Cuts to follow millage defeat

See related editorial, 12A

By Tedd Schneider
staff writer

Wayne-Westland school officials said they would begin implementation this week of massive budget cuts following Monday's sound defeat of a tax proposal by district voters.

The two-year 7.75-mill request, combining a renewal and increase, was turned down 58.8 to 41.2 percent in the largest school election turnout in recent years.

Although the ballot measure fared better than three similar proposals last February, it still lost by nearly 1,900 votes, or 6,251 to 4,379 in unofficial returns. The proposal won out in just five of 25 precincts.

"We had to go out and get the message to our parents, that they had to go out and do the job for our kids. We didn't do the job," Superintendent Dennis O'Neill said after the returns were in.

O'NEILL, ADDRESSING a crowd of about 150 millage supporters in Dyer Senior Center lounge, said he felt like he was at "an Irish wake."

The superintendent also lambasted critics of the millage proposal, saying they would find out what it was like to run a program "with no sugar daddy, no money tree."

"If we don't have the resources to do the job, there's no way to improve the quality of education," he said.

The Wayne-Westland Citizens for Education Committee actively opposed the tax increase.

O'Neill said school officials would sit down Tuesday morning to begin planning for next fall. Some $5 million in administrative and program cuts approved by the school board this spring will mean the elimination of most of the elementary expressive arts program, one junior high class period, and district-funded sports and extracurricular activities at junior and senior high schools. The school board has approved a student activity fee for non-academic programs.

In a brief interview following his speech, the superintendent reiterated his view that the single proposal was the only way to provide the funding necessary to operate the district at its current level.

In earlier statements, O'Neill said the 7.75 mills would have provided about $10 million in revenues for 1990-91, or enough to restore the cuts and provide salary increases for teachers and other district employees.

THE DISTRICT'S contract with the Wayne-Westland Education Association expires this summer.

The superintendent said the likelihood of another special election before or shortly after school begins was "virtually nil." He cited the statewide August primary and November general election and state law which requires at least 45 days between elections.

School officials made similar statements following the February defeat, but said they changed their minds after hearing loud support from parents, students and teachers.

In a prepared statement issued Monday, Citizens for Education chairman David Moranty said school officials now have a responsibility "to begin a realistic appraisal or revenues and expenditures for the coming year. Then they must restore as many student programs, recall as many laid-off employees and rebuild as much integrity as possible for the education of our children."

The statement also said school officials should "devote as much energy, effort, initiative and leadership to running the schools without the tax increase as they did in campaigning for its passage."

THE INTENSE effort by the pro-millage Funding Effective Schools Committee may have been partly responsible for the large turnout. The 10,633 ballots cast represented 15.6 percent of the district's approximately 68,000 registered voters, said Eleanor Harrington, district elections clerk.

The turnout was higher than the 11.7 percent who voted in the Feb. 8 special election and substantially more than the 7-10 percent turnout in school funding elections during the early and mid-1980s.

Checks at several voting sites during the day revealed heavy voting.

"It's the biggest (turnout) we've ever had," said Winnifred Story, a worker at Precinct 16 (at P.D. Graham Elementary School), where 675 voters had cast ballots and 25 people were waiting in line at 7:30 p.m.

Peggy Crunette, captain at precinct 30 in Edison Elementary School, said the early evening total of 317 voters was up 50 percent from February.

Incumbent Laura wins in a landslide

By Marie Chestney

In one of the most lopsided election victories ever, Livonia school board trustee Joseph Laura overwhelmed challenger Nagi Musleh to win a second term Monday.

The margin of victory was 2,413 to 243 with Laura gaining nearly 91 percent of the vote. The district includes the northern section of Westland.

Livonia City Clerk Robert Nash said he could not recall a local election in which the vote was more lopsided.

"Usually it's at least 75 percent-25 percent," Nash said. "It's shocking that it's 90 percent."

With four more years on the Livonia board now assured, Laura said one of his major tasks ahead will be to encourage residents to get more involved with the school system.

"They should want to know where their dollars are going and they should be concerned about the youth in the city. The school district's reputation is reflected in their property values."

During the campaign, Musleh said he accomplished what he had set out to do.

"My primary objective was to raise the consciousness of the residents (of the school district) to many powerful issues and concerns that will provide them with the opportunity to assess and evaluate and plan ahead for a great future for them and their kids."

"The beauty of democracy is that it allows us to voice our concerns. I'm also concerned about the silent majority who did not cast their votes."

Leonard Posey raises a victory salute Monday as he joins supporters at a celebration at Paddy's Pub.

Posey wins narrow victory

By Tedd Schneider
staff writer

It was a bittersweet evening for Leonard Posey.

Posey, who narrowly defeated challenger Laurel Raisanen, Monday became the first black elected to the Wayne-Westland school board. Linda Pratt finished third.

But in remarks to supporters, the winner said his victory was marred by the defeat of a tax proposal that he and other board members supported.

"I enjoy winning just like the next person," Posey said. "But I don't feel like a winner for a very obvious reason."

"As a parent and a member of the board of education I feel terrible (about the millage defeat)."

POSEY EDGED out Raisanen, who was supported by a local anti-millage committee, by 64 votes out of more than 9,000 ballots cast in the school board race.

In unofficial returns, Posey finished with 3,202 votes or 35.4 percent. Raisanen received 3,138 votes for 34.7 percent.

Pratt received 2,696 votes for 29.8 percent.

Raisanen won 11 of the 25 precincts, while Posey took nine and Pratt finished first in five.

Raisanen said Wednesday she briefly considered asking for a recount but dropped the idea. The first-time candidate said she didn't want to act "like sour grapes."

THE THREE were running for the seat vacated last December by Terri Reighard Johnson after her election to the Westland City Council.

Posey was appointed by the board to fill out Reighard Johnson's term. Pratt and Raisanen had also applied for the vacancy.

Despite the millage setback, Posey said there were "a lot of positive things that happened during the campaign."

"Going into this campaign I didn't know whether anyone knew whether a black man could be elected to districtwide office. It (his election) is a tribute to this overall community that people (who had doubts) put that aside."

POSEY PRAISED his opponents for their campaign but criticized what he said were negative contributions from Raisanen's backers on the Wayne-Westland Citizens for Education Committee, whom he referred to as "people who don't believe in what we believe in."

Planners endorse McDonald's plan

By Tedd Schneider
staff writer

Residents of a northeast Westland neighborhood are satisfied with revisions in a site plan for a McDonald's restaurant, a spokeswoman for the group said Tuesday.

"This is an improvement over any previous development that's been proposed," said Wilhelmina Lawson following Tuesday's special meeting of the city planning commission. "McDonald's has been responsive to our requests."

The commission voted 8-0 to forward the revised site plan to the Westland City Council. The council could act on the plan as early as Monday, said planning director George Wilhelm.

Construction of the fast-food restaurant would end a three-year battle over commercial development at the southeast corner of Joy and Merriman.

About a dozen residents, including several from Livonia, attended Tuesday's meeting.

Resident, 27, shot by off-duty trooper

A Westland man was shot once in the head Saturday night during an altercation with an off-duty Michigan State Police officer at Jefferson and Chene in Detroit, police said.

The 27-year-old man was listed in serious condition Tuesday at Detroit Receiving Hospital, according to Officer John Leavens of the Detroit Police public information unit.

Leavens declined to identify either the victim or the police officer involved and said the incident was still under investigation. He said the victim is being held as a police prisoner.

Leavens said the altercation occurred at 6:30 p.m. after the two men were involved in a traffic accident.

"The trooper identified himself as a Michigan State Police officer and the Westland man raised a handgun and fired one shot, missing the officer," Leavens said. "The officer returned fire and wounded the man."

Leavens declined to release further details of the incident and said he was unsure what charges, if any, would be filed.

McDonald's plan satisfies residents

Representatives from McDonald's and a Southfield consulting firm that did a study of traffic patterns in the neighborhood addressed concerns from residents and commissioners.

RESIDENTS ON Cooley, which backs up to the property, and other nearby streets are worried about increased noise, traffic, trash, vandalism and decreasing property values if the restaurant is built.

McDonald's has agreed to increase the height of a wall at the south end of the property from six to seven feet and add a gate to the wall so residents will be able to operate hours haven't been set, said Bernie Whitman of McDonald's Corp., but restaurants are traditionally open from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. during the week and until midnight on Friday and Saturday nights.

"If the hours do become a nuisance to the neighbors, certainly we can talk about it and adjust them," he said.

A "soft play area" adjacent to the restaurant will be accessible only from inside the building and won't draw unsupervised local school children, McDonald's officials said.

Tapan Datta of Goodell-Gravis, Inc., the traffic consultants, said traffic from nearby Franklin High School and the adjacent 7-Eleven store will have "no impact" on McDonald's traffic.

"The peak hours for those (buildings) are different from the peak traffic time for McDonald's, which would be noon to 1 p.m.," he said.

CONSTRUCTION OF the restaurant could start as early as the fall, but spring 1991 would be more likely, according to McDonald's officials.

McDonald's bought the property for an undisclosed price from developer Glenn Shaw last January. Shaw, who owns the 7-Eleven property, previously won approval for a strip mall on the site but Blockbuster Video, backed out as the major tenant and the deal fell apart last fall.

Area residents have been fighting commercial development of the property since 1987 when Burger King announced plans to build a restaurant on the site.

Raisanen, at a rally of about 50 supporters in the Oddfellows Hall on Glenwood, said she was pleased with the result "but I really thought I was going to win."

She said she could have done a better job of winning votes from people who "came to vote strictly on the millage" and among absentee voters. About 1,600 fewer people voted in the board race than on the tax proposal. Raisanen told her supporters she thought she would be "right back" on the ballot next year when two school board seats will be decided.

Posey, 36, is vice president and director of human resources for First Independence National Bank of Detroit. An Inkster resident, he has been active with the Hicks Elementary School PTA and the PTA Area Council and has served on several district committees.

Man gains new eating habits, TOPS state title

By Tom Henderson staff writer

David Zynda of Westland isn't nearly the man he used to be — and is proud of it.

Zynda has lost 89 pounds — from a peak of 254 — and was recently crowned for his efforts as the King of Michigan by TOPS, a weight-loss organization officially known as Take Off Pounds Sensibly, at its annual convention in Marquette.

Zynda took the weight off the hard way — by permanently changing his eating habits and lifestyle. No crash diets, no dramatic losses. The pounds came off like water slowly dripping from a faucet — slowly, steadily, bit by bit.

"If you take it off on a crash diet, you just put it back on," said Zynda, 40, a veteran of crash diets, diet pills, huge weight losses and equally huge weight gains.

A RESIDENT on the 31800 block of Tuscola told police her ex-husband assaulted her during an argument early Sunday.

The woman said she was thrown against a fish tank, punched in the face and stepped on by her husband. The assault was stopped when relatives called the police at 2:25 a.m., witnesses said.

Police said the woman had welts on her body and face, but didn't appear to be seriously injured.

A HOMEOWNER on the 33100 block of Melton reported that someone set fire to a shed on his property early Saturday.

The man said he arrived home from work about 8 a.m. when he noticed the fire, which he extinguished with a garden hose before firefighters arrived.

The fire did a minimum amount of damage, police said.

Police said bicycle tire tracks were found in the lawn near the garage. The tracks led to a nearby field.

A REDFORD Township youth told police an unidentified man exposed himself 12:30 p.m. Saturday at the Elmwood-Linville intersection.

The 15-year-old, who was visiting relatives in the area, said she was walking a dog when the man drove by in a dark blue or black car. The car turned around and the man drove up and asked for directions before exposing himself and driving off, the youth said.

She described him as a white man, 20-25 years old, with dark brown hair. He was wearing light blue running shorts.

Sputnik launched teacher on new career

By Marie Chestney
staff writer

Back in the 1950s, Sputnik did more than turn this nation's students on to careers in science and math.

The Russian satellite, which was the first satellite in space, also is the main reason John Ort gave up teaching industrial arts and became a high school counselor.

"Sputnik showed us we didn't have enough students studying math and science and we didn't have enough counselors steering them into those careers," said Ort, who is retiring Friday after 39 years in the Livonia school district which serves the northern section of Westland.

NEXT WEEK, the 61-year-old chairman of the counseling department at Franklin High will be a resident of Suttons Bay, a scenic port town on the east side of the Leelanau Peninsula where one of his former industrial arts students has helped him build a lakeside home.

Ort came to Livonia in 1951, fresh from the small Thumb town of Bad Axe and with a degree to teach industrial arts under his arm.

Until 1981, he taught industrial arts at the former Bentley High.

But then Sputnik took its famous ride into space and, with the district needing skilled counselors, Ort found himself taking a crash summer course in counseling at Wayne State University.

At first, Ort worked in both jobs in the district. Then, after earning a counseling degree from The University of Michigan in the mid-'60s, he turned to full-time counseling. Most of his career has been spent at Franklin, which serves the northeast section of Westland.

"With industrial arts, the rewards are immediate and tangible. With counseling, they are intangible and a long-time coming," said Ort, who still turns to industrial arts in his spare time to carve decoys for his favorite sport, duck hunting.

IN HIS 39-year-career in the district, Ort also became a powerhouse in teacher union politics.

He has served as president of the Livonia Education Association, the Michigan Education Association, and the MEA Board of Directors.

If the district's teachers think they are well-paid, then they have Ort to thank in large part. Ort said he got involved with the LEA because he was determined to improve the status of teachers.

He was spurred on by the memories of the hard times his own teachers faced in the 1930s and 1940s, teaching in the small rural town of Bad Axe.

He recalls one teacher who got married and lost her job. And another who lost her job after the school officials found out she was secretly married. And another who got fired after he refused to paint the school bus.

Today, with a maximum salary of $51,653 for a teacher holding a master's degree, Livonia district teachers are among the most highest paid in Michigan.

What will he miss the most in the years ahead?

"THE KIDS. They're the gods of this job. If you can't enjoy the idiosyncrasies they bring, you'll be an unhappy person in this job. You get frustrated with the paperwork but when you're involved with kids, that's the joy of it.

"Kids keep you young.
"But you have to be prepared for change, or you'll find yourself way out of touch with the kids."

Student learns 'secret' too late

By Marie Chestney
staff writer

Starting this fall, Livonia's high school students will find out what one parent called the Livonia school district's "best-kept secret."

But the school board's decision to divulge the "secret" in written form this fall in the student handbooks came too late to help high school senior Chad Emerson.

Because the district, which represents the northern section of Westland, changed the way it computes grade point averages this year, Emerson's GPA dropped from 3.5 to 3.4921.

Falling below 3.5 will disqualify him from wearing the colors of an honors graduate tonight during the school's commencement ceremony.

AFTER DISCOVERING how the .0079 drop in GPA affected their son's graduation, Emerson's parents, Joy and Darrel Emerson, went to bat for him late last month before the Livonia board of education.

"It is unfair when the student is graded in the same manner for six semesters and then the seventh semester the rules are changed," Joy Emerson told the trustees.

"It is not fair to change the rules this far into the game. Standards should remain the same during one's whole high school career."

Emerson also criticized the district for not notifying parents and students last fall that GPAs were now being figured differently.

