Decision gives states more abortion control

By Philip A. Sherman ...

The battle over a woman's right to an abortion has left the nation's capital for the lawmaking bodies of each of the 50 states.

With its announcement that Roe vs. Wade is intact, but that states can regulate the circumstances under which a woman may obtain an abortion, the Supreme Court has effectively absolved itself of the responsibility to regulate abortions on a local level.

Pro-choice and pro-life leaders in Michigan were still discussing the complex decision, Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, hours after it was released by Chief Justice William Rehnquist. The high court ruled 5-4 for Webster.

Douglas Fraser, chairman of the Milliken Committee, a statewide pro-choice organization. The former president of the United Auto Workers said the ruling has great potential to limit abortions, depending on how states react to the decision. "If this trend continues, you could conceivably see the reversal of Roe vs. Wade," Fraser said. Barbara Listing, director of Michigan Right to Life, said, "we're very pleased and not at all surprised" by the decision.

"We're especially pleased that the court has upheld the preamble to Webster - that life begins at conception," Listing said.

PRELIMINARY READINGS of the decision indicate the court did not directly rule on viability - the "IT'S VERY COMPLICATED, but time at which a fetus is viable out-

Now, through Webster, the court has said a state can intervene any time after conception.

"It's man pal to the states that you can large te in this area," Listing said. She sees no immediate effect of the ruling in Michigan, but said she will be "sitting down with pro-life" legislators soon."

At the top of her agenda is a mandate to nullify a minor's right to an abortion without parental consent, Listing said.

Pam Dooley, executive director of the state branch of Planned Parenthood, based in Novi, said her "initial reaction (is that) it's a real step. backward.

Local reaction to ruling is mixed

Monday's U.S. Supreme Court ruling which gives states more leeway in setting regulations under which women may obtain abortions drew mixed reaction locally.

Shirley Ping, a member of the Garden City Christian Center, said she was pleased with the decision, although she thought the court was "sidestepping the Issue" by refusing to overturn the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion.

"I can see why they did it that way, because it's difficult to take something away after it's been permitted," she said.

'On the eve of our nation's celebration of freedom the court has handed a setback to our most important freedom and that is religious freedom.'

$16.3 million project will create 35 jobs

By Leonard Poger

Plasticpak, a Westland company which makes many of the milk, detergent, and soda pop containers shoppers find on supermarket shelves, is planning the city's largest industrial expansion.

The Plymouth-based company, which has its industrial plant at 1851 Hix, plans to more than double its current 65,000-square-foot building and expand its work-force 35 per-

The planned 85,500 square foot expansion represents an investment of $16.3 million. When the addition is completed next year, the number of employees will increase to 133 from

Purpose of the expansion is to add manufacturing capacity for the fast growing-company.

Of the planned investment, $13 million will be in equipment and $3.3 million will be in property.

Until now, the largest industrial project was about $12 million, said Timothy Schroeder, the city's economic development director.

The expansion was confirmed Monday when the Westland City Council approved a 12-year property tax abatement, the maximum allowed on a state law written to encourage industrial expansion, create jobs, and generate new property tax revenues for local communities.

The council's unanimous approval was provided under its policy of considering tax breaks of periods from one to 12 years.

THE LENGTH of the abatement is based on numerous factors, including the amount of the investment, number of jobs retained and/or created, and the wage rates of the workers to be hired through the expan-

When the abatement period ends, the increase in property tax revenues will double to more than $600,000 a year, also based on current tax rates.

Schroeder said the local tax break approval was important to Plasticpak since the company has facilities in other cities and could have expanded on those communities.

The director said in a recommendation to the city council that the company plans to work with the Wayne County Private Industry Corp. or the William Ford Vocation-

Fire prevention added to city's safety arsenal

By Janice Brunson staff writer

In an effort to fight the problems of fires, the Westland Fire Department is renewing community education by filling the position of public education officer that has been vacant for 31/2 years.

Fire Capt. George Riley has been temporarily appointed to the $40,000 a year position which targets educational programs for youth and senior

A permanent appointment will be made by early fall, said Fire Chief Larry Lane.

"I feel this is a very important job," Lane said.

"Education is the first line of offense in preventing fires. If children learn fire safety young, they become fire safety adults."

ed when the money was eliminated. "It is understood the position will exist (now) as long as outside funding is available," Lane wrote in a letter of explanation to Mayor Charles Griffin and the city council.

RILEY, WHOSE appointment was made effective last Saturday, beganhis duties in preparation of July 4 festivities by staging a series of firesafety demonstrations over the weekend in the fire safety house directly behind the central fire station on Ford Road.

The job encompasses a "multi-tude" of responsibilities, according to Lane, including designing and im-plementing programs almed at life prevention, what to do in the event of fire, the destructive force of fire and fire as a useful tool.

Riley will work with the person named permanently to the postion and the National Burn Institute and the National Fire Academy in designing new programs. Videos like "Learn Not To Burn" and "Stop, Drop and Roll," films illustrating how to prevent fires and what to do in the event clothing catches on fire, are now available and have previously been shown locally, Lane said.

Qualified applicants may apply for the job, ranked as a battallon chief, within the next 45 days.

Successful candidates must pass an information exam. Lane said he expects many qualified applicants to

Two major roads will be improved

By Janice Brunson

The expansion of Warren Road and Newburgh, two major roadswhich carry traffic into and through Westland's business area, is assured now that the city has acquired fund-

Money for the improvements is to be generated from the sale of $5.9 million in limited tax development bonds, a relatively new source of funding, according to Westland's economic development director Timothy Schroeder, who said without the bond issue, other sources of immediate funding were unlikely.

"We are very excited" about the proposed expansion, said Marilyn Zeigler, Westland Center manager.

We consider ourselves the downtown of Westland," she said. 'A widened Warren Road will indeed impact on us, providing easier accessibility in and out (of the center) and increased safety. We couldn't be more thrilled," Zeigler

CURRENTLY UNDER construction is a Meijers on 47 acres on the southeast corner of Warren Road and Newburgh. When completed next spring, the store will increase retail space by an additional 200,000 square feet.

"The widened roads are a very positive move for us, particularly along Newburgh where many of our deliveries are made," said Jennifer White of Meijers.

The widening is also expected to have significant impact on the thousands of residents of such apartment complexes as The Landings and Park Crest whose major access is onto Warren Road.

Westland Mayor Charles Griffin said the city's oredit rating is "high quality," based on the rate at which the bonds were secured and the number of bids received.

A pro-life supporter prays during a protest at an area abortion clinic earlier this year. Pro-life groups are taking Monday's Supreme Court ruling as a victory, since it will allow states to regulate how a woman can get an abortion.

Congress eyes path vs. abortion

Even before the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in this latest abortion case, both sides agreed the outcome would only embolden anti-abortion activists in Congress.

"THERE HAS already been an erosion of Roe (vs. Wade) in Congress and in the minds of the people," said Rep. Christopher H. Smith, R.N.J., co-chairman of the House Pro-life Caucus.

Smith has said that he and his allies would continue pressing a constitutional amendment banning abortion no matter how the high court ruled. In 1983, the only time either chamber of Congress has voted on such a measure, the Senate rejected the proposal 49-50, 18 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed.

The pro-choice side, outvoted on abortion-funding issues, has been less active in Congress, relying on the court to uphold abortion rights.

But in recent years it has become more organized in the face of strong anti-abortion sentiment from the Reagan and Bush administrations. Its members count as a victory the 1987 defeat of Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork, an abortion opponent and a critic of Roe.

AT LEAST 10 abortion-related measures have been introduced in the 101st Congress. Most seek an outright ban on abortion, further restrictions on federal funding for the procedure or limits on the use of fetal tissue obtained from abortions.

The lone exception is HR 857, introduced by Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y., which would require abortions to be made as available as other pregnancy-related services under all programs that receive federal funds. The pending anti-abortion measures include:

• S 73 — by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would bar the use of federal funds for all abortions except those necessary to safe the life of the mother and would prohibit federal funds from being used to encourage or counsel abortion. • S 162 - by Helms, would disal-tow a personal tax exemption for a child born alive, or who subsequently dies, after an induced abortion.

• HR 162 - by Rep. Bill Emerson, R-Mo., would prohibit using federal funds for abortion except when the mother's life is endangered.

• HR 620 - by Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., would bar abortion in federal prisons except when the mother's life is endangered.

• HR 621 — by Dornan, would bar Medicare or Medicald payments to anyone who provides or counsels the use of abortion drugs or devices.

• HR 623 - by Dornan, declares that fetuses are entitled to certain constitutional guarantees and would prohibit abortion in any case.

• HR 624- by Dornan, would deny tax-exempt status to organizations that perform or finance abor-

• HR 625 - by Dornan, would restrict the transportation and use of fetal tissue obtained in abortions and calls for licensing of facilities that would store such material.

• HR 1351 - by Rep. Clyde C. Holloway, R.La., would restrict the use in research fetal tissue obtained from abortlons.

Court decisions on abortion rights

previous U.S. Supreme Court rulings on a woman's right to an abortion: • 1973 - Roe v. Wade, 7-2, legalized abortion nationwide. The court ruled that the constitutional right of privacy includes a woman's right to terminate a pregnancy. The court said that during the first trimester of pregnancy, the decision may be virtually free of state interference, After the first trimester, the state has a compelling interest in protecting the woman's health and may regulate abortion to promote that interest. The court also said that at the point the fetus is "viable" outside the womb, the state has an interest in its life and can restrict abortion. L Doe v. Bolton, 7-2, struck down a

Following are the most significant Georgia law requiring physician concurrence in a woman's choice to have an abortion in her first trimester of pregnancy.

• 1976 - Planned Parenthood of Central Missouri v. Danforth. 5.4, held that states could not require a husband's or parent's consent as a condition for abortion. Bellotti v. Baird held unanimously that states could not allow parents to yeto abortions sought by their unmarried daughters under 18, the case was remanded to the Massachusetts courts for interpretation of a statute that required consent of both parents but allowed consent to be waived by a judge for "good cause shown." The case returned to the high court in 1979.

'We'll probably see a scramble in the state Legislature to restrict" abortions, Dooley said. She said she expects the impact of the decision to be felt immediately, and added she'd already heard at least one state representative was drafting language to make Michigan's abortion laws parallel those of Missouri.

THIS LATEST challenge to Roe vs. Wade began April 26, when the court heard arguments in the case of Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services. Webster stands out among other challenges because the Bush administration - and anti-abortion groups had joined forces and asked the court to use it to overturn Roe vs. Wade.

Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services focused on a challenge to a Missouri law that states life begins at conception and that unborn children have "protectable interests in life, health and well-being."

The Missouri law also makes it more difficult for a woman to get an abortion after 20 weeks of pregnancy and forbids the use of public hospitals or employees to assist in abortions not necessary to save the mother's life.

One key issue of the Missouri law is the notion of viability. In Roe, the Supreme Court held that at the point a fetus is viable outside the womb, the state has an interest in its life. and can halt an abortion.

Webster, however, said viability is an arbitrary point and the state has a compelling interest to protect life at all stages of a pregnancy.

Ultimately, Missouri argued that the Constitution does not guarantee a fundamental right to an abortion.

THE 8TH CIRCUIT Court ruled against Missouri and through Webster, the state appealed to the Supreme Court. The high court reaffirmed a woman's right to abortion 'We'll probably see a scramble in the state Legislature to restrict' abortions.

Monday, but let states decide how could regulate an abortion. that abortion may be obtained.

Missouri's law differed from Roe .vs. Wade in several ways. In the 1973 landmark decision (which has been challenged several times - see accompanying story), the Supreme Court based its view on the pivotal. point of a woman's right to privacy and said that right extends to and protects her decision to end a preg-

The court said a woman, without governmental interference, may terminate a pregnancy any time during the first trimester. After that, the court said the state has a compelling interest in a woman's health and ability.

An interesting point in Missouri's case is that it says with modern tech nology, a fetus may be viable outside the womb at a much younger age. Part of Missouri law requires physicians to perform tests on fetal gestational age, weight and lung maturity if the physician thinks the mother is 20 or more weeks pregnant...

