is the occasional closing of one of the city's four fire stations. After one major fire this spring, an employee in a nearby drug store claimed that the fire trucks were late in responding to the blaze because the nearest fire station was closed.

In reality, the station was open and there was no delay of fire trucks getting to the blaze, but many people still believe that there is an erosion of fire department services.

The bottom line is that Griffin is confident of re-election, but has to communicate clearly and effectively what he has done and answer voters' concerns on developments and public safety ser-

Force the legislature to make hard choice

POLITICAL COURAGE has become a rare commodity in Lansing. So, you already know that.

But this time the state Legislature and executive are really trying to pull a fast one on the taxpayers of Michigan. And we should be nothing short of furious.

No matter where political inclinations lean - left, right or center -Michigan voters can feel unanimously used.

Making the tough decisions that's what we pay'em for, those hard-working state legislators. But they've figured out a ploy to avoid doing just that.

Strange, although they pass reams of bills and resolutions every session, for the last few years, state lawmakers have been paralyzed when it comes to making the most important decision of all - the future of our educational system.

But come November, you'll have an opportunity to make it blow up in their collective faces.

Let me explain. Few of the powerbrokers in Lansing are willing to risk their political skins to decide how to squeeze more money out of already beleaguered taxpayers. They've been throwing this political hot potato from one side of the aisle to the next for a couple of years, now. The governor, we all should note, hasn't been any more courageous. The potato has done it's fair share of scorching his pinkies.

But education tax reform is such a hot item that politicians feel that no matter what decision they make, the public will burn them. So in a stroke of less-than-genius, they've collectively decided to turn the tables on

In November, you will have the chance to decide. Your choices:

• A two-cent increase in sales tax, with a 37 percent cut'in school taxes for homeowners and a 22 percent decrease for business, which would garner $468 million in new dollars for schools.

 A one half-penny increase (figure that one out), which would generate $400 million.

DON'T BUY either one, folks. Although you can bet that the more than $3 million in campaign hoopla that will fill your television sets and mailboxes will talk about the two alternatives, another, more important alternative is open to you.

Vote no on both. We pay legislators to make decisions, even when they are unpopular. That should be the point of this entire election. A thousand ways to finance schools can be manufactured. So the alternatives offered are really irrelevant.

Steve Barnaby

But making state lawmakers accountable is a whole other challenge.

They'll become like a bunch of immature kids if we pass one of these alternatives. You know, as long as you keep picking up your child's clothes, the longer they'll let you do it for them.

Dropout rate

Legislation comes up short

Thanks, champs!

Your victory makes us all winners

T'S A NOVEL IDEA, and maybe we should give them credit for that. But once again our state legislators have come up short in addressing one of the problems facing Michigan educators. We are speaking of the dropout rate and a pair of proposals currently making the rounds in Lansing that would allow the state — with the approval of the school district in question — to suspend the driver's license of any youth under 18 who drops out or is expelled from high school.

Under House Bills 4234 and 4236, superintendents of public and private secondary schools would be required to report names of these youths to the secretary of state. Sponsors are Reps. Philip Hoffman, R-Horton, and Claude Trim, R-Waterford...

The bills are meant to address the state's 62percent high school graduation rate, 48th in the nation according to one survey.

ON THE surface, the intent is laudable and the plan is certainly a creative one. But let's take a look at what we'd actually accomplish with it.

Legislation like this will no doubt succeed at keeping some teenagers in school. It doesn't mean they will become better students, though.

This type of fringe student will probably manage to disrupt the learning process for others in the classroom, too.

For others, the threat of losing driving privileges won't be much of a deterrent, according to James Myers, principal at Westland's John Glenn High School.

'When you're dealing with kids who have the secretary of state's office.

State lawmakers should be working on measures that will make all youths — those who drop out and those who stay in --capable of functioning in today's society. Beef up minimum standards in reading, math and science so that by the time someone is 16, he'll have the basic skills to compete.

problems paying attention to (school) authority figures, I have to wonder if they're going to listen to police authority," Myers said.

Then too, there are students who leave school in order to support themselves or a family.

THIS KIND of legislation seems to us to be aimed at removing the symptom, not curing the problem.

State lawmakers should be working on measures that will make all youths — those who drop out and those who stay in - capable of functioning in today's society. For example, how about beefing up minimum standards in reading, math and science so that by the time someone is 16 he'll have the basic skills to compete?

The solution to the dropout problem goes beyond holding uncooperative students hostage in

Disagrees with story on trial

To the editor:

Being one of the "three or four officers who first arrived . . . " at the scene of the "Abortion Sit-in" on Nov. 12, 1988 at the Woman's Advisory Center, I am outraged at the article which appeared in the June 16 edition of your publication, written by Marie Chestney, which stated that "Demonstrators who assaulted antiabortionists . . . were not arrested because police feared for their own

This implies that the officers failed to do their duty, due to fear for their own personal safety. If that were the case, the officers would have never risked their safety by placing themselves between the two opposing groups of demonstrators.

While it is true that the officers could have legally made arrests for assaults; having done so would have resulted in possibly four arrests, leaving no officers to protect the anti-abortionists from the remaining 40-plus demonstrators. As a result of the officer's actions during that confrontation, there were no serious injurles and order was restored.

It appears that Chestney feels that the primary reason that the arrests were not made was because of the officer's fears. In fact, fear was not a factor in the actual decision of whether or not to arrest. Sound police tactics and judgments were used, with the safety of "all those involved" the primary concern.

I personally know of several letters received by the Livonia Police Department, and have seen more than one letter in your paper, commending and thanking the Livonia Police Department and its officers for their actions on that day. The majority of these letters having been written by the very people who were arrested.

I feel that such irresponsible reporting, selectively taken from testimony given under cross-examination by defense counsel in an attempt to cloud the issue in the mind of jury members, is a disservice to the paper's readers, and casts an undeserving shadow on the city of Livonia, its police department, and its police of-

Ronald C. Dehne,

Shame on city for abortions

To the editor:

A pro-life rescue mission or a rescue operation happens because unless someone intervenes, bables will die and mothers will become victims of the abortionist and his tools of death.

Since there is no informed consent (explanation of the surgery, complications, etc.) mothers go the the abortion chambers and are told only a'very small fraction of what will and could happen to them and none of the truth of what does happen to

The two rescue missions that have happened in Livonia as well as the other 13 rescues that have happened in the greater Detroit Area and Washtenaw County have been done in the spirit of repentance to God for our apathy and to save the lives of mothers and babies.

Never has the media been the goal of rescue operations. The three local TV stations had to use footage from a pro-lifers video camera (Nov. 12 rescue) because the leaders wouldn't give the sight location even under threat of it not being covered. The rescuers went on because media attention was and is not the goal.

What some people understand, and what is fact, are two entirely different things.

Judge Robert McCann's guest column in the Livonia Observer forgot to mention that he would not allow the seven defendants of the Nov. 12 rescue to say why they were sitting in front of the doors. They could not mention God or the fact that they felt non-violent, passive resistance was necessary to save human life from certain death. The jury was not allowed to know that you can trespass (break the law) to save a -life...Simply..... the Necessity De-

Livonia is a proud but sleeping community. To our shame we have three abortuarles.

When are the citizens and churches of Livonia going to wake up? Are your children aborting your grandchildren? Do you even care?

ONGRATULATIONS, Pistons. You showed us what we should have known all along — we're a winner.

The Pistons showed talent, guts and determination in earning their victory. In many ways, it's our victory as well.

It's, especially sweet that the victory came against the glamourous Los Angeles Lakers. Just think of all the time we've sat around feeling inferior to Southern California, snookered by the Hollywood hype machine.

Well, no more.

Despite its bad reputation, despite its very real problems, our area is still a pretty terrific place

The Detroit Pistons basketball championship gave the national media a chance to see our area at its best — lots of spirit and no burning cars. Maybe this victory will bring a touch of Hollywood glamour to our area.

Even if it doesn't, it should remind us that when it comes to basketball, and everything else, They've got an ocean? We've got miles and we don't have to take a back scat to anyone. We're a winner.

points of view

Racism depends on viewpoint

the distinction between the weather forecast that calls for "partly cloudy skies" and the one that promises that skies will be "partly sunny."

I think I've finally figured it out. It's the same forecast, but the way it is phrased depends on the politics of the meteorologist.

I arrived at this conclusion recently after reading countless newspaper stories and columns about a series of U.S. Supreme Court rulings relating to the general area of civil rights.

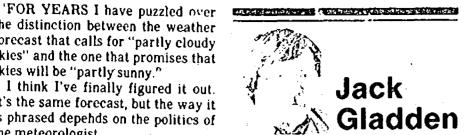

Liberals see the decisions as blows," "setbacks," "attacks" and so forth on the civil rights cause.

Conservatives, being more cautious with their language as well as their politics, tend to view the rulings as an indication that the court is returning to doing what it is supposed to do: interpreting laws according to what they say and what they mean and not what the justices think they should say and mean.

I've got to go with the conservatives on this one.

BUT ONE fascinating aspect of the whole debate is the obvious bias in the rhetoric of the civil rights activists. They must all be students of Lewis Carroll's Humpty-Dumpty.

"When I use a word," Humpty-Dumpty told Alice, "it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less."

Consider just one example. When the court ruled on June 12, in a suit brought by white firefighters in Birmingham, Ala., that white men have the right to challenge employment plans that give preferential treatment to minorities and women, civil rights activists were appalled. That's understandable, considering their point of view.

But newspapers - in their news stories, mind you, not on the opinion page - called the ruling a "new setback to minorities," a "setback to blacks and women," a "blow to affirmative action," etc.

None of the accounts that I read focused on the ruling as a "gain for white men" or a "return to fairness in hiring practices" or anything like that. Almost without exception, the decision was treated as a negative

THE SEMANTICS used in the news accounts were typical of the rhetoric of the entire civil rights movement. The words mean just what the activists choose them to Journalists, for instance, reported that the Birmingham firefighters were battling what they saw as "reverse discrimination."

I'm not sure when that phrase entered the language, but I think it was in 1978 when the high court reviewed a Callfornia case in which a white man challenged a university's affirmative action program that established a quota system for admissions. I thought then, as now, that the phrase was a convolution. Discrimination is discrimination.

"Affirmative action," itself, has a nice, positive ring to it, but when translated it simply means "paternalism." For a good cause, of course.

Never mind that "affirmative action" depends, in part, on discrimination against whites and white males in particular. It sounds positive. And that kind of discrimination, as one liberal columnist recently put it, is "discrimination for a good cause."

IN MORE ANTICS with semantics, civil rights activists said the recent court decisions are erasing all the gains that the movement has made in the past 25 years - since Lyndon Johnson signed the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

'The court doesn't seem to recognize," the liberal columnists tell us, "that racism still exists."

But wait a minute. The 1964 civil rights act didn't address "racism." It effectively outlawed "discrimination." These are two substantively different concepts. But the activists aren't making the distinction.

Discrimination is a practice that can be isolated and legislated against. It can, perhaps, in time be banished. Racism can't.

Racism is a state of mind. It has existed as long as races have existed. That doesn't make it right, but you can't legislate it out of existence. That's getting too close to Big Brotherism.

And the time has come to stop dealing with discrimination with the "eye for an eye" philosophy. Two wrongs just don't make a right. And what is "right" isn't necessarily what the liberal activists would like it to be.

That's what the court, in its recent decisions, seems to be trying to say. And that's not racist. It's justice.

