Fatal crash prompts call for safer road signs

By Joe Bauman staff writer

A Westland man whose ex-wife was killed Friday when an expressway sign crushed the roof of the couple's car said he will file a lawsuit against the state Department of Transportation to force the agency to make safety improvements.

Larry Topik, 42, was driving his 1989 Ford Thunderbird on the Southfield Freeway north of Rotunda in Dearborn when an ice-covered road sign and support pole crashed on top of their car, killing his ex-wife, 41year-old Martha Topik of Detroit. He was unhurt.

Martha Topik was taken to Oakwood Hospital-in Dearborn where she was pronounced dead on arrival from head injuries. Topik said he and his ex-wife were returning from a shopping trip when the accident occurred.

Two other motorists were injured when their car struck the fallen sign after it collided with Topik's auto-

DEARBORN POLICE refused to identify the 22-year-old Farmington man who was driving the second vebicle, or his passenger, a 22-year-old Southgate woman.

The driver was taken to Garden City Hospital where he was treated and released later that evening. His passenger was taken to Oakwood Hospital where she was reported in stable condition Sunday.

State officials believe that high winds and the weight of the accumulated snow and ice on the sign may have caused the support pole to snap

Topik, however, said his 25 years of experience working with metal and mounting brackets at the Ford Motor Co.'s Livonia transmission plant makes him believe the sign was improperly designed-

Topik said he agreed to be interviewed so others would know of the dangers posed by the overhead road

"There is no way a sign that heavy should be supported by a single pole_ and be allowed to swing around in the wind," Topik said Sunday from his ex-wife's Detroit home. "As soon as some other things are taken care of, I definitely plan bring a suit against the state and whoever else is responsible for those signs for negligence on behalf of our family.

"You shouldn't have to worry about signs falling out of the sky on top of your car. It's a good thing there wasn't much traffic on the road at the time or many other people could have been hurt."

Larry and Martha Topik had been married 22 years before divorcing two years ago, a family acquaintance sald.

TRANSPORTATION officials said they will review files Tuesday to determine the inspection and maintenance record of the light pole involved in the accident and, specifically, when the mounting mechanism was last inspected and what that inspection found.

Major changes in store for shopping mall

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

Westland Center patrons will find some new shopping stops inside the mall this spring as well as some familiar stores in new locations, a center official said Friday.

"We're going through a reshuffling of some of our tenants, which is typical every few years," said Eugene Groves, center manager. "We'll have a new look by spring.

But a softening economy may be partly responsible for the mall's new look, as one shoe retailer apparently has gone out of business and a men's and boys' clothler hasn't had its lease renewed, Groves said.

Burts shoes failed to renew its lease Jan. 31, according to Groves. Telephones at all other Detroit-area Burts stores have been disconnected.

Silverman's Menswear has also closed its Westland location, although there was some disagreement Friday between mall and Silverman's officials as to the rea-

GROVES SAID the mall decided against renewing the clothier's lease when it expired last month. He said Center Companies, which manages Westland and three other shopping malls in metropolitan Detroit, thought "there was too much floor area devoted to apparel."

Stolen rare bird needs special care

By Tedd Schnelder staff writer

Where's Sam Spade when you need

The fictional detective might have some ideas on where to look for a rare bird stolen from a Westland pet store during a break-in early Friday.

Unlike the legendary, jewelstuffed Maltese Falcon statue though, this bird is alive and its owner fears it could die from improper care or neglect.

"At this point we'd just like to have him back, alive and healthy, no questions asked," sald Pat Stocker, owner of Sea Port Pet Shop, "I'm really worried that he won't survive."

Stocker said the 7-week-old African Gray Parrot must be fed a special formula by hand, with a syringe. The bird won't eat otherwise, she sald.

Exposure to cold, damp winter weather could also harm the fragile bird. Stocker said .---

The parrot, valued at $1,200, was the only thing stolen in the break-in at the store, 2020 N. Wayne Road, police said.

Store owners get OK to sell beer and wine

By Joe Bauman staff writer

Two Westland businessmen received approval Wednesday to sell beer and wine at their food store on Newburgh and Ann Arbor Trail in Livonia, despite a history of problems at the site and its proximity to schools and a church. The Livenia City Council approved by a 5-2 vote a request by the proprietors of the Arbor Ridge Market for the specially designated merchant license, which enables the store to sell beer and wine for offpremises consumption only.

The market is located in the 9400 block of Newburgh and is the former site of the In & Out convenience store. The business is within walking distance of Churchill High School and Washington Elementary School.

Radcliff Center enrollment up

Schoolcraft College's Radeliff Center is setting. new enrollment records and looking for ways to add classroom capacity.

One possibility is to convert two laboratories, used for a heating and air conditioning technology program that is no longer offered, into four classrooms for evening use, said Edwyanna Dansby, dean of college centers.

That conversion is part of a budget proposal that hasn't yet been approved, she said.

The center is now at capacity for its evening classes, she said, with the college helping to relieve the parking lot with an expansion late last

The police academy has fun three sessions and enrolled 110 recruits, Dansby added.

While the allied health program enrollment has stabilized, there is still a "tremendous demand for employees" that is higher than the supply of students, Dansby said.

ANOTHER FACTOR that helped boost enrollment to record levels during the fall semester was the infant/toddler center, which opened about a year ago. The center, which marked its first anniversary last month, is part of the college's child care curriculum.

A quality management course which was initiated last year for those in the manufacturing field also added to the center's enrollment. The program, Dansby said, is designed to teach students statistical process control.--

A WESTLAND man and his female companion from Inkster told police they were assaulted and robbed by three men Wednesday night in a parking lot at the Quo Vadis theater, 7420 N. Wayne Road.

The couple wasn't seriously injured in the incident, police said. The woman, 29, told police they were walking toward their van in the north parking lot of the movie theater at about 11 p.m., when a man approached her and grabbed her

The man, 33, told police the assailant and two accomplices then jumped him and hit him on the side of the head with a blunt instrument. As the three wrestled him to the ground they stole $50 cash from his front pocket, the man said.

The contents of the the woman's purse included $35 cash, credit cards and identification, police said,

The couple called police after driving to the Big Boy restaurant at Wayne Road and Hunter.

The woman described the assailants as three black men in their early or mid 20s. The man who grabbed her purse was about 5 feet 10 and weighed 140 pounds, she said. He was wearing a black coat and a black ski hat.

A second man was 5 feet 5, weighed 180 pounds and was wearing a green coat; the woman said.

The third assailant was 5 feet 9, with a slim build and wearing a black jacket with red trim, she said:

AN INKSTER man told police he was assaulted by an unidentified, knife-wielding man early Tuesday while using a pay phone at the corner of Middlebelt and McDonald.

The assailant forced him to hand over his car keys before stealing his 1985 Frod sedan, the victim told police.

The victim, 24, told police he was making a call from the phone at 12:30 a.m. when the man pushed him down from behind and threatened him with a six-inch knife.

When he got up he saw the man driving his car away, turning eastbound on Annapolis, the victim told police.

He described his assailant as a short, stocky white man wearing a dark fur coat.

A RESIDENT on the 2200 block of Wilshire reported approximately $1,100 worth of quarters in a metal box were stolen during a break-in at his house

The quarters were in a metal box he kept in a locked bedroom, the resident said.

The man told police the break-in occurred between 5 a.m. and 3:15 p.m. while nobody was home.

The thief apparently entered by breaking out, a window in the back door and then unlocking the door, police said. The bedroom door had been kicked in, police said.

A RESIDENT in the Westland Park Apartments, off Cherry Hill west of Henry Ruff, told police someone stole his pickup truck from the complex parking lot last week.

The 1983 GMC truck was stolen between 8 p.m. Tuesday and 6 p.m. Wednesday, the man said.

VANDALS broke out a window and damaged six skylights at the D'Alosisio Building Co. Feb. 10 or 11, the owner reported.

Each skylight had at least three softball-sized holes, police said.

City's official social event draws a crowd

Some 359 people enjoyed dinner and a dance at the annual Westland Mayor's Ball at the Hellenic Cultural Center, on Joy near Newburgh, Saturday night.

.. The tradition was initiated in the mid-1970s by Mayor Thomas Taylor and continued by successors Charles Pickering and Charles Griffin.

With Robert Thomas elected Westland's new mayor last Nov. 7, the planning for the event was handled by his wife, Mary.

Despite a bad back that occasionally forced her into a wheelchair, Mrs. Thomas said there were no major problems or glitches in planning the event.

The work began shortly after her husband took office Jan. 1.

"It was the first time that I had ! to plan something like this," she said after dinner Saturday.

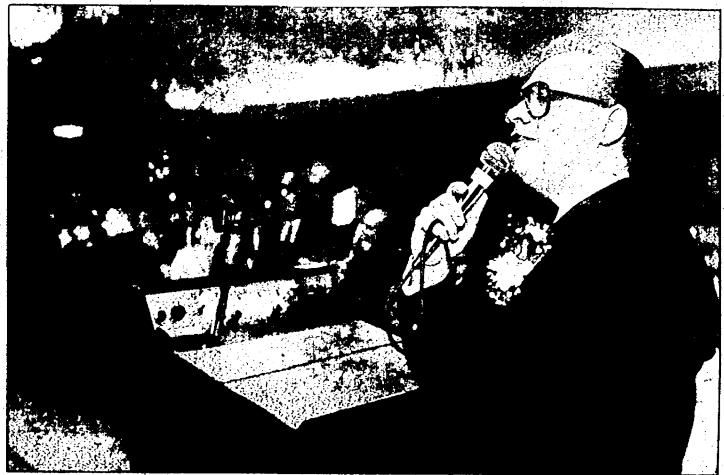

One new touch she added was hiring a solo harpist, Onita Sanders, to perform during dinner. The band Rendezvous provided the dance music after the meal.

One possible change for next year's ball, Mrs. Thomas said, would be to schedule it for March instead of Februrary, which has become the traditional month for the ball.

Those at the dance included city officials, Wayne-Westland and Livonia school district leaders and business people from the commu-

Observers say consent law would affect few locally

By Jamie LaBeau special writer

A bill that would require minors to get parental permission before seeking an abortion would not affect: many girls in the area if it becomes law, observers say.

The parental consent abortion proposal, which would apply to girls 17 and younger, passed the Michigan Senate last week and now is before the House. The Women's Advisory Center, a pro-choice facility in Livonia that supports the parental consent bill, reports a low abortion rate for girls 17 and younger already, said Victoria, a nurse at the advisory center. (Staff members at the advisory center, she said, only give out their first names to remain anonymous.)

MOST OF the girls they see for abortions, she said, usually consult with their family before getting an

"Most of our clientele will come in with a family member. The girls need the emotional support they get from their families when deciding on abortion; this is why the advisory center supports the parental consent bill," Victoria sald.

Less than 18 percent of their clientele, she said, have abortions without parental consent.

However at the Pregnancy Counseling Center, a pro-life facility in Livonia, most of the girls 17 and younger who are tested there for pregnancy are against abortion in the first place, Catherine Shollack, a family about her pregnancy, she can counselor at the pregnancy center

Shollack said the counselors interview the girls between the ages of 13. and 17 before giving them the results of their tests and ask them if they would have an abortion or not.

She said most of the girls were against abortion and most brought a family member with them when they came for the test.

IF THE parental consent bill becomes law, Shollack said she believes it will help lower both the rate of abortion and the rate of teenage

"If a young woman has to involve her parents in that decision, she tends to get pregnant less. She's not going to be as sexually active or if she's sexually active she's going to be a lot more careful. So, I think the birth rate and the abortion rate will go down for young girls," Shollack

In January 1989, the Pregnancy Counseling Center tested 30 girls between the ages of 13 and 17 for pregnancy, she said. Of those 30, 22 were against abortion, five were undecided, and four were considering abor-

In January 1990, fewer girls came to the Pregnancy Center to be tested but Shollack said almost all of the girls 13-17 tested were against having an abortion.

One important part of the bill, Shollack said, is it allows for cases of rape or incest so that if a girl is unable to comfortably talk with her go before a court to request permission for an abortion

MOST OF the girls Shollack sees, however, are able to talk comfortably to their parents about their pregnancy, she said.

Once the girl and her family get over the shock of being pregnant, she said, the parents tend to be very supportive of whatever decision the girl makes regarding abortion.

The same is true for the Women's Advisory Center. Victoria said in 85 percent of the cases she sees, the family will support the girl's decision on abortion.

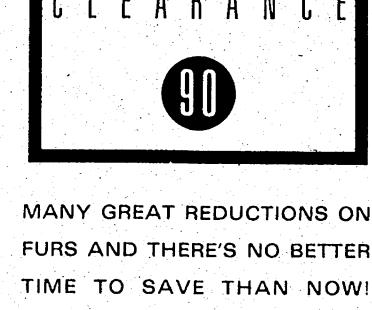

But, she said, there are a few cases when a girl cannot easily talk to her family. If the consent bill is passed, she hopes it will bring the young girls who are not comfortable with their families, closer to their

The bill was proposed by Sen. Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, who said he has received support for it from both pro-life supporters and pro-choice supporters.

If the bill passes, Gov. Blanchard said he will veto it because he believes it would restrict a woman's freedom of choice.

"If we're going to celebrate freedom, we ought to make sure that no one wants the state government intervening in what I think is the most difficult decision a woman would ever have to make," Blanchard said.