However, the American Medical Association, which neither opposed nor supported Roe vs. Wade in its brief to the court, said those fetalviability tests increase the risk to the mother and fetus without providing significant information about vi-

Flooding perils

Hazards often overlooked

LOODING of residential neighborhoods typically creates a lot of problems, probably the most overlooked of which was the threat to human life.

When floods hit, the first reaction seems to be concern for property - namely, flooded basements. Residents seemingly don't think enough about the threat to human life and health that exist when the flood arrives and remains after the water recedes.

"Unfortunately, human nature reacts to a flood (after the basement is secure) almost like a social affair. Children and young people hop unto inner tubes, flotation devices, crawl onto floating picnic tables, and otherwise head for the waters as if rushing the beaches on a hot July day.

This reaction, almost like looting after a riot or tornado, is impulsive. People and children just don't think about the dangers involved. The most obvious danger is the possibility of drowning; a more subtle danger is that flood water is contaminated and poses a real health risk. And for homeowners who rush downstairs to save property or began an immediate cleanup, there is a real danger of electrocution.

THE FLOODING in western Wayne County of two weeks ago was primarily the result of heavy rains that rushed downstream from Novi and Farmington Hills. The rainwater overran the stream's banks and settled in low-lying areas.

The Wayne County Health Department cautions residents to avoid contact with lingering floodwaters, and to avoid using floodwaters and streams for swimming, wading, skiing, or other recreational purposes.

During extended periods of rain or a heavy downpour, land surface contaminants can be washed into the receiving stream or area.

Among the contaminants could be human sewage from areas where sanitary sewers are combined with storm sewers. During these times of increased rainwater flows, not only is the danger of contact with physical objects increased but the potential for contact with biological and chemical contaminants also increases.

THE HEALTH problems of flooding are exa-summer for all.

Drowning is only one of many hazards in the wake of a flood.

gerated in communities that have combined sewer systems, or are downstream from cities with combined sytems.

Combined sewer systems use the same pipe to carry both storm-water and raw sewage to a local water treatment plant.

When the volume of water exceeds the line's capacity, the overflow (including the raw sewage) bypasses the treatment plant and is dumped directly into the nearest body of water.

This could lead to an increased risk of disease or death. Health officials caution that various diseases, especially hepatitis, are associated with contaminated water.

CLEANING UP after the recent floods also can be hazardous to health unless performed carefully, using strict safety and sanitation pro-

Electrical and gas lines in the flooded area can also pose physical dangers. In case of basement flooding, walls, floors and surrounding areas should be disinfected by using Lysol or a chlorine solution of one-half cup laundry bleach to each gallon of water.

Throw out food that has been exposed to flooding, including fruits, vegetables, boxed foods and contents of bottled goods sealed in crimped caps.

Don't enter a basement that's still flooded if electricity and gas lines haven't been shut offer Don't light a match in an enclosed area where gas may be present. Don't attempt to disconnect or open a fuse box or circuit breaker box. If the current is still on, don't handle any connected electrical cords or appliances.

Hopefully, there will be no flash floods this summer. If were are, though, let's use common senese and remember the threats to life and health that accompany a flood. Here's to a safe

Flag, execution laws conflict

TEVER were the divided attitudes of the American people so evident as in recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings on the flag and the death penalty.

With the court shifting allegiances in 5.4 rulings each time, shock reverberated throughout the country. On one hand the justices ruled that, despite the esteem in which we hold the red, white and blue, an avowed communist had the right to burn the flag at the Republican conven-

In the other conservative ruling, the justices ruled that teens aged 16 and 17 and mentally retarded adults can be executed.

Supporting the flag ruling were justices Anthony M. Kennedy, Harry Blackmun, Thurgood Marshall, Antonin Scalia and William Brennan in

The majority ruling on the death penalty decisions were Scalla, Chief Justice William Rehnquist. Byron White, Sandra Day O'Connor and Kennedy.

THE LIBERAL decision on the flag was based on the freedom to dissent for political reasons. It unleashed a backlash of dissent to the opinion

Despite their sincerity, these protests are misguided. When we say we honor Old Glory as much as anyone else, we honor not a swatch of cloth but the meaning behind the flag. That meaning is the liberty inherent in our doctrine of freedom of speech to burn the very symbol for which it stands, even if the protester is a complete jerk for doing so.

We are, however, still reeling from the court's decision that teens ages 16 and 17 and mentally retarded adults can be executed.

Scalia, the only justice to vote in the majority on both decisions, wrote: "In determining what standards have evolved, we have looked not to our own conceptions of decency, but to those of modern American society as a whole."

The diverse American society bows its head in shame.

9-1-1 system works fast

To the editor:

On June 23, we attempted to place a long distance call to London, Ontario, Area code for this is 519. After dialing 1-519, we got a recording which said they could not complete the call and to re-dial.

We again dialed the number and this time the call went through. There was no answer and we hung up. By the time we hung up the phone, a Garden City police car had pulled up in front of our house and an officer came up to the door.

Apparently a malfunction in our telephone sent the first call attempt through to 9-1-1.

Even though we were not in need

Response time could not have been more than 2 to 21/2 minutes from the time the first number was dialed until the police car arrived. As the officer finished establishing that we didn't need help, a second police car arrived.

It is very comforting to know that In Garden City, should we ever have an emergency, the 9-1-1 system is not only operational, but very effi-

Birth control is overlooked

Our compliments!!

To the editor: The pro-life people seem to be overlooking an essential aspect of their campaign, birth control.

Narrow-minded, holler than thou, types of people (not necessarily prolifers) have turned birth control into some sort of deadly sin.

They remind me of this joke: A man is marooned on a desert island. He prays to God to save him, confident God will help him. Soon after a ship comes by and offers to give the man a lift. The man refuses saying, "No, God will save me." A few days later a helicopter comes by and the pllot offers to rescue this man. But he refuses saying, "No, God will save me." Not long afterward the man dies of exposure. He goes to heaven and asks God, "Lord, I prayed to you. Why didn't you save me?" And God replied, "Hey, I sent you a boat and a helicopter!"

In this case the question asked will of police assistance, we were quite be, "God, why did you make sex so enjoyable that the earth became over-populated to the point that we couldn't feed, clothe and care for everyone?" And God will say, "Look, when over-population started becoming a problem, I inspired scientists to invent effective birth-control. Why did you choose to suppress this knowledge?"

Obviously the Bible couldn't specifically-cover every issue, God did, however, bless us with common sense. Let's use it!

Appalled by police action

I am writing in response to the June 15 article regarding the Livo nia trial of eight anti-abortionists. am appalled at the actions of the Livonia Police officers involved.

The accused were demonstrating peacefully outside an abortion clinic when pro-choice activists physically attacked them. The officers were so concerned for their own safety that they did nothing to stop the assault; Instead, they walted until the prochoice group backed off and then arrested the pro-lifers for being disor. derly.

Isn't it ironic that those who were quietly and firmly standing up for their beliefs are now standing trial, while those who broke the law before the very eyes of the police were! allowed to simply leave? All I can say is I hope I never have to depend. on any of those Livonia officers for help — I'd obviously be better off on

Senators scrambling during capital work

THIS SUMMER the Michigan Senate is meeting in an historic, ornate but cramped committee room while its chamber is being renovated. 🔩

So far the senators and their presiding officer are taking the bad with the good.

"I felt there was something funny about this, and there is," said Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths as senators strained to hear. "This is the first time I've been able to see everybody's ears at the same time."

There were groans at this Marthaism. The 78-year-old president of the Senate is known for chiding memused to chide the inattentive Tom Sawyer.

THE TEMPORARY Senate chamber is the third floor Senate Appropriations Committee room.

In an earlier generation, it was the Supreme Court chamber. Etched glass over the door still proclaims "Supreme Court."

The long wooden table where the committee met has been replaced by 38 tables — stalls, really — for the senators. The spectators' gallery has only a handful of chairs.

A single closed-circuit television camera carries the proceedings to a larger committee room on the fourth floor. There is only one microphone for senators, so that if someone talks from the floor he or she can't be heard over TV.

They told me it was furnished like a K mart blue light special. It turned out rather well," admitted Sen. Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie, no fan of Senate Majority Leader John Engler.

THE DOCTOR - Sen. John bers the way Schoolmaster Dobbins - Schwarz, M.D., R-Battle Creek asked special consideration for Sens. Harmon Cropsey and Joe Mack, who have hearing losses. Responded Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor: "We have some who are sight impaired, some who are hearing impaired, and some who are justimpalred."

Groans from the gallery.

Pollack suggested, seriously, a blackboard be used to chalk the bill number that is under discussion. Nods of agreement.

INSTEAD OF having two minutes to turn on a green (yes) or red (no) light, senators now must answer an oral roll call. A moment's lapse, and one misses a vote.

That happened to Sen. Gil DiNello, D-East Detroit, who stepped into the hall to talk to an alde.

"I ask to be recorded as voting yes," DiNello told Griffiths later. "The rule says you have to call a sec-

"Sen. DiNello," replied the presiding officer, "if you will sit - down - and pay - attention - you will /be able to vote."

A moment later Griffiths gave the Schoolmaster Dobbins treatment to shush Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills: "Sen. Faxon - you - haven't - been - recognized."

Much laughter.

FOR THE PRESS, the result is a

It's easter to record roll calls because each member's name is called out and his or her vote repeated for closed-circuit TV.

But with only one microphone and bad internal acoustics, senators are under pressure to make fewer and shorter speeches, providing the press with fewer quotes.

In the corridor, there is no P.A. system as there is in the Senate lobby, so newspeople can't interview senators during lulls for fear of missing something important.

In the fourth-floor viewing-room, newspeople share seats with lobbyists and legislative staffers, whose conversations can drown out the TV.

Court rulings vary on abortion rights

• 1977 - Beal v. Doe, Maher v. Roe and Poelker v. Doe, all 6-3, upheld the right of states to refuse to spend public money for abortions that are of an elective or non-therapeutic nature.

• 1979 - Colautti v. Franklin, 6,8, struck down a Pennsylvania reguirement that a physician try to save the life of a fetus whenever the doctor had reason to believe that the fetus might be able to survive out-requiring parental consent burden's an individual's right to an abortion. The court found the Massachusetts law unconstitutional and ruled that. without prior parental consultation, a minor must have access to a confidential proceeding before a judge to argue that an abortion is in her best interests.

• 1980 - Harris v. McRae, 5-4, held that it is constitutional for the federal government to permit Medicald funding only for abortions necessary to save the woman's life. side the mother's body.

Since 1977, Congress has denied fedBellotti v. Baird, 8-1, held that eral Medicald funding for abortions under the Hyde amendment, named for original sponsor Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill.

• 1983 - City of Akron v. Akron Center for Reproductive Health, 6-3, struck down a city ordinance requiring that all abortions after the first trimester be performed in full service hospital and an "informed consent" provision requiring the physician to tell patients that the fetus is a human being from the moment of conception, to describe the fetus' physical development and to list all possible physical and emotional consequences of the abortion.

Until Monday's landmark ruling, the U.S. Supreme Court had generally struck down state laws restricting a woman's right to an abortion.

The court also ruled unconstitutional a city ordinance requiring a woman to wait 24 hours between consenting to and receiving an abortion.

• 1986 - Thornburgh v. American College of Obstetrticians and Gynecologists, 5-4, struck down a state requirement that the doctor use the same degree of care in aborting a fetus as he would if delivering it and that he use the abortion method providing the best opportunity for the fetus to be born alive. The court ruled Pennsylvania's informed-consent requirement unconstitutional. saying it was an attempt to dissuade women from an abortion, and struck down a reporting requirement on the ground that it would violate confidentiality of medical records.

Department officials said they expect minimum loans will be $2,500 and that interest rates will be favorable because loans to families with proven ability to pay represent a low risk to lenders.

Default rates on state programs in other areas of the country average 2 percent or less because the loans are issued to families with higher incomes than those served through the federally subsidized program.

Family is hit hard by injury

By Sue Mason staff writer

Gertrude Schleick doesn't think about the future when it comes to her 26-year-old daughter Sheri. She takes each day as it comes and revels in the surprises each day brings.