"Anything that can affect your child's grades should be publicly announced. Had we known of the change, we could have alerted our son to the adverse possibilities due to the system. Then he could have made every effort possible to make sure they did not happen."

A NEW computer system now allows the district to record the pluses and minuses that are part of a student's grade.

In past years, if a student earned a B-minus or a B-plus, for example, it was recorded as a B for grade point average purposes.

Under the new system, it is recorded as given by the teacher, B-minus or B-plus.

"In theory, this sounds much better than the old system," Emerson said.

However, for reasons of fairness, she said, the new system should have been launched with ninth graders just starting their high school career, not with seniors ending their high school career.

Throughout his high school years, she said, her son could have earned B-pluses that were reduced to B's when his GPA was computed.

Chad Emerson had always been a honor student, earning a 3.5 or higher. His report cards generally carried 3 A's and 3 B's, good enough to ensure a 3.5 GPA and an honor student designation.

Last fall, when the new system recorded one of his B's as a B-minus, his GPA dropped below 3.5.

"Had he graduated last year, he would not be experiencing this situation," Emerson said.

She suggested the district look into the grades of every graduating senior who has a 3.49 GPA, to see how many other students might have been affected by the change.

THE LIVONIA school board has since told the Emersons that the new grading system was applied equally to all students.

"While we have the greatest empathy for your family's feelings in this situation, we do support the administrative decision that has been made," said president Diane Tancill.

"It is not feasible to phase in this system for only certain groups or grades of students, and while this seems to be unfair in your perceptions, the grading system has been applied equally to all students."

However, Tancill said, the board has told high school administrators to alert parents and students to the change. This notification, she said, will appear in the high school student handbooks given in the fall to all students.

"Twenty years from now our son will not be affected by the fact that even though he did honors work, he did not get to go through commencement with an honors cord," Emerson said.

Grand graduates

Local WCC trustee favors college tax

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Wayne County Community College will ask voters this summer for the first voter-approved tax in its history. The 1-mill tax would generate about $15 million. The community college serves the Wayne-Westland school district.

WCCC is the only community college in the state without a voter-approved tax. It receives one-quarter mill from money collected by school districts in the area served by WCCC.

If the tax is approved, the college's revenue would remain about the same. It now gets $3.9 million from locally collected money and $10.4 million in state aid. The state aid will be phased out over five years, beginning in July 1991.

THE LOCAL school districts, including Wayne-Westland, merely collect the one-quarter mill and pass it along to the state. If and when the quarter-mill tax ends, that money will no longer be collected.

One mill represents $1 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation. A house worth $50,000 is valued by the state at $25,000, so property taxes would increase $25 per year.

WCCC's board of trustees approved the tax request May 23. The vote will be on the Aug. 7 primary ballot.

"I think one of the elements of a community college is that it is supported by the community," said trustee Ted Scott of Westland.

"The appropriate thing to do is go to the people and explain the situation, that we are taking cost-cutting efforts and managing the college effectively. We're not looking for more dollars but for replacement dollars."

WCCC SERVES 12,000 students at its five campuses in the county.

A survey last fall showed the school has widespread support in the county and that a tax would be approved, Scott said.

Scott said that the school, which was plagued by bad management, infighting and a rapid turnover of presidents and administrations, is back on an even keel.

"We believe we have corrected the problems of the early '80s, and we have stabilized the student population."

The schools' current budget is $38 million.

The state Legislature created the community college district in 1967 and in 1969, the school opened its doors to 9,000 students. Until then, Wayne County was the largest major urban area in the country not served by a community college.

Harriet Gagnon gets congratulatory hugs from two high school seniors awarded scholarships recently from a fund created in the memory of her late husband, Virgil. The Gagnons organized the local chamber of commerce nearly 30 years ago and Mrs. Gagnon was a former chamber executive secretary. The winners of the $250 scholarships are Duane Briski (left), a Wayne Memorial senior who also attended the Ford Vocational/Technical Center, and Todd Farmer, a John Glenn High senior who plans to major in business management at Michigan State University. The scholarships were announced at a Westland chamber luncheon/program. Mr. Gagnon, also a former Westland city councilman and city clerk, died a year ago while preparing to return from Florida to Westland.

Woman's scholarships are a family tribute

By Janice Brunson, staff writer

In a sense, money provided by Verna Wright for deserving students at Schoolcraft College symbolizes a dead husband and two deceased sons.

Husband Otis, a former linotype operator for the Detroit News, died in 1971, followed by son Robert, also a linotype operator who died of cancer. Son John, a professor of mechanical engineering at Wayne State University, died of the same disease three years ago.

It was after John's death that Verna decided to make her first contribution, an amount she prefers not to publicize. She has since donated twice more, earmarking the money for three separate student scholarships.

Now, once each year, students in the school's Writing Concepts Center where Wright has served as a volunteer for 17 years, the Women's Resource Center and the library receive financial assistance, a Verna Wright Endowment Scholarship.

"I've lost two sons and a husband. I decided I'd like to help students," she said in a strong, clear voice that decidedly belies her 92 years of age.

Verna's generosity, a personal memorial in behalf of her menfolk, is aimed at "doing other people good," a concept shared by others who value education and believe in helping make it possible for all.

SOME $250,000 in scholarship money has been awarded by Schoolcraft College, including $40,000 in memorial and other contributions to the college's Foundation Fund.

The Julie Titmuss Scholarship was established in memory of a student services secretary who died of cancer, the Jane Moehle Scholarship in honor of a former trustee who chaired the board from 1969 to 1971. When board veteran Rosina Raymond died a year ago, husband Jerry funded a memorial scholarship for students interested in writing.

Jerry Young, a retired Chrysler employee from Garden City who had no family, funded his own memorial, Attention! Students interested in manufacturing technology are eligible to apply for a two-year scholarship offered by the National Manufacturing Tool Builders of America.

The scholarship includes costs of tuition, books and related academic fees of up to $2,000 for each of two years of college.

Applicants must be high school graduates who meet Schoolcraft

College admission requirements, demonstrate an interest in manufacturing and meet normal employment standards of Krueger Machine Tool.

The scholarship includes two summers of employment at Krueger in a work-training position.

If interested, call Schoolcraft Financial Aid, 462-4433.

the first club member to die, the Livonia Roamin Organization, a rock and mineral club, funds an annual scholarship for a student majoring in geology. Related sciences are also considered.

SCHOOLCRAFT COLLEGE "places great emphasis on (scholarship) assistance," according to Sandra Florek, the college's director of institutional advancement.

"People in our college district are generally middle-class. With increasing school costs, many need financial assistance. We try to help," Florek said.

Since 1981, such assistance has increased significantly, based upon foundation figures.

In 1981, foundation income from fund-raising events and donations totaled $1,700, with $400 awarded in scholarships. This year, foundation income totaled $170,000, with $40,000 awarded.

Mary Quinn, a Plymouth cocktail waitress who has aspired to teaching since graduating from high school in Redford a decade ago, is such a recipient. Preparing for her second year of college, Quinn received $800 from The Friends of the College Scholarship, funded by an anonymous donor.

An "A" student, Quinn was selected on the basis of academic achievement and need.

"Schoolcraft is a community college and not real expensive. Still, costs add up. This is really a great help," Quinn said.

Walt Coleman agrees. A mechanic since graduating from Plymouth-Canton High School in 1978, Coleman is now attending school full time, majoring in electrical engineering and maintaining a straight "A" average.

He is the recent recipient of a $1,000 Schoolcraft College Foundation scholarship.

"I put aside money but I've run into a few glitches. This will help a great deal, financial assistance to leave one career and go into a totally new one."

Rouge project passes first test

A $3 million Rouge River cleanup was among the projects included in last week's U.S. House appropriations bill for energy and water development.

The bill would finance a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers cleanup, said its sponsor, U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth.

The corps would supervise logjam removal along the Rouge, allowing the river to flow more freely.

"It was the Corps' conclusion that the large number of blockages along the Rouge contribute to constricted water flow and the resultant stagnant water pools along the river," Pursell said.

The bill is due for a vote before the House Appropriations Committee.

If approved, the Army Corps project would be incorporated into the heavily-polluted river's remedial action plan.

In other Rouge news:

Some 2,700 volunteers participated in Rouge Rescue '90 held June 2 at sites throughout Wayne and Oakland counties. Friends of the Rouge, the agency sponsoring the event, said the number of volunteers matched last year's figure.

Workers collected roughly 4,000 cubic yards of debris and broke up an estimated 100 logjams.

Final figures on the number of items pulled from the Rouge are pending.

Inheritance tax cut facing veto

Chances increased Friday that Gov. James Blanchard will veto inheritance tax relief that cleared the way for a key tax agreement just the day before, according to key aides.

Such a move would probably make the issue a major arguing point in the gubernatorial race between Blanchard and Senate Majority Leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleasant.

Although Senate Republicans who pushed for inheritance tax relief remained confident Blanchard will sign the bill, state Treasurer Robert Bowman said the chances were "slim and none."

"I think it's the right thing to do," Bowman said. "I think he shares my concern that this is the worst form of tax relief."

But Bowman cautioned that he didn't know for sure what Blanchard would do. And Engler expressed faith that Blanchard will sign the bill.

"I think he will sign the legislation," Engler said. "I think that is the right thing for Michigan."

THE BILL won legislative approval on Thursday as part of a compromise package which also reinstated Detroit's 5 percent utility tax.

Area legislators voting in favor of the bill included Reps. John Bennett, D-Redford, William Keith, D-Garden City, Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia and Gerald Law, R-Plymouth. Those voting against the bill included Reps. Justine Barns, D-Westland and James Kosteva, D-Canton.

The inheritance tax bill would cut the tax in half over three years, costing the state about $40 million a year when fully implemented.

Bowman immediately attacked the bill, a view he repeated on Friday. He argues tax relief should help property owners, not people who inherit money.

"Senate Republicans have made a colossal blunder," he said. "It's bad government and it's bad politics."

An aide who did not want to be identified said the bill faces "an almost certain veto."

Ironically, Senate Republicans could have virtually ensured Blanchard's signature by formally tying the inheritance tax bill to the measure reinstating Detroit's utility tax.

"We didn't feel there was a need to," Engler said. "I think the governor should sign the inheritance tax legislation. One could reasonably expect they would operate with a degree of integrity."

"If he vetoes it, he vetoes it," said Sen. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron. "We don't think he will. It really helps small business."

"We thought it would stand on its own," DeGrow said. "We know it's (a veto) possibility. We'll take our case to the people (if the bill is vetoed)."

Engler played down the possible political benefit of a veto he could attack during his campaign to unseat Blanchard.

"It's further evidence of the difference between John Engler and Jim Blanchard," he said. "John Engler likes to cut taxes and Jim Blanchard doesn't."

Madonna sets sight on bigger auction

Though Madonna College's 1990 "Around the World" scholarship dinner auction was just completed, plans are already under way for next year's auction.

Don Massey of Don Massey Cadillac, Plymouth, has donated a 1990 Cadillac Sedan DeVille to the 1991 auction. A similar donation by Massey for this year's auction helped the college raise $78,000 for scholarships.

This year's auction raised over $200,000 for Madonna's scholarship fund. Twenty-four Madonna students are receiving merit scholarships this school year.

Next year's goal is to raise $150,000 through a drawing for the car alone, as well as to boost auction proceeds to help finance 48 students.

The auction will be held Saturday, April 20, at Laurel Manor Banquet and Conference Center, Livonia.

Madonna is a four-year liberal arts college at 36800 Schoolcraft, Livonia.

Pro-lifer questions 'death-on-demand'

Barbara Listing, president of Right to Life of Michigan, expressed both sadness and deep concern when learning of the suicide death of an Oregon woman, facilitated by Royal Oak physician Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

"I feel very deeply for the family of this woman. It is unfortunate that a positive and effective support system, like hospice, was not utilized for the benefit of both the patient and the family," Listing said.

Listing also expressed grave concern about the dispute surrounding the legality of Dr. Kevorkian's actions.

"Traditionally our common law in Michigan has recognized assisted suicide as a form of homicide. It is shocking that there is even a dispute over whether Dr. Kevorkian's actions would be considered inappropriate," said Listing.

She also stated that Right to Life of Michigan would support any legislation needed to clarify the law regarding assisted suicide.

"We certainly would not want Michigan to be known as the place to go for death-on-demand. Perhaps the most dangerous aspect of this case is the potential damage it could have on the medical profession. If physician-assisted suicide were to be deemed appropriate, the ancient tradition of physician as healer would be in jeopardy," concluded Listing.

Bird lovers flocking to area vet

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Bird brains aren't so dumb, after all. "A bird's brain is tiny, but their intelligence is not equivalent to the size of the brain," said Kenneth Harr, inside his Canton Center Animal Hospital office on Canton Center Road north of Ford. "They're extremely intelligent."

HARR RATTLES off a list of witty feathered patients to prove his point.

One bird, for instance, likes to play jokes on his owner and her dog. He rings the doorbell and when they answer to find no one there he breaks out in a hearty laugh.

"And when I walk into the room, it looks at me and says 'Uh, oh,' because it knows it's in trouble."

"That's special," said Harr, a 1987 Michigan State University graduate.

And then there's Bolo, a cockatoo patient.

"He walked up to me, like a drunk sailor, the way that they do, and said: 'I love you.'"

For the believe it or not chapters, a parakeet, named Timmy, learned to say two entire nursery rhymes spiced with voice intonations emphasizing all the right words.

"I got a headache from laughing so hard," Harr said. "He was so proud. He had his chest way out as if to say: 'That's pretty good, isn't it?'"

Harr tells a story about an African Gray parrot who hunkered down on

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Kim Palmer, veterinarian technician, holds the threatening claws of an owl under anesthetic. Veterinarian Kenneth Harr pulls back its eyelids to show off its majestic yellow and brown eyes.

the end of the table, lunged at him, grabbed his finger and said: "Gotcha."

That parrot liked to lower its head and say: "Tickle, tickle, tickle," inviting Harr to scratch him in its favorite place behind his neck.

"When it died I felt really bad," Harr said. "It's very painful to put such a bird to sleep. When pets talk back, I get a feeling that I know what an MD (medical doctor) feels when they lose a patient."

BIRD OWNERS travel as far away as northern Michigan and Toledo to have their pets treated by Harr.

His oldest patient was an 82-year-old yellow naped Amazon parrot, who had been passed down for three generations.

Last week, an owl, unconscious from an anesthetic, lay twitching occasionally, on the operating table in the back of the animal hospital.

Humane Society employees last week brought Harr the great horned owl, which had a fractured wing. The majestic brown and white, 31-pound bird, has a 5-foot wing span and threatening one inch curled claws.

The survival rate after surgery is not high, he said.

"But if we can save a few that's great," said Harr who specializes in treating birds and reptiles.

"I take care of any injured wild bird they (Humane Society) find," he said, adding that the service is free.

"We want people to know we take care of all animals — not just the ones people own," Harr said.

In fact, the next time you drive down M-14 to Beck and spot a pair of hawks in the trees you can thank Harr for the scenery. He treated one of the hawks earlier this year after it became entangled in a fishing line.