There are enough votes in the Senate to override the veto, Welborn said, and if the House cannot override it, it will be put to a referen-

The students at the district's Career Center on Newburgh north of Joy teamed with General Motors and the United Auto Workers to cre-

"They did a terrific job," said David Miller, spokesman for the UAW/ GM health and safety training center in Madison Heights.

Using comic-book characters, the textbook points out hazardous mate: rials that can be found in any workplace. It also demonstrates unsafe work habits.

"It gets the message out early to kids that they shouldn't bring bad habits into the workplace," Miller said. "They will learn early the necessity for gloves, safety glasses, respirators."

Six career center students worked on the book last summer and the fall semester of 1989. They are Kevin Messing, Steve Nelson, Alicia Sassak, Jim Millis, Joe Becker and Meg Sanchez.

The textbook is expected to be printed this month.

Center spokeswoman Barbara De-Grazia said the students developed the characters and wrote the script.

They also did all pre-camera work such as typesetting, layout, illustration, design and camera work. Accompanying the textbook will be a live-action, animated video that is being developed in Boston.

CAREER CENTER students were picked to create the textbook, Miller said, because of the enthusiasm and interest shown by their teacher, Edward Hubert.

"When we met him he had a lot of different ideas," Miller said. "He was a big help to us."

The book spotlights the hazards inherent in typical workplaces. For example, welding generates fumes, and woodworking generates vapors that can be hazardous if workers are not properly dressed and the workplace not properly ventilated.

"Kids don't want to be preached to, (that) they can't do this or that." Miller said. "The textbook shows kids wearing gloves and glasses. It shows good habits and bad habits."

Voting to approve the license were council members, Joan McCotter, Robert Bishop, Gerald Taylor, Dale Jurcisin and Ron Ochala.

At a Feb. 5 study meeting on the issue, Feenstra sald he was opposed to granting the license because he felt the location's proximity to Livonia Churchill High and a nearby church, The Lord's House,. made it an undesirable place to sell beer and wine.

Toy said previous problems at the store made her uncomfortable voting to grant a new license, and said she would prefer to have the matter referred to committee for further discussion and an opportunity to "get to know the owners... better."

SPEAKING AT the study meeting, Arbor Ridge owner Robert Wagner said he understood the concerns expressed by some council members but that he believed it was unfair for he and his partner to be negatively affected by the actions of the previous property own-

"Having a store of our nature without beer and wine is like having a gas station that doesn't sell gasoline," Wagner said, "What happened before at the location should not be tied to the property but to the prior ownership."

The state Liquor Control Commission revoked the SDM license for the site 15 months ago after the proprietor was cited for unspecified liquor law violations.

Council president McCotter said she supported granting the license because the owners received a favorable background check from the police department and for their willingness to improve the loca-

"THE OWNERS have made some building improvements and also stated they planned to landscape as soon as the weather breaks," she said. "I believe the gentlemen are committed to making the store an asset to the community and will strive to make sure that problems at the location in the past will not be repeated."

McCotter said a police review indicated that Wagner and co-owner Michael Cyer are "in no way" connected to the former operators of the In & Out store.

McNamara, speech draw suburban praise

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara drew high marks from suburban officials who attended Friday's annual State of the County address - not only on the speech but also on his first three years in office.

McNamara used the televised speech to officially unveil a number of new social services initiatives, but he and his invited audience also re- other expected this year - is the flected on past achievements.

"I thought it was a great speech," said county Commission Vice Chairwoman Susan Heintz, R-Northville been very good for the county." i 🤾 Commissioner Milton Mack, D Wayne, also had kind words for the

"I was pleased to hear a speech that positive and upbeat," Mack said. "We've come a long way from the days when all we had to talk about was the deficit."

Wayne County's improved financial position — with a budget surplus in the past two fiscal years and anprime reason for this year's new social programs.

"OUR KIRSE two years in office Township, "On the whole, I'd say he's didn't give us much opportunity to -focus on new service," McNamara

New proposals include.

• Health Net, a new county-affiliated health insurance program for small business owners. The plan, designed for low wage workers who lack other health insurance, will be offered at rates 50 percent below those charged by Blue Cross or standard health maintenance organizations, McNamara said.

"Perhaps the most frequent concern we hear from young families is that they lack health care for them-5 selves and their children. McNamara said

• A new county housing director, who will work with individual community groups to restore county neighborhoods

"As a boy, I grew up in one of the poorer neighborhoods on the west side of Detroit," McNamara said "But I did not grow up in a neighborhood where houses were burned out, vacant lots were overgrown, and the streets were filled with trash?

• A new, already-unveiled county homeless shelter in Westland.

The health care plan and housing plans were particularly intriguing, Mack said.

"I'd like to see what's being proposed with regard to health care because this is one of the nation's most pressing problems," said Mack, whose district includes Canton "On housing, the executive is going to have to tread carefully, traditionally this has been the kind of thing that local mayors regard as their own." -

One local mayor, Robert Bennett of Livonia, had mixed feelings over another McNamara proposal ... a call for three consecutive 2 cent incréases to the state gasoline tax, raising the tax six cents by 1992 to restore Michigan roadways.

"I've talked to Ed about this and I believe something needs to be done," Bennett said "But six cents seems kind of steep."

In addition to the social service initiatives, McNamara also announced 145 new jail beds would be added at the county's downtown jail within two weeks.

The county's joint operating agreement on jail management result of a bitter fight between McNamara and Sheriff Robert Ficano --- is operating smoothly; both men said.

"THE EXECUTIVE has been forthcoming and so have we," Ficano said.

In related announcements. McNamara said 400 young offenders would be committed to "intensive academic programs designed to turn their lives around" and offenders sentenced to the county work force. would assemble new benches for county parks

"I, think that (the new park benches) is a great idea," said Heintz, who represents Livonia, Plymouth and Plymouth Township.

The road tax increase, McNamara said, would save the county money in the long run.

Curent road resurfacing would cost an estimated $100,000 per mile, he said. If roads deteriorated further and had to be replaced, he added, the cost would grow to $500,000 per

Despite the new proposals. McNamara made no mention of his own intentions. Though expected to announced a re-election bid during next month's St. Patrick's Day festivities, McNamara's recent announcement he was considering a guberantorial bid in 1994 has fueled speculation about his future. Some observers have speculated he might find himself as Gov. James Blanchard's running mate as soon as this McNamara staffers, however, said any talk of a Lansing-based job was "extremely premature".

It was hard to find a discouraging word among audience members, most of whom were long-time McNamara supporters.

But even former rival Ficano was

"He seems well positioned for the election," Ficano said.

Lauve enters GOP race for governor

Senate Majority Leader John Ens gler will face at least one challenger in his bid for this year's Republican gubernatorial nomination

Tax cut advocate John Lauve announced a bid for the GOP nomination during a Wednesday appearance in Detroit.

Lauve, 49, also ran for governor four years ago.

He has been an automotive engineer with Cadillac Motor Division for 20 years. Before that, he served as a commissioned officer and helicopter pilot during the Vietnam War.

Lauve said he stressed a platform *of "no new taxes" and sought to root out corruption and fraud in state government.

As governor, Lauve said, he would prevent Detroit from receiving state money until the city showed greater accountability to taxpayers and would also mandate a performance audit to show how the money was being spent.

Among his other campaign planks, Lauve said he would

Hiding local police news does a disservice to all

LAST WEEKEND, the Michigan Press Association held its annual meeting in Grand Rapids. It's a time for Journalists from all over the state to come together to rekindle' the spark that first got us into this profession.

That happens easily.

Retired Free Press editor Neal Shine, now teaching journalism ethics at Oakland University in Rochester, has only to tell a single story and you feel proud of being part of newspapering.

Nationally syndicated columnist Jack Anderson reminds you of your personal responsibility to bring the drug war home to your community, and you decide to start the legwork for that series you've been only thinking about for far too long.

You return to your newspaper office re-invigorated and re-sensitized to your work.

So given this backdrop, I admit, I may be prickly. But two scenarios occurred immediately following that MPA convention which made me an-

Monday, Southfield officials basically told our Southfield Eccentric staff that the way they report crime there is detrimental to the image of that city.

Tuesday, I picked up the Free Press and found elephants on the front page and murders inside.

Six men, including two brothers, were killed in Detroit on Monday. The details of the killings were ganged together in one story around a good photograph of one man comforting another on the front of the local section. It was not the lead sto-

Meanwhile, the story that "the Detroit Zoo's only remaining elephant may be packing her trunk for a new home in a year or so, but until then she'll get lots of exercise" made the front page.

How do we become numb to murder? How do we lose that sense of Elephants over murder came on the heels of a meeting between two members of our Southfield staff with the public safety and community relations directors of Southfield. We have been having problems getting crime information from police in that community, especially on . weekends. Officials there want to whitewash crime in Southfield.

I live in West Bloomfield. I want to know when the house down the block has been burglarized. I want to know that a number of purse snatchings have occurred at a restaurant I might go to I want to know that a woman in a neighboring subdivision fought off the attack of a would-be rapist. And I want to know what police are doing about it.

I HAVE CHOICES in what I do, where I go and what kind of precautions I take for myself and my fami-

So do people everywhere. In Livonia, a convicted child molester had been stopped on a street near a school - but not held. Word leaked out and parents became infuriated they had not been publicly alerted to safeguard their kids. In West Bloomfield, residents of a local subdivision became angry when police failed to make public the attempted rape of a neighbor.

I hope I never see the day when a murder in a community we cover is relegated to an inside page - or that any crime is downplayed for the benefit of a community's image.

Not writing about it doesn't make it go away. It only leaves people unsuspecting and unprotected.

Column raised good points

To the editor:

I really enjoyed Jack Gladden's column of Feb. 5 "Problem goes beyond those red ribbons."

We (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) are against reckless driving too, of course.

The column brought up some very good points. MADD is very grateful for the Observer & Eccentric's support and co-.

Get involved in prevention

To the editor:

I agree with Ms. (Judith) Berne that "Hiding local police news does a disservice to all."

If crimes are being committed in... the community, the residents have a right to know about them. The newspapers' responsibility to its readers is to report them.

The city's public safety and community relations directors may not want these crimes reported. I agree with these officials that it's detrimental to the city's image, but it is far more important to the residents of the city to know that these crimes are being committed.

We as concerned residents can then become more involved in crime prevention activities. This will truly make Southfield a great place to live

Roy C. Holmes

In the paper the sports section covers every sport except, of course, ice skating. In your Feb. 8 issue the Observer has a whole page on hockey and how expensive it is on their families. Well, what about the figure skaters? It, too, is very expensive to the families.

The figure skaters put in a lot of time and effort to succeed in their sport. There is never or almost never any coverage on their results in competitions or shows they skate in.

I realize hockey brings in more money for the arena; that is probably why neither the Observer cares about the figure skaters. I enjoy hockey and figure skaters and I think both sports deserve the same acknowledgement. All skaters (hockey and figure) deserve the same acknowledgement. The skaters aren't playing politics, why are the adults. It just isn't fair to them.

D. Alidoost,

Seek support to stop basin

To the editor:

An open plea to all federal, state, and county officials:

We are writing to you in the hope that you can help us. We are residents of a lovely middle-class residential area in western Wayne County. As part of the Super Sewer project, Wayne County is proposing to place a sewage retention basin in our area.

We have asked them to move the basin to an industrial area about a mile away. They have refused to take our concerns seriously, citing us with a "not-in-my-backyard" mentality. That is not the case at all. Of course we are concerned with our property values. But we also want to be sure that our area retains its loveliness and that it continues to be a clean and environmentally safe community. A place where everybody would want to live. It sometimes seems that "we the people" are never listened to or considered in government's determination to do what it wants to do. We are treated as children and expected to go along with whatever it proposes, even if it has an adverse environmental impact on the quality of our lives.

: We cannot seem to get an answer as to why the basin has to be where they propose it to be, other than that it would cost additional money to move it. But if money is their-only concern, why are they even considering moving a pumping station in Dearborn Heights at a cost of $600,000?

The answer seems to be that officials of the city of Dearborn Heights are backing their residents in moving the pumping station. Perhaps that is our problem in our city. No elected officials have stepped forward and pressured the county and the state to take the residents' concerns seriously.

We are also concerned that when they get the basin in place in our lovely neighborhood and operating, they will find that, "well, bless my soul" we need a pumping station to move the sewage better and where better to put it than on top of the retention basin!

Federal, state, county, and our money is being used in this project. There are constant reminders in our daily newspapers of the adverse impact some of these projects have on neighborhoods and entire cities. We do not want that happening in our

Please help us in moving this basin to an industrial area and making sure another viable, lovely, clean, and environmentally safe area does not become another horror story in the litany of government by decree.

dospitals blast state

Area hospitals are seeing red and red ink - over Gov. James Blanchard's 1991 health care budget.

Blanchard has proposed a 2.5 percent cut in current spending levels for all budget areas except education, in anticipation of a slackening state economy.

Health officials, however, are decrying what they believe will be a $178 million Medicaid cut.

For several years, hospital officials have complained they were barely receiving enough in state Medicaid payments to cover services for poor patients.

"This is only going to exacerbate what is already a bad situation," said Chris Talazzolo, chief financial officer of Garden City Osteopathic Hospital. The hospital would lose an estimated $700,000 in Medicaid payments if the budget cuts went through, Talazzolo said.