You see, Sherl is a quadriplegic, although she isn't paralyzed. For four years, she has been making the slow climb back from a traumatic head injury.

"I don't ask what her prognosis is. Even back then I didn't," said Schleick, a Livonia resident. "I'm grateful for everything she does and I know in the back of my mind she will never be the way she was."

Sheri's life was changed forever in the early morning hours of May 19, 1985, when her car was broadsided by another car. Sheri was thrown from her car. She broke an arm, but the most severe damage was to the right and left frontal lobes of her brain, caused when her head slammed into the pavement.

Comatose, she was rushed to the hospital and later-transferred to University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor. She stayed at U-M Hospital for 29 days.

They did a CAT scan and found that pieces of her brain had broken off," said her mother. "They said it meant irreversible brain damage,"

Because Sheri showed no signs of improvement, she was moved to a long-term care facility. She stayed there for five months, during which time her body contracted into a fetal position and she developed drop feet.

Because of the muscle contractions, she dislocated her shoulder. Doctors, unable to set the bones, told Schleick surgery would be necessary. But they didn't think that was a "good idea" because of Sheri's condition, her mother sald.

IT WAS then that a representative of the automobile insurance. company, who was checking on her care, suggested that a second opinion may be in order. A . ecialist was brought in from Chicago.

Still comatose, she was transferred to the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago just before Christmas 1985 and spent three months there. One of the first orders given to her mother was to buy her daughter a wardrobe of clothes. She wouldn't be spending her time at the institute in hospital gowns,

"Their philosophy is to treat them like there's nothing wrong," Schleick said. "The whole point is the kind of quality of life they get, whether they know it or not.

During her stay at the institute, surgery was performed on Sheri's shoulder and she was placed in a bed that slowly rotated from side to side to prevent her from developing pneumonia.

In March 1986, Schleick again faced the dilemma of find a new place to care for Sheri. Again, the insurance representative stepped in and directed her to Apple Tree it has been a slow uphill climb for Sheri Schleick, whose life was changed forever in a May 19, 1985, automobile accident. Even though her speech is impaired and she is confined to a wheelchair, she and her 8-year-old son Derek still can find things to smile about.

Shattered lives discover meaning at Special Tree

staff writer

The 16-year-old boy lies motionless on the bed, his feet extended and hands curled into fists. Occasionally, his eye lids flicker, but there is no response to the young woman, who carries on a one-sided conversation as she adjusts his head on a pillow.

Down'the hall, a young man touches his chin to a toggle switch. His motorized wheelchair comes to life as he heads outside to soak up some warm weather.

Another teen slowly touches letters on keyboard attached to his wheelchair. The board comes to "life" and in a scratchy voice, It conveys his message: "Can I have a drink?"

It's a typical day at Apple Tree Lane, a part of Special Tree, a rehabilitation facility that works with the victims of head and splnal cord injuries.

Based in Romulus, the services provided by Special Tree have been reaching out throughout Michigan and the country like branches on a tree for 14 years. In addition to Apple Tree Lane.

"OUR GOALS are to discharge the clients when they are able.

said Joy Raves, director of case management. "We want these people back where they were before their accidents."

But getting the client to that point calls for a team effort. Special Tree has a therapy team of 31 people. It also has a psychologist and neruologist on staff. The entire team works with the physiclan in making an accurate assessment of the client's progress, Raves said.

Comas are as individual as the clients themselves and the length of the comas determine the recovery the clients will make. As a result, the treatment is individualized and takes into account what the person did before, what their educational level was and what their goals were.

Therapy begins even while the client is comatose. Therapistswork with the client providing physical and vocal stimulation.

Contrary to belief, a person doesn't just wake up from a coma. Progress is slow and measured by how the person responds. to external stimuli, such as a verbal command.

And contrary to belief that the comatose patient is completely cognizant of his surroundings. when he awakens, the patient usually is confused and frightened.

It takes a lot of work, since. some patients can remain comatose for years. But the work is rewarding, according to Rayes.

"What's exciting is to have a patient who is cometose with a feeding tube and with working with the therapists gets rid of the tubes and eats by himself," she said. "Even the smallest achievement is great. Even if a client puts on his shirt backwards, we let him wear it like that all day because it's an achievement. He put it on himself."

ONCE ALERT, the other phases of the rehabilitation kick in. A vocational evaluation is done to determine what the client can do, taking into account their ability to do the job and to relate to others. Vocational rehabilitation in the form of work adjustment is provided as well as job placement

Dressing up your clothes with scarves

By C.L. Rugenstein staff writer

7 OU SEE THEM everywhere these days - around heads, necks, waists, derrieres. Scarves have been recycled from the early 1970s as an important wardrobe-stretching accessory for women.

But even more important than the scarf itself are tying techniques to give them pizzazz.

"There's no right or wrong way to wear scarves,"said Hilda Bokos, partner with Shirley Broccardo in selling unique accessories at their Plymouth boutique - named, aptly, Unique Accessories.

And there are as many ways to tle scarves as there are people to wear

"A scarf is very creative; it's an arty kind of thing," Bokos said. "You can let the scarf create its own lines. We encourage people to elaborate with them." To demonstrate, she took a two-piece, rose-colored knit dress draped with a dark blue, floral-print scarf from a rack. The scarf had a flat, overhand knot in the middle and tied behind the neck.

"It's a more-controlled, casual can tle one, two or three knots."

Tie techniques can help with figure problems as well as style. "We're very aware of bad proportions,"Bokos said. WHEN SHOWING a customer, or someone at one of their scarf-tying seminars a particular tie technique, they take several factors into consideration. Height, weight, coloring, length of neck and face shapes are some examples. If a woman is small she needs a fluffier, fuller style than the flat knot, Bokos said.

Bokos demonstrated a fuller style with a peach print oblong scarf, pleated and held with a scarf clip to achieve a rosette look at the center.

Again, the ends tied behind the neck. Leave about 12 inches at each end, then accordian-pleat the center," she said. "Pull the pleats through the ring of the clip, and put the clip down." In lieu of a scarf clip, a rubber band would do as well, she added.

The beauty of the ruffled oblong scarf is that in warm weather, it can also be worn as a dickey under a suit jacket, Bokos said.

The "bunny ears" is another deceptively simple tie technique. It can be done with a square scarf, but be sure the material is thin and silky. Linen didn't work too well.

Lay the scarf flat, and pull it up

The style can also be worn as a dickey, or pulled sideways and

"When we go on buying triply we get an idea of trends," Bokos salls of the scarf mania, "Scarves started last spring and became without a doubt the hottest accessory of all?

It is good to hear that you have a keen interest in graphology. I hope you find my analysis of your personality helpful as well as accurate.

A young woman with a dominant personality begins to emerge as I scan your handwriting. You find the role of leader more attractive than that of subordinate. It seems quite possible, however, that you experience difficulty relating to authority figures. This probably started early in your life. Do you often find yourself vying for the upper hand in relationships?

Your dependability cannot be missed. You are absorbed with perfection in all your undertakings. In both the small things as well as the more important ones you are meticulous. And a tendency to feel no one else can do things quite as efficiently as you is also noted.

You have been blessed with intelligence that is well above the average. Your mind is discriminating and in-

Some intuition is also suggested in this handwriting. You seem reluctant to utilize it, though.

Usually your emotional nature is controlled. You do not wear your heart on your sleeve. Neither are you given to implusive behavior. Before becoming involved, you take time to consider how a situation is going to affect you personally.

WITH THOSE who are meaningful in your life, you are caring and willing to share yourself. Beyond that, you are quite practical, feeling charity begins at home.

With personal information you are discreet regarding what you share with others. I suspect there are some things to which no one is privy.

Currently, you are not terribly sat-Isfled with some part of your life. You may be experiencing pressure from someone over you. In addition, there are some parental conflicts that have not been resolved.

I see a great deal of inner strength here. So it seems almost paradoxical graphology Lorene Green

And when she passes her driving test, she will get a motorized wheelchair. She falled her first test - maneuvering a wheelchair down a straight course for 20 or so feet. She hit a wall because she was concentrating more on using her hand than watching where she was Sherl has retained her long-term memory. When she was a child, she would bite on her hand when she was angry. She has reverted back to that childhood practice or when she's upset or to express displeas-

"SHE LAUGHS at the appropriate time, she has tears in her eyes when she's sad and you can tell when she's angry by the expression on her face," Schleick said. "She understands everything you say and is very expressive.

"Sheri is very much like she was before. She has a very pleasant personality and the staff at Apple Tree loves to tease her and fuss with her."

Almost 50, Schleick should be looking forward to a life of her own now that her six children are all grown. But because of the accident, she has had literally start over. Three sons still live at home, along with Sheri's 8-year-old son Derek.

Schleick isn't sure how the accident has affected Derek. He was a Sheri's sister. Derek was found on the floor of the back seat of the car. He had a gash on the top of his head, possibly from hitting the metal frame of the front seat.

"He goes to see his mom and talks to her like he talks to me or anybody else," she said. "I don't encourage or discourage him to talk about it, but I worry that some day he may become angry about what happened,"

The last four years have been an education for Schleick. She has learned not to make comparisons. Each head injury is different as is each recovery, she said. And such comparisons "can only make you feel bad."

She also learned not to feel sorry for her daughter.

"I've never cried in front of her. never felt sorry for her," she sald. "It's something I've no control over, so why should I make her feel miserable? We have to work with what we have and go from there.

in a competitive setting, when the client is ready.

Special Tree has a goal of job placement for 31 clients this year. By the end of the second quarter it had achieved 37 percent of the goal, said Bettye White Woodard, vocational services director. That may seem low, but a successful placement means staying on the job 60 days, she said.

If the client loses the job, he or she has an opportunity to come back for job consultations.

At the same time, the staff works with the clients to counteract behavior problems that are often present. Those problems can range from aggression, such as shouting insults and obscenities, and social disinhibition, suchas poor control of impulses in social setting, to depression, denial and passive dependency.

Through day services, clients begin to relearn tasks like cook--ing, housekeeping and self-care.

The program is aimed to make the client as independent as he or she can be, said Dr. Ann VanDemark, director of day services.

"We try to put in activities that would be a part of their daily routine; it's a very structured program," she said. "One of the difficulties they have is staying on the topic in conversation and staying on task. Head injured people function best in a structured environment and need a repetivie environment because they suffer memory problems."

THE DAY services are based on a facility a short distance from the medical center and the clients come there, whether based at the medical facility, at a group home or their family home or the supported apartments.

The clients can take anywhere from a few months to several years to "graduate" from day services. Some clients move into the residential setting where what they have learned is rein-

Each home can handle six clients. There is 24-hour supervision, but the clients plan their weekly menus, prepare the food, clean up the kitchen and do their own laundry. Once a week, they select a restaurant to eat at.

"We concentrate on integrating them into the community and normal activities because what we would like to happen down the road is to have them back in the community," said Mary Jo Stanley, director of the residential program.

In the apartments, the staff provides support, not supervision. The clients live in a regular apartment and care for themselves,"but there's someone there, if it gets to be too much," Stanley said.

Clients are thoroughly evaluated before being placed in the supported apartment setting, so the staff knows their weakness and strong points. If a client is good at taking medication two of three times a day, the staff is there to remind him to take it the third

While Special Tree focuses on the client, it makes sure the family is involved and receives support. Social workers counsel familles and help them cope.

"FAMILIES are the mobile mourning," Raves said."If a person dies, you can bury them, but when it's a brain injury, they see a person who looks OK, but isn't the same as before, so they're constantly mourning their loss."

Families are encouraged to be involved in the treatment and to visit as often as possible. Raves has found that families who come frequently tend to adopt other patients whose relatives live further away. And the staff brings in their pets and children to brighten the patients' day.

"There's just a lot of love from the staff." she said. "We've found that rehabilitation-works-if-thefamily along with the physician are part of their lives.

"Head injuries are like dropping a pebble in a pool. It affects everyone."

child care Marcie Walker

Drop-in centers offer alternative

A recent concept in child care is the drop-in child-care center. At such a center, parents can drop off a child, usually without an appointment, for short periods of time in the day or evening.

