Plan cuts station closings

By Tedd Schnelder staff writer

A new firefighter manning plan designed to eliminate most station closings in Westland was scheduled to begin today.

The plan, announced by Mayor Robert Thomas at a press conference Tuesday afternoon, is "not the ultimate cure for the problem, but a much better plan than what we had (in 1988 and 1989)," Thomas sald.

Thomas has been working on a plan to end the periodic closing of one or two of the city's four fire stations for up to 24 hours at a time since he took office Jan. 1.

Statistics compiled by the fire department and released by Thomas Tuesday showed that at least one station was closed on 352 of the first 394 days after the 1988 minimum manning agreement was implemented. Two stations were closed on 56 of those days, according to the statis-

The situation wasn't getting much better this year, Thomas said, with at least one station closed on 39 days through Feb. 25.

THE MAYOR postponed announcement of the new arrangement earlier this month after the Westland Firefighters Association raised concerns about the plan.

Kevin Riley, union president, said he doubted the earlier version of the plan would have been supported by the union and raised the possibility

Travel Scene gets you there

Somebody once said that if you come home as happy as you leave, you have had a good vacation.

The trick to enjoying a vacation, as many of us have found, is proper planning. With that in mind the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers is launching Travel Scene, which you will find on the back of this week's Section B.

You told us through our research data that travel was a subject you were more interested in reading about than any other - that's correct, any other. Because travel is so important to you, we want this to be your section, with information you can use to help you come home hap-

This section will not only contain informative and useful information, but much of it will be written by people who understand your travel concerns — your neighbors.

That's correct. Each week at least one feature will be from the perspective of a person from the Observer & Eccentric circulation area. They will tell you not only what they found at the locations you are planning to visit, but they will give you useful hints on where to go and what to avold when you get there.

Today's feature is written by Birmingham resident John Castle, who ventured down to the small Central American country of Belize. We know you will find his story fascinat-

To make this section complete, we want to hear from you. We want to hear what you think of Travel Scene, what areas you would like to read about and where you've been that you think your neighbors would be interested in visiting.

We also plan on writing about all kinds of travels from all different perspectives: the business traveler, senior citizens, families with children and young adults.

Variety of travel from a suburban point of view is the story of Travel Scene. So sit back and enjoy.

Fire chief says new plan is workable of a legal challenge if it was implediented.

Thomas said a copy of the revised plan was to have been sent to the union Tuesday afternoon.

"I would hope they (the union) wouldn't challenge it," Thomas said. I think this will provide the maximum service and the best level of shfety for our citizens."

Thomas said the new manning directive would eliminate the closing of two stations and reduce by 90 percent the days when one station is closed. He said one station will still be closed "one or two days each month at'most."

Under the plan all four stations will be open when there are 16 firefighters on duty, with one station staffed only by a captain and sergeant. With 15 firefighters on duty, two stations wouldn't be fully staffed.

A provision to run a rescue vehicle out of a fourth station with 14 firefighters on duty was scrapped because of union concerns about safety, Thomas said.

ALSO, THE administration agreed to keep minimum staffing at 14 as opposed to 13 firefighters "provided

No new firefighters will be hired under the plan, Thomas said. The mayor said the fire department has 57 people in the firefighting division (out of 63 total in the department), the same number it had in 1972 when the four stations were completed and staffed.

employees will work overtime."

The city's four fire stations are at Ford and Carlson (the main station), Newburgh and Palmer, Merriman and Ann Arbor Trail, and Palmer west of Merriman.

Fire Chief Larry Lane and Kent Herbert, the city's personnel/opera-tions director, also attended the press conference. Both said the plan was workable. Lane said the new manning arrangement should improve the department's response time, which he called critical. "Every 19 seconds a fire doubles in size and to gain the quickest response time is our ultimate goal," he Effectiveness of the plan will be reviewed in 30-40 days, Lane said. Herbert said the language for the new arrangement was "lifted right out of the contract" regarding manpower safety.

The union negotiated a minimum manning clause into its contract with the city in February 1988 after failing to gain voter approval of a charter amendment to increase the minimum number of on-duty firefighters the previous fall.

THE CONTRACT requires that a minimum of two firefighters per vehicle respond to every call. Firefighters say the provision is necessary to ensure firefighter safety and adequate response to fire calls.

The periodic closing of fire stations was instituted to fulfill the requirements of the agreement. The current union contract expires June

 Lane said Tuesday station closings were necessary more often than originally thought due to "retirements, vacation time" and other personnel matters.

Senior campus start up planned

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

Preliminary construction of roads and utilities for an often-delayed $175 million senior citizens campus development at Carlson and Marquette could begin by the end of the year, developers said Monday.

"Assuming we can get everything else in order, we're looking to start by the end of 1990," said Dr. Allen Waldman, who with Dr. Arnold Shapero heads the development group that has been planning the complex since 1987. -

The developers met with the Westland City Council and members of Mayor Robert Thomas' administration in a study session Monday night to update them on the project. Architects and engineers for the complex also gave presentations.

Mitigation of wetlands on the site and securing a required certificate of need from the state for a nursing home have been the major hurdles for the developers.

The wetlands situation is settled and Shapero said Monday that there has been "tremendous progress" on obtaining the certificate of need. He said final approval could come in try under the auspices of the John three to four months.

WALDMAN SAID the development group should close on the purchase of 4614 acres of city-owned land by spring. He gave a ballpark figure of $950,000-$1 million for the land deal.

The purchase agreement between developers and the city, which has been extended several times by the Westland City Council, calls for an offer of at least $1 million.

Plans presented by architect Samuel Havis (Havis-Glovinsky Associates) Monday call for a campus of 10 buildings, including:

• A 12-story independent residential apartment tower

• Three mid-rise independent apartment buildings

• Three mid-rise congregate housing buildings

• A building that will house a nursing home and Alzheimer's disease treatment and research facility

• A wellness center • A 55,000 square-foot retail shopping complex. The Alzheimer's center will be one of nine regional centers in the coun-

Douglas French Foundation of Los Alamitos, Calif., near Long Beach. The foundation, organized by the wife of a prominent California surgeon who died after contracting Alzhelmer's, concentrates on research and treatment of the disease.

THE FIRST phase of the project will be one of the mid-rise residential buildings and the second could be the wellness center, Shapero said. Waldman sald construction of the entire complex would take five-eight

"We're calling it a wellness center because we don't want it to be thought of as a geriatric clinic," Waldman said. He said the center will provide medical and social services for senior citizens and their families.

It will be available to area seniors living outside the complex as well as an estimated 2,500 residents who will live in the completed campus, Waldman sald.

There are about 350 seniors living in the adjacent Thomas Taylor Towers and 450 seniors in the federally subsidized Willow Creek Apartments on Newburgh between Ford and Marquette.

Waldman said a marketing study done by the developers indicated a senior citizen population of 200,000 within a 10-mile radius of the com-

Plans presented by Havis showed all residential units with large balconies or patios facing the center of the landscaped campus grounds. In addition, the buildings will have ground-floor dining facilities and a lounge on each floor with couches and television for residents.

"The idea is to get people out and moving through the building, not have them live as prisoners in their own apartment," Waldman said.

"WE DON'T SEE this as a place where you go to die, but where you go to continue to live,"he said.

The main entrance for the campus will be off Marquette, opposite John Glenn High School. A secondary entrance will run off Carlson.

Shapero said the campus will eventually provide 500-600 jobs in Westland and could tie in with health-care programs offered from the William D. Ford Vocational/ Technical Center.

recognize it as a camcorder with all the accessories. The professional video equipment, about $3,500 worth, will be used in the department's Juvenile Firesetter Intervention program. It was donated this month by Joseph Benyo, administrative assistant to the Westland City Council and a retired fire department battalion chief.

The equipment will be used to record interviews with children who have demonstrated problems playing with fire, said Battalion Chief George Riley, the department's fire education officer.

"It will help us better deal with children in jeopardy," Riley said.

He said videotaping the interviews will eliminate the need for two fire officials to be present, which had been necessary because of liability problems.

"BECAUSE THE room where we do the interviews is so small, we've found that having two (officials) present has been intimidating to the children, making it more difficult for them to express themselves," Riley said.

In addition, Riley said the taped parental consent, can be used by compared to other needs.

Guns found in raid of ex-UAW official's home

The Westland home of a former UAW official, who is awaiting trial in connection with a freeway shooting of a union rival, was raided by federal agents Monday who were looking for weapons.

The agents found four rifles, two handguns, false police identification, and a small amount of narcotics in the home of Richard Debs on the 33000 block of Melton, the government said.

Debs was indicted in September on federal charges that he hired a person who wounded Jesse Gray in the neck on Dec. 29, 1988, as Gray was driving on I-94 to the General Motors' Willow Run assembly plant.

The indictment also charged that Debs solicited people to threaten and assault Robert Harlow and Gray to keep them from opposing him for UAW Local 1776 presidency.

AFTER HE was indicted, Debs was ordered to give up any weapons he owns and was released on personal bond.

cop calls

POLICE arrested a 29-yearold Westland man Saturday after he allegedly assaulted his 70year-old mother in their apartment on the 37700 block of Greenwood.

The woman received a cut on her arm, but wasn't seriously injured, police said.

The woman called police at 4:30 p.m. from a pay phone a few blocks from the apartment and met them in her car on Newburgh, south of Ford.

She told officers that her son had come home intoxicated and "gone berserk" in the apartment, throwing a large, upholstered chair at her. The woman said her arm was cut when her son grabbed her by the wrist and twisted her arm.

She said she was afraid to remain in the apartment because her son had a knife.

Officers went to the apartment and found the son lying on the sofa. He appeared intoxicated and had a sheathed knife tucked inside his belt.

Police said the man admitted throwing the chair at his mother.

A RESIDENT of the Woodcrest Villa apartments, off Wayne Road south of Joy, told police someone stole her 1987 Cadillac Sedan DeVille from the complex last weekend.

The locked car was stolen from a carport between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 5 a.m. Sunday, the

With Oxendine's arrest, his business, Chuck's Auto Repair, which operated in violation of city ordinances at his home, has been shut down.

Oxendine was arrested earlier this month, about eight months after the Western Wayne Auto Theft Elimination Effort headed by the Michigan State Police raided the home and Romulus police officer Jeffrey Keefer, assigned to the regional unit, provided most of the testimony against Oxendine.

THE REGIONAL unit received a tip from an FBI agent that Oxendine was dealing in stolen auto parts from the Westland storage facility, Keefer said.

"The FBI agent went to the storage facility and the employees there said Mr. Oxendine had replaced an engine in a car that was on the premises," he said. "Then the agent called me."

After determining the vehicle identification number on the engine had been altered, Keefer said the Mr. Stor-It employees put him in touch with Oxendine who they knew as "Mark."

"I called Chuck about getting an engine and he was going to check on it," he said. "He came and we went to the storage area. He removed the engine from the storage space and we went to Burnly. The engine was transferred to the truck I was driving." Following the $600 engine purchase. Keefer said the engine was inspected and "the VIN was obviously altered and stamped over." After determining the correct VIN, he said the engine was found to be from a stolen car that was subsequently re-

Based on that information, Keefer sald search warrants were obtained for the residence and storage facili-

DURING THE two raids, officers seized 30 engines and 66 transmisslons, along with about $20,000 in automobile theft tools and equipment and several semi automatic assault weapons.

Records were also seized which lead officers to the car owners who had work done by Oxendine along with evidence of $51,000 in unpaid sales, single business and personal Keefer testifled that all of the parts confiscated at the Merriman facility, had altered VINs.

Similarly, the officer said all but one of the transmissions and engines seized at the Oxendine residence had altered VINs. He said that the original VINs couldn't be determined on a number of parts, making their origins unknown.

In other instances, Keefer sald original numbers could be determined through process of elimination and use of VIN information supplied to the National Automobile Theft Bureau by auto manufactur-

Four sets of stamping dies, both numbers and letters, were also selzed from the Oxendine house and garage on Burnly, according to

About a dozen persons testified that they paid an average of $1,500 to Oxendine to install engines in their vehicles. Keefer said all but one of those engines had VINs altered to the extent that the origination of the engine couldn't be deter-

WHETHER THE engines and transmissions had no VINs or didn't have legitimate VINs, the intent was clearly to mislead, said Wayne County assistant prosecutor Rosemary Gordon.

"People testified that they took a car to Mr. Oxendine for an engine," she said. "None of them have legitimate VINs. No one saw him do the work but we have demonstrated that Mr. Oxendine either altered the numbers or aided and abétted."

Although there are indications that Oxendine had others working for him, Gordon said they could not be linked to the charges and there was no indication they were controlling the operation.

Since some of the parts traced to cars stolen as far back as 1985, she said the people responsible for stealing the vehicles haven't been identifled. Gordon added that almost all of the stolen vehicles, many recovered with the engines and transmissions missing, were stolen around Detroit.

Defense attorney John Goldsaugh didn't argue on the receiving and concealing charges, indicating that would be a matter of fact t gued at circuit court.

DISTRICT JUDGE Richard Hammer didn't agree with Goldpaugh's argument that the chop shop charges should be a single charge, based on a single operation run from two locations.

Goldpaugh also argued unsuccessfully that the state statute regarding altering VINs deals with vehicles and not components of vehicles. He sought a reduction of some of the VIN altering charges to a misdemeanor.

"The exhibits clearly indicate the VINs had been altered. Anyone seeing them would know they were hot items," said Hammer.

Since his arrest, Oxendine has been jailed in lieu of $75,000 cash bond. Hammer refused to reduce the bond but agreed to refer the case to the defendant screening unit for re-

"I believe that the $75,000 cash or surety bond is quite exorbitant under the circumstances," Goldpaugh said. "My client was aware of the charges pending in excess of eight months and he didn't rup."

CITING CRIMINAL convictions dating back to 1950, Gordon said she was planning to file charges against Oxendine as a habitual offender.

"He would be looking at life for that. A substantial cash bond is needed so he will be here," she said. Oxendine is scheduled for arraignment in Detroit Recorder's Court at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday, March 13. He is also under investigation by the federal bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, relating to illegal weapons.

In fact, we have a warrant out for his arrest. Because no one should be able to do things like this to an animal and get away with it.

On December 15, in response to an emergency call, Michigan Humane Society (MHS) cruelty investigators arrived at a house that had been abandoned by its former tenant for over a month. There, among the trash and other garbage the owner had no further use for, they found lke. A fivemonth-old puppy lying huddled behind a locked bathroom door. Lying because he was too weak to stand. So malnourished he could barely move his chest to breathe.

He had been locked inside that bathroom for over a month. Without food. Without heat. And with only the water from a rusty toilet to keep him alive. MHS investigators called it the closest to death they'd ever seen an animal. Yet Ike was fortunate. A kitten found in another part of the house was already dead.

This kind of willful neglect and cruelty is more than an outrage. It's a crime.

And that's why your help is so important to us. Your contribution to the Michigan Humane Society helps us fight for stronger legislation and tougher prosecution of animal abusers. To fight back for those who can't. And to make sure that this kind of crime doesn't go unpunished.

Your contribution also ensures that when we finally meet the man who locked up Ike, we can do the same for him.

When does social drinking become alcoholism?

By Janice Brunson staff writer

Nine men, social drinkers drawn together by a common concern about their alcohol use, recently spent a trying weekend together confronting drinking patterns that are creating serious personal problems.

Among them was Rusty, a natty, church-going yuppie from Southfield; Carl, a successful, middle-aged businessman; Kevin, a Farmington Hills lad with a history of mental illness and substance abuse; and Brian, a witty Troy sales agent who arrived at an introductory meeting the Thursday before smelling suspiciously of alcohol.

The weekend, a unique overnight program conceived by two 48th District Court judges and implemented in a hospital setting a year ago by the Maplegrove Treatment Center in West Bloomfield, assists drinkers in assessing whether they are carrying social use to excess or have crossed the fine line into early alcoholism.

"Everyone here is not chemically dependent. But everyone here has suffered negative consequences as a result of mind altering substances.

You're at a fork in the road," Maplegrove counselor Larry Campbell said on day one of the encounter.

For some 40 hours, Campbell and Maplegrove colleague Chuck Coyne combined personal experience as recovering alcoholics with lectures, videos and group discussion to guide Rusty and the others to enhanced personal awareness. Each compiled a "personal assessment," shared later with the others.

"IT'S LIKE I'M on a mission to destroy myself," said Lincoln, in explaining his need for the program. A Detroit laborer from Louisiana who is considering returning to the south, Lincoln was sentenced to the program following a third drunk driving conviction.

Five of those present have three convictions each. In addition to Lincoln, there is Rusty and Brian, Victor, a former Olympic racer who nine years ago came to the United States from eastern Europe, and Paul, a Southfield insurance supervisor who once spent nine days in the Oakland County jail after a second excellent English, has two convictions and Jerry, resentful of his harsh sentence, has one. Convicted in an Oakland County Court, Jerry was sentenced to the program, fined $850, placed on probation for one year and lost his driving license for six months.

"There were extenuating circumstances," he complained. His father had died the week before. Still, Jerry consumes a six-pack daily and experiences blackouts and mood swings. Kevin, who during high school spent 18 months in a facility for troubled youth, was sentenced to the program for underage possession of beer. He is now 21.

MADD tells its tale of sadness

"My little brother Steve was killed a year ago by a drunk driver."

So began Terese Vietto's terse and emotional delivery before a small group of participants in the Maplegrove Alternatives Program for convicted drunk drivers and others interested or otherwise in need of such

Steven Slowik was a 17-year-old high school senior when he was killed during the late afternoon of Feb. 3, 1989. The car he was driving was struck head-on by a pickup truck driven by a 32-year-old father of four who has since been convicted of negligent homicide and sentenced to six months in jail, five years probation and 100 hours community ser-

"Steven had come home from school and then went out with friends. He picked up a buddy, stopped at a yield sign and was hit 300 feet later. That was the end of Steven," said Vietto, with a catch in her voice.

Vietto was accompanied by mother Margaret Slowik and brother Tim, 15, a look-alike to the photo of older brother Steve the family passed about the small audience.

The family is a member of the Wayne County chapter of Mother's Against Drunk Driving and, as such, regularly speaks publicly on the subject of drinking and driving.

"BECAUSE OF THE negligence of someone else, my brother paid with his life. We were a close family. We're all paying for it and it's not getting easier. We're messed up bad. I get out of bed in the morning and it's a beautiful day. But not for me, not for Steve. He's not here," Vietto

"It's so hard to see someone so full of life, to see them dead. We didn't get to say we love you one more time. We didn't get to say goodbye. It's a hard thing to come to grips

"Steve will never get a (school) diploma. He'll never go to the prom. Steve was robbed of his life. He was an innocent victim." Vietto, Tim, brother Kevin, 21, and sisters Suzanne, 25, and Maureen Larson, 23, served as Steve's pall bearers. "We carried him down the aisle of a church in his coffin." In response to a question, Vietto said she does not believe the driver who killed Steve received a severe enough sentence. 'He should have gotten life. Murder is murder. He had free will.

'My advice is stay at home and drink. Get a designated driver. You can have fun without drinking."