Nearly one in 10 patients treated at the hospital is eligible for Medic.

aid assistance, he said.

' While St. Mary Hospital, Livonia, doesn't treat as many Medicaid patients, officials there said the cuts would still hurt.

"As it is, we're saying to our department heads that we're not going to be able to provide the technology they need," hospital president Sister Mary Modesta said.

Spencer Johnson, president of the Michigan Hospital Association, called the proposed Medicaid budget a "design for disaster".

"We believe that health care, for example, could have the same budget priority as education and correction," Johnson said, "For example, people can't work in employment if they're not healthy. People cannot be educated if they don't come to the classroom healthy."

According to the MHA, state payments for Medicaid services fell to 76 cents on the dollar last year.

A class-action lawsuit, filed on behalf of several Michigan Hospitals, is still pending. No area hospitals are direct parties to the suit.

Panel supports minimum wage increase

AP - A Senate committee has approved business-backed legislation to duplicate in Michigan the recent boost in the federal minimum wage.

The bill, approved 5.0 last week by the Human Resources and Senior Citizens Committee, now goes to the full Senate. But it faces a collision with House legislation that offers a bigger wage increase.

The Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, would raise the current $3.35-per-hour minimum wage to $3.80 on April 1 and to $4.25 on April 1, 1991. The bill also would permit an employer to pay a "training wage" of not less than 85 percent of the minimum wage for up to 90 days. And it would increase an employer's "tip credit" - the reduction allowed in the minimum wage for workers who earn tips - from the current 25 percent to 45 percent on April 1 and a maximum of 50 percent on April 1,

A House committee already has approved a bill to boost the minimum wage to $5 an hour by April 1, 1993. The current wage, which has not been raised since 1981, would iump to $3.80 on April 1, to $4.25 on April 1, 1991, to $4.65 on April 1, 1992, and to $5 on April 1, 1993.

Kids want fast food for dinner

Don't get me wrong. I love kids. But can you imagine what's it's like trying to educate a 4 and 6year-old toward better nutrition, and when Mom goes out of town for three days, their choices for dinner include McDonald's, Kentucky Fried Chicken and White Castle?

Do all parents just give in when the other spouse leaves town and completely annihilate proper eating habits?

This morning, when the kids woke up and I asked them what they wanted for breakfast, it was almost as if they studied their response all night long, as in unison they sang the praises of an Egg McMuffin.

Give me a break. Although, in all honesty, when I respond with, "Give me a break," one of them retorts, "Break me" off a piece of that Kit-Kat bar!" The Lempert Report, a leading trade publication conducting marketing analysis, issues and trends, states that "Americans' appetite for fast food is continuing around the clock, thanks to the successful addition of breakfast meals. In 1984, 85.4 percent of U.S. adults ate at fast food restaurants, a percent which climbed to 87.7 percent this year."

Now it doesn't take much to figure out that if 87.7 percent of U.S. adults are eating at these places, can you imagine where their kids are eating, too?

AH, HA, BUT just how many of these kids are saving, "Gee, Mom. get me one of those chef's salads with Italian dressing and hold the bacon bits, please." Isn't it about time that we, the folks who make up that 87.7 percent of the population eating at fast food places, begin calling them on the carpet for their lack of progress in offering truly healthy food alternatives? I don't mean tofu burgers need to replace bacon double cheeses, but instead of rabbit food served up with artificial bacon bits and hard boiled eggs, how about a sandwich that isn't batter coated, fried and topped with something other than ketchup and mustard?

The Lempert Report states, "Even chicken nuggets, assumed by many to be a more healthier choice . . . contain approximately 4.5 teaspoons of fat per six nuggets, or 58 percent of the total calories. One fast food restaurant has a chicken patty sandwich which is equivalent to 1.5 pints of ice cream."

You have no idea what I would give to see a produce stand open up next to a fast food place. There are days when I would just about sell my soul for an apple, or a banana instead of a pie, deep fat-fried in 6 inches of oil.

And while I'm at it, since I'm asking for the moon, how about an alternative to soda pop? How about an unsweetened apple juice or taking on a major bottled water. Heck, I'd pay for a glass of good water as a healthy alternative, wouldn't you?

WANT TO KNOW what I think the problem is? Seems to me there's a little too much emphasis being placed on "fast" food. Trend analysts are telling us those old-fashioned, home-cooked meals are taking the same route as 25-cent hamburgers. Think about that one, folks. When was the last time your family sat down around the dinner table? Or, even more scary, how many times in the last month has the family had dinner together in the car on the way back from the mall?

Does McDonald's really have better name recognition than God? That frightens me.

 Certainly there has to be other parents out there like me who would really appreciate and patronize a fast food place that at least gave us an alternative.

Maybe it's about time I pulled the "Boycott Coors" bumper sticker off my car and found one that says, "Only clowns, kings and bratty little girls eat fast food!"

Cold weather, hot soup

AST FEBRUARY, the newsroom staff of the Observer & Eccentric in Livonia got together for a Winter Soup Party, and we shared the recipes with the readers of the Taste pages.

This year, the second annual Winter Soup Party gets under way again in February. We're going to taste some more recipes provided by staff members. The luncheon event actually will include not only soups but also bowls of chili and stew.

Some staffers will bring salads, others bread and still others dessert, to round out the meal. It's the kind of party any office can enjoy before saying goodbye to what is traditionally the coldest month of the year. Winter soups make a great athome meal (or meal starter), too. If you want to try some of the recipes, Besides offering old favorite recipes for the newsroom Winter Soup Party, staff members will be trying some recipes from re-cent cookbooks for the first time Here are a few of these.

Seasonal sports add to scenic dining · Skiers aren't the only ones who would like to see a winter with plenty of natural snow. No doubt restaurateur Bruce Cameron would like a snowy season, to attract more diners to his Double Eagle restaurant in

At the Double Eagle, diners can have the distinct pleasure of dining by fireside and gazing out large picture windows across torch-lit cross country ski trails. It's a little like dining at a ski lodge, but the food is much better.

Even though lack of snow has kept the ski trails closed most of the last two years, the Double Eagle still has a cozy atmosphere, with most seating close to one of its two fireplaces. The "entertainment" is more consistent in the summer when diners can watch golfers on the Sylvan Glen course.

Of Cameron's restaurants, the Double Eagle probably offers the most traditional menu. Roast prime rib is one of more popular entrees. The computer-generated menu changes dally, but the prime rib is a mainstay and one can always count on a couple of tantalizing - though not too daring - chicken dishes.

Daily menu changes allow for featuring the freshest fishes available. Recently, the menu included such favorite selections as Norwegian salmon, Canadian whitefish, red snapper prepared Cajun-style with creole sauce, and a yellowfin tuna. The oven-roasted salmon was prepared perfectly and served with a delicious tomato-dill buerre blanc.

THOUGH THE BEEF tenderloin medallions were very tender and cooked vas ordered, the bearnaise sauce was watery and had started to separate. The baked potato served with this entree should never have left the kitchen. About one third of it was black.

Our entrees were served with chunked zucchini and carrots, healthful if not tremendously flavorful. On the other hand, the homemade chicken noodle soup was wonderful - obviously made from scratch with a delicious stock. Desserts too are hard to pass up here. Pastry chef Carrle Richway turns out some delectable cheesecakes, flans and tortes.

The restaurant offers a good selection of appetizers, pizzas and pizza salads, in part because of its bar area. The beer-battered shrimp were wonderful and the chive cocktail sauce accompanying them was fantastic, with just the right zip to it. The pizza salad is a California creation that is catching on here. The salad is served on top of grilled and cut pizza crust. Each "slice" can be scooped up and eaten by hand. The salads may be as common as lettuce tossed with julienned ham, cheese and turkey or as exciting as a grilled artichoke and chicken combination. These are a popular lunch entree at Double Eagle.

Pizzas are showing up on menus in all sorts of restaurants these days. Besides providing a good appetizer, the pizzas are viewed as a means of attracting family business. Count on finding a "traditional" pizza on the Double Eagle menu as well as something with more zest - like the Bourbon Street version featured recently, with Cajun shrimp, artichokes, tomatoes, muenster and mozzarella cheese.

Though it could do with a little more fastidiousness from the kitchen, the Double Eagle is still a good place to dine out. The service is excellent and the food is good. It's especially nice on a bitter cold night when you can nestle next to the fireplace and enjoy a good meal.

Loving memories come with homemade soup

Homemade soup has always been associated with an act of love. Cooked by your mother or grandmother, nothing warms your Insides" quite like a bowl of homemade soup. Especially in the wintertime, soup comforts the common cold, a seasonal chill, even a case of the blues.

Homemade soup can be a real pleasure. The delicious aroma fills the kitchen as the pot simmers on the stove. And with today's modern conveniences, soup doesn't take an entire day to prepare. These days soup is usually quick and easy to fix and adds a 'special' touch to any meal. Soup also can benefit those wanting to watch their weight or slow down their eating patterns. Served at the beginning of a meal, soup slows rapid eating and can help to curb the appetite before too much food is consumed.

Good ol' Chicken Noodle Soup with lots of noodles - is the No. 1 homestyle remedy for soothing a head cold. And after an afternoon of ice skating or a day on the ski slopes, a bowl of piping hot soup surely is something to look forward to. Serve it mug style and wrap your hands around the cup, warming your hands as well as your stomach.

My cold-weather favorite, Homemade Tomato Soup, is wonderfully accented with spices such as basil, oregano and bay leaves - delightful for warming up on a cold winter afternoon. Add half a tunafish sandwich and you have a nutritious, tasty lunch.

OTHER HOMEMADE favorites include Bean Soup and Vegetable Soup. Both are healthy and great sources of fiber. The soup which should ideally be eaten overlooking Cape Cod Bay is New England Clam Chowder. Loaded with clams and potatoes. A crock of hot clam chowder, along with Brown Bread Muffins, will warm and fill you to your heart's content. Go ahead and dip the dark bread right into the oowl. A winning combination.

Weight Watchers leader helps battle the bulge

With testing so many delicious dinners, it was inevitable that my waistline would begin to show the effects of my new career.

I think Marnie Balog's turkey telfazzini, which will be next week's Winner Dinner, was what finally pushed me over the edge and practically out of my seams. Not that her dish was particularly fattening, but rather it was a problem of portion control, i.e., self-control. We all know that nothing tastes better thana reheated day-old casserole, especially when it is the perfect antidote for frazzled mid-afternoon nerves as well as for quieting a singing stom-

As I swallowed the last bite, I made up my mind that something had to be done . . . soon! Within the week, another friend and I headed off to our first Weight Watchers meeting, bound for glory and a return to svelteness. There we met our leader, Micki Berg, who warmly welcomed us to the program.

After being weighed in and establishing our individual goal weights, we settled in for the hourlong discussion that left us feeling more determined than ever to lose the ring around the middle.

KNOWING THAT I'm not alone in my battle of the bulge, I suggested to Berg that she send in one of her family's favorite dinners. She willingly complied and provided a recipe for Oriental Pepper Chicken Stir Fry served with rice that is as delicious as it is delightful.

As well as working full time as a Weight Watchers leader, Berg is the busy mother of six children who range in age from 11-20. Having lost 65 pounds herself, she totally embraces the Weight Watchers program, as it is nutritionally balanceed and it teaches eating-management tips that can be tailored to any life

Berg's enthusiasm and genuine caring for others is evident in the way in which she conducts her meetings. Through her own experience. she effectively reaches out to others and helps them learn how to become "lifetime fit." Her efforts have enhanced and enlightened many lives.

Having been with Weight Watchers since 1983, Berg has been director of the Inner Circle program since 1987. The program is designed for people who prefer a smaller group. Membership is limited to 12 people and is by reservation only. Inner Circle offers members more personal attention and support from the

Mardi Gras is a time to feast

It's carnival time in New Orleans. Festivities are at their peak when, suddenly, a hideous crime takes place, and one of the revelers falls dead.

. This is a scene from the interactive murder mystery, "Murder at the Mardi Gras," which will be presented Saturday at Maplewood Community Center in Garden City.

Guests are asked to come in cos-'tume, and enter into the Mardi Gras

The murder takes place in a fivestar Louisiana restaurant owned and operated by the world-renowned chef. Rizardo De Lasitte, played by Richard Underwood, a Garden City school teacher.

The plot revolves around his award-winning recipe for a dessert known as Rambo Rhumbo, a delightfully rich concoction of rum cake, \ pineapple, coconut, cream and cherries that is "but to die for."

If you can't get to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras this year, then the dinner and play in Garden City is the next best thing. If you can't even get to the play, then you may wish to sample a few of the dishes served at

The menu consists of seafood gumbo, ham jambalaya, roast beef, Deep South salad, baked sweet potatoes, plantains, fried dill pickles and real sangria punch -- as well as sugar-free, non-alcoholic sangria-flavored punch for those who prefer it. And, of course, Rambo Rhumbo for seasonal visitor

This winter is the season of the red-breasted nuthatch. Many people who feed birds have told me that they have had a new nuthatch at their feeder. Most observers are quite familiar with the white-breasted nuthatch, so they knew when a new species appears.

Both the white and red-breasted nuthatches forage by going down a tree trunk head first. Unlike woodpeckers and creepers who also go up a tree, nuthatches view from a different perspective and find food óther birds missed.