While some child-care centers offer this service as an option during the day, My Place (Just for Kids) in Birmingham, is devoted exclusively. to this baby sitting alternative.

Parents might consider making use of this center in such cases as a sudden cancellation by their baby sitter in the evening or, perhaps, as a place for their children to play with others while they run errands or have business appointments during the day.

My Place has been in operation for almost five years; two years ago a second facility was opened in Farmington Hills (32875 Northwestern Highway).

The centers care for children between the ages of two months and 12 years. The two facilities are also involved with the Birmingham and Farming on Hills latch-key programs. RESERVATIONS are normally required for children between the ages of two months - two-and-ahalf years of age, especially for the weekends. This is to ensure the 4:1

Proposal won't affect infant mortality rate

The Bush administration's proposed expansion of eligibility for Medicaid benefits to pregnant women will have surprisingly little impact on infant mortality rates, according to a University of Michigan

"Although Medicaid eligibility readirements are so narrow that less than half of American women living below the poverty line are eligible for the program, our research indicates that simply expanding the program would have almost no significant impact on birth outcomes," sald Lewis Margolis, assistant professor of public health policy and administration at the U-M School of Public Health.

"Although women on Medicald have financial access to prenatal medical care, they make their first prenatal visit to a physican later and have fewer visits than women with medical insurance," Margolis said. "More surprisingly, they also make their first visits to obstetricians later than women with no insurance at Medicald recipients are more likely to drink and smoke than insured and uninsured women, according to the study. They also have lower incomes. Their infants' birth-weights are 200 grams lighter on the average than the other infants.

Margolis and his colleagues analyzed data from nearly 2,000 postpartum interviews conducted by the Michigan State Department of Health in 1983. The women in the study were either privately insured by Blue Cross or an equivalent program (63.7 percent of the women), completely uninsured (11.7 percent).

or on Medicaid (24.6 percent).
THE STUDY concluded that, of all the groups, the women on Medicald were at greatest risk for poor pregnancy outcomes, Margolis notes.

Nearly 97 percent of the women on Medicaid had annual incomes below $20,300 (the income ceiling for a family of four which determines eligibility for the supplemental nutrition program for high risk mothers and children). Sixty-five percent-of the uninsured and 26 percent of the insured had incomes below $23,300.

Nearly half of the Medicaid recipients had not finished high school the insured.

"Women on Medicald-frequently were raised in low-income families where there was little access to health information," Margolis said.

"Our study results demonstrate that access to prenatal care is not enough. We need more nutritional programs, tobacco and alcohol programs, and improved housing and education for women living in poverty. Only then will we make a dent on the dismal infant mortality rate in the United States."

Teacher is youngest BPW leader

By Susan Buck staff writer

Nancy Zimmerman gives kudos to women in the workplace. former Plymouth Canton teacher took over as the youngest president of the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women (BPW) last month. She is a second vice president at Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, in charge of the Renaissance Center branch.

A diversified group, BPW is the oldest and largest national organization established to promote the interests of working women. The Michigan BPW, formed in 1918 to promote the interests of women in business and the professions, has 5,000 mem-

"Generally, I've found that if a woman is a president in the organization, she also is a leader in the workplace," said Zimmerman, 32. "Michigan has had four national presidents."

As president of the state BPW, it will be Zimmerman's responsibility to organize the 1990 state convention, entitled "Say Yes To Success," which will be held at the Clarion Inn in Lansing. Coinciding with the initials BPW, the theme will be "Build-ing Personal Worth."

ZIMMERMAN JOINED the Canton BPW in 1981 and was named a Young Careerist, an honorary posttion, at both the chapter and district levels in 1982. The position recognizes the honors and achievements of women on their way up.

Zimmerman was born in Deckerville and raised in Erle, south of Monroe, near Toledo. Her parents were potato farmers for a short time. She is the seventh of 11 children. The last four were adopted grandchildren. "I'm the only one out of the 11 who went on to college," Zimmerman said. "I started getting involved in high school. I was a cheerleader. Where other kids would skip school, well, that wasn't even in my vocabulary. I just enjoyed school."

Zimmerman was also a cheerleader at Eastern Michigan University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in business education in 1978.

For six months until June 1979, The Farmington Hills resident and . she taught pregnant high school girls typing, shorthand and accounting for the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

"When I graduated from college, they were pink-slipping teachers with 10 to 15 years experience," Zimmerman said.

AT THE SAME time, she taught adult education for the Melvindale-Allen Park school district.

She did her student teaching at Plymouth-Canton High School.

Zimmerman worked her way up from a clerical position as a Kelly Girl at Manufacturers Bank. In 1979, she started in the management training program.

"A lot of it has been on-the-job training," Zimmerman said. "As long as you have the people skills, that's very important in our business. People skills are not something you can learn overnight. You either have people skills or you don't."

Zimmerman said that her career has been aided by a supportive husband, Robert, a CPA for Ernst & Whinney in Detroit.

"I am very fortunate. I have a very supportive husband and a very supportive employer," Zimmerman said. "My husband encouraged me to get involved. He didn't hold me back. He wasn't intimidated by the honors and awards I received. He pushed me to do more." When she goes away for the weekend, she returns to find her laundry done, she said.

facturers Bank, both males, are equally supportive. The bank helps finance her travel activities and allows her time off.

"I think they are gaining from it because I have grown personally and professionally with BPW. Because I'm dedicated to my job, they are willing to support my activities, which will help them out as well," she sald.

ZIMMERMAN believes that the public speaking skills she has acquired improves her ability to confront employees in difficult situations and when she has to do customer calling.

The Farmington Hills City Council recognized Zimmerman's new BPW position at its May 15 meeting.

The National Federation of Business and Professional Women will hold its national convention July 23. 27 in Detroit at Cobo Hall. It is expected to draw 3,000 members.

"Women have always been in the workplace." Zimmerman said. "That's what the organization is all about. It's women helping women," . Zimmerman is committed to cheering them on.

dren in the state of Michigan is to improve, the trend of less. ahead." money for social services will have to be reversed.

That's the conclusion of a recent University of Michigan study, done by Joan Abbey and Professor Ira Schwartz of U-M's School of Social Work's Center for the Study of Youth

"Plotting the Course for Michigan's Children" is an analysis of budget and program information from state agencies and of statistics and reports compiled by academic researchers and advocacy organiza-

What it found is that reduced federal spending and a shift in state policy toward more spending on prison construction and operation during the 1980s will affect efforts to reduce infant mortality, treat drug dependence, monitor child care facilitles and restaurants and care for the mentally ill in the state.

"Michigan's human services network has not withstood the buffeting of the last decade," they said. "These trends must be reversed if the quality of life for Michigan's children is to improve and, equally important, if the state is to compete in the in-

FTHE QUALITY of life of chil- creasingly competitive national and global economy of the decades

> ACCORDING TO Abbey and Schwartz, human services agencies in Michigan, including the departments of public health, mental health and social services, are operating with a smaller share of the state budget than they did in 1979, resulting in "the deterioration in the quality, accessibility and equality of human services across the state." .

> They also found that there has been to shift he burden to local governments, leading to "a growing disparity between wealthy and disadvantaged areas of the state."

> Federal support for social services has been declining throughout the 1980s across the country, but Michigan suffered more than other states "because we had a depression" when other states were experiencing a recession," they said.

Since 1980, federal aid to Michigan has been cut by $7.6 billion, with significant reductions in job training and general revenue sharing," which affect the state's ability to weather plant closings and compensate for lost state revenue, the researchers said.

built 26 prisons by 1991. As a resultthe state allocation for corrections. has increased from 2.8 percent in 1979 to 6.9 percent in 1989.

Spending for human services, on the other hand, has declined from 53.2-percent of the state budget to 49.6 percent in the same period and K-12 education fell from 36.6 percent to 30 percent.

Abbey and Scwartz argue that "the reductions in human services expeditures went beyond fat, and waste in government to the bone."

COMMITTING more resources to corrections will "limit the availability of state funds for education and prevention services to eradicate causes of crime," they said. The state would do better to spend its money on cost-effective preventive services, they said.

"Strategic investments in programs for children, including schools, child care and health care, will pay valuable dividends in the future," they said. "High-quality preschool programs for at-risk children have resulted in higher literacy, employment and educational attain--- 5692. ment and lower levels of school dropouts, public assistance dependence and arrests."

A priestly pursuit.

Rector doesn't see herself as trailblazer

By Julie Brown staff writer

Earlier this year, the Rev. Margaret Silk-Young traveled to Sloux Falls, S.D., to see her grandson who had been born in April.

Silk-Young was proud to see her fourth grandchild. Her role during that visit wasn't just that of a proud grandmother, however. She baptized her grandson.

"This is the third time I've done it," said Silk-Young, associate rector at St. John's Episcopal Church in Plymouth Township. "It's a thrill." Silk-Young, 51, has been at St. John's Episcopal Church for about a year and a half. Most people there know her by her nickname, Marnie, The Northville resident has been ordained as a priest for about three years and served as a deacon before

SHE COMES to Plymouth Township by way of Petoskey, Mich., and Chicago. While in Petoskey, she worked as an assistant and then as the priest in charge at that parish.

Silk-Young, a lifelong Episcopalian, did a number of different things in the Chicago area, where she lived for about 20 years. She worked as a chaplain in a retirement community and as an associate in another parish. While in the seminary, Silk-Young worked at a small inner-city parish on the south side of Chicago.

She'd worked as a social worker for a couple of years before entering the seminary, and had earlier been a school library secretary when her children were younger. Slik-Young started college in the late 1960s, and in 1980 earned a bachelor of science degree from George Williams College in Illinois.

In 1985, she graduated from Seabury-Western Theological Seminary in Evanston, Ill., with a master of divinity degree.

As a college student, Silk-Young thought about a number of fields to enter, "none of which seemed to fit." After a period of time, she decided to enter the ministry. Silk-Young Women have been ordained as Episcopal priests since the mid-1970s. Silk-Young considers herself more of a pioneer and part of the second or third wave.

HER GENDER hasn't been much of an issue at St. John's Episcopal Church. When she was in Petoskey and Chicago, it was more of an Issue.

"It is very nice not to be out of the ordinary, which I was in the other two dioceses," When she goes to meetings of clergy now, Silk-Young sees other women priests.

Some people in her current parish were not convinced women should be priests; some of those parishioners have changed their thinking on that subject.

In working with the vestry, or parish board, at St. John's Episcopal Church, Silk-Young and parishioners tried to discern what makes the parish special. One of the many things mentioned was that the clergy is both male and female.

"It seems to be that it symbolizes. a wholeness and through that symbol speaks to the people of the importance of all people."

She remembers the time when she first shared with her children her interest in becoming a priest.

"My son felt that was a natural since I'd been preaching to them all their lives," she said with a smile.

She has five children and four grandchildren. Her children range in age from 25 to 32. None have entered the ministry; three are teachers, one's a pilot and one works as a manager of customer services for a mailing firm.

Silk-Young, originally from Pontiac, moved to the Chicago area in the mid-1960s. She's glad she decided to become a priest and found her way back to the Detroit area.

—THE MOST exciting part of her work is seeing people grow in their relationships with the Lord. She finds pastoral counseling rewarding.

"Liturgy, both the worship and the shaping of worship, are very high on my list of enjoyment." She enjoys preaching and helping people broaden their vision of God. Paperwork isn't Silk-Young's favorite task.

"My desk sort of portrays that, I guess. It just always seems to be ahead of me.'

She works with the Rev. Robert Shank, rector at St. John's Episcopal Church. Silk-Young usually spends one day a week on sermon preparation, typically early in the week.

Bible study with parishioners is part of her work week.

"Bible study is one of my joys." People are able to share how the Lord is working in their lives and to learn from one another through

Her work as associate rector at St. John's Episcopal Church is rewarding for the Rev. Margaret Silk-Young. "It's a good place to be." she said.

Silk-Young attends committee meetings and takes care of paperwork. Counseling, mostly with individuals, is part of her fob as well. Those seeking counseling need help with any number of issues, ining with death and other losses, and coping with divorce or marital prob-

Community projects need commitment

The citizens of our nation will be asked to give time and talents to help renew our society. The funding that he is asking from Congress will only provide-advertisement of the program.

