Hudson's workers authorize union

Hudson's employees at Westland will be getting together early this week with their new union, the United Auto Workers, to review membership concerns, according to the UAW's Region 1-A director.

Bob King said Saturday that "the union won't be certified for another week." Employees voted for the union Friday; King said the vote was 274 for membership, 179 against, and eight votes for the United Food and Commercial Workers. Results must be certified by the National Labor Relations Board.

Hudson's Westland manager, Mike Hyter, said Saturday that "due to the healing process that's going on," all comments on the union vote were being referred to Sue Kelly, who handles media inquiries for area Hudson's stores. She was not available Saturday.

King said Hudson's Westland-employees approached the union last February to inquire about representation. He expects to meet with Hudson's management after the vote is certified to discuss worker concerns.

Last February, Hudson's employees expressed concern about an incentive pay program, its sales goals

GET YOUR summertime party attitude out of the closet and dust it off, the Westland Summer Festival is less than seven weeks away.

This year's giant, outdoor bash is set for Friday, June 29-Wednesday, July 4.

As always, the citywide fest will feature a colorful parade and conclude with a dazzling fireworks display. This year's march along Ford Road from Wildwood to a reviewing stand in front of city hall will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 30.

The six-day festival will feature plenty of games, food and entertainment along the midway in the civic center area.

WITH LAWN mowers out in full force in most neighborhoods, an abundance of grass clippings is sure to follow. But now there's a place where clippings can be discarded.

The city transfer site (in the DPS yard on Marquette, east of Newburgh) will accept grass clippings and leaves every Friday and Saturday throughout the summer.

Board hopefuls split on tax proposal

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

This is the first of two articles on how the Wayne-Westland school board candidates view campaign issues. Leonard Posey, Linda Pratt and Laurel Raisanen discussed the issues during a May 10 interview at the Observer offices. The three are running for one board seat in the June 11 election.

Two of three candidates running for the

Wayne-Westland school board Thursday offered serious reservations about the format of a tax proposal that asks voters to approve a renewal and increase totalling 7.75 mills next

Challengers Linda Pratt and Laurel Raisanen said voters deserve a wider choice when it comes to deciding whether or how to help the financially-strapped district.

Leonard Posey, running for election to a full term following his appointment last December, said he supported a single ballot issue.

Along with filling a board seat, residents will vote June 11 on a proposal authorizing a combined 2.75-mill renewal and 5-mill increase. Separate proposals seeking the renewal, a similar increase and a Headlee override were soundly defeated in a special election last February.

School officials have said the new taxes are necessary to erase a projected $7 million deficit (without applying a current $2 million surplus) and provide salary increases for teachers and other employees next fall.

The board has approved $5 million in administrative, teaching staff and program cuts for 1990-91 if the millage fails.

"I THINK THAT what we've been hearing from the community is that they want more of a choice," Pratt said. "The issues should have been separated."

Pratt also criticized the school district administration for "not doing an adequate job of researching financial alternatives" to the ballot proposal.

Manager details armed robbery at McDonald's

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

The manager of the McDonald's restaurant on Merriman north of Van Born testified Thursday that he feared for his life when a gunman pointed a small, black snub-nosed pistol at him in the restaurant office during an April 2 robbery.

"I felt a little fear," said Daniel Caudill, the only witness to testify during a 12-minute preliminary exam for Bernard Waters in 18th District Court.

"I went to the safe and let him take it (the money). That's what he told me to do."

Police believe Waters and at least two accomplices are responsible for the string of fast-food restaurant robberles.

One of the accomplices in the Westland robbery is still at large, police said.

IN TESTIMONY Wednesday, Caudill identified Waters as the man who came into the restaurant about 10:15 p.m. and took $560 from the safe and a cash register at gunpoint.

But Caudill, who was confined to his office at the time of the holdup, couldn't say whether the defendant had a partner.

"I have no way of answering that question. I have no knowledge to that effect," the witness said during cross-examination by defense attorney Clarence Ledwon.

Former attorney for city, John J. Nellis dies at 82

By Leonard Poger editor

Tom Brown has many memories of John J. Nellis, a municipal attorney for 30 years and a close friend.

He recalled past legal battles Thursday, one day after Mr. Nellis passed away.

Services for Mr. Nellis, who was municipal attorney for Nankin Township and city of Westland from 1945 to 1975, were held Saturday morning from the Howe-Peterson Funeral Home, Dearborn.

"He was the finest municipal attorney I have ever known," said Brown, a longtime Nankin Township official and supervisor and Westland's first mayor when incorporation was approved by voters in the spring of 1966.

Brown, now Westland city council president, recalled that Mr. Nellis was always prepared when he went into court to defend the township's or city's position.

"He was never at a loss for words and always able to convince the judge of the township's or city's intent," sald Brown.

"There was one case many years ago in which the township was suing the owner of a dump site (on the former location of National Airport, on Ford west of Hix) when John suggested to (Circuit) Judge (Horace) Gilmore that the judge visit the site personally to get a better under-

City council approves package for use of federal grant money By Tedd Schneider wanted to fund." Gilbert said Thursday.

Federal funds will be used to repave asphalt roads in the Wayne Highlands subdivision.

The paving project was part of a revised 1990-1991

Community Development Block Grant package approved by the Westland City Council last week.

The $60,000 allocation for repaying five residential streets south of Ford, between Carlson and Linville, was added to the CDBG list by the council, said Jay Gilbert, the city's community development affector.

Funds for the project were shifted from the CDBG allocation for senior programs and the city will use the general fund to make up the difference, Gilbert said.

"After the (public) hearings, (the Wayne Highlands repaving) was a new project that the council decided it

Gilbert said other area municipalities are beginning to rely less on federal funds for senior programs. "I think people should look at it as a credit to the city to be able to provide general fund money for our seniors," he

The city should receive $958,000 in federal funds for the fiscal year beginning July 1, according to Gilbert. That figure is down 6.02 percent from last year's allocation of $1.02 million.

GILBERT SAID earlier the allocation could be additionally reduced by as much as $9,580 because of "problems with HUD (the department of Housing and Urban Development) on a national level."

But Pratt said she would reluctantly vote "yes" on the current proposal. "I'm not convinced that the cuts are in the best interest of my child, so in light of that, I have to go along with it as a parent;" she said.

Laurel Raisanen, who said she will vote against the millage proposal, said giving voters "only one option put the finances of the school district truly in a crisis situation."

Posey disagreed.

The incumbent board member said the single ballot issue will promote unity within the district. "To split an issue oftentimes divides the community. Voters go to the polls looking to fund their favorites - be it academics or sports or music."

"The consensus (among board members) was that our program should be geared towards quality overall," Posey said.

But he conceded that by placing a single issue on the ballot the district could be backing voters into a cor-credibility, already low in the eyes of some residents she has talked to, would suffer if another millage proposal was placed before voters.

"If the voters have said no three times — I'm counting Proposals A and B (statewide school finance reform proposals that failed last November) — then you have to look within your own budget for ways to finance education," she said. "They (school officials) have to show the community they are spending their money wisely."

Pratt didn't rule out another tax proposal, but said district officials should make a careful assessment of the situation, even if that means implementing the approved cuts next

"The program is not going to be the same, but I think the district would be wise to step back and take a look-at creative ways to solve old problems," Pratt said.

"A failure of the millage could be a (positive) opportunity for the district," she said.

> Previous experience has taught him that playing educational catchup would be a tough, if not impossible, mission for the district.

> "I'm not sure we need to wait a long time before we put it on the ballot (again)," Posey said. "The quality of eduction erodes while the community waits."

> MEANWHILE, SHOULD the millage gain approval, Posey said he wouldn't be in favor of restoring all the announced cuts, particularly the administrative positions that were eliminated. He said the board should "take a real serious look" at positions and saving money.

"I don't want to say 'Well, everything's back to normal," " the incumbent said.

Cyclists brave rain to raise money for abused kids

Riders with a cause didn't let rainy, chilly weather get in the way Saturday in Canton during the Magic Ride for child abuse prevention.

About 200 bicyclists from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb countles mounted their two-wheelers and hit the back roads of Canton. The event was a warm-up for the state Magic Ride, June 9, in Lansing.

THE WEATHER didn't dampen the spirits of committed riders.

Sue Weber of Westland said bicycling to raise money to fight child abuse was worth getting out for an early morning ride before work.

And even though a nail punctured her tire early in the ride, Weber said, it was fun while it lasted.

"The fresh air even smelled good," the rural setting.'

Julie and Bill Windhorst, representing the Michigan National Bank loan division, got on their bicycle built for two about 9 a.m. and planned to log 56 miles for more than $350.

"You don't get many chances to ride for a good cause," said Dale Brantigan.

He raised $100 and planned to cycle 28 miles. All pledge money raised is returned to a child abuse prevention program in the rider's county.

Carrie George and Becky McKinney, both of Westland, raised $300 between them and expected more

"My husband plans on coming in a couple of hours to find us and see if we're still alive," McKinney said. "A lot of people are still waiting to see if we made it."

The ride was a family affair for the Spencers of Dearborn. J., Carol, Kristen and Kent usually take their bikes to Edward Hines and were ready to put in 16 miles in Canton.

AREA CELEBRITIES took to a "challenging" one-mile ride.

State Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, had his 3-year-old daughter Jessica on the back of his bicycle. The legislator has two sets of twins.

Where are the other kids? "I'm waiting until they make a quadruple bicycle seat," he said. Canton Supervisor Tom Yack, who borrowed his daughter's bicycle for the day, was presented a $500 check from Omnicom Cablevision, which operates in Plymouth and Canton. Employees raised half the money, and the company matched it.