Summer school has its disadvantages

Q: My daughter is going to attend summer school to take typing and government. If she takes typing now she'll be free to take more foreign language next year. And government is required for graduation. Are summer school classes as challenging as classes taken during the regular school year?

A: How challenging a course is, whether during the summer or during the regular school year, depends on the course objectives and the teacher teaching the course.

· A summer school class is usually 60 hours while the same class during the regular school year is 90.

What if the teacher selected to teach government has been teaching only world history over the past several years? Remember, in some cases, it is not easy to have the regular September to June teacher available for the summer class. Advantage or disadvantage? Disadvantage; even though the teacher has a major in social studies, a seasoned government teacher would be best for the summer class.

A few highly motivated students dents who are unmotivated have failed the class during the school year. Advantage or disadvantage? Disadvantage, Remediating unmo-tivated students while, at the same time, keeping the academically talented students challenged is a very difficult task.

A high-achieving student takes summer classes every summer to allow him/her-to take more challenging course during their four year tenure. Advantage or disadvantage? Advantage. Although contradicting the previous information, taking some skills classes, i.e. typing and basic computer skills, can free upthe ambitious student for a full schedule the next year.

Let's bring back old-style debates

AT FIRST I thought someone across town had read my 1988 column on the Lincoln-Douglas debates and was expropriating the

"No, I didn't see it," chuckled Clark Durant. "I guess great minds work along the same channel."

Durant, 40, a lawyer in Detroit, is seeking the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate next year. He's one in a prospective field of three or four who would like to take on two-term Sen. Carl Levin, 54, of Detroit. And Durant isn't coy. He's running.

Picking up on Levin's own stated intention of campaigning on issues, Durant is challenging the incumbent to debate. Not one debate, mind you, but seven. And not your pot-boiler TV debates, but a Lincoln-Douglas style series - the real life, genuine article.

TODAY'S DEBATES are made for television and people with television-type minds.

The TV mind can't concentrate on a single topic for more than a minute and a half. The TV mind thinks in terms of 20-second, smart-aleck bites instead of substance.

One recalls the vice-presidential debate where the only line that made the news was Lloyd Bentsen's jibe to Dan Quayle: "Senator, you're no John Kennedy," conveniently forgetting that JFK's senatorial nickname was "Bedchamber Jack."

In the typical TV-style debate, a panel of newspeople pop surprise questions on any topic under the sun, and the debater has one to three minutes to respond. Such debates reveal who has been coached in TV-style answers, who can memorize and deliver quips, but not who can formulate public policy and run a government.

The pundits analyze who "came off" best, who seemed most confident, who sweated. They never get into substance.

DURANT IS proposing the winner of the GOP primary and Levin discuss topics Lincoln-Dougias style.

In that format, the first speaker goes on for two time units, the second for three time units, and the parent company of the Observer first closes in one time unit. The time units can be up to a half-hour.

In my own view, the debates should have a single topic: the defense budget; why the U.S. has the most expensive medical care in the world but not necessarily the best; the international economy; the dissolving family and its burden on the welfare system — or anything else the combatants can agree on.

But none of this two minutes per topic, OK?

Durant's notion is to scatter the debates across the state, and not just in a TV studio or the Economic Club of Detroit. I propose the UAW local on Plymouth Road, Clarenceville High School (some folks are serious about dissolving the district), some place near the Warren tank plant, a Farm Bureau hall in Clinton County (the farm economy has been wretched for years), and the Miller Auditorium at Western Michigan University (Upjohn Co. is there; it waited for years to get federal approval for a hair product, and it's the topic of takeover

Both men are attorneys of some skill. I'd like to hear them discuss the Bork nomination to the Supreme Court (Levin voted no), a matter covered superficially as a women's rights political story oh TV. The Wayne State Law School in Detroit or the Cooley Law School in Lansing would be good sites.

A college debate coach would referee them. I'm uncertain whether I would work reporters' questions into the format. If there were questions, they should be confined to the debate topic and aimed at clarifying points or eliciting direct replies of Candidate A to Candidate B's remark.

Now those would be debates!

Metro expansion

Officials say its back on track

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

Wayne County will move forward with a proposed $1 billion expansion at Detroit Metropolitan Airport under an agreement with the new owners of Northwest Airlines.

Northwest Vice President James Thorne and Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara announced plans Tuesday in a joint press conference. Northwest will spend $3 million for a design competition to obtain concepts for the construction of a new World Travel Center, a 60 to 70 gate midfield terminal to handle all international flights. The request for proposals is scheduled to be issued in July, with designs to be sybmitted to Northwest and the county shortly thereafter.

The plan ends an adversarial relationship between the top air carrier at Metro and county officials, who filed suit last month in federal court to block the altline's takeover. McNamara said the county will drop legal action.

'Since March, a battle has been waged for control of NWA, Inc., parent company of Northwest Airlines. Speculation ended Monday when a group headed by Los Angeles based investor Alfred Checchi agreed to buy the airline for $121 a share, or $3.6 billion.

"WE'RE JUST ELATED."

McNamara said. "The Checchi buyout is turning out to be good news. Metro is now on its way to becoming the kind of airport everyone in Michigan can be proud of."

The county's fear over the past few months has been that whatever group took over the airline it would be so in debt that it would be unable to commit to expansion plans already negotiated. But Checchi is keeping Northwest management in place and has announced intentions to see the airline grow, not shrink in

Michael Duggan, deputy county executive, said Monday that the county has been in negotiations for two weeks with Northwest brass to reach an accord.

At risk was the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars in planned development providing thousands of jobs, according to Duggan. McNamara said the new terminal should be ready within five years.

McNamara praised Michigan's congressional delegation who made it clear that Northwest would have a fight in Washington had it agreed to a takeover that left the company in a financially precarious position.

Northwest, the fourth largest air carrier in the U.S. and by far the dominant airline at Detroit Metro, accounting for nearly 60 percent of business, has been primarily responsible for a dramatic rise in operations and air passenger traffic at Metro since 1982.

New construction will be financed by the federal Department of Transportation, federal and state grants, and the airlines, which will pay the lion's share based on user fees, according to McNamara.

To upgrade facilities, Wayne County issued a $90.5 million bond sale in December 1985. As part of that bond sale, Republic (which was bought out by Northwest in 1986) promised to support a larger capital improvement program.

A general airport revenue bond issue to finance phase one of a multiphase capital improvement program was sold by the county in August 1986 for approximately $166 million.

Extensive studies have been undertaken - with Northwest the only airline represented on a master plan committee - to determine the optimum design and location of additional improvements.

The anticipated cost of the expansion program, which would be implemented over several years, is proiected in excess of $908 million.

The county contends that the needs of the air traveling public in southeast Michigan cannot be adequately served by present airport facilities.

WITH THE PROPOSED World Travel Center, Metro Airport would become one of the most modern and efficient passenger terminals in the world, McNamara said. Some im-

Improvements at the international terminal included a new mechanized bag line, 16 federal inspection stations, six new custom stations, offices, an escalator and a new elevator. That $7 million capital improvement was bonded in 1986 as part of capital improvements.

Northwest, which uses Metro as a hub, controls 57 percent of the passenger traffic at the airport.

In 1982, 4.2 million passengers boarded planes at Metro. That was up to 9.9 million in 1987 and was projected, before Northwest became an object of takeovers, to reach 14.8 million by 1995.

Many bidders sought NWA

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

NWA Inc., the Minnesota-based parent company of Northwest Airlines, officially went on the selling block last April, a month after two investor groups launched buyqut

One of those groups, headed by Alfred Checchi, a former Marriott executive, was successful Monday, clinching the deal for $121 a share, or $3.6 billion for the fourth-largest airline in the U.S.

A rival offer by Los Angeles financier Marvin Davis for $2.7 billion was rejected, as was a subsequent hostile offer by the Davis group.

Various other groups were interested in acquiring Northwest, the major airline operating out of Detroit Metropolitan Airport. They included Kohlberg, Kravis Roberts & Co., one of the premier leveraged buyout firms in the country, which paid a record $25 billion for the acquisition of RJR Nabisco Inc. earlier this year.

Also offering bids were a Minneapolis investment firm, MEI Diversified, Inc., which includes Carl Pohlad, owner of the Minnesota Twins; corporate raider Irwin Jacobs; and Pan Am Corp. Chairman Thomas Plaskett.

Last week Northwest received its final round of bids and began meeting with Checchi.

Northwest's stock jumped from $42.25 when buyout speculation began to $114.12. Last year, the airline generated $5.65 billion in revenues.

FLAG provides parents with support, advocacy

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

> AUGHTER SERVES only to interrupt the tears.

The people sitting on the couch in the church reading area all share one thing in common: They have a family member with AIDS.

"My brother was up vacuuming the house three days before he died," one woman said. "My brother is like that, too," another woman said. "He'll be up running around all day and then he'll be in bed the next." "I always hold out for hope," said a third woman, the mother of a son with the disease. "I think, 'Maybe it's just a virus.' But everyone tells me I have to face it.' Their topics jump back and forth — how insurance companies tried to deny the loved ones medical coverage by raising premiums; the color of the skin brought on by the ravages of the disease.

They also share lighthearted anecdotes, memories that will only be reminisced about with the help of a photo album.

Without benefit of a pencil or paper, they are able to draw a sketch of their son or brother.

In the group is a woman whose brother recently died of AIDS, a mother and a sister of another person who has the disease and a man whose son was just diagnosed as HIV positive, meaning he stands a strong risk of developing AIDS.

Answers are hard to come by, but in talking, they find they're not alone.

Their group is only one of many at the monthly Parents FLAG/Detroit meeting, which takes place at Lutheran Church of the Master in Troy.

Parents FLAG is a support group for moth-

'Often it's a very traumatic thing to hear your son or daughter is gay. It's not something you want to go next door and talk to your neighbor about.'

-- Harriet Dart founder of Parent FLAG/Detroit

IN EACH cluster, people grapple with the various aspects that come with being the parents, relatives or friends of homosexuals.

As one group talks about AIDS, another group is made up of spouses of gays. They are joined by a group of new parents or relatives, ones who have recently heard the common refrain, "I have something to tell you "

"Often it's a very traumatic thing to hear your son or daughter is gay," said Harriet Dart of Farmington, who is the founder of Parent FLAG/Detroit. "It's not something you want to go next door and talk to your neighbor about."

Especially in these times of heightened homophobia, where violence against homosexuals is on an increase.

BUT MANY parents, themselves, don't always react in a nurturing way when a son or daughter drops the news they are gay. Some parents immediately shun their children, ostracizing them from the the family.

Even the most understanding parents talk about feelings of shock and guilt.

"What I find is with the mother the reaction is, 'What is going to happen to my child?' Often there is a homophobic fear of what might happen," said Dale Ross, a Southfielders and fathers of homosexual men and wom- based social worker who counsels many homosexuals in the area.

"With the father, it's the opposite reaction. They are fearful of what that child is going to do to the reputation of the family outside in the neighborhood."

The Federation of Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays Inc. was founded in 1973 in New York to quell those fears and misconceptions. Today, approximately 200 chapters of Parents FLAG exist in the country.

THE METRO area didn't have a chapter until three years ago. Harriet Dart, whose son is gay, formed the chapter along with her husband, Bill, after the family moved from Rochester, N.Y.

Today, anywhere from 60 to 90 people attend meetings that take place the second Sunday of the month at Church of the Master in Scattered in the crowd are friends and homosexuals themselves along with parents.