America's churches and syna. social programs for a long time. What are the elements which make these efforts successful?

The church I am associated with has sent two major mission teams out a year. These teams have worked with local people in building and renewing facilities. Behind these programs are not only a few people with commitment and vision, but a whole community of people who sup-

THE RENEWAL of society will only happen when it is born out of community. Individual persons cannot do the work nor can they sustain such a commitment.

The president could turn to the religious institutions to find leadership and experience for his program. The seriousness and difficulty of such a plan is beyond anything that we now see in his speeches. Wonderful things can be accomplished by committed volunteers. Wise leadership is required. I believe that the President is correct when he says that there are instances in our nation where problems have been solved. All we need to do, he believes, is find these examples and multiply them.

The idea is good. The translation of a program from one place to another is not simple.

Cases of Lyme disease on the increase

Until a few years ago, Lyme disease was little known. Now the Wayne County Health Department is advising residents that two cases of the disease have been reported in Wayne County this year.

Lyme disease is caused by an organism named Borrelia burgdorferi spread to humans from the bite of an infected tick. The disease got its name from the town where it was first identified, Lyme, Conn.

"The number of ticks increases during warmer months and are usually found in fields and wooded. areas, especially where deer, wild rodents and other animals live," said Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk, health department medical director. "People become exposed by walking or hiking in tick infested areas where they may be bitten by ticks."

Ticks latch on to exposed skin areas and obtain a blood meal from the person. It is during the tick feeding process that the organism is transferred to the human, Lawrenchuk said. Experts believe that the tick usually must be feeding on the individual for about 48 hours in order to transmit enough of the organism to cause the State records show that reports of Lyme disease have been slowly increasing since 1984, when the first case was reported. There were two cases in 1985, eight in 1986, six in 1987 and 30 in 1988.

ACCORDING to Keith. Waite, director of the health department's disease Control Division, the two cases found in the county so far this year were probably the result of exposure to the organism in October or November of last year.

"Lyme disease in the past has been confined to areas" of the Upper Peninsula and other states as Connecticut, Wisconsin, Minnesota, California and Oregon with a few isolated cases reported in several other states, but it now appears to be increasing in Michigan," he said.

The incubation period (time from exposure to the infected tick until symptoms begin) ranges from three to 32 days. The symptoms include achiness in the joints, nerve changes, cardiac involvement, rash, malaise (ill. feeling) accompanied by fatigue, fever, headache, stiff neck and muscle achiness.

Serious chronic complications can occur in some people which may include arthritis and heart conditions, if the disease persists and is not treated.

Individuals can protect themselves from tick bites several ways, including: Avoid going into areas where deer are known to

- If you must go into those infested areas, wear longsleeved clothing and tuck pant legs into socks so that ticks don't climb up the pant leg.

• Use insect repellents, if you go into infested areas.

• CHECK yourself and your children for evidence of ticks on exposed body areas. If ticks are present, remove them with tweezers in a safe manner. Hunters should follow the above precautions while hunting and even during the meat processing of animals. which may harbor ticks.

If the symptoms occur, individuals should seek medical attention. Blood tests are able to determine the presence of the organism and medications are available to treat the disease, Lawrenchuk sald.

For more information about Lyme disease, call the Wayne County Health Department Disease Control Divi-slon at 467-3325.

OU professor warns against government 'manipulation'

By R.J. King special writer

As China scurries to lure back foreign businesses that fled after the military crackdown on the democracy movement last month, the coordinator of East Asian studies at Oakland University warns it won't be business as usual for some time.

"I think the hard-liners have won the battle but lost the war," said Richard Stamps, an associate professor of anthropology and a Rochester Hills resident. "American companies should recognize that China is still maintaining an open-door poli-cy, but things are not what they

Stamps noted that Chinese government agencies are now inviting American executives back to meetings in Beijing, suddenly armed with favorable new terms or promising meetings with officials who had been unavailable for months.

But the invitations turn out to be Communist propaganda campaigns, he said, where participants are filmed by Chinese television crews for use on the state-controlled news programs to promote the appeararmy's killing of students and workmen Square.

"American companies should look out for the possibility of being manipulated by the Chinese government," Stamps said from his firstfloor office in Wilson Hall, "However, there are targets of opportunity in the future, and businesses should try to maneuver for the right opportunity at the right time."

BECAUSE OF THE unpredictable political climate, Stamps said an annual China study tour he has led for ects. the last six years was canceled. The area school teachers, students and

Because of China's heavy reliance on foreign trade, which now acance of business as usual after the counts for nearly a third of its national income, Stamps said it is crucial for China to bring foreign pusinesses back, not only to legitimize the administration of Deng Xiaoping, the country's senior leader, but also to shore up a suddenly unstable

Addressing those companies that hold out future prospects of doing business in China, Stamps advised thorough market research and a complete understanding of the marketplace before driving stakes in Chinese soil.

Despite accounting for one-fifth of the world's population, "China has a very narrow market. You can't expect to sell a Chevrolet in every garage, and many American products are not appropriate to their economy. They don't really need luxury. cars, but rather light trucks."

Vickers' Chinese dealings on hold

A Troy company with offices in Beijing is adopting a wait-and-see approach before sending employees back to China.

"Our staff was removed to Hong Kong at the beginning of June just before the shooting started," said Jack Walrad, director of licensing for Vickers Inc. in Troy, which sells machine tools and plastics through nine licensing agreements with sev; eral Chinese factories. "Those people are still in Hong Kong and they won't return until after stability is restored."

Walrad suspected the company's representative office was "raped with gunfire from the street," but no one has been able to confirm the news. He was basing his assessment on reports from the U.S.-China Business Council, which has offices on the 22nd floor of the CITIC building near Tiananmen Square. Vickers has offices on the 11th floor.

-While Vickers has maintained contact with Chinese officials, travel arrangements have been sharply curtailed, with only one-day trips available, he said. With $5 million in Chinese revenues last year, a small percentage of Vickers' total revenues of $800 million, Walrad said the company was proceeding slowly.

"China promises great potential, but we want to wait until operations are restored to normal before returning," he said. "But we do not want to cut off relations at this time.

Managers torn between party, Western techniques

Chinese middle managers who have been increasingly exposed to Western ways of doing business see those methods as a way to succeed in a global economy.

Even with the current turmoil in China, the government would have to close down all exposure to the rest of the world's business to reverse the trend toward adopting Western management methods. And that is unlikely, according to Herbert W. Hildebrandt, a University of Michigan business professor.

At the same time, managers will be thrown into greater conflict as they value both education and a role in the Communist party as the quickest ways to business leadership positions, he said. . .

"In the business arena, I think the current political disruptions in China are just that - temporary disruptions," Hildebrandt said. "The question will be to what extent the government wishes to harden its position in the economic scene.

"That will be increasingly difficult because the genie of education is out of the bottle. Enterprise managers know that being aware of modern management principles only will help them do a better job."

Hildebrandt surveyed 436 mlddle managers in 31 manufacturing industries from 1987 to 1988, focusing on their career paths, sociological patterns, lifestyles and education.

He said middle managers are a large class within the Chinese business community with many of them running the factories. In terms of the overall Chinese population, they are well educated. Two-thirds have high degrees compared with 20 percent of es," Hildebrandt said. ... the managers who have spent more than 25 years with a company. The, receive more responsibility for prof-younger the manager, the more educated he or she is.

"THEIR EDUCATION gives them exposure to the rest of the world, and contact with countries where there is a lot of entrepreneurship and freedom," Hildebrandt said. "With Deng Xiaoping's earlier economic reforms and push toward modernization, there was a large student exchange program and seminars sponsored by universities from the United States, Japan, Germany, Canada and other countries.

When asked what they believed to be the best educational preparation for a management career, 60.4 percent recommended majoring in business administration at the undergraduate level, to improve overall managerial skills before turning to specialized areas.

At the graduate level, 87.3 percent recommended business administration with science and mathematics finishing a distant second at 6.8 per-

"SALES AND MARKETING skills were not of great importance when China's economy was tightly controlled at the center. In today's more competitive and export-oriented environment, the managers have learned to value skills in these arcas."

But while 32.4 percent of the managers believed that majoring in general management/business administration is the quickest route toward job advancement, they chose politics as the second best way to get to the top. Chinese Communist Party secretaries are present in factories to oversee employees, communicate party instructions, and see that party principles are implemented and adhered to, Hildebrandt said. More than one-fourth, or 27.3 percent, of the managers surveyed picked the political/ideological path as the fastest route to a position of importance within a business.

"This means that middle manaers will be increasingly torn apart," Hildebrandt said, "They recognize the importance of the party route and party support, but they also see the great progress made under Western managerial practices."

Hildebrandt does not believe China will take a giant leap backward in terms of business practices.

"I doubt they will ever return to the strictly controlled policies of the past. They have seen success of Western business principles. The group of middle managers I surworld, would be very unhappy if tight central control returned.

. The 436 middle managers in Hildebrandt's study averaged 39 years of age, two-thirds were male, and they had jobs in factories with more than 7,500 employees,

Big 3 didn't deserve brickbat

There are just three domestic auto companies buying magazine ads compared to 20 import automakers. which is one reason why the auto enthusiast magazines traditionally favor foreign cars.

I, for one, think most foreign cars are more fun than domestic cars. I also like women with foreign accents, which is why I married some? one from New Jersey. But I digress.

I resist trying to justify my preference for foreign cars, but I freely acknowlege it as I struggle to main: tain objectivity in automotive-type

THE FOREIGN-CAR bias is a preference shared by most auto writers, many of whom remember their first love as a sadomasochistic affair with a British roadster.

Rarely, however, have I read such a one-sided barrage at the domestic industry as the three diatribes in the current issue of Car and Driver, all taking swings at the domestic industry's stand against raising the national corporate average fuel economy standard.

William Jeanes, Brock Yates and Tony Assenza gang up on Detroit as a reluctant dinosaur, building auto talk Dan McCosh

THE COLLECTIVE wrath was mainly almed at the likes of Don Runkle, head of advanced engineering at GM, who claimed that a higher corporate economy standard in the face of current low fuel prices would mean a bunch of dull, slow cars at best, and a market heavily favoring the Japanese at worst.

Adding injury to insult, the magazine includes 10 car reviews, including a brushoff of Chevrolet's new Lumina, glowing praise of the new Nissan 300ZX, Porsche and Jaguar, then a couple of spide remarks about the Ford Escort.

Heavyweights included two Japanese and one British sedan, Only Ford's Continental (which also had the worst fuel economy in the issue) made the list of the five heaviest cars tested, and two of the five were actually two-seat sports cars. Guess which domestic car impressed the editors the most.

Unnoticed to the performance-oriented enthusiast press, domestic cars have made the greatest gains in fuel economy and have surpassed imports in fuel economy per passenger carried for several years, while the imported sports cars and performance sedans favored by the magazines have been getting fatter, and less efficient.

Typical is the the current issue of Car and Driver, where the most slavish praise is reserved for the leastefficient cars.

Attitude of some 3rd-class mail insults the reader

It used to be that Thursdays were junk, mail days, but now it seems that almost every day is junk mail day for the small business owner.

Used as a means to promote a company's products or services, junk niail represented 30 percent of the total mail distributed in this country last year - up from 14 percent in 1945.

Junk mail are those pleces that are sent through the U.S. Postal Service third class. So these statistics donot reflect the distribution efforts of "fax-heads" and those who opt for first-class mail.

AL/THOUGH third-class mail represents a legitimate form of advertising for small businesses, it may have hit a new low with celebrity endorsements.

To add to the national disease of junk thinking, form letters from celebritles are included as another method to feed on your sense of flat-

Louis Rukeyeser, investments analyst, said, "The idea that we're going to be so bowled over by seeing the name of somebody important on a letter machine-addressed to us and that we're going to fall into an awestruck stupor and buy whatever is being sold is ludicrous."

HE ADDS that when such mail plays fair with us it can have its uses. "But too often, as in the case of the celebrity form letter, it treats us with contempt and inspires the same in returo."