He shares his practice with Dave Tinker, Mark Drake and Kevin Roose. Together they treat all types of animals from the wild and exotic to the everyday cat and dog.

"Anything you see out there you see in here," he said.

MANY OF the birds he treats are domestic. In fact, nationwide there are 40 to 50 million pet birds. That compares to 40 million house cats and an estimated 50 million pet dogs in the U.S.

A big difference, however, is that most bird owners have more than one bird, said Harr, adding that the animals are great pets.

"They flock instinctively and you become their flock," he said. "A bird would be happy to spend eight hours a day with you."

Nutrition is a common health problem among birds, he said. They're often fed too much seed, which is high in fat and cause liver failure.

"The problem is that most people don't know someone out there who can help with birds," Harr said.

"Most birds die ignorantly. They can live much longer than three or four years."

Doctor pressured area churches

By Ryan Tutek
staff writer

Dr. Jack Kevorkian, whose so-called suicide machine helped an Oregon woman take her own life last week, had twice sought help from area churches to carry out assisted suicides.

One minister said she turned him away because he turned her off. Others said he demanded help more quickly than they could offer it.

"He was using strong-arm tactics to pressure us into a decision on it," said Suzanne Paul, minister of the Universalist Unitarian Church of Farmington. "We think people should have the right to die with dignity. But this is not something you can make a snap decision about."

Kevorkian called the church in March seeking space to help a California cancer patient kill herself, Paul said. But she said the church needed more information and approval from its board of trustees and congregation members.

Kevorkian, unapologetic, said his style is simply fidelity to his calling — to right to legalize "planned death," as Margaret Sanger fought to legalize "planned birth" nearly 80 years ago.

"I'M A STRIDENT man," he said. "But I know I'm right so it doesn't matter. I'm not getting anywhere by being docile. Do you think I would get anywhere trying to passively persuade people?"

"We're not playing on a political field anymore. It's a battlefield. If you're meek on a battlefield, you're going to die."

He asked the Birmingham Unitarian Church for space for the California woman and two weeks ago for Janet Adkins from Portland, Ore., but was refused for similar reasons.

"I would need a more complete legal opinion about it," Minister David Gallagher said, adding that his board also would have to approve it. "He was on too tight of a schedule to wait for it."

"But from a moral point of view, depending on the circumstances, medically assisted suicide for the terminally ill would be the kind of thing I would want Unitarian Universalists to support."

Two years ago Kevorkian spoke at the Birmingham church during a pot-luck to advocate operating on death-row prisoners and elderly people who consented to research organ functions near death, according to event chairman Carl Speck, a Birmingham resident.

"He was an interesting and animated speaker," Speck said. "But he was extremely defensive. When someone would ask a question, he would take it as an attack on him rather than as a request for information."

KEVORKIAN ALSO contacted the Emerson Unitarian-Universalist Church in Troy in March but was refused space because Minister Nancy Doughty said the church needed more information and board approval.

Kevorkian said he needed electricity to operate his device and consent of the land-owner of the place where he would set it up, even his own residence.

"I rent an apartment and the lease doesn't allow such activity," he said.

He said a public park with an electrical outlet was the only possible option.

More than 20 Oakland County residents have called the Michigan chapter of the Hemlock Society this month either to join, congratulate Kevorkian or seek his service, society president Janet Good said. But none would publicly support Kevorkian.

"They're fearful of losing their chance to end their life in a dignified way," Good said, adding that 10 are in "extreme agony."

The society advocates legalizing medically assisted suicides for the terminally ill.

However, Johanna Jakstys, 70, a Northville resident, said she had cancer and would seek Kevorkian's help if she could find him.

"He's an angel of mercy," she said. "I would do it in a minute. I tried suicide once and botched it up. It was terrible."

"Every day is almost torture. I'm thinking (the cancer) is back again. I live in constant hell because I don't know when the end will be."

Bill would help landlords evict drug-dealers

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Landlords would be able to start evicting drug-using and drug-dealing tenants three weeks faster under a bill before the state House of Representatives.

"Presently, a landlord must give a 30-day notice before eviction procedures commence," said Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia.

"I am intending to shorten the time process for evictions when drugs are involved" to seven days, said Bankes, sponsor of House Bills 5318 and 5812.

After three hours of debate, her bills were reported out by the House Urban Affairs Committee with votes from herself and James Kosteva, D-Canton.

THE BILLS were strongly supported by state drug czar Donald Reisig, Livonia housing chief James Inglis, and operators of private and public housing from around the state.

The stumbling block was whether tenants would be evicted from apartments for drugs before they were convicted in court.

"My concern is for the person wrongly accused," said Rep. Michael Bennane, D-Detroit.

"Then we would be subject to civil damages," replied Inglis.

Dave Cahill, a staff member of the House Judiciary Committee, offered a rewritten version of Bankes' bills to raise the burden of proof for drug evictions. Cahill cited an Ann Arbor "fiasco" where massed federal agents ralded a building and gave tenants 15 minutes to be on the curb.

"A lot of misinformation," Bankes said, because the woman quoted in news accounts actually was found in possession of drugs for the eighth time.

INGLIS, WHO manages 779 units of government-assisted housing in Livonia, said it now takes 60 days after an arrest to actually get rid of a drug-using tenant — 30 days notice and the rest in court time.

"This would reduce the time by 21 days," he said. "The longer they're there, the more we are viewed by other tenants as an ineffective agency."

"We are asking to get into court quicker. It (eviction) is up to the judge."

Other public housing managers from around the state gave similar reports.

"We have tenants meetings. The tenants complain. I have to tell them I can't get anything done," said Carlo Sanchez, Grand Rapids public housing chief.

Sanchez said landlords don't want to hurt innocent family members of drug dealers. "We work with the Department of Social Services. We don't just put 'em on the curb. We make arrangements."

REISIG, AN Ingham County prosecutor and circuit judge before taking the state drug post, said Bankes' bill would benefit innocent tenants.

"I come down on the side of the elderly and poor who say, 'Why can't we have peace?'" Reisig said.

To those like Bennane who feared eviction before conviction, Reisig replied, "We can trust the judicial process to determine if someone is using drugs. There will be an occasional eviction before conviction. That will be rare. The landlord will have the burden of proof that the tenant in 332 of the Jonesville project was using drugs."

Reisig added that the problem isn't just in inner cities. "Eighty percent of drug abuse is by white folks," he said. A private landlord with projects in three western Michigan cities said he went to court nine times in drug cases.

"I'm not going to waste my investors' money by going to court on a whim. I'll have my proofs, my evidence, my other renters (as witnesses)," he said.

Medina Sanders, Ypsilanti housing director, favored the shortened notice because: "If we give them 30 days, that's time for them to tear up the unit . . . and intimidate other witnesses."

IN OTHER housing matters, the House Urban Affairs Committee reported out a bill to allow cities to recover demolition costs from slum landlords.

House Bill 5284 will allow cities which tear down dilapidated houses to obtain liens against property elsewhere in Michigan owned by the same landlord. Bankes and Kosteva voted yes.

'I am intending to shorten the time process for evictions when drugs are involved.'

Bryant Fund proves child's death not in vain

By Janice Brunson
staff writer

Rosalyn Bryant, a small wisp of a child described as "a real sweetie pie," was 4 years old when she was savagely tortured and beaten to death by her father and his girlfriend in May 1983.

The gruesome event sparked a pair of suburbanites into action that has, in turn, directly aided countless youngsters who are tragically abused or neglected.

The Rosalyn Bryant Memorial Fund for Direct Aid to Abused Children was founded a month after her death, started with $500 from Mike and Kay Eisbrenner who had exactly that amount left after refinancing their Livonia home of 17 years and paying bills.

"Rosalyn was the straw that broke the camel's back. It was so grotesque. It turned our stomachs," said Kay Eisbrenner. "We wanted to donate directly to the kids, but there was nothing around."

With the help of others, like Margaret Anzinger from the Michigan Department of Social Services-Wayne County, a system was created that allowed for direct help.

Rosalyn's memorial fund has provided succor for countless young victims in need. In the years since its inception, some $140,000 has been raised through personal donations and fund-raising events, money given directly to children under 18 years of age whose names have been supplied by public and private protective service agencies.

A set of Westland sisters, 8 and 10, are perhaps typical. Physically harmed by their father who, in a fit of rage, beat their heads against a wall, they were emotionally harmed when he carried the attack one step further and beheaded their beloved Cabbage Patch dolls.

"We replaced the dolls," Eisbrenner said in soft tones. "We'll help anyone that comes along."

Each child who is recommended receives a Love Pack, a small bag filled with a musical bear, a rubber ball and a coloring book and crayons. A comb, toothbrush and toothpaste are also included.

Most often, the money is used for essentials: desperately needed clothing for a foster child, food for children of needy abusive parents who are in therapy or medical care for youngsters not covered by Medicaid.

A 12-year-old suffering from gonorrhea after being raped was provided money enough for medical care after being removed from her home and prior to qualifying for medical assistance in her new foster home.

Each year, some 600 victims are helped.

SINCE 1983, Mary Neve of Garden City has hosted an annual bowling fund-raiser for the Rosalyn Bryant Fund. This year, some 100 bowlers paid $10 each to rack up spares and strikes for the little girl most never knew. Their efforts generated $3,343.

Neve also conducts a raffle, selling chances on such donated items as dinner for two at Jamies on 7 in Livonia or Farewell & Friends in Westland. Garden Lanes donated bowling facilities this year.

"There are countless little kids out there who need help," said Neve, who is an old friend of the Eisbrenners. "I work hard (on the fund-raiser), but people are generous. They really are."

Jack and Erma Childers have bowled for the fund for five years running and "would like to see more of this type of thing. I didn't do too good bowling-wise," Jack Childers' said of this year's bowling score. "But it's for a very good cause. I'll bowl from here on in."

For more information, call 525-0356. Send donations to Rosalyn Bryant Memorial, First Federal of Michigan, 19410 Middlebelt, Livonia 48512.

MYTHS ABOUT CHRISTIANITY
THE MYTH OF THE MONTH

Jesus Christ was only a great moral teacher

What are we to make of this man? The joys and hardships of two thousand years of western history have been pinned on him. Controversy has constantly surrounded his claims. Religious life in the West has been dominated by allusions to his teachings. No self-aware, intelligent person dare avoid this intriguing individual and his impact on society.

No one doubts any more that Jesus actually existed. Most people also believe that he was a great moral teacher. Religious and political leaders throughout the world, including many of the great opponents of Christianity, hail the moral superiority of his life. Mahandas Gandhi aspired to the ideals of the Sermon on the Mount. The philosopher John Stuart Mill thought Jesus a genius and probably the greatest moral reformer who ever existed. Even Napoleon Bonaparte considered him a superior leader of men.

The New Testament documents record the radical servant-like attitude which lent power and credibility to Jesus' teachings. He has truly led humanity in the expression of compassion and humility, as well as in anger against evil and hypocrisy. Jesus combined a realistic understanding of human nature with an idealism for what human beings could become. His words have tested and challenged the minds and hearts of millions for centuries.

Of course, this is not the whole story. When we begin to consider Jesus' claims about his identity, the controversy begins. This is where people (including the world's religious leaders) have problems. This is where the label "moral teacher" is put to the test. It begins to seem inadequate, if not naive.

A thirty year old peasant carpenter turned itinerant teacher, Jesus laid claim both by word and action to be more than a mere man. He operated on the assumption that he was God himself.

How do we know this? From his explicit statements and the very way he lived. His self-disclosures are interwoven in the very fabric of the New Testament. He claimed equality with God. He said he had lived before Abraham. He assumed the right to forgive sins. He accepted worship. There seems to be no escaping it.

Jesus of Nazareth could not be simply a harmless moral teacher. He cuts too deep and steps out too far from the crowd of moral teachers and philosophers. We can call him a liar. We might even discuss his mental imbalance. But the tag of "only a great moral teacher" doesn't stick.

It was never an option in his own day. Some of his contemporaries thought him mad, others loved him. He was regarded with disdain and sometimes even hatred, or alternately with amazement and adoration. But he never received mild approval.

Neither is it an option for today. We have to shut him up or hear him out. What are we to make of this man? What of his moral integrity? His fulfillment of centuries of aspirations? His prediction of death and resurrection? What are we to make of his claims to be the one and only God-man of history? What are we to do with this great moral teacher who makes such impossible claims?

'Polluter pay' bill is rejected

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Local senators voted with their parties as the Michigan Senate rejected a "polluter pay" bill as rewritten by Republican moderates.

"I'm not sure what to do next," said a stunned Sen. Vern Ehlers, R-Grand Rapids, after Tuesday's debate ended in 22-16 defeat.

"The goal was to embarrass me," said Senate majority leader John Engler, the probable Republican gubernatorial nominee. Engler had praised Ehlers for having "the patience of Job, working with a sponsor (Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor) who used it for partisan political advantage."

Goal of both versions was to allow the DNR to get faster clean-ups of 2,600 known toxic waste sites by charging identifiable polluters rather than using state money.

THE VOTE Tuesday was 16 in favor and 22 against Senate Bill 375.

Voting yes were 14 Republicans and two conservative Democrats.

Opposed were 16 Democrats and six Republicans, including four GOP conservatives who thought the bill would "push industry out of the state" and one who favored the tougher Pollack version. Among the no votes were William Faust of Westland, Jack Faxon of Farmington Hills and George Hart of Dearborn.

None of the local senators spoke. Pollack denounced the defeated version as "an abomination" and "a polluters payoff bill," asking that her name be removed as sponsor after the bill was amended.

Senate minority leader Art Miller, D-Warren, said "it's not worth the paper it's wrote (sic) on."

"EMPTY RHETORIC," replied Ehlers, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee and sponsor of most of the amendments to the original Pollack bill.

Ehlers said the final version gave Pollack, environmental lobbyists and DNR director David Hales "90 to 95 percent" of what they wanted.

Only a few points of difference actually were argued in the day-long debate. Among them:

• The DNR's role. Ehlers' version set up an Environmental Mediation Panel of three scientists with master's degrees, plus five non-voting public members, to resolve disputes.

"The question is whether someone with a bachelor's degree in sociology from the DNR should tell someone with a master's degree in science what to do. I wanted technical expertise," said Ehlers, adding that his panel would work faster than the court appeals certain to arise under Pollack's version.

POLLACK'S REPLY: "The mediation scheme totally cuts out the public. Environmental groups don't want it."

She added: "At least DNR is a public agency. At least the public can bring pressure on the agency. You can't bring pressure on them (three scientists). You can't fire them."

• Lenders' roles. Ehlers' amendment excluded banks, savings and loans and other lenders who don't participate in polluting but acquire properties through foreclosure. He said it would be "grossly unfair to hold them liable" and part of the "deep pockets syndrome" of going after the innocent but wealthy.

Pollack said that if the polluter went bankrupt, the cost of clean-up would be "put on the backs of taxpayers." She said the test of any amendment should be whether it puts any burden on taxpayers.

• Limited liability. Under Ehlers' version, once the state allocated percentages of liability to multiple polluters, the allocations would be frozen, even if one party were uncollectable.