'Growing through grief' copes with abandonment

(This is the fourth is a series by counselor Karyn Pasquel, founder and director of Foundational Living Inc., on "Growing through Grief." All rights reserved.)

One of the most horrible experiences a griever goes through is the feeling of abandonment.

Some of it may be misperceived, but unfortunately, much of it actually'does take place. And not just once, but several times in several ways throughout the first two years or so after the loss.

Remember how it seemed everybody was asking you if you needed anything the first couple of weeks after the funeral? Perhaps they just did things for you or were just there. Maybe you almost wished you could be left alone. Either way, it felt good to know people cared.

What happens two to three months later? At this point, you are probably feeling very depressed, alone and overwhelmed with death's reality. Now there are daily tasks requiring your attention, such as bills, yard work, car maintenance, child care, probably many things which were previously done by the one you lost.

You are involved, as the spouse, in insurance benefits, wills, stocks and bonds, maybe finding out about business and financial transactions you were not aware of and are now affected by.

Then there are the nagging inner thoughts about when to change utilities, credit cards, checking and savings accounts and other joint matters into one name.

THE VERY thought of having checks with only one name printed on them attacks the griever with a terrible aloneness.

Three to six months after the death, the loved one finds himself overwhelmed in all facets of his -being: the mind, which demands decisions and logic; the spirit, as the person wonders how or if God will get him through this, and feeling guilty for questioning Him; his emotions, which are totally haywire and unpredictable; and his body, which will rebel wherever it is weakest from the overload of stress to the entire system. .

Abandonment is often interpreted as rejection. In fact, it is not necessarily the same, but can be. I often hear it said, "Your friends will always be there . . . if they're your friends."

This is not always true. If a griever believes this, he may reject to a true friend who tries to return at a later date, because he did not understand how his "friend" could abandon him.

THINK FOR a moment. Who is it in the griever's social world that hutts the most when he sees that one in pain? Does it not make sense that the more a person cares for the griever, the worse he will feel when he sees him suffering?

How then does this one cope with his pain? He does not know how to help the griever. And he is afraid he'il say the wrong thing. The best way to not cause more problems, it seems, is to turn your head away.

The friend must believe the griever will be all right and then may avoid contact to avoid his own pain. It is human nature.

It does not mean they do not care for or love the griever. It does mean they are human and feel pain too. They also feel helpless. They can do practical tasks, but they cannot change the emotions, the turmoil, the grief they see. The griever feels rejected and abandoned. Do not close the doors on those who seem to abandon you. Remember, you alone have to work through your grief. Be patient with yourself and with others.

WORKSHOP

LEARN HOW TO MAKE YOUR HOME WORK FOR YOU.

Designing a home is not easy. Basic principles must be observed, no matter what your lifestyle or how much you wish to invest. During 4 two-hour sessions, Hudson's professional interior designers will pass their expertise on to you. Here's a week-by-week breakdown:

week one

History & Lifestyle. Learn about the history of interior design and explore your interests, hobbies, and your pattern of living. It's the most important basis for your decorating plan. Our personality surveys will give you surprising insights.

WEEK TWO

Floor Planning. You and your instructor will work with your floor plan to achieve a workable, livable room, taking into account traffic patterns, conversation areas and natural focal points.

WEEK THREE

Color, Backgrounds. First, learn how to use color to solve problems and create moods. You'll discuss how to make the most of your favorite colors and which colors work almost everywhere. Then we'll discuss ceilings, walls and floors. They are a big part of every room, and we'll study everything from carpet to mirrors.

week four

Accessories, Putting it all together. A quili. An antique chest with a high tech vase. Artwork you've acquired over the years. Learn how accents can bring a room to life. And finally you'll get to see an empty room furnished in logical stages. From furniture and rugs to valances and chandeliers.

Throughout the course, you'll be using an information filled manual that's yours to keep. See hundreds of slides of beautiful rooms. You'll be able to ask lots of questions and have the opportunity for personal consultations with a designer. Tuition is only $60. Classes are limited and will fill up fast, so enroll now. Program helps drinkers confront abuse, dependency referred by area courts, including 46 percent from Wayne County and 39 percent from Oakland County where offenders say sentences are harsher.

Over 95 percent of those attending have been men. Men are arrested for impaired driving far more often than women, according to Campbell, and social drinkers out for a night on the town are more likely to be arrested than are first-stage alcohol-

Many, like Carl and Kevin, are the offspring of alcoholic fathers. During intake, Carl was "astonished" to learn his mother was also likely alcoholic. She died of burst blood vessels in the throat, a condition common to cirrilosis of the liver, according to Coyne.

All participants are blood tested for cirrhosis and, based on previous experience, at least one in this group will test positive, likely someone overweight as a result of drinking.

In addition to alcohol abuse, some abuse other drugs as well, like Campbell, the counselor, who also abused marijuana. Kevin said he uses any drug available to him and Brian said he was once a heavy cocaine user.

WE'RE SEQUESTERED FOR the weekend and we're gonna talk about problems you've probably nev-. er talked about before," Campbell said, adding the program affords opportunity for recovery.

"You don't need to keep getting into the ring and get your ass kicked by mind altering substances," Campbell emphasized.

Coyne defined alcoholism: "If you cannot consistently predict when and how much you are going to drink, that's alcoholism."

Other points include:

• Alcoholism is a primary disease that can be described, is predictable and progressive, is permanent and is fatal if left untreated.

• If unchecked, the disease continues to worsen. If abstinence is followed by a new bout of drinking, old symptoms reappear almost immediately.

• Alcoholism results from a combination of environmental, physical, psychological and social conditions.

• Denial is a human defense mechanism periodically used by everyone. It becomes a negative force when used to excuse the use of mood altering substances.

• Recovery, a process that requires time, means actively choosing a different road.

Alcoholics tend to judge themselves more harshly than others. That leads to low self-esteem and severe loneliness, according to Coyne and Campbell.

During the afternoon of day two, participants shared written personal assessments

"I'M NOT OPERATING at 100 percent, or anything approaching that. I feel powerless. Denial city, said Carl, who, unlike several in the group, made a concerted effort to participate seriously in all parts of the program.

Paul, who blacks out and has had numerous auto accidents he is unable to recall said, "I told myself I'd never be in this position. But I am." His worst experience: fearing he was the driver sought by police following a fatal hit and run accident involving a child.

Jerry was philosophical. "I drink for a good feeling, which is a bunch of crap. You feel good if you do something worthwhile, contribute to mankind. It's time for a change."

Lincoln's wish was simple, to never again be arrested for drunk driving "cause I don't want to sit through this again.".

Rusty, a small business owner who has chalked up three arrests in five years after experiencing anxiety attacks in social settings, has not had a drink in 15 months. "I'm proud of that. I'm looking forward to the day when I'm off probation and can tell my family. Amal, blaming his two arrests on youthful poor judgment, "intends to do better. I'm working 60 hours a week and have new responsibilities. I'm 100 percent sure I'll never drink and drive again."

And that, Coyne and Campbell said, is what it's about.

Petitions seek override Exchange students need hosts of consent bill's veto

By Noreen Flack staff writer

Local pro-life groups are seeking statewide support for a petition drive that will attempt to override Gov. James Blanchard's Feb. 23 veto of the parental consent abortion bill.

The measure would have required pregnant girls age 17 and younger to. get written consent from at least one parent before getting an abortion.

In his veto message, Blanchard said he supports family communication but 'didn't want a pregnant girl; who was the victim of incest to have to go to her father to ask for an abor-

"This bill is nothing more than a thinly veiled attempt to take away a woman's right of choice and would. in fact, be destructive to families and place teenagers who face a crisis situation," the governor wrote.

"We were considering doing this six months ago," said Alice Radwick, chairman for the Committee for Parental Rights and a Livonia resident. "We had no reason to believe that Gov. Blanchard would let the bill pass."

"It's going to be more work than just going through the Legislature, and it may be more difficult, but it's the only-way," she added. ___

If the necessary signatures are obtained, a consent bill would go before the Legislature. If passed by a simple majority, the bill would have the force of law and could not be

The veto came as no surprise because Blanchard has opposed any measure restricting access to abor-

"The governor has really insulted the parents of this state," Listing said. "He has said to them, 'I don't trust you with the decisions of your (eenagers.' "

The parental consent bill earned final legislative approval Feb. 21 with a 65-42 vote of the 110-member House, At least 74 votes are needed to override a veto.

Margy Long, a spokeswoman for Michigan, said her group would consider all legal options in backing Blanchard's veto, including its own petition drive with a proposal allowing girls under 18 to get permission for an abortion from any relative over age 25, a physician, psychologist or counselor.

Mediation

Good tool for solving problems

AN WE GO BACK to the good old days when a dispute between neighbors was settled in the village barber shop? Probably not, but even many attorneys will agree that we have become an overly alitigious society. Somehow the words "I'll sue you" have become more common than "Let's sit down and work things out."

So as legal fees and court dockets swell, several Wayne County organizations and a brand new center in Oakland County are allowing a return to old ways by offering to help people settle their own disputes.

It's called mediation. And it's a negotiation process where:

• Two or more people involved in a dispute volunteer to sit down together in private with a neutral, trained person (a mediator).

• The mediator, who is generally a volunteer. does not judge who is right or wrong. He assists them in working out a solution to their problem. •

• All parties involved in the dispute explain the problems situation as they see it and present their ideas for how they think the matter can be

• It's the responsibility of the disputing parties to develop and mutually agree upon a realistic workable soution.

• That solution is not legally binding.

IT'S AN appealing, low-cost process for settling the kinds of disputes that can arise between landlords and tenants, consumers and merchants, or next-door neighbors.

It has the backing of the state of Michigan, which established in 1988 a Community Dispute Resolution Program, adding a $2 state fee to all lawsuits to help finance it.

And the agencies involved say that mediation in many of these kinds of cases produces faster, more statisfying results, while freeing up judges to deal with more serious problems.

In Oakland County, the new Dispute Resolution Clearinghouse and Settlement Center, Inc. will officially open its doors later this month in a storefront in a Bloomfield Township shopping center. It already has helped settle its first case and has two on tap.

In Wayne County, the Detroit Neighborhood Reconciliation Center, had a 90 percent success rate after three months. After a year, 85 percent of those agreements are still working, officials there report.

The Wayne County mediation agencies have so far concentrated on Detroit, so that residents of the western suburbs which we cover have no such

And comments from judges and attorneys from those western Wayne suburbs aren't exactly encouraging.

That seems too bad.

BECAUSE IT WAS the Oakland County Bar Association which proposed the idea for the new mediation center there. And it has the unanimous approval of the Oakland County District Judges

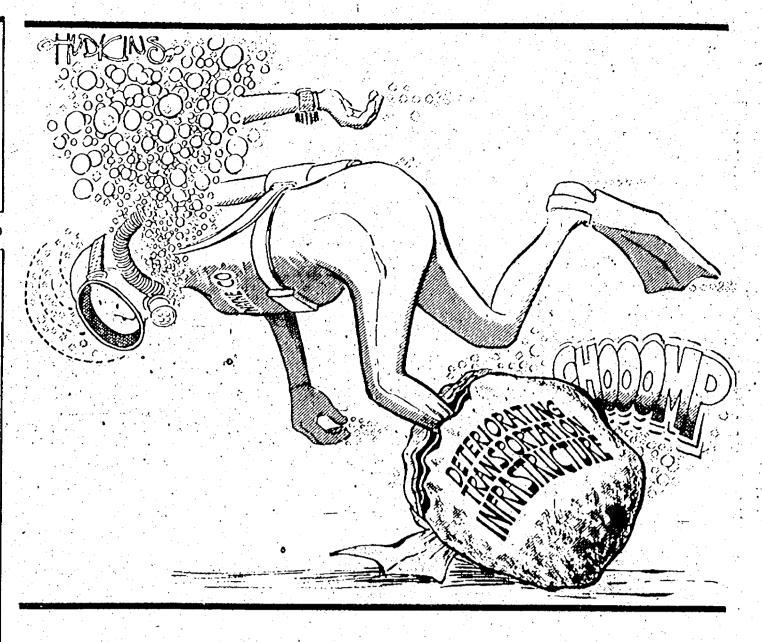

That kind of support is needed, so attorneys aren't out there bemoaning that cases are being taken away from them and so district courts will make mediation information available and refer

Molly Forward, executive director of the nonprofit Oakland County center, said those who have the least enthusiasm for it may be moved by statistics. "We need to establish a successful track record," she said. "Sometimes its hard when you are used to making decisions for other people. Sitting on the bench becomes a way of

The key, of course, is the training and expertise of the volunteer mediators. And that's a whole other dimension of the mediation concept giving people a chance to volunteer their time for the community and learn a new skill at the Most programs require 40 hours of training. Steve Eagle, an Auburn Hills patrolman and a volunteer mediator in the new Oakland County program, said ".... it was one of the best training classes I've ever had. It taught you skills you can use in life."

The mediation center — giving volunteers a chance to learn and apply important skills in conflict resolution and offering residents a chance to come up with their own solutions to disputes -- is a step in the right direction for our communities.

Protect the visionary or lose our freedoms

SOMETIMES IT'S tough being a visionary. Galileo found that out. So did Martin Luther King Jr. Nelson Mandela spent half his adult life in jail for being one. Martin Luther King Jr. and Leon Trotsky died for their visions.

Many folks are frightened by vision and the change it threatens, so frightened that they sometimes endanger the linchpin of our democratic society — free thought.

John Telford knows the feeling of accomplishment in being a visionary. In recent days he also is finding out the consequences. An assistant superintendent in the Rochester School district, the 54 year-old Telford is rather unusual for a central office hureaucrat

Frankly, most school adminstrators are something less than courageous when it comes to speaking out on social issues. To survive, they play it safe, seek out the middle ground, try to keep everyone a little. bit satisfied.

Telford is an educator in the traditional sense. He wants individuals to think, to explore, question, not just accept what the predominant wave in society deems as the truth.

To aid his fellow educators to think about the future of their profession, he has, for the last three years, written what has become known as "Telford's Telescope."

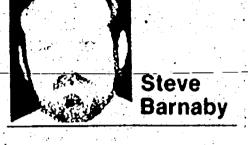

And, as Telford describes his document, "it was meant to provoke thought." But in some quarters, instead of thought, it has produced hysteria.

TELFORD DOES GORE some sacred cows of the '80s - most notably the chief kahuna of that decade, Ronald Reagan. He also takes a poke at Vice President Dan Quayle.

In a more serious vein, he talks about the importance of cultural diversity. In that spirit Telford designed a program, Operation Equity, which seeks to bring more black teachers and administrators into a district whose student body is 99 per-

He also designed a program which encourages educators to teach more about world religions. This has been an especially bitter pill for some parents to swallow since Telford was the same person who designed the holiday policy which some believe limits religious celebrations.

Unable to get at Telford, some unhappy parents have launched a recall campaign against school board members who have supported Telford's initiatives. So far they have been stymied.

But, in truth, the phrases spit out by Telford's critics contain the echoes of a dangerous time in our history, when professors were blackballed and actors banished from the screen and stage, when publishers turned their backs on writers and government officials were accused of treason.

We can't afford to go through that again. Innovators like John Telford need to be nutured, protected from the fearmongers.

And you really don't have to agree with Telford to support him. That's the whole point, protecting his right to make us all think a little more about our society.

'Phantom $' doesn't help

To the editor: Our style of communicating to our public has not included responding to letters to the editor in the past. However, not correcting the misinformation in Mr. (David) Moranty's letter of Feb. 15 is considered tantamount to agreeing with those distortions by some of your readers. Therefore, I will respond to each of his phantom money statements:

• In-formula school districts and specifically the Wayne-Westland district receive no increased revenue in its general fund budget through increased local property valuations. For each increased local dollar, there is a corresponding decrease of a dollar from the state aid formula.

• Gov. Blanchard has announced his proposed budget that includes a 7 percent - not a 14 percent, as Mr. Moranty claims - increase for K-12 education. Of that 7 percent, approximately 5.3 percent would go into the state aid formula. While we continue to experience declining enrollment, about a 250 student loss projected for 1990-91, that increase is severely reduced. In addition, with the defeat of the 2.75 mill renewal, another $4.25 million are lost from this year's revenue.

• Looking for any tax relief from the Wayne Ford truck expansion in 12 years doesn't address the current generation of students. We certainly expect the issue of equity throughout the school districts to be addressed before then, but we have a responsibility for our current students now. That's why our proposals were requested for only two years. • Depending upon the possibility of the Patterson-Anderson proposal or any other legislative proposal begs the questions. If and when those issues materialize, they will include an appropriate adjustment to our inordinate dependence upon property tax. Until then, I believe we have a responsibility to the young people in our community. Unfortunately, the only available alternative for the short range to appropriately educate today's youth rests with the local community.

Meeting our financial responsibilities can't be addressed with phantom money. Therefore, we are in the process of preparing a recommendation for the school board that will include the necessary adjustments in program and personnel to produce a balanced budget.

HB 5495 would legalize the 5 percent Detroit utility tax. In 1970 the state allowed the tax but in 1988 let the law expire.

· A Wayne circuit court said it's uncollectible and that 19 months of revenue must be refunded. So the Legislature must renew the act.

But there's a catch: Under the Headlee amendment, all new taxes since 1978 are subject to a vote of the people. So the utility tax; if allowed by the state, would have to be approved by Detroit voters.

Fat chance.

The bill says it's "intended to eliminate the confusion" from the court case and authorizes "the continued collection of the tax . . . The legislature . . . intends to validate. ratify, and revive effective July 1, 1988 a city utility users tax."

The House passed the bill and sent it to the Senate.

And that's how legislators intend to outsmart Headlee again.

BUT DETROIT isn't out of the woods yet. There is likely to be further court action on (1) the retroactivity of the tax to mid-1988 and (2)

the lack of a popular vote in Detroit. I hope Detroit wins, and I'll tell

If Detroit loses, it must refund $100 million, give or take a bit, in taxes it already has spent. Until the election, it must make budget cuts in the tens of millions of dollars. It must convince voters to renew the tax. And it already faces a projected • $81 million deficit.

If Detroit must cut its budget, it won't cut the mayor's bodyguards, limousine guards, housing inspections and social service programs. It will blackmail those who visit and do business in Detroit by laying off 1,000 or so cops;

Detroit may have to be bailed out by the state, because a city is legally a creature of the state. The rest of us will have to pay the bill.

State legislators from Detroit point out, correctly, that they're not asking for a bailout. They just want to impose the tax on their own peo-

Q: Religious holidays have become an issue for schools, especially in districts where there is a diverse ethnic population.

Do you see any hope for education helping students gain a better understanding of issues such as different ethnic groups' religious holiday traditions? Do you see education ever being a force in dealing with the religion issue? What can or should education do?

A: The problem with the religious holiday celebration issue is that education has tended to react rather than act.

We face the issue every Christmas. when emotions are at a peak, rather than talking, dealing and planning for the next school year now. Education is indeed the major vehicle for addressing this issue. However, for any education program to have an impact, it must start in kindergarten or in preschool.

WAITING UNTIL middle school or high school teach about religious holidays is too late.