They are similar in their coloration too. A blue-gray back with black : to dark gray on the top of their head the red-breasted nuthatch is slightly smaller, has a black line through th eye separating white above and below, and they have reddish under-pine and fir. Occasionally nests have been found in the southern tier of counties. They excavate a cavity in a dead tree and smear pine resin around the opening. It is believed that it keeps some predators from entering the nest. Some experiments have shown that snakes are deterred by pine resin.

When a red-breasted nuthatch is seen around the Detroit area it is considered a good sighting because the do not stay around this part of the state. But there are years when the cone production in the coniferous forest is low, which causes irruptions of this species in new areas.

Most years reveal a few birds in southeastern Michigan, but some years, like 1957, 1969, 1975 and 1989 indicated a greater number than usual. The 1989 Detroit Audubon Soclety's Christmas Bird Count recorded the greatest number of redbreasted nuthatches in its 45-year history.

Regular counts like this and those sponsored by the federal government help us to monitor trends in bird population on a broad scale. In some cases, these same trends can be seen at your feeders.

Borgess survives test in OT, 66-62

By Brad Emons staff writer

Sunday is supposed to be a day of rest, but Redford Bishop Borgess had to work overtime in the quartersfinal round of the Catholic League A-

B Division basketball playoffs. The Spartans fought off a stiff challenge from Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher, pulling out a 66-62, victory at the University of Detroit's Calihan Hall.

Borgess, now 15-2 overall, advances to the semifinals Thursday at Calihan. The Spartans will take on Southgate Aquinas (14-3) at 8 p.m. in the second game of a double-header.

Shawn Respert, a 6-foot-3 senior, led Borgess with a game-high 25 points, but he wasn't around for the

Brad Emons, Dan O'Meara editors/591-2312

Things looked bleak when he fouled out with 1:38 remaining in OT after Gallagher's Wayne Thomas (24 'points) stripped him of the ball near mid-court.

THOMAS, fouled by Respert, made one of two foul shots to knot the count at 60-all, but Gallagher failed to convert the go-ahead basket as Borgess responded with five straight points, all from the free throw line. Senior forward Randy White, who finished with 20 points, hit three of four, while Artie Brown iced it with two more foul shots.

"We needed somebody to pick us up and Artie ran a play where we could get a drive to the hole and draw a foul," said White. "Too much was at stake, we needed somebody to pick us up.'

The Spartans, who had beaten Gallagher by counts of 82-63 and 69-55 during the regular season, were not quite as sharp in the third encounter. They won despite making 23 turnovers.

"Give Gallagher credit, they responded well to the challenge," said Borgess coach Mike Fusco. "The last five or six games we've played well, • due in part to Respert going to the Gallagher inched closer after three quarters, pulling to within five, 48-43, on 6-5 sophomore Elroy Reese's dunk with seven seconds to play. Brian Smith sparked the comeback with nine of his 19 points during the period.

The Lancers went ahead 56-54 on a basket by Troy Wilcox with 1.02 left in the game, but Respert responded with a big basket nine seconds later to send it into overtime.

"WE HAD EVERY every opportunity in the world to beat this team by 10 or 12 points, and that's an honest assessment," said Gallagher coach Dave Stavale, whose team is 8-8 overall. "Free throws (16 of 29) have haunted us all year and so have missed layups.

On the mark Northville's Kaley sinks Franklin

By Brad Emons staff writer

The "Shot Doctor" certainly has given Joe Kaley and his Northville High teammates a boost in the Western Division basketball race in the Western Lakes Activities

The 6-foot senior guard scored a game-high 29 points, including six 3-pointers, leading the visiting Mustangs to a 69-52 win Friday at Livonia Franklin.

Kaley, who along with his teammates worked over the summer on perfecting their jump shots. Schooled by a pair of "experts" from Indiana, the Mustangs have moved to within one game of its first-ever Western Di-

Northville is 12-4 overall and 7-2 in the division with only one game remaining - Tuesday at home against last place Walled Lake Western.

Franklin, which dipped to 8-8 overall and 5-4 in the division, clings to one of the four divisional playoff spots for the WLAA playoffs. The Patriots could clinch a spot in the eight-team tourney by winning Tuesday at Plym-

"I WAS CONCERNED about Franklin after they beat (co-leader) Farmington Harrison here (last Friday) by 27 points," said Northville coach Omar Harrison: "You don't know how the kids would come in here and accept the challenge."

Kaley, in particular, was up to the task. Using a quick release, he hit several shots with a Patriot defender in

"He's a great kid, but he's not what you call a talented player, but he can shoot and he's got a lot of heart," Harrison' said. "But with those two ingredients, It's great to have."

The Northville coach brought in Vincennes (Ind.) Junior College coach Dan Sparks and Franklin Central (Ind.) to teach the art of shooting last summer.

"They video the kids and they learn the stance to prepare them to get the three-pointer off," Harrison said. "Joe works at his shooting and by listening to his instructor, it's helped his shooting a lot. He's learned about proper body balance."

It hasn't hurt Northville's inside game either as 6-6 senior Scott Meredith added 14 points and 6-5, 250pound junior Mike Lang contributed eight.

"NORTHVILLE is playing with confidence and they're play well," said Franklin coach Rod Hanna. "They have the inside and outside game and that's what makes them tough." Franklin took a 2-0 lead to start, but Kaley answered with a three-pointer and the Mustangs never trailed The Patriots fell behind 28-22 at intermission and 48-

40 after three quarters. They were as close as 53-49 with 4:25 remaining (on a pair of Dave Barina free throws), but Northville reeled off six straight points and pulled away down the stretch. "We played like we were in a fog the whole night to be honest with you," said Hanna, who used all 13 players on Parents Appreciation Night.

Steve McCool, the 6-4 junior, led Franklin with 16 points. Senior guard Craig Overaitis added 10, while Barina had eight.

Mercy has Ladywood's number in finals

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Three previous victories over arch-rival Livonia Ladywood would have been for naught if Farmington Hills Mercy hadn't won the big one Thursday night.

The Marlins deposed Ladywood as Catholic League champion, winning 15-3, 15-7 in the title match at Wayne State University. Ironically, it was also the most lopsided of the four matches. "A lot of people said 'This is the fourth time you'll play them. They're going to be sky high for you," Mercy coach Tim DeBeliso said. "We knew it was going to be tough beating someone four times.

"But we knew that going in, and we had to raise our level of play a notch. When the match started, we got that good play right off the bat and were able to keep the momentum."

The league championship is Mercy's second, the first coming in 1977. The No. 2-rated Marlins, 46-3, will face Detroit Central in the Operation Friendship program at 6:30 tonight at Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher.

"I COULDN'T be prouder of the kids," DeBeliso said. "They played an excellent, excellent match. Every one of our seniors probably played her best match of the year, and the stats reflect Jennifer Goff, Andrea Velthoven, Lee Albrecht and junior Gail Murie combined for a .638 hitting percentage. Mercy had 40 kills in the match, with setter Nikki Burns averaging 20 assists.

Goff smashed 15 of 21 attacks for kills, Velthoven nine of 14, Albrecht nine of 17 and Murie four of six. Albrecht, whom DeBeliso said had a great night in the middle, added seven blocks.

The Marlins also were at the top of their game defensively, according to DeBeliso, and Velthoven, with a team-high 12 digs, was the standout. Goff and Amy Miller dug up four spikes aplece.

Mercy's serving was flawless, too. The team had only four aces, but nobody missed a serve. Velthoven was 11-of-11, Nikki Burns and Suzle Atchinson 9-of-9.

DeBellso said the Marlins anticipated having volleyball

to play a near-perfect match against an opponent with Ladywood's tradition, but the Blazers were not on their game as they slipped to 37-8 overall.

"WE DIDN'T give them a good game at all," Ladywood coach Tom Teeters said. "You win as a team and lose as a team, and this was one we lost as a team.

"But I do congratulate Tim DeBeliso and Mercy. We lost to a better team. They controlled the match from beginning to end."

Teeters added his team's intensity and emotion were "not well directed" as Ladywood made some uncharacteristic errors and played its worst match of the season.

The Blazers, who beat Mercy in the league final last year, started the match with three straight errors and, in sharp contrast to the Marlins, were only 25 percent efficient on serving.

Kari Domanski was the only consistent hitter, Teeters said, recording four kills out of seven attacks. Kéli Haeger added two kills. Teeters said: Ladywood might have to make some role changes to create a more effective attack.

"Right now our leading hitter is our setter (Domanski)," he said. "We're still relying on two hitters (Haeger and Rebecca Willey) too much. We can't go into the districts playing like this."

VELTHOVEN HAD seven of her 12 digs in the first game, and Golf (6) and Albrecht combined for 10 kills.

"When they were hitting the ball at us, we were able to get the ball up from the floor," De-Beliso said, "and Jennifer was able to put the ball down to the floor."

Golf continued to hammer the ball in the second game, coming back with nine kills to help nail down the title. Velthoven chipped in seven kills and continued to excel on defense.

"We were stuck there (with an 11-4 lead) for quite a while, and Ladywood made a comeback," DeBeliso said. "But I thought we handled that Since the league winner has been decided, the teams can anticipate a fifth meeting, possibly in the quarterfinals of the Class A tournament.

"If we play them five times, nobody will care about the other four," DeBeliso said, adding he believes both are ready to make strong tournament runs. "The one that matters is the one you're playing."

Teeters remains optimistic about Ladywood's chances should there be another rematch.

"I still feel we can beat them if our hitters are on," he said. "And that would require (the Marlins) not to be at the top of their game. They're the stronger team, and they've proved it over and over again."

LIVONIA STEVENSON rebounded from a two games to one deficit, edging host Westland John Glenn, 16-14, 11-15, 11-15, 15-6, 15-6.

The Spartans improve their overall record to 18-6-9, while the Rockets fall to 10-13 overall and 5-6 in the Western Lakes Activities Association. Junior Kara Beeny surfaced as one of John Glenn's top hitters, recording 14 kills and eight solo blocks. Senior Dionne Ross added 13 kills Sophomore Karen Olack and Junior Jennifer Massey handled the serving chores for the Rockets, each tallied four aces. Michelle Myers led the Rockets defensively, recording 23 digs. "I was pleased with the intensity our girls put forth," said Glenn coach Linda Jimenez. "Despite the loss, our team gained confidence, playing so well without 5-foot-10 sophomore middle hitter Nikki Wojik. She will miss

LIVONIA FRANKLIN was beaten last week by host Plymouth Salem in a WLAA encounter, 17-15, 17-19, 15-11, 15-7. Sue Bona led Franklin with 128 sets. "We played real well. Our statistics were very balanced," Franklin coach Brenda Bulmanski sald. The match lasted 214 hours. Bulmanski used just six players: Bona, Nicole Cheisa, Collech Laul, Erica Sundell, Karl Zabell and Emily

Trenton bombs Stevenson, 10-0

By Mike Stewart staff writer

Livonia Stevenson found Trenton's defense to be very offensive Friday at the Kennedy Ice Arena.

The Trojan defense accounted for 10 points and manhandled Stevenson's offense in a 10-0 hockey rout of the Spartans. Even sophomore goalie Jim Blackledge got into the action with two assists, as if a shutout wasn't good enough.

"We were anticipating a very close game," said Trenton assistant coach Tim Mann. "Stevenson didn't play as well as they could have. They played much better the first time at their place (a 5-3 Trenton win Nov. 29 at Eddie Edgar Are-

It didn't take long for Trenton, ranked eighth in the state, to heat up in front of a packed house. Just 13 seconds into the first period, senior center Anthony Penner backhanded in a loose puck for a 1-0 lead. A little over three minutes later junior center Jeff Dunn put the Trojans up by two on a slap shot from just inside the blue line.

Dunn (one goal, two assists) and senior right wing Doran Oboza (two goals, one assist) were the only players with three points in a very balanced Trenton attack.

STEVENSON'S JUNIOR netminder, Kevin Brady, made an outstanding save on a shorthanded breakaway by Trenton's Gary Durbin to keep the Trenton lead at 2-0 after one period, but it would be of little consolation. The Trojan's outshot Stevenson 10.6 in the first period, 22-10 after two periods, and 37-17 on the night.

The Trojans added four more goals in the second. Junior center Paul Withee, set up nicely by junior defenseman Scott Haveman, banged home a power play goal from inside the right faceoff circle at :23. Then, in a span of less than one minute, the Trojans scored three times and finished the game, for all practical purposes.

Haveman (4:17), senior right winger Mickey Whiteside (4:45) and Oboza (5:08) gave Trenton a 6.0 lead going into the final stanza.

BRADY WAS relieved by sophomore goalie Dave Labadie in the third period, but the new netminder was given the same old treatment. Both squads played shorthanded for most of the penaltymarred period. In all, there were nine two-minute minors handed Trenton tallied on power-play goals by Durbin and Oboza, got a shorthanded goal by senior left wing Kevin Bridges, and concluded the scoring on a slap shot from the point by junior defenseman Chris Kinzler.

The win was Trenton's ninth straight. Its last loss came to Birmingham Brother Rice on January 10 by a 5-2 count. The Trojans now stand at 16-3 on the season.

Stevenson, ranked first in the Observerland poll, falls to 13-6-2. "We just didn't seem to have a lot of jump in our skates tonight," said Stevenson coach Paul Ferguson. "We've won some games handily lately, but against a team like this you can't stand around and wait for things to happen.