"It caps the liability of those who contaminate," objected Sen. John Cherry, D-Clio, Pollack's partner in the debate. "It decides allocation and says that's the cap."

Bill would help adoptees gain records

Adoptees would have an easier time getting medical and genetic information from their biological parents under a bill before the Michigan Senate.

"It encourages openness and honesty in adoption," said John Gagern of Southfield, representing the Adoption Identity Movement.

Gagern spoke in favor of House Bill 4407, sponsored by Rep. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield.

Passed 94-3 in the House, the Honigman bill last week was reported out of the Senate Judiciary Committee on a 4-0 vote. Among supporters was Chairman Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford. Member Richard Fessler, R-Commerce, was absent.

A Grand Rapids birth mother who gave up her son for adoption said her grandson died at 4 because "my son was not able to get medical information from the adoption agency."

She said the son and his wife had given up planning more children because of the lack of knowledge of his genetic history.

Honigman's bill would amend the Adoption Code to facilitate exchange of information on medical and genetic conditions between biological parents and the adoptee or the adoptive parents.

"We're behind in what we do under current law," he said.

Election Millage defeat is no surprise

NOT SURPRISINGLY, Wayne-Westland school district voters refused to shell out more money.

For the second time in four months, the community spoke with a loud voice that it doesn't want to spend any more money on schools.

The voters rejected a combined 7.75 mill increase and renewal Monday by nearly a 3-2 margin.

While that was much closer than the 4-1 margin of defeat in February, there was one statistic which stands out from Monday's tally.

The statistic is that about 1,600 more people voted on the tax proposal than cast ballots for one of the three board of education candidates.

That shows clearly that people had money on their minds.

Comments in public and private in the past two months clearly showed that while many voters wanted to support the renewal of 2.75 mills ($2.75 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation), they were mad that the renewal was lumped together with a 5 mill tax rate increase.

They felt that school officials were trying to "blackmail" them into supporting the millage hike.

Voters were also given the distinct impression last November when the tax increase was first discussed publicly that the millage was tied directly to the level of teachers' union raises in upcoming contract negotiations.

IN THE past two months, the board of education and administration announced major cuts in the teaching and administration levels, substantially reducing or eliminating extracurricular activities and programs.

When the announced cutbacks were approved this spring, many hostile voters felt that the cuts were merely "threats" to encourage residents to support the millage proposal on the Monday ballot.

The school board took a calculated risk in combining the tax renewal and increase — and lost.

The Observer recommended after the Feb. 8 tax defeat that the board come back with a request to renew the expiring tax levy and forget about any increase.

Now that the smoke has cleared, we now wonder if a tax renewal-only proposal would have a good chance of being approved.

There is a perception among voters that the state legislature may come to the rescue of infirm school districts and eliminate the need to vote for a millage rate increase. School officials say that is unlikely.

The bottom line is that voters are frustrated about rising property taxes and the lack of action in Lansing on school finance reform. By forcing the issue, voters are demanding something be done about soaring property taxes.

LOCAL VOTERS also showed a political split personality Monday in supporting Leonard Posey for a four-year term on the board of education although he supported the tax hike-renewal proposal.

Appointed to fill a vacancy last December, Posey narrowly finished ahead of Laurel Rasanen, who actively opposed the tax issue.

Both had mounted a visible campaign with Posey clearly having the advantage of the incumbency and receiving support from the former Cherry Hill school district which was annexed to the Wayne-Westland district four years ago.

In the next few months, Posey and the other board of education members will have to make it clear to employees' unions that there is less money available for pay raises — if there are any — in the new school year.

College grads There's more to life than money

MEMO TO OUR area's recent college graduates:

Congratulations. You've worked hard, at least some of the time, and now stand ready to reap the fruits of your labor. After all, you're the ones who, according to surveys, list acquisition of material wealth right at the top of your post-collegiate goals.

Welcome to the real world — where those fruits may have to ripen on the vine a good long time before harvesting.

For years, all you've had to worry about was your grade point average. Now, we're going to tell you about the number that really matters — the bottom line.

LET'S TALK wheels. We know you've had your eye on a shiny, new Porsche. Admit it. But you can't get a Porsche, even used, for much less than $45,000. Now, doesn't that fully loaded compact car look like a steal at less than $10,000?

Everybody can't own a Porsche, that's true. But everyone can look like they do, right?

Consider this. List price for one of those short-sleeve cotton shirts, with the famous polo player monogram is about $50-65. List price for a short-sleeve cotton shirt, without polo player monogram — about $15-$25.

Wait a minute, you say. You'll have plenty of money for both the car and the fancy shirt with the kind of take home pay you'll be getting.

Well, your starting salary, if you're lucky, might reach as high as $25,000. That's the rough average of all workers in Michigan.

Just for comparison, Lee Iacocca's recent annual salary was $3.7 million according to one survey — and he only ranked 12th among big time CEOs.

Maybe you'll be among the lucky ones who learn that there's more to life than rapid, and rampant, acquisition of material goods.

Worried about your rapid entry to the board room? Maybe you should first worry about current and future debts.

Your college education cost somewhere around $19,000, based on four years at a public university, including room and board.

YOUR KID'S college education will likely cost three to four times that, so start saving.

We haven't even mentioned housing. The price for a cozy three-bedroom home in one of our area's growing suburbs: at least $100,000, give or take a thousand or two.

Dear old mom and dad would have probably paid at least half that for the same house 25 years ago.

What about your future, you say? You'll probably have more than one. Your life expectancy is about 72 for men, 78 for women. The good news, that means you have at least a half-century left. The bad news, you'll probably have to work for at least 40 of those years — and probably more.

We don't want to rain on anyone's parade. But life is for learning.

Who knows, maybe you'll be among the lucky ones who learn that there's more to life than rapid, and rampant, acquisition of material goods. And that acquisition often involves sacrifice.

Welcome to the real world.

Rouge cleanup Army, volunteers are good combo

USING THE Army Corps of Engineers to clean the Rouge River is a good idea.

But it shouldn't mean the end for the annual Rouge Rescue.

This month more than 2,000 area residents returned to the Rouge for the annual volunteer cleanup.

U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, would like to expand the cleanup into a year-round event. He's proposed legislation to that effect.

THAT'S A GOOD idea, especially in light of Michigan's traditionally low rate of return on the tax dollars it sends the federal government. The corps' new commitment to environment-preserving projects is also a welcome sign.

But the strength of Rouge cleanup efforts is that they take place at the grassroots level.

And it's important to keep the grassroots spirit alive.

Our hope is that the Army Corps will help hasten the day when area residents can once again use the Rouge.

Our fear is that, once people do, they'll begin to forget just how hard it was to clean the river — and how easy it was to pollute.

Friends of the Rouge and the Army Corps say that won't happen, that there will still be a place for volunteer efforts even after the government cleanup.

Here's hoping that's true.

JUST SAY NO.
Just resign.
It's not that simple... or is it?

She didn't say no to an after-prom drinking party at her home. So the president of the Bloomfield Hills Board of Education compromised the alcohol-free stance she helped that district formulate.

She didn't immediately resign her position as president of the board, staying on to preside at graduation. So she compromised another message, that we must pay the consequences of our actions.

Barbara Dolliver, reacting to the controversy surrounding her son's prom party, was pressured to resign as president of the school board, but delayed her resignation until after last weekend's graduation ceremonies where she gave a commencement speech and handed out diplomas.

THERE IS MORE than one version of what led up to and went on at the after-prom party at the Dollivers' house — a scene that has upset and divided the Bloomfield Hills community.

Dolliver said a keg of beer and bottles of champagne were brought to the party without her knowledge by friends of her son, T.J., a 17-year-old Lahser High School senior who gave the party.

"When I realized alcohol (had been brought in) I'll be honest with you. I didn't know what to do. I am a parent first and a school board president second."

Others say Dolliver knew there would be liquor, but chose that as a better solution than to have her son and his friends party at a hotel.

The Bloomfield Hills schools supported a Birmingham/Bloomfield Families in Action effort this year to discourage prom parties. But Dolliver, a member of the Families in Action group, said it was common knowledge that the hotel parties were happening anyway.

"No matter how we preach, some of our children may feel it is their time to party. I uphold the law," she said.

NO, I'M SURE you wanted to Barbara, but you didn't. You aren't alone in that situation, but if with rank comes privilege, it also comes with added responsibility.

Some parents allowed their children to go to the party at your home because of who you are and your public stance against young people drinking. You are not only the school board president, but a member of Families in Action. You helped launch the district's alcohol and drug counseling program and organize alcohol-free graduation parties. These parents were deceived.

Judith Doner Berne

STILL, GRADUATING seniors aren't babies and they also must receive consequences for their conduct.

Dolliver's son and his friends are certainly to blame. They shouldn't get away with a slap on the wrist, or even worse an apology from Bloomfield Hills city commissioner Don Carlson for putting them on the spot.

Why didn't they care that by bringing alcohol into the Dolliver home, they not only broke the law but flouted what she said she stood for?

We have a long way to go in learning the place of alcohol in our lives. Its glorification as the way to party doesn't give any notice to the families and lives it destroys.

What happened in Bloomfield Hills can serve as a lesson to us all. As parents we must just say no.

No need for Stadium edit another center 'nearsighted'

To the editor:
"Plans for shopping center unveiled." Just what Westland needs! Rather than razing Central City Parkway to build another shopping center/movie complex that will probably have the typical 25-50 percent vacancy rate, the Parkway could be just that — a beautiful park. It could have been left natural with gardens planted to make it a showcase of our city.

At any given time, there are numerous vacant commercial buildings for sale or lease. Surely, Fretter could find something among them to fit their specifications (if indeed we truly need another appliance store in our midst).

Unfortunately, we are among numerous communities in our area that are finding out about the negative effects of gross over-development and ineffective planning. I tried to vote members onto council who said the right things about slowing the growth, but obviously, they, too, are helpless. What benefits, as taxpayers, are we reaping from the destruction of our environment? Does anyone have any answers? Enough is enough.

Cheryl Walker,
Westland

To the editor:
Your editorial "Tiger Stadium — New park must close to old" was nearsighted and conflicting. To keep the special nuances and atmosphere you mention, the best solution is to renovate Tiger Stadium. A new stadium would cost $180 million. A better business decision is to renovate the existing structure at a cost of $26 million. The Cochrane Plan preserves the park for the fans who love it the way it is, expands it for the fans who want more amenities, and modernizes it to meet the needs of the Tigers.

It would be wrong to rob Detroit of a national landmark that gives us pride and distinction. It would be a terrible waste and injustice to replace a wonderful old ballpark with a mediocre, new plastic stadium. Why must we always insist on tearing down the old and replacing it with the new? New doesn't always mean better. Look around you — wonderful things are happening in the Historic District of Farmington. That same momentum should carry over to the treasures of the city.

Karyn Terzich,
Farmington

TV billing is criticized

To the editor:
On June 3, we have gone for hours without cablevision or our regular channels. Throughout the year we have gone many hours and yes, even days without cablevision.

Their excuse, "We had wind or we had rain or we had a storm." Excuses after excuses for our inconvenience. But, how many times have we been reimbursed for down time? The answer is zero. We pay the total monthly bill regardless of down time.

I think it is time for our city government or our citizens to demand reimbursement for the loss time we are "forced" to endure through the cablevision's inability to provide for a "paid" service.

Westland

Mr. Fix-It loses face off with leak

FOR ABOUT AN hour on Sunday, I was the proud owner of something called a "tapered valve-seat wrench."

It all had to do with a leaky faucet, an irritated wife and a nearby do-it-yourselfer's paradise known as Mans Do-It Center. (By the way, "Mans" as near as I can tell, is the name of the franchise holder — not a sexist suggestion that women can't be do-it-yourselfers, too.)

Now my acquaintances may think of me as a good ol' boy from Arkansas, but when it comes to doing-it-yourselfing, my idea of that is picking up the phone and calling building maintenance. Unfortunately, that option was lost five years ago when we moved from our rented townhouse and joined the ranks of those property-tax-paying individuals known as "homeowners."

My first project, before we even moved in, was to remove the shower curtain rod from the bathroom (that was easy enough) and replace it with sliding glass doors (my wife's idea, not mine.)

That's when I paid my first visit to Mans.

"Yeah," I was told, "if you're gonna be drilling into tile, you'll need a ceramic bit."

Jack Gladden

"I know what a bit is," I said. "It's an eighth of a byte. But what's a ceramic bit?"

OH, ONE OF those mechanical things. Well, the doors went up and as long as you close them carefully, so they don't slip out of the track, you never notice the angle. And if you do notice it, so what? Those doors have character.

Shampooing the carpet went OK after the first couple of rooms, when I discovered the switch on the shampoo machine that turned the liquid on. Those two rooms weren't that dirty anyway, except for the stains, and they add a certain . . . ambience.

But it was the faucet that terrified me. Drip, drip, drip. Then gush, gush, gush.

"Do you know how much water we're wasting with that thing?"

"Yes, dear, I know." "It can't be that hard to fix." First, remove faucet handle.

That's what it said in "The Home Plumber's Bible," a gift from my father-in-law who had retired to the Florida manse, where he didn't have to worry about such things anymore.

The screw came out, but the handle wouldn't budge. That's when I paid my second visit to Mans.

"It's corroded," I was told. "You need a faucet-handle puller." I'm not sure that's what they called it, but that's what it was. And it was only $9.75.

IT WORKED. The handle came off, the assembly (they always call it the "assembly") came out and, after about four hours, I had the washer replaced and everything put back together.

Mirabile dictu! The drip was gone. For a couple of days.

"You need a valve-seat reamer," my father-in-law said when he returned for a visit. "They don't cost much."

$5.75. At Mans. And it worked. For a couple of days. The drip turned into a stream . . . then a gush . . . then a torrent.

"I don't care so much about the water bill," my wife said. "It's the environment. All that water just being wasted."

Oh, Jeesh! First a feminist. Now an environmentalist.

"It's the valve seat," said the clerk at Mans. "It needs to be replaced. But you'll need a valve-seat wrench." Make that a tapered valve-seat wrench. $5.29.

But it didn't work. The valve seat (I even know what it is now) was so corroded that the only thing the wrench did was strip whatever threads were left while the malfunctioning valve seat just sat there. I swear it was grinning.

"That does it," I told the environmentalist, after returning the tapered valve-seat wrench and getting my $5.29 back. "I'm calling building maintenance."

"But we don't live there anymore," she said. "We don't have building maintenance."

"Oh, yes we do," I said, thumbing through the Yellow Pages. "It's listed under 'Plumbers.'"

Engler traded tax for his own vision

MY BRETHREN downtown missed the significance of last week's great tax compromise in the Michigan Legislature.

Their headlines emphasized that Detroit's utility tax authorization had finally been approved.

The other half of the deal was glossed over. In return for the utility tax, Senate majority leader John Engler, the probable Republican gubernatorial candidate, got the Democrats to approve one of his pet projects — a major reduction of the inheritance tax.

In 1985 Engler came to Detroit to make some news.

HE UNVEILED a book-sized study called "Michigan Beyond 2000" by a think tank called the Hudson Institute. Most reporters couldn't be bothered to read even the executive summary, let alone the full text. They were after a few good quotes and good-bites.