By the time they have reached high school, most students have developed a conscious or unconscious mind-set toward other people's beliefs from their uncles, aunts, parents and grandparents that is difficuit, if not impossible, to overcome.

I believe a sound multicultural education program is a must, a program that is infused into the curriculum from the child's first day in school.

This program should be developed by educators and reviewed by appropriate representatives from the different religious communities, and should have clear guidelines for teachers.

A GOOD place to start is with religious holidays.

Religious holidays allow teachers a natural vehicle to generate an appreciation for both the differences and similarities of people's beliefs and traditions.

We can teach about the different religious celebrations from themes that show whom people celebrate an approach that would acknowledge all major religious holidays throughout the year.

Religious groups or children of a specific orientation should put on programs throughout the year for other children to review.

Care must be taken. Good intentions with little knowledge do more harm than good. One poor scenario is to acknowledge Hanukkah, a minor Jewish holiday, in the same light as Christmas.

THE TYPE of program I am referring to would teach facts rather than faith beliefs.

Doc Doyle

Factual descriptions of what people of different religious orientations believe would be presented with no value judgments. And, never with a teacher's opinion.

. The best vehicle would be children demonstrating holiday activities as, they have been taught over the years.

Young children do not get into value judgments until we adults teach them our values.

We clearly must teach about all "religious groups" such as Buddhism, Hindulsm, Shinto, Islam, Confucianism, etc.

I believe we must develop a process and program, not a knee-jerk reaction to a specific religious holiday one time of the year.

WE MUST start from preschool on. It has worked with the cigarette

I was the director of a large federally financed Michigan drug and substance abuse education program during the late 1960s.

We started a "don't use drugs" program at the high school level in 1968, and we have an even more devastating problem today. We started a "don't smoke cigarettes" program at the kindergarten level in 1968, and just look at the attitudes toward smoking today. As a former high school teacher and administrator, I've come to realize that any education geared for long-range attitudinal changes must start with our next generation those in kindergarten now. Young children learning about each other's religious heritage will make more of a difference than the typical one-hour motivation speaker at the annual high school assembly. AND, DON'T expect miracles from high school teachers or counselors if they inherit a generation of children with little or no tolerance for another group's religious orienta-

If we haven't laid the foundation for acceptance of other people's religious beliefs when children are 5 years old or younger, it's not going to

If we really desire an understanding of each other's religious traditions and beliefs, start when children's minds are open and fertile for the good seeds.

The cardboard box in the kitchen had a sign that read: "RECYCL-ABLES ONLY! DO NOT THROW AWAY ANYTHING THAT CAN BE USED AGAIN. THERE IS NO SUCH PLACE AS 'AWAY.' "

She cites the obstacles and habits of her family, the eventual filling of the box and finally the dictum of the "parental units": to "get that out of here . . . it's not being recycled sitting in a box."

HOWEVER, WHEN she called up West Bloomfield Township, she found they didn't recycle, though they planned on it sometime in the fuzzy future. And the nearest place they could think of to take it was "there's a place in Royal Oak." Well, of course there are much closer places - like Birmingham,

Plan to drop tax credits has business crying foul

By Tim Richard staff writer

Business would pick up the tab for a homeowners' property tax relief program which House Democrats pushed through a committee.

On a party-line vote, the House Taxation Committee reported out a. bill to eliminate $400 million in single business tax credits for investment in new equipment.

"You will be sending a negativesignal to the business community,' warned John Thodis of the Michigan Manufacturers 'Association. "Increasing taxes $400 million to job providers is irresponsible - ludi-

"The capital acquisition deduction (CAD) is one of the major pro-investment vehicles. Business already pays $2 billion in taxes to state government.

Every manufacturing job creates 2.3 other jobs. Without a job, it doesn't matter what you do with property tax exemptions. This bill is anti-business and anti-job," Thodis

THE CAD has been declared unconstitutional in the state Court of Claims, but manufacturers are carrying the case to the Court of

"It allows business to make a deduction from the single business tax base for equipment — tangible, depreciable assets, a complete write-off as an alternative to depreciation," said Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, vice chair of the taxation committee. Manufacturers get about 45 pertate and insurance firms 21 percent.

"It's an immediate write-off of capital assets to industry segments," Kosteva said. "You could argue it's unfair to small business (without a lot of equipment."

The Democratic measure is a House substitute for Senate Bill 598. Kosteva and Maxine Berman, D-Southfield, supported it.

The new money would be split between aid to local government, $59 million, and property tax relief to homeowners, $341 million.

TWO OTHER bills would amend the proprty tax and personal income tax laws to give the tax relief. They were supported by both parties.

The panel didn't consider two other plans floating around in Lansing — a $30 million package offered by Gov. James Blanchard, a Democrat, and a 20 percent assessment reduction package offered by Senate majority leader John Engler, the Republican challenger.

"We're going way, way, way beyond the governor's plan, $300 million beyond it," sald Kosteva, "by providing an increase in the homestead caps."

The current "circuit breaker" gives homeowners a state income cent of the credits; finance, real es- tax rebate if they pay more than 3.5 percent of income in local property taxes. The state rebates 60 percent of the excess, to a $1,200 limit.

The House bill raises the rebate to 75 percent and the limit to $2,600.

Rep. Susan Grimes Munsell, R-Howell, offered an amendment to index the $2,600 cap to consumer price index, but Democrats shot it down in a party-line vote:

"It's phony to index what most people aren't going to get," said Berman of Southfield. "I'd rather see those who are in need get it."

Added Kosteva: "With only 9 percent bumping against (receiving) the $1,200 cap, even fewer would be bumping the $2,600 cap."

REPUBLICAN vice chair William Bryant of Grosse Pointe said the SBT capital credit should be considered separately, not as a way to fund homeowner property tax relief.

Nurses take care 'home'

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Thursday, March 1, 1990 O&E

The morning sun reflects off the glistening snow, providing a bright start to another work week. But it's of little consolation to Pat Gush-1987 Nova.

She only sees children.

Most people would find thoughts of kids flying kites or playing on a swing to be pleasant on a drive into the office. The youngsters in her mind, though, are stricken with a disease that takes away all the pleasures of childhood, crumbles them into a ball and tosses it all into a waste can.

These children have AIDS.

Gushman is a home health care nurse for Renaissance Health Care in Detroit. She cares for eight kids who are infected with the HIV virus, most of which have become full-blown AIDS cases.

They range from 4 months to 4 years in age. Many are poor, living in the inner-city of Detroit. In some cases, their mothers have already died from AIDS.

"It's like with any child who is terminal," said Gushman, who has been seeing AIDS cases for 21/2 years. "I've been lucky - none of them have died. Everytime they get really sick, I have to come to grips with the fact they eventually Gushman walks up to the door of the yellow house on Detroit's east side. A friendly face greets her. The woman is the aunt for the girl who Gushman has come to see. Gloria Downing has been taking care of Gabrielle, 41/2, who is affectionately called "Gabby," for most of her life. Gabby's mother died of AIDS in January.

Gushman extends her hands to Gabby. The little girl walks across the living room floor and grabs

"Did you say your prayers last night?," asked Gushman as Gabby nods her head yes. "Good. We need them with you."

She precedes to take the child's temperature and listens to her man of Redford who blankly peers heart rate. Then comes the difficult out through the windshield of her part. Her aunts pulls out the intravenous (IV) stand. Gabby quietly stares ominously at the apparatus, resigned to what will follow.

"She has terrible veins," said Gushman, scanning the needle scarred right arm of the child.

As Gushman pushes in the IV needle, Gabby lets out a wail. The tears don't last long, though.

Surprisingly, Gushman is able to hold back the tears. When she interviewed for the job as a home health care nurse, the 1979 graduate of-St. Agatha-High-School-admits she didn't know what she was getting into. She worked in the neonatal unit at Children's Hospital, but this was different.

AIDS WAS as foreign to her as to many people back then. The position involved working with children who have AIDS. Some 21/2 years ago, Renaissance Health Care had only four pediatric AIDS cases. Today, the agency has 30.

Few Pat Gushmans exist to shoulder the load. The job is grueling, emotionally and physically. Most of her day is spent on the road. Her three-year-old car already has 104,000 miles on it.

"I burn out every so often," she THE WOODEN stairs creak as said. "There was a point in time when I said I didn't want to take anymore HIV cases. It doesn't last long. There's very few people who will do it.

AIDS: Nursing's biggest challenge

The cumulative impact on a profession already facing a shortage remains to be seen. So far, they have been up to the challenge.

Kloosterman said he's received calls from parents of nursing students who don't want their daughter or son taking care of AIDS patients. Spouses sometimes voice objections.

Again, education is the key. Nurses themselves have had to stay on top of ever-changing trends with the disease.

Kloosterman serves on the Michigan Nurses Association state task force on AIDS. He said a recent statewide survey of 1,700 nurses indicated they had an "above average" knowledge of the disease and how it is transmitted.

"WE'RE BEYOND basic AIDS 101," Kloosterman said.

Yet education hasn't alleviated some fears, according Kloosterman. Some nurses are apprehensive dealing with AIDS patients, perhaps for fear of contracting the disease.

Though according to Dr. Lawrence Crane, who spoke at an AIDS conference in November at Madonna College, risks of contracting the virus from incidental contact is low. Contracting AIDS from a needle puncture is three in 9%0,000, according to Crane.

Nurses are advised to observe the list of universal precautions in caring for all patients, which includes wearing gloves and gowns when Housewirth had been taking care of three to four AIDS patients at a time. When they died, she said a little part of her died with them. Soon, she realized there was nothing left to give.

"We decided that I needed less death and dying and more life and living," said Housewirth, a registered nurse who lives in Livonia. "It was taking its toll on me. I needed a break."

Some in the health care profession might understand, some might scoff. After all, death is part of the job.

Most nurses, though, see people get well. People like Housewirth only watch them die.

mind. He was 28, dying when life should have just been beginning. She still thinks about him often.

"He was very special; I got very close to him and his family.' Housewirth said. "We went to dinner one night. He won a contest and that was the prize, dinner for two. It was a real special relationship. I always maintained that nurse-patient relationship.

"He eventually got thinner and thinner. . . . He called me at work one day and said he couldn't stand it anymore. He literally asked my permission to stop treatment and dle."

"Some will say, I want to see the sun lise; I want to see the morning come," Housewirth said. "They will stay up all night, afraid to close their eyes."

WITH ALL THAT, she provides basic health care. She takes temperatures, heart rates and blood samples. In the home, she's without the help of other physicians or nurses.

Understandably, there is anger at itest — sometimes directed at the nurse. After awhile, Housewirth said a bond develops.

"You simply tell them, 'I don't know about it.' You just don't take away anyone's hope.'

Housewirth said she didn't originally want to become a home care nurse, things just worked out that way. Since graduating from Wayne State University with a bachelor's in nursing, she worked in various nursing fields. She was employed in medical surgical, intensive care and cardiac outpatient before joining Henry Ford Health Care.

She took a $1.50 an hour pay cut to become a home health care nurse. She said rewards or perks have to be found on her own. Financial ones are not there, citing nurses in hospitals often make up to $4 an hour more than she does.

The job involves plenty of travel, going home to home. The emotional aspects provide the most wear and tear.

pendability, reliability and discipline can be found in your personality.

In all things, you are neat and orderly. Your workplace would have a place for everything and everything would be in its proper place.

Good organization is much in evidence. You are not just living for the moment. You have set goals for yourself, some of them necessitate challenge on your part.

Although you may need a little warm-up time before getting involved in new projects, once started you work carefully and methodically."You do not like to be rushed. And you would never be satisfied with anything less than your best effort: You are detail oriented and should have a retentive memory.

Family ties have a high priority; security does too. You are not inclined to behave in ways that would jeopardize this security need.

Seemingly, you were raised in a home where a rigid attitude regarding ethics, morality and social responsibility was enforced. And you continue Ao adhere to this' early training and moral discipline, A tad of sarcasm may come into use when these values are attacked.

You are aware of and practice the standards of behavior of your social set and those you care about. You also are respectful of people in positions of authority.

A need to be approved of and accepted by others seems evident. There is loyalty here to friends as well as beliefs. I strongly suspect you have some friendships that have lasted throughout your lifetime.

You are friendly and ever ready to lend a helping hand. You can feel both for and with others. People are quick to recognize your empathy. Still you need time alone to charge your batteries occasionally.

I can't help wondering if you are a teacher? I can see you involved inthe humanities as opposed to an aggressive businessman. Am I right?

Her voice becomes angry, and then she lets out a laugh. Indifference about people with AIDS really draws her ire. Because some are poor, 1V drug users or prostitutes, she said they are viewed as society's throwaways.

These are people, too," she said. "Most of them are decent human beings. They don't intend on infecting other people."

Especially a child, who didn't ask for AIDS but who was born with the disease. Today, many children are llving longer. Researchers have found a way to treat pneumonia and prevent opportunistic infections that usually occur.

One prevention method is the injection of gamma globulin - blood serum containing most antibodies - which is designed to boost the immune system. After the gamma globulin is empty, Gushman weighs Gabby. In the meantime, she inquires about the rest of the family members.

When she leaves, Gushman asks for another hug from Gabby. The child smiles.

As Gushman drives down the tattered streets of the inner city, she talks about the environment her children live in. Some of the neighborhoods are not safe, but Gushman doesn't seem too worried. People know her and look out for her, she said. Children on the street often call her "Miss Pat."

At the end of the night, the images of the inner-city come home with Gushman.

Gushman arrives at her second stop on this morning. Crystal, 31/2, is living with an aunt. Like Gabby, her mother recently died of the dis-

At first, Crystal is smiling and playfully boxing with Gushman. She takes the child's temperature and asks her to stick out her tongue to check for thrush, a yeast infection of the mouth.

A couple of times, Gushman has been more than worried. Crystal has bounced back after being seriously ill several times, including hospital stays.

With their immune systems shot, Gushman shakes her head at the children's resiliency. One day, though, she knows the fight will be over. Until a cure is found, AIDS will remain a victor. Those emotions will be difficult to deal with, especially when she has a 9-yearold daughter. Detachment is impossible.

Nurses become frontline in treating AIDS patients

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Madonna College nursing student Mary DeSloover admits she was apprehensive at the idea of caring for AIDS patients. Then she reconsid-

"I thought to myself, "If Jesus was lying there in bed with AIDS, what would I do?," said DeSloover, who is from Monroe. "I'd feel honored."

DeSloover was honored along with several other Madonna students. The group spent an 11-week clinical. study during the fall semester at Detroit Receiving Hospital. Among those they cared for were patients

· As the numbers of cases increase, the nurses of tomorrow will be the ones expected to provide care for

Madonna College is one of several nursing schools in the state keeping up with the constant flow of new information on the disease. Eileen McMahon is a nursing instructor at the school and believes the AIDS crisis presents several new challenges to the profession.

In addition to the medical aspects, nurses will need to be in tune with psychological and ethical issues the terminal disease brings about. The first-hand experience at Detroit Receiving Hospital only helps.

"WE TALK about it," McMahon said. "The impression the students have, especially those who have never cared for AIDS patients before, are the needs of the victims in terms of isolation issues along with providing the regular care."

Nursing students who participated in the study were left with lasting images.

DeSloover recalls one woman with AIDS who was real "testy" one morning. Later in the day, the nurse returned to find her real quiet in bed. She told DeSloover that it was her son's birthday. "She was probably wondering how many more birthdays would she be able to see him celebrate," DeSloover said.

One day she was reading a book. I asked if it was a good book and she said yes. Then she said, 'It's kind of sad, though. I wish I had someone who loved me like the person in this book did."

DeSloover said she had to come with grips about how she could get on "common ground" with people who have AIDS, more specifically those groups the disease has afflicted, such as IV drug users. Her Christian beliefs helped pull her through, 'She was probably wondering how many more birthdays would she be able to see him celebrate.' '

— Mary DeSloover

Chris Genei also spent class time at Detroit Receiving Hospital. She 7 said one of the concerns was not to treat AIDS patients any differently than others. "They're sensitive to that," she said.

GENEI SAID she allowed the she said, "but it was enough."

In her experience Genei encountered the another aspect of the disease - the financial hardship. One patient was worried about having .

enough money for AZT treatments. One man with AIDS would turn away from her when she entered the room. Genei said he'd make you walk around in order to talk to him. He never would thank her. On her last day, she said good-bye. He told her she was "OK."

"That was all I got out of him,"

FORTUNATELY, friends and family have been supportive, especially after the recent death of one of her patients. Other times, she's in a situation where people don't understand or are ignorant about the disease.

To her, there is no question why she takes care of AIDS patients. "There's the reaction, 'Oh, tell me about it' or they've heard about a new treatment and they want to hear about it," she said. "Or it's, 'Uck, how can you touch

Health department offers AIDS testing

There are more than 1,500 cases of AIDS in the state of Michigan in addition to an estimated 30,000-40,000 people who carry HIV (Humane Immunodeficiency Virsus), the AIDS virus.

Studies have shown that HIV is ransmitted through sexual contact with an infected person and sharing contaminated items that have come in contact with infected blood, such as the use of contaminated needles among intravenous drug users.

Until a cure and/or vaccine is developed, educating the public on how to avoid becoming infected by the virus as well as counseling high

Love keeps church going

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

In its centennial year, Village Presbyterian Church in Redford faces the big "T" - transition. The church should have no trouble cross-

No pastor and a membership that has leveled off in recent times would spell trouble for many churches. But not at the steepled church on Six Mile Road, which has weathered a crisis or two in its long history.

Village Presbyterian Is kicking into gear with a bevy of activities; according to church member Shirley Simon. In the works, are two reunions of former parishioners - Saturday, March 3, in Winter Springs, Fla., and Saturday, March 10, in Phoenix, Arlz.

Also, the church will have a strawberry festival in June and then will culminate the 100th anniversary. festivities with Centennial Super Week Sept. 8-16.

This Saturday's reunion in Winter Springs will kick things off. Anywhere from 50 to 75 former and current members of the church will renew acquaintances. An old fashioned birthday party is planned, complete with cake and candles.

"We raised our kids together. We played together and we prayed together," said Donna Kitzman, who lives in Winter Springs and is formerly of Redford. She is helping organize the reunion. "We were a very active congregation."

ACTIVITIES CLOSER to home will allow longtime members such as Marion White of Novi to reflect. White has been a member of Village Presbyterian since 1925 when she. was baptized there.

"It's been a church where you were always happy to be there," said White, who still regularly attends church there. "Everyone was friendly and just being there was worthwhile."

White's father was on the board of directors and she sang in the choir. Some of her fondest recollections as a child were the church picnics in Detroit, drinking ginger ale straight out of the barrel from the nearby Vernor's Bottling Co.

Like many members, White grew up with the church. Membership today is approximately 300, down, from the 600-700 who used to attend

"When we first went there, a lot of young people belonged to the church," said Simon, who has been a member since 1956. "Our membership was double than what it is now - though we have younger people coming in again."

Anyone new to the church would be impressed with Village Presbyterian's rich history.