Arriving moments after the "celebrity" riders took off, Maryann Mahaffey, president of the Detroit City Council, put a plastic bag on her head to ward off the rain and was interviewed for Omnicom by Bill Joyner of the public relations admin-"Ride with traffic, because you're istration group, which organized the area Magic Ride.

What we yawn about really has its merit

QUESTION: FOR WHOM did you vole in the 1988 State Board of Educalion election?

Huh? you probably replied defensively.

The State Board of Education is visible this year given the bitter 4-4 Democratic-Republican split over Don Bemis' performance as superintendent of public instruction.

"IT SHOULD be (more visible)," Göy. James J. Blanchard told me last week in an interview. "It generally isn't."

Blanchard said the eight-member board had been blpartisan in Gov. William Milliken's years (1969-82) and his own early years when Democrats held a majority. Blanchard now sees Republicans as misusing their position to "embarrass" Bemis.

Republicans screened their 1988 candidates on the abortion issue, Blanchard said.

E. Spencer Abraham, Republican state chair, thinks voters will pay more attention to state education candidates as "the failures in public education — the dropout rates, the fallure of those who graduate to meet certain standards - become clearer."

Abraham, interviewed at a GOP dinner at Schoolcraft College, demped the ball into our lap: "I would hope the media will coverthem more thoroughly. There's a tendency to let them slide."

JOHN ENGLER, Blanchard's probable Republican opponent on Nov. 6, said the Bemis evaluation will be an election issue. Engler said Bemis "simply isn't suited to head Michigan schools.

"The two Democratic candidates who are running are employees of the two major teachers unions," Engler said - Barbara Roberts Mason of the Michigan Education Association and Rollie Hopgood of the Michigan rederation of Teachers, "Some" publican board member from Ro people feel it's a potential conflict of chester, put a different spin on it.

lationship with the state agency.

Morally and politically, however, Engler has a point. The notion of a school employees union official serving on a school policy-making board

HOW THE BOARD evaluated Bemis is interesting, if you like mes-

On April 18, the eight state board members rated him in five categories for a total of 40 marks. There were zero "excellent" marks, zero "poor to fair," three "good-excellent," five "fair-average" - and 32 "average-good" marks.

You see the pattern. A Republican member who knows parliamentary procedure quickly moved that the board consider his performance "satisfactory." The four Democrats voted yes, the four Republicans voted no, and the GOP motion failed for lack of a majority.

The board took a recess, and the press corps crowded around Bemis. Would he resign? "Of course not . . . There wasn't one poor area (of performance)," he said.

DOROTHY BEARDMORE, a Re-

"It was not a satisfactory per-Legally, the two union officials formance. Right in the middle. Bareprobably have no conflict of interest ly average. Run of the mill. We want because they have no contractual remore than that. Just in the middle of the heap is not acceptable."

For narrow legal reasons, the board couldn't dump Bemis. But one can see the cloud over his head.

Bemis is close to Blanchard, who, the story goes, advocated his hiring.

ON INDIVIDUAL qualities, the board rated Bemis high on implementing board goals, knowledgeable on enforcement of laws, good on hiring minorities and women and working well with the governor.

Bemis got lower ratings for budget knowledge, relations with the Legislature and Congress, initiative and creativity, and morale within the Department of Education.

In short: The board thinks he's Blanchard's guy but no leader.

Blanchard and the GOP's Abraham are right when they say the media can do a better job covering the State Board of Education. But their own campaigns highlight the top of the ticket, not the education posts.

And when we in the media do write about education posts, readers

Q: I was at a social gathering and a fifth grade teacher - a good teacher - was raving about what a fine class he had this year. He said his kids all had IQs of 135 or higher. It is not a gifted and talented class and I always though a 135 IQ was very high for anyone let alone a whole class of students. I didn't even think schools gave IQ tests anymore. Do schools still give IQ tests? What is the difference between an IQ test and these other tests our children take? and Is it possible his students all have 135 IQs or higher?

A: No it is not possible that any fifth grade class has an IQ of 135 or higher in any community served by the Observer & Eccentric. Students in the typical gifted and talented classes don't average a 135 IQ. And he teaches a regular, typical fifth grade class.

My guess is he has his best class ever and, compared to other classes that may have been a drain on his energies, it seemed these students are all in the genius category. It seems he is excited about this year's students and his exuberance has overshadowed his logic.

IQs between 90 and 110 (considered average) make up about 50 percent of our student and national population. Seven percent of our population is found in the 120 to 130 range (considered superior) and only 2 percent of U.S. citizens have an IQ or 130 or higher.

This teacher does not have a class made up of 130 or higher IQs. But let him enjoy his school year. Research says that the teacher's expectation is could be 10 12 14 16 17 or 10 12 14 15 . . 16 18. Word analogies also are popu-

Standardized achievement tests based on retained knowledge have questions such as: Columbus discovered America in . . . A 76 percent score by a fifth grader in math... means he/she scored better than 75 ... percent of the fifth grade students who took that test on that day throughout the United States.

There are more sophisticated IQ tests such as the Wechsler but the intent is basically as stated here. IQ tests measure brain potential and achievement tests measure past per- " formance in school or retained

The teacher should review his students district standardized test scores before predicting their IQs. His students would-all-have-to-bescoring at the 99th percentile to have IQs of 135. And the 99th percentile on a standardized test means the students have all scored off the top and the test can't measure their total capacity.

All this withstanding, be pleased the teacher is excited about his "bright class" but his kids are not all in the 135 IQ range.

I only had a few students with IQs over 135 in the 21 years I spent in the classroom and I taught several gifted classes.

Who cares for recycling?

In the Observer & Eccentric I read that Danny's Food Store on Six Mile and Farmington Road had a plastic bin for recycling. I went to Danny's with all of my plastics. The bins were filled to the brim. Obviously, people are utilizing this service Danny's is providing.

The following week, I went to could be thrown in them. the Recycling Center and, lo and behold, they were now taking plastics, also. I read about this absolutely nowhere.

Furthermore, the bins were not marked, and there was much confusion. People were there very obviously trying to do the right thing by getting their plastics recycled but no center was accepting, or where to put them. No signs, no pictures, nothing. When I inquired why, no one seemed to know. The bins were Anyone who could read knew what available but no one knew what > Could it be that Danny's management cares more about recycling "catching on" than our own city officials? I can't help but wonder why, especially when it is estimated that Wayne County will run out of landfill space within three years.

Madonna promoting ties with Taiwanese students

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Think rush hour on I-98 is a problem? Fred has a story for you.

"You know, traffic here is pretty good," he said. "Not as bad as it is back home."

Fred is, indeed, a long way from home. The Taiwanese businessman is one of 30 such professionals currently completing a master's degree at Madonna College, Livonia.

"WE WANT to absorb as much of time we're here," said George C.C. Huang, another of the Taiwanese professionals currently attending Madonna.

Toward that end, the group has toured area GM and Ford plants, attended a taping of the local televi-

Their crash Detroit-area tour also includes trips to the Detroit Institute of Arts, Greefield Village and Tiger Stadium.

Though they say the field trips were nice, group members added they came to Madonna to complete their degrees.

"We're working toward business' administration degrees," said Teresa Liang, another member of the Talwanese delegation.

Under a college-to-college exchange program the students began their studies at Tamkang University, But he's not here to teach about Taipel and came to Madonna for

> The program is fairly unusual for both the U.S. and Taiwan.

"In Taiwan we really don't have the culture as we can in the short too many programs for business professionals to go back and get another degree," Huang said.

While all of the students can read English, many aren't fluent in speaking the language.

Nonetheless, college officials said they've been a welcome addition to the Livonia campus.

"It's been a real pleasure having them here," said college spokeswoman Andrea Nodge. "They're so polite and they have such a desire to

Students are nearly evenly divided between manufacturing and service industries.

A second group, including school administrators, will come to Madonna in July.

All students are 25.45. "It's never too late to learn, right?" said Huang.

Are you a YUD or a YUS?

I never really considered myself a yupple. Sure, I drank premium brands, owned a wok and ate tofu, but I still held onto the pink plastic flamingo that to this day graces my front lawn. I think it was more a matter of being questionably radical.

Now the Lempert Report, the leading marketing analysis newsletter, has coined new buzzwords that will sure make their: way into the '90s vocabulary.

Are you a YUD or YUS? Both groups comprise the Baby Boomer generation (those born between 1947 and 1967 who make up as much as one-third of the population).

The YUDS, or Young Urban Destroyers, are those Boomers who don't feel like the environmental issues affect them. They weren't politically active in the 60s and they are no more conscious now. YUDS won't even try to claim they were at Woodstock. These are the people who purchase disposable diapers, disposable razors and other artifacts from a "disposable" society: Their philosophy is, "Why. shouldn't I make my life easier?"

The YUSES, or Young Urban Saviors, on the other hand, never stopped caring or believing they could make a difference. They may be caught in the maelstrom of mortgages and childrearing, but they still dutifully separate their garbage for recycling and deep down inside they do believe that they can effect change. Even more importantly, they take personal responsibility for making that difference.

TO A DEGREE, giving a marketing newsletter like the Lempert Report credit for conjuring up yet another set of cliches is redundant in itself. I never enjoyed belonging to a group and to this day try to steer clear of getting labeled as an activist through group involvement. But in all honesty, I cannot deny my feelings toward the environment, especially when there's a major or campaign movement that is without a doubt making environmental issues the "cause" for the '90s.