I sensed that Engler was giving us his long-range blueprint for his tenure as governor.

"Because Michigan's population will be aging over the next 20 years, and because the auto industry is likely to use retirement as one of the main mechanisms for shrinking its workforce, the state has a particularly great interest in enhancing its status as a retirement center," the Hudson Institute study begins.

"Whether the large numbers of Social Security and pension checks due to auto industry retirees are mailed to addresses in Tucson or Traverse City will have a great impact on the economic health of the state over the next 20 years.

"Tax policies that discourage retirement in the state — for example, inheritance taxes — might also be revised."

Translation: Cut the inheritance tax to Florida levels.

RETIREES USED to be a main component in the poverty picture. Today, few retirees are dependent on their kids. Indeed, many are well off.

With money to spend, they can be a source of jobs, an economic underpinning, to northern Michigan towns — if they stay in Michigan.

"Just as the boom in retirement communities in Florida and Arizona led to subsequent growth in retailing, construction, health care and many other service industries, a swelling population of retirees in Traverse City and similar resort communities in Michigan will generate strong service-based economic growth."

Tim Richard

The book has an entire chapter on Traverse City. Other towns are feeling the impact, too. My credit union, centered in western Wayne County, established branches in Gaylord, Atlanta, Lewiston and Hillman, in the elk country of northern lower Michigan. Now we know why.

REPEALING THE inheritance tax alone won't induce retirees to remain here. Roads, recreation facilities, arts grants, senior citizen center grants, lighter residential property taxes — all of these are important in attracting older people to stay in Michigan.

Prosperity can be achieved through industry, of course, and should be. But as the Hudson Institute points out, many towns can do extremely well with imported consumer money — note the college towns of Ann Arbor, East Lansing and Kalamazoo.

Engler considers the inheritance tax issue so important that it has the legislative title of Senate Bill 1.

Others don't see it that way. Both House Taxation Chair Lynn Jondahl, D-Okemos, and state Treasurer Robert Bowman have been heard to object that SB 1 will cost $50 million or some such number in lost revenue. That's as far as they see.

Bowman's objection is relevant because he is Gov. James J. Blanchard's economic guru. Blanchard still has to sign SB 1, you know, for it to become law. As of last week, he hadn't made up his mind.

This Engler fellow has a reputation as a manipulative partisan. He also has a vision.

Last week, through sheer hardball politics, he traded Detroit's utility tax for a piece of the vision.

Board member slants evaluation

Q: Our board of education rated our superintendent a 4.2 on his annual evaluation. Five is the highest rating or excellent, four is good. He does an excellent job and I believe this rating is too low. It should be higher. I can't figure out why he did not get a higher rating.

A: I can because I know the district you are in. On your board you have what is called a "single issue member." The member is a former board candidate who spoke eloquently of the educational needs of our children during the campaign but really had a hidden agenda.

An example of a hidden agenda could be the former junior football league coach who wants astro-turf on the high school football field. Or the candidate who wants to fire the football coach, a principal or even the superintendent.

Doc Doyle

And it would be wonderful to have astro-turf but other cost items such as buses to get kids to school sometimes over shadow dreams.

One single issue board member usually gets absorbed by the logic and experience of the other six members. This is the beauty in having a seven-person board. It keeps a check and balance on not only their own members but on school administrators, such as I was who, at times, come up with ideas that sound good but need a second look.

On the other hand if a single issue board member is successful in recruiting and has elected others with his/her single agenda, there could be astro-turf on the football field and a backlash from the public that no one needs.

In any case, your superintendent received a rating you believe is too low. You indicate that there is a single issue trustee on your board of education — a member no one else agrees with. Let's do a little simple math.

Let's assume six members rated your superintendent an average of 4.5 — a very good grade. The single issue member wants to get rid of the superintendent, has a personal ven-detta, and rates him/her 2.5. The average reported is 4.2.

That's why averages are so useless in the interpretation of most data.

A superintendent once told me that he wished he and his peers were rated the same way divers are at a swim meet. Throw out the highest and the lowest scores. If that had occurred in your case, your superintendent would have been rated 4.5 — very good to excellent.

Dr. James Doyle is a former assistant superintendent in the Troy School District. Questions for this column should be sent to Doc Doyle, c/o Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Daredevil pilots to highlight county air show

Team America a team of daredevil pilots, will be the main attraction at this year's Wayne County Air Show.

U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, received Eastern Michigan University's Distinguished Alumni Award during recent ceremonies at the Ypsilanti campus.

Pursell, who holds bachelor's and master's degrees from EMU, was recognized for this, "outstanding professional achievement and his service to the EMU community."

A senior member of the House Appropriations Committee, Pursell serves on a subcommittee that finances the nation's higher education programs.

His district includes EMU and the University of Michigan. It also includes northern Livonia, Plymouth and Plymouth Township.

Team America, the only civilian flight team authorized to perform at U.S. Air Force bases, is the headline act at this year's Wayne County Air show.

The show is scheduled June 23-24 at Willow Run Airport.

The California-based flying unit has entertained at air shows in 22 state and three Canadian provinces. The Willow Run show marks its first Detroit-area appearance.

Lead pilot Chuck Lischer has logged more than 6,000 flying hours in 60 different aircraft. The unit flies SIAI Marchetti F-260 air craft.

"It was the only airplane that fit the image I was looking for," Lischer said. "It has sleek, elegant flowing lines and it was the plane that fit."

Two of the planes were bought from the government of Zaire. Lischer's own plane had initially been designed for a mercenary pilot but was impounded and stripped of its weapons before sale.

Though still used as fighter planes in some African nations, the Italian-made planes are more commonly used in training exercises. The craft reach maximum cruising speed of 215 miles per hour and can dive at speeds of up to 305 miles per hour.

Also on the bill will be:

• The U.S. Army Golden Knights parachute team.

The team has appeared at Super Bowl and World Series games and at the 1980 winter Olympics in Lake Placid.

Founded in 1959, the team includes 80 men and women. The team has captured 10 international trophies and 80 national trophies for its precision jumping.

• Glider pilot Oscar Boesch of Toronto.

Boesch, a pilot for more than 45 years, was a German fighter pilot during World War II.

Emigrating to Canada after the war, he has appeared in numerous television and movie productions, including the IMAX film "Silent Sky."

He has dedicated his air show performances to the cause of peace.

• Daredevil Jim Roberts. Roberts, a New Jersey resident, will pilot a specially-designed Laser 200 aircraft, winner of a world stunt flying title.

It's not unheard of for children to complain "There's nothing to do."
The arrival of summer and the end of the school year mean children have more time on their hands. Boredom and complaints can soon follow.
It doesn't have to be that way, however. Plenty of summertime activities for kids are available, and many are either free of charge or inexpensive. What follows is just a sampling.

• DETROIT ZOO

The Detroit Zoo, 8450 W. 10 Mile at Woodward in Royal Oak, is open seven days a week in the summer. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays and holidays through Sept. 3.
There's plenty to see, including many exhibits: the penguinarium, aviary, Holden Museum of Living Reptiles, bear dens, farmyard, elephant and rhinoceros exhibit, marine mammal exhibit and others.
A miniature railroad operates through Labor Day. Guided tours of the zoo, w/d tractor trains, are available Wednesday through Sunday during the summer.

Saturday, July 7, will be "Hot Dog Day" at the zoo, with each visitor receiving a free hot dog. Beginning July 9, children age 12 and under will be admitted free each Monday through Aug. 27 when accompanied by an adult family member.
Other special summertime activities at the zoo include: a model boat regatta Saturday, July 14, featuring a display of miniature power boats in the Rackham Fountain; Saturday, July 28, a firefighters' rally, featuring a thrill show, clowns and team competition at noon, free with zoo admission; Saturday, July 28, "Ice Cream Day," with zoo visitors receiving free ice cream.

All zoo buildings and exhibits are accessible to those in wheelchairs. The zoo has a picnic area and snack/souvenir stands. Roller chairs and "kidd kabs" (similar to strollers) are available for rental.
Admission price is $5 for those age 13 and up, $3.50 for senior citizens (age 62 and older), $2.50 for children ages 5-12, free for those age 4 and under who are supervised. (Group rates are available. For reservations, call 399-7001.)
The zoo's information line, 398-0900, includes recorded tapes on zoo activities.

Change in handwriting shows personality change

Dear Mrs. Green,
I am very interested in your column on graphology. Over the years, my handwriting has changed quite a bit. I was wondering if my personality changes as dramatically as my writing. I would be delighted if you would print this letter.

P.C., Plymouth

graphology
Lorene Green

Dear P.C.,
Although you did not include samples of your former handwriting, I can say with confidence that if your handwriting has changed your personality has too.

As I study your interesting handwriting and consider the many deviations you have made from the copybook style you were taught, I visualize a young woman who has the courage to be unique and different.

You are independent and have separated yourself from much of your past and are now moving into new vistas and experiences with an element of caution. You are not impulsive and take time to consider alternatives before arriving at decisions.

A self-starter, you do not wait for someone else to set your pace. You have learned to organize and use your time efficiently. You have the confidence to set challenging goals.

The inner strength I see here tells me you intend to accomplish them.

About you is an aura of poise and control. Seldom do you allow your emotions free rein.

Both happy and sad experiences have a strong impact on you. When you have been wrong, it is not easy for you to toss it off lightly.

Criticism of your personal being can be upsetting. Perhaps you experienced too much of it in your formative years. You also appear to be a tad defensive about being used by others.

Yours is a keen mind with amazing powers of analysis. You tend to weigh all sides of a problem or situation before arriving at an impartial decision.

Outstanding would describe your way with words! Not only can you express yourself fluently, but also with directness when this is appropriate or necessary. Imagination and a clever wit are here to add sparkle to your speech and personality.

I can see you have been exposed to some of the finer things in life. Music, art and literature are areas of interest and possible aptitude. This culture would influence many of your choices in life. I also suspect you enjoy being in an atmosphere of lovely things.

Do you sometimes hear a little inner voice saying, "Trust your intuition?" This intuition can lend insight into both people and situations.

I am very interested in your column on graphology. Over the years my handwriting has changed quite a bit. I was wondering if my personality changes as dramati-

Graphology Tip: When the writer has left rather wide margins on both the left and right sides of the paper and most words do not have lead-ins, we can assume he has moved away from the past and into new experiences with caution.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. And feedback is always welcome.

Bill Schodowski, senior field service representative for Florists' Transworld Delivery Association, shows off two floral arrangements that will win a smile from Dad this Father's Day.

End of stereotype opens door for flowers for Dad

By Sue Mason
staff writer

There was a time when the only floral arrangement a man would get close to was a carnation boutonniere worn only for weddings or formal dances like the high school prom. Floral arrangements were for women and funerals.

Things have change a lot over the years. Now, Americans are picking up on a European custom of giving flowers to the hostess when visiting friends at their homes and women are sending more and more flowers to... men.

Yep, what was once frowned on as unmanly has become acceptable and florists are responding with arrangements that have a touch of masculinity.

"It's helped to have someone like Merlin Olson being a spokesman," said Bill Schodowski, senior field service representative for Florists' Transworld Delivery Association, headquartered in Southfield. "When you have a guy that stands 6 feet 5 inches and weighs 250 pounds, standing there with flowers in his hand... it's open quite a few doors for us. He's quite a visible person."

FTD, with 25,000 members throughout the United States and Canada, has been promoting the idea of giving dad flowers on Father's Day for 15 years. The idea got off to a slow start because of masculine stereotypes, but in the last 10 years, fathers receiving flowers has more than doubled, Schodowski said.

"When you have a guy that stands 6 feet 5 inches and weighs 250 pounds, standing there with flowers in his hand... it's opened quite a few doors for us."

— Bill Schodowski
FTD

Today, it's acceptable to be open and expressive and while men still give more flowers than women, the difference probably is a few percentage points, Schodowski said.

"AT ONE TIME it was men buying for women, but the pendulum is swinging back," Schodowski said. "Now you have women buying men flowers for Valentine's Day or just stopping buy to pick up single rose or a plant."

"What's nice is that today you don't have to wait for a special occasion. People can go to a florist and buy just a few flowers."

It was Olson, a former Los Angeles Rams player, who helped make FTD creations like the Pick-Me-Up bouquet success stories in the floral industry. People are still asking if Leo got out of the locker six years after Olson made the classic Pick-Me-Up commercial, Schodowski said. With sales in excess of $500 million, FTD isn't a company that comes up with an arrangement without first test marketing it. After 80 years in the business, it sticks to its belief in satisfying the customer, Schodowski said.

FTD got its start in 1910 in Rochester, N.Y., when 15 florists decided to use the telegraph to fill out-of-town orders. The first secretary was a Detroit florist, which led to basing the organization in Detroit. And its been here ever since, moving to its headquarters on Northwestern Highway in Southfield in the 1970s.

For Father's Day 1990, FTD has come up with a planter filled with English ivy, dracaena, philodendron and pothos, with accents of yellow and yellow chrysanthemums in a round wood-like dishgarden for $25-30.

The combination of earthtones, greenery and the Textra pot give the arrangement a masculine feel that "will look good on an office desk or at home," Schodowski said.

AN ALTERNATIVE may well be an arrangement of Pincushion potia, saricina (trumpet flowers), lotus pods, curly willow and greenery in a brass planter. The creation of Jack Smith of French's Florist in Livonia, the arrangement has a comfortable feel and won't look out of place on a man's desk, Schodowski said.

Schodowski has been with FTD for 20 years and has seen a lot of changes over the years.

Change in handwriting shows personality change

Dear Mrs. Green,
I am very interested in your column on graphology. Over the years, my handwriting has changed quite a bit. I was wondering if my personality changes as dramatically as my writing, I would be delighted if you would print this letter.

graphology
Lorene Green

Dear P.C.,
Although you did not include samples of your former handwriting, I can say with confidence that if your handwriting has changed your personality has too.

As I study your interesting handwriting and consider the many deviations you have made from the copybook style you were taught, I visualize a young woman who has the courage to be unique and different.

You are independent and have separated yourself from much of your past and are now moving into new vistas and experiences with an element of caution. You are not impulsive and take time to consider alternatives before arriving at decisions.

A self-starter, you do not wait for someone else to set your pace. You have learned to organize and use your time efficiently. You have the confidence to set challenging goals.

The inner strength I see here tells me you intend to accomplish them.

About you is an aura of poise and control. Seldom do you allow your emotions free rein.

Both happy and sad experiences have a strong impact on you. When you have been wrong, it is not easy for you to toss it off lightly.

Criticism of your personal being can be upsetting. Perhaps you experienced too much of it in your formative years. You also appear to be a tad defensive about being used by others.

Yours is a keen mind with amazing powers of analysis. You tend to weigh all sides of a problem or situation before arriving at an impartial decision.

Outstanding would describe your way with words! Not only can you express yourself fluently, but also with directness when this is appropriate or necessary. Imagination and a clever wit are here to add sparkle to your speech and personality.

I can see you have been exposed to some of the finer things in life. Music, art and literature are areas of interest and possible aptitude. This culture would influence many of your choices in life. I also suspect you enjoy being in an atmosphere of lovely things.