The purpose of the group is not only to help parents work through their feelings of shock or anger, but to educate as well.

ANSWERS WERE in short supply three years ago when a Troy mother was told by her son one weekend that he was gay.

"There was a tremendous amount of guilt on my husband and my part," said Mary (not her real name). "We thought, 'There was something we did to cause this.' The whole weekend was spent questioning our parental role. We had three other children. Why him and not them?

"My husband was devastated. I think maybe it was the male-to-male thing. If it was my daughter instead of my son, perhaps I would have felt worse."

Their son's revelation caught them by surprise. He dated women regularly, including one with whom he had a serious relationship for three years.

Blissful achievement: 100 years of marriage

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

For the Roman family of Redford Township, the institution of marriage is worth more than silver and gold.

Together with their two children, there is 100 years of wedded bliss. Parents Margaret and Michael Roman will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. Their children, Nancy and Paul Columbo and Carol and Michael Roman, will both mark their 25th year of marriage this year.

All three couples will renew their yows in a special ceremony at St. John Bosco Catholic Church in Redford.

Michael Roman doesn't hesitate to relate the secrets of a successful marriage - something that might be considered valuable advice, especially in these times of divorce and separation.

"We never went to bed at night mad at each other," said Roman, 72, who is a retired chef. "If we had any disagreements, we settled them before we went to sleep. She was a good mother. I worked long hours and she took good care of the children. We always did things together."

That warmth and love has apparently been passed down to Wedded bliss for Margaret and Michael Roman started when they said "I do" on June 24, 1939.

their daughter Nancy and son Mi-exchanged_their_vows_on_Oct._3, "They kept the home life together," said Nancy, who works as a secretary at William Beaumont Hospital. "They gave us the ideals that marriage is for keeps and you do your best to keep it together."

"THE THING my folks have given me is a sense that you have to stay with something through the good and the bad," added Michael, who is a commander for the Medical Services Corps of the U.S. Navy.

The son recalls one time in particular when the youngest child in the family, Margaret Susan, died as an infant. "That's when I remember them gritting through it," he sald. Another difficult time came two years ago when Margaret suffered a stroke while they were in California. She is still in a wheelchair and her speech has been affected. She spent 65 days in the hospital as a result.

"I thought I'd have to leave her there," her husband said.

In each case, the couples were married in tumultuous times in America. The parents were married on June 24, 1939, at the height of the Depression and on the brink of World War II, The children were wed in 1984, with the beginning of the Vietnam War and the Civil Rights movement in full gear.

Yet the senior Roman's eves sparkle recalling the days when he met his future wife at a rollerskating rink in Detroit. Coincidently, his son met his wife at an ice-skating rink at the State Fair-

He asked Margaret to join him for a spin around the rink. Then on the magical moment that transpired, Michael Roman can only say, "Well, you know."

"We only dated one day a week - on Wednesdays," Roman said. "I used to take a street car for 6 cents to go to her house. Then we would go to the Fox Theatre to see a stage show for 90 cents each. Then we would go to the Elmwood and have dinner for $3. Then we'd go roller skating after dinner. After roller skaling, wewent to White Castle and had a

Handwriting shows wit

Dear Lorene Green,

I would like to have my handwriting analyzed. I am right-handed and 49 years of age. I am curious to read your analysis and see if it relates totally to my personality.

Dear W.M.M.,

Because I have a personal attraction to humor, I'll begin my column with this trait. Your humor and quick wit have a way of endearing you to others.

ASKED WHAT the biggest difference was between the times he was married and those of his children, he'll tell you, "the prices."

But Roman noticed some other differences as well. Especially in the morals department.

"When I was a kid never called a guy," he said. "No way would a boy put a girl in a position where she thought she was doing wrong. Men were more protective.

"Today, well . He was 22; she was 18 when they were married in the summer of 1939. Michael Roman came to Detroit from Patton, Pa., to work as a chef in Detroit. He was only one of a few to graduate from high school in the coal mining town. Most children left school in the eighth grade to work in the

Instead, Roman focused his attention on painting. He received a scholarship to go to the University of Pennsylvania, but couldn't attend because he didn't have the money for living expenses.

Today, several of his paintings adorn the walls of the family's Redford home. Those, along with several crafts made by Margaret, symbolize a love that's been nurtured for 50 years.

"They're still huggy and kissy on some occasions," their son said. "You could look at them and know they were in love - even today."

After working for a number of restaurants and country clubs, Roman retired from Plum Hollow Golf Club in Southfield three years ago. "I could still work today," he said.

THE ROMANS have four children. Along with Nancy and Michael, there are Raymond and Rozanne. They also have 13 grandchildren and one greatgrandchild.

Michael was the first of the Roman children to marry, saying "I do" to his future wife, Pat, on Aug. 1, 1964.

homosexuality Continued from Page 1 For three months, she and her husband kept the news to themselves.

Then they told the rest of the family. MARY SAID only the youngest son in the family showed any resentment at first "because he put his brother on a pedestal." Mary characterized her son as highly intelligent, but somewhat of a loner who always kept her and her husband at arm's length. Then she found out why. But instead of reacting with anger, both she and her husband reassured him of their love for him. The process of educating began.

"I didn't have any prejudices against gays," she said, "But I did have a lot of misconceptions. One of the first things I asked my son was if he was going to wear a dress or if he was going to act any differently at

MARY AND her husband began reading about the issue of homosexuality. Quickly, the myths and stereotypes started to fall.

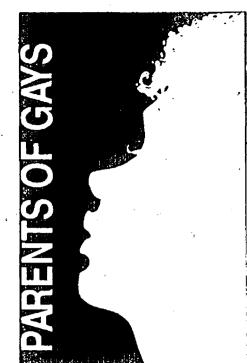

Also, Mary was in touch with Dart, who was starting the Detroit FLAG chapter. She still regularly attends meetings. "Every family has something in their family they're dealing with, whether it's drugs or pregnancy," Mary said. "We were just talking today in the meeting and one woman mentioned 'Would it be better if my son had died?' or 'Would it be better if he was in jail?' Could you deal with those situations any better?

"I'm very proud of my son. I'm very happy for him. As a parent, all you want is for your child to be happy. When I see how happy he was after he told us

NOT EVERY parent is as compassionate. For that reason, many homosexuals choose to live a life of sесгесу.

Therein lies Parents FLAG's biggest asset to the gay community. Many members of the group lend a supportive ear to homosexuals who attend meetings, in a way becoming surrogate parents to them.

"Parental acceptance is as important to gay people as it is to straight people," said Henry Messer, a board member of Michigan Organization of Human Rights. "To be rejected by your parents is a crushing blow . . . FLAG helps to bring peace between the gay child and the

As more parents are listening, they are beginning to understand the issues that concern homosexuals. The threat-of AIDS is always a major issue, although it may be noted that the disease has decreased in the gay community while rising among heterosexuals.

But there are other pressing matters as well, such as increased vioience against the homosexual community and job discrimination. There are continual problems with stereotyping of gays.

Parents FLAG has evolved into a group of advocates as well as one of support. They will be involved with the Gay Pride March on Sunday, June 25, in Lansing as well as the Gay Festival on Saturday, June 26, in Detroit.

"I would say we are (becoming more of an advocate group)," Dart

Nannies available to care for the kids

TThey don't all float down from the sky on umbrellas or speak with British accents — in fact, there may be one in your neighborhood. Yes, the nanny craze is hitting America, and this child-care option is becoming a popular one in the metro area.

Joy Shelton, chairperson of the American Council of Nanny Schools (ACNS), is also director of the Nanny program at Delta College in Bay City, MI.

Delta's program is now in its sixth year, and approximately 300 students graduated from the 16-week course. "This is a very intensive course," said Shelton. "With classes from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. It is equivalent to 23 college credits." Students come from all over the state, as well as the U.S., to attend the school, and successful graduates are virtually assured employment. A faculty of 12 teaches such coursas child development, nutrition, and first-aid, as well as negotiating an employment contract. "For each nanny in our classes, we get as many as 100 requests," said Shelton.

A NEWLY EMERGING local course began in April at the Academy of Health Careers in Oak Park.

Financial aid is available for this 14-week, 300-hour course. The current class has three students, and a second course is set to begin in July.

The school is accredited by the State of Michigan and is currently seeking accreditation by the ACNS.

While nannies are not inexpensive, they might be more affordable than one might think.

"With more than one child," said Shelton, "a nanny is very feasible." Shelton said the average starting wage for live-in nannies is from $200-$250 per week, in addition to health care and vacation benefits.

For live-out nannies, salaries are slightly higher.

Church of Nazarene goes to New Guinea

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

Pastor Mark Barnes is proud of his congregation, the Church of the Nazarene in Plymouth.

1982年,1985年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1986年,1

Two years into a four-phase building project to improve their own local facilities, the congregation raised an additional $15,000 to build a church in New Guinea this sum-

On June 29, 16 congregation members, including Barnes, are flying halfway around the world to help erect that church in a remote village settlement in New Guinea, a Pacific island 100 miles north of Australia.

"Our people are giving very heavily," said Barnes, who emphasized the Plymouth construction project is being built debt-free.

MONEY WAS sent two months ago to New Guinea so supplies could be bought and construction start in Avi, a village approximately 10 miles from Mt. Hagen, a city of 12,000. Presently, the worshipers in Avi are using a thatched roof building with a dirt floor to conduct ser-

The pastor of the 11-year-old congregation is native born. Although there are only 40 members of the congregation, services often swell to more than 100 faithful, Barnes said.

When the missionaries arrive for their two-week stay, among them On June 29, 16 congregation members . . . are flying halfway around the world to help erect that church in a remote village settlement in New Guinea, a Pacific island 100 miles north of Australia:

will be two professional construction workers, two nurses and a dozen eager general laborers.

Some of the travelers, who range in age from 19 to late 50s, will be making their maiden voyage into missionary work. For others, more seasoned travelers, it will be a reaffirmation of their faith.

LAST YEAR a contingent from the Plymouth church journeyed to the headwaters of the Amazon River and built two churches in the jungles of Peru. In previous years, missionaries traveled to Africa and Hondu-

An annual missionary project is a. high priority with the church.

"It gives a lot of meaning to what we do here," Barnes said. "Our general headquarters in Kansas City. Mo., gave us various choices, (New Guinea) fit our time schedule and finances."

Each of the 13 men and three women will pay $1,594 round-trip airfare to Port Moresby, the capital of New Guinea. A second flight will take the missionaries onward to Mt. Hagen. There are no roads to that city on an island Barnes calls one of the most remote places in today's

"Beyond that, we'll each need about $200 for housing and food," Barnes said.

THE CHURCH group will stay at a Bible college. Their suitcases will be packed with items in short supply there, including automotive parts, communionware for a church, cooking utensils and rotary telephones.

Although tropical, a high elevation will keep temperatures down to a pleasant 70 degrees during daylight and possibly as low as 55 degrees at night.

The travelers will have typhoid vaccinations before embarking on their journey and will begin taking anti-malaria medication two weeks before departure as a precautionary measure, Barnes said.

"It will be the first time in New Guinea for all of us," Barnes said. "They speak pidgin English."

THE SWEET potato is the island staple, but most foods are imported from nearby Australia and thus shouldn't be much different than the typical American fare, Barnes said. A group of Michigan missionaries working in Haiti last spring was attacked by some local revelers celebrating a voodoo-related holiday and had soldiers intervene before anyone was injured. But Barnes said he has never personally encountered hostil; ity of such magnitude during his travels abroad.