For example, "valued Shuttle customers" of Eastern Airlines' frequent flier mileage program are due to receive a letter and bonus mileage certificate from Donald Trump if they fly a couple hundred miles on the new Trump shuttle.

In another, Grace Mirabella, former Vogue magazine editor, who has started her own magazine, suggests: "I believe there's an important segment of the female population . . . and you and I are a part of it . . . that is not being served by the magazines that are currently being published."

SOUNDS PRETTY impressive except for the fact that Rukeysen received both letters and has neither. flown the shuttle nor is he a woman.

I've always wondered why the the opportunities you would like to take: advantage of never seem to be included in the mail. For example, Keith B. Gelger, 47, was elected president of the 1.9 million-member which one school district in each National Education Association during balloting Monday at the organization's national convention in Washington D.C.

A former Livonia resident, Gelger taught high school mathematics and science in the Livonia Public Schools during the 1960s and early 1970s.

"I always valued my teaching experlence there," Gelger said. "The schools in Michigan in general, and Livonia in particular, are good schools because people in Michigan value education."

Though he won't directly deal with Michigan's controversy over per-student spending differences among rich and poor districts, Geiger said long-term NEA policy might help.

Woodpeckers — there's more than one kind

WHEN ONE thinks of a woodpecker what comes to mind is a black and white bird traveling up the trunk of a tree tooking for food. In southeastern Michigan the downy woodpecker is the most common species of woodpecker seen. The black and white coloration is commonly seen at suct feeders placed in the yard.

A woodpecker frequently seen and heard in our area is the common flicker. Though it too likes to excavate insects from tree trunks, flickers are often seen on the ground eating ants. Their long tongue is thrust down into ant hills found in lawns, where they probe for ants and their

These 12-inch long birds are easily seen and identified. On their back they have black bars contrasting against a brown background. Many people see the small red patch on the back of the head which is found in both the male and female.

ONE OF the best ways to identify this bird is to watch it fly. As it takes flight; the wings feathers will expose a large white rump patch. While flying one can readily see the yellow colored feather shafts of both the wings and the tail - especially when seen from below.

At one time the common flicker was called the yellow-shafted flicker because of those yellow feathers. Recently, however, it was learned that the yellow-shafted flickers mated successfully with red-shafted flickers out west, producing "orange-shafted flickers" in the great plains. Those birds seen around our area are predominantly the yellow form.

As you watch a flicker feeding on ants in your lawn, look to see if it has a "mustache." Males have a black line which extends from the base of the bill below the eye toward the middle of the head, Females of course lack the "mustache."

Years ago a researcher captured the female of a mated pair and painted a "mustache" on her. He' then returned her to the nest. When her mate returned he did not recognize her and immediately began to chase her away.

Areas where sandy soils and ant hills are common is where you will likely see flickers hammering into the ground for food. This behavior. spawned the common name of yellow hammer.

The writer is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks Park in Oakland County.

Champs crowned at Wolverine 10

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

Twelve teams were crowned champions Monday at the 10th-annual Wolverine Soccer Invitational Tournament, but no one had more reason to smile than Birmingham-Bloomfield Soccer Club coach Harry

BBSC won the Under-19 boys division at Schoolcraft College, defeating the Rochester Maple Leafs, 4-1 in the championship game. The Wolverine Tournament title was the first for Smith, who has coached an Under-19 team at the prestigious tourney every year of its existence.

BBSC built a 57-6-1 all-time tournament record under Smith's guldance before last weekend's action, but the club was never able to grab the elusive Wolverine championship.

This time, BBSC took a 2-0 lead before the game was 20 minutes old and prevented the Maple Leafs from mounting a serious rally. BBSC outscored its five Wolverine Tournament opponents 30-2.

"THIS IS A very successful team," Smith said. "I knew it would be a great match, and I think it was. That first goal (by Jeff Forschey) really turned us on. Their goalkeeper made a mistake on it, but it was great hustle and a heck of a play, too by For-

Does the U-M baseball coach deserve the fate awaiting him?

AS BUD MIDDAUGH a victim of a vendetta by his rivals, or did he violate NCAA rules? An ongoing Big Ten investigation is trying to determine whether the University of Michigan baseball coach allegedly circumvented rules and exceeded scholarship limits.

Like Pete Rose's, Middaugh's fate is up in the air, but the outcome does not look good.

The word around amateur baseball circles is that Middaugh will resign by July 15, once his summer camps end, to take a job with the Cincinnati Reds.

Some of his former players have made it public that they have cooperated with Big Ten investigators.

The charges revolve around players selling U-M football programs in which so-called "supervisors" made as much as $300 for only a few hours work on a Saturday afternoon. The program money supposedly helped supplement players who were not on baseball scholarships. Other charges levied against U-M baseball include bogus work-study jobs, borrowing scholarship money from other sports and scouting violations.

LIVONIAN GREG EVERSON, a former U-M player now pitching for the London Tigers of the AA Eastern League, told me that he was interviewed last November by representatives of the Big Ten.

"I told them I didn't want to be involved," Everson said. "I sold programs for two years and supervised for two years, but I know I didn't get that kind of money ($300 a day). That figure is a little high. I never got that kind of money." (Everson would not give a figure.) Everson, a Bentley High graduate, started his collegiate career at UM-Dearborn where he was on a hockey scholarship, He later transferred to Ann Arbor and walked on the baseball team.

"I was on work-study; I did the team's laundry and that was legal," he said. "I got all my checks through the Athletic Department. I can veri-

When he arrived from Miami of Ohlo, Middaugh quickly put the Wolverines' baseball program on the map. He posted an impressive 465. 146-1 record in 10 years as coach.

But apparently Middaugh made quite a few enemies along the way, including some of his own players.

"HR WAS TOUGH to play for," didn't like him. My relationship with him wasn't that great. But now, since I've been gone, our relationship and hosting camps. is a lot better. I won't get back at him. He gives me a place to work out during the off-season."

In my travels around the sandlot and high school circuits, major league scouts seem to be the most critical of Middaugh.

They say for every major leaguer he's produced, there's another he's

But many of Middaugh's players have been highly successful in the pro ranks. Catholic Central's Chris Sabo (of the Reds) is one familiar area name.

But one scout pointed out to me that another CC grad currently in the Michigan program, first baseman Greg Haeger, has leveled off.

"His swing is so screwed up that he may never get drafted when he becomes eligible again next season (his junior year)," the scout said. (Haeger reportedly turned down a substantial bonus offer in high

During a high school game I attended a few years back, a rival coach from another state school approached me and asked, "Brad, how does Michigan get so many players and keep them there?" He was obviously accusing Middaugh of exceeding the NCAA limit of 13.

ANOTHER IN-STATE coach once volunteered information to me that Middaugh circumvented rules to get a highly regarded prep player from

Yet another out-state coach told" me his disdain for Middaugh after losing a potential recruit to Michi-

Is this sour grapes?

I think it is to a certain extent. There's no question that Mid-American Conference-type programs were losing out on potential recruits to Michigan, and wanted to blow the whistle on Middaugh.

But all indications point to Middaugh being the fall guy for a school whose athletic department is not committed totally to baseball.

Here's a coach who reportedly came in on a $22,500-a-year salary Everson admitted. "A lot of players :

and was asked to compete on a na-

Through his own fund-raising efforts, Middaugh brought the Wolverines' program to national prominence by working day-in and dayout, night-in and night-out.

I'VE SEEN HIM scouring the high school diamonds for recruits, spring and summer. He was constantly promoting the program, staging clinics

He worked as hard as Bo Schembechler, but didn't have the same type of resources to compete against such schools as Arizona State, Miami, Fresno State, Florida State and Texas.

Middaugh was coaching in a northern climate, another strike against him, yet Michigan was the only school located above the Mason-Dixon Line to consistently rank in the top 20.

I've had only a few dealings with Middaugh, but it's always been cordial and congenial.

As unpopular as Middaugh may be, he didn't do anything different than Dick Vitale when he splashed upon the scene and put the University of Detroit basketball program back on the map.

I HAD TO LAUGH when staunch Michigan football fans accused Illinois of cheating. How does it feel, loyal Maize and Blue, to see your baseball program under scrutiny?

Let's face it, fans, no school, not even Northwestern, is immune from bending some kind of obscure NCAA rulė.

The question that must be asked is where was Don Canham, the former Michigan A.D., when these alleged improprietles were going on? He apparently left the dirty laundry to Schembechler, whose hand has been forced. Middaugh's expected resignation may be viewed with glee by rival coaches, but in my eyes he was only trying to bring a baseball program to the standards of the school's foot-hall and basketball programs. "I guess when you're caught doing something illegal, you have to suffer the consequences," Everson said.

The consequences may dictate that Schembechler may want a "Michigan Man" as he likes to say. Bill Freehan is being mentioned the most.

in his own web.

But if the former Tiger ends up running U-M's baseball program, will be have a free hand? ## OT goal lifts Cosmos to title

They're probably the best Under-12 team in Livonia in a long time."

IN A FINAL matching local teams, the Livonia Cosmos edged the Plymouth Lightning, 2-1, to win the Under-16 girls title. Jenny O'Meara's goal in the first of two overtime sessions broke a 1-1 tie. Jennifer Holowkd, of Rochester, scored the Cosmos' first goal.

Ten of the 16 Cosmos' players were from Livonia and one, Amy Ktajewski, hails from Plymouth. The Cosmos and Lightning played to a scoreless tie Saturday in the tourney's first round, and both teams won their next two games, setting up the final.

"We had a lot of hard work from the girls," said coach Chris Morano. who won a boys Under-14 title earlier this decade when coaching the Livonla Cardinals. "The teams we played to get there (including Carmel, Ind. and the Evansville, Ind. Spirits) were very good. The Under-16 division was very well matched this year. The Plymouth Lightning is a very good team."

The Livonia Wolves captured the boys Under-11 title, outlasting the Bluewater Sting, 1-0, on a goal by Jeff Domlinson. Peter Varga picked up the assist.

The Wolves' Under-12 squad also earned tournament bragging rights, beating the '77 Travelers, 2-1 in the

Darkowski's gem pushes Hines Park into tie for 1st

Derek Darkowski threw plenty of "dark ones" Friday, tossing a fourhitter as Hines Park Lincoln/Mercury moved into a first-place tie with Little Caesars in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League with a 4-3 victory at Ford Field.

Both teams are 14-4-1 going into the all-star break with nine games left to play. Hines Park leads the season series, 3-2.

Darkowski, a Plymouth Canton High product and starter at Michigan State University, struck out four and walked only one in raising his record to 6.1. All three runs were unearned as left-hander lowered his league-leading earned run average

"Dark' was on top of his game," said Hines Park coach Dave Racer. "He threw a great game for us. He was mixing his pitches very well."

Jim Miller, the Waterford Kettering All-Stater headed for MSU as a quarterback this fall, took the loss for Caesars. He allowed all four runs in 5% innings of work.

Hines Park tallied the winning run in the sixth when Dennis Szczechowski walked, advanced to second on a walk, took third on a wild pitch and scored on a John Bonham's fielders choice.

Szczechowski, Bill Bannon and Mike Culver each had RBI singles for the winners.

Steve Malgay had two hits in a losing cause, while Tim Napler added an RBI.

WALTER'S APPLIANCE (12-7) stayed in the LCBL hunt with a pair of victories over Wendy's.

In a game played Thursday at Ann Arbor Huron, Walter's scored seven

SC's AAU squad rallies to take title

By C.J. Risak staff writer

It took just a few mld-tournament adjustments to take Schoolcraft Coltege's AAU 19-and-under team from comic relief to championship status at last weekend's AAU-USA National Junior Volleyball Tournment at Illinois Benedictine in Lisle, Ill.

The comedy came early from SC. The team dropped its first four games before rallying to finish its Friday schedule with a 4-4 mark.

in pool play, there were teams that were just laughing at us," said SC coach Tom Teeters. "When we came back through the tournament, they weren't laughing anymore.".

After splitting with Miami-Dade in Saturday's pool-play opener, SC started to put it all together. A sweep of University of Michigan-Dearborn followed to give SC a 7-5 pool record and the No. 3 seed.