Do you sometimes hear a little inner voice saying, "Trust your intuition?" This intuition can lend insight into both people and situations.

I am very interested in your column on graphology. Over the years my handwriting has changed quite a bit. I was wondering if my personality changes as dramati-

Graphology Tip: When the writer has left rather wide margins on both the left and right sides of the paper and most words do not have lead-ins, we can assume he has moved away from the past and into new experiences with caution.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. And feedback is always welcome.

Dealing with grief: pastors offer help

Former Canton resident Sandra Aldrich used her personal experiences to let pastors know what the church can do for widowed people.

According to Dr. John Canine, one word that should not be used to tell a child about the death of a loved one is expired. People die, parking meters expire, he said.

By Sue Mason
staff writer

What do you ask a person who's just lost a loved one?

According to Sandra Aldrich, the first questions one minister asks a grieving widow is to ask if she knows how to pump gas and balance a checkbook.

"I didn't know how and thought I would blow up that whole end of Canton," she said. "How do you explain to the police. I went to pump gas and the station blew up."

Aldrich, a former Canton resident, lost her husband Don to brain cancer in December 1982 and in the 16½ months prior to his death, she "learned a lot about herself and about the Lord."

"Because of Jesus, I'm better," she said. "I had a choice of being bitter or better and, because of Jesus, I'm better."

Aldrich, associate editor of the New York State-based Christian Herald magazine, shared a podium with Dr. John Canine, director of Maximum Living Birmingham, at a recent ministers' breakfast, sponsored by the R.G. and G.R. Harris Funeral Homes of Garden City, Livonia, and Farmington. Held at Madonna College, the breakfast attracted clergymen from throughout western Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties.

Canine addressed the issue of how to help children through their grief, while Aldrich, who worked as a community services representative for the funeral homes before assuming the position with Christian Herald, spoke on how the church can help the widowed through the grieving process.

SPEAKING FROM experience,

Aldrich pointed out what ministers need to do to help widows and widowers. By using church committees, and especially the widowed "who have been through it," they can help those people through the difficult months after the death.

Ministers need to make themselves available to grieving people, but not place a limit on when they can be contacted. Widows have difficulty verbalizing their needs and will make "horrible mistakes" during the first few months after the loss of their spouse, she said.

By encouraging the person to talk about the pain, ministers can help them sort out their feelings.

"Let them know it's OK to be angry with God," she said. "God has big shoulders; he can handle it. And he can't heal the hurt you don't tell him about. Help them sort out their feelings. Jesus said 'Come unto me.' He didn't say 'Come unto me with a perfect attitude.'"

One thing Aldrich recommended was that ministers be prepared for the crisis phone calls. She recommended praying with the caller over the phone as part of the comfort practical direction that will need to be given.

"In the first moments, they may not remember what you say, but they'll remember the love and compassion you treat them with," she said. "They need to be in the arms of Jesus."

THE SON OF a minister, Canine told the ministers that children in their honesty are "telling us that they don't know about death because we don't talk about it at home, in the schools and from the pulpit."

"Children have an unsatisfied notion about death and a distorted view of it from the media," he said. "We have to be completely honest with children about the concept of death."

Canine provided a 10-step process he uses to help youngsters deal with grief and encourage telling the child about the death and encouraging him to express his emotions.

According to Canine, words like expired or passed away shouldn't be used in talking about the death. Words like death and dying should be used with sensitivity. "Parking meters expire," he said.

"Death is a part of life; it's something we will all face," he said.

According to Canine, children also should be told only the details of the death they are ready to hear. Over the years, they will ask about the death, reprocessing the information at different developmental stages.

HE CAUTIONED against withholding information about the death from the child since that can be perceived as a threat to the youngster and to touch the child when talking about it to give them a sense of security and safety.

Canine also encourages taking children to the funeral. While some may frown on that, Canine pointed out that it is realization, a case of "seeing is believing" and seeing the support of family and friends by the child.

The same reason holds true for if the person is already buried. The child should be taken to the cemetery.

The child also should be encouraged to talk about the death and never be told not to feel they way they feel about it, he said.

"You can go to the cemetery and talk to that person," Canine said. "No one has ever come from the other side to tell a person to stop talking because we can't hear you."

Canine also lamented the increased use of cremation for burials.

"America needs to get back to the three-day funeral with the open casket so the family can start grieving," he said.

Boats revel in steamship era

By Roberta Schwartz
special writer

Although Detroit's two historic steamers, the Columbia and St. Claire, no longer leave from the old dock at the foot of Woodward, they still create the sense of wonder and excitement that they did when they were first launched 100 years ago.

These two busy steamers survived when other historic ships like the famed Put-in-Bay, Tashmoo and City of Detroit III were either burned or junked. Today, they announce the coming of summer with their shuttles to Boblo Island, 18 miles from Detroit.

These clarions of summer announce the coming of the season as they ferry the great-great-grandchildren of passengers they delighted many years ago. They have become part of the life fabric of thousands of Michiganians who love the twin vessels.

In the 1950's interest in excursion boating declined as more people invested in their own pleasure craft. And yet, the immaculate white and blue of the Boblo steamers continues to glide from one century to the next without hesitation.

Their 90 minute trips to the small green island of picnics and amusement rides has become a seasonal tradition to thousands of families.

Boblo boats recall a bygone era when steamships were king of the Great Lakes. In the 1890's the Detroit, Belle Isle and Windsor Ferry Company operated a regular service that carried passengers from Detroit and Windsor to local resorts. It soon acquired Bois Blanc Island that was changed to Boblo Island in 1908 when the owners decided that name was easier to pronounce.

Bois Blanc was the French name (white woods) that honored the beautiful white birches and beach trees that swayed and shimmered in the cool breezes of the Detroit River.

The island, which was opened in 1898, sits on the Detroit River, within sight of Lake Erie. In 1901, the ferry company asked Frank Kirby to design a new vessel because island trips had become quite popular. The Detroit Shipbuilding Company launched the Columbia in 1902 and towed it to the Orleans Street dock for completion.

The Columbia, a shiny vessel with three spacious decks to accommodate passengers, measured 216 feet in length and 60 feet in breadth. This trim 268-ton vessel was designed to carry 4,500 people, but today's marine safety standards allow only 2,500.

On her trial run to Bois Blanc Island in July 1902, the Columbia set a record by arriving in just 80 minutes, 25 minutes less than the other vessels the ferry company operated. That evening she sailed a moonlight voyage for a church group. In 1911, the ferry company launched the St. Claire to accommodate increasing crowds.

Over the years, these two trusty ships carried thousands of passengers. In 1976, the historic St. Claire was moved to the foot of Woodward as part of a waterfront renovation. The docks were moved west of Cobo Hall to a spot once the haven of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company.

The Detroit, Belle Isle, and Windsor Ferry Company owned the boats for a half century and in 1949 sold their holdings to Troy H. Browning. The Browning family worked to improve the island and kept the boats from extinction when other similar crafts were destroyed one by one. In 1959, the Browning family sold its interest to a group of investors and four years later the Automobile Club of Michigan bought the company and rescued it from bankruptcy.

LOG CABINS AND BUCKSKIN INHABIT THE NORTHWEST

By Sherry Kahan
special writer

In high wind, 31 men, one woman, one baby and one Newfoundland dog fled the tides and storms of the Pacific Ocean, looking for a calmer place to camp.

Making their way along the Columbia River in five dugout canoes, they turned in to a smaller path of water. Soon they beached their boats on the edge of a dense forest.

Tall Douglas fir trees rose above them, along with Grand fir, Sitka spruce, Western Red Cedar, Mountain Hemlock and Red Adler.

In spring, summer or fall, sunlight would slice through the branches of these trees and the forest would be blossoming and protective. But this sodden crew, members of the Lewis and Clark expedition, arrived in December 1805, in the cold, dampness of winter when the woods are like a rain forest with water dripping from every limb.

THE EARLY 18th century Lewis and Clark crew were sent by President Thomas Jefferson to explore unclaimed and unknown parts of the northwest. The presence of Americans was believed to help establish a United States claim to the territory.

Located on the northwest corner of Oregon near the Columbia River and four miles from the Pacific Ocean, the 125-acre property, originally settled upon by the Lewis and Clark crew is now called Fort Clatsop National Memorial. Owned by the federal government, it is administered by the National Park Service, which in 1989 welcomed approximately 207,000 people.

The name, Fort Clatsop, was chosen because of the friendly Clatsop Indians.

SHERRY KAHAN

Smoke drifts from a chimney at Fort Clatsop on a warm spring morning.

Captain Meriwether Lewis and Captain William Clark were the leaders of the Northwest expedition. They admired each other's abilities and were long-time friends. Clark named his first son Meriwether.

ONCE THE explorers left the forest in March 1806 to return home, their fort gradually deteriorated and disappeared. Small efforts to memorialize the site were made in the 19th and early 20th centuries.

But success did not come until 1955, the year of the Lewis and Clark Sesquicentennial. Groups from the nearby port city of Astoria, Ore., joined with the Oregon Historical Society to build a replica of the original fort. Three Finnish carpenters from Astoria are credited with the actual construction.

Other areas of interest near Fort Clatsop include the city of Astoria, the first permanent settlement in the U.S. west of the Rockies. In 1811, it was a busy fur trading center. The city boasts the first port for ships entering the Columbia River, a Maritime Museum and three other museums celebrating the town's history. Charter fishing is available, and the nearby deactivated Fort Stevens is now a state park.

South of Fort Clatsop is the town of Seaside, where a replica of the salt works used by the explorers can be seen.

THE HIGH waterfalls along the scenic Columbia Gorge drive should not be missed and anyone who enjoys the sight of ocean water crashing against rocks or rolling in on smooth beaches will want to take a drive along the Oregon Coast. All beaches are public and camping places are available in the area.

The coast is very popular so tourists should make reservations by writing, calling or visiting the Chamber of Commerce in cities along the coast.

These events take place on weekends in late spring, and daily from mid-June to Labor Day.

Driving into the Fort Clatsop National Memorial, the first building in sight is the Visitor Center, which is being expanded this year to triple its size. It features audio-visual material on the expedition, wall maps, memorabilia and a bronze statue which includes Lewis and Clark, a Clatsop Indian and Lewis' dog, Seaman.

MICKY JONES

Balloon festivals like this one in Traverse City heat through the state every summer. The Battle Creek International Balloon Championship is scheduled for June 18-23.

Great Lakes' balloons take riders up and away

Summer is fun. It starts officially June 21, but we are already celebrating the great life of the Great Lakes.

It's fun, but sometimes we see only the surface, the ships sailing by on our wonderful waterways or the balloons going up in festivals that are already in full swing.

The Michigan Travel Bureau publishes the Michigan Summer Travel Guide and Calendar of Events.

The bureau has 40 pages of summer events to list, and that doesn't include the many events that didn't make the list because their organizers couldn't get their acts together in time.

FOR THE second year, the Michigan Travel Commission chose a few of Michigan's festivals to highlight as part of the "Celebrate! the Great Lakes Festivals" promotion.

Four of them are over: Blossomtime in Benton Harbor, Tulip Time in Holland, the Highland Festival in Alma and the Lilac Festival on Mackinac Island.

The Frankenmuth Bavarian Festival started June 9 and will go on through June 16. The Battle Creek International Balloon Championship comes up this weekend, June 18-23.

I'VE HEARD a lot of Michigan tourism statistics — 3,000 miles of Great Lakes shoreline, 11,000 inland lakes, 830,000 pleasure boats — but there was one statistic in this little guidebook that really startled me:

"The water that flowed from Canada into Lake Superior at the start of the celebration last year won't flow out to the North Atlantic for another 321 years."

That gives you an idea about who or what is running this world of ours, and it isn't the guys who make the fireworks.

That started me thinking about the origins of some of crossroads

these festivals, and since the one in Battle Creek is coming up, it made me think about balloons.

WE THINK of hot air balloons as old-fashioned, linking us to 19th century stories like "Around the World in 80 Days." The truth is that man existed for thousands of years without the slightest concept of "heavier than air" contrivances.

Oh yes, we tried to fly and usually broke our necks doing it, but it took a couple of French brothers to make it work with balloons.

Jacques Etienne and Joseph Montgolfier, paper manufacturers, filled a 33-foot diameter paper balloon with smoke from a straw fire in Annonay, near Lyons, France, on June 15, 1783.

It rose a thousand feet. They soon realized that it was heat and not smoke that made the balloon rise; air expands when heated, so a given volume weighs less than the same volume of cold air.

ON JAN. 7, 1785, Jean Pierre Blanchard of Philadelphia and U.S. physician J. Jeffries crossed the English Channel in a balloon.

They threw out every bit of ballast, including some of their own clothes, to stay aloft above the water and land 12 miles from Calais, France.

A balloon flew above the coronation of George V in 1821 and became a worldwide sport by the mid-19th century, but electric power lines and the catastrophe of the Hindenburg dampened our national enthusiasm for sports balloons.

The military has used balloons since 1794. They were used to bomb Venice in 1849. They've also been used to carry mail and investigate the atmosphere. Piccard gave them pressurized cabins, they were called "beer barrels with windows."

So the next time you watch one of those great globes of color rise in the air, be a little more amazed. There is more here than meets the eye.

THERE IS also more to these Celebrate! the Great Lakes Festivals: the International Freedom Festival June 22-July 4 in Windsor and Detroit; the Straits Area Antique Auto Show June 28-30 in St. Ignace; the International Food Festival July 2-4 in Marquette; and the National Cherry Festival July 7-14 in Traverse City.

The next time you watch one of those great globes of color rise in the air, be a little more amazed.

The fish get into the act with the Michigan Trout Festival July 14-22 in Alpena.

Then there's the U.S. Coast Guard Bicentennial July 21-Aug. 5 in Grand Haven; the Michigan Festival August

MEMBERS OF the staff, clothed in buckskin, are ready to take visitors back to the winter of 1805-1806. Visitors participate in candle making, sewing hides and lighting fires with flint and steel. They also try their hand at five ways to make buckskin resist water and other crafts.

And the staff will break the silence of the woods by demonstrating muzzle loading rifles.

Dugout canoes like those used by explorers can be viewed by fort visitors at the edge of a small river now named for Lewis and Clark. The interpretive staff sometimes take the heavy 35-foot boats into the water. To maneuver them they need at least five strong paddlers.

It's a short walk under calming, stately trees to the main entrance of the 50-square-foot Fort Clatsop. It sits snugly under a canopy of Sitka Spruce. In recreating the fort, carpenters followed a rough sketch of the stockade made by Clark on the cover of his field book.

AN AMERICAN flag with 17 stars hangs on a pole in the small parade ground between the two sections of the fort. Fortunately, the advantage of the new fort today is the absence of troublesome fleas that used to drive the explorers crazy.

On the left are three attached log cabins, each with a crude fireplace and double decker benches for the men of the U.S. Army Corps of Discovery. Almost all members of the outfit were soldiers. On the right are four attached cabins.

In the rear cabin is a cookhouse and store room. Next is the room used by men on guard duty. Clark's black slave, York, is believed to have bunked there.