According to a recent article printed in the church newsletter "Village Voice," The place of worship was the first First United Presbyterian Church in Detroit in 1890. The original building was at the corner of Grand River and Alexandria and its founder was Dr. William Vin-

The church was in a state of flux. The original sanctuary was already sold and the congregation appeared to be without a meeting place. Services were held at various schools until the United Presbyterimont, several ministers have been instrumental in the success and growth of Village Presbyterian. The Rev. James Crawford was one of the longest serving pastors, from 1957 until he retired in 1979. He was was followed by the Rev. Robert Barcus, who served 1980-85.

THE REV. Carol Cregg was the most recent pastor, leaving in December last year to get married. She currently lives in New Jersey. The Rev. Charles McCloskey will serve as interim pastor until a permanent one is found, according to Simon.

Music groups have been the hallmark of Village Presbyterian. More than that, though, has been the harmony among the congregation. The church's social club, The Ambassadors, is still going strong.

Kitzman said she and her husband, Harold, help start a similar group at her church in Florida.

"It was a pretty neat group of people," Kitzman said. "Our love of the Lord and love of each other has kept

Community: Not always an experience of grace

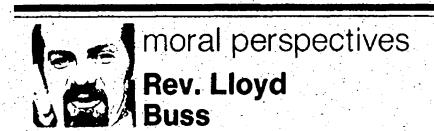

"Double our joy. Divide our sorrow." It was the lead statement in a brochure inviting me to support a specific cause. I was attracted to it without even knowing what the cause might be.

"Double our joy. Divide our sor-row." The power of this statement is the power of community. I was being invited to join with others. The cause was the issue, but the experience would be fellowship.

Community is a powerful magnet for consent and support. We do not by that of the friends whose society. want to live in isolation from others. We want to be a part of an arena of life that places us in fellowship with others. We will go to great lengths to become part of a community.

UNFORTUNATELY, OUR concept of community is most often

Community is a powerful magnet for consent and support. We do not want to live in isolation from others. We want to be a part of an arena of life that places us in tellowship with others.

about ourselves. Aesop's observation that "a person's character is judged he or she takes pleasure in" also quickly tells what we use as the base for community. We have tried to root that in natural law with the simplistic statement that "birds of a feather flock together."

The demonic potential to this concept of community is the natural step we take to keep out those who are "different," or who would jeopardize what we have composed. The extent of this demonic potential is unchecked. We date our history by its product of war and bloodshed. We are the victims of our own destruction. Fundamental to the existence of community is the acceptance of others as equal participants in the experience of life. It is not easily nor quickly completed.

Mark Twain once noted that "good breeding consists in concealing how determined by what we see and like much we think of ourselves, and how little we think of the other person." He also noted that "training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond and the cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college edu-

> Beyond the natural groupings of our base (as a noun base can mean foundation, and as an adjective itcan mean inferior or even wicked) likes and dislikes is that community of grace which is created by that will and purpose to share the joys of life and to help one another carry our sorrows. Community can be an experience of grace, or an experience of wickedness.

> Yes, community can double our joy and divide our grief. Community can also double our grief and divide our joy. The difference is how we shape it in the first place.

Teens use less drugs, alcohol

The good news is that the number of teenagers using drugs and alcohol dropped during 1989. The bad news is that the average age that the use began also dropped.

That's the word from Straight Inc., a national drug and alcohol rehabilitation-program for adolescents, which surveyed a group of high school students from throughout Michigan.

Of the 225 students in rural, suburban and urban school districts, 43 percent said they used drugs and alcohol during the past year, down 26 percent from the previous year. The average that usage began was 12 years, down from 13 the previous

According to the Straight survey, most students said they were introduced to drugs and alcohol by their peers. However, 15 percent said parents introduced then to drugs or al-

One girl reported that she began using marijuana at the age of 3. Her parents, who smoked "pot" on a regular basis, got her high, she said in the survey.

"WHAT WE have here is a significant number of young people continuing to use drugs and alcohol," said Carson Wood, administrator of the Michigan Straight program. "In my generation, if I had sought drugs I would have been unable to get them.

"Kids today are assaulted from all sides to use drugs and alcohol. It's just a different society."

Alcohol was the drug of choice for two-thirds of the students surveyed, with marijuana finishing a distant second. A surprising note was 9 percent of the students reported nicotine as their drug of choice. The previous year, not one person reported nicotine as a drug.

Cocaine use also declined last year - only 4 percent reported using the. drug, down 6 percent from the previous year. However, 50 percent said they knew a person using the drug, 18 percent said they sold drugs to support their habit or to make money and more than 60 percent sald they could by drugs at any time at school:

According to the survey results, money spent on drugs also declined during last year - 49 percent spent no money on drugs or alcohol, 28 percent spent up to $5 per week and the remaining students reported spending between $5 and $100 a week on drugs and alcohol.

THE SURVEY also showed that 15 percent of the students have run away from home, 12 percent have tried to commit sulcide, 24 percent have used physical violence against their parents and 22 percent have been suspended from school at least once.

The average age of the participants was 15. Fifty-seven percent were female and 43 percent male.

THE VILLAGERS protect the monkeys and their habitat. The apes, in turn bring in tourist dollars.

"Want to see monkeys quick?" asked Sanctuary manager Fallet Young. "It could be a small troop on the other side of the road."

After crossing over, we entered a stand of scrub jungle. Twennty minutes later we heard the distant grunts of a dominant male. As we got closer, the grunts turned into lion-like roars. The leader of the troop saw us below and was doing his best to chase us off. He won. The jungle still range with his bellows as we made our way back.

During our brief search, Fallett seemed oblivious to the dangers of the jungle, he slogged along the muddy footpaths in lowcut leather shoes.

"PROBABLY NO poisonous snakes here." I volunteered timidly. "Oh yes," he replied cheerfully. "Tommygoff, coral snake, Central

During my stay in Belize, I explored the tropical rain forests daily. My aching feet tramped 50 to 60 miles of tropical turf. Yet during that time I was never menaced by man or animal.

This ought not to have surprised me. On my way to the jungle adventure, I glanced at my daily horoscope in a well-thumbed newspaper. It said, "a short pleasure trip provides a welcome break in the workweek."

And that's exactly what happened.

the Caribbean threatened to wash out the roads. Luckily, the storm veered off. The road into the refuge was muddy anyhow. Two streams and several bogs nearly defeated me, but I finally conquered the five tough miles.

NEAR THE preserve's building, a bearded man loomed into sight. He turned out to be Robert Bristow, an environmentalist from the Black Hills of South Dakota. He had packed in the night before. And what a hike he had.

"At sunset, I saw fresh jaguar tracks in the mud," he said. "Night fell. I was in the middle of nowhere and not sure where I was going. Walking in the dark with that cat on your mind. That's spooky."

No one was at camp headquarters. Luckily, the bunkhouse was unlocked, so the two of us spent the night there.

Before bedding down, I explored yielded the tracks of a tapir and a large jaguar. The cat's tracks were smoking hot. I knew how my friend felt the night before,

ROBERT DROVE out with me the next morning to buy food at the nearby village of Mayan Center. On the way, we met Ignacio Pop, the refuge's head warden.

He indicated the jaguars there are thriving and multiplying and said about 25 were in the area.

Despite their large numbers, seeing a wild jaguar seemed to compare favorably with winning the national lottery. That doesn't mean it never happens. A couple picnicking in the preserve saw a flash of orange. A jaguar had slunk down to a nearby creek. It lapped up water, glanced around, then melted back into the jungle as silently as it had come.

Time was running out, I had to hurry back to Belize City for my flight home. On the way I took time to pay a brief visit to the Community Baboon Sanctuary at Bermudian Landing. The principal animals there are black howler monkeys often called baboons by the locals.

Spring in Michigan:

Although it seems like the middle of winter, it's time to start planning for spring and early summer events. After all, when the weather does break, you do want to hit the vacation trail running. And Michigan has a lot to offer.

Following is a list of events of happenings around Michigan for April, May and June.

Food events include the maple syrup festivals in Shepherd, April 27-29 and Vermontville, April 28-29; the Mushroom Festival in Mesick, May 4-6; the National Mushroom-Hunting Championships in Boyne City, May 12-13 and the Battle Creek Cereal Festival, June 2-9, which culminates in the world's largest breakfast

Then, there's the Pasty Bake in St. Ignace, May 27, an attempt to bake the world's largest pasty for the benefit of the Guinness Book of World Records and of the spectators who get to eat it.

Fishing events include the Perch Festival in Caseville, April 21-29; the National Trout Festival in Kalkaska, April 25-29; the Walleye Tournament in Midland, April 28-29; the $35,000-Blue Water Fishing Classic Tournament (for trout and salmon) in Port Huron, May 4-6; the Bass Festival in Mancelona, June 1-3; the Trout Tournament in Charlevoix, June 8-10; the Smallmouth Bass Tournament in Bergland and Marenisco, June 9-10; the Walleye Tournament in Bellaire, June 15-17; the Pickerel Fishing Tournament in Algonac, June 29-July 4 and the Carp Rodeo in Union CIty June 15-17.

Literary figures also come in for their share of glory. Owosso honors native son James Oliver at the Curwood Fesitval, June 1-3. Macatawa recalls that L. Frank Baum worked on the Wizard of Oz in the Lake Michigan community with the Oz e Festival, June 8-10. And the same weekend, the Captain Phogg Balloon Classic lifts off at the Crossroads Village near Flint.

Flower festivals are also in bloom, including:

- Blossomtime Festival, Benton Harbor, St. Joseph and surrounding communities, April 29-May 6, Michigan's oldest;
- Trillium Festival, Hoffmaster State Park, Muskegon, May 12-13;
- Tulip Time Festival, Holland, May 16-19, nationally known, and extremely popular;

• Lilac Festival, Mackinac Island, June 1-10.

Other special events to keep in mind: • American Paintings - from Detroiter Richard Manooglan's collection, Detroit Institute of Arts, March 2.1-May 27. One of the best collections of 19th century American art comes home. The DIA and the National Gallery aranged this show which has been hung in the National Gallery, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the San Francico's DeYsung Museum.

- Buzzard Festival Hell, May 5-6. Arts and crafts and real live
- May Festival Ann Arbor, May 9-12. The Los Angeles Philharmonic with Andre Previn performs in this 97th annual festival at the University of Michigan.
- Highland Festival and Games - Al. a. May 26-27. A gathering of the Scottish clans in which pipe bands, dancers, fiddlers, and athletes from the U.S. and Canada meet, compete and celebrate.
- Frankenmuth Bavarian Festival - Frankenmuth, June 9-16. Eight days of gemutlichkeit, celebrating the town's German heritage, with German bands and food, oldworld style crafts and nationallyknown entertainment.
- Valvoline Detroit Grand Prix - Detroit, June 15-17. Indy cars hit the downtown streets for three days of intense racing with such wellknown drivers as Danny Sullivan, Mario Andretti and Al Unser Jr.
- International Balloon Championship - Battle Creek, June 16-23. Balloonists from all over the world compete.
- International Freedom Festival - Detroit and Windsor, June 22-July 4. Millions in this tow-nation celebration, the largest transborder festival in North America. Belize offers some fascinating scenery, all a little on the wild side. Even the Chin Chich lodge, made up of thatched-roof cabanas, overlooks an ancient Mayan City.

By John Castle special writer

Monkeys chattered high in the treetops. On the muddy jungle floor lay the tracks of a large jaguar.

It didn't seem possible. I had left Birmingham that morning for my flight from Detroit Metro. Within eight hours I was watching jungle animals in the heart of a Central American rain forest.

My trip was inspired by the Programme for Belize, a group fighting to preserve the Belizean wilderness. Their folder painted a picture of a land rich in wildlife. The lure proved irresistible.

A month later I flew over Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula into the tiny Caribbean country formerly called British Honduras.

BELIZE IS THE size of Massachusetts, with the population of Warren, Mich. Most of its 165,000 inhabitants live in Belize City and half a dozen other towns, leaving the rest of the country practically uninhabited.

From Belize City, Javier's Air Service shuttled me 50 miles west to the jungle outpost of Gallon Jug. Then I was driven deep into the rain forest to Chan Chich Lodge.

The lodge overlooks the rulns of an ancient Mayan city. Tropical growth crowds its thatched-roof cabanas. Trails fan out into the iungle. One of them yielded the tracks I saw on my first day there.

Studying jaguars was my main goal. These cats, the world's third largest feline, have intrigued me for years. Here was a chance to learn about them firsthand.

WILD CATS abound in Belize.

Jaguars pad green land of American wilderness

Scarely a week goes by without someone at the lodge seeing a jaguar, ocelot or margay. The jaguars, called tigers by native Belizians, are protected, so they've lost much of their fear of man. A mald recently watched in awe as one of the big cats emerged from the jungle and walked around the lodge in broad daylight.

Guide Gilbert "Jack" Vasquez had a closer brush. He was grooming a trail when a jaguar slunk out of a palm thicket and padded toward him.

"He was a big tiger, head like this," Jack said, making a circle with his arms. "I shout and he sees me. Lucky thing he goes away."

Clearing trails is Jack's daily job. Belize's poisonous snakes, the dreaded fer-de-lance (nicknamed tommygoff) and the coral snake, hide under dead palm leaves. Removing them makes the trails safer

Boa constrictors also infest Belize. They're so ubiquitous they even lurk inside the cities. One day the lodge's generator-driven clothes dryer stopped spinning. A boa had wrapped itself tightly around the rotor.

I PROWLED THE jungle trails daily without encountering a snake. Unfortunately, that also held true for cats. I didn't see a single jaguar, but saw many signs of them.

One morning, hiking along a path toward Guatemala border, I came upon what looked like a wildcat convention. Ocelot prints peppered the mud. A few yards farther on were the saucer-sized tracks of a male and a female jaguar. Handmade plaster casts of the prints let me preserve them for future study.

Cats were my main target, but not my only interest. I didn't balk when a birder offered to take me under his wing.

BIRDERS ARE birdwatchers who travel the world trying to see and identify as many bird species as possible. Ells Knudson, of McLean, Va., was on a birding binge. He had already glassed 167 species at Chan Chich when I joined him for a daylong hunt.

Between tropical downpours, we saw comical "banana-billed" toucans, laughing falcons that actually go "ha ha" at you, and rare ocellated turkeys. After dinner we drove his rented four-by-four along a narrow road to look for night birds. Almost immediately our headlights picked up eyeshine.

"My gosh," Ells said, "a tapir." Not 20 yards away was Belize's national animal browsing nonchalantly on roadside bushes. The cowlike beast was shoveling food into its mouth with a flexible upper lip that resembled a small elephant

We watched helplessly. Neither of us had armed our cameras with flashguns.

LATER ON WE saw a pair of eyes dancing across a field. The animal was a blur in our binoculars. We thought it was an ocelot, but later saw it was a gray fox.

Before leaving Chan Chich and the hospitality of hosts Tom and Josie Harding, I saw white-tailed deer, monkeys parrots, leaf-cutter ants and other jungle creatures. Crocodiles, coatis and kinkajous remained hidden.

Many animals were foreign to me. I kept hearing people talk about gibnuts. It came as a surprise to learn they don't grow on trees, but are jackrabbit-sized rodents called pacas.

Roast gibnut is a delicacy to chicleros, those jungle hardened men who roam the tropics tapping sapodilla trees for the gumlike chicle used in chewing gum.

Make your trip to Belize a do-ityourself jungle adventure. Tailoring it to your needs is as easy as falling off a coconut tree. Some tips for a safe exciting trip: • When to go — The most comfortable time is January to May, the dry season. If you must go during the summer, August is your best bet. It is less rainy. The annual mean temperature is 79 degrees, colder in the mountains.

 ● Preparing to go — A passport is needed. No vaccinations are required, but you might consider malaria pills and shots for typhoid, hepatitis, tetanus, and flu. Consult your physician or the county health department.

• How to go - Continental Airlines has a flight from Detroit to Belize City, with a changeover in Houston, Texas. A round trip costs less than $500. It could be less with special promotions.

• Where to go — Try Chan Chich Lodge in west-central Belize, Luxury accommodations (screened cabanas, hot showers, candlelight dinners) in the heart of the rain forest. Call 1-800-343-8009 for reservations and transportation to lodge from Belize City. Daily single rate (room, meals) is about $75.

Belize City. It's not posh, but is comfortable, colorful and inexpensive. A single room is approximately $25 It is a haven for writers, naturalists, archaeologists and explorers. Proprieter Jean Shaw will help with travel plans and rental vehicles. Emory King's road guide is a must for this trip. The jaguar preserve in east-central Belize is a rustic jungle camp.

Prepare to cook your own meals, sleep in a bunkhouse and use outdoor toilets. Take bottled water and canned food. Ask Jean Shaw (Belize phones: 73356, 77951) about travel conditions to preserve in Cockscomb Basin Wildlife Sanctuary.

The Community Baboon Sanctuary at Bermudian Landing is a oneand-one-half hour drive from Belfre City. Jungle trails yield close-up the swamps, inland lagoons and waterways. • What to take — Take your drivers' license and traveler checks. The exchange rate is $2 Belizean for $1 U.S. The prices are higher than Mexico because Belize imports everything. Also take a bottle of 100 percent deet mosquito lotion, a full water canteen, flashlight, Swiss army-type pocket knife, binoculars and camera.

• What to wear - Hat or cap, cotton slacks, long-sleeved shirts or blouses. Take medium-weight jacket and rain gear. Wear sneakers in town, boots or hiking shoes in the jungle. Casual clothing is in.

• What not to do - Don't drink or brush your teeth with unpurified water. Also don't take firearms, go off jungle trails or pick up insects or reptiles. Most importantly don't disturb the Mayan artifacts. Also watch the "sleeping policeman" speed bumps on the roads. You can break your axles on them,

Some investors prefer to put their money where their philosophical beliefs are rather than shooting for maximum financial

People like Pat and Douglas Lent of Royal Oak.

Active in the peace movement for nearly 20 years, the Lents have decided to put their profitsharing money into what has become known as socially responsible investing.

That generally means avoiding companies that do business in South Africa, companies that manufacture weapons, companies that have a poor environmental track record and utilities involved with nuclear power. "We don't want to contribute to the remaining ills of the world," Douglas Lent said. "We personally feel it's better for money to be working for things you believe in ... and not abusing people."

JOEL DISKIN, a Birmingham certified financial planner, concluded during a peace march 31/2 years ago that he should take a closer look at socially responsible investing.

He liked what he found.

"What you're really doing is protecting against the downside - defensive screens that make good economic sense," Diskin said.

"Look what's going on with the defense stocks. There's an outbreak of peace. There's talk of cutting the defense budget. What's going to happen to stock? It will go down in value.

"If you don't have them (investors) in there, you don't have to worry about it.

"The same with nuclear. What if we have another Three Mile Island or Chernobyl? If you don't have nuclear stock in there (portfolio), you don't have to worry.

South Africa you've got sanctions, more civil unrest. What does that do to a company in South Africa? Doesn't it make more sense not to invest with that company?" Diskin said.

Investing on moral values

STEPHEN CANTRELL/staff photographer

Joel Diskin, a certified financial planner, likes to put his clients' money where their philosophical beliefs are.

RETURNS ON the socially responsible investment approach are comparable to yields using other strategies, Diskin said. "Historically, you will find (socially responsible) mutual funds in the top third of funds, if not closer," he said.