He hopes to capture on video and in slides for his congregation's viewing construction of the 30-by-50-foot; church, which will feature a metal roof. They also hope to build some church benches with backs so worshipers can get off the floor.

THE PLYMOUTH church has more than 400 members. Currently, worship services are held in the Pioneer Middle School.

"We hope for a fall or early winter; building completion," Barnes said.

But debt-free makes construction a pay-as-you-go proposition.

The church formerly had a building on Ann Arbor Trail. The congregation bought another parcel on Ann Arbor Road west of Canton Center. Road approximately three miles from the first site. Church offices, Sunday School classes and day care are under way at the new site.

A building on that site is being extended 60 feet and will feature a sanctasium — an all-purpose room for basketball, volleyball, banquets and church services.

Although the church in New Guinea is a more modest proposition, church members are enthusiastic.

"We hope to construct a building," open communications, establish a field relationship with our missionary by personal contact, and lift the level of our commitment," Barnes said.

The model of parenthood dishonored by Hizzoner

The biblical story of David and Bathsheba remains one of the more consuming chronicles of the human odyssey. Driven by passion for another man's wife, David makes one decision after another that destroys the very opportunity for fulfillment his life had prepared. For his transgressions, David was not allowed to build the Temple of Zion. David's actions flawed the monarchy of Israel to its ultimate destruction. The extracurricular activities of Detroit's mayor in recent years have developed locally into consuming chronicles of the human odyssey. Charged with paternity, demanding. verification and irritated with the media's continued interest, he destroyed an opportunity for integrity that his actions had allowed.

The mayor of Detroit could have chosen to become a loving parent. From all reports, he has only reluctantly acknowledged being a father. The difference between those two is the flaw in human character that ultimately destroys the fulfillment of life that God made possible for us.

The mayor of Detroit had an unusual opportunity to be a role model for responsible parenthood. He could have acknowledged his paternity, affirmed the integrity of the child's mother (and his own choice of partners), assumed all responsibilities! for the life the two initiated, and illustrate in act and word the delight for life that the gift of new life af-

King David is confronted by Nathan, the prophet, regarding his relationship with Bathsheba and the killing of her husband Uriah. Nathan! tells David a story of a rich man using a poor man's lamb for a feast. David is angered and observes that the rich man deserves to die. He also, demands that the rich man pay four times the lamb's cost to the poor

It is self-righteousness at its highest level of censure, and it is at this moment that Nathan says to David, "You are the man." (II Samuel 12 76)

The mayor of Deiroit has not been accused of violating any laws, and his offense is not a legal matter New ther can his offense be charged against definitive and substantive standards of ethical behavior for the office he holds. Few public offices have ever had this spelled out in exhaustive detail. His offense is much more serious. His offense is against the good and decency the providence of God presents. That is a fatal flaw of human character.

Guide targets Japanese adopting area lifestyle

By Peggy Aulino staff writer

A Troy consulting firm is launching a business guide, written in Japanese, for businessmen and their families who are new to the Detroit area.

The first edition of the Japanese Guide to Preferred Detroit Business is to be published in September by Nihon-U.S. Ltd. The firm offers language instruction, translation services and business development for American and Japanese companies.

"They tend to like quality and once they find a store they like they stick to it," she said. "They have affluent tastes and the pocketbook to back it up.'

THE EDITORIAL content will consist of tips "to help a businessman or a family become acquainted with their new hometown. It's something we feel is really missing," Fenner said.

The directory will also provide information on selecting an acceptable school district, getting a Social Security card and renewing one's visa.

Miller said there were about 20 Japanese businessés in the Detroit area 10 years ago, and that number has risen to 250. Her company's research indicates the number of Japanese companies will double in the next five years, she said.

Nihon plans to publish the guide twice a year.

The directory will have a circulation of about 5,000. It will be distributed to companies and hotels here and in Japan as well as Japanese families and social organizations in the Detroit area.

Similar directories have been successful in Japanese communities in Chicago, New York and San Francisco, Miller said.

The students are either business persons or school administrators who, because of a government-controlled limit on the number of spaces available in graduate schools, cannot earn a master's degree in their nafive land, according to Sister Rose Marie, Madonna's academic vicépresident. Students will range in age from 24 to 45.

"The Taiwanese higher educationsystem doesn't offer evening courses for the working adult. Also, admission to graduate study is limited to those pursuing college teaching," Sister Rose Marie said.

A master of science degree in administration with specialties in business administration and educational leadership will be offered. The students will study for two-week periods with the American professors and do the remaining course work independently. They will be required to come to the Livonia campus for about a month next summer. The program will take about, a year to

:Classes will be taught in the Taiwan capital of Taipei and will be limited to 25 people in each of the two programs. The Taiwanese students will pay the same college fees charged to international students who study at Madonna.

DR. ERNEST NOLAN, dean of graduate studies, planned the program details and said the content of the courses will be "essentially the same" as what American students receive.

"The professors will adapt the courses to the needs of the students," Nolan said. "When we were designing this program . . . we were told again and again that the Taiwanese students are really interested in American ideas . . . because they feel that we're on the cutting edge."

The classes will be taught in English, but there will be a translator on hand in case communications problems arise. Each student has had a minimum of six years of English language study.

"Although it sounded very unusual, I agreed to a first appointment," said Sister Rose Marie. "As he spoke of the possibilities, it seemed more and more possible."

The program is being treated "as if it can be repeated," Sister Rose Marie said. "We will evaluate very closely the first time, and if we feel we can continue to offer a quality service, we will continue to do that."

The program, which has received approval from the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools, will start in July. Nolan will spend a week there registering students. On July 14, business professors Charlotte Neuhauser and Donald Blouin and education professors Lorraine Jakubielski and William Herman will leave for Taiwan. A different business professor will teach there in November, and another group of four will make the trip in February

Nolan said the program is part of a trend toward expanding Madonna's

Zeroing in on Russian trade

By Peggy Aulino staff writer

The new openness in the Soviet Union's economy and industry has paved the way for trade between the USSR and the West, and now American companies are viewing the USSR as an extension of the foreign marketplace.

Trouble is, American business people don't have much experience in the field of Soviet trade.

"A couple of years ago everyone -thought perestroika—was a--South-American football player," said Sonia Buxton, director of Tara International, a West Bloomfield company that is publishing a directory of U.S. companies interested in doing business-with the Soviet Union.

Buxton said there is a "great potential" for U.S. companies to trade with the Soviet Union, which she called a "virtually untapped market." In addition to publishing the directory, Tara International is offering seminars on the subject of U.S./Soviet trade. It is also the U.S. distributor of Russia Express, a biweekly newsletter that is published in London and covers economic and political events in the USSR that affect trade.

THE DIRECTORY will consist of up to 1,200 pages, depending on the number of companies that buy space, according to Ron Montgomery, research director at Tara. It will be divided into industry sectors, and each category will be limited to four companies so the U.S. companies will have little competition.

Save now to fund retirement

Americans no longer assume that retirement must wait until their 65th birthday. In the last decade, the average age people retire has dropped from age 64 to 62. Similarly, more people now apply for Social Security at age 62 than at 65. The statistics undescore a trend that is likely to continue and perhaps even accelerate as the baby boom generation approaches retirement.

But choosing early retirement is not simply a matter of deciding that

The U.S. Census Bureau expects the percentage of those age 85 or older to double in approximately 30 to 40 years. Social Security benefits are based on your age, when you apply and the amount of lifetime earnings on which you paid Social Security taxes. Any covered worker born before 1938 can apply for Social Security at age 65 and receive full benefits. For those born in 1938 and beyond, the age at which one can retire with full benefits gradually increases. For example, someone born in 1957 will not be able to retire with full benefits until six months after his or her 66th birthday. For those born after 1960,

What happens to your Social Security benefits if you take an early retirement? Retire before age 62 and you will receive no benefits until you reach 62. If you retire after age 62 but before 65, you will receive a monthly benefit check that will be permanently reduced by as much as 20 percent. Still, some financial planners believe an early retirement may pay off in the long run because the amount of Social Security you collect between ages 62 and 65 can sometimes compensate for the smaller monthly checks.

Social Security should not be your sole source of retirement income. For most people, a comfortable retirement will also require an employer's pension plan. Once almost taken for granted, today employersponsored benefits can be extraordinarily elusive. Economic pressures and new employment patterns frequently force workers to jump from employer to employer before they ever become fully vested in a company's pension plan.

If you are just shy of the vesting requirements of a company you plan to leave, consider postponing the job change just long enough to qualify for your benefits. In any case, make sure you review any current or prospective employer's benefit policies with great care. Besides finding out how long you must remain with the company in order to become partial; ly or fully vested in its pension plan, make sure you research other aspects of the plan as well.

For example, how much does the company contribute to the plan? How is the money invested? What type of penalty do you pay if you withdraw money prior to your normal retirement age? How much net income can you expect to receive from the plan if you retire at 50? At Another highly recommended re-

And as with IRAs, the interest or dividends you earn can accumulate tax deferred. Many companies will match all or at last some of the amount you contribute to the account.

Belle Isle cops stem rising tide of 'bad' trucks

His face set in his "You in a heap of trouble, boy" look, the police officer approaches the vehicle driven by a teenager sitting there with his best "What did I do now?" face. Leaning in the window, the officer says flatly. "You're driving a truck."

Which may have led to a thought or two about why this was a reason for being pulled over at 7 a.m. in a city park, or even why the activity demanded two backup officers flanking the rear of the small white pickup convertible.

Being at an age where pragmatism seems to beat a constitutional argument in the face of a traffic cop, the incident ends when the driver offers an explanation as to where the driver is going and what he is doing which seems to satisfy the officer who, in fact, is merely intent on assessing the lifestyle of the driver after pulling him over because he was driving.an illegal status symbol.

THE ABOVE incident took place a couple of weeks ago, and similar confrontations presumably are still taking place following the recent banning of "trucks" on Belle Isle, the biggest public park in the city of Detroit.

Along with trucks, the park has been posted against cars with trailers, loud music and motorcycles in the early morning hours

At first there didn't seem to be anything particularly sinister about this ban, since I assumed the posting was aimed at line haul semis that might have wandered off the expressway.

ON THE other hand, we recently became one of those families whose sole vehicle is a truck, used alternately for small business delivery and personal transportation, so I figured it was worth looking into.

An inquisitory "Huh?" about the ban on trucks was followed with the explanation delivery vehicles, semis, etc. were in fact OK - the ban was apparently for sport trucks associated with teens cruising the park.

 Having grown up in a simpler era, when police simply harassed teenagers as a matter of course, I could empathize with the intent, if not the spirit of the new law. Teenagers cruise partly to aggravate adults.

As previously reported in this column, cruising lately has been adopted by drug dealers as a way of showing off their ill-gotten Mercedes,

Jeeps and, yes, pickup trucks. IN FACT, the emergence of a heavily customized small pickup as the drug dealer's status symbol is a relatively recent phenomenon in Detroit, having drifted here from California (of course), and sport pickups recently have more or less pushed aside the BMW with gold anodized wheels.

Cruising drug dealers in city parks have been a chronic problem for the past couple of summers, harassing picnickers, softball players and even other teenagers out merely to aggravate adults.

A direct approach to the problem. might have been posting "No cruising drug dealers," which would have been more or less to the point, but today's drug dealer is heavily protected by an armor of civil rights interpretations. In fact, the ordinance opens the ground for some blatent discrimination.