York was Clark's boyhood companion on Clark family farms in Virginia and Kentucky. Clark took him on the difficult journey because he was strong, tall and a hard worker. Little did he guess that York's contribution to the expedition would be more than work. Many Indian nations became so fascinated with him that the outfit was generally welcomed. Time and time again he patiently endured their washing his skin to remove the blackness. When they failed, some decided he was Big Medicine, a person to respect.

FOR THE EXPLORERS, activities of the winter included exploring the area, and constantly bargaining with the Indians. They also buckled down to the difficult task of scraping, stretching and rubbing elk skins. They saw to it that their clothing was fringed.

Dan Dattilo, park service supervisor of the fort living history program, recently wrote a book on the fort, entitled, "Fort Clatsop -- The Story Behind the Scenery."

Dattilo reported, "The fort was edged with fringe because rain would run down the garment to the end of the cloth, then body movements of the wearer would 'cast off the droplets.'"

By March 1806, the travelers were eager to start home. Their store of food was little, but they were able to make 338 pairs of moccasins during their stay. Before they left they gave their fort to the chief of the Clatsop Indians. Then they loaded their supplies into the canoes and paddled up the Columbia River toward home.

In 1859, fifty-three years later, Oregon became a state and Thomas Jefferson's hopes were realized.

Photo enthusiasts from beginners to professionals are welcome to join the group in capturing shots throughout the Western Highlands.

The tour will begin in Girvan, a fishing village filled with enchanting castles and abbey ruins. A visit to the Robert Burns Center will also be made while in the Girvan area where photographers can shoot the bridge over the River Doon (the "Brigadoon" of Lerner and Lowe fame).

The next stop is in Ft. William, the gateway to the Western Highlands and in the morning the group will then head for the Isle of Skye.

Two days will be spent photographing Skye, the rugged island home of the Clan MacLeod. A ferry will then take the group to the Isle of Lewis where they will spend two days taking shots among 3,000 year-old Standing Stones of Callanish, which is considered to be the finest stone circle in Scotland.

Back to the mainland, the group will take a scenic route to Inverness and spend a free day to sightsee, shop and relax. After two days in Inverness, they head south down the coastline of Loch Ness, keeping an eye out for Nessie.

The photo tour is $2,025 and includes round-trip airfare, all transportation within Scotland, 12 nights accommodations at bed and breakfast establishments, all breakfast and dinners and admission into historical sites.

For more information and reservations for the trip, call (313) 973-1251 or (313) 429-0594. Reservations must be made by July 6.

Delmar Cockrum pinches off the old flower heads on flats of marigolds at his Livonia market.

Planting time

Cool, wet weather slows sales

Impatiens, begonias, tomatoes and peppers.

Those are the big sellers to do-it-yourself home landscapers and gardeners this spring according to a survey of plant suppliers.

Some also reported that unusually spotty weather the past several weeks — rain, cool spells and wind — has resulted in slower sales than previous planting seasons.

"The lousy weather hurt everyone, I think," said Delmar Cockrum, who owns a flower-vegetable plant stand in Livonia with his wife, Lena. "I know it's slowed our sales down here."

"Sales are just a little bit later," said Carol McCreedy, a member of the family that has operated Clyde-Smith & Sons, a Westland landmark, for decades.

Ken Dabelstein, owner of Ken's Country Produce in Westland, reported that his sales volume is down very slightly, 3 percent or less.

"Two good days can make it back to normal," he added.

Other nurseries reported no downturn in sales.

Business at the Frank's Nursery in Livonia has been steady, said Steve Petro, an assistant manager.

"WHEN IT'S rainy and cold, you have nothing," he said. "When it's sunny, sharks are wanting to get out there."

"We're actually up over last year a little bit," said Lynn Arft, owner of The Plant Station in Birmingham. "We're finding more and more growers all the time. We try harder to find a niche, to push a little more volume up."

Galen Eickenberry, nursery manager at Joe Randazzo's Fruit and Vegetables in Westland, said business has increased there during its second year of operation.

"We're a little better known," he said. "Last year we didn't have a lot of nursery stock."

Plus, some buyers came out to Westland after Randazzo's stopped selling plants at its Redford store, Eickenberry said.

REGARDLESS of individual income statements, flowers now outnumber vegetable sales by better than a 4-1 margin, suppliers agree.

There's less sunny space available for vegetables as housing tracts and trees grow, they said.

Delmar Cockrum made another observation.

"The younger generation is getting lazier. That's the big thing. Oldtimers still want a big garden. Younger ones don't want to bother with it."

"People just don't have time for vegetables gardens like they used to," said David Smith, an owner of Clyde-Smith.

"Lots are smaller, people don't have room," McCreedy added.

But Petro sees a slight increase in the number of younger people growing vegetables.

"I think it's the pesticide scare. People want to know what they're eating."

"WITH PRICES on the rise, people are doing their own canning," he added. "Younger people are starting to get in on it. A lot of it is word-of-mouth."

The tomato, a traditional favorite, still is number one in the hearts of vegetable gardeners.

"It's easy to raise and you get a lot for the work and the space it takes up," Eickenberry said.

Zucchini also was popular at The Plant Station, peppers at Randazzo's, peppers and cucumbers at Ken's.

Impatiens and begonias, colorful shade plants with partial sun possibilities, are the flowers of choice this year.

Impatiens alone account for more than a third of his flower-vegetable business, Arft said.

"You can't keep them," Eickenberry said. "As fast as they come off the truck, they snatch them."

HERB GARDENS seem to be gaining in popularity, Arft and Dabelstein observed. "Cooking herbs really are in high demand," Arft said.

It still isn't too late to plant a garden. Most suppliers plan to keep vegetables on hand through the middle of this month, flowers to the end of the month and some flowers throughout the season.

Bargains can be had by some late-season shoppers. Other suppliers say they don't expect to have much stock left by June's end.

Cockrum has no sympathy for latecomers, saying he'd rather dump plants than offer deep discounts.

"I always hope those cheap-skates don't get a bargain," he said.

But Arft takes a contrary view, saying he eventually offers to give away the remnants of his vegetable plants late in the season.

Business tails off for firms seeking China connection

By R.J. King

China may be breathing a sigh of relief now that Congress has extended most favored nation tariff status for another year, but the mood among area business managers and scholars is far from optimistic.

A year after Chinese soldiers killed hundreds of pro-democracy students and workers in Beijing's Tiananmen Square, business remains abysmal and the tourism industry has all but collapsed.

"What we see today is that two faces have developed in China," said Richard Stamps, associate professor of anthropology and coordinator of East Asian studies at Oakland University.

"At the top you have very strong political leaders who have everything to lose and little to gain by encouraging democratic reforms. Their response to the Tiananmen Square demonstrations a year ago was to come out with guns blazing.

"On the other hand, the average

While the speed is often difficult to gauge, China continues to modernize its economy, ushering in a rising standard of living while developing targeted sectors of agriculture, industry, science, technology and defense.

"For area companies active in China, or those holding out future prospects of doing business there, several state and local resources can provide familiarity with the market, expertise in language and government ties.

"At the top of the list is the Michigan Department of Commerce, which in conjunction with Schoolcraft College in Livonia, provides product evaluation and expertise in exporting through the Community Export Alliance Office.

In addition, several universities, including Oakland University, Michigan State University and the University of Michigan, provide international expertise through related business programs.

"There is a lot of potential in long-term growth in China," said Richard Stamps, an associate professor of anthropology and the coordinator of the East Asian studies at Oakland University. "One billion people are not going to go away.

"But if you go to sell toothbrushes, it's not going to work. I would advise any company attempting to do business to be careful, do the research, be sure the product is something they need and can pay for, and it's in Beijing. He works hard, is optimistic for the future and is encouraged by free-market principles, most notably in agriculture."

STAMPS, A ROCHESTER Hills resident, recently returned from a month-long trip to China, where he studied minority groups in and around Canton while serving as a consultant to two area companies he declined to name.

"I was looking for contacts, maintaining relationships and testing the waters," he said. "What I found was a noticeable cutback in construction projects, many of them left half-finished, and very few American interests while Taiwanese and Japanese business people seemed to be everywhere.

"The problem is that American businesses have to deal with the stern faces at the top, many of whom viewed our outrage over Tiananmen Square last year as a setback, while Taiwan and Japan are looked on as mildly friendly neighbors."

After the Tiananmen Square incident, Prime Minister Li Pehg intensified an austerity plan that has left the economy stagnant and industrial growth at zero, according to the U.S.-China Business Council in Washington, D.C.

The cut in inflation was due in large part to the demands of the students who had demonstrated not only for a more democratic government but against corruption and a runaway economy.

"The events of last spring and summer come at a crucial time in China's path toward embracing modern management principles," said Clyde Stoltenberg, executive director of the East Asia Business Program at the University of Michigan.

"The economy was exhibiting double-digit inflation at the time and the brakes needed to be put on, but the government pushed too hard and now outside companies, especially those in the U.S. are having a tough time prying open the Chinese market."

RICHARD McLELLAN, a partner with the law firm Dykema Gossett, which has offices in Bloomfield Hills, echoed the same concerns.

"The business climate in China is very bad. There is more instability and a return to an atmosphere of uncertainty," he said.

"Although we are encouraged by the continued trade into this country, everything seems to have come to a standstill in China. Some of our clients have since pulled out of Beijing and cut some of their ties in Hong Kong as well."

McLellan called the decline in business "rather notable." Much of the firm's work in China deals with writing and reviewing contracts.

"We look at China as a tremendous opportunity, but for us and the clients we advise, it's a long-term situation. The labor rates are very low, and there's a potential market of one billion people. It's just a slow process right now."

James Buckley, executive vice president of Saginaw Machine Systems in Troy, concurred. "Before Tiananmen Square everything was very open and very optimistic, but now we find the mood to be very sober, very cautious."

From contacts of five years ago, Saginaw Machine started to sell milling machines to Chinese automakers for use in producing crankshafts. The machines range in price from $400,000 to $850,000.

"We installed an average of six machines a year, but since Tiananmen Square, we've sold two," he said. With sales in China accounting for only 5 percent of the company's $20 million revenues last year, Buckley said the company was proceeding slowly.

"There is a tremendous long-term future in China, but we are looking at the next two years very cautiously. They have a tremendous need for almost everything, but getting from Point A to Point B involves a great deal of red tape."

the right marketplace."

But what does China need? According to a report titled "Doing Business in East Asia" from the East Asia Business Program at the University of Michigan, areas of the economy with high potential for commercial activity include:

- Energy: oil, coal mining, hydro-power, nuclear power and conservation.

- Communications.
- Transportation: aircraft, rail equipment, trucks, road-building and traffic controls.

- Packaging.
- Chemicals.
- Computers/microcomputers.
- Pollution control.
- Agricultural equipment and chemicals, food processing.

- Services: tourism, engineering, project design, financing, marketing, market research and insurance.

Sometimes an auto factory can be too sanitary

Particles of graphite hang in the air like some fine silver rain inside the building housing a casting line, the inert residue of the process that converts liquid steel into rolled sheets, stacked a half a hundred yards high, reminding you of the paper towel inventory of some nameless race of monsters.

The graphite is more or less harmless, unlike the abrasive dust shaken from a foundry mold, but it leaves a greasy smear, although that is not as bad as the stench of a grease pit or the grime that collects in cutting oil retaining tanks on a machining line.

Sometimes it seems there are a thousand or more ways to get dirty making cars. There are greases, oils, paints, solvents, glues, acids, glycols, metal chips, carbon deposits, rust streaks and a characteristic burn caused by hot slag flying off the face of a forging, something like a flaming metal cornflake.

Liquids are sprayed, dipped, recovered, held in tanks and dripped on the floor. Ultimately the leftovers make an incredible mess, which if you are lucky is worth something to somebody to gather up and cart away. There are a hundred or more characteristic kinds of grime, ranging from coal dust to white limestone to the grit of taconite powder.

It is a marvel of modern technology that most of this stuff can be handled in rooms occupied by a thousand people, and the most notable intrusion is a characteristic smell that can be ignored after 20 minutes or so. Precipitators, filters, settling ponds and scrubbers work quite well, and a modern foundry (they aren't all modern) can sometimes seem less noxious than a bank. Of course, ultimately, somebody has to go in and clean the filters out, too.

PEOPLE WORK with this stuff, necessary to make cars, to make money. White collar becomes a tannable line, defining the move to an inside job, where the air whirs with air conditioning and a mess is spilled copier fluid for the Xerox machine. But there still are a lot of jobs where it takes a half-dozen years of seniority simply to go home at night with your hands cleanable.

In Kokomo, Ind., a division of General Motors/Hughes Aircraft assembles microcircuitry. It is an assemble line for Lilliput gone mad, with the thickness of individual components measured in atoms. Viewed through the microscope, the scaly surface of a human hair arcs into the distance like the curvature of the earth, while on the horizon is a small village of integrated circuits.

The parts are assembled in a clean room, a factory the size of a medium-size K mart store suspended in space, isolated even from the walls and foundations of the larger building that surrounds it. Each conduit and pipe that enters the clean room is suspended on springs, to absorb the minute shock of a pump or a generator in the basement below.

The air is sucked into the room by a cluster of 62 fans, four of which are large enough to support the roof of the Silverdome. The air is filtered to eliminate all but 10 particles per cubic foot, the largest a speck that makes dandruff seem like an asteroid. It is held at a constant 68 degrees, just like Mammoth Cave.

To work here, you don a white jumpsuit, head to foot, with a bib over your mouth and little static lines trailing from your booties. A sneeze is like an oil refinery fire, and it takes several weeks of indoctrination to learn the ground rules, and, more important, if you can adapt to this alien workplace.

You can only recognize your coworkers by their eyes.

Sometimes at night you dream of working with pigs.

Success will come outside of the rut

By Mary DiPaolo
special writer

What chance for success would you give someone who was willing to risk a 57 percent pay cut to make a career change that offered no guarantees?

• Would you bet on this person making a successful transition from truck driver to top salesman with 1989 sales of $1.5 million? If you think it isn't possible, meet Larry Sanchez.

• Sanchez is living proof that anything can happen for the brave who venture away from the safety of everyday life. As a student at Detroit's Chadsey High, Sanchez dreamed of one day becoming a truck driver. After graduation in 1973 he was hired as a dock worker by Associated Truck Lines. Three years later he was given the opportunity to drive his own rig.

• "It was my life's ambition come true," Sanchez said. "I really believed that I could be completely content driving a truck for the rest of my life." After enjoying a few more years of job satisfaction, security, a $30,000 annual salary and a reputation as one of the best drivers in the business, Sanchez was asked to trade it all in for a career opportunity in a field he knew nothing about.

Bill Cullinan, president of Governor Information Products, a Dearborn computer accessories and supplies distributor, recognized there was something special about Sanchez the first time he met him.

"Larry did not present himself in a way I would have expected," Cullinan said. "Beyond the fact that he was very outgoing and articulate, Larry made a point to dress for success."

After several more months of social contacts, Cullinan began to consider Sanchez as a potential addition to Governor's outside sales staff.

"He was a diamond in the rough. All he needed was the right support and training to make it in our business."