A loss of a percentage point or two on yield to go the socially responsible route "doesn't bother us when it comes to moral values," Lent said.

Several socially responsible mutual funds and their yields were mentioned by Diskin.

• Calvert Social Investment Fund, which has returned 15 percent annually over the past five which had returned 23 percent annually through last November during a three-year existence.

• Calvert Ariel Growth Fund.

• Calvert Ariel Appreciation Fund, now in the formulative load with a $250 minimum investment, has yielded 13 percent annually the past five years. That fund, founded in 1973, is considered to be the granddaddy of social investment mutuals. Diskin said.

New Alternatives Fund, a load fund with a minimum investment return of 15 percent as of last August.

SOME INDIVIDUAL stocks that receive high marks for socially responsible investers from a variety of rating sources are Apple Computer, Boston Bancorp. Citizens Utility 'B', Kelly Services and the Handleman Co.

Kelly and Handleman are headquartered in Troy.

"You're looking for companies that produce good products, sustain the environment and make room for women and minorities in the structure," Diskin said.

"There's three kinds of people interested in social responsible investing," Diskin said. "First, you find hard-core activists, '60s holdovers, who make a statement and vote with dollars for the world they want.

Fretter needs more room

By Doug Funke staff writer

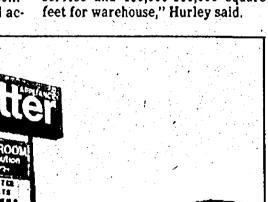

Fretter Inc., an appliance retailer with corporate offices, a warehouse and a showroom on Schoolcraft Road in Livonia, is looking for a new building to consolidate administrative and distribution operations.

"We'd like to stay in Livonia," said John Hurley, Fretter president. "We're pretty well sold on the community. It's well run. It has good access to the freeway."

Fretter executives see a need to nearly double the 94,000 square feet of space available in the Livonia building, opened in 1973.

The company also is exploring the possibility of relocating to Farmington Hills, Hurley said.

"WE NEED probably 5,000 square feet for office, 12,000 square feet for service and 150,000-160,000 square

ART EMANUELE/staff phtographer

"We built our (Livonia) facility when we had $8.5 million in sales and about 12 stores," he said. "Last year, we had sales of $230 million in 57 stores."

Fretter currently houses accounting and purchasing departments in Livonia; payroll, legal and personnel in Southfield; and service in Redford, Hurley said.

The company also leases a warehouse in Taylor.

THE PLAN is to consolidate all administrative and warehousing operations in one building.

Corporate officers have explored housing needs for nearly nine months, Hurley said.

The company owns the Livonia building, as well as the offices in Southfield and Redford. The company would prefer to buy a new headquarters and lease its satellite offices, Hurley said. The company is open to selling or leasing its Livonia building after making a move, he said. No jobs would be gained or lost with a consolidation, Hurley said. About 200 would work in the administrative office/service center, 30 in the warehouse.

Fretter, a publicly owned corporation trading on over-the-counter exchanges, had a net income of $1.7 million on sales of $153.2 million through the first three quarters of budget year 1989-90, said Laura Krause, a financial analyst for Fretter.

Fretter Inc. executives are looking for a facility double the size of its Livonia building, opened in 1973.

ington Hills-based Michigan Association of CPAs has supplied the answers to some of the most commonly asked questions on 1989 taxes. What are the tax rates for 1989?

They are the same as last year. The good news is that the brackets have been adjusted for inflation. As a result, you can earn a little more money before moving into a higher tax bracket.

I served on jury duty recently and had to surrender the check to my employer. Will I still have to declare required for the degree. the jury-duty pay as income?

Yes. But a new tax law will enable same amount — even it you don't itemize. As a result, you will no longer be taxed on money you didn't actually keep.

The answer depends on how the money is used and whether your son is a degree candidate. Scholarships or fellowships made after Aug. 16, 1986, are tax-free only for degree candidates who use the funds for tuition and course-related expenses. You can no longer exclude from income any money awarded for such expenses as room, board and travel. Nor can you exclude any funds received in return for teaching or research services — even if they are

If you haven't received your statement by the time you're ready to fill out your return, you're not off the hook - a gain must still be reported. Keep in mind that certain activities, such as participation in a dividend reinvestment program, may make calculating gain a tricky matter.

I'm self-employed and maintain an office at home. Will I be able to deduct my business expenses?

If the space in your home is used regularly and exclusively for business and is separate from your living space, you may be able to deduct a percentage of the costs of running your house, including your utilitles and even a home security system. But keep in mind that the home-office deduction may be a red flag for IRS audits.

Let's face it, the annual SAE con- magician to catch your attention. of the Paul McCartney tour.

Maybe it's because they hand out the world's biggest name tags, which flag participants to local waiters and panhandlers. (I usually take my SAE name tag off and slip it into my pants pocket as soon as I leave Cobo Hall, until the pin opens up and sticks me in the thigh).

But after you push your way through the crowd of Harris tweed sport coats, finish thumbing through papers with polysylabic titles and start wandering through the convention floor, you enter an arcane world of invention and technology that aircraft carriers. starts to hook you.

NOT THE magic shows. I stay away from any booth that hires a vention lacks some of the electricity. Likewise an industrial exhibit that uses a whole chorus line, similar to one a couple of years ago of scantily clad young lovelies with T shirts identifying them as "Miss Flex 2000," named after a new formula polyester resin, which greeted me a couple of years ago when I ventured inside the show.

This year, I was fascinated by a four-wheeled cart with independently steered and powered wheels that zig-zagged, spun around and zipped back and forth along one aisle. It was a prototype of a robot fire truck ultimately intended to fight fires on short section of fuel injection hose and start gaveling their booth table when they get restless.

Underdeveloped countries launch trade efforts in the basement. I've seen a few start out with sets of hand tools that seemed to be forged over a charcoal grill, and a few years later the same group will exhibit microelectronics.

. The most intense efforts are coached in cagey presentations carefully edited teasers about research that only hints at the real thing, lest the competition learn too much. There is a half a room attending a session on how to mold a complete car chassis out of composites in about two minutes; another crowd eats up a presentation on high-output, similified internal combustion engines.

THE PLACE steams with the sweat of invention, lost in esoteric details. Seemingly half the papers address social concerns - safety. ecology, recycling - which would be a surprise to a political activist who never strayed from the liberal arts.

Then comes the ponderous presentations of the major corporations. One supplier says it could be 10 years before the composite chassis is practical - 10 years for a rich and powerful company to bring a concept to market, when the process already is running in a small shop in Sterling Heights.

That's about the time span it took. to build up U.S. Steel from a barrel in a back yard or the time it took to develop a practical airplane or per- safe. fect mass production in the auto business at the turn of the century. WHICH BROUGHT me to where I always end up at the SAE's annual? show, wondering what eventually: happens to all this stuff, these ideas. The poverty seems not to be in invention but in the willingness to act. For some reason, I remember my next-door neighbor reminiscing about his childhood summers, when he regularly jumped into the water with a couple of buddies, swam three; miles downstream to Peche then Belle Isle, swam back across the Detroit River, then took the bus homefor supper.

Best time to invest NOW

I am frequently asked how to find the best time to invest in the stock market. My answer is always the same: The best time to invest is now. The reason is simple: it's TIME, and not TIMING, that makes the dif-

Table C: investing in a money market fund

This table represents my inability to find the right time to invest in the stock market. So I put $1,000 a year for 10 years in the money market and leave it there.

WHAT'S THE verdict? As expected, at the end of 10 years, buying at the best time outpaces buying at the worst time ($26,151 vs. $20,136). However, surprising though it may goal cannot be achieved by anyone seem, buying at the worst time produces far better results than leaving Table B: investing at the stock the money in the money market fund, waiting for the best time to ar-

Pets of the week

Lady, a black-and-white mixed breed Labrador retriever, and Fluffy, a female tiger-striped kitten, need homes. Lady (Control No. 283003) is part of a litter of five, she and the others will become large dogs 50-75 pounds once they reach maturity. Fluffy (Control No. 282944) is litter-trained, good with other pets and children. To adopt these pets or others, or to check for lost pets, call the Westland Kindness Center of the Michigan Humane Society, 721-7300. The center is at 37255 Marquette, Westland.

Lindsey is a 5 year old diabetic. Her daily insulin shots, diet restrictions and constant blood monitoring only provide day to day control over the disease. They do not cure it. So Lindsey, along with 11 million other Americans, still faces the long term risks of diabetes. like heart disease, blindness, stroke amputation and kidney disease. The complications of diabetes will account for an estimated. 150,000 deaths this year alone.

But thanks to your contributions to the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Lindsey and millions like her have something more to look forward to. In the past decade, JDF research has made great strides in isolating the causes and conditions of diabetes, bringing us closer to a cure. At the same time, diabetes increases by 6% every year. And in ten years the number of diabetics will have doubled:

So you see, your help is needed more desperately than ever before. For more information on the warning signs of diabetes and its treatment, and what you can do to help, call IDF at (313) 569 6171.

Insulin can keep her alive long enough to have kidney failure.

Raymond E.

The month of March features a close conjunction between Venus and Mars, and the official start of spring.

Three planets will be visible in the predawn sky this month. Brilliant Venus, Mars and Saturn all will be in the southeast before sunrise.

Jupiter will be a bright beacon nearly overhead after sunset. Mercury is too close to the sun to be seen. The amount of sunlight we receive will increase by one hour and 26 minutes in March. Sunrise on March 1 was at 7:08 a.m. and sunset at 6:22 p.m., allowing for a possible 11 hours and 14 minutes of sunlight. On March 31, the sun rises at 6:17 a.m. and sets at 6:57 p.m. for 12 hours and 40 min-

THE MOON is in the constellation of Taurus the bull on the evening of March 2. The Pleiades (PLEE a dees) star cluster, the "shoulder" of Taurus, is immediately to the left of the moon.

- Fifteen degrees to the left of the moon is the star Aldebaran (al DEB a ran), the bull's "eye."

Aldebaran is a red giant star. It is 40 times larger than the sun and 125 times brighter, but doesn't look it because it's 68 light years away. The light we see tonight left Aldebaran ter. 68 years ago in 1922.

To fight crime in Philly, people plant posies.

"The bad part of town." Abandoned cars. Sidewalks scattered with crack vials. Bombed-out buildings.

A neighborhood whose spirit is as broken as the bits of glass that dot the street. There are only two things to do if your neighborhood becomes a war zone: give up or take action.

The Philadelphia Story One day, in the "bad part" of Philadelphia, a neighbor complained to a neighbor. And then to another. And then to more. People didn't like their homes being "taken over." Feelings of helplessness and resentment turned to action. They went to the police for help.

800n a substation was established where folks could readily reporterime. Weekly meetings began. Community watches started. Things started TAKE A SITE OUT OF getting fixed up. Vacant lots were cleaned up and fenced off. Abandoned cars were towed away. Painting and repairing programs began.

The neighborhood was cleaning itself up. The local 4-H Club even helped set up garden clubs where kids, teens and adults could work together on plants and flowers while talking over ways to raise awareness.

When people care and get involved, neighborhoods change. When a block doesn't look like a haven for orime and drugs, it won't be. And in this part of Philly, where once only apathy grew, seven gardens now bloom.

This is only one success story of many. To find

Thanks to Our Carriers!

Thanks and a trophy to these twelve terrific young men--our Carriers of the Year

I hroughout the year, these twelve Observer & Eccentric carriers have delivered their hometown news twice each week in all kinds of weather. They have done a super job in keeping their collections organized and settling their accounts promptly. We select carriers who have exceptional collection records, carriers who have been Carrier of the Month. Their length of service, their diligence, character and commitment to their work are all qualities that we consider when the time comes to honor these special carriers with a trophy and a dinner.

Helm wins 56 in a row

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

After he won the 140-pound state championship as a junior, everyone expected Redford Catholic Central wrestler Jay Helm to do the same this year.

That included Helm, who accomplished his goals Saturday night by winning his second Class A title in the state finals at Battle Creek's Kellogg Arena.

"I knew that if I was going to be looked at as the same kind of wrestler I was last year I had to match what I did last year," Helm said.

"My goal was to go undefeated and, thank God, I am. I had no less intentions of winning it again."

Helm finished the season with a 56-0 record — the topper to winning another individual crown — when he defeated Jeff Wiscombe of Lake Orion in the championship bout, 8-5. He was 50-2 a year ago.

"I BELIEVED I could (be undefeated)," he said. "I believed, if I could win the state as a junior and keep the attitude I had last year, I would go undefeated."

Helm, who was ranked No. 1 in the nated his weight class during the two-day finals session.

Though the decision in the championship was only a three-point margin, he was in control of that bout. There was clearly a difference in his first three matches. opener and scored a technical fall (17-1) over Ypsilanti's Assad Nimer. in the next round. He whipped Todd Markel of Bay City Western by superior decision (18-5) in the semifinals. "I wanted to go out there and make the point spread as much as I could right off the bat," Helm said.

his back right away and, in the second one, I just didn't stop. (Saturday) morning I had a takedown and let him up to try and get a technical

"IN THE final match, everyone expected me to do the same to this kid," he added. "I didn't like that, because that's sort of a jinx."

Helm awed the crowd when he used the best move of the day to gain the advantage early in his bout with Liscombe, an opponent he hadn't faced in nine years since the two were in youth wrestling programs.

Both wrestlers were on their knees with arms interlocked when Helm executed a double side roll that put him in a commanding position. The takedown and nearfall gave him a 5-0 lead, and he led 6-2 after the first

"Our team is the only one that really knows that move," Helm said. "That move has to be there at the right time. I knew the time was right. I was hoping to get a pin out of state throughout the season, domi- it, but I was a little too high and lost

Helm picked up a two-point reversal in the second period to lead 8-3 at the end, and Liscombe picked up single points for an escape and stalling: in the third period.

Of the four CC wrestlers at state, Helm planed Manny Cervantes of 171-pound Dan Kelly was the only Flint Carman-Ainsworth (2:59) in the other one to win a match. He lost to Westland John Glenn's Kraig Kuban in the first round and beat James Weeks of Rochester before being eliminated. Heavyweight Rob Sylvester and 112-pound Rusty Fowler lost their first two bouts.

LIVONIA Franklin's Jay Wheeler, the lone Livonia wrestler to qualify, "The first kid — I caught him on pinned Jeff Kotas of Harper Woods

secutive individual state wrestling title with an 8-5 victory Sat-into the consolation round with a loss to eventual runner-up Todd Garris Lake Orion and losing the next two Kuban, after beating Kelly 13-1, lost to Grand Ledge's Eric Alspaugh but pinned Mike Davis of Owosso in the consolation round.

He was eliminated, however, when he lost an 11-8 decision to Birming-

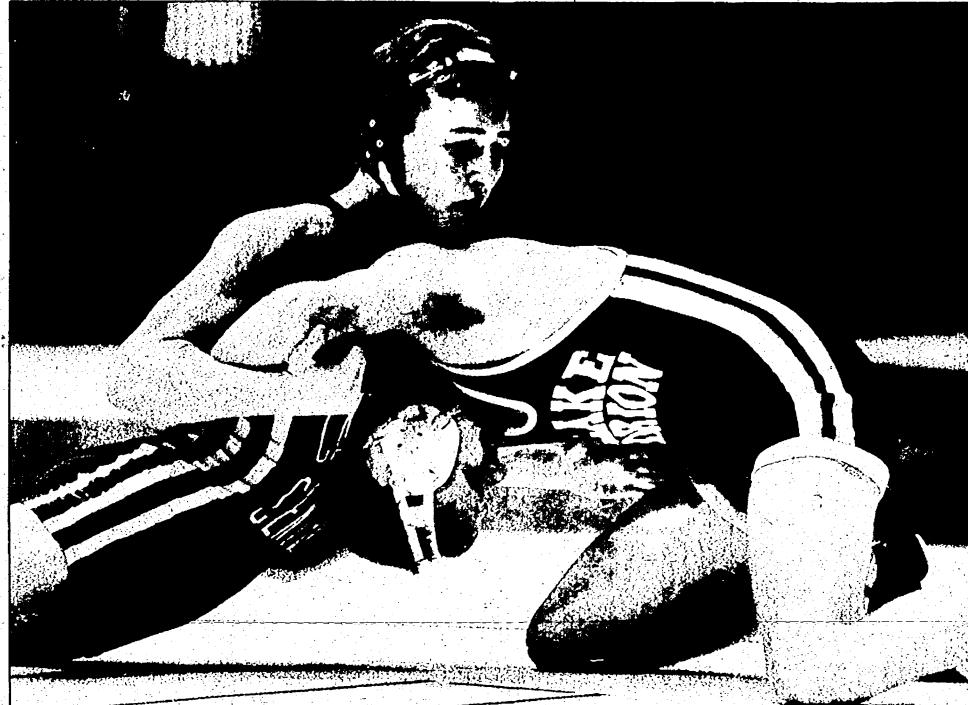

Notre Dame (2:52) before dropping ham Brother Rice's Mac McCabe. That defeat, coming just prior to the consolation semis, cost him a chance to place in the top sixth. Observerland rival Pete Israel of Plymouth Salem won his match at that point and eventually finished sixth.

> Salem's brother combination of Steve and Brian Burlison won consolation titles at 160 and 189 pounds, respectively, both taking come- Thompson of North Farmington from-behind victories. Steve rallied earned fifth place at 140. Walled from a 4-0 deficit after two periods to beat South Lyon's Larry Olson 8-6, and Brian, behind 3-2 in the last period, shot a takedown with eight seconds left to nip East Lansing's Jim Seaton 4-3. Soren Murphy of Walled Lake Central also garnered a third-place finish, at 112 pounds, and Matt Lake Western's Todd Hoffmeyer lost. both matches he wrestled.

In Class B wrestling at Kellogg Arena, Redford Thurston's 160? pound Shane Berns lost his first two bouts as did Dave Prusinski (112) and Gary Devlne (140) of Farmington Hills Harrison.

finished the year unbeaten and ranked No. 1 in the 140-pound.

SC's rally comes up short at Delta

By C.J. Risak and Mike Stewart staff writers

"Life isn't fair," said Schoolcraft College women's basketball coach Jack Grenan moments after the Lady Ocelots lost a heartbreaker, 63-62, to Delta College in the second round of the Michigan Community College Athletic Association playoffs at Delta Wednesday.

"If the girls didn't know it before, they do now."

Grenan was partially right. SC battled back from a 12-point deficit with 3:10 left in the game, only to have its comeback fall one point

The Lady Ocelots got the right breaks down the stretch. Tracy Osborne's basket after a rebound pulled them to within one, 63-62, with 41 seconds left. Then Delta's Amy Wazny missed the front end of a one-and-one with 22 seconds to

So SC had its chance, and the ball went to the right player, sophomore forward Lisa DePlanche. DePlanche got the ball in the key, pivoted and put up a short shot that bounced around the rim before falling out.

"I can't ask for more than what I got from these kids," said Grenan, whose team finished at 18-7, with three losses coming against Delta. "They did everything they had to do to win. We just didn't get any luck."

THAT'S NOT entirely accurate. There was no doubt which team was better over the last seven minutes — Delta was outscored 12-5 and failed to get a point in the final 3:41. But SC hardly looked like championship material in the game's first 33 minutes.