Six lopsided games later, SC had three match wins and a national championship in just its second year of AAU competition.

TEETER'S ADJUSTMENTS helped turn the tide for SC. "We went from one setter to a two-setter system," he explained. "And that let it's a much simpler system that allowed us to be more consistent. It let get Nikki (Stubbs) outside, where re could get more sets for her."

Stubbs, who spurred SC's college ream to the National Junior College Athletic Association title last November, was another major factor in capturing the AAU crown. After 3. moving outside, the 5-foot-8 hitter could not be stopped.

JoAnn Kolnitys, a Wayne Memorial grad who will be a sophomore at SC this fall, moved into the middle and provided solid blocking, and Kari Domanski, who will be a senior at Livonia Ladywood in September, went from setter to outside hitter and did both well.

SC's slow start began on Friday against teams from Hawali and Southern Missouri. The 0-4 slate got turned around with sweeps against Peoria (III.) — thanks to 11 blocks by Sarah Adzima (from Ladywood, going to Western Michigan) — and Lansing.

sixth-seeded UM-D and won 15-1, 15-8, to advance to the semifinals on

IN THE SEMIS, SC had a rematch with Southern Missouri, which had defeated SC 15-6, 15-4 in pool play and was the heavy favorite to win the title. Instead, SC clubbed Southern 15-4, 15-5.

That left a rematch with Miami-Dade for the championship. There was no splitting this time; SC won easily, 15-5, 15-7.

The rest of the nine-person SC championship squad was setter-rightside hitter Jennifer Sproul, from Livonia Churchill (going to SC this fall); outside hitter Angellette Love, from Detroit Henry Ford (also going to SC); outside hitter Anjanette Lankford, from Garden City (a sophomore at SC); outside hitter Kirstin Stelzer, from Woodhaven (another SC soph); and serve-and-defense specialist Cathy Coak, from Wayne (an Teeters was assisted by Alisha Love and Pat Cyrus.

A week earlier, SC entered teams in the 18-and-under and 16-and-under AAU tournaments, also at Illinois Benedictine. The 16-and-under team won seven of eight pool games, but was eliminated in the second round of tournament competition. It finished with an overall record of 9-

The 18-and-under SC squad was 5-3 in pool play, but also lost in the second round of tournament competition to finish 7-5. Both teams placed among the top 28 in their respective 60-team tourneys.

SC NOTES: Teeters announced the signing of another volleyball recruit: Tricla Lukas, a 6-0 middle blocker/outside hitter from Dearborn Heights Crestwood.

"She'll help us running our quick middle-set offensively," said Teeters. Lukas was actually recruited by SC basketball coach Jack Grenan. She plans to play both sports at SC. Lukas was a two-year starter for Crestwood's volleyball team . . .

There are still openings in SC's volleyball camps, both the July 10 and July 17 sessions. For more information, contact Teeters through SC's

A week after winning her first tournament of the season, Davidson exited in the quarterfinals of the prestigious Top Gun Tournament at Bloomfield Open Hunt Club. Katle Nederveld of Grand Rapids knocked Davidson out with a 7-6, 6-3 win.

Nicole Transou, another Farmington Hills resident, also fell in the quarterfinals 6-0, 6-3 to Candy Ko-

The results had been much better for Davidson a week earlier. For the third consecutive year, she reached the finals of the Western Closed Tennis Championship in Indianapolis, this time in the 16-and-under age division. And for the first time, Davidson emerged with a title, beating Sherri Bash of Columbus, Ohio, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the June 29 final.

IT WAS a sweet victory for Davidson, ranked third in the nation in her age group (Bash is seventh). Last year, Bash beat Davidson for the

It took seven matches and a lot of vitamin C - Davidson was battling the flu early in the tournament - to claim the title. She whipped Marija Newbauer of Rochester 6-3, 7-6 (7-2 in the tiebreaker) in the quarterfinals, then ousted Suzie Starrett of Chicago 6-3, 0-6, 6-2 in the semis.

Davidson also reached the finals in doubles, but she and partner Alisa Kim of Evansville, Ind., were beaten by Bash and Holyn Lord of Indianapolis 6-1, 7-6 (7-4 tiebreaker).

Actor's role intact with renewal of 'Midnight Caller'

By Victor Swanson special writer

HEN NBC-TV announced its fall prime-time schedule for the 1989-90 season, it was good great news, really - for former Livonia resident, actor James King.

The network renewed "Midnight Caller," for Tuesdays at 10 p.m., the series on which King is a semi-regular, playing a police officer named Sgt. Online.

"What I like about it ('Midnight Caller') is that it's a crime drama, but there's never any gunplay rarely," King said during a recent interview at his sister Peggy's home in Dearborn. "I think they did one episode where there was some hostages in a bank, so they had a shoot-out. But there's no car chases or any of that other stuff."

King had come back to Michigan for Peggy's wedding. He has 12 brothers and sisters, one of whom is Steve King of Steve King and the Dittiles, a band doing well in the Detroit área.

"MIDNIGHT CALLER" is the first television series King has ever worked on. Shooting for the new season begins in July, which is customary for prime-time series. How did he get the job?

"The casting director called me and asked me if I would be available to play a character, Sgt. Online, who was an inept police officer, a rookle, the sidekick of one of the regulars relief-type thing, where I would be and got to work on more episodes. the goof-up.'"

King, whose "favorite TV cop of all time is Barney Fife," recalled, "I jumped at the opportunity." Not long after, King showed up at the studio.

"I got the script, and looked through the script, checking for my scenes, and there would be like three different scenes where I'd get something to say or do, so I was really happy. I called my family and told them and everything. And so I got a revision. I was down to one scene. And so I got to the set. We did the scene. And by the time they got the final edit, I had half a line left."

> KING MENTIONED that his wife. Victoria Skerritt (whose uncle is actor Tom Skerritt), wasn't so fortunate. She worked on one episode in which Joe Spano appeared, and her scene was completely cut out before the episode was shown.

About the series, which is set mostly at night, King stated flatly, "I think it really needs a little lightness. They've all been very hard." He added, "And hopefully over this rerun period, they've looked at the shows again and they'll decide it needs a little more lightness and

On working with Taxler (who was a regular on "Hill Street Blues," as was Spano), King noted, "He's a veteran, so I stick close to him and really watch him. He's another actor he can. He will consult with the director or any of the other techniclans when he feels like he can make something better."

Caller" usually has a different director every week. Last season: though, a couple of directors worked on several shows.

One of the directors King worked with was Eric Laneuville (who played Luther and directed a number of episodes of "St. Elsewhere," a show from the same production people as "Hill Street Blues").

"He's very good. He's very, very efficient. Great guy to work with. Never gets upset. Just always, everything's really mellow. Because he's an actor, he knows how to work with actors."

ANOTHER DIRECTOR King admires — though not one who worked on "Midnight Caller" last season is William Dear, who directed the movie "Harry and the Hendersons." The film starring John Lithgow was King's first movie. On that set, King and Dear hit it off well, and today they are co-writing a comedy-adventure, a script that is already under development at Universal Studios.

"Rewrite is the name of the game (in Hollywood)," King said. He hopes to hear soon what is the latest status of what, for now, is titled "The Jimi King Project." "Every studio executive you talk to has a different idea of what they want it to be, so they say, 'Rewrite it!'"

Currently, King and his wife (who have been married about three years), live in the San Francisco Bay area, which they love. King said, "You can drive a few miles and be out in the country. Whereas, we went to L.A. It's like the traffic and air. You feel like you can drive for hours

King thinks it might be necessary to move to Los Angeles to complete the script. This would dissapoint him and his wife not only because of having to leave the bay but also because of having to quit operating a summer, performing-arts day camp for children, which they have run for several years at a YMCA in Berke-

This summer, the Kings will have two four-week camp sessions, each with about 50 children. "My wife and I write the shows. And at the end of the four-week session, then the kids act it out, and all their parents and grandparents come. We don't give them anything really difficult, but, we do like them to stretch and make it a challenge."

He also conducts a regular story hour at three different bookstores in the bay area.

zenegger have become big box-office names, King had this advice for aspiring actors: "Forget acting," he said with a laugh. "Join a gymnasium." He fell back in his chair and laughed even more, "Work out."

He was serious when he said, "It's (acting) a long, slow process. But I figure I'm in it for the long run. And hopefully, 10 or 15 years from now, I'd like to be in a situation where I THINKING ABOUT how such can actually have more creative control than I do now."

It's time to dream, hope, plan-and seek the best prenatal care.

Pregnancy is a very special time of your life. An exciting time, filled with dreams and hopes for your baby. A busy time, spent-picking out names and shopping for stuffed animals and wallpaper for the nursery, But during this joyful time, your most important obligation is receiving early, professional prenatal care.

We're here to help with the personal, individualized care you may want now more than ever before. On staff in our Women and Children's Health Care Center, you'll find physicians who specialize in obstetrics, perinatology, neonatology, genetics, and reproductive medicine who are dedicated to keeping up with the latest in prenatal medicine. Our physicians and nurses are devoted to their patients. When you choose one of our doctors, you'll have available all the resources of Oakwood Hospital, a 615-bed teaching facility where over 4,000 babies are delivered annually. Oakwood as a Level III perinatal and obstetrical referral center, is equipped to handle high-risk deliveries, premature infants and other special-need babies, should any complications arise. Oakwood also offers ongoing classes with topics that include Childbirth Preparation, Positive Pregnancy Fitness, Parenting, even Creative Grandparenting to keep the whole family involved.

How you care for yourself and your baby during pregnancy is just as important as what you do after your baby arrives. So think of this as the most important nine months of your baby's life. And, whether you're already pregnant or just considering the possibility, take the time now to call 1-800-543-WELL for a physician on the staff of Oakwood Hospital,

Consider it time well spent.

Fluxus

Breaking the barriers to artistic freedom

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

HREE THINGS TO do this Go to the Fluxus exhibit at Cranbrook Take the catalog home to read Finish the catalog and go back

These four lines would look more like: Fluxus art if they were handwritten along the edges of typed sheets of paper. This kind of casual, informal approach to art was part of 1980s and directly affected much of the art we see and hear today.

Only Fluxus art, cryptic edge-ofthe-page instructions say things such as "try to grow mushrooms on this page," "read this page aloud to your family on Thanksgiving Day" or with the next five pages."

"Fluxus Selections from the Gilbert and Lila Silverman Collection," organized by The Museum of Modern Art and now at the Cranbrook Museum through Oct. 6, is at the very least bewildering, at the very most compelling and enlightening.

JON HENDRICKS, curator of the Silverman collection who organized. it along with Clive Philipot, director of the MOMA Library, was here to install the exhibit. He said, "The movement started in 1961. Few people realized something important was going on, but it was very ephemeral, very fragile."

terly, Phillpot says in the catalog, "might have provided a very interesting overview of a culture in flux." While Maclunas was plagued with money problems and poor health and couldn't carry out all of his plans, his leadership did foster events and happenings in many parts of the world that would effect change. He explained in his "Manifesto". and letters to friends how Fluxus would "purge the world of dead art

... abstract art, (and) illusionistic art . . ." In its place would come concrete art such as the ready-made objects of Marcel Duchamp, the ready-made sounds of John Cage and the ready-made actions of George Brecht and Ben Vautier.

Fluxus, he said, was against the the movement which began in the art object and the artist who sold it 1980s and directly affected much of and made a livelihood . . . "against the artificial separation of a performer from audience, or creator and spectator, or life and art . . ."

What then did these artists stand for, this group which, in addition to Brecht and Vautier included Yoko "think of five interesting things to do - Ono, Nam June Paik, Henry Flynt, Daniel Spoerri and La Monte Young and s host of other free spirits?

They wanted to replace art with functionalism, to rid all forms of art of illusion, to reestablish totally natural sights and sounds and to get everyone involved. That might mean: kicking the plano on its underside rather than manipulating the keys into waltz form or considering a rotten tomato at leisure rather a painting of a perfect one.