GOOD TRUCKS, even truck conventions, are tolerated or even encouraged (a good truck is one driven by a nice guy, or a fellow police officer). Bad trucks are apparently trucks too clean, or too customized customized the wrong way, or too imported.

Maybe someone should take up the case for trucks. It's also worth not ing that maybe a third of the vehicles sold today are trucks, and the city of Detroit has subsidized light truck manufacturing to the tune of a half billion or so in the past few years - including the expansion of the Jefferson Avenue plant.

UP TO this point, no ACLU type has taken up the cause of the pickup truck, although singling out a status. symbol seems blatently discrimina-

If something isn't done, the next step might be a ban on "prominent German status symbols with goodanodized wheels."

Maybe they'd hire better lawyer

Every weekday the stock market page of the Wall Street Journal provides a perfect explanation for the behavior of the market on the previous day. That information is of little value since, according to the celebrated Random Walk Theory, there is no relationship between yesterday's price movement and today's stock price fluctuation.

What I have said above, of course, does not negate the fact that experts do predict the market's behavior and take advantage of the price movements. While most experts carefully guard their prediction techniques, some generously share, at least partly, their analytical techniques. To day I would like to share with you views of Frank Cochrane, whose tion intrigued me.

There are three major points to examine in the movement of the Dow Jones Industrial Average between January and June:

1. There were three gaps: 2300, 2340 and 2390. A "gap" occurs when opening price on a given day is much higher than the closing price of the previous day. From a longer-term perspective, these gaps are unhealthy, because ultimately they are always closed. To use an analogy, if you build a house with a weak foundation and walls, the roof eventually caves in.

2: The market may be in a "topping process." The market usually drops after the formation of a topp-

3. On the basis of an impressive increase in the DJIA during the past three months (2300-2500), many brokerage houses and portfolio managers have suggested that we are in a "new bull market" and should become fully invested.

What's the verdict? Given the formation of several triangles it appears that the market is

"I don't mind the Jerry Lee Lewis thing," said Ball, who will perform Friday at Sully's in Dearborn and Saturday at the Frog Island Jazz Festival in Ypsilanti. "I'm not low key. The energy is all there."

Those who have seen Ball perform would also likely scoff at such notions. In a spaghetti-strapped black dress, she resembles more a pianist playing Billy Joel covers in a cocktail lounge than a goodtime boogie woogie pianist.

But once she swings her leg over and starts keeping rhythm, all hell is. said to break loose when Ball is onstage. Great balls of fire, you bet. Bring a pail of water.

Ball brings her roadhouse slyle of rhythm and blues to this area on the heels of a successive album release. "Gatorhythms" (Rounder) is a delectable mix of rhythm and blues and some country. She fluctuates between her New Orleans upbringing and Austin, Texas, roots on her latest effort, which is her third album re-

Forgotten theater finds new life

Sketch (above) shows new Wayne Theatre proposed by the Palace Theatre Company. (Left) a recent drawing 'depicts the theater as it originally looked, back in 1927. It was the home of vaudeville and "photo plays." Later, it became a movie house, which closed in 1951. Then, the facility was used for a various of purposes, until a fire in 1985. Now a non-profit corporation is buying the theater, planning to renovate it and turn it into a performing arts center for Western Wayne County and to establish a professional, resident acting company. The theater is expected to be in operation by next summer.

By Bob Weibel special writer

THIS IS THE STORY of a theater that once was the talk of Western Wayne county. Today, it's all but forgotten. The final chapter, however, is yet to be written.

If a group of concerned citizens are successful, the story will tell of a a theater that literally returned from the grave to live again with laughter and applause.

Back in 1926, when most the area was rural farmland, when Michigan Avenue was the main highway between Detroit and Chicago and when the village of Wayne was the hub of activity, local businessmen built a theater and hotel complex. It included five stores along Michigan Avenue and a bowling alley in the base-

The Wayne Theatre, by all accounts, was one of the most beautiful ever built in a small town. It seated 850 (625 on the main floor, 225 in the balcony) and featured excellent acoustics, a full orchestra pit and a flyloft for stage curtains.

ADS CALLED IT "The Pride of Wayne." They promised the latest in photoplays (that's what they called movies in those days) and the best in vaudeville on Saturday and Sunday.

Opening night was Saturday. Aug. 27, 1927. Newspaper articles tell of patrons lined up for more than a block when the doors opened at 6:30 p.m. A standing-room-only audience saw Marion Davies in "Tillle the Toilor," an Our Gang comedy, "Yale vs. Harvard," a Paramount News short, and five vaudeville acts. The shows were a hit. Soon, it was the most popular theater around.

The Woodward Theatre Company, headed by Henry S. Koppin, operated the theater. Koppin managed 26 theaters in Michigan that were popularly known in the Midwest as the Koppin Vaudeville Circuit. Many of the big acts that toured Detroit, such as Al Jolson and Fred Astaire, also played Wayne.

Special radio nights included a broadcast of the Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney fight. And radio station WWJ regularly presented "The Oklahoma Cowboys" live from the stage.

But, alas, the stock market crash of 1929 caused Koppin to close his chain of theaters. A few months later, Walter Shafer reopened the Wayne Theatre and operated it with his sons, Charles and Martin, as a movie house until 1951, when it was closed. The Shafers had recently opened the larger, more modern State down the street. As with the vaudeville that once was so popular, the Wayne Theatre soon became but a fond memory.

'It's a true historic treasure. We want to save it from the wrecking ball and preserve a part of our heritage for future generations.'

Dave Carrick

THE LOBBY WAS converted into a music store. Occasionally, high schools used the stage. Eventually, however, the seats were removed. and the auditorium was partitioned into music and dance rehearsal rooms. It remained that way until April 1985, when a fire destroyed the lobby and the stores along Michlgan Avenue. The theater itself sustained only minor smoke damage.

It sat vacant and fenced for nearly two years. Finally, a group of theater buffs, headed by Dave Carrick of Westland, formed a nonprofit corporation to restore the theater. "We call ourselves the Palace Theatre Company, after the Palace Opera House that was built in Wayne in 1886, "Carrick said.

An open house was held Aug. 27, 1987 (60 years after opening night) to announce restoration plans. These include rebuilding the lobby, refurbishing the auditorium to its former splendor and creating a performing arts center for the Western Wayne County area. "We also plan to establish a professional, Equity acting company, similar to the Attic Theatre in Detroit," Carrick said.

"So far we've done a lot of cleanup work, staged two successful haunted-theater fund-raisers and recently signed a purchase agreement. We have also applied for foundation grants, and a benefit concert is tentatively planned for Sept. 23 at Cherry Hill High School," he said.

'We have letters of endorsement from surrounding communities and hope to involve a wide variety of people in the restoration. The Wayne Theatre is one of the few remaining vaudeville houses in the Detroit area. Only a miracle saved it from a fiery demise. It's a true historic treasure. We want to save it from the wrecking ball and preserve a part of our heritage for future gener-

Chrysler Motors Corp. along with LaFontaine Bros. Arbor Dodge is overstocked with brand new 1989 Dodges! We must liquidate over 2.73 million dollars worth of new Dodge cars, trucks and vans.

For 6 days, June 19-June 24, Arbor Dodge will be selling out their entire 1989 model inventory...not just a few select models, but all cars, trucks 🕹 vans including all Dodge Caravans, Shadows, Omnis, etc... no models excluded.

Chrysler Motors Corp. has said we must sell over 100 new vehicles during this period in order to earn and make room for our 1990 allocations: Chrysler Motors in conjunction with this inventory clearance, is offering 0.0%-2.9% a.p.r. and rebates up to 2,000. Financing specialist will be on duty to arrange for immediate delivery so please bring your title and pay-off information. Authorized appraisers will be on duty to all offer top value for your trade.

Steve Saleen surveys the scene during Saturday's qualifying session at the Detroit Grand Prix.

By Bill Parker staff writer

Steve Saleen just wanted to get his 'feet wet" in the CART/PPG Indy Car World Series this year. But the rookie Indy car driver and president of Saleen Autosport (Saleen Mustang), which operates the race team and research and development headquarters in Livonia, is already in water up to his waist.

"When I sat in the car for the first time after the accident, I wondered what it would be like. But (the accident) didn't bother me at all, it actually has made me faster. I look at (the accident) like I scratched the paint and now I' not afraid of doing it anymore.

"We missed Milwaukee (the fourth race on the series)," Saleen continued. "But we're back now and ready to go." Even though the rib was still

By Brad Emons staff writer

As its new athletic director, Marty Nowak is hoping to put the word "community" back into Schoolcraft Community College.

"I want to make this a showcase area," Nowak said. "Schoolcraft College is a nice place. It's a model facility and I want to show it off." The long-awaited announcement was made Monday by Midge Carleton, SC's assistant dean of allied health and sciences.

"We're extremely glad to have him on board, and I'm sure we'll work well together to enhance the athletic department," said Carleton. "I was very impressed with his organizational skills."

Nowak, a Plymouth resident, takes over the part-time position vacated by Ed Kavanaugh, who resigned earlier this spring.

The selection process took nearly three months before a school search committee, headed by Dr. Louis Reibling, made its final deci-

Nowak, who survived a series of interviews, is no stranger to the

He served for five years as athletic director of Livonia Bentley High and is currently the student activities director at Holmes Middle School in Livonia.

"WE LIKE HIS ability to handle budgets and his public relations skills," Carleton said.

Nowak takes over the post on July 1 and his first step is to be as avallable and visible to the current SC coaching staff,

"I hope to keep things open and communicate a lot," Nowak said. "I'll review the budget, talk about fund raising and look at the equipment on hand. But my intent is not a my way or the hit the highway type of thing. Schoolcraft has a lot of good things going already and I just hope to improve upon it."

Nowak said he hopes to establish office hours for coaches and be available during the evenings as much as possible.

Once he organizes his desk, Nowak will launch a fall schedule of programs which features men's and women's soccer, men's and women's cross country and women's volleyball. (The SC volleyball team won a national championship

He also plans to meet individually with coaches.

"I want the coaches to know that I'll be there to help them," Nowak sald. "I also want to get the P.R. (public relations) going."

Schoolcraft has already been selected to host the Michigan Community College Athletic Association Men's Basketball Tournament (March 2-3, 1990) and the MCCAA Women's Volleyball Tournament (Nov. 10-11, 1989).

"We want to do things more like that," Nowak said.

BUT NOWAK and Schoolcraft

will be faced with some pressing needs during the upcoming season.

Among the issues and tasks that will have to be addressed include: Divisional status in men's basketball (Division I or II?), fund-raising activities (Wolverine Soccer, Ocelot Run and the annual golf tourney), along with maintaining eligibility and academic standards.

"Academics is the top priority and from what I've seen, the support system here (for athletes) is dynamite," Nowak said. "I just hope to lead them through it and make sure we're complying with the academic guidelines."

Nowak is a graduate of Dearborn Fordson High School and holds a master's degree in administration and supervision, as well as physical education from Eastern Michigan University.

After graduating from EMU in 1970, Nowak was employed as a teacher at Rlley Junior High where he coached football, track and basketball.

He also served three years as Bentley High's JV basketball coach and later became athletic director at the school (1977-82).

BUT IN 1982, with the Livonia Public Schools plummeting in enrollment, Nowak and many of his colleagues were laid off from teaching.

He spent the next four years in the business arena, lecturing around the country for a Californla-based investment institute before taking on a similar position with the New York Life Insurance Co. in Southfield

In 1986, Nowak he was recalled as a Livònia teacher, serving in elementary physical education. In January of 1987 he shifted to Holmes where he currently serves as student activities director.