"But give Trenton all the credit. They just took us off our game to-

Of course, drilling and initials are included with ball purchase (while you wait.). 🕒

ALL OF THESE stores will drill the ball to fit finger and thumb size, some will vary the pitch according to customer instructions only. None of these outlets offer or install finger inserts nor will they plug or re-drill the

I do not make any suggestions or recommendations, but hopefully the information will be useful in future buying decisions.

If you want a ball with leverage, axis, top or side, weight, along with a specific fit, the pro shop should be considered first.

Perhaps in a future column, I will visit local pro shops and keep you abreast on what is offered. If you want to bowl with a U-Dot, Hammer, Cobra, Rhino or Dual-Block, these are generally offered at a pro shop. Speaking of new bowling balls, I just bought the AMF Cobra for my son Donnie.

The first time out with it in competition in the Wards Burger King Youth Traveling League, he fired the first nine strikes, leaving a solid 10-pin en route to a 267 game. The Cobra is a very hard-hitting ball and will likely produce some very high scores.

Glenn coach retiring

Tom Buckalew, fn his final season as coach of Westland John Glenn, " had no easy task Wednesday in the Class A team regional at Temperance Bedford.

The Rockets, despite strong performances from Karl Pace (125 pounds), Kraig Kuban (171) and Garnett Woody (189), found themselves. outmatched against No. 1 ranked Bedford, bowing to the Mules, 54-16:

Pace (33-9) defeated Bedford's Scott Klostermeier 9-0, while Kuban (40-2) wen by default over Brian Wingate; and Woody (36-8) pinned Erik Krieger in 55 seconds.

Buckalew, who led the Rockets to a 20.4 dual meet record this season, finishes his career at John Glenn with four Northwest Suburban League titles and a Western Lakes Activities Association crown.

In addition, Buckalew led the Rockets to their third District title this season by upsetting state-ranked Romulus in the Class A team district. That victory gave John Glenn a No. 8 state ranking.

"I did not anticipate doing this well," said the outgoing cocah. "The team has been real super."

Redford Catholic Central, also in the semifinalsat the Bedford, had a fell to Trenton, 33-28.

Lady Ocelots trying

For Schoolcraft College's women's basketball team, Wednesday's game at Oakland Community College is best left where it currently resides.

In the past

The Lady Raiders, on the other hand, would love to dwell on their 80-63 triumph over SC. The victory clinched a tie for first place in the Eastern Conference for OCC, which. improved to 18-8 overall and 11-3 in the conference. SC slipped to 16-6 overall, 9-4 in the conference.

"It's time to get ready for the" playoffs and be positive," was SC coach Jack Grenan's reaction.

IN OTHER words, no use crying over something irretrievable. Instead, concentrate on the "second; season"— the Michigan Community College Athletic Association state playoffs. SC will host either Alpena or St. Clair at 7 p.m. Monday in a first-round game.

Jenny Fritts guided OCC to the win by pouring in 16 second-half points. She finished with 20 for the game. Lori Montange led the Lady Raiders with 22.

SC trailed 57-55 with nine minutes left, but the Lady Ocelots then failed to score for five minutes. "It was good defense by them and we missed six-footers," said Grenan, Barb Krug paced SC with 17 points. Tracy Osborne and Lisa De-Planche got 14 apiece.

It was the fourth year in a row SC and OCC have split their season se-

WHAT RUINED SC men's team's hopes for an upset of OCC was logistical. After all, you can only go so far on a tank of gas, and as SC coach Dave Bogataj said after his team fell 110-88 to the visiting Raiders Wednesday, "We just ran out of gas. The kids did all right until the last five minutes."

"All right" in this case was stay-

ing within shouting distance; which SC barely managed. The shorthanded Ocelots — Bogataj had just seven available players, after Ed Hudson . (stress fracture) and Ken Fuster (academics) joined the team's lengthy casualty list - trailed 61-46 at the half. The closest they got in the second Half was 78-71 with nine minutes

After that, OCC quickly increased its lead to 14, and the margin between the two teams remained in double-digits the rest of the way: The Raiders' pressure defense did just what it was designed to do: wear out the opposition by the late stages of the game.

OF COURSE, SC didn't have much opposition to offer. Still, Randy Watters continued his torrid scoring, pouring in 37 points on 13-of-18 floor shooting (including five-of-seven three-pointers). However, when Watters fouled out with four minutes left, he took with him most of SC's hope.

Three other Ocelots - Al Hudson, Dave Hamilton and Gary Strunk finished the game with four fouls each. Al Hudson accumulated 18 points and 10 rebounds and Tony Rumple got a career-best 24 points. · Rumple also had seven assists.

OCC was led by Toine Murphy, who pierced SC's defense for 32 points - including three threepointers in the first half. Jerry Prieskorn added 26, Ed Pasque had 16 and Tim Maxfield notched 15.

SC fell to 11-19 overall, 4-11 in the Eastern Conference, OCC is 17-6 overall, 11-5 in the conference.

Madonna cagers hitting the skids

The record continued to slide last week for Madonna College's women's basketball team. The Fighting Crusaders lost three straight as their record tumbled to 5.13 overall.

On Thursday, the Crusaders' trip to Siena Heights was wasted; they lost 77-70. Siena remained the third-rated team in the NAIA's Dis-

Also last week, the Crusaders were clipped at

Tri-State (Angola, Ind.) 91-50 Tuesday and fell at home to Northwood Institute 91-74 Saturday All three losses shared a common trait; Madonna was behind by halftime and couldn't overtake its adversaries. AGAINST SIENA HEIGHTS, the halftime margin was 45-38. Siena Heights got 20 points from Jenny Tenorio, 18 from Kris Fisher and 10 from Plymouth Canton grad Amanda Bell. Madonna was paced by Lisa Kline, who collected 25 points and 14 rebounds. Michelle Dyksinski and Becky Poszywak pitched in 16 points each.

college sports

On Tuesday, Madonna traveled to Angola, Ind., to play Tri-State, but it might be argued that the bus never arrived. The Crusaders certainly lacked concentration, they committed a horrendous 41 turnovers.

Which is why they trailed 45-22 at the half. And why Tri-State took 84 shots from the floor, while Madonna managed just 52. .

Five players reached double-figures in scoring for Tri-State. The leader was Jody Yochum, who netted 17 points. Kline, once again, was atop Madonna's scoring chart. The senior forward collected 15 points and 11 rebounds.

THE FEB. 10 game against visiting Northwood was pegged as pivotal by Crusader coach Bob Belf. If Madonna entertained any hopes of making the District 23 playoffs — and a recent surge had stoked those hopes — then a win over Northwood was a necessity.

But alas, it was not achievable.

The Crusaders were in the hunt at the half. The Northwomen clung to a 37-32 lead, and they did not improve upon it through much of the second half. With less than 10 minutes left, Northwood's lead was a mere three points.

Then Jenny Wood found her rhythm. Or her range. Or whatever. The result was three threepointers in a row for Wood, which pushed the Northwomen's lead back into double-digits.

Wood finished with 27 points, one of four Northwomen to reach double-figures in scoring. Another was Livonia Ladywood graduate Cathy Schram, a senior guard who netted 10 points. Madonna was led by Dyksinski's 23 points and Kline's 19 points and 14 rebounds.

Shamrocks settle for 4th at regional

By Bill Parker staff writer.

After the team results were finally compiled Thursday at the regional ski nicet at Alpine Valley, Scott-Adams turned to his brother Jim -Walled Lake Central's head coach and gave him a huge bear hug. "We did it," Scott said.

The "we" Scott was referring to was Central's boys ski team which earned a berth to the Class A state meet by finishing second in the regional competition.

The top two teams and the top four individuals, which are not members of one of the qualifying teams, advance to the Michigan High School Athletic Association's Class A state ski meet, February 26 at Crystal Mountain in Cadillac.

Central's first trip to the state ski meet in more then 10 years didn't come easy. Central had to overcame a five-point team penalty when one of its skiers was penalized for unsportsmanlike conduct, then won a tie breaker over Birmingham Brother Rice, 71-72, to finish second.

BRIGHTON CAPTURED the boys race with 65 points. Central and Rice tied for second with 95 each followed by Catholic Central with 114, West Bloomfield with 176, Hartland with 192, Milford with 195, Lakeland with 204, Orchard Lake St. Mary's with skling

The medical name for shingles is herhes zoster. It is caused by the varicellazoster virus which also causes chickenpox. It affects mainly adults past age 50 and is characterized by the development of red, painful, blister-type lesions that follow the underlying route of cranial or spinal nerves inflamed by the virus.

The pain, which can be constant or intermittent, superficial or deep, is the older person's major complaint. It often mimics other disorders such as appendicitis or pleurisy. Some of the early symptoms may include nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, fever and headache.

Those who experience the symptoms of shingles should seek medical care. Although the treatment is usually focused on relieving the pain -vision is important as complications can develop.

Older persons who have had chickenpox earlier in their lives cannot "catch" shingles from someone else. Infection usually results when the virus, which has been dormant for years, re-emerges to cause shingles. This can occur as a result of many factors such as a reaction to some medication or stress.

On the other hand, older persons who have never had chickenpox can from the rash, close medical super- develop the illness if they are exposed to someone with shingles.

Dear Jo:

I would like to add a few suggestions to your column on older persons and pickpockets. I agree, the lifting of a wallet from a man's hippocket is child's play. The hip-pocket wearer often cooperates even further by slumping down in a soft chair or car seat, thus easing the wallet up part-way out of the pocket.

When the wallet is carried in the lest side pants pocket, the chances for lifting it are minimal, as a great deal more skill is required.

I disagree with your suggestion of carrying the wallet in the inside jacket pocket. Once aboard a bus, plane, etc., off comes the Jacket and the wallet with it. The wallet is quite safe in the left-hand pants pocket because no matter how warm it is, a, man can't take off his pants!

Tom Andras, 29, of Holly; an avid snowboarder for 10 years, tries a trick called the backside aerial on the halfpipe at Mount Brighton.

'Shooting the curl' halfpipe style

By Pat Schutte special writer

If you've been out to one of the local ski areas lately — for example, Alpine Valley or Mt. Brighton — you've probably noticed the "shredders and shralpers busting aerials in the pipe."

Say what?

OK . You've probably seen snowboarders (if you're still lost, see the acccompanying article), riding the ditch-like run, performing tricks on or above the walls of the run.

The ditch-like run is called a halfpipe and resembles a half circle. You may have seen something similar, constructed out of wood, with skateboarders riding in it.

Well, because of frozen ground, snow and cold weather, skate-boarders and other action sports athletes have turned to snow-boards and runs called halfpipes.

The halfpipe, constructed with snow, actually simulates a wave . . on land. And there's an interesting history as to how it evolved.

The surfers came first. Then the sidewalk surfers or skateboarders were born. Skateboarders later rode their their boards in empty swimming pools to achieve the weightless feeling of riding the wall of a wave.

And when there were no empty swimming pools to ride, skateboarders would construct wooden ramps shaped like the inside of a swimming pool (kind of U shaped) and ride back and forth.

OVER THE last three or four years, during its boom, snowboarders (of the hundreds of thousands who participate in the sport worldwide, 90 percent have some sort of skateboard background) have looked for a type of terrain that they can perform tricks born from skateboarding. The halfpipe was a natural step.

The first halfpipes in existence were basically natural, meaning that they occurred in a somewhat unrefined state, such as a gorge or tight valley, at a mountain in the Rockies.

It wasn't until recently, though, that halfpipes were constructed and made operable in Michigan. The problem? No natural halfpipelike terrain to begin with and not enough snow.

So with the explosive rise in snowboarding popularity (on any given night, snowboarders generate up to 30 percent of the lift ticket revenue at ski areas, allowing them to use their facilities), two local ski areas decided to give halfpipes a shot.

"We began in the summer by excavating a trough 250 feet long by 20 feet wide and stacked the dirt up on the edges to give it an eight-foot depth," said Joe Bruhn, ski area manager at Mt. Brighton in Brighton. "We then blew snow into the halfpipe and the local snow-boarders carved out the lip (the edge at the top of the wall on either side of the run) with shovels."

OVER AT Alpine Valley in Milford, ski area manager Bill Byberg took pretty much the same steps in constructing its halfpipe, but shapes the sides of the walls by using one of those giant grooming tractors.

"Using a grooming machine to carve the walls is like whittling on a stick, cutting, scraping and edging," said Byberg, whose area was the first to allow snowboards on its runs six years ago.

So these two local areas (a halfpipe is also in operation at Crystal Mountain in Thomasville in the upper Lower Peninsula) have taken a very bold move in accommodating a sport that is comprised almost exclusively of 13- to 19-year-old

"The risk factor concerned us, but we really didn't know what to expect," said Bruhn. "After watching them, I'm very comfortable with the halfpipe. We haven't had any negative results."

Byberg agreed.

"This isn't just a faddish sport," he said. "We wanted to offer our snowboarders a nice feature and the halfpipe was it."

Besides either being fenced off, as is the case for the Mt. Brighton halfpipe, or, in an isolated area like at Alpine Valley, the halfpipes are policed by snowboarders themselves. Rules and regulations apply just as they do with the skiers

"A self-monitored situation," said Byberg.

THE HALFPIPE keeps a large concentration of the snowboarders off the ski slopes and away from Behind the mirrored sunglasses and serious look is snowboarding enthusiast Pat Schutte.