The Lady Ocelots never led, they scored just nine points in the first 11:20 of the second half, and they were a dismal seven of 19 from the free throw line.

Delta's inconsistency played a major role in SC's comeback. The Ploneers led by eight (24-16) with 12 minutes left in the first half, but SC's inside scoring narrowed the gap to 38-34 at the half.

basketball

The Pioneers started the second half fast, too. They outscored SC 19-9 to go up 57-43.

When SC's main inside weapon, Barb Krug, fouled out with 7:28 left and her team still trailing by 10, a comeback seemed improbable.

BUT COME BACK the Lady Ocelots did, behind Tricia Lucas, who filled in ably for Krug. Lucas sparked the rally by scoring seven straight points in a 90-second span that narrowed the gap to 63-60 with Delta was three of six from the stripe in the final 5:31, missing two one-and-ones, and committed four turnovers in the last three minutes, which aided SC immensely.

Krug's 15 points paced SC; 10 of those came in the first half. De-Planche scored 14, getting 10 in the second half. Lucas netted 13. Wazny's 14 points topped Delta. Cherina Loyd, Faye Burt, Missy Shipp and Jodi Wood had 10 apiece.

ON MONDAY, the host Lady Ocelots shook off a pesky St. Clair County CC squad 71-58 in the first round of the Eastern Conference fl-

St. Clair trailed by just one, 53-52, with under five minutes remaining, but SC scored eight-straight points to put the game away.

DePlanche paced the Lady Ocelots' offensive attack, with 15 of her team-high 17 points coming in the second half. Her timing couldn't have been better because Krug, whose 12 points gave the Lady Ocelois a 35-33 lead at the intermission, was held scoreless in the second

A pair of back-to-back DePlanche buckets gave SC a 41-33 lead early in the second half; St. Clair didn't hit a field goal until nearly five minutes had elapsed.

Much of the defensive credit goes to SC's Tricia Lukas. Lukas, who had 10 points and eight rebounds, made life miserable for St. Clair post Shannyn Fasbender. The heart of St. Clair's offense, Fasbender was limited to just two field goals in the second half, though she still managed to finish with a game-high 21 points.

ST. CLAIR was also hurt by the loss of starting guard Ann Shaw to a twisted ankle early in the second half. Nonetheless, St. Clair scrambled to within 48-47, but another pair of DePlanche hoops bumped the Lady Ocelots' lead to five.

With 5:15 left in the game, the Skippers made another run. A free throw by Julie Maryon, who finished with 15 points, and a three-pointer by Michelle Powell, who canned four tres and finished with 16 points, brought St. Clair to within one again, 53-52.

That would be the Skippers' last comeback, however. The Lady Ocelots got two baskets from Lukas, a hoop by Laurel Haener and a bucket by DePlanche, all unanswered, to go up 61-52. SC then canned eightconsecutive free throws to seal it.

Lady Ocelot coach Jack Grenan praised the strong play of the Skippers, who fell three times to his team this season. "They just dog you the whole game. They keep coming at you. If you take a breather they'll

He also praised his team's defensive play. "Defense has been our priority. We've given up an average of 61 points per game, and against the caliber of play in this league, that's outstanding."

Grenan pointed to the playmaking abilty of guard Ann Hardy, who finished with 10 points and eight rebounds and was responsible for breaking most of the St. Clair, halfcourt traps, "Without her running the offense I don't know what we'd do," he said.

Tracy Osborne added 13 points to the Schoolcraft attack, nine coming from the three-point range,

Stevenson makes WLAA finals

By Brad Emons staff writer

A sleeping glant may have been awakened Tuesday in the Western Lakes Activities Association basketball playoffs.

Host Livonia Stevenson put on a devastating display down the stretch Tuesday to beat Andy Smith (31 points) and Farmington Harrison, 82-71, earning a spot in Saturday's WLAA championship game against host Plymouth Salem.

"Each time out they learn something new about the game and they're getting better as a result of it," said Stevenson coach Jim McIntvre, whose team is 13-6 overall. "Earlier in the season we didn't understand how to change gears, but tonight they stayed within their own thing the last four or five minutes."

The Spartans, sometimes plagued by turnovers and poor shot selection, played flawlessly in the final quarter, outscoring the stunned Hawks wStevenson shot seven of eight from the floor and committed only two turnovers in the final quarter.

And to cap the win, the Spartans with guards Rick Laven (22 points), Matt Grodzicki (21) and Ron Baran (17) running a three-man weave - lopped off nearly two minutes of the clock with a nifty stall.

GLENN SZEMAN, the 6-foot-9 Stevenson center who was plagued by foul trouble most of the night, put an exclamation point on the win with a thunderous dunk, putting the Spartans up by 10, 78-68, with 2:46 remaining.

That came after 6-5 Steve Leonard (10 points) hit two critical baskets inside to give the Spartans some breathing room.

"We do the most harm when we get the ball inside, like 'Z's' dunk and the pass (with 3:58 to go) to Leonard inside," McIntyre said. "We found out we didn't need to cast up threepointers to win the basketball game."

But the Spartans used the long ball to stay in the game, hitting 11 threepointers on the night, five each by Grodzicki, the sophomore, and Laven, the senior.

Stevenson led 19-17 after one quarter, but Harrison regained the lead at halftime, 43-41, thanks to the hot shooting of Smith, the 6-2 junior, who scored 12 of his game-high 31 in the second period.

But Harrison mysteriously stopped going to their scoring leader in the second half.

He got off only four shots in the second half, hitting all four.

"TWO THINGS beat us," said Harrison coach Mike Teachman. "Grodzicki's shooting . . . that was a good move to play him as much as they did; and our presence of mind of not going to our scorer, who gets only Smith, who was 14 of 17 from the floor, got special attention from the Spartans in the second half.

"They (Stevenson) ran a junk defense and that had something to do with it," Teachman said. "We were trying to go to 'Smitty' while running out of our offense, but too many. times we went helter-skelter, one pass and the ball was going up.".

Laven's job was to be the chaser on Smith in Stevenson's box-and-one Another unsung hero for the Spartans was 6-5 reserve center Kevin Terry, who contributed eight points in Szeman's absence.

"The Terry kid did an excellent job in there, got some nice rebounds and battled for position inside," said the Stevenson coach. "He plugged-the gap." Ironically, nobody else in Harrison's lineup could help Smith out.

Paul Gilvydis, a 6-6 sophomore, contributed 10 points off the bench, but no other Hawk scored in double figures.

·Without Smith, the Hawks shot 15 of 48 from the floor.

"And giving up 82 points is not going to do it either," said Teachman, whose team is 14-5 overall: "We had three men working hard in the man-to-man and other two in a zone. But we got caught standing around and that's where the zone broke down."

Harrison will play Saturday against North Farmington (10-9) in the consolation final, 6 p.m. at Salem, while Stevenson, losers twice to Salem (18-1) during the regular season, will take on the host Rocks for the championship at 8 p.m.

For a time Tuesday night, it looked like shades of 1988 in the Western Lakes Activities Association basketball playoffs.

"In the end, the Plymouth Salem-North Farmington semifinal game more resembled 1989 with the defending champion Rocks taking a 55-47, home-court victory in a game that got quite chippy,

The Rocks, who are in the final for a fourth straight year, will try to repeat at 8 p.m. Saturday when they play Livonia Stevenson for a third time at Salem.

The Lakes Division champs, rated No. 8 in the state and 18-1 overall, were in danger of not advancing that far as the Raiders, who beat Salem in the '88 championship game, held the hot hand early.

Behind Jake Baker's game-high 17 joints, the Rocks came around late in the first half and led throughout the second, though a championship berth wasn't assured until the final minute.

"IN THE FIRST half, we didn't hit the boards that hard, and we were giving them second shots," Salem senior Ryan Johnson said. "We got to the glass in the second half and boxed out a lot harder. When we husthe like that, that's when we score a lot of our points."

Salem extended a 36-35, thirduarter lead to a rather comfortble, nine-point margin of 48-39 with

Wayne sets up shootout with Belleville

Wayne Memorial clinched at least a share of the Wolverine A League basketball crown Tucsday with a 69-33 rout over visiting Trenton.

Wayne, 18-1 overall and 13-0 in the league, plays at second-place Belleville at 7:30 p.m. tonight to settle things. A win by Belleville would result in a co-champi-

The Zebras never trailed against Trenton, jumping out to leads of 16-8 after one quarter, 31-18 at the half and 54-25 after three.

Wayne's 13 players scored in the contest, Trenton, 8-11 overall and 5-8 in the WAL, was paced by Joe Cesarz with nine points.

FRANKLIN 79, NORTHVILLE 67: Senior guard Craig Overaitis' 25 points paced a hot-shooting Livonia Franklin squad Tuesday, as the Patriots upset Western Division cochamps Northville in a Western Lakes Activities Association consolation game.

Franklin, which canned 29-of-53 field goal attempts, held leads of 26.17 after one quarter and 44.34 at the half. Host Northville scrambled to within six after three quarters, 59-53, but the Patriots held off the Mustangs. "I'm shocked," Mustang coach Larry Taylor said. "They (Franklin) played an outstanding first quarter. We got close a couple of times but they made their free throws at the end." The Patriots, now 9-10 overall, hit eight-of-nine from the stripe in the fourth quarter and 19-of-26 overall.

Steve McCool added 17 for the Patriots. John Santi (12 rebounds) and sophomore Keith Roberts netted 10 points aplece. Dave Barina contributed nine points and 11 rebounds. The Mustangs (13-6) were paced by Joe Kaley's 18-point effort. Paul Grant hit for 13 and Scott Meredith netted 11.

THURSTON 58, MILFORD 57: Redford Thurston scored just 16 second-half points Tuesday, but managed to fend off visiting Milford Lakeland.

Lakeland trailed 17-15 after one quarter and 42-35 at the half, before closing the gap to just two at the end of three

Down by just one with 30 seconds remaining, Milford wanted to stall for a final shot, but Thurston foiled the strategy by stealing the ball. With four seconds remaining, the Eagles failed to convert the front end of a one-and-one, but Lakeland could only manage a half-court desperation shot that fell short. Junior guard Danny Pertiula paced the 14.5 Eagles with 17. points. Justin McEwen and D.J. Kellogg (15 rebounds) added 10 points each. Lakeland was led by Mike Bolling with 23 points and Keith Butler with 18 - all from three-point range.

Eagles took a 29-21 lead into intermission. A 24-point thirdquarter gave Thurston a 53-31 lead. Perttula (15 points), Kellogg (12) and Jamal Merida (11) paced the Eagle scorers. Crestwood was led by Denny Kaczmarzcyk's 15 points and George Rockwell's 11. GLENN 67, CHURCHILL 65: On Tuesday, Livonia Churchill swished 19-of-25 free throws, held a 37-21 rebounding advantage, and had two good scoring chances at the buzzer, but Westland John Glenn netted the win in this Western Lakes Activities Association consolation game.

Glenn held a 25-11 lead after one quarter, but Churchill closed the gap to three points, 36-33, at the half. Glenn opened up a 54-49 lead after three, but had to withstand a wild finish before upping its record to 10-9.

Bobby Lawrence canned 23 points, including 11 in the third quarter; to lead the Rockels. Teammate Jason Pizzuti added 16 and Mike Trussler had 12.

Mike Juodawlkis (12 rebounds) and Mike Thomas paced the Churchill offensive attack with 19 points each. Randy Calcaterra added 12 points and nine rebounds, while Kevin Hannigan added nine points in the losing effort. Churchill falls to 10-8.

GARDEN CITY 90, CRESTWOOD 51: Five players scored in double figures as Garden City hammered Dearborn Heights Crestwood Tuesday at GC.

The Cougars, 2-5 and 7-12, opened up leads of 16-10 after one quarter, 42-20 at the half and 67-32 after three.

Kevin Gates headed the offensive fireworks with 15 points. Dan Emerson added 14; Rick Morton canned 12; and Bud Barnett and Adam Marana had 10 each. Garden City was 17-of-23 from the stripe.

Sophomore Denny Kaczmarczyk paced Crestwood, 1-18, with

On Monday, Garden City fell to Dearborn Edsel Ford in two overtimes, 76-71, in a Northwest Suburban League game at GC. The Cougars trailed 14-11 after one quarter and 35-31 at the half before vaulting to a 51-45 lead after three. With :14 left in regulation and the game tied at 66, the Cougars had possession but lost the ball out of bounds. Edsel Ford couldn't get off a shot, though, and the game headed into overtime.

Cougars' senior guard Jim Marszalek (22 points) canned a jumper at the buzzer to tie it at 68-68 and send the game into Edsel Ford's Derek Lowe hit four of his game-high 32 points to lee the win in the second extra session. Todd Williams added 12 in the game for Ford, now 5-3 and 10-8.

The Cougars got 18 points from Morton and 11 points from Emerson.

TEMPLE 59, CLARENCEVILLE 55: Redford Temple Christian upped its record to 12-7 with a win over Livonia Clarenceville Tuesday at Temple Christian.

coach Dave Gilliam, "But we had a big enough lead to hold them off." Kendrick Harrington led the Trojans (6-12) with 22 points, while teammate Derrick Herr added 16. WHITMORE LAKE 45, LUTH. WESTLAND 42:

Down by seven points with two minutes remaining, Lutheran Westland stormed back to tie the game. However, Whitmore Lake senior center Brian Bihlmeyer, who had a game-high 23 points, ruined the comeback by canning a game-winning trey with four seconds left.

"We had a hand in his face, and I'll bet he was three feet outside of the three-point line, too," said Westland coach Scott Wiemer, whose team fell to 7-11.

Whitmore Lake trailed 11-10 after one quarter, but jumped out to a 25-20 lead by the intermission. Down 36-32 after three quarters, Westland scrambled back, only to fall at the buzzer. Steve Aumann paced Lutheran Westland with 12 points.

HURON VALLEY 94, IMMAC. CONCEPTION 88: Westland Huron Valley Lutheran got the best of this run; and gun battle Tuesday at Huron Valley.

The Hawks, 9-7, led Hamtramck Immaculate Conception 23. 15 after one quarter, but Hamtramck cut the lead to 36-33 by halftime. A 23-point third quarter put the Hawks up by nine, 59-50, and they never looked back.

Volleyball recruits to bolster Madonna

By Brad Emons staff writer

Coach Jerry Abraham says his new recruiting class at Madonna College could possibly put his volleyball team into the NAIA national limelight.

Mazie Pilut, a 5-foot-9 setter from Redford Bishop Borgess High, has been signed to the Fighting Crusaders along with 6-foot middle hitter Dana Hicks of Milford Lakeland and 5-9 outside hitter Lynn Stempowski of Madison Heights Bishop Foley.

The three scholarship players will join nine returnees who helped Madonna to a 29-13 overall record and a No. 2 ranking in District 23 of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics in 1989.

"I think all three are Division I (NCAA) players," said Abraham. "These are not project players. CMU's athletic director. They're all top players as far as also happen to need all three of their positions big'time."

Pilut turned down an offer from the University of Toledo to sign with Madonna. She plans to major in Elementary Education.

"He (coach Abraham) cares about his players and makes people work to their full potential," said the All-Catholic League pick. "He doesn't let people slack off."

ABRAHAM has been close to Pilut - a two-time All-Observer pick and second-team All-Stater (Class B) from a year ago - having coached college sports

her at Borgess and in summer AAU tournaments.

"Mazie started two seasons for me and I think she rates with the top two or three setters in the state," said the Madonna coach.

Hicks, who laid off a year, is presently enrolled at Madonna (also in Elementary Education). She originally signed a national letter-of-intent with Central Michigan, but quickly discovered Mount Pleasant wasn't meant for her, particularly after head coach Marcy Weston stepped down to take the job as "I knew some of the people, I liked what this area has to offer. And we the coach and it's a decent school, that's why I came to Madonna" said Hicks, a second-team All-Stater who also made the All-Region and All-Kensington Valley teams.

> "Dana is a powerful outside hitter with a variety of shots," Abraham said. "She also has outstanding defensive skills."

> STEMPOWSKI, who led Bishop Foley to a 10-0 record this season in the Catholic League's AA Division, is described by Abraham as a player "with great jumping ability."

> "Lynn is a hard hitter who plays an all-around game," said the Ma-

Stempowski, an All-Oakland County choice and third team (Class B) All-Stater in 1989, also considered Schoolcraft College and Oakland University before choosing Madon-

"I wanted to play at a four-year college and I'll be able to commute after the volleyball season is over," Stempowski said. "I feel real relaxed here. I know a lot of the people on the team."

Abraham coached eight Madonna players during last summer's AAU tournament schedule.

"All three are good students and it's a plus that I had an opportunity to coach all three in AAU," he said. "These are quality players who can take us where we want to go and that's the NAIA Nationals. We have a good combination of players right now and it should provide for the finest season ever at Madonna. And I'd like to say that we couldn't do it without the support of the adminis-

Livonia Churchill coach Mike Hughes may have summed it up best after Saturday's conquest of the Western Lakes Activities Association volleyball tournament champl-

"You're glad to win one, it's tough to win two, and it's nearly impossible to win three," he said. "To win three straight, you have to be real

For the Chargers, who whipped through the WLAA's regular season without a loss, there was never a doubt, particularly in the final with a 15.4, 15.7 win over host Walled Lake Central.

"Churchill didn't need this tournament," said Livonia Stevenson coach Lee Cagle. "They already proved they were the best during the regular season."

Added Central coach Mike Lindstrom: "Churchill is real quick. We just ran out of gas after an emotional win over Stevenson."

Churchill had plenty of fuel for the SUPPLYING the power were middle hitters Christina Garry and Alyssa Belaire.

The Chargers also got some strong serving and defensive play from Stephanie Speen.

'They all can play well and serve well," said Hughes, who uses most of his bench. "There were two who didn't start - Fran Priebe and Janine Sproul - who really came in and did a nice job."

Twelve schools started play early Saturday morning with the field trimmed to four later in the after-

Churchill was No. 1 in its pool, despite splitting a match with Central, 14-16, 15-11.

The Chargers held off Walled Lake Western in the semifinals, 15-13, 15-11, while Central upset Lakes Division champ Stevenson, 16-14, 15-

Stevenson could not contain Central and Sara Brorby for a third time this season.

"Brorby hit smart, knew when to dink and block," said Stevenson coach Lee Cagle, whose team is 23-7-9 overall. "She also hits very hard." "When Brorby is on, she's one of the best hitters in the area," said Hughes. "But I think Central got a little tired against us." STEVENSON whipped through pool play as a No. 1 seed, beating Westland John Glenn, Northville, Plymouth Salem and Farmington Harrison,

"We've had difficulty maintaining momentum and leads this season,' said Cagle. "In the last one against Central we couldn't maintain any momentum."

Renea Bonser was Stevenson's most consistent hitter on the day. Teammate Sue Bell passed effectively, while Teresa Sarno provided strong middle hitting and blocking, along with some strong serving.

Cagle said the Spartans also got "solid efforts" from Collette Rockwell and Andrea Wittrock.