In retrospect, however, I am amazed by the sheer number of Yusses, Yuppies, Dinks, Dorks and whatevers who continue to spin their wheels in mountains of trash without taking the time to even try to make a difference.

For example, last week, for the first time, I brought my own bags. No big deal, especially because with all the bags stuffed under the kitchen sink, there was literally no room for more. So here I am, at the checkout line, where I hand my own bags to the bagger and announce, "I brought my own bags," secretly hoping that Vanna White will appear from behind the display of tollet paper and plant a kiss on my cheek and thank me.

Guess what?

I asked the cashier just how many folks like me bring their own bags or boxes to the store. "You're the first," was her reply. "C'mon, surely you jest?" was my reply. "None."

SO, I ASKED the bagger the same question. Ditto the response.

Thinking my cashier and bagger lived in a cave somewhere without television, radio, books and no outside communications, I went down the line and asked each and every cashier and bagger how many people bring their own bags. Dittos, again.

If you are one of those so-called Yuses who still thinks you can make a difference, do it. If you separate your cans, bottles, plastics and other recyclables, get down on your hands and knees and spend five minutes getting the bags in order from under your kitchen sink. Better yet, if you don't have any bags, pick up a couple of canvas bags or those cool, European string bags. Just do it.

> TATE PRIDE and Michigan heritage are expressed through the wonder of culinary fare artfully prepared by creative Michigan producers.

Such foods as dried tart cherries, bing cherry tea, Joy's pungent tomato relish or Carrie's aromatic curry dip are especially timely now, during the annual statewide celebration of Michigan Week.

What better time to explore and enjoy foodstuffs that are expressly Michiganian, and what better place to experience them than at Michigania, an attractive basement shop in Birmingham that carries only Michigan-made goods, including unusual mouthwatering fare and other unique cookery

Take Carrie Wager's dip, a commercial enterprise based on a family recipe first marketed in 1959 by grandparents Stanley and Blanch Wager of Pellston. Sold as Wager's Curry Dip, the snappy sauce comes in jars topped with polka-dotted cotton of deep

"It's a marvelous looking jar so it sells well," said shop manager Gail Bahl, a selfconfessed native of the Buckeye State who settled in Bloomfield Township some 14

Still, Bahl gushes forth with culinary detail of the Great Lakes State: Carp River of Leland produces the widest variety of genuine Michigan condiments, dried cherries by American Spoon in Petosky are the most-popular prepared food and Michigania is the only retailer in the state to carry Malted Pancake Flour milled by F.S. Carbon in Buchanan.

"PEOPLE IN MICHIGAN really take quite a pride in their state," Bahl said, based on the shop's success. "We opened our doors from scratch 18 months ago and response has been tremendous."

Michigania also displays blown glass, puzzles, candles, pottery jewelry, books and more, all Michigan produced. These items are most often purchased by tourists yearning for an authentic touch of Michigan, according to Bahl.

"Foods are more for people who live here, for themselves or for friends who have moved away. They're thrilled to find it all in one place.'

One popular find at Michigania is Michelle Marshall's Mucky Duck, a pub-style sweet and tangy mustard. Relying on her own expertise, Marshall created Mucky Duck through trial in error from the kitchen of her Franklin home some five years ago.

"At Christmas, I sell it by the case. It goes out of here hot," Bahl sald, with Marshall de-

Seafood still a star at Charley's Crab

When the original Charley's Crab restaurant on Pine Lake burned down in 1975, faithful customers mourned the loss of a restaurant that mixed comfort and elegance, an unsurpassed view of an inland lake and premium seafood dinners. The fact that its replacement was built alongside an expressway exit in a bustling suburb and as an appendage of a hotel was more than most fans could bear.

"People in

shop manager

But seafood scion Chuck Muer proved the skeptics wrong. He turned the view inward, building a restaurant that still balances comfort, elegance and fine seafood dining. Whether seated in the rich and stately-main dining room with its vaulted ceiling and fireplace or alongside an upstairs balcony, a diner can't help but enjoy the ambience as well as the food.

Although the menu could be characterized as fish and potatoes (Muer gave redskins a new life), the fish isn't just any fish. It's extraordinarily fresh and the selection is unsurwrapped in a pastry puff. This is where you select from a good, plentiful and reflective of long list of fresh fish (catfish, shark, bluefish, mahl-mahl, perch) and order it broiled, sauteed or grilled. The addition of Cajun spices is about as "fancy" as it gets. We recently tried a thick cut of yellowfin tuna cooked Cajun-style and loved it - as much for the quality of the fish as for the spley treatment.

AT ONE TIME or another, nearly every Charley's customer has ordered the "bucket" — a steamed lobsauce or your yellowfin tuna ster, crab, mussels, steamers, corn on the cob and redskins. Simple, Muer's style.

That's not to say you won't find gourmet dishes now and then. We noted one such entree - salmon in parchment paper - on the menu recently. But that's not what you expect to find here.

Soups, on the other hand, have that special gourmet touch. Charley's Mediterranean-style chowder is excellent. The shrimp gumbo is wonderfully seasoned and is loaded with shrimp. At lunchtime, soup and Muer's deliciously salty bread is all you need.

Salads are good, ranging from the ultra-simple wedge of iceberg lettuce with Roquefort French dressingto an excellent spinach salad with honey-mustard dressing.

Because you can overdose on seafood-only dinners, we often skip the appetizers and move right into chowder. But don't overlook the appetizers entirely. They are perfect for when you stop by for a drink. The mussels a la Muer are deliciously steamed in garlic butter, wine and herbs. # Nutritionist emphasizes the well-balanced meal

I love the television commercial where the bearded prophet appears out of nowhere with coffee cakes inhis hands and utters those infamous words, "Let them eat cake."

My sons wish he would pay a visit to our house, too, and say, "Let them eat cookies, cake and candy." Believe me, that would really make

With the current emphasis on eating more healthfully, it is not surprising that food manufacturers and grocery stores have jumped on the bandwagon. Today's shopper is faced with more choices than ever before and, quite frankly, having to select between products whose packages scream out claims such as "low in fat," "high in fiber," or "no cholesterol" can be downright confusing.

This week's Winner Dinner Winner, Gail Posner, works very hard at cutting through the confusing wording on package labels and teaches people how to make intelligent choices when grocery shopping. The mother of two young boys, Posner is a registered dietician who conducts group tours, pointing out healthy food choices to make in the supermarket.

IN ADDITION to leading the information-packed tours, Posner also has a private practice in Southfield where she counsels clients on nutrition and develops individualized eating plans for them that match their needs and lifestyle. Formerly the assistant director of dietetics at the University of Michigan hospitals, Posner truly knows the importance of eating a well-balanced meal. Her recipes for heart-healthy chicken and vegetable rice, Ramen noodle salad and chocolate-topped strawberries are nutritious as well as delicious.

Thank you, Gail Posner, for taking time out of your busy life to share your family's favorites with us. Continued good luck with your career and congratulations on being this week's Winner Dinner Winner.

clarification

Larry Janes offers follow-up comments on the "Gordon girls" pirogi story (Taste, Monday, May

Some readers called to say that pirogi was misspelled and that it should read "pierogi." While we're not disagreeing with you (and especially those of you with Polish heritage), Webster's New World Dictionary clearly spells pirogi without an cottage cheese, ricotta or other "e," but does offer the version with the "e" as an alternate.

Also, a few readers requested additional information on filling the pirogi. As per the Gordon family recipe, they enjoy pirogi filled with sauerkraut, potato or cheese. You can use 1 tablespoon of drained kraut, 1 tablespoon seasoned mashed cheese. You also can use a mixture of any two.

The pirogi then can be cooked in rapidly boiling, lightly salted water or broth for 4-6 minutes, or pan fried in lard, oil, margarine or butter over medium heat until lightly golden. Traditionally, pirogi is served with sour cream.

ARTHROSCOPY OF THE SHOULDER

You may be aware of the technique for looking directly into the knee with a scope, called arthroscopy. This devel opment permits orthopedists to see and even repair knee damage which, in the past; required an open operation.

Arthroscopy also is available for the shoulder.

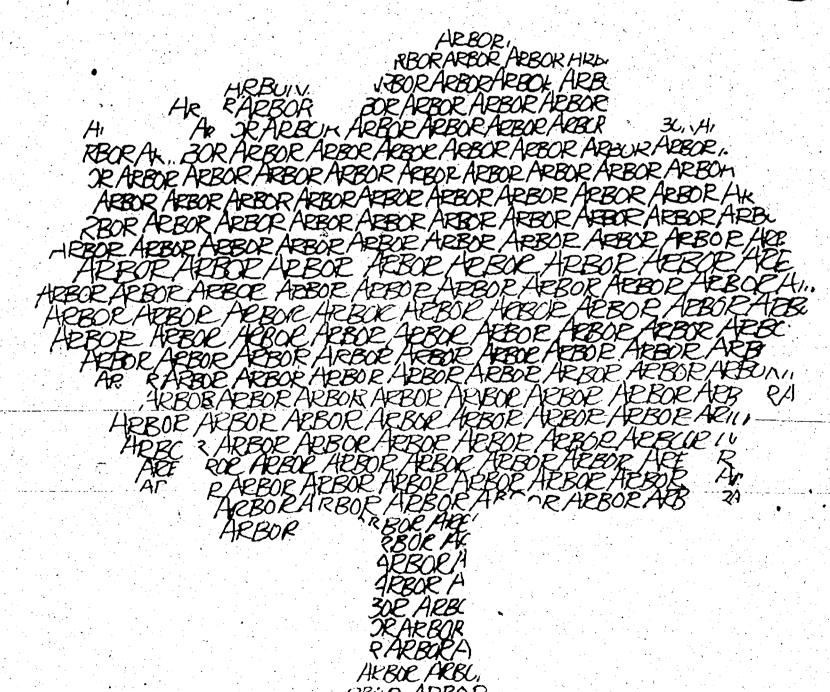

A number of conditions involve the tendons, carlilage, and capsule surrounding the shoulder point. In the past, diagnosis of tears and disruptions of these structures depended on x-ray techniques, which often failed to reveal the presence of these problems. Furthermore, following diagnosis, the patient faced the need for an extension and long operation. extensive and long operation.