Bringing 'surfing' to snow

By Pat Schutte special writer

The easiest way to define snow-boarding is to say that "it's like surfing on snow." The stance is the same, as is the body movement. The only real difference is the make-up of the water.

Once ready, the snowboarder buckles his feet into the bindings atop the board and travels down the hill, slicing back and forth just like a skier. But unlike the skier, when the snowboarder falls, the board stays with him.

The board doesn't release like a ski, the reason being that the feet are joined on the same plane, not opposing planes. The risk of twisting a knee is not the same as it is on skis.

Snowboarding has really become a mainstream sport over the last several years, especially once insurance companies defined the snowboard as a "ski" and many of the ski resorts decided to allow snowboarders to use their lifts.

In fact, snowboarding has been around for quite some time. You may remember the "Snurfer," a water ski with staples in the top that provided traction and a rope that came up from the tip of the ski to hold onto it. Developed in Michigan by the Brunswick Corp., the "Snurfer" was a popular toy in the 1960s and early '70s.

In the late '70s, driven by skateboarders and surfers looking for an alternative thrill and fueled by pioneers of the sport like Jake Burton, Tom Sims, Chuck Barfoot and Dimitrije Milovich, snowboarding became a recognized underground sport. All of the riding done back then was known as "Back Hill" riding due to the hiking involved on the hills in the back of ski resorts.

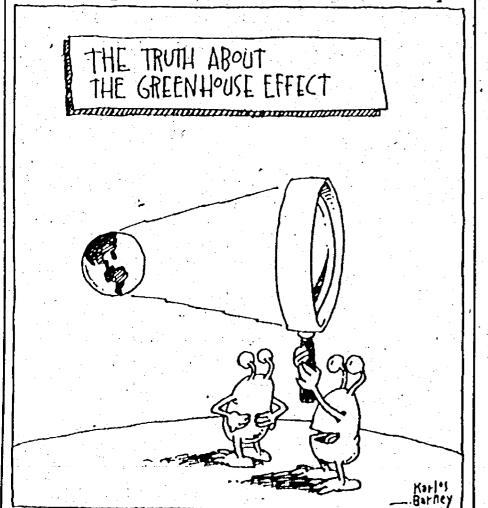

The boards, when compared to the boards built now, were like Model-T's compared to a Cadillac. Made from pressed plastic or laminated wood, older snow-boards would only work in deep snow — where a metal edge isn't needed to hold a turn.

Snowboarding still stayed somewhat underground throughout the early 1980s, exclusively a sport for skateboarders and surfers. But the boards (thanks to Burton and Sims) kept improving. Better bindings, foam and wood laminates, metal edges and P-tex bases copied from the ski industry, gave the rider better control on hard packed snow as well as powder.

Then after several resorts in Europe began to allow snow-boards to use their lift facilities and following some serious lobbying of some U.S. ski resorts and the companies that insure them, snowboarding took off around 1985 and hasn't slowed down since.

How to play when in Chicago

By Iris Sanderson Jones (Last of two parts) contributing travel editor

Chicago is a glittering, walkable city, but you need a little help from your friends to get the most for your time and money on a brief weekend getaway.

John and Jill Breckenridge stayed for the second time at the Essex Inn, several blocks south of the Chicago River, because they liked what they got for $49 a night including parking. They had easy access south to the museums, west to the older department stores and restaurants of the Loop, but were a bus or taxi ride from clubs, restaurants and theaters of River North or Lincoln Park.

Chris and Jane Enright of Birmingham stayed in the glamorous Fairmont Hotel just south of the River for a deep weekend discount of $95 a night and felt pampered, but they would in the future stay closer to where the action is north of the river.

I have stayed in several nice hotels north of the river, including

THREE YEARS ago it was an apartment building, but now it has a canopy over the door, a doorman to rescue your car from the North Dearborn traffic, a tiny lobby, a small lounge, a curve of a mahogany bar and a good but moderately-priced restaurant called J.P.'s at the back.

Too many hotels spend their money on public rooms, this one put it into the bedrooms, all nlcely refurbished. There are standard rooms on the four sides of each floor for $65 weekend rates and higher-priced small suites on the corners.

I highly recommend it for a stylish, but moderately priced getaway just north of the clubs and singles bars of Division and Rush streets and of the many clubs and restaurants in the River North

'Madhouse:' One movie you really want to miss

One of the worst movies I have ever seen - "Madhouse"(Z-, PG-13, 85 minutes) — is coming soon to a theater near you. Leave town before it's too late.

What loosely passes for a plot finds Mark (John Larroquette) and Jessie Bannister (Kirstie Alley)'inundated with obnoxious house guests, relatives of one sort or another. They say you can pick your friends but you can't pick your relatives. Well, movies are friends, so don't pick this one.

The film suffers — as does the audience - from slow-paced, heavyhanded and infantile dialogue delivered in an obsessed, maniacal manner as if to suggest that the performers - to say nothing of the production staff - have crossed the thin line between humor and mad-

Even worse, they seem to be suggesting that there's something entertaining about the tragedy.

Comedy is based on the unexpected, on mistaken identity and exaggeration of the commonplace. "Madhouse" overdoes it to such an incredible extent that it is painful to watch. It's hard to believe that the hero and heroine, a hard-driving financial planner and a television news personality, could become such wimps as soon as they get home.

HALFWAY THROUGH the film Mark has a nightmare lifted rather obviously from "Night of the Living Dead." He was lucky, it was only a dream. For the audience, it was real-

Another winner, "The Nightbreed" (*) (R), based on Clive Barker's book "Cabal" — starring David Cronenbert - wasn't screened this week. Why didn't they do us the same service with "Madhouse?"

On a brighter note, "Courage Mountain" (B+, PG-13, 105 minutes) continues its enchanting hold on our emotions, as it has since it was first published 110 years ago.

Mature viewers — and everyone with access to a VCR — will remember Shirley Temple in the title role in 1937. Now, 53 years later, Juliette Caton brings a new freshness to the

This time the story opens at the beginning of World War I as 14-yearold Heidi prepares to leave the Swiss home of her grandfather (Jan Rubes) to travel to the northern Italian boarding school, Brookings, where she will study.

She's apprehensive about leaving her grandfather and her best friend, Peter (Charlie Sheen), but go she does. At the school the other girls are put off by Heldi's simplistic country mannerisms. The school's director, Jane Hillary (Leslie Caron), is another matter and Heidi does find some solace with her.

THE WAR intrudes when the Italian Army takes over the school for a barracks. The girls are ordered to return home, not an easy task in wartime, but their travels are engaging and exciting.

Fourteen-year-old Caton, whose last role was as the sweet-faced angel who tempts Jesus with visions of earthly happiness to Scorsese's "The Last Temptation of Christ," brings to her role as Heidi a great deal of energy and a surprising sophistication for one so young.

Despite the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, abortion continues to be a major and oft-times devisive issue on the American

"Pro-choice" and "pro-life" seem like simple opposites — either women have the right to determine the fate of their bodies or society has an -obligation to protect every life. Simple, right? Make your choice. Well, it's not that easy but a 1989,

Emmy-winning, made-for-TV film, "Roe vs. Wade" (color, not rated, 95 minutes), puts the issues in perspective. It's a well-produced, entertaining, if not gripping film. No matter what your opinion on abortion, "Roe vs. Wade" is a cogent discussion of

The film was nominated for six Emmy Awards and won two — outstanding drama special and Holly Hunter as outstanding lead actress in a special. Eilen Campbell (Holly Hunter) is a "woman-on-the-road" in the older, Depression sense of the term — a lost person, someone with nothing in life but a rucksack and the will to live. Even that is marginal.

She is a carnival barker/bartender/waitress character in early '70s Texas. Her young daughter, Cheryl, is being raised by Ellen's mother in New Mexico. Ellen's relationship with her mother is at best antagonistle and, in fact, in one touching scene she says to her mother: "You treat Cheryl better than me," to which her mother responds, "She's a better child than you ever were."

ELLEN SPENDS quite a bit of time with her father. There the relationship is simple, straightforward and even tender at times.

Ellen - whose character represents the real-life Jane Roe, Norma McCorvey - finds herself pregnant again and no way to support a child. Nor does she wish to bear a child and give it up for adoption or face the filth and terror of back-alley abor-

Since Texas law forbade abortion at that time, Ellen's doctor suggests she see two attorneys, Sarah Weddington and Linda Coffee, women who are interested in challenging the restrictive Texas anti-abortion laws.

One of these women, Sarah Weddington (Amy Madigan), becomes a key player in the drama which took several years until its conclusion in the Supreme Court's landmark 1973 decision. It was a decision which upheld Ellen Campbell's contention that "a woman should be able to make up her own mind."

Of course, it didn't help her or Norma McCorvey who had long since given birth and been forced to place the baby for adoption. But her strength of character in taking a stand dld help countless other women control their own destinles.

Norma McCorvey spent time on the set of "Roe vs. Wade" and noted

"I want people to know that 'Jane Roe' is not just an alias, but a real person who cares and feels things very deeply."

MADIGAN AND Hunter are excellent in their characterizations of two very different Southern women, a drifter and a young married attorney just beginning her practice. One of the problems here, of course, is that of maintaining dialects throughout a feature-length film. Both Madigan and Hunter do an excellent job with dialects as well as with characterizaion in general.

Their performance do, however, overwhelm everyone else and the production clearly is a feminist, prochoice vehicle that makes no bones about its political and philosophical

As well, the film is episodic in structure to a fault as it cross-cuts from Sarah to Ellen to the defendant, Texas Assistant Attorney General, Jay Floyd.

But in that fault also lies a major strength, the humanization of abstract legal and governmental policy issues via the personal lives of those struggling with these questions. Although not rated, "Roe vs.

Wade" is rather mild as things go these days and probably would be PG-13 if it had been submitted to the MPAA Rating Council. It's an excellent presentation of a major topic, abortion, one which continues to perplex and pester our society.

Studio enjoys sound growth

Many local groups go through the 'Mill'

By John Logie special writer

For the better part of the last decade, dozens upon dozens of local bands have descended into a basement in Livonia to record demos. tapes, LPs and CDs. Through the years, Dave_Feeny's studio. The Tempermill, has grown from a hobby into a career. And as the studio became busier, it became clear that the noise filtering up from the basement into the family's living space was becoming too constant to ignore.

"I was just so busy. I was literally doing 16-18 hours a day, seven days a week. Sometimes we'd do basically 48 hours straight," Feeny said.

Sensing that his family's patience was nearing its limits, Feeny recently decided to move the studio. In mid-March, he will open a Tempermill in Ferndale, about a mile south of I-696.

He has secured the use of a large building that used to house several chiropractors, and whenever he isn't recording with bands in Livonia, Feeny is making extensive renovations to help the building conform to

"It's going to be this fantastically high-tech two-inch tape, 24-track studio," he said. "Actually, there will be two studios, and they'll have two separate control rooms, a 16-track control room and a 24-track control room . . . all in the same building, with saunas, jacuzzis, tennis, walleyball. It's going to be cool."

FEENY IS probably kidding about the tennis and walleyball, but the building seems big enough to house both. He said the studios will take up 3,000 feet of space, leaving him room for a kitchen and other creature comforts.

And while Feeny's limited plumbing skills will probably preclude installation of that jacuzzi for a while, he did teach himself enough to install a toilet and shower in the build-

Self-teaching is how most of the skills Feeny uses were developed. In 1981, he was a member of a band called Blue Food which never quite made it out of the basement. But Feeny bought a four-track recorder to use with that band and when the band dissolved, Feeny started experimenting. •

"I started doing synthesizer stuff with a really cheesy drum machine, just because you could. You didn't have to have any microphones. All you had to do was plug everything in. You could do basically whole songs. and plug the guitar right into the tape deck."

In 1982, Feeny joined a band called Novelty in Romance. He and the singer were both interested in recording, and they decided to attend a recording workshop in Chillicothe, Ohio, for a six-week stretch.

ARMED WITH this training, he decided to head for the professional studios.

"I thought I didn't have enough stuff to have my own studio, although I had been recording friends' bands, and I had some friends in Florida. So I went and stayed with them for a month and knocked on doors of different studios in Fort Lauderdale and Miami every day.

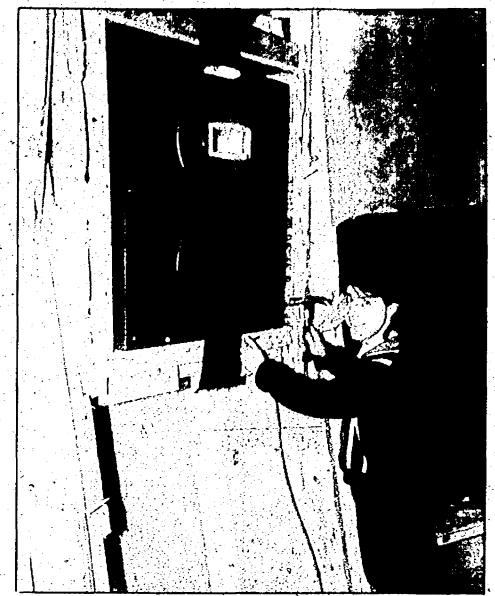

"And I would do anything just to sweep floors, and I was willing to relocate, and start from scratch, and it didn't work out at all."