EVEN NOW, YEARS AFTER, some of minimalist happenings seem outrageous - concerts where the same chord was held for hours; the Fluxfest advertising "121 Big The name was chosen by George 'Names!" which treated the audience Maclunas, a New York-based small to 12 names flashed on a large publisher who intended to put out a screen; and four performers putting quarterly by that name. That quar- on masks in front of an audience and remaining perfectly still until the audience laughed.

Yet many of the Fluxus publications - books, posters, music, instructional sheets with graphics -

Jon Hendricks, curator of the Silverman Fluxus collection, is one of the main reasons why it is extant and is becoming a strange and minimalist as most of them are, remain aesthetically pleasing. They stand impressively as functional art within the context of the philosophy of the movement.

Some of the plans for festivals such as the one for Wiesbaden, Germany, included in the catalog, show how comprehensive Maciuness and company intended it to be.

His plans for publications and happenings, whether or not they ever materialized, are in themselves works of art of historical significance. Many of the concerts and happenings are documented on tape and film, and in Europe they often drew huge crowds - testimony to a hunger for change and new thinking.

The movement is generally dated at 1961-1978, a few feel is is still going on.

Hendricks said, "Fluxus ended 10 years ago. It had a need for being. Maybe it has a need for being now, but it would carry with it all the baggage from before."

Fluxus didn't rid the world of object-art or artists who make their living creating same and that's probably just as well. What they did do was open the way for acceptance and enjoyment for many, more forms and shapes of artistic expression and experience.

Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum, 500 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills, Is open 1-5 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday.

"Violin in Bird Cage" by Joe Jones, 1965 was made by the artist for a special Fluxus event. The metal bird cage contains a plastic violin, battery, motor and equipment to create a sound from the strings, albeit not as sweet as Isaac Stern.

Collector remembered blue

Gilbert and Lila Silverman's Fluxus collection came into being through a strange series of coincidences and a fine collector's eye.

Silverman, a Southfield resident and well-known builder/developer, said, "As you know, I have an interest in way-out or avant garde art. In 1970, I bought a painting in Tokyo by Geoffrey Hendricks, 'Sky and Two Pair of Pants' with a very unusual blue."

Then, eight years later when he was walking the streets of the Soho district of New York City, he spotted a street vendor selling plastic and painted bags of the same blue."I want up to him and said "Those bags have got to be by Geoffrey Hendricks' and he said yes."

Silverman said he bought out the whole show. The vendor was Brian Buczyk, "a very good artist," who grew up in Detroit and died last

The traveling exhibition is a way of broadening knowledge about this elusive but important art movement.

--- Gilbert Silverman

From Buczk, he found out that Geoffrey's brother, Jon, ran a small gallery next door. He met the artist who told Silverman the bags were being sold ($2 each) to raise money for a medical fund for a George Maciunas.

Silverman said the bags "were very interesting - like Dada - but I couldn't afford Dada." He found Jon Hendricks was selling Fluxus art "and I started buying I told myself, I'm in on the ground floor. I could end up with the biggest collection in the world." And he did.

The traveling exhibition is a way of broadening knowledge about this elusive, but important art movement. Silverman said people will say they are aware of Fluxus, but admit they really don't know what it is.

He said he and his wife have enjoyed collecting it, they particularly like the idea of the traveling exhibition which helps people understand what it's all about.

Scanga comes with color-

Strong color and design are very much a part of the works by Italo Scanga through July at Susanne Hilberry Gallery, 555 S. Woodward, Birmingham. The multi-talented artist, who once lived and worked in the family business in Garden City, recently received two awards from his alma mater, Michigan State University. One was the 1989 Distinguished Alumni Award. A book on the artist, published in Italy, will soon be available at the gallery. Shown at immediate left is a painted wood head done about two years ago. The other is earlier. Also in the gallery are a large group of small monoprints and large paintings. Hours are 11 a.m to 5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday.

The original negative is long gone, but Monte Nagler was able to borrow a print from his sister, Barbara, (pictured here with Monte more than 45 years ago), so he could make his own copy of a treasured moment of sibling harmony.

Making copies of old photographs

Have you ever visited that special family relative, sat down with the photo album, looked at forgotten pictures of yourself as a toddler and wished you could have copies for your very own? But, alas, the negatives have long since vanished and you ask how you ever going to get Well, don't give up hope. It's easier than you think to obtain copies of those treasured family shots. And best of all, you can do it yourself.

For starters, you'll need a tripod or copy stand to keep your camera rock-steady. A copy stand is a simple device consisting of a flat baseboard, a vertical shaft and an adjustable horizontal support on which to mount your camera. The camera aims straight down on the baseboard where you place the photograph to be cop-

If using a tripod, carefully tape the picture you're going to copy to a wall and move in close with your camera.

You'll need close-up filters, a macro lens or any other means you have to move in close and fill the frame with the image you are copying. This is very important to maintain a quality reproduction.

I PREFER using inexpensive tungston lights bounced into reflecting umbrellas for a soft, even light source. But it will have a noticeable effect with color film. If shooting by windowlight, use a daylight balanced film. If shooting in a tungsten-lit room, use an indoor balanced film.

And speaking about films, I recommend T-Max 100 for black and white and either Kodacolor 100 (for prints under daylight) or Kodachrome 64 (for slides under daylight). For color copies with tungsten light, Ektachrome 50 can't Pay particular attention to any glare reflected off the photo you are copying. Most often, a slight adjustment in the lights or a repositioning of the picture to be copied will do the trick.

When using black and white or color negative film for copy work, one exposure is all you should need. When using slide film, it is wise to bracket exposures. That is, take three shots in total; one at your camera's meter reading, a second at one stop over and a third at one stop under.

There you have it. You'll find it fun, easy, and satisfying to make copies of those memorable and valuable family photographs. It's a real snap.

Giant welcome

Czech community welcomes ambassador

It has all the earmarks of a Hollywood production; but it's really an attempt to break into the Guiness Book of World Records.

That's what members of Sokol, Detroit, the Czechoslovakian Cultural Center, have in mind in publicly acclaiming former child movie star Shirley Temple Black as the newly appointed U.S. ambassador to Czechoslovakia.

Led by former Livonian Mike Cortis, who now lives in Farmington Hills, the center has come up with the idea of a giant 8-by-8-foot congratulatory card they will have on display at the group's annual ethnic festival in Wyandotte's Yack Arena this weekend, July 7-9.

Everyone stopping by will be asked to sign the card, which bears a computer likeness of the

"At the end of the festival, we'll put the world's largest card with the most signatures on a card (we hope) in the world's largest envelope and mail it to Shirley in Washington," said Cortis, with fingers crossed behind his back.

Meet Mr. Seth and Mrs. Lindsey. Two friends sharing a moment that just might be remembered for the rest of their lives.

It's a scene that happens at a family community like Stonebildge, every day. On sidewalks where children play. At gel-logethers where neighbors meet and talk. And in West Bloomfield schools where education is still a priority.

Signebridge is much more than just quality homes. It's large bedrooms and family rooms, lucurious bathrooms, seven different floorplans, vaulted ceilings and European kitchens. But most of all living at Stonebridge is the start of something beautiful. Prices from $273,000 Hornes available immediately.

Pen and ink: interesting sidelights

What makes a good pen and ink drawing? I'm sure there are as many answers as there are artists. But to me a good pen and ink drawing should have a full range of grays, black blacks and white whites. It should also have a variety of line lengths, line widths and line direction. Perhaps pointalism here and there, all adding variety and inter-

It is twice as rice when you create your piece to express yourself, not caring if anyone approves, and still find approval. What a blessing it is to be an artist.

You look and study everything around you, where others only see their surroundings. You as an artist can express a feeling; and that expression will outlive yourself. Others ventilate their feelings in conversation which perhaps is soon forgotten. You as an artist have an ability, and though you have refined it and nurtured it, still it is a gift of God.

YOU AS AN ARTIST have the choice to use the gift, or not to use it. for example: you as an artist may choose to be an electrician, but an

Materials are not important to begin with. Any smooth white paper will do, a fine felt-tip pen, a pencil and an eraser. As you improve you should try other materials. A quill pen tip is my favorite for cartooning; it tends to flood the paper anytime you momentarily stop. This causes tears of frustration to new artists, but if you stick with them you can enjoy the varied line widths and fluid lines they produce.

Their drawback is that you constantly have to keep dipping the pen into an open bottle of ink. Also an open bottle of ink has a way of getting knocked off the table. I'm still' apologizing to Mom about her white curtains and the carpet in the dining

Now about the ink. Pelican has been my favorite for years, but the Higgins Company has come out with Black Magic, and it has my vote. Black Magic is very, very black. It is terrific in a brush and fantastic in a quill pen. Also very free flowing in a technical pen. The only problem you face with good pen, ink and paper is that you have no excuses. But then again maybe you don't need excuses.

Festival winners announced

A "buying crowd" is the best reward, but cash awards for an outstanding display/craftsmanship isn't hard to take either.

That's what the various winners of the recent Arts and Crafts Festival sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission at Greenmead in Livonia found out.

Winners were: pottery: first, Larry and Becky Rotter of Sodus; second, Beverly Pew of Drayton Plains; glass: first, Tom McEwen, Muskegon; second, Scott and Judy Cunningham, Plymouth; metal/ jewelry: first, Nancy Dorfman, Farmington Hills; second, Brad Benson, Grant; fine arts: first, Theresa Politowicz, Northville; P. Hatala and R. Boitos, Farmington.

Wood: first, Jack Stiles, Manchester: second, Wayne Otto, Livonia; textiles: first, Janet Pray, West Bloomfield; second, Sandra Rooney, Mount Clemens; folk/country/floral: first, Jeanne Fitzgerald, Battle Creek, second, Keith Rife, Paw Paw.

First-place winners received ribbon and $300. Second-place winners received a ribbon and $100.

Despite a chilly start Saturday, weather conditions for the annual festival were ideal and drew record crowds, an arts commission spokes:

To me, plants and cut flowers are as essential in the home as doors and windows.

i. For fust a few dollars fresh cut flowers are available at your neighborhood supermarket. A bunch of daffodils in a vase, when there is still snow on the ground, is a wonderful thing to see. It sends the message that spring is just ahead.

Whenever a large bowl of flowers fir a large plant is placed, a focal point is created. Whatever the cost of the scale, flowers in a home should be primarily welcoming and secondly, a clear statement of per-

"I finally found a townhome as large as a home.

"I looked long and hard to find a 2000 sq. ft., cathedral ceiling elegant three-bedroom townhome. (Of course, I could have chosen a two or three-bedroom ranch.) With my own two-car attached garage, my own private basement and patio. And-luxury touches like deluxe kitchens and whirlpool tubs plus landscaping that I love. Nothing could get me to move from Covington. Nothing:

LIVE AMONG THE RARE AND BEAUTIFUL

Aldingbrooks — West Bloomfield's premier rental community—has always attracted its own special flock. Our magnificent estate-like grounds are home to a collection of geese and swans. And to many of metropolitan Detroit's most discerning individuals and families. Set in a gated community, residents appreciate all the services they've come to expect from a luxury apartment community Residences up to 2800 square feet include such desirable features as private entryways, split-level or ranch-style designs, dans, brealdast rooms, cathedral callings, Aldingbrooks's world of privacy and custom options, with fireplaces and attached garages. All for much less than you'd expect to pay for such luxury. From $650 to $1650 per month

Whatever your mind can imagine in luxurious living, you can discover on your first visit to Aldingbrooks. It is indeed rare and beautiful

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the Item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those Items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

telefololo de telefolot de la lace de lace de la lace de lace de

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, It is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

ARE YOU GETTING PAID WHAT YOU'RE

REALLY WORTH? We firmly believe that our associates should grow with the company, rather than the company growing at the expense of the sales associate. That's why, at the Michigan Group, you are paid the maximum portion of the commissions for which you work so hard. The day you join us, you are on a 50-50 split with the company, until you earn $14,900.00. After that, until the end of your contract year, you keep 100% OF EVERY COMMISSION YOU EARN, minus $25 for our Legal Defense Fund. Unbelievable, but it's true, NO DESK FEE collected each month, regardless of your earnings, NO EXPENSE FOR PHONES, SECRE-TARIAL HELP OR COMPANY ADVERTISING.