"I've always enjoyed education and being around kids and that's why I came back," said the new Schoolcraft A.D.

Camp features 'Spider' Salley

John "Spider" Salley of the Detroit Pistons will be the featured speaker next month at the Oakland Community College Basketball Camp.

The one-week camp will take place Monday, July 24, through Friday, July 28, at the Orchard Ridge Campus. The camp is for boys age 8-

'We're excited about having (Salley) there and running the program for kids," said Tom Negoshian, the basketball coach at North Farmington High School and one of three camp instructors.

Salley, who will appear at two of the five sessions and explain his mental and physical approach to the game, will fly back from Italy and the National Basketball Association Tour to attend the camp, according to Negoshian.

"He's very committed to it and not only for one year," Negoshlan said. "We hope it's the start of something that's going to continue for a number of years. He plans on returning as long as he's with the Pistons organization."

Bloomfield Hills Andover coach Rick Krisniski and veteran high school coach Bob Shoemaker will serve as camp instructors, too. Together, they have more than 30 years of camp experience.

The fee is $150 per person and, besides the dally instruction, includes a camp shirt, shorts, hat, an indooroutdoor basketball and awards. The camp also promotes a smaller camper-to-instructor ratio. Checks should be made payable to OCC Instructional Basketball Camp. Information can be obtained by writing to the camp at 27055 Orchard Lake Rd., Farmington Hills, 48018, or calling OCC at 471-7716.

The camp begins at 8:45 a.m. each day and concludes at 3:30 p.m. Campers will be grouped by age and ability within four divisions: Big Ten (8-10), college (11-12), NBA East (13-14) and NBA West (15-17).

Michigan State University lefthander Derek Darkowski ran his record to 5-0, hurling league-leading Hines-Park Lincoln Mercury to a 3-0 baseball victory Sunday over Walter's Appliance in the Livonia Collegiate encounter at Ford Field.

Walter's bounced back to win the second game of the twin bill, 6-3.

Darkowski allowed just two hits and two walks, while striking out eight.

Losing pitcher David Houghtby (Henry Ford Community College), gave up only one earned run. He also went the distance, allowing just three hits and two walks.

In the second game, Joe Mackiewicz (Kalamazoo College) scattered nine hits in 615 innings of work to pick up the win. Steve Owens came on to get the final two outs to earn the save for Walter's.

HE WESTERN LAKES Activities Association was finally dethroned, but everyone agrees: No girls high school soccer league in Michigan has a better crop of players.

Troy Athens ended the WLAA's six-year dominance of girls soccer in Michigan, defeating Northville, 1-0, earlier this spring in the Class A championship game. WLAA teams won the Open Class titles from 1983-86, and the Class A crowns in '87 and

And it's a safe bet the WLAA will return to the top.

Every member of the 1989 All-Observer first-team is from the WLAA, and eight of the 11 players are underclassmen. Farmington placed five players on the team, highlighted by Amy Trunk, the area's leading scorer with 24 goals.

On more than one occasion this year, six WLAA teams were ranked among the Top-10 in Class A.

Five Observerland stars made the Class A first-team, including Plymouth Salem's senior sensation Jill Estey, a three-time all-stater. The other seniors on the All-Observer

The Coach of the Year is Cathy Cole, who in her first year meshed together a young Farmington squad and guided the Falcons to a 16-1-4 record. Farmington reached the Class A semifinal round before losing to Athens.

Following is a capsule look at the WLAA, excuse me, All-Observer

FIRST TEAM

GOALIE

Jennifer Emmett, freshman, Salem: The only thing left for Emmett to look forward to is a Class A title. Still only 14 years old, Emmett was a firstteam Class A all-state selection, recording 11 shutouts and a 38 goals-againstaverage. She was a first-team All-Western Lakes Activities Association honoree, and also was one of two goalies named to the Section 3 Class A soccer team.

Emmet was one of the primary reasons Salem won the Lakes Division title and finished 12-2-2 overall. She moved with her family to Plymouth last summer from Washington, where she was a member of the state youth select team.

FORWARDS

Michelle Minton, junior, Salem: A second-team All-Observer performer last year, Minton became one of the state's most-feared scorers this year. Minton overcame a bruised thigh that had her sidelined two weeks during the season to finish with 16 goals and 10 assists. She was a first-team Class A all-state selec-

In three years, she already has scored 61 goals and added 23 assists.

'A terrific center striker, tall and fast," coach Ken Johnson said. "Michele's a good team player."

Carrie Maier, junior, Farmington: Maier knows what to do with the ball, as evidenced by her goal-per-shot ratio. Maler, a three-time All-Observer member, scored 23 goals though she took only 85 shots. A first-team Class A all-stater, Maier also tallied 14 assists for Farmington, a team that had to spread the wealth because of its goal-scoring capabilities.

Maier has scored 69 goals and 37 assists in three years as a Falcon. "Carrie is a very skilled player," coach

Cathy Cole said. "She has the ability to distribute well and can shoot off-balance with accuracy. She is a great role model and representative of women's soccer."

Amy Trunk, junior, Farmington: The other half of Farmington's dynamic duo up-front, Trunk led the Falcons with 24 goals and 21 assists in earning team team MVP and second-team Class A allstate honors. Trunk greatly improved her goal output from a year ago, when she scored 13 goals.

"Amy was our MVP and if I were to define this award it would include the characteristics Amy possesses: hard worker, skill, speed, competitive, team player," Cole said. "At her position she is to continually make runs off the ball and when she receives the ball she is to distribute it or go to the goal."

Jenny Russell, junior, Canton: Russell broke her hand midway through the season, but she played over the setback and finished her junior campaign with 19 goals and 13 assists. A two-time team MVP, Russell was second-team All Observer last year.

Russell's efforts this spring earned her first-team Class A all-state honors, and she led the Chiefs to the WLAA litle.

"Jenny is a very coachable player, she gives 100 percent in practice and 125 percent in games," coach Don Smith said. "We at Canton are looking to an even. more exciting senior year from Jenny. I am sure she will set the tone for the younger players on the team."

MIDFIELDERS

Jill Estey, senior, Salem: Estey closed out a banner career by being selected to the Class A first-team for a third straight year. Estey scored more as a striker in previous years, but her importance this spring at midfield couldn't be measured. Estey picked up 18 assists and she scored 13 goals in a playmaking

Estey, headed to the University of Illinois on a basketball scholarship, finished her career with 92 goals and 76 assists. She was a first-team soccer All-America

"For four years, Jill was outstanding," coach Ken Johnson said. "For Salem, she was possibly the finest girl natural soccer player I've ever coached."

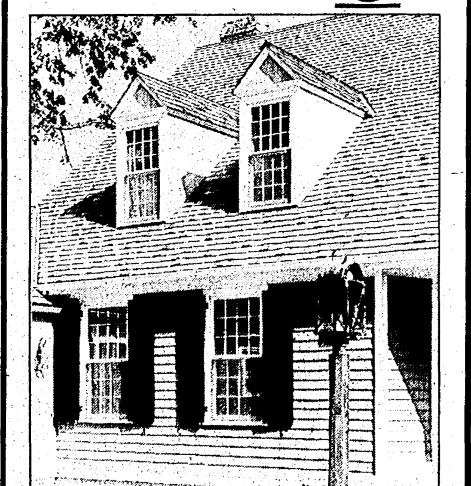

Jennifer Misaros, senior, Farmington: A senior co-captain, Misaros scored 13 goals and 17 assists. She was an All-Lakes Division first-team player and she was a Region 3 All-Sectional choice.

"Jennifer was one of my leaders, she plays with flair and intelligence," Cole said. "The majority of a midfielder's job is to have vision and she acquired her assists because of her ability to set up our front-line players. Her position will be hard to fill.

Ragen Coyne, freshman, Stevenson: Covne has a bright future ahead of her, both in the classroom and on the field. A perfect 4.0 student, Covne also displayed excellence for coach Mary Kay Hussey, scoring four goals and 25 assists. Coyne has been appointed a tricaptain for the 1990 team.

"Ragen is a very well-skilled player who is capable of controlling the midfield," Hussey said. "She is a very coachable young player who has the potential to be a force in this area for the next

DEFENDERS

Andrea Szymanski, senior, Churchill: A three-year letter winner, Szymanski was a two-year starter and the Chargers Most Valuable Player this spring. Szymanski was an All-Western Division selection and also earned honorable mention all-state laurels.

Szymanski played sweeper in 1988 but moved to stopper this year for coach Nick O'Shea.

"Andrea's one of the best one-on-one markers in the league," O'Shea said. "Her player (the one she was defending each game) did not score a goal all year.

Sue Gibson, freshman, Farmington: Gibson's job was to keep the opponent from scoring but she also found time to score eight goals and six assists. An All-Lakes Division player, Gibson came to Farmington High with impressive credentials, playing four years of Ilitch Division Select Soccer, and two years on the Olympic Development Under-16

"Sue anchored our defense so well and also has the ability to move forward with speed and could finish the ball with accuracy," coach Cathy Cole said. "It is great to know that this caliber of a player will be around for three more years.

Margaret Martin, junior, Farmington: Martin was named to the Class A first-team after scoring 14 goals and adding nine assists. A three-year letter winner, Martin was an All-WLAA firstteam selection this spring, after being named to the Lakes Division team as a freshman and sophomore.

Also a fine student, Martin is a National Honor Society student, and she already has been named Farmington's Student Council President for 1989-90.

"She is a two-way player," Cole said. "She is a coach's dream. Margaret was responsible for all of our reserts and in this role she scored or assisted on a majority of our goals. Defensively, she had to mark the opponent's best forward."

A little boy - no taller than his father's waist - approached U.S. national team volleyball player Javier Gaspar Monday night at the Palace, seeking an autograph.

The boy probably watched the Detroit Pistons win the NBA world chanipionship a week ago, but on this night his heroes included Gaspar and teammates Steve Timmons and Karch Kiraly - two of the world's best volleyball players.

Playing in the second stop of a five-match Stars & Spikes American tour, the U.S. defeated the Soviet Union national team 15-11, 15-8, 15-4 in front of a Palace crowd of 10,012.

More important, the players left a lasting impression on the little ones in the crowd, those who will have the option to play volleyball in the future instead of basketball.

Trees and sidewalks do not a revitalization make

It doesn't seem that long ago when shopping meant walking or riding the bus to the nearest downtown shopping district.

As a product of the late '50s, having the opportunity to shop "up Schaefer" as a young person was second only to visiting downtown Detroit for the same purpose. Kresge's, Albert's and Federal's were just a few of my favorite hangouts that made shopping "up Schaefer" a great way to spend an otherwiseboring summer's day.

Recently I decided to take a stroll down memory lane and visit the "up Schaefer" of my past. Relatives living in the area had mentioned how L should take a look because of the recent renovations.

I was told the area was still thriving and as busy as it had ever been. I was also told that the proliferation of strip malls and super regional malls now surrounding this district had no negative effect on it.

After a short walk through the downtown Dearborn area, I was reminded of the old saying, "You can't go back home again." So many of the stores where I had spent hours shopping had been out of business for

And as for the businesses that had replaced them - well, they certainly weren't of the same caliber I expected. Kresge's was now McCrory's. Albert's had been replaced by by a retailer that reminded me of "Rave" revisited.