Shoulder arthroscopy permits the physician to see the structures of the joint clearly and in certain cases undertake immediate repair.

However, arthroscopy is expensive and complications such as bleeding and infection can follow from it. In addition, shoulder arthroscopy requires the patient to go under general anesthesia, which itself can be a hazard. Thus, arthroscopy is in order only after traditional methods of treatment and diagnosis have failed.

Still, the availability of this procedure provides hope for a return of function and a freedom from pain when previously no such expectations were possible.

Describe Schoolcraft College's volleyball program any way you like - the best get better, winning attracts winners, or even the easiest way to get to the top is to start there - but there's no doubting nothing helps recruiting like success.

Tom Teeters has had a lot of success in his tenure as coach at SC. From the looks of his newest recruitink class, it will continue.

Teeters has signed a half-dozen high school seniors, including a pair of all-state players, to bolster a team that finished fifth in the National Junior College Athletic Association last year.

But despite their impressive credentials, Teeters remains cautious. "I'm real pleased with it," he did admit. And which of his newcomers has the best chance to step in and contribute immediately, particularly since three starters (Alicia Love, JoAnn Kolnitys, Kirsten Stelzer) and one key reserve (Cathy Coak) are gone?

"We don't make those decisions" too early," Teeters replied. "I don't think any of our positions are fixed."

STILL, IT could be difficult keeping some of his recruits off the floor. They include:

• Kari Domanski, a 5-foot-9 doeverything from Livonia Ladywood and a first-team Class A all-stater; • Lisa Domke, a 5-7 outside hitter-middle blocker and a Class C all-stater from Rogers City;

• Renea Bonser, a 5-101/2 settermiddle blocker from Livonia Steven-

• Kari Van Deusen, a 6-0 outside. hitter from Waterford Mott; • Stephanie Jandasek, a 5-8 setter-outside hitter from Brighton and daughter of former SC coach Joe • Kim Laginess, a 5-7 setter-outside hitter-defensive specialist from Monroe St. Mary's. There are certain obvious attributes with all of Teeters' recruits.

Versatility is foremost, and the leader in that regard is Domanski. "She's very versatile," acknowledged Teeters. "And her upper body strength shows through in her blocking, her arm swing and her setting.

"I'm very much looking forward to coaching her for another two years and watch her progress. If she progresses half as much as she did at Ladywood (where Teeters also coaches), she'll be a great asset to the team."

Kari Domanski Ladywood star

Stevenson standout

DOMKE COMES from a top Class C program in Rogers City, and, according to Teeters, "She was their best player for the last two years. She's a very strong athlete and a very strong defensive player. She's gutsy and she has a good jump. She's an Alicia Love-type player because of her speed and defense."

Bonser also has solid credentials, with Stevenson's winning tradition. 'Renea's done really well for (Stevenson coach) Lee Cagle. She comes with a semifinal win over Alm, from Lansinto our program with great skills.

"I'm looking at Renea as a middle blocker. She's got a good arm swing and good passing skills. Her strength will be in hitting and blocking. And I think we'll be working on a spin serve with her. With her height and strength, she's got good potential there."

With Love gone, getting someone with a good spin serve is a key for Teeters. "We're going to miss that," he said. "I hope we can develop bits and pieces of her in other players."

volleyball

VAN DEUSEN BRINGS size to SC's program, a rare commodity. "She has heighth, the capability for spin serves, blocking ability - and she's got a pretty good pass," said Teeters. "She needs work on her speed. I think we can develop her through skills and weight training."

Jandasek is certainly familiar with Teeters. "I've known her since she was 4 years old," he said. An allleague performer with a long background in the sport - her father, a teacher at Livonia Franklin, still helps coach at Brighton HS - Jandasek has extensive experience and knowledge of the game.

"I hope we can improve her strength," said Teeters. "We want to improve her outside hitting and groom her for that."

Jandasek suffered a knee injury a year ago, but recovered in time for her senior season at Brighton.

Laginess, too, may need work before she can step into the lineup. "I think her strength will be in her passing and defense," said Teeters. "We're working on her jump."

What Laginess doesn't need help with, however, is motivation. According to Teeters, all six of his recruits possess "a good work ethic." With outside hitters Angellette

Love and Elena Oparka and setter Jenny Sproul returning, all the necessary components are present to make SC - 43-9 last season - a

Ocelots break through

One single stroke has transformed Schoolcraft College's golf team, from program builders to respectable

And at the conclusion of today's National Junior College Athletic Association Region 12 tournament at Bedford Valley Golf Club in Battle Creek, Ocelot coach Carolyn Steffen wouldn't be at all surprised if her team took another step up the ladder — to contender.

In their initial season last year, the Ocelots "had one individual make it as far as the regionals," noted Steffen. "This year, the whole team made it. I'd say that's

And she'd be right, although advancing to the regional tournament was accomplished by the slimmest of margins. The top six teams at the 13-team Michigan Community College Athletic Association Tournament at Gull Lake View Golf Course in Augusta Tuesday and Wednesday qualified for the regional.

SC FINISHED sixth — by one stroke. Lansing CC captured the state title, shooting 950 in the 54-hole tourney. Grand Rapids CC was second with 981, followed by Kalamazoo Valley CC (969), St. Clair County CC (978), Oakland CC (981) and SC (986). Muskegon CC was next at 987, with Glen Oaks CC close

Other team scores were Macomb CC, 1013; Alpena CC, 1049; and Delta CC, 1083. Mott CC and Henry Ford CC had golfers in the tournament, but neither had enough for a team score.

Andy Kurnez topped the Ocelots and was the tournament leader after the first round, firing a 75. He followed that with rounds of 85 and 79 to finish at 239, earning him all-state honors (awarded to those scoring under 240).

Kevin Zaschak narrowly missed the all-state squad, scoring 242 to place second among the Ocelots. Chris McMahon was next for SC at 245, followed by Dewey Steffen (265) and Jeff Vos (275).

The state results left Carolyn Steffen optimistic regarding the regional. "I'm just proud of the entireteam," she said. "I certainly believe in miracles, major

Heaton, Graham looming big on MSU's offensive front

By Brad Emons staff writer

Two former All-Observer standouts, Toby Heaton (Redford Catholic Central) and Jeff Graham (Westland John Glenn), each elevated their status with the Michigan State football squad coming out of spring drills.

Heaton, a red-shirt sophomore from Northville, has moved into the starting left tackle spot where he'll replace Bob Kula, who was recently drafted by the Seattle comer to MSU's starting offensive front.

Also moving up MSU's depth chart is Graham, a 6-5, 272-pound center, who made significant strides at center according to reports out of East Lansing. Graham will back up starter Jeff Pearson and should be part of the MSU playing group.

"Coach (Norm) Parker told me I had a real good spring and coach (Pat) Morris, our position coach, said I'll have a chance to play if I continue to work hard," said Graham, who came to MSU as a tight end.

GRAHAM had shoulder surgery over a year ago, but has fully recovered.

Because of his guickness, he is better suited for cen-

"I've played tackle, but they asked me to play center The 6-foot-6. 286-pound Heaton will be the only new- and I said, 'Sure,' it didn't bother me," said Graham, who carries a 2.5 grade-point average in criminal justice. "I may be used as a utility man, either guard or center."

Graham made a commitment to "get tougher."

"I was pretty tough in high school because of my size so it wasn't hard to push guys around," he said. "But here it's a different story. I just had to get tougher. Some of the practices were real intense. We were scrim-maging every day and going one-on-one." Heaton saw plenty of playing time last season when he backed up returning starter Eric Moten at guard. The CC grad, a two-time state Class A heavyweight champ, was a regular on special teams and got extensive playing time on the offensive line against the likes of Michigan, Wisconsin and Hawaii (in the Hula Bowl).

Heaton missed two practices during the spring beause of a sprained shoulder, but came out of the session with a starting job.

"EVERYTHING WENT went well," he said. "I've been working hard, but for me it was a combination of everything. Size and strength is a factor and you've got to be tough, but for me it's being smarter. That's what I had to learn to become a better player."

Heaton's smarts carry over from the classroom where he was an All-Academic Big 10 pick. He carries a 3.6 GPA in advertising.

"A lot of the spring (practice) is to see whether the guys classified as borderline players can play in a game atmosphere," Heaton said. "A lot of our starters didn't play in the spring game. I played in the first half, but that's all I played."

Both Graham and Heaton have three years of eligibil-

Graham will stay in East Lansing over the summer where he'll attend classes, pick up a job and stay in shape.

Heaton, meanwhile, will return home, work a job and stay tuned up in preparation for fall drills.

Molten Rocks singe Spartans

It figured to be a typically hard-fought, closely-played soccer match between two top-notch Western Lakes Activities Association teams Friday when Livonia Stevenson traveled to Plymouth Salem.