Freshman Patty Diamond also did "an outstanding job," according to the Stevenson coach.

"Patty couldn't have more valuable experience her freshman year,' Cagle added.

Central, now 22-14 for the season, had several strong performances, led by Brorby's 45 kills and nine uce serves on the day. .

OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS came from 5-foot-3 senior setter Kristine Dean (six ace serves), junior middle blocker Kelley Glennie (44 blocks), senior Shannon Burt (16 kills and five aces), and junior setter Jackie Brown (seven aces).

A pair of 5-9 sophomores, Wendy Wolski and Stacy Barrett, combined for 11 kills. Barrett added 26 blocks.

"Dean was our unsung hero," Lindstrom said. "She was one of our leading diggers. Her service reception was 86 percent."

Western, meanwhile, advanced behind the strong outside hitting of senlor Angle Gillert, coupled with the effective middle blocking of senior

"Angle played real strong the whole match (against Churchill)," said Western coach Shannon Miller. "And Call really hit the snot out of the ball."

Western was trying to upset Churchill after losing twice to the Chargers during the regular season.

"We thought maybe the third time we could get them," Miller said. "Wewere beating them 9-2 in the first game and 11-4 in the second game. and we lost, so it was kind of a letdown.

"Churchill girls are hard-nosed. They don't give up at all. We were relaxed and they came back with good serving. And that is that."

THE WLAA COACHES held their annual All-WLAA selection meeting on Monday.

Named All-Conference (first team): Garry (senior), Belaire (junior), Brorby (senior), Bonser (senior), North's Courtney Knapp (senior) and Western's Amy Schuneman (senior).

Named All-Lakes Division: Sarno (sophomore), Burt (senior) North's Vikki Seamons (senior), Glenn's Michele Myers (senior), Salem's Aimee Rutan (senior) and Farmington's Bonnie Wheelis (senior).

Spartans win in state playoffs

By Tim Smith staff writer

Pesky Southfield-Lathrup almost ment hockey plans Tuesday.

The Chargers battled for three periods, but ultimately fell short, 6-3, champs in the opening round of the Class A hockey regional at Oak Park Compuware Arena.

Stevenson's victory largely could . be credited to a four-goal scoring. binge during the final five minutes of the first period. Other than that, Chargers head coach Ken Berke said his team was the better one of the two sharing the Compuware ice.

"I just said (before the game) to go out and have fun," Berke said. "We have a lot of seniors who were playing in their last game. .

"I thought that, except in spurts, we outplayed them. But they (Steruined Livonia Stevenson's tourna-, venson) have some tremendous tal-

Also, senior forward Ken Stein. sidelined most of the season with a broken foot, scored twice while the coach credited a strong game to defenseman Ryan Kattoo, another allstate nominee.

Until Stevenson (15.5.3) winger Matt Cichy finally solved Levine with 5:16 to play in the first period,

According to Spartans head coach Paul Ferguson, who complimented Lathrup for its play, his team's slow start probably was a result of looking ahead to its next tournament challenger, tonight against Redford Catholic Central.

POSSIBLY CONTRIBUTING to Junior Brian Levine stepped in to the oversight was the fact that Stevenson embarrassed Lathrup in an earlier meeting between the teams this season, 13-1.

"I think we got caught looking ahead to Catholic Central a little bit," Ferguson said.

'I don't know if we tried to play too hard, but it just wasn't happening for us real well tonight."

Besides the Clark line, Ferguson said his two goalkeepers played well. Spartans Kevin Brady and Dave Labadie shared net duties.

After Cichy's tying goal in the first, Stevenson took the lead for good on a goal by senior center John Fenech, who drilled home the rebound of a John Brodhun shot past Levine.

AFTER CLARK scored to increase the Stevenson lead to 3-1, Clark tallied again — the first of two nearly identical goals - at 13:56 of the first, one-timing a cross-ice pass from Johnson.

In the second period, the teams traded goals, with Stein and Matt Kozar scoring for Lathrup and Stevenson, respectively.

Stein brought his team close again, 5-3, when he broke in alone on . the right wing and beat Labadle with 12:29 - to play.

Churchill, Patriots lose in tournament

Four second-period goals proved to be more than Livonia Churchill could overcome, as the Chargers' hockey season ended with a 6-3 loss to No. 1-ranked Trenton in Class A regional action Tuesday at Wyandotte's Yack Arena.

Senior center Eric Hoerle and junior defenseman Steve Nagy paced the victorious Trojans (19-3) with one goal and two assists each.

Churchill finished its campaign with a 12-9-2 record: Colin Gallagher, Mark Michels and Troy Henderson each scored Grosse Pointe North ended Livonia Franklin's season Monday in the Class A regional at Yack Arena.

The Patriots' goals came from Dan McKay, assisted by Matt Sharkey and Bob Hayes, in the second period and Bryan Berger, assisted by Mike Nutting, in the third.

North got two goals from both Ed Barbieri and Tim Ryan as it advanced to the regional semifinal against Tren-

Franklin finished its season with a 4-18-1 record.

Dennis Nahat won a dance scholarship to Julliard when he was a high school senior performing with the Detroit City Ballet Company.

The role of the Swan Queen is considered Cynthla Gregory's signature role. She is shown here in the Cleveland Ballet's production of that famous ballet.

Where ballet thrives

Detroit-born dancer builds major company

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

VERYTHING DENNIS NAHAT did as a young-ster growing up in Detroit helped prepare him for his greatest achievement - founder and artistic director of the Cleveland Ballet Company.

Since he and Ian Horvath started it in 1976, the company has grown to be the fourth largest in the coun-

The performances of the complete "Swan Lake" ballet, March 8-11 at Masonic Temple as part of the Michigan Opera Theatre season, mark the first time the Cleveland Ballet has performed here since its inaugural year performance at the Grosse Pointe War Me-

Nahat's memories of that remain forever vivid because he boldly borrowed the black velvet stage curtains from his aima mater, Grosse Pointe High School, to cover the yellow ones at the War Memorial.

HE IS a handsome, intense man, who still has the dancer's body tone. He punctuates his animated speech with facial expressions and body gestures.

He jumps from his chair to illustrate what he means as he speaks of the long fluid line of a dancer's body in "Swan Lake," or how to move on stage in full Elizabethan

In his office at One Playhouse Square in downtown Cleveland, he was talking and eating a tuna sandwich (almost simultaneously). As he mentioned high school, he reached to the shelf behind for his high school and junior high albums.

"I never throw anything away," he said with an engaging smile of satisfaction as he produced a yellowed newspaper clipping from a 1963 Grosse Pointe newspaper.

It described how he, a high school senior, had been invited to audition for the Juilliard School in New York City.

MARTHA HILL from Julllard saw him with the Detroit City Ballet Company in the Northwestern Regional Ballet Festival. He received a full scholarship in dance after at first intending to major in music and minor in dance. The fact that he did his own choreography for the audition, the drummer boy solo from "Graduation Ball," didn't hurt either.

"I was in everything," he said as he reminisced.

He wasn't exaggerating - first viola at Barbour Junior High and Eastern High schools of Detroit, drum major of the Grosse Point High band (he completed his last two years there), only boy in the Future Business Leaders Club picture in the high school album, only boy in the typing class, plano accompanist for the Madrigal Singers, tenor in the chorale, accompanist of the Men's Glee Club of De-

ON TOP of all that was dance. "I took the bus downtown everyday to the Ricardeau Dance Studios at Woodward and Warren. I started dancing at 9, in the Maccabees Building. I was teaching ballet at 11. I was doing it all. "I used to clean the studios cause I couldn't afford to pay for the classes," he said, settling in his

"So, every Saturday morning at 8 a.m. as a young teenager, I'd mop the floors, clean the mirrors and if I finished work, I'd start dancing in front of the mirrors and make up my own steps. I actually got better because I made up my own steps.

"Being in a studio alone is a discovery time. I could ask myself why I can't balance while doing this, why this won't work. I accompanied myself. I'd play a combination at the piano and get up and do the steps."

He took a breath.

"Cleaning was a pleasure," he said quietly. "I brought all that

He remembered when a young student at the Cleveland Ballet School saw him cleaning the mirrors. She thought he was the janitor, until he showed up later as the artistic director.

HE GREW UP in the embrace of family strongly rooted in Middle Eastern culture and background. His mother was born in Syria, his father in the United States. His parents had a grocery at Fort by the bridge and later at Jefferson and Conner.

"I learned a lot about business from them, how to meet people, how to sell . . . They were a very understanding, free family."

He remembered seeing the local dance team of George Coury and his sister, Emelia.

"I thought they were the most beautiful people I had ever seen they were image makers.

"I had two uncles who made violins, one gave me one. We always had a piano in the house, one (relative) played the oud (similar to a lute). At dinners and parties, there was always music and dancing."

As a student in New York, Nahat said he had the best of all teachers - Martha Graham, Jose Limon, Martha Hill, Anthony Tudor, Anna Sokolow . . . Later he became principal dancer for the Joffrey AUDIENCES AT the 8 p.m. per-Ballet and the American Ballet

He has choreographed more than 60 ballets for major companies. On Broadway, he choreographed the Tony award-winning musical version of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," Tom Stoppard's "Jumpers" and "Good Time Charlie" with Joel

He choreographed sequences for the movie, "The Turning Point," and played himself in a cameo role. formance Friday, March 9, and the 2 p.m. matinee Sunday, March 11, will see Nahat in the role of Wolfgang, the old gentleman.

"I don't put white tights on, but I can walk around and be very grand," he said, demonstrating. "He's major domo of the ballroom scene. It requires a mature person. These roles I'll always do and must do so youngsters can see maturi-

He showed how the old gentleman would walk in his long cape, turn his head and point his finger.

Nahat spends endless hours with the dancers perfecting every movement, he said. As one male dancer took hold of the Swan Queen's finger tips, he quickly reminded him, "You've just grabbed her feathers."

"I am completely drained after a rehearsal, they must understand every step they do and I put that step in there," he said quietly.

It started when he bought a school

It was late in 1971 when Dennis Nahat and another dancer, Ian Horvath, stopped in Cleveland to visit Horvath's mother and learned a ballet school there was for sale.

They bought it and founded the Cleveland Dance Center which soon grew "from 40 ladies who lunched, to 250 students. . . . The Ballet Guild of Cleveland wanted to present us, so then we had a support group, but no company," said

For several years they did what he called "pre-performances" until he and Horvath choreographed and presented a dance extravanganza "U.S." with 16 dancers. It so impressed representatives of the Cleveland Foundation that they offered $250,000 in seed money the next day to get the company under way.

In 1985, the Cleveland Ballet and City Center

Ballet of San Jose formed a partnership that gave rise to the Cleveland San Jose Ballet with Nahat as sole artistic director. The partnership has resulted in many more yearly performances for the company, an increased budget and generally a much broader scope of operations. It now has a $9 million a year budget and gives about 100 performances annually.

Dennis Nahat's production is in four acts, rather than the usual two or three. He has added a prologue and an epilogue to the Ivanov-Petipa scenario.

He said, "I always admired the possibility of "Swan Lake," but never believed it worked totally. What is wrong with the concept is there is no beginning, no middle, no end. It is one of the finest scores ever written. It contains all the elements that are ballet . . . but, it needs four acts."

Other departures will be that the women are on point throughout the production. All slavic dances are on point which Nahat says, "make then much more beautiful. When you put a boot on, you become a character company." Besides, he said, it's easier on the dancer than going from one kind of shoe to an-

Theaters restored

Detroit is just moving into the stage of theater restoration which Cleveland completed several years Playhouse Square Foundation is Playhouse Square Center in downtown Cleveland is home to three restored theaters, the Ohlo (1,035 seats), the State (3,098) and Palace (2,714) as well as the Cleveland Ballet Company and five other resident companies. The restoration of all three, built in the 1920s as vaudeville houses, plus a new stagehouse, took 61/2 years and cost $37.7 million. This is the largest theater restoration project in the world.

the non-profit organization that manages the theaters and develops, produces and presents musicals. One of the musicals, "Gospel at Colonus," played on Broadway and several others are on national tour.

Playhouse Square Center is also a developer. It built a 750 parking garage on the complex in 1987, a $40 million office building last year and a $32 million hotel with a 1991 completion date.

Follow through is key ingredient

I'm a patient guy . . . often too patient. When someone cuts me off in traffic I just get cut off. But if my wife, Sandy, is in the car she leans over and honks my horn at them. Which usually results in the offender flipping an offensive gesture back at me . . . the patient one. But where I lose my cool is at (read this with an echo) "the drive-in window." Oh the tremendous follow through that must take place. First there is the broken message: "He--o can I -elp -you?" Then if they get your order and if it gets in the bag and if it's close to hot and if you get it home you're just plain lucky.

"Follow through" is a term I often use in my art classes. Follow through means, "to follow something through to completion." Now that doesn't mean to just finish art work. No, it means to finish your artwork right. Follow through can be as simple as erasing your pencil lines or carefully placing your signature on the finished piece.

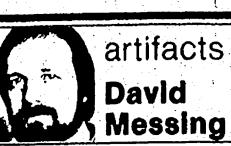

Many times students will work hard to perfect their pencil sketch as preparation for pen and ink. But when they transfer their sketch to bristol or illustration board they carelessly follow the lines they worked so hard to draw, which produces à very inaccurate transfer and often kills the work.

when the drawing is transferred accurately, but inked carelessly. Thinking the pen and ink is taking too long or the medium is too hard can stifle your follow through. Follow through in a new medium is especially hard because you as a student do not know where you are headed technically speaking. In the uncharted ground of a new medium the student should lean heavily to their teacher for direction. Follow through brings it all together. A signature can mess up a whole

Another example of lack of follow through is picture by being slightly crooked or sloppy. So give yourself a guide line to follow or intention. ally make your signature crooked and develop an artistic signature.

In a watercolor it is common to sign your name in pencil, but I usually sign my name lightly in pencil then carefully follow the lines of my signature with an appropriate color in a script liner brush.

Some lose their follow through as late as the cleanup. There are smudges that are left like a halo over the artwork. In graphite or pencil drawings some people don't follow through to get their darks, dark enough, which in turn makes their lights appear to not be light enough. On the opposite end of the spectrum is the over; renders. I honestly feel that if I didn't snatch the brush or pen from some students hand they would truly follow through . . . through the pair per. Over rendering can be a misuse of the media um and most often weakens the statement or strength of the work of art. It is like a person who speaks much but really says little. I do per: sonally however enjoy detail but find it disturbe ing when an artist tries to hide poor structure under a cloak of detail and over-rendering.

The "follow through" principle could be boiled down to this combination of three equally important ingredients for success.

Downtown bustle traced in photo exhibit

Photographs of turn-of-the-centu-'ry central business districts from cities across the United States reveal what Americans found so appealing — and so bewildering — about downtown life in Main Street U.S.A., a new exhibition opening March 3 at Henry Ford Museum.

The 64 images in the display have been selected from a group of 25,000 of the original photographs produced by the Detroit Publishing Company that are now in the museum's collections. The company was a major national marketer of postcards and prints beginning in the 1890s.

graph depicts elements which define the nature of dense downtown commerical districts, according to Cynthia Read-Miller, curator of photography and film at Henry Ford Museum and editor of the 1988 Dover publication, "Main Street, U.S.A. in Early Photographs.",

"To bring people and goods into commercial centers, a variety of transportation systems developed, and road surfaces had to evolve to accommodate them all," Read-Miller explains. A 1911 view of Los Angeles shows horse-drawn wagons sharing a cobblestone roadway with pedestrians, bicycles, electric trolleys, and automobiles.

THE PHOTOGRAPHS also reveal how businesses acted to make their own signs a prominent feature of the downtown landscape. And a careful look at the images indicates that, while regional and economic conditions influenced building styles, a building's unique architectural character often reflected its Importance to the owners and the community.

. For example, says Read-Miller, a ca. 1910 photograph of Albany, N.Y. depicts building styles ranging from simple to ornate, but the Albany Savings Bank's dome and classical facade are uniquely eye-catching.

In addition to portraying diverse activities in cities of various sizes located in different regions, Main Street U.S.A. also illustrates a major facet of the work of one of the country's most comprehensive publishers of photographic images, the Detroit Publishing Co.

The Main Street U.S.A. exhibition will remain on view at Henry Ford Museum through Sep. 30. There is no additional charge for the exhibit beyond regular museum admission.

Aslong shutter speed at Scotland's Mealt Falls produced an unusual and dramatic waterfall photograph for Monte Nagler resulting in a misty, dreaming feeling.

Let your film do a slow blur

Long shutter speeds can produce striking photographs of things in motion and give you visual effects not obtainable with faster shutter speeds.

Shooting a waterfall, for example, at a fast speed to "freeze" the water in mid air is fine. But imagine the dramatic effect you can achieve by using a slow shutter speed. The water will appear as a blur, with an almost misty, dreamy mood captured on your film.

Pictures using slow shutter speeds are easy to obtain. You'll need a sturdy tripod and cable release to do the job. Compose, focus and adjust to the smallest aperture the lens will allow so that the meter will call for as long a shutter speed as possible. Water will begin to show the effects of motion at speeds of 4 second, although even slower speeds are more desirable.

If your meter indicates too fast a shutter speed even at small aperture, try a slower speed film or attach a polarizer or neutral density filter to the front of the lens. The density of these filters will. reduce the amount of light reaching the film, necessitating a much slower speed to attain correct exposure.

Most likely, you'll have to set your shutter speed dial on "B" where the shutter remains open as long as you depress the cable release. Because your camera's meter may not function in the "B" setting, just determine an exposure combination with a wide aperture and extrapolate to the required shutter speed at the small lens opening. •

Don't forget other exciting picture possibilities that will put motion in your photographs. Automobile headlights and tailights make fascinating patterns at night when your camera is left on "B" for an extended time. Just use a medium lens opening for proper exposure and delightful results.

It's quick. It's easy.

And it's the law.

Even try removing your camera from your tripod and hand-hold it during a long exposure to deliberately add motion to your picture. The outcome may surprise you. • 1990. Monte Nagler

The Chrysler Technology Center, northeast of M-59 and I-75 in Auburn Hills, will house Chrysler's main design and engineering staff who will guide the automobile manufacturer's innovations into the 21st century.

nears completion

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Four years after ground was broken for the $1 billion Chrysler Technology Center, the mammoth project is moving ahead — albeit slowly.

Everything is on schedule, and everyone remains as committed to the project as they were when it was announced in December 1984, say Chrysler, state, county and local officials. (See related stories on Pages 2 and 3.)

Nevertheless, Chrysler has indefinitely postponed plans for phase two of the technology center and an adjacent 40-acre automotive supplier

Plans for the 3.3-million-squarefoot phase one of the project are unchanged, and the company still intends to open the project in the early 1990s, said Chrysler spokesman

"We've been saying for over a year now the entire facility is going to be open in 1992," he sald.

THE MASSIVE structure, north of 1,800-acre Oakland Technology Park in Auburn Hills. The technology center was heralded as a major cornerstone to the park along with GMF Robotics, Electronic Data Systems and Comerica. The center will be the focal point for Chrysler's high-tech design, innovation and testing programs. Recent announcements by

Chrysler concerning plant closings, reductions in the work force and the elimination of profit sharing for this year in no way impact the technology center on the 508 acres in the Oakland Technology Park in the northeast corner of the M-59 and I-75 intersection, Kenyon said.