And what had been Federal's was now home to a medical center. Seeing a great deal of vacant lease space was also discouraging, especially because the majority of these storefronts were eyesores.

On a positive note, I was pleased to see many of my old favorites still going strong. Alcamo's Italian market, Lombardi's, Sanders and Montgomery Ward were not only looking good but were obviously surviving well enough to stay downtown.

From a cosmetic viewpoint, trees now line Schaefer where no trees had been before. The sidewalks along Michigan Avenue were being replaced, and a new grocery store complex now stood where a much smaller grocery store, bar and photography studio had once been.

But as one local resident said, "I'm not going to shop there because of the trees and sidewalks."

Keeping this in mind, I wonder if this district (and others like it) un derstand how revitalization works and the commitment it takes to make it successfully happen.

Trees and sidewalks are a start, but that can't be where it ends. 🕒 🚉

It takes a lot of work involving community leaders, business owners and residents to do what's needed for "up Schaefer", and any other district

PCB-laced oil was sold to companies in Detroit area

Thousands of gallons of PCBlaced oil have been sold to companies in suburban Detroit and Ontario, which in turn have used it in industrial fuel, asphalt and dustcontrol mixtures, Michigan officials say.

The state probably will pursue charges but has not determined who concealed the presence of the cancer-linked contaminants, John Bohunsky of the Michigan Deaprtment of Natural Resources said

"The fact someone falsely represented this waste has criminal ramifications," said Bohunsky, regional supervisor for compliance with the DNR's Waste Management Divison.

Polychlorinated biphenyls have been banned in Michigan since 1976, after tests linked them to cancer and reproductive failures in animals. PCBs once were widely used to insulate electrical equip-

The state is investigating the distribution of oil containing up to 700,000 parts per million of PCBs removed from old electric transformers at Group 8 Techno liges Inc. in Wyandotte, Bohurisky

Federal law requires close regulation of the treatment, storage and handling of materials containing more than 50 parts per million of PCBs.

In April, Group 8 sold the oil to CIW Co., a Romulus oil reclamation company that diluted it and sold it, he said-

The DNR has traced at least 40,000 gallons of the PCB-laced off to 22 companies, Bohunsky said. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will notify those companies about how to dispose of it, he said.

But thousands of gallons still may be unaccounted for, he said. The oil probably was diluted enough during processing so that is posed no environmental threat; said John Connell, chief of EPA's regional PCB control section in Chicago.

DIW officials said Group 8 didn't inform them the material contained PCBs. "We're victims in this," CIW President Walter Pociask said.

Nature features dazzling display of color

ONE OF the most striking and fascinating features of the natural world is the diversity of color and patterns which they form. Spring warblers have some very impressive colors and patterns, as well as the variety of butterflies that can be seen in summer.

Colors in nature result from either pigments or from the physical structure of a part of the body. Pigments such as melanin produce the blacks and browns we see in animals. Chlorophyll is the pigment whch makes plants green and the insects that eat them green.

Small inchworms dangling from overhead branches get their green coloration from eating the leaves of plants, But the green of a hummingbird is produced by the struture of the feathers themselves.

The ultimate in coloration of animals is irridescence. It is caused by small striations in the structure of a feather or the shell of an insect. When sunlight hits the throat of a ruby-throated hummingbird it may look firey orange or rudy red. If the sun is not shinning on those feather, they look black.

BIRDS LIKE grackles and hummingbirds are not the only animals which exhibit irridescence. Insects display irridescence in several spe- coloration was revealed. cies. While walking the trail at Independence Oaks County Park, I came Tortoise beetles and some butterflies exhibit a spectacular irridescence also. In order to observe this though, one has to look closely for some of the often unseen natural fea-

It really weathers the elements!

Water beads right off Wolmanized EXTRA Weather-Resistant Lumber because it's got something "extra" — It's pressure treated with a special water repellant to prevent moisture penetration from rain and snow. All wood swells and expands when it absorbs moisture. As it dries, it releases moisture and abrinks. Constant expansion and contraction moisture and shrinks. Constant expansion and contraction causes grain raising, checking, splintering and warping. Spray or brush-on water sesiers just can't repel water like Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber — in laboratory tests Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber shows almost two-thirds more moisture resistance than pressure-treated lumber protected with leading water sealer. Of course, this fantastic lumber is also pressure treated with chemicals for lifelong protection against termites, rol and decay. Don't settle for ordinary treated lumber. MOT options Grand Circus Theater

By Mary Jane Doerr special writer

Thursday, June 22, 1989 O&E

HE TERRA-COTTA FA-CADE is camouflaged by light green awnings and a yellow billboard. Anything attractive around the windows is covered by plywood.

"This is dangerous," said Ray Shepardson as we looked around the soon-to-be renovated 57-year-old Grand_Circus_Theater_in_Detroit. — "From time to time plaster falls from the ceiling and believe me it hurts.'

Shepardson has toured many old movie palaces. The architectural historian specializes in restoring theaters and is working some 25 theaters throughout the country. His most recent Detroit venture is the Fox Theatre.

"That is a temple, this is a palace," said Shepardson. "When Michigan Opera Theatre first approached me about the Grand Circus Theater, I knew nothing about it. I have to admit that is a little like Channel 2 not knowing anything about Channel

Above us in the cold, damp air of the long-closed lobby was the seethrough ceiling from which plaster had fallen, forming large jigsaw puzzles on the floor.

The scaffolding called attention to the arches of the art deco styled building. Toward the front of the lobby was the popcorn stand and a tile floor, which contrasted sharply with the once magnificant five-foot chanleading to the balcony at the right was covered with more obstacles from the ceiling.

THIS THEATER IS built on three parcels of land between Broadway and Madison Avenue. The lobby at the Broadway entrance to the Grand Circus is larger than the other at Madison Avenue. The parcel is flanked by two parking lots which makes this the ideal theater.

C. Howard Crane designed the Grand Circus Theater in 1922, one of nearly 250 theaters he built in a 10 year period.

"Crane referred to the layout of the theater as 'opera style' which I think is quite prophetic now that MOT is buying it," said Shepardson. "He seems to have known about acoustics or he was just lucky. All of his theaters have outstanding acoustics - like Orchestra Hall. I would ex-

David DiChiera, general director of Michigan Opera Theater, has built the comany from a dream to a major entity. A theater designed for opera would top his many sucpect this one will too."

MOT has an option to buy the Grand Circus Theater until July. In the last few months, the company has ordered structural and engineering studies to determine the actual extent of needed renovation. Elated MOT officials say those studies indidelier of Czechoslovakian cut glass, cato the building is in far better connow broken on the floor. The reduction than expected. The water in flowered carpet on the staircase the basement is from the leaking roof and asbestos wasn't used in the

"Despite it's appearance, this building is a long way from falling down," said Shepardson, "Can you believe it was last used in 1985?"

Detroit has the largest collection of Crane theaters in the country the Fox Theatre (1928) is the largest and most ornate and Orchestra Hall (1919) is an early example of his more intimate style and skill for achieving perfect acoustics.

Picking up a piece of fallen molding, Shepardson explained how the thin jute-backed plaster was one reason for the marvelous acoustics.

THE DARK LOBBY stretched out along the back of the 2,000-seat first floor to the Madison Avenue lobby. Above the cast iron railings was the second level box seat area. In the center there is a large grand staircase leading to the balconies. Above the lobbies two ornately mirrored waiting rooms have been dubbed the "Versailles Rooms" by the MOT

All 3,367 seats in the theater have perfect sight lines. Flanked with a low ceiling such as in the Fox Theatre, the cozy 19 box seats are the most appealing. Above each box is a spider net styled stained glass hiding the now dark lighting.

The once ornate walls of the theater are scagliola. Now the olive green paint covering the simulated marble is peeling off.

'We don't know what color the walls were originally. We do not determine color by cutting through the paint because that method does not help us determine the finish of the paint. I do it with paint stripper, taking off one coat of paint at a time.'

The remnants of the leaking ceiling showed in the spongy carpeting on the grand staircase. On the third level balcony, Shepardson explained how the terraces between the seats would be enlarged and the number of seats would be reduced to 3,000.

"We will use the same seats but we will have to make the backs larger," said Shepardson. At the top of the balcony were the projection booths that showed the once popular silent movies. At 10 cents a person, even during the Depression this house was filled. Above the ceiling's caved-in arches was a concert roof.

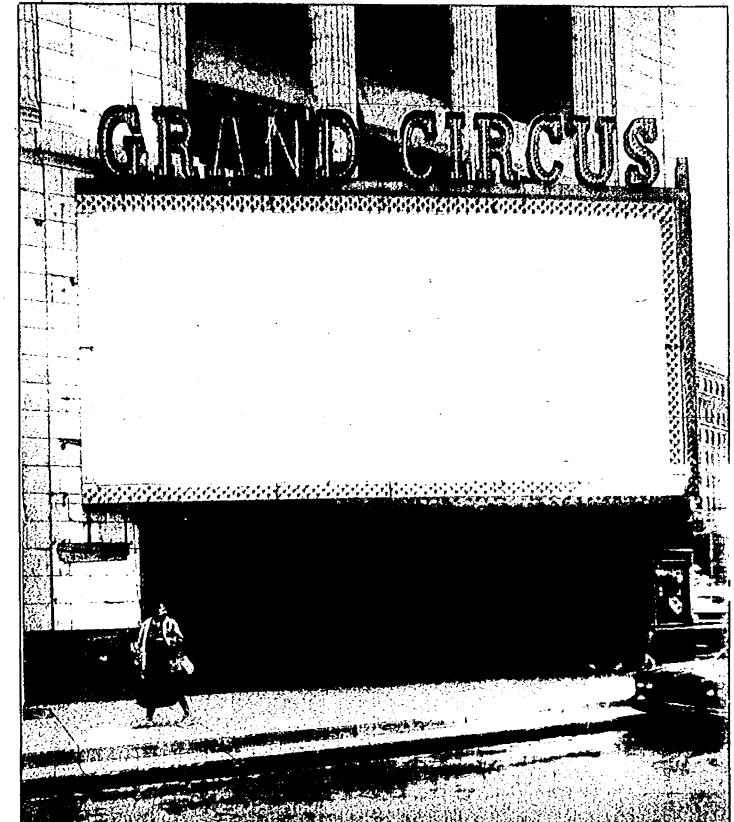

"The roof is covered with wood to house the restaurant that was originally planned," he said.

If MOT exercises its option to buy this theater, it will be one of the few opera companies to own its own building. Company treasurer Cameron B. Duncan estimates the entire project will cost the company $15-20 million.

"What I want to do is to take a year to make the plans for the building and then spend the next two years rebuilding and renovating," said Shepardson.

IT IS DANGEROUS to walk out into the theater proper to view the stage because of the weakened floors. MOT's General Director David DiChiera said he needs at least 76 feet back stage to mount sets for the operas, to avoid what happened this spring in "Marriage of Figaro." (Masonic Temple has about 56 feet.) Once renovated the Grand Circus Theater would surpass even the Metropolitan Opera itself. "With the parking lot behind the

The 57-year old Grand Circus Theater, between Broadway and Madison in Detroit, may took tired and deserted, but it's on the verge of a new life in store as a home for Michigan Op-stage, it gives us another 90 feet to work with to enlarge the stage," said Shepardson. "When this is complete it will be a world class house." "What is so remarkable about Detroit is that there are four enormous historic theaters in this small area with more than 4,000 parking spaces in a 90-minute driving distance for over nine million people. There isn't a theater district in the country with those facilities. It is amazing these

Free, homemade refreshments, gift boutique and white elephant sale at the Beverly Pavilion are included in the ticket price.