Feeny was in line behind innumerable out-of-work musicians, friends of friends and other aspiring studio personnel, so he eventually decided to return to Michigan. After a while Feeny was able to buy an eight-track recorder and a new mixing board, but he regarded recording as a hobby until he started seeing the competition.

"In 1983, I joined the Hysteric Narcolics, and we did some recording at some other studios. I kind of got a feel for what else was out there, and I thought 'Well, I'm not really that far from that," he said.

Feeny recorded an increasing number of bands on a casual basis while maintaining his day job at a steel processing plant. In 1986, after saving up a substantial amount of money, he quit his job and bought a 16-track recorder. He named the studio Tempermill after a stamp which appeared with numbing regularity on rolls of tempered steel used at the plant, and began advertising.

"It was kind of slow at first, butall of the money that I got for recording, I would just put back into equipment," he said. --

THE TEMPERMILL'S low rates (Feeny's ads routinely characterized the hourly rate as "twenty skins.") made it the studio of choice for many aspiring local bands.

In the past few years Feeny has recorded CDs for Hippodrome and Shouting Club, and LPs and tapes for Missionary Stew, Feisty Cadavers, Heresy, the Sensitive Big Guys and many, many other bands.

The studio also came in handy when Feeny's current band, the Orange Roughies, started working on their recently released debut al-

While the old studio had its charms, Feeny probably won't miss the relatively diminutive rooms and -jury-rigged-eomplex-of-carpetedwalls and wiring.

THE NEW Tempermill will definitely be more conducive to recording. It will feature equipment on carts to facilitate movement between the two studios. In addition, Feeny will not be the only engineer working the boards. And while Feeny's exorbitantly expensive 24track mixing board is among the "whopdingers" Feeny is adding to "all the bells, sirens and whistles" used at the old studio, his price will still be well within reach for local

Blind Pig to host band contest

By Jill Hamilton special writer

For all of you fledgling musicians that gripe that local bands never get any support, complain no longer. Support is on the way — your chance to be noticed, your moment in the sun, your 15 minutes of fame!

What we're talking about is the first ever "Clash of the Rock'n'Roll Bands," sponsored by Al Nalli Music and the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor. What's in it for you?

Well, how does winning cash, equipment and exposure to record label and agency representatives sound? Not too bad, right? So, what price is this fame?

The cost of one good demo tape with three original, copywritten tunes. Throughout the month of February, judges from Al Nalli Music and the Blind Pig will face the arduous task of listening to tapes from southeastern Michigan's finest local Once all of the tapes have been reviewed, the judges will select 12 finalists. Every Monday in March (5, 12, 19 and 26), three finalist bands will showcase their talents at the Blind Pig. Possible judges include Mitch Ryder, the Metro Times' Kevin Knapp, WRIF's Anne Carlini and WCSX's Mark Pasman.

Each Monday a winner will be chosen to compete on April 2 at the "finals finals" at the Pig.

SURE, ALL this "finalist" stuff is complex, but what's a little confusion when rock'n'roll stardom is at stake? Contest instigator Ann Marie Stadler of the Blind Pig said she developed the idea to raise awareness of the great local music scene in Michigan and to give exposure to the

If the contest is successful, it will become an annual event. Proceeds from the contest will go to the winner.

Of course, a contest isn't a contest without rules? So, here's some official info about what you have to do to get that Big Break:

• Your cassette must be high quality, original, copywritten music and contain only three songs.

• ALL MEMBERS of your band must be 18 years or older. Bands must not be affiliated with a major-agency or record label and cannot be employed by the Blind

Pig or Al Nalli music. • Your music will not reproduced for any reason and tapes will not be returned. 2 • The deadline is Saturday, Feb.

• Drop off tape or send to: Al Nalli Music, 1990 Band Bash, 312 S. Ashley, Ann Arbor 48104.

• Include band name, contact name, phone number, address and the number of people in the band

A CHANGE IN THE WEATHER

— Gregson & Collister

This tandem defles easy classification. Because they are members of Richard Thompson's band, Gregson & Collister often get lumped in with more traditional folk and folk/rock groups. But that really doesn't tell the whole story. Gregson, the duo's songwriter, guitar player and sometime vocalist, draws extensively on blues, jazz and R&B in both his writing and his play-

Collister has an incredible voice, ranging from a dusky alto to a smooth upper register. This allows her to draw Gregson's disparate influences together and create a music that manages, at times, to be both fish and fowl.

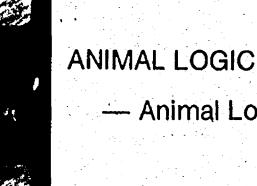

Their latest effort is not without occasional lulls, but it is impressive. In "Blues on the Run," Collister turns Gregson's landscape sketches into a classic torch song, suffused with an acrid frustration. It is followed by the freight-train rhythms and black magic of "Voodoo Doll," which in turn is followed by a sturdy rocker, "Standing in Your Shadow," where Gregson eschews his usual delicate touch in favor of power: chords. Collister's voice tecters between restraint and abandon, announcing its power, but emphasizing control.

This record's most notable lapses come when the duo turns its attention to rock's mystic godhead -Elvis Presley. "(Don't Step In) My Blue Suede Shoes" is similar in tone to Don McLean's "American Pie." Gregson eulogizes Elvis as a victim, then shoehorns Bruce Springsteen into the song as a man tormented by the press for the crime of trying to stay in touch with his rustbelt roots. Finally, Gregson portrays himself as one who learned too late that rock'n'roll was dangerous work. It is the record's least genuine moment. It is followed by Collister's reading of Elvis' Sun Sessions chestnut, "Trying to Get to You." The keyboard backing just doesn't fit, and I.R.S. Records, is the rhythm section Collister seems intent on competing of Stewart Copeland (drummer for with the King, rather than bringing something new to the song. While Gregson and Collister seem worrled about establishing themselves as a "rock" act, they needn't bother. Whatever their music is, it's good.

FEAR & LOAFING

Shower power

It was a gray, blustery day in supurbia. The kind of uninspiring day that could give Shakespeare himself terminal writer's cramp.

For weeks, Roger's creative juices had been sucked dry by a boss with oily skin and no forehead. Now, with the alarm clock still ringing in his ears, he was already dreading another day of writing for Greek Town squid joints.

Standing barefoot in the cold tub. his aching body shivered in the half light of early morning. Tired and bleary-eyed, he groped for the chroine handle and waited.

Suddenly, a thousand invigorating jets of warm, pulsating water hits his body. Cares and worries seemed to melt away beneath the cascading

With every fun-filled, scientifically designed droplet, he grew stronger, sexier, more appealing. Within minutes, tingles of pleasure turned to waves of ecstasy as the famous showerhead you've seen on TV awakened nerve endings dormant since his first slow dance in junior

From somewhere beyond the steamy glass, Ray Charles began singing "Make Me Fell So Good." Roger's body swayed to the pounding music as invisible layers of bacteria and dead skin slid down the drain.

As advertised, the fully adjustable sprayer cleared his mind, unclogged his arteries and enriched his life until every dream had been fulfilled. Feeling in charge of his own destiny for perhaps the first time in his miserable existence, he grinned at the hand-held shower massage that had become his best friend ... his life support system . . . the puppy he never owned . . .

HE HAD never felt so alive.

Rippling with new-found energy, brimming with self-esteem, he stepped confidently out of the shower stall, grabbed his briefcase and jogged the 11/2 miles to work in just under six minutes. Gripping the door handle as if to rip it off the hinges, he set his jaw for a big pay raise and burst into the office . . . totally Fortunately, his body was so clean, so vibrant, that it literally glowed with good health. Surrounded by a protective aura of white light, no one noticed he was stark naked until about lunchtime when the rosy skin tones faded under a buildup of airborne pollution, dust and sloughed-off skin cells.

And that, my friends, is just one example of a normal guy losing his head and his job over pulsating jet action. I could share dozens of similar episodes of compulsive shower behavior, but the point is obvious these devices must be approached with caution!

After all, the ad campaign promises a pleasure so intense that legislation to have it banned is pending in three southern states. Can you blame them? The TV commercial is so, well, so stimulating that I had to take a cold shower myself before I could settle down and finish watching "The Brady Bunch Reunion."

OUR FASCINATION with showers goes back to the ancient Romans who used to hang a goat skin filled with water over their heads and pierce it with a fork. First used by Julius Caesar, this crude shower gave rise to the expression "fork it over."

We've all experienced the acoustic enhancement of singing in the shower. This dramatic blend of reverb and echo is a record producer's dream. In fact, before the renovation of the acoustically perfect Orchestra Hall, the DSO tried squeezing all 65 musicians into a shower stall to cut an album. After 25 priceless violins were destroyed by water and steam, future shower recordings were limited to brass ensembles only.

In 1855, David Livingstone set out to experience the ultimate shower and wound up discovering Victoria Falls-Located in south-central-Africa, the Zambezi River drops 420 feet to the rocks below. Fed up with the weak water pressure in his London flat, Dr. Livingstone stood under the torrent and shampooed. Unfortunately, he lost five inches in height. and most of his hair.

While arguments still rage about the best shower, all critics agree that the worst shower is the Chinese water torture. In this fiendish procedure, water is poured onto a prisoner's head, one drop at a time for days on end. Headaches, hallucinations and insanity result. Today, this cruel punishment has been replaced by forcing the victim to watch Willard Scott read the weather.

Suppose your significant other decided to conserve water and boycott soap for about a month. Unless you owned the mineral rights to their scalp, life around your house would be pretty unbearable. Which brings us to my Fifth Law of Personal Hygiene: "If we don't eat, we don't live. If we don't shower, we live alone."

Dear Barbara,

I have been married 22 years, I am writing this letter because the holidays have made me, again, acutely aware of how sorry I am that I did not marry a man of my own religious persuasion. Dear Alone in My Faith,

Your feelings are valid. There are many who feel as you do. However, there are many others who do not feel this way and are able to leave their tradition without pain.

Part of the problem is that people don't really know each-other until they marry them. Many have thought that the uncertainties inherent in any marriage could be avoided by the couple's co-habitating before the commitment. This has not worked. Couples who have lived together are more likely, not less likely, to get divorced.

In addition, you may have been quite young at the time of your marriage. When couples are young, they are more prone to infatuation. Infatuation takes away good reality testing. It is very hard to make favorable decisions without reality test-

Tom Andras, 29, of Holly, a former top amateur skateboarder and pioneer in the sport of snowboarding, sees the halfpipe as kind of a winterized skateboarding adventure.

The tricks Andras speaks of include front and backside aerials (flying high above the lip of the wall and landing back in the run), handplants (traveling up to the lip, doing a oncarmed handstand and landing back on the run) and board slides (making the bottom of the board slide across the lip and then travel back into the

Ridley finds nichewith adult humor

By Michelle Michael special writer

When Mike Ridley performs, he tends to keep a straight face. But don't think his somber stare fools an audience.

Just as Ridley winds up a legitimate "American Pie," fans expect an attitude check, one of the comedian's off-color trademarks that usually leads into a dirty ditty.

In song, Ridley reveals his reason for his special love in "Rubber Doll" and talks about baseball's foul play and misfortunes in "Ain't it a Shame" — singles that radio stations WRIF and WDFX spin regularly.

He classifies his act as 'bar material," adult humor that he performs in local pubs, colleges and comedy clubs, including the Comedy Castle in Royal Oak, owned by older brother Mark.

"When I go to the Comedy Castle, I do clean stuff," said Ridley, 37. In bars, it's another story.

"You get 99.9 percent of the people gung ho and a couple walk out," said Ridley, who would rather see people offended by his material than bored from it.

Although "Birth Control to Mayor 'Young" and "Fairway to Heaven" aro other parodies often plucked from his acoustic guitar, Ridley is serious about straight music.

"I'M MORE OF a musician than a comedian," Ridley said.

Ridley is cutting his first album with R&A Records, a half live, half studio recording. R & A is the same. label for Ridley's "Rubber Doll" and "Ain't it a Shame" singles_

The Northern Michigan University graduate is slowly pursuing a master's degree at Wayne State University in addition to finishing a suspense drama novel.

NOW, HE ALSO caters to college groups, on and off campus, substituting lyrics for an alma mater shouted from the crowd, often poking fun at the school's stereotype. Ridley also takes requests, and is surprised at: selections like Jim Croce and James Taylor.

"College crowds are so into the things now that I was into," he said. Ridley wants to shift his act exclu-

Environment reflects internal anxieties

Q. I have read innumerable books about organizing and probably know as much as you do about it, yet I have a perpetual clutter around me. I have started a million different reminder systems, calendars, filing. systems, etc., but I never follow. through on any of them. What am I doing wrong?

A. The answer to what you are doing wrong is fairly easy: You are sabotaging yourself. The answer to why you are doing it is more complex. There are many possible reasons, so let me discuss some of them.

Your environment is a reflection of your internal anxieties. That means that what is in you controls the order around you, not the other way around. One deadly combination of internal anxieties can be rebellion and a feeling of being a failure. Too often people have bought into putdowns they have received in the

Look back at your childhood. Was' there a strong parent or other authority figure who insisted that you keep things neat and tidy? Did this become a constant battle? When you did clean things up, were you given credit for it - or did the other person criticize you for doing an inadequate job and/or re-do the work themselves?

It's not unusual for a child to rebel in that situation. Not only do they defiantly try to get out of cleanup work, they also feel like a failure because any efforts they did make were not acknowledged.