It wasn't.

As Stevenson coach Mary Kay Boots summarized, "They beat us all over the field." And on the scoreboard as well. The Rocks wrecked Ste-

The win left Salem at 7-1-3 and in the fight for first place in the WLAA's Lakes Division, with once-beaten Farmington. If Stevenson had managed a win, three teams would have still been in the race.

No such luck for the Spartans, who are now 6-4-1. Salem led 2-0 at the half and surrendered only a penalty-shot goal to Regan Coyne.

The Rocks got two scores from Erin Harvey and single goals from Sara Hayes, Michele Minton and Erin Bagozzi.

FRANKLIN 3, N. FARMINGTON 1:Jenny Whitfield collected a goal and an assist to help Livonia Franklin stop North Farmington Friday at Franklin Whitfield's goal put the Patriots ahead 2-1 in the first half. Sue Barone gave Franklin some cushion with her second-half score, assisted by Whitfield. The Patriots' first goal came from Sarah Bauer, on an assist from Patty Shea.

"We dominated," said Franklin coach Joe Galea. "We had a lot of chances."

Karl Zabell's defensive work helped make Erica Sundeck's job in the goal a bit easier for Franklin, which improved to 4-6.

MARIAN 4, LADYWOOD 0: Livonia Lady, wood was unable to derail the Birmingham Marian drive for a fourth-straight Catholic League title Thursday at Ladywood.

The Mustangs got all four of their goals in the first half, playing with the wind behind them, then frustrated Ladywood throughout the second half. Karen Dubay, Jennifer Halowaka, Stephanie Storen and K.C. Brinkman scored for Marian, which improved to 6-0-3 overall and to 5-0-2 in the league. -

Should Marian defeat Harper Woods Regina today, it will clinch the regular-season league championship.

STEVENSON 1, FRANKLIN 0: On Wednesday, the news was better for Stevenson — but not so good for city-rival Franklin. Coyne's first-half goal proved to be enough for the home-field Spartans, who hung on for the win."

"It was a good game," said Franklin coach Galea. "They had too much depth. We pressured but couldn't

Finding exotic dinners

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

Does sauteed alligator or braised wild boar get those glands salivating?

No, huh? You'll take the hamburger, fries and a Coke?

Diners really aren't as bland as burgers, but even the area's top chefs scoff at exotic foods just for the sake of being exotic.

"We had alligator and rattlesnake on the menu before, but we don't go too far into exotic," sald Milos Cihelka who presides over the kitchen of the Golden Mushroom in Southfield.

"For one reason, the (meat) is already cut up—you don't know what you're getting. It could be donkey or horse," he said. "For another, I like to serve food I like to eat myself, not just to be spectacular or exotic."

At the Golden Mushroom, exotic translates into white Italian truffles (at $400 a pound) and Beluga caviar at the same price.

"We do a tremendous amount of game each night for dinner and two or three times a week for lunch — buffalo, venison, pheasant and wild boar."

The game is most likely to be roasted for dinner and served in stews or pot roasts at noon. Cihelka claims that rattlesnake tastes like chicken and alligator "like turtle. It needs to be braised to make it tender."

MOST FOLKS probably haven't tasted 25-year-old balsamic vinegar from Italy, but it's one of the specialties for sale at Zingerman's Deli in Ann Arbor. There's also Michigan strawberry preserves from the Leelanau Peninsula (early glow variety grown for flavor only), dried wild blueberries, air dried Swiss beef and raclette from Switzerland.

"Raclette is a cheese from Switzerland that's melted and put on boiled potatoes, to be eaten with pickled onlons and cornichons, which are little pickles," sald Ari Weinzweig, who owns the deli at 422 Detroit St. at Kingsley.

Zingerman's has 100 varieties of cheeses, including some from Ireland, England and handmade goat cheese from upstate New York. The varieties of sausages include Spanish chorizo (the kind used in paella) and Mullard — not Mallard — duck pate.

"It's a French delicacy, the best you've ever tasted," Weinzwelg said. "It's handmade by a woman whose father is a chef in southwestern France, where this is a real delicacy. Another related product she makes and we carry is rillettes — cooked, shredded duck blended with duck fat and spices."

Zingerman's also carries a wide variety of old-fashioned beans and chipitoes, smoked, dried jalepeno peppers from New Mexico.

At MacKinnon's in Northville, smoked leg of wild boar is offered, with an emphatic recommendation by chef Tom MacKinnon.

"It tastes like wild pork, but the smoking takes away some of the wild taste," MacKinnon said.

OPAH, A 200-pound fish from Hawaii, is being sliced into steaks which are then charbrolled.

I NEVER KNOW WHEN TO QUIT:

Rosalie (Marianne-Saegebrecht) accepts another overdue bill from the postman (Bill' Butter) in "Rosalie Goes Shopping."

Rosalie' goes nowhere

"Rosalie Goes Shopping" (D, PG, 95 minutes) is supposed to be a satire on conspicuous consumption in America but despite the size and scope of the target, this broadside misses the mark. That's a shame since 5 percent of the world's population (U.S.) consumes 30 percent of the resources. Something should be done before we eat ourselves into ob-

Overblown, insane films with heavy-handed satire are not the answer.

"Rosalie Goes Shopping" also suffers from a strange, sometimes surreal structure as well as sophomoric camera work and a weak plot that meanders around before crash landing of its own dead weight.

Rosalle (Marianne Saegebrecht) is a German peace bride married to an American soldier (Brad Davis) who had served in Germany. They now live in Stuttgart, Ark., with their seven children. There's a cheap play on her longing for the good old days in Germany, a thread throughout the fabric of this film.

Supposedly, this points out the superiority of European values. But it doesn't. Europe's right behind us with environmental and consumption problems.

Hubby pilots a crop dusting plane and Rosalie goes shopping for gourmet foods (and lots of other stuff) so number two son, Schnukki, can practice being a chef. There's another boy, the oldest, a soldier in the American Army, twin daughters, a younger daughter and an older daughter, Barbara.

ROSALIE'S family videotapes everything and eats superb haute cuisine prepared by Schnukki. Watching them is much like surreptitiously watching weird neighbors perform bizarre acts in the middle of the night. Hardly amusing satire, particularly Dad who is the biggest grinning idiot to hit the screen in a long time. Extremely excessive behavior is embarrassing and not at all hu-

Although Dad makes a good wage flying his crop duster, it's not enough for this family's living standard. But credit is the American way, so Rosalie scams on 43 credit cards when she isn't kiting checks. A major flaw right here: If Rosalie was as good at this as the film pretends - and if the point is that credit in America is a flawed system waiting to be abused — then why is she continually hound-

'Cook' leaves a bad taste

By John Monaghan special writer

Each night, the entourage arrives at the swanky, red velvet-drapes restaurant. Albert, an ill-mannered gangster who sells "protection" to local eateries, talks non-stop, food flying from his mouth, physically and verbally abusing everyone in

After almost two hours of the British-made "The Cook, the Thief, His Wife and Her Lover," the audience feels beaten, too.

Though artistically rendered with a palette of colorfully lit theatrical sets and glorious wide screen. Peter Greenway's morbid study of sex, violence and fine cuisine leaves a very nasty taste in your mouth.

The movie could be called "The Kitchen, the Dining Room, the Bathroom and the Parking Lot" because the action takes place almost solely in these settings. Greenway makes up for space limitations by bathing his striking sets in green, yellow, red, blue and purple lights.

A stark white bathroom with pink accents gives off a hypnotic, almost three-dimensional effect. A warehouse-sized kitchen is the most amazing plece of work, with tables heaped high with fresh fish and walls strung with large copper kettles.

IT'S HERE that Albert's battered wife takes a lover. She first eyes him across the restaurant, reading a book. After interrupted intercourse in a bathroom stall, she whisks him away into a back room, where they make love atop recently plucked goose feathers. The cook offers his assistance. He likes the woman and quietly seeks revenge on Albert, who regularly insults his customers. In one of the film's cleverest stabs, patrons only react to the abuse around them when Albert dumps a bowl of hot soup on their heads. Nothing short disturbs their meal.

Food is the guiding force in "The Cook, the Thief . . ." Controlling the restaurants beats power over banks, according to Albert, who feels a bonding with other great leaders (like Napolean and Hitler) because he shares their voracious love for seafood.

Peter Greenway, a prolific independent filmmaker known for his maddeningly symbolic work, is a regular at festivals and art houses. His first film to get wide exposure is bold and expertly handled, but also pretentious and calculated to elicit extreme disgust from just about ev

A sticky night at the drive in is nearly a thing of the past. That's why Frank Uhle, a projectionist at the Michigan Theatre in Ann Arbol has taken the fun indoors by scheduling his fourth edition of Frank's Drive-In Movie Night.

The features include Roger Corman's "It Conquered the World' (1956), with Peter Graves and Lee Van Cleef battling mind-controlling Venusians It's followed by The Cool and the Crazy? (1958), where marijuana smoking turns teenagers --into psychotics.

In between features, Frank un reels amazing artifacts from his growing collection of films. There's snacktime promos with dancing hot dogs and unnaturally colored pizza and pop. Preview trailers advertise movies like "The Bloody Brood (1961) and "Rock, Baby, Rockit (1957).

The only thing missing from this nostalgic night at the drive in is the mosquitoes.