More than 60 species of birds have been identified by Mary and Bill Basses who built the brick terraces, ponds and rock pardens above the Rouge River themselves more than 20 years ago.

ECISIONS — decisions! All artists must make decisions when drawing. What do you draw and what do you leave out? If you are drawing in the right progression, that is, main shapes first and details last, you usually find yourself ending with a good balance of structure and detail.

. It is never advisable to overdraw just a part of a drawing when you have yet to block in the main shapes of the rest of your picture. When you add details to small sections at a time, your total drawing doesn't grow together. Often certain features which are completed at one time are out of proportion to parts of the drawing which have details completed at another time.

Finishing a section also puts pressure on the artist, You end up thinking, oI hope I don't blow this after a great start."

THOSE WHO ARE, able to see, or have been taught to see, details have a problem of deciding what to draw and what to leave out. Those who haven't the ability or haven't learned to see detalls are bothered by their inability to render their way to realism.

Both kinds of artists are in trouble. Although those who are able to see details are better suited, their drawings are most often rendered to death and they look like they should be titled "studies in patience."

Now those who cannot see details usually don't spend the time needed to draw a good picture because they simply do not "see" the need. Their drawings float somewhere between gesture drawings and cartoons.

Pen and ink will quickly and graphically show you if you are an "overlooker" or an "underlook-

OVERLOOKERS SIT, and watch as their hand systematically adds more and more ink and their drawing slowly approaches a black blob on the paper. While underlookers sit and stare at their almost blank sheet of paper wondering what they left out.

In some media you blend with your fingers or brushes but in pen and ink you have a pen tip that makes a clean black line. So how do you get shades of grey?

Crosshatching is the most common way of shading. This is merely drawing lots of lines in one direction which appears to form a gray area. If you need this area darker turn the paper slightly and cross over the same lines. This will shade the area twice as much.

You can repeat this over and over until this area appears to be black with little white dots.

When drawing animals it is important to watch the direction of the hair and feathers and to make sure you follow close to your model or photos. When drawing buildings, barns and shacks, draw in the main shapes then begin shading in the direction of whatever wood grain there may be.

CROSSHATCHING CAN become a little disning across the grain of wood. So simply add more lines in the direction of the wood grain.

Crosshatching is a shading technique and should not be distracting from the main shape and impact of your drawing. So keep your lines. crisp and clean. You also can vary the line width for a clearer looking drawing, heavier lines defining the main shapes and many fine lines for the shading.

Consider short fine and thin strokes for an area like the fine hairs on the nose of a cat. Often there are times that a line, no matter how fine, seems too bold. Here stipple or pointalism is extremely useful. This is merely lots and lots of dots. The darker areas need hundreds of dots. One of my best tips in pointalism is that the light areas should be white with black dots and the black areas should be black with white dots. Stay away from solld black areas they pull the eye away from all the subtle shading in the light

Before next week try a pen and ink. The best way to start is to do a light pencil sketch on white smooth paper. If the paper becomes too messy, transfer your finished drawing to a clean white piece of paper.

Remember you transfer a drawing by rubbing the back of your original drawing with a graphite stick, then centering it on the new paper. Tape both sides then trace over your lines in a ball point pen. This will produce a beautiful pencil drawing on clean white paper.

'Advocate for peace' is author's mission

By Ruby L. Bailey special writer

He has been called a terrorist. His enemies say he has no cause, just a desire to wage war. Under his leadership, his country has actually lost some of the land it is trying to control and is facing potential Armageddon. Yasser Arafat, chairman of the PLO, is viewed by most as the fanatic leader of a terrorist organi-

Yet Alan Hart, a former British foreign television correspondent review with 15 years of experience covering the Middle East, has written a book that paints quite a different portrait of the man who is considered a mere caricature in the Western media:

"Arafat," Hart said, "is a man driven by a burning sensé of injustice at what has been dope to his peo-

"PEACE IN the Middle East," Hart said, "is why I wrote this book. If we are to have peace, we need dialogue, dialogue, dialogue. And if we are to have dialogue and debate, we must actually have both sides of the

Hart recently traveled to the metropolitan Detroit area as a part of a national tour to promote the revised version of his book, released in England in 1984 and the United States in

WHILE HERE, Hart was interviewed on local radio stations, spoke to groups at the Ramallah Club in Livonia and the Metropolitian United Methodist Church in the New Center area of downtown Detroit, and made an appearance on Channel 50's "Morning Break" talk show.

"Detroiters," he said, "are asking questions. They are saying, 'Give us more.' Americans in general are more receptive now." During the 1986 tour, Hart appeared on approximately 300 talk shows. He and his agent approached 40 U.S. publishers, but each declined to take on a title about such a potentially explosive topic.

"They (the publishers) were afraid the (Israeli) lobby would organize boycotts against the bookshops," Hart said.

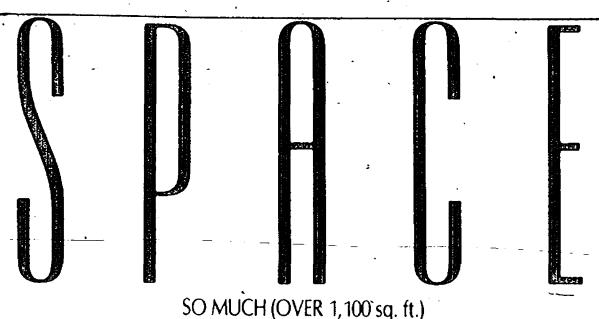

When Hart announced in early 1988 that the book was revised to include the 1988 uprising in the occupied territories, "18 American publishers showed interest and many had very positive recommendations from readers," Hart said.

"But when the crunch came, it was Indiana (University Press) that had the courage to go ahead. It's simply time somebody ended this conspiracy of silence about the man Arafat and the reality of his cause and what he represents."

HART GAINED first-hand knowledge edge of Arafat and what Hart calls his "desire for a compromise peace with Israel and his ability to deliver it" during a 1979 peace initiative.

Chosen by certain "enlightened" Israeli leaders in London, Hart was to negotiate a peace agreement between Arafat and leaders of the Labor Party, which was attempting to unseat Menachem Begin in the coming election.

"Family traditions" and "ethnic Detroit" are the themes of the 1989 Festival of Michigan Folklife, an outdoor living history exhibition to be held on two weekends, Aug. 19-20 and 28-27 during the Michigan Festival on the campus of Michigan State University.

More than 90 musicians, dancers, cooks, storytellers and artists from diverse occupational, regional tribal and linguistic groups in Michigan will share their traditional skills and knowledge.

Foodways, material culture and music performances associated with such family celebrations as Mexican-American quinceanara and Hmong weddings will be showcased.

OTHERS AREAS OF interest include family games, family bands, family history quilts and intergenerational family crafts such as Potowatomi black ash basketmaking, ice fishing, decoy carving and Finnish rag rug weaving.

Detroit area ethnic markets, Hungarian noodle-making and Italian-American stone-carving will be represented at the festival.

A "family activity" area will provide an opportunity for audience members to have hands-on experience with various traditions. Last year festival-goers participated in breaking a pinata with a pinata maker, sang a Finnish sauna song with a sauna builder, sorted worms with a commercial bait seller and danced with a Native-American drum group.

Also this year, 4-H youth from around the state will be on hand to tape-record family stories for the Michigan Folk Arts Archives.

Another feature of this year folklife's festival will be the presentation of honors to the 1989 Michigan Heritage Award winners, outstanding practitioners of Michigan tradi-

Use of antiques to soften setting

No house should be a museum.

Nothing, however, can soften a home as much as the use of antiques. For me, a gathering of people is much more enjoyable when there is a mixture of young and old, so a room always seems more charming when there is a combination of contrasting eras in furniture and accesso-

No matter what type of home or apartment you have, it would be better decorated with a sprinkling of things from the past.

What kind of antiques go into the living of today? You can start with your fireplace and antique andirons. The real old ones are rather primitive looking and are mostly black. The polished brass ones are dressier and give a room the added shine so desired today. A shiny brass fender is practical and will dress up the hearth-

Antique door knobs are still available and can add much to the charm and elegance of the home. Decorative old curtain and tie racks in antique brass are great for embelishing the look of the room.

I remember my last house in Birmingham when all the hardware was antique. It may not be possible to have matching hardware when you are planning to use it throughout, but keeping the hardware the same in one area will do it. Russell Hardware of Birmingham is a good source when you start to convert your hardware.

Unexpectedly, Begin won the election, "which blew negotiations out of the waters," Hart said, and the initiative was aborted. But it allowed "Hart to "get to know the man's soul. The book came out of that," Hart

THROUGH HUNDREDS of hours of interviews with Arafat and the leadership of the PLO, Hart's work provides an in-depth look at Arafat as a man and a leader. Set in its global context, the book offers a detailed account of Arafat's activities from 1948 to what Hart describes as the "inside story" of the 1988 Palestinian uprising

The final chapter, "Last Thoughts," offers Hart's perception of Arafat and how history might view the leader.

"Basically what I say to my readers is, 'Look folks, you all know ap- ' proximately Israel's version of the Palestinian's story because we've had it for 40 years. What you do not know is that there is another side to this story - the Palestinian side, Arafat's side, the PLO. side.' It's (the book) an attempt to tell the whole story through other than Israeli

THE MOST important message the book brings, according to Hart. comes from a conversation with his friend Sholomo Gazit, a former director of military intelligence research in Israel.

"The trouble with us Israelis is that we've become victims of our own propaganda," Gazit said.

"Israel has shifted propaganda over the years," Hart said. "First they said that the Palestinians don't exist. Then they said, 'Ah, but they're' a bunch of terrorists.' Lately, they've claimed that you can't trust Arafat.

"The Israelis have been able to convince us for all these years that the Jewish state has stood in hourby-hour danger. There has actually never been a serious Arab military threat to Israel. It's all propaganda. The problem is, that they now believe it."

Hart paints a dim picture for Israel's future if the country's leaders remain unwilling to negotiate. In 15 to 20 years, Hart estimates, the number of Arabs will actually be greater than the number of Jews in Greater

"THEIR OPTIONS will then be to give everybody the vote, in which case the Jewish state would be killed by democracy," Hart said, "or deny the majority and a minority of Jews will rule by repression a majority of

"Or they could 'solve' the problem by driving all the Arabs out of the occupied territories, creating more bitterness and leaving Israel totally without friends in the world."

Predicting a "great turning against Jews everywhere" if Israel continues with its "excesses" against the Palestinians, Hart believes the key to peace in the Middle East will be the ability of Israel's leaders to settle the conflict "between the head and the heart."

"In every Palestinian, including Arafat, there is a conflict between the head and the heart. The heart says, 'Why the hell should we make peace with the Jews in Israei?' But what the head says is, We have no choice. Israel needs a leader with the courage to make them face up to es-ality that Arafat just could be a peacemaker.'' With the book's one-sided approach to covering the Israeli-Arab conflict. Hart accepts that he runs the risk of being deemed an advocate of Arafat and the PLO. "But what I am in this book is an advocate for peace," Hart said.

The Jews are the intellectual elite of the Western civilizaton and the Palestinians are without a doubt the intellectual elite of theirs," Hart said, "and together in peace and partnership, with their brain power and resources, what they could do in peace is the stuff that dreams are made of. And from my own secret peace initiative I know it's possible."