Instead of appreciation, they were repeatedly criticized for their work not being up to adult standards. Not only does this discourage the child, it can also become a self-fulfilling prophesy.

As the child matures into adulthood, he becomes afraid to tackle cleaning or straightening jobs, telling himself that he is incapable of doing it "right." He believes himself to be a failure and, without consclously realizing it, sets out to prove it. For instance, regardless of what he tackles he may leave one portion of it undone.

This is not too much of a problem during high school and college because many young adults go through stages of disorder during that time? The problem becomes apparent when the person begins the adult era of his life when order becomes more important.

Even though intellectually he may desperately want to get organized and feel successful, emotionally he is still carrying his childhood baggage - his belief that he is incapable of being well organized and does not "deserve" to be successful, since he is such a "failure."

No organizing system in the world can help this type of person until he has dealt with his internal anxieties, and dwelling on blaming the authority figure will be counter-productive as well. Rather, he must take an objective view of how he has been sabotaging himself and deal with his beliefs about himself.

If you identify with the foregoing, counseling may be very helpful.

Event stitches together memories

Do a pair of old shoes belong in a museum? Should home-made underwear be enshrined in an exhibit?

"Absolutely," says Henry Ford Museum. What's more, it's devoting an entire special weekend to a funfilled look at what Americans have worn through the centuries.

The Feb. 24 and 25 event, "What" We Wore: Aprons to Zoot Suits," focuses on how Americans have dressed in their everyday lives and why. Fashion shows, slide lectures, demonstrations and special tours will explore how clothing's functions and appeals have varied over time.

During the "Outrageous Outfits' fashion show, museum visitors will see everything from a present-day punk rocker to a genteel lady clothed in a circa 1785 empire gown. The presentation-spotlights not only fashions considered extraordinary for their time period, but the conclusions observers might have drawn about the wearer as well.

JUST FOR FUN, the museum is hosting a Wildest Tie Contest, with visitors invited to bring in their most-outlandish neckwear. Each day, the wildest tie will be decided by popular vote, and winners will receive a weekend getaway stay at the Ritz-Carlton Dearborn

More seriously, visitors are encouraged to bring their memories and their photos of particular pieces of clothing that were meaningful to them. An Oral History table will be set up to collect reminiscences about that fringed leather vest someone brought back from Woodstock or the -elegant-ballgown-worn-during-amarriage proposal.

The weekend also offers a firstever public glimpse of the Greenfield Village Period Clothing Department, where old-style garments worn by dozens of village workers are researched and reproduced.

Visitors can meet the people who make copies of historic apparel accurate down to the last stitch and learn how they do it in a fascinating tour and slide lecture. Another slide lecture provides a rare look at the museum's clothing collection. The old-fashioned crafts of making bonnets and men's clothing will contrast interestingly with a demonstration of the modern-day process of design as presented by Sarah Vaughn, Center for Creative Studies. She'll be looking for audience participation in her demonstration.

THE KIDS WILL enjoy paper dolls sporting costumes from several time periods; a clothing station will offer the opportunity to try on the reproduction fashions of yesteryear. A story teller will weave wonderful tales about cloth and the clothing worn long ago.

"What We Wore: Aprons to Zoot Suits" is one of many "special weekends" scheduled at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in 1990. These weekends reflect both the scope of the museum's collections and visitors' interests, with activities ranging from intimate demonstra-

An unusual review appeared in the Music Jopurnal two years after her performance in the Liszt B Minor Sonata, "Everyone plays the Liszt Sonata: some play it to show how loud they can bang, some to show that they can get through its flendish planistic difficulties, Claudio Arrau, beyond all these games decades ago, played it recently for its deep philosophy. Dokovska played it for love. We shall not soon forget this performance"

GENERAL MANAGEMENT SERVICE

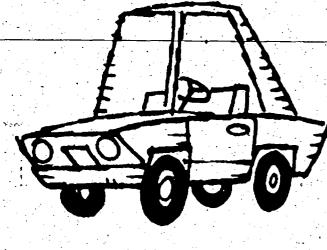

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

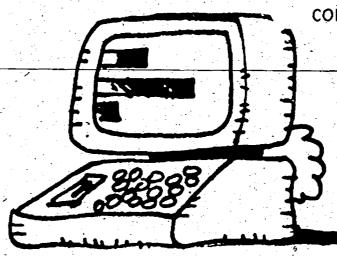

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your Item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales resentative.

Michael Horowitz heads The Selective Group, Farmington Hills, a major force in residential construction. Selective will build housing at Huntington Falls.

Developing

By Doug Funke staff writer

Three heavy hitters on the suburban development scene and the largest life insurance company in metro Detroit will team up to build what is believed to be the biggest single mixed-use project ever attempted in southeastern Michigan.

They call it Huntington Falls -930 acres of what now is mostly vacant county land in the south-central part of Northville Township.

Over a 10-year period, the consortium plans to build:

- Upwards of 1,200 housing units including homes, condominiums and apartments.
- Recreational facilities including a Lee Trevino-designed, semipublic golf course, riding stables, tennis courts and pools.
- site's southern perimeter for research and development and light industrial use, a smattering of offices and commercial buildings like restaurants, specialty stores and convenience stores.

THE TEAM reads like a who's who in the development business.

man of an automotive supply company with business connections around the world.

Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. in Farmington Hills, the largest in the metro area with assets of $2.7 billion in 1988, according to Crain's Detroit Business, is a major financing partner.

"WE BELIEVE this is a unique opportunity to do a unique project," DeMattia said. "A project of this magnitude will be a challenge. The build-out cost of the project is $1.5 billion. That's the total of everything when completed.".

The development will extend east of Sheldon Road to Hines Park south of Brooklane Golf Club. It is basically bounded on the other sides by Five Mile, Beck and Six Mile.

It will take at least a year to final-the managing partner for Huntington Falls. DeMattia has made ize plans and obtain all necessary approvals and permits before work > begins, according to DeMattia. Part of the agreement between the consortium and the county executive's office calls for the purchase price of $31.7 million to be paid within seven months after the county commission ratifies the deal.

> DeMattia declined to discuss financing specifics.

> "The golf course starts first, the main entrance, some residential and some non-residential. We'll go on as the market dictates. We'll be opening, as we progress, different sec> tions," DeMattia said. EACH PARTNER has a specific responsibility in addition to an interest in the project as a whole.

DeMattia will tend to most of the developing tasks. Horowitz will be in parks. charge of housing. Prechter will concentrate on marketing and finding tenants for the technology, industrial and office buildings. "I personally put the team together. Gary (Roberts) and myself have spent thousands of hours putting this together, putting it into harmony with governmental units, nature, the market," DeMattia sald

Roberts is vice president for development at DeMattia.

Houses, condos and apartments will be built comparable to what's in the Northville community now, Horowitz said.

Houses could cost $300,000-$400,000, condos from $200,000-$500,000 and apartments rent at $800-$900 per month depending on the existing market, he said.

"We hope to have a fairly broad price range. All (units) will be upscale for their type. Remember, we're a couple of years out. We have to be flexible subject to market conditions at the time," Horowitz said.

THE CONSORTIUM wants to refurbish some of the dilapidated buildings that have architectural character east of Sheldon into condos or town houses, Roberts said. Those buildings had been part of the Wayne County Child Development decor. Bob Kapoun, a Sante Fe dealer in American Indian trade blankets, de--scribes "Lonesome Dove" as the mini-series that made the bolo tie respectable and the cowboy look collectible.

What is the look?

Fascination for the West ranges from real cowboy gear to "cowboy funk," artifacts a la Hopalong Cassidy and Roy Rogers.

Cry Baby Ranch in Denver, one purveyor of cowboy kitsch, stocks chenille bedspreads with bucking broncos, covered wagon lamps and seen since childhood and they've forgotten about it," said Roxanne Thurman, co-owner of the store that opened a year ago.

Bates Indian print cotton blankets that sold for $2 to $3 new, and cost around $40 several years ago, Thurman says, sell for between $125 and $550 at the store.

At Old West Antiques and Cowboy Collectibles in Cody, Wyo., Brian and Diane Lebel have devoted a nook in the shop to cowboy funk. In the corner, ceramic cowboy boots support a lamp. A shiny horse clock sits on the shelf. Nearby stands a whip-stitched lampshade with a color photo of Roy Roger's palomino Trigger.

TEN YEARS AGO, the shop's

oillows made from cowboy curtains. -- Naugahyde chair with wagon wheel "They're pieces people haven't arms and a saddle stitched on the back would have looked like a white elephant. Today, there's a market

> The stuff makes Lebel cringe, but some customers love it, she says. She manages the store while her husband travels to shows searching for both authentic and funky gear.

"I sell an awful lot of people one pair of spurs or one pair of chaps to hang on a wall," she said.

At the gift shop of the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum in Los Angeles, the public is "crazy" for the cowboy look, according to Susan De-Land, merchandising director for the museum.

"It's the big new hot trend. Southwestern is really on its way sort of saturated the market and .

people are bored with it." The museum carries inexpensive spurs for coffee table displays, Old West furniture, lamps, Pendleton and hide pillows and reproductions of Santa Fe Railroad china with a Western design. "We've tested the waters and there's a tremendous interest in home decor with the Old West motif," DeLand says. Items range from authentic-looking to campier, tren-dier pieces. At the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyo., visitors are buying souvenirs in record quantitles. "Our gift shops have doubled in sales in the last three years," says Everett Diehl, the museum's marketing di-out," she said. "Pastel colors have rector. In the last year and a half, the museum has added 20 different posters from the Wild West show

> THE MARKET FOR serious western art is also rebounding. A Remington oil painting sold for nearly $5 million at a Manhattan art auction in December. A Russell brought $1.1 million.

> "There's a new market out there that are buying. There are new players," said Billings, Mont., gallery owner Thomas Minckler. The last boom in the early 1980s was fueled by oil money, says Minckler, who describes his own business as "quietly and discreetly booming."

Cottage industries have popped up to cater to Old West decorating

One such business is Antier Creations, an Ennis company that designs antler wall sconces, coffee tables and chandeliers, using shed antlers of deer, elk and moose.

Lee Poole, owner of Hole in the Wall Galleries in Ennis and Big Sky, says he and his partner Don Pilotte. realized there was a market for the pieces and started the company within the last month or so.

Their first major project was an elk antier chandelier designed for the Huntley Lodge at Big Sky, which contains 12 sets of elk antlers.

There was also a contingency clause regarding obtaining financing. The seller's Realtor said that the seller would not go ahead with the deal if there were any contingencies. I feel badly because I wanted the unit. Do you have any advice?

I would be wary of purchasing any plece of real estate without a full and complete inspection of the premises. If the seller is not willing to allow you to inspect the premises, it may be the best deal that you ever made by not getting into the deal. It common elements. > I am thinking about buying an apartment and converting it to a condominium project. There are approximately 125 units. Do you have any suggestions that I should look to in considering the purchase of the apartment complex?

Obviously, you should be totally aware of the condition of the apartment premises before making your purchase. Get a history of the maintenance activities performed at the apartment complex and hire an architect or an engineer to inspect the premises to tell you what the useful is not unreasonable nor uncustomary—life of the major component parts of for purchasers to demand inspection the buildings will be. Also, consider not only of the unit that they are how the apartment can be divided buying in the condominium, but per- for purposes of condominiumizing haps the entire condominium com- the project, including how you will plex, at least to the extent of the assign responsibility between the as-maintenance and repair responsibilities. Determine such things as whether there is a commonly metered electrical or gas facility, whether there is adequate parking to meet the anticipated needs of a condominium project, among other things. Also, be aware of the obligations which you will assume as a developer who is converting a condominium project.

I am thinking about developing a condominium in Macomb County, but am concerned about potential hazardous waste problems. Do you have any suggestions?

You should be concerned about the probability of mercury or other pollutants in the soil in certain areas of that county. Obviously, discretion being the better part of valor, you should have a thorough environmental analysis made of the premises before you construct the condominium. Developers have an additional exposure to liability because of the environmental issues regarding soil contamination. Get yourself a proper consultant and expert and do your homework before you construct the condominium. Hopefully, you will have done your homework even before you buy the property so that you do not end up with a polluted red herring.

SUBURBANLIFE'S MONTHLY ALBUM

Just for Brides

The Monthly Album is published the third Monday of each month for the announcements of engagements and weddings.

Engagement announcements will be accepted no later than 45 days prior to the wedding. Wedding announcements must be submitted within 60 days after the wedding. All announcements are run on a space available, first-come, first-served basis.

Information sent must be legible and include a contact telephone number so if there is a question the staff has a number to call.

Photos submitted should be black and white glossies, preferable 5x7 inches in size. Color photos can be submitted and will be accepted but they do not reproduce as well.

Due to the volume of photographs handled, the newspaper will not be responsible for any that may get lost or damaged. Photos can be picked up after publication in the Farmington Observer office, or, if a self-addressed sufficiently stamped envelope is received with the photo, it will be returned.

Engagement and wedding announcements pertinent to Livonia, Redford, Garden City, Westland, Farmington and Farmington Hills are to be addressed to Loraine McClish, in care of The Farmington Observer, 21898 Farmington Road, Farmington 48024.

Inquiries are taken by McClish or Rose Butler in the Farmington Observer office, 4"7-5450.