VIDEO VIEWING

By Dan Greenberg special writer

It's interesting how quickly entertainment media reflect political, economic or cultural changes in the world. With the end of decades of Cold War conflict, the change is dramatic, the implications wide-ranging and spy movies are suddenly very HBO consistently produces and releases prefty decent films for its cable channel, motion pictures and comedy and concert performances that quickly arrive on the video racks for home viewing.

Two HBO video releases on May 9 deal with Cold War terrorism and spies who are losing their rationale for snooping. Both films are 1989 color productions with well-known casts: Neither is all that great but both have their moments and are worth checking out for entertainment and for their interesting sociopolitical ideas that go beyond the shooting and chasing.

The first, "Red King, White Knight" (108 minutes) is not rated but probably deserves an R. It looks at the great changes sweeping Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union since Gorbachev instituted glasnost.

What does glasnost mean to hardline Communist officials, in particular KGB types, who have thrived on Cold War activities and the budgets associated with hi-tech lurking in the dark? Well, comrades, there's political unemployment as well as technological and economic ramifications.

TO AVOID the poorhouse, a KGB officer, Tulayev (Tom Bell), organizes a plot to assassinate Gorbachev. Clancy (Gavan O'Herlihy), an IRA terrorist, is to be the hit man. Naturally, the CIA gets wind of these doings and sends in a special agent, Stoner (Tom Skerritt).

Here things get cornball and confused as it turns out that Stoner is a retired, former hot-shot maverick agent with a chip on his shoulder and the burden of his wife's death on his soul.

Since all these matters are highly sensitive. Stoner is sent "unofficially" into the unnamed Eastern European country (Hungary) where Tuayev is plotting. If caught, Stoner will be disavowed, disowned and neither rescued nor ransomed. Not to worry, he gets around pretty easily and calls Washington from a pay

Hungary just happens to be the station where Stoner's wife was murdered and where Stoner had an affair with Anna (Helen Mirren). In the background of these unbelievable coincidences is a retired KGB type, Szaz (Max von Sydow). Some of the acting isn't too bad — von Sydow is appropriately dismayed at the proceedings. Skerritt, however, tends to posture and mug too much. Bell is quite hard, as he should be.

THE REALLY interesting facet of "Red King, White Knight" is the American CIA Committee discussion whether or not the President should be informed and advised to call and warn Gorby. As it turns out, peace is bad for a lot of people's business. The other side of the ocean gets into glasnost as well in "The Cold Front" (R, 94 minutes), starring Martin Sheen as John Hyde, a Drug Enforcement Agent doing some secret stuff in Vancouver. He and his Royal Canadian Mounted Police Detective partner, Derek McKenzie (Michael Ontkean), get involved with the CIA and the KGB, both of whom. are trying to eliminate a rogue terrorist/assassin, Mantha (Kim Coates) Sound familiar?

Right - and so does the well worn plot device of an ex-wife and the husband's guilt and longing. In this case, Hyde's wife, Amanda (Beverly D'Angelo), conveniently sings in a local supper club where Mantha hangs out. The sax player has some pretty neat solos.

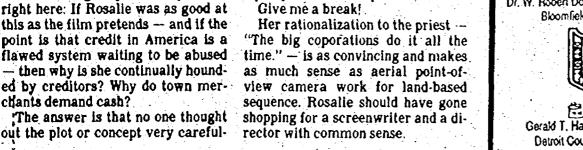

It gets pretty murky insofar as figuring out who is doing what to whom but it is clear that too many CIA and KGB types find peace and the crumbling of the Berlin Wall bad for budgets.

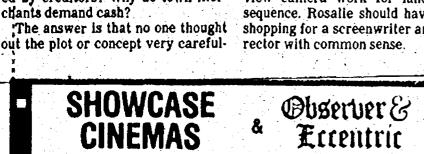

THE FILM concludes with the usual - and in this case fairly well done - chase sequence. Amanda runs through dark, lonely streets; Mantha chases her. Hyde chases Mantha, Hyde corners Mantha high up on bridge girders. They fight

Both films are fairly entertaining but of greatest interest are their very clear messages: Entertainment media have a lot to say about what's going on in the world. The world, in particular spies and businesses that deal in confrontation, may not be able to afford peace and good will to all men, women and children. Now, that's depressing.

STREET BEATS

The Laughing Hicks — John Novak, Rob Felenchak, Ted Smith and Dave McGlinnen — play some of the most complex rhythmic music patterns around.

Breaking rules

Hicks go for audience participation

By Jill Hamilton special writer

At a concert given by a usual local band, the rules are pretty much set - the band performs and the audience passively listens, or maybe dances, if they are extra riled up.

These rules of concert behavior simply don't hold true at a Laughing Hicks concert because, well, the Laughing Hicks are a bit different from other bands.

John Novak, the Hicks' lead singer and strange man extraordinare, puts it this way, "I'm pretty much a fruit on stage, a noodle." We're not going to argue with that assessment because it pretty well sums up the situation. Novak is into making a concert a participatory event. Instead of remaining on the stage, like most other lead singers, Novak spends half his performance time roaming around in the audience.

He seems to enjoy strolling up to unsuspecting members of the audience and singing right into their faces to get a reaction. More often than not, the audience members are delighted to be singled out and yell things back to Novak and wave at their friends.

On the other hand, some audience members at a recent concert at Cross Street Station seemed a bit hesitant to walk near the stage for fear of suddenly being made into part of the show. Since the path to the restroom at Cross Street leads patrons in front of the stage, we'd venture a guess that a lot of people were ignoring nature's call that evening so that they wouldn't have to step into the limelight.

"WE'RE TRYING to outrage and amuse everyone at the same time," said fellow Hick Rob Felenchak.

They are doing just that. Consider Novak's dancing. It, too, is quite unusual. At first glance, he appears to be dancing wildly in random patterns and, in the process, looking not unlike a schizo-

Upon closer inspection, his dancing begins to make sense. His weird, seemingly haphazard gyrations and staccato, angular movements are exactly in time to the music.

Pretty amazing, considering that the other Hicks — Ted Smith, Dave McGlinnen and Felenchak — play some of the most complex rhythmic patterns around.

"(My dancing) was labeled as 'geometric,' " Novak said. "I've listened to a lot of jazz rhythms that aren't based in 4/4 time and it's hard for me to dance to regular rhythms."

The Hick's difficult rhythmic arrangements are reminiscent of King Crimson's experimentations. Their skillful playing of unusual time settings is something a casual listener might not notice, but, the other musicians hold in awe.

One local musician, upon hearing the Hicks, remarked, "These guys are great musicians — those songs are really impossible to play."

NOVAK SINGS/TALKS through the songs Frank Zappa-style. This is not necessarily due to lack of vocal talent — it is because the Hicks consider their songs to be poems. If Novak says the words instead of singing them, audiences are more apt to understand the lyrics.

"People say they like it because they can understand what the words are," said Smith.

The lyrics combined with Novak's movements help to get the Hick's often politically charged messages across to the audience.

"I try to act out songs to a certain degree, I think of them in a way that can be told with the body in mind," said Novak.

That said, all of this meaningful movement doesn't add up to a rigidly choreographed show. At a Laughing Hicks concert there is a feeling of being on the edge, that anything could happen. That's probably because anything can, and in fact often does, happen. "If I start to go off on a tangent, I will start improvising . . .

making up poems in my head," said Novak.

This doesn't bother the rest of the band because they seem to have an almost unearthly creative link to each other. This band harmony serves them well whether they are improvising in front of an audience or working out arrangements for new songs.

"JOHN SAYS things like "I want this to sound like ice," said Felenchak, referring to the band's song writing process. What is amazing is that the rest of the band understands such nebulous descriptions as this and will, in fact, play something that does sound like ice.

This adds up to material that is almost dauntingly creative. Audiences who are used to the easy-to-swallow, hey-dudes-let's-party. genre of music will find themselves initially taken aback by the Hick's extremely challenging music.

Challenging music, yes, but ultimately satisfying. These guys are truly a ground-breaking quartet.

DAYS OF OPEN HAND

Suzanne Vega

There weren't a lot of record companies beating down a path to Suzanne Vega's door six years ago. They probably concluded that her brand of folk-oriented rock had little, if any, potential for sales. However, those bottom-liners have been proven wrong.

Her debut album, "Suzanne Vega," quietly sold about 200,000 copies with little or no promotion. "Solitude-Standing" followed in 1987 by going gold and launching probably the most unlikely Top-10 single in recent memory, "Luka" - a song about child abuse.

Yega's third album, "Days of Open Hand," shows a small - but not significant - move toward a more radiofriendly sound.

Despite bringing in the considerable talents of Hugh Padgham (The Police, Phil Collins), who mixed the album, "Hand" shows that Vega is in control of her musical direction, and she has no intention of selling out.

Working with collaborator Anton Sanko (who co-produced as well as co-wrote more than half the tracks), Vega the poet continues to fill her ative themes. This is most evident on . Greenwich Village. the tracks "Room Off the Street,"

STAY SICK! - The Cramps

Well, as the title hints, The Cramps are indeed staying sick with their latest release. Cramp-fans should be pretty delighted as this is the band's first record in three years. We won't try to venture a guess as to how they spent their artistic hiatus. Our friends guitarist Poison Ivy, vocalist Lux Interior, drummer Nick Knox and bassist Candy Del Marprove themselves once again to be, as the press release says, "leaders in skull-fracturing rock-and-roll dis-

Let's scan some of the song titles hmmmmm, let's see, there's "All Women Are Bad" and um, "Bikini Girls With Machine Guns" and of course, "The Creature from the Black Leather Lagoon." Yup, sounds like "rock-and-roll disease" all right.