The technology center's main Featherstone Road and east of 1.75, structure is virtually complete, but is in the northwest corner of the it will take another two years before all of the work will be done, Kenyon

"It is a huge facility and not all of It can be built at one time.

"MR. IACOCCA said (at a recent news conference) that we're still committed to our $15 billion product development program - the technical center is the crown jewel of our future plans," he said.

The cost cutting efforts will produce a "leaner, meaner Chrysler," that will be able to take on the 1990s as a more competitive, efficient organization, Kenyon said.

"We need the technology center to "The technical center is still very high on Chrysler's list of priorities."

PLANS FOR the second phase of the technology center have been indefinitely postponed since March 1989, Kenyon said, as have plans for an adjacent automotive supplier

"We have interest in continuing the auto supplier park - there are

Chrysler sale pending

A leaner, meaner Chrysler is selling its crown jewel - the Chrysler Technology Center - to raise more than $800 million in assets for use in other divisions of the company.

Chrysler will lease the technology center from the purchaser until the year 2020 when it will revert back to the auto manufacturer.

Chrysler manager of media relations Thomas Houston said Tuesday the sale will not affect construction at the site or operations once the facility is completed.

Chrysler will sell the facility to Manufacturers Hanover Co. of Califors nia which will sell the bonds as the Auburn Hills Trust.

Auburn Hills Trust will sell more than $800 million worth of bonds to purchase the property, after which it will be leased to Auburn Hills, Services Corp., a service of the property management company Cush-man & Wakefield with offices in Southfield.

Project consistent with planning goals

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

The Chrysler Technology Center hasn't been an easy project to pull off for Chrysler, but if it were started today it might be even more difficult to was even in 1985 — land prices in southeast Michigan have skyrocketed, anti-development sentiment is growing, assembling enough land for a major project is difficult, and government agencies are far less likely to agree to pay for infrastructure improvements in relatively undeveloped areas.

But despite the complications involved in building such a large project, state and company officials say they would do it all over again - the project is that important.

THE TECHNOLOGY center is "the crown jewel" in the manufacturer's $15 billion product development program that will help Chrysler regain its competitive edge in the coming decade, said Chrysler spokesman James Kenyon.

Chrysler's current facilities don't compare with Ford and General Motor technology centers where innovations are tried and tested years before they reach the market, he said.

To compete in the increasingly competitive market, Chrysler needs a similar technology center.

Even with the present economic belt tightening and the increasing emphasis on controlling and slowing growth, Chrysler's technology center would still be built, said Bill Loniz of the Michigan Department of Commerce economic development di-to the project may be more difficult to come by today, but the benefits of the project — jobs and Lambert said.

It is difficult to say whether the project would be

"EVERYTHING ABOUT the project is consistent with what we're doing in the Six Pack group," Loniz said.

Six Pack, the nickname given to the Greater Detroit Economic Development Group, is made up of representatives of Detroit, Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties and the departments of transpor-

The group was formed with the intent of slowing urban sprawl by "redirecting it away from the cornfields toward areas with adequate infrastructure," Lontz said.

Development is far more complex today than it areas designated for development in the SEMCOG sewer service map, Lontz said.

"That area has always been marked for develop-

"It is an in-fill project - it had water, it had sewers, it had existing roads — we merely had to expand on what was there," Lontz said. "Not only would it have been developed, but we would have pursued it just as vigorously today as we did then."

Projects farther north and west of Pontiac are less likely to get the nod from economic development planners because sewer extensions are becoming increasingly rare.

"But Chrysler is right on the edge."

ALL THE controlled growth planning principles being discussed by state and county agencies would still allow the project, said Lou Lambert of the Department of Transportation planning division. "If you look at all the guidelines, it would still be consistent with what we're doing. "If it were a true green field, we might have some problems, but it's not," he said.

When people consider the amount of work put into the area, they should remember much of the work was planned prior to the Oakland Tech Park or the Chrysler Technology Center.

Islon.

"From a state perspective, it's still one of the Building incentives and tax abatements awarded best projects we could have for the area and we

It is difficult to say whether the project would be built today because, even though there are many factors making large projects difficult, development is still largely market driven, said Oakland County Road Commission spokesman John Joy.

The technology center has had a tumultuous history. Heralded as the cornerstone of the 1,800-acre Oakland Technology Park, the Chrysler Technology Center has been the subject of huge government subsidies for roads, massive incentive packages and lawsuits.

Now, more than three years after breaking ground, the framework for the company's billion dollar investment in the future is standing.

Chrysler purchased the property in December 1984 from Qakland University and announced intentions to build a $500 million, 508-acre technology center with an adjacent auto supplier park.

Chrysler paid $12,000 an acre for the first 39 acres, and "one dollar and other valuable considerations" for the remaining 469 acres. Real estate experts have estimated Chrysler paid $40,000 an acre for the remaining land — or $18.8 million for property that is worth over $60 million

To help pay for public improvements in the Cakland Technology Park, Auburn Hills approved a Tax Increment Financing (TIFA) district in January 1985 that would divert half of the unabated taxes to public improvements.

Both Avondale and Pontiac schools, from which the tax revenues would be diverted, threatened lawsuits against the TIFA's creation.

NEARLY A YEAR after purchasing the property, Chrysler announced in October 1985 it would not build the proposed technology center without extensive improvements to I-75, M-59, county and local road networks.

Chrysler officials said they planned to break ground in the spring of 1986, but not unless it received government commitments - estimated at nearly $100 million - for Road improvements, Chrysler argued, are a normal government function. Officials also stressed that Mazda Motors' Flat Rock plant received large outlays of public funds for infrastructure and incentives.

What road improvements should be made — and how and who should pay for them would be one of the key stumbling blocks.

In November 1985, Chrysler received rezoning for the site to allow up 8 million square feet of technical/office development, an increase of 4 million square feet from the original rezoning application.

By December 1985, Chrysler, state, county and Auburn

Hills officials began discussing the sale of economic development bonds to make the road improvements. Chrysler 1 antee the loans should its plans for the technology center also announced in December 1985 that it wanted a 12 year, 50 percent tax abatement, which Auburn Hills granted in CHRYSLER POSTPONED ground breaking in March 1986 because it had not received commitments from the government for road improvements.

Final costs for the project had not been worked out, but the total government subsidy for the center and the remainder of the Oakland Technology Park was estimated to be $197.3 million in federal, state and local aid for infrastructure improvements, plus property tax abatements that could total $144 million over 12 years.

In September 1986, Oakland County loaned Auburn Hills $2.5 million for preliminary engineering work — the first public funds spent on the infrastructure improvements explicitly meant to serve the Chrysler project.

Chrysler finally broke ground on the 3.3-million-squarefoot technology center — phase one — in October 1986 following site plan approval by the Auburn Hills city council. Incentives and infrastructure commitments had still not been made, so Chrysler restricted site work to grading.

CHRYSLER ESTIMATED it would move 5.000 employees from its Highland Park headquarters to the technology center, but when completed, the project and its nearby auto supplier park would provide roughly 20,000 jobs.

The longstanding debate over the TIFA district came to a head in April 1987, when it was challenged by groups attempting to halt the diversion of tax dollars from schools. The Michigan Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of TIFAs in 1986, which freed funds for work in and around the Oakland Technology Park, but Chrysler officials needed to move ahead with its project.

Chrysler proposed utilizing the Local Development Finance Authority (LDFA) act. Similar to the TIFA law, LDFA would enable the city to earmark 100 percent of the unabated tax for improvements in thetechnology center.

Both Pontiac and Avondale schools threatened lawsuits over Chrysler's request for an LDFA. Auburn Hills originally rejected Chrysler's request for a LDFA because it went against a 1985 agreement between Auburn Hills and the schools that it would capture no more than half of the taxes generated by the site for infrastructure improvements and that Chrysler had yet to commit to the project.

CHRYSLER AND Auburn Hills reached an agreement on the LDFA in March 1987 in which Chrysler would guarfall through. The city filed a LDFA plan in June 1987.

Avondale schools, which was not directly affected by the LDFA district, did not file a lawsuit.

Pontiac Schools, according to attorney Neil Goodman of Clark, Hardy, Lewis, Pollard and Page, which represented the schools, filed a lawsuit against the LDFA authority and Auburn Hills.

The lawsuit questioned the expenditure of LDFA funds for construction of barrier free improvements at the center, and left open an option to attack the LDFA as unconstitutional.

As with the TIFA in 1985, the Michigan Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the LDFA, but the school district is still pursuing the case against using the LDFA funds for barrier free Improvements, which Pontiac schools argue should be paid for by Chrysler.

Pontiac lost in the Oakland County Circuit Court and has appealed the ruling to the Michigan court of appeals, Goodman said. "The court heard oral arguments in December 1989 and we're still waiting for a judgment."

In December 1987, Auburn Hills demanded that Chrysler guarantee loans — estimated to be around $600,000 to $1 million — it had taken out for preliminary road design work, according to Auburn Hills economic development coordinator Mary Ann Miller.'

The city borrowed the funds in anticipation of tax revenues from the center but needed a commitment before Jan. 4, 1988, that Chrysler would definitely build the technology center site.

Auburn Hills could not continue to borrow the money without assurances by Chrysler that the company would back the loans, Miller said. Fears that a 1987 automotive recession would delay, downsize or cancel plans for the technology center were behind Auburn Hills decision to ask for loan guarantees, she said.

Chrysler failed to meet Auburn Hills' early 1988 deadline, and the city carried through with its threat to suspend road work.

The suspension was short lived, Miller said. Chrysler and the city continued negotiations and engineering work resumed even though Chrysler did not sign a letter of credit. backing the economic development bonds until May 1989, Miller said.

Site and structural work started in late 1988 and early 1989 when workers began fleshing the project out. Chrysler estimated at the time that some Chrysler employees would be working at the site asearly as fall of 1989.

Chrysler estimated it would move 5,000 employees from its Highland Park headquarters to the technology center, but when completed, the project and its nearby auto supplier park would provide roughly 20,000 jobs.

Estimates of jobs provided by the Chrysler technology center and the nearby auto supplier park range from 20,000 to 32,000.

FOR ALL OF the money the state has contributed to the project, the project will be worth it, Bill Lontz of the Michigan Department of Commerce economic development divi-

The state's total financial outlay of $80 million in road improvements and economic development money for the Chrysler project's training center will result in approximately $250 million in single business and income tax revenues over the 10

"If you look at it as a typical stock market deal, we're spending $1 and getting $3 back," Lontz said.

Chrysler's decision to not build a second phase at this time will not affect those numbers, Lontz said.

The federal government is kicking in an additional $155 million in economic development, demonstration and highway money for the Chrysler Technical Center project.

ALTHOUGH CONSTRUCTION seems to be moving slowly, progress is being made every week, said Mary Ann Miller, economic development coordinator for Auburn Hills. Chrysler has completed its training center in the complex and was granted a temporary occupancy permit in early February.

Chrysler intends to complete the technology center and move in by December 1991 or early January 1992, Miller said.

"Dates can always fluctuate based on a lot of different things including the sale of cars, but that's the time I have in all of my documents.

Road construction plays catch-up to development

By Gerald Frawley staff writer-

"Roads? Where we're going we don't need roads." - Dr. Emmett Brown in "Back to the Future."

A lack of roads in and around the Oakland Technology park has been the greatest obstacle to Chrysler's plans to build its $1 billion Chrysler Technology park.

In 1985, shortly after Chrysler officials announced intentions to build the tech center, they said they would not build unless extensive road improvements were made.

What roads and who should pay for the improvements was the center of much debate between Chrysler, state, county and local officials.

Access to freeways was a key issue with Chrysler and state Interstate 75 was woefully inadequate to meet the demands of upward of 20,000 to 40,000 new jobs that would be generated by the technology center and its adjacent automotive supplier park, according to Bill Lontz of the Michigan Department of Commerce economic development division.

"WHEN WE STARTED the project with Chrysler back in 1985, the first thing we did was an environmental impact study and from that came the question of roads."

I-75 was already scheduled to receive $44 million in road improvements, Lontz said, but building the additional interchanges needed for access to the freeways was to take years, Department of Transportation planning division director Lou Chrysler and state officials agreed the freeways would need to be widened to accommodate the additional traffic. Nearly four years later, I-75 has been widened from four to eight lanes from Square Lake Road to M-24, and from four to six lanes from M-24 to Clarkston.

THERE IS still extensive work to be done before the road systems will be ready to serve the technology center and the remainder of the park, said MDOT project engineer Gerald

"We've got I-75 done now," Martin said, "but we still have a ways to go on the interchanges that will serve the area."

Three new interchanges - I-75 between University and Featherstone roads, M-59 at Squirrel Road, and M-59 at Adams Road — and the accompanying ramps, bridges and collector

"The total cost — and this is a real preliminary estimate, we have to hedge a bit — is $94 million," Martin said.

THE FIRST RAMP to the new interchange on I-75 is already under construction and should be completed this spring, Martin said. MDOT will also let bids this spring for construction of a new bridge at Featherstone Road to handle the increased traf-

MDOT is also working on acquiring the necessary land to build the exit ramp from the new 1-75 interchange to south-

"If we get that done, we should have that ramp done early in

"The further we move into the future, the less hard these (completion) dates get," Martin said.

A NEW bridge to accommodate University Drive, and two remaining ramps for the new I-75 interchange - as well as collectors and distributors between the interchange and University Drive - are scheduled for 1992, he said.

Building two M-59 interchanges, one at Squirrel Road and a" second at an extended Adams Road east of the current Adams. Road bridge, is scheduled for 1994 construction, he said.

"The last thing we're going to do for that would be a reconstruction of the I-75, M-59 interchange," Martin said, "but we're" looking at 1995 or after for that."

EXTENSIVE WIDENING of local and county roads was also needed, according to Oakland County Road commission spokes-

Although Oakland County itself was not responsible for any road improvements, the road commission did act as the civil engineer for the local road projects. The road commission will act as leader for two other projects needed to serve the technology center, and the tech park. Walton Boulevard will be widened to a five-lane boulevard. between Squirrel and Opdyke roads and will include a second bridge over 1-75, Joy said.

"We'll start with right-of-way acquisition and engineering " and design in 1992 and construction will be in 1993."

The project is expected to cost $5.5 million and will be paid for through federal financing. An extension of Adams Road south of Hamlin Road will be done in conjunction with MDOT and will include a new interchange at M-59 and Adams Road. "Even with a fast track, we're 'guestimating' a 1994 starting" date," Joy said.

PHASE ONE of the local road improvement projects is virtually complete, said Mary Ann Miller, economic development coordinator for Auburn Hills.

Auburn Hills paid for its share of road improvements through! $40 million in local development financing authority bonds guaranteed by Chrysler. Other money was raised by a tax increment financing district? on the Oakland Technology Park, Miller said, but they were not road improvements made solely for the Chrysler project.

Phase one includes realigning and widening Squirrel Road? from Featherstone to M-59, at a cost of roughly $2 million ? realigning and widening Featherstone from Squirrel to I-75 at a cost of $5 million, and realigning and widening Hamlin Roadfrom Squirrel to Adams, Miller said.

Hamlin Road, for which cost estimates are still unavailable, is still under construction after bad weather prevented the roads completion last year, Miller said.

"We hope to have it done after the building season begins." 🧳

PHASE TWO - which should be completed in 1990 - will include realigning and widening Featherstone from Opdyke to 1-75 at a cost of roughly $2 million, realigning and widening Squirrel from Featherstone to University at a cost of roughly $7^2

Phase three, scheduled for completion in 1991 and 1992, willing include widening and realigning Squirrel Road from University to Walton at a cost of $6 million, and widening University from East Pontiac to Squirrel at a cost of roughly $1 million, Miller

Planning road improvements takes a great deal of time, and although it may seem like the process has bogged down, everything is right on schedule, Joy said.
"When you're talking about a road that is going to last 40 to 50 years, five years is really not much time to wait," Joy said "It usually takes five years from, 'I want to do that' to Here" comes the concrete.'

"That may seem abnormal to the driver, but that's quite nor mal to the road commission," Joy said.

Stained glass can be difficult to match

Repairing stained glass windows is difficult, but Traditional Home magazine says the windows are sturdier than they appear and inexpensive to replace.

H. Webber Wilson is a Frederick, Md., antiques dealer who collects and repairs American decorative glass. He offers the following advice to homeowners who are concerned about the condition of their stainedglass windows.

First, says Wilson, realize that leaded-glass windows are much more stable than they may appear. A bowed window is not necessarily ready to fall apart, and slight cracks in individual pieces of leaded glass don't usually threaten the integrity of the window.

Second, he says: "I think people should appreciate windows but learn to live with them." Few craftspeople are qualified to repair leaded-glass windows, and the color and texture of old glass can be difficult to match. Modern repairs to old glass, therefore, are likely to be costly and are not always an aesthetic improve-

"My recommendation to people with windows they think might need to be repaired is to do the minimum," says Wilson. If the glass rattles in its leading, Wilson recommends applying ordinary glazing putty between the glass and the lead rather than releading the window an expensive job.

IF THERE ARE concerns about future window damage or energy loss around loose leading, install clear-glass windows on the outside and-or inside of the stained glass.

If the solder joints between the pieces of stained glass are cracked, however, the window should be either replaced or professionally repaired. Wilson says replacing a window is frequently the more economical option. Decorative glass is plentiful and relatively unappreciated, as period embellishments go. For that reason, he estimates that most American decorative glass is probaas it was 10 years ago.

"You can get a good to extra-good window in the mid-hundreds" at antiques dealers and wrecking yards, says Wilson. "And if you have $1,500." to $3,000, you can get something exceptional. Even in the low hundreds Developers are free to buy land wherever they wish, he said. Communities can require certain things, but if a developer meets a community's zoning and planning requirements it will be built.

BUT MANY FACTORS work against a large project, including obtaining proper zoning, dealing with planning regulations, handling community sentiment and assembling targe tracts of land, he said.

"And," he said, "everything north of Pontiac - without painting everyone with a wide brush - is trying to maintain the present quality of

Infrastructure improvements necessary to serve such a large area will also be difficult because the money is no longer available, Joy sald.

"The last time (the road commission) had a revenue increase was when the gas tax was increased in the middle of 1985."

Not only does the same money not go as far today, but cars are becoming more fuel efficient and smaller so roads are getting less money even though more cars are on the road to-

"All the dinosaurs have dled — we have more traffic, but the device used to pay for it hasn't changed," Joy said.

Joy agreed with Lontz that the area of the Chrysler project was bound to be developed.

"This is not in the middle of a cow pasture. We have a very viable market in this county and businesses are going to want to be here."

State 2nd in courses

(AP) - Golf course construction in the United States reached a 16year high in 1989, according to a report released by the National Golf Foundation.

Florida led all states with 50 new courses in 1989. Michigan was second with 19, and South Carolina and North Carolina tied for third with 14.

The report said 290 courses opened for play last year. That was a 37-percent increase over the 1988 total of 211 courses, the previous high for the decade.