Since this is a family newspaper, there aren't too many Cramps tunes that we can go into very deeply but there are a few songs we can discuss. They do a very Cramps-like cover of the ever-popular ditty, "Shortnin' Bread." (Come on, you remember that song - "Mama's little baby loves shortnin', shortnin', etc . . . ") By "Cramps-like," we mean psychotic vocals backed up with distorted sound like "Beach Blanket Bingo" place. gone awry.

Let's check out the chorus to "The Creature from the Black Leather Lagoon." Mr. Interior sings, "Black Black/Black Black League/Smash Smash/Black Black Leather/Kill Kill/Black Black Leather/Crash Crash/Black Black Leather/I'm the creature from the Black Leather La-

Another point of interest on this album is their version of "Old Time Rock'N Roll." The only thing is, The Cramps changed the words in the song just a bit. Their version is about, of course, "G-- D--- Rock 'N The songs range from ditties about

Depeche Mode once again grabs the hearts and feet of the dance crowd-and-hit-the top of the collegegence. As a matter of fact, what is a curiousity is that the band's main audience is teenage girls, an audience known for its fickleness and general attraction to non-cerebral bands. Gore's lyrics are subtle in their examination of relationships and the world around him.

From the expressions of love/bravado in "World in My Eyes" - "Let me take you on a trip, around the the trouble is that, after 10 years, world and back, and you won't have the joke isn't funny any more. # Smoking: It's no laughing matter

Dear Ms. Schiff:

Re: Smoker vs. Non-smoker . As I can see by your photo you are not a fat person, so I can see where you might enjoy Ed C.'s letter regarding smoking. So "many of the things you say are true that I had to laugh.' Did you laugh at the part about those who are overweight? I myself am a fat person as my friends tell me. My condition is medical as I'm sure are thousands who are predisposed to obesity.

Or did you laugh at the part he describes as "genetic makeup portends high chance of having a handicapped child?" My sister-in-law has such a child who is now 23 and goes to work every business day and supports herself.

Or did you laugh about people who live in flood areas? My basement fills with water after a hard rain, but I don't think it's funny. It doesn't stop the city from raising my taxes. but does nothing in the last 12 years. to help me with my problem.

And when was the last time Ed C. drove 55 miles per hour? A long time, I'd venture:

And what is this country all about? Free choice? So that makes it right for Mr. Ed to blow his smoke in our face. Government studies prove second-hand smoke is more dangerous than the person smoking.

He doesn't say that smokers are not a burden, but that many other groups, e.g. people who live in high-prone earthquake areas, people who live by flooding lakes and overweight people, are also a burden. It is unfortunate for any person to feel the victim of an unwanted condition. But the question of the relationship between psyche and soma "how does an organic condition affect psychology" and vice versa is complicated. We know that concentrations of hormones and nuerotransmitters are inherited. They can determine temperament, but we also know that in Japan it is believed that each person can control his anger. There is also a low rate of violence in Tokyo. Are Japanese imposing control or were they born with the genetic makeup for this attitude.

I could not be a psychotherapist without feeling sympathy and empathy for people. But I have witnessed that when this response is accompanied by a push for growth, change can be produced. I am aware. that therapists are prejudiced on one side of the psychological component of problems. This is true not only because it is the field in which we work, but because we do see results from psychological therapy that can't be explained by a change in genetics.

I would never want to hurt a person with a genetic problem, through the paper or in my office. However, until an honest attempt at change is made, it is impossible to know the extent to which (even genetic ) predispositions can be modified. I have seen people fight predispositions to become altered from the original.

Many comics that Joey Bielaska brings to town have been known to do double duty.

They appear at Joey's Comedy Club in Livonia or at Joey's Comedy Club and Sports Emporium in Allen Park. They also appear on Joey's "Spotlight on Comedy," a cable TV

"We have fun with it," said Bielaska, a Plymouth resident who serves as the show's host. "We have a real good time with it. No one gets paid for this. We all chalk it up to experi-

The show's been broadcast on Omnicom for just over a year, Producer ... Pete Smith recalled meeting Bielaska at the Omnicom studio during the annual "Baskets of Love" telethon for the Salvation Army.

"I asked him for a card and said I would really like to do a show," said Smith. "I think it's worked out really well."

Bielaska, 32, appears on the show with Chip Karnaby, the Ed McMahon-type sidekick, and with musician Jeff Antalose.

MANY COMICS who appear at the clubs appreciate the chance to do the half-hour TV show as well.

Every time they hear about it, they want to get on it. It's just really good exposure for a comic," Bielaska said:

opened in February 1988 and the Allen Park club opened in the fall of 1989. Bielaska and his brother, Ed, were the original owners. They took on a couple of partners when the Allen Park club opened. Headliners from the two comedy clubs appear on "Spotlight on Comedy," as do local comedians who are performing at the clubs. Shows often include an interview with another guest; a man who'd developed educational games appeared on one show.

We brought him on to promote that," Bielaska sald.

and it does really well. What I like about it is we're real relaxed."

Bielaska writes some material for the show and Chip Karnaby does some writing. Bielaska and the others get together in advance to talk about their ideas for the show.

"I think it's quite a privilege to be able to do this right here," said Bielaska, a 1976 Plymouth Salem High School graduate.

The show is taped Saturday afternoons before an audience at the Omnicorn studio in Canton Township. Performers have to concentrate on playing to the camera.

Their material has to be clean, and that can take some getting used to for comics accustomed to appearing at clubs in front of adult audiences. Bielaska recalled one taping where a local Boy Scout troop was in the audience.

"I don't like to bleep and if I do have to I will."

Most times, taping is done at Omnicom, although Smith would like to do more live remotes, along the lines of David Letterman's show. During last year's Plymouth Fall Festival, Bielaska went from booth to booth to sample the food, and that was used on "Spotlight on Comedy."

"We really do have a lot of fun," Smith said. "So far, it's been going very well. It's fun, it's simple and it keeps people interested."

"Oh, gaining a little weight, hey Billy? Ha, ha!"

"You look like the Pillsbury Dough Boy."

I've heard it all and I think I've had just about enough. I admit I've filled out a little more in some spots than others, but I feel I'm a product of my environment.

See, when I graduated from high school some 13 years ago I sported the trim, firm physique of a typical jock, I was in good physical condition back when I enjoyed a daily dose of athletic competition. But 13 years of relative inactivity has taken its toll on this now soft, unconditioned body.

It started when I became a part-time bartender trying to make ends meet back in 1980. Working in such an environment has its pitfalls — such as being able to indulge in the beverage of your choice (Budweiser was my choice) on a daily basis.

A few years later, after furthering my education, I landed a job that keeps me nice and comfortable. I write sports. I sit and watch others sweat, then go back to the office, sit down and write about how hard those athletes worked.

I'll be the first to admit that pushing a pencil for pay has worked wonders for the development of a plump posterior.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH. I've said it for several years, but I've decided to do something about. This time I will.

Since this is National Physical Fitness month, I've decided the best time is the present. I'm going on a weight-loss Forget the grapefruit diet, diet pills and diet milkshakes. I'm going for the real thing - permanent loss. And I'm going to lose weight the old fashioned way - by working it off. Sweating it off. That's right, I'm going into training.

Through the coordination of the Package Deal Inc., I've been set up on a 90-day training program at the One-on-One Athletic Club in West Bloomfield.

receive personal instruction throughout their training program. I've been fortunate to land one of the best as my personal instructor/trainer, Mike Anthony, the 1989 Mr. Michigan.

My objective isn't to bulk up and contend with Anthony for the Mr. Michigan title (that's an unrealistic goal; Anthony is huge), but rather to trim down my weight and firm up the muscles I know I have lurking somewhere beneath the inches of camouflage (fat).

According to Anthony, you don't have to spend your entire life working out in a gym to develop and maintain a trim, firm physique.

"If you devote one little hour a day it will make all the difference in the world," Anthony said.

I'LL BE training one hour a day, four times a week for 3 the next three months to see if Mr. Michigan can pass his toughest challenge yet — turning this soft, round body of mine into a lean, mean, muscle machine.

The program I'll follow will include warm-up on the Lifecycle, then an hour of intense workout on Nautilus machines and free weights, I'll also be watching what I eat.

"Think natural," said Anthony when asked about what foods I should eat. "Try to go easy on the dairy products and sweets and watch the red meat. Just use good judgement. You know what's good for you; things like fruit, vegetables, chicken, fish, turkey."

I'll be checking in with my colleagues at Steet Scene on a periodic basis and reporting the details of my anguish . . . er, I mean my program, so stay tuned and watch the pounds melt away.

But please, don't send any cinnamon rolls.

Bill Parker's 90-day program starts with a warm-up on the life cycle, then an hour of intense workout on Nautilus equipment and free weights.

90s coffee makers do more than perc Continued from Page 1

ers that do everything from ground the beans to brew the coffee in a ready-to-carry thermos.

That 4-cup hotpot without a switch (to turn it off, you yanked the plug) or even a "dial-a-brew" control may have been good enough to get you through college. But now that you're established you're ready to move on.

The choices are myriad and the prices are, well ... who's going to throw $40-per-pound Jamaican Blue Mountain blend into a $15 coffee pot, anyway? A the Sharper Image store in Twelve Oaks mall, Novi, you can drop $169 for a combination coffee/cappuccino/espresso maker from Braun. The sleek Euro-style machine designed by Braun's Thomas Haslacher comes in black or white and will brew eight cups said James Bobco, assistant mana-

The capuccino portion of the machine includes a steamer valve to warm milk, Bobco said.

AT HUDSON'S Oakland Mall store in Troy, it's straight coffee most of the customers are after, said Joe Mariani, who works in the Marketplace department.

"The cappuccino seems to be for special occasions, or for people who drink an awful lot of coffee and want something different," Mariani said.

The store's "bread and butter" coffee maker these days is a Krupps 12-cup model with timer, he said. For $99.95 you get to stay in bed a few extra minutes each morning while the machine brews the stuff by itself (provided, of course, that you put the grounds and water in the night before).

Krupps Thermal Aroma model is the maker preferred by James Werthelmer, who owns the Coffee Beanery Ltd. franchise at Westland Center.

But Werthelmer said the machine — which was introduced last year and brews coffee directly into a transportable insulated carafe --hasn't been a big hit with customers. He's currently discounting it 15 percent from its $89.95 introductory price.

What happens (with a non-insulated carafe) is that the coffee sits on the burner and begins to burn." he said. "But I guess people really like to see the coffee being brewed and you can't do that with this one.' THE STORE also stocks a Milland-brew machine by Melita that grinds the beans and then brews them. That one goes for $174.99. Even the venerable and formerly low-tech Mr. Coffee has gone ups-

The newest Mr. Coffee model, introduced in March, includes a microchip and a high-powered heating element that will brew 10 cups up to 35 percent faster than previous models:

The expert, as its called, allows the user to constantly control the coffee temperature and features a pause and serve valve so you can pour a cup before the brewing cycle is complete.

The $79.99 (suggested retail price) machine also uses an environmentally friendly filter made from chlorine-free paper. The production technique requires half the number of trees to turn out the same number of filters as previous models, the maker said.

The only thing they haven't gotten rid of is Mr. Coffee himself, Joe DiMaggio. Thank goodness.

Coffee makers these available at Sharper Image at Twelve Oaks not only brew coffee, grind the beans make espresso and cappucci-

Medical records worth saving

Q: How important is it to keep old medical records? Should they be transferred when you move? Do I need to keep my bills? I've heard of people keeping diaries during major illnesses like cancer. Is that necessary?

A: I talked to Dr. Hector Inchaustegui, formerly a private practice internist and now medical director for Select Care.

He told me the most important thing about medical records is the patient being well informed about diagnosis, treatment and possible complications. Medical terms are particularly important because they can be so easily confused. It's good to write down this information, but don't rely too much on papers because they can get lost, burned in fires, etc.

Studies show the most successful survivors of major illnesses are people who are most well informed. A dlary can help keep information straight as well as fill the great need for seriously ill patients to ventilate their feelings. Dr. Inchaustegui said survivors also use the technique of repeatedly setting short term goals. They set their sights on the graduation of a child in two months, for instance, rather than thinking in long range terms. Happily, these short periods often stretch into many years of survival.

When moving, you can ask your former doctor for a summary report of your records. If more specific information is needed, records can be requested later. Doctors keep former patients' records five to 10 Worlington, Birmingham 48010.

years, and they are rarely needed beyond then.

When traveling carry necessary medical information in your wallet, which is the first place authorities will look in case of an accident. Despite his doctor's admonitions, one patient instisted on traveling too soon after a heart attack. That doctor outlined the problem in a note for his patient to carry in case of emer-

Once completed, the only reason to keep medical bills would be for. tax purposes. Check over bills carefully before paying, however, because ludicrous mistakes sometimes. happen. One hospital billed a man; for speech therapy after treatinghim for a broken finger.

-I think it's good to create one place for all your medical information. This is useful for recording exercises recommended for certain ailments or for minor symptoms you want to discuss with your doctor on your next visit. Include your blood type; doctors, hospitals and patient account numbers; dates and diagnoses of illnesses; X-rays taken; medications prescribed and any side effects experienced. Allergic reactions could also be recorded, along with inoculations, blood type, a history of blood pressure and other miscellaneous data.

Where would Her Majesty live in Birmingham?

At Buckingham, naturally.

She'd love the royal park across the street. She'd dote on the spacious two-bedroom apartment with fresh new interiors from the most modern appliances to the best lighting fixtures to designer carpeting to contemporary verticals.

She'd like the uncommon amount of room and royal way the service staff treats her. After all, a person's home ought to be their palace.

Developers plan on subdivision diversity

Winding roads, rolling terrain appeal to buyers

By Doug Funke staff writer

Attractive residential subdivisions usually start with a good plat or site plan design — the physical layout of roads and individual lots.

Cookie-cutter neighborhoods with straight, parallel streets, one house behind another on relatively small lots have faded into development history.

The trend now is for lots of different shapes at least 60 feet wide on winding roads, and, where possible, various grades of topography.

The overall goal . . . in recent years has been to maintain light and air — to preserve open space, green areas," said Dale Countegan, director of planning and community development for Farmington Hills.

That's what buyers crave, too, developers maintain.

"They want creativity, privacy, as much as you can give them, a statement when you come into the development either through landscaping or an entrance," said David V. Johnson, chairman and president of Victor International in Southfield.

"WE LOOK for things that attract the general public — rolling terrain, streams, whether we can create some ponds," said Bob Paciocco, vice president of PAMA Investment and Contracting Co. of Plymouth.

"Rather than a straight entrance from A to B, we put in curves. It gives more character to the sub," he said. "Rectangular lots of the '50s and '60s are pretty much gone."

Community planners and political officials have established stricter density, setback and landscaping requirements to help promote that open look.

But perhaps the biggest impact on platting and site plan development has been the emergence of the state Department of Natural Resources to protect wetlands.

Some municipalities like Rochester Hills and West Bloomfield also have adopted local wetlands ordinances.

DEVELOPERS have responded with more creative plats for traditional subdivisions and site plans for condominium projects. Planned residential or planned unit developments have

In those situations, some setback and density requirements are relaxed in exchange for saving unusual land features.

Tree preservation has impacted subdivision layouts, too. Since last year, developers in Farmington Hills have contended with a tree protection ordinance.

"That's a common element to a community," Countegan said. "You just can't cut them without some sort of oversite."

Actually, all lots aren't created equal, even within the same subdivision. Lots with many trees or parcels that back up to woods often sell at a premium.

"A premium lot is a lot that maybe backs to a park area, stream, open space," Paciocco said. "Corner lots aren't too desirable. People don't want to be exposed on two sides.

"CUL-DE-SACS are very popular. The only traffic is people

"We try to come up with as many (cul-de-sacs) as we can. Those are the kind of lots that get a premium. You end up with fewer houses, but they bring more money with a premium and the end result is the same," Paciocco said. Lot prices can vary by more than $30,000 within the same subdivision. "If you develop on a lake and sites are close or contiguous (to water), they would be more of a premium," said John Shekerjian, a partner in the John Richards Development Corp. of Bloomfield Hills.

"Others further away from a major street might be more valuable," he said. "Some lots may open up to an out-lot or large common area.

"A lot is not premium because it's nicer, but costs more to develop," Shekerjian said.

LOTS ALONE can account for more than half of the total cost of building a new house, especially on lakefront property, Johnson said.

But there's no accounting for specific tastes. That's why Johnson includes plenty of options when he plats a subdivision. "Some like a corner lot, some a ple-shaped lot for kids to play on, while the guy next door might want the pie reversed for a big frontage to show off," Johnson sald. He and other developers just don't slap a land-use plan together when they acquire property. "We spend time looking at a piece from the ground, from helicopters," Johnson said. Plats or site plans originally submitted for review generally don't come through the approval process unchanged.

"DENSITY, that's one of the first things I look at," said George Wilhelmi, Westland's planning director. "Usually, you cut out a number of lots to create livable space. We've got some cases of triangular lots where actual utilization of the lot would not really make it livable," he said.

"We like at least two entrances. If there's only one, we ask them to make it as short as possible then put in a perimeter road or loop road," Wilhelmi added.

"We're always looking at landscaping, protection of trees, layout, how it flows, traffic implications," said Countegan. Shirley Barney, community development director in Plymouth Township, said traffic circulation in regular subs, open spaces in residential unit developments are her biggest concerns when reviewing plat or site plan proposals.

A community's multi-step plat or site plan review process usually consists of administrative review, planning commission review, at least one public hearing and ultimate approval by a city council or township board.

Subdivision plat plans which feature choice in lot configuration turn out like

Evictions vs. foreclosures

I am considering a co-op as opposed to a condominium. I have been told that the cooperative association can evict me if I do not pay the monthly assessment. Is that true?

Unlike a condominium, when you buy a cooperative you are a renter of the cooperative unit, having signed a proprietary lease for that unit. If you default in your obligations to the cooperative association of which you are a member, the cooperative association can institute eviction procedures have defaulted in your obligations as a member of with it. What do you suggest I do? the corporation and your interest in the cooperative. (AP) — The Lava Lite, a fixture in hippie crash pads of the 1960s, is celebrating its 25th birthday. Retailers across the country say demand for the lamp, filled with a secret solution of oil, water, wax and other chemicals, has steadily grown since sales dropped to their lowest point in 1983. "We carried it as a Christmas item, and it did during a national war on drugs, an indication past sales were not dependent on drug users buying The lamp's new-found popularity centers among 18- to 24-year-olds, in addition to former hippies, according to retailers, and now sells for about $50.

SPENCER GIFTS, a 450-store nationwide retailer that targets the young-adult market, carries the item in every store, all year long. "It's what we call a basic item — we sell them day in, day out," said Spencer Gifts' official Beth Schlansky in a telephone interview from the com-