After Cullinan suggested that Sanchez contact him about a possible sales position, Sanchez spent the next three months trying to "close the deal" with Governor.

"I called Bill every day," Sanchez recalled, "and although I never realized it at the time, he was testing my persistence."

Cullinan agreed and added that Sanchez's ability to handle rejection confirmed his selling potential. "I planted the seed and waited to see if it would grow — and it did."

Hired nearly six years ago on a trial basis of one month, Sanchez estimates that his annual salary has nearly tripled since his days as a truck driver. When asked to advise others who may believe it is too late to pursue alternative career opportunities, Sanchez is direct: "If you don't do anything about improving your career situation, nothing is going to happen."

P5 offers tax-deferred growth

By Sid Mittra
special writer

Last week I explained a unique investment called AIT (annuity income with a twist), which is attractive to people in need of guaranteed, tax-favored current income.

In this column I will briefly explain another complex investment, which is attractive to those investors who prefer to receive guaranteed monthly income at a future date.

Tax Advantaged P5

Except for investments through insurance companies, returns on all non-qualified investments are currently taxable. So every year you are taxed on your CD interest, even though you don't even touch it.

However, if the same investment is made through an insurance company, interest, dividends and capital gains would accumulate tax-deferred.

The P5 investment is made through an insurance company. But it offers much more than a tax-deferred investment.

It also provides a five-year guaranteed interest rate of 9.1 percent, flexibility in distribution of the income, and a host of valuable income withdrawal options.

However, unlike AIT discussed last week, P5 is suitable for you only if you need monthly income sometime in the future but don't quite know when you will need it. Here are the key features of P5:

• It offers a guaranteed interest rate of 9.1 percent for five years, after which interest will be declared on an annual basis. So, if you invest $50,000 today, in five years your investment will equal $70,742.

• Your investment (principal plus interest) is guaranteed. It cannot be influenced by market fluctuations.

• Your money will grow tax deferred.

• If you leave your money in P5, even after five years it will continue to grow tax deferred. Assuming the interest rate of 9.1 percent, your investment will be worth $119,459 in 10 years and $184,647 in 15 years.

• You can start receiving a monthly income from P5 any time you want (even after just one year). As long as you take the income over five or more years, there are no penalties, surrender charges or loads.

• Some of the attractive income options include:

i.) Lifetime income for you.

ii.) Lifetime income for you and your spouse.

iii.) Option II plus a minimum guaranteed income for 20 years if both spouses die prematurely.

• Not only your income from P5 grows tax deferred, but a larger percentage (40-60 percent) of your income from it will be tax-free when you start withdrawing the money.

As mentioned, P5 is a complex investment with unique features, and you should not rush into it without fully understanding the pros and cons of investing in it.

I will explain it more fully at the educational seminars, details of which follow.

Other topics to be discussed at the seminar: Lump sum distribution vs. forward averaging, Early vs. regular retirement.

Retirement Seminars 7-8:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 19, at the Kingsley Inn, 1475 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills, and 7-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 27, at the Holiday Inn of Farmington Hills, 38123 10 Mile, Farmington Hills.

GM, Ford take top spots in commercial lending

Business lending has become a slow-growth business for U.S. banks. Partly as a result, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have become the No. 1 and No. 2 holders of domestic commercial and industrial loans, according to a study published by SMR Research Corp.

General Motors ended 1989 with $23.2 billion of commercial and industrial loans, according to SMR's new study — "Giants of Commercial & Industrial Lending." Almost all these loans were made to finance car dealers' inventories and other property.

Commercial and industrial loans in the new SMR study did not include any leases, commercial mortgages, or consumer loans, in which GM also participates.

GM'S COMMERCIAL and industrial outstanding loans were down 0.4 percent from 1988 but were still high enough to make the company the largest U.S. business lender.

At Ford, business loans rose 60 percent to $16.8 billion in 1989, largely as a result of Ford's acquisition of Associates Corp., a finance company. The addition of Associates enabled Ford to capture second place, edging ahead of Citicorp — the nation's largest bank.

Citicorp's U.S. commercial and industrial outstanding loans at year-end 1989 were $16.3 billion, down 4.4 percent, putting Citicorp in third place. On a worldwide basis, however, Citicorp continued to dominate business lending due to its huge volume of loans to foreign corporations.

Citicorp had $37.6 billion of outstanding commercial and industrial loans worldwide as of Dec. 31, 1989.

"FOR U.S. banks, the last half of the 1980s have presented serious problems in generating business loan volume," said Stuart A. Feldstein, SMR's president. "A number of banks, such as Manufacturers Hanover, have been very large originators of business loans.

"But most of these loans have been resold to other lenders, including the Japanese. Had it not been for the foreign banks — and had it not been for high-risk lending to highly indebted companies — there would have been no growth at all for banks in 1989."

As some banks, such as Citicorp, stress credit card and other consumer lending, a bizarre shift of roles is occurring, Feldstein said.

"IT NOW seems likely that in the near future, there may be more consumers who own tangible products (plastic cards) made by Citicorp than own General Motors products, while already U.S. businesses get more of their financing from GM than from Citicorp."

Using a variety of statistical sources, SMR found that the total domestic commercial and industrial loan market reached $815.2 billion in 1989, up only 5.5 percent from 1988. At banks, which continue as an industry to hold more than three-quarters of these loans, the growth rate was only 4.3 percent.

What little growth the banks got came from U.S. units of foreign banks. The study found that U.S. banks controlled by foreigners in more than 57 nations held $174.3 billion of domestic commercial and industrial loans at year-end 1989, up 14.4 percent from 1988.

U.S. banks controlled by the Japanese held more than half of this — $96.6 billion of commercial and industrial loans, up 22.9 percent. Growth in the commercial paper market is the biggest single cause of the slowdown in bank commercial lending.

LARGE CORPORATIONS now

use commercial paper as a less costly alternative to obtaining loans from banks. Ironically, however, the study found that this slowdown in big company lending may end up being good news for banks.

They are turning to much smaller business customers, and these customers are far more numerous and potentially more profitable for the banks.

"For the first time, many banks are working hard to make loans to very small businesses." Banks once considered business customers small if their annual sales were less than $200 million, Feldstein said.

Today, many of the largest banks are turning to companies with annual sales of $5 million, or even less.

"SECURITY PACIFIC Corp. has just created a major new lending unit designed to deal with smaller companies. And that's just one example.

"Banks that once developed specialized expertise in such things as oil industry lending and aircraft financing are now going to be developing expertise in small motels, restaurant franchises, and maybe even the local beauty parlor."

Loans to these businesses — once the turf of small community banks and finance companies — may be very profitable for the banks. Large corporate loans have notoriously thin profit margins, and recent financing of big companies going through leveraged buyouts has been too risky in many cases.

But small businesses are less sensitive to loan pricing, and there are hundreds of times as many of them as there are large corporate customers. The SMR study also covers commercial and industrial loan risk in each of 330 local metropolitan areas, plus commercial and industrial loan opportunities in those areas.

Auto affordability drops for average U.S. family

Auto affordability has declined 32 percent since 1972, according to a new index developed by Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, which measures consumers' ability to purchase and finance new automobiles.

"The Auto Affordability Index indicates that the total cost of a car has significantly out-paced family growth from 1972 through 1989," said David G. Sowerby, second vice president and economist, Manufacturers Bank.

"Passage of the pending Clean Air Bill will lead to further declines in auto affordability by as much as $700 per motor vehicle."

ment plus average monthly payments over the life of the loan.

The Auto Affordability Index is calculated with 1972 as base year equal to 100 and depicts the declining affordability of an average automobile based on price increases and finance costs.

Specifically, the Auto Affordability Index has decreased from 100 in 1972 to 67.9 in 1989, a 32.1-percent decline. As a result, in 1972, the average family had to spend 20.8 weeks of its annual income to purchase a car.

By 1989, that figure had risen to 30.7 weeks.

The Auto Affordability Index has decreased from 100 in 1972 to 67.9 in 1989, a 32.1-percent decline. As a result, in 1972, the average family had to spend 20.8 weeks of its annual income to buy a car.

THE AUTO Affordability Index is based on median family income divided by the total cost of an auto. Total cost includes both price and finance charges and was derived by calculating the average down pay-

Who doesn't feel like having a little fun with their money now and then? But generally, a game isn't thought to be a smart money management tactic.

That is, unless the game is one like the First of America Great Rate Sweepstakes that guarantees you'll win bonus interest on deposits.

No, that was not a misprint. Guarantees. Just by playing, you will win up to a one-percent bonus on deposit interest. And that's on selected savings products already offering competitive returns.

Come in between now and July 31 and get your game envelope from a customer service representative or a loan officer. Just like that, you'll win up to a one-percent interest rate discount off an installment loan.

And there are other sensible prizes, too.

Like a grand prize that gives you a choice of either doubling your First of America deposit up to $25,000, or having a loan paid off up to $25,000.

There are also Instant Win Cash and Banking Service prizes. Such as no-service charge checking for one year. And a $25 deposit to any First of America account.

Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes immediately before the Memorial Day recess:

HOUSE:

FREE MAIL FOR MEMBERS — By a vote of 161 for and 208 against, House members refused to appropriate an additional $25 million to cover postage for their mailings back home this election year. The money was sought because the House is expected to spend nearly twice the $44.5 million already appropriated for its franked mail in fiscal 1990.

The vote occurred as the House sent a $4.4 billion spending bill (HR 4404) to the Senate. It showed members becoming increasingly sensitive to charges that they abuse the franking privilege. But it will have little practical effect because the Postal Service is required by law to deliver congressional mail even when appropriations for postage have run out.

A yes vote supported more appropriations for House members' mail.

Local members voting yes were: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods; William Ford, D-Taylor and Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Voting no were Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

AID TO EL SALVADOR — By a vote of 175 for and 243 against, the House rejected a Republican plan that was the softer of two proposed cuts in U.S. military aid to the rightist government of El Salvador.

The GOP proposal would have cut 25 percent from the Administration's fiscal 1990 request of $85 million if leftist rebels in the Salvadoran civil war took certain steps toward peace and other conditions were met. The House then approved a Democratic plan to halve the $85 million. But that 50 percent cut was later voided, clearing the way for El Salvador to receive the full $85 million. The foreign aid bill under debate was HR 4634.

Sponsor William Broomfield, R-Mich., called his amendment "a measured and balanced approach to the situation in El Salvador."

Opponent Mel Levine, D-Calif., said the amendment dealt too lightly with human rights abuses by Salvadoran soldiers.

A yes vote was for the softer of two proposed cuts in military aid to El Salvador. Yes votes were cast by Broomfield and Pursell.

Against the softer cut were: Ford, Levin and Hertel.

RIGHTS OF THE DISABLED — By a vote of 148 for and 268 against, the House refused to exempt communities of less than 200,000 population from a requirement that nearly all newly-acquired municipal buses in America be equipped with wheelchair lifts. Affected cities and towns could have gained the exemption by providing special transportation approved of in advance by the local disabled community.

The vote occurred as the House sent to conference with the Senate a measure (HR 2273) to protect the rights of the disabled at work and in their use of public accommodations.

A yes vote supported the exemption for small communities.

SENATE:

TO CHANGE HABEAS CORPUS — By a vote of 52 for and 46 against, the Senate approved the speedier of two proposals for quickening action on habeas corpus appeals filed by death row inmates. Such appeals typically ask federal courts to delay an execution or overturn a conviction. The vote occurred during debate on an anti-crime package (S 1970) that remained on the floor.

AUTHORED BY REPUBLICANS, the proposal requires federal courts to review appeals within one year of the date on which state courts finalize the death sentence. A competing Democratic reform proposal called for a slower timetable. The GOP proposal also differed from the Democratic plan by short-cutting state-court review of habeas corpus petitions.

A yes vote was for the GOP-authored habeas corpus reform.

Both Michigan Senators, Donald Riegle-D and Carl Levin-D voted no.

THE DEATH PENALTY AND RACE — The Senate voted 58 for and 38 against to eliminate a proposal that the death penalty be prohibited if it is shown that a state or the federal government applies it in a discriminatory fashion. This removed the proposed Racial Justice Act from pending anti-crime legislation (above).

Bob Graham, D-Fla., called for eliminating the proposal on grounds that decisions on the death penalty should not be made by statistical analysis.

Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the Racial Justice Act is needed because of "disturbing evidence that blacks are more likely to be given a death sentence than white defendants."

A yes vote opposed the Racial Justice Act.

Both Riegle and Levin voted no.

Alzheimer's group offers service statewide

Q. We are planning to spend the summer in the Leelanau area this year. We are taking my husband's mother who has Alzheimer's disease. Is there an organization in the area that can help us should any problems arise?

A. The Alzheimer's Association has chapters throughout the state of Michigan that can provide patient and family services.

Serving the Leelanau peninsula and nearby communities is the Northwest Michigan Chapter, P.O. Box 2010, 1609 Park Drive, Traverse City MI 49685. The telephone number is (616) 947-8920.

Q. My friend and I are traveling to Europe this summer. We are both over 65 and have Medicare. Do we have coverage even when we are in another country?

A. Medicare generally does not apply outside the United States and its territories, but there are three exceptions. One, which covers travelers, is for medical emergencies in Canada, but you must be able to prove that you are traveling the most direct route between the continental U.S. and Alaska. Other exceptions are for those in the United States when an emergency occurs and a Canadian or Mexican hospital is closer than one in the states.

Social Security recommends that people having Medicare who travel should look into short-term insurance for travelers. These companies may also be able to provide medical referrals and advice by telephone, payment for transportation for treatment back home, accidental death insurance and coverage for canceled or delayed trips.

Most companies will not, however, cover pre-existing medical problems. Contact your personal insurance carrier for information on companies that do provide travelers insurance.

Animals perform amazing feats

Many of the animals we see around our yards have capabilities that are quite extraordinary. Not just the ability to fly, or dig, or smell, but the ease and precision in which they perform these functions is what is remarkable.

Every time I watch the downy woodpecker fly toward the suet attached to the tree trunk, I am amazed. It will fly at such a rate that I can barely detect its approach. There are times when I think I have seen a bird arrive, but when it lands out of sight and stays there for several moments, I begin to doubt myself.

What amazes me, is that at the appropriate instant, the woodpecker will "put on the brakes," change its body position from horizontal to vertical, grab hold of a suitable location, and perch without any disruption to its laser landing. There are times when it seems I should find its head protruding through the opposite side of the tree because it failed to pull up at the right moment.

I remember watching house sparrows flying directly toward a chain link fence without adjusting their elevation to fly over the fence. They did not change their speed of flight as they approached, they just folded their wings at the precise instant and darted through the opening. Once through, they continued their flight without the apparent loss of stride.

Squirrels (light-roping electrical and telephone wires always fascinates me. Especially those that are crossing over a busy road. One false step and its "curtains for scurlus." Their ability to jump from flimsy branch to a tenuous branch and to know how much exertion is needed, has always puzzled me too. They may not calculate correctly all the time, but most of the time they are right on target.

Watching the ruby-throated hummingbird hovering at a feeder and adjusting its position in either forward, up, down, right, left, or even backward, in an instant, is remarkable to say the least.

No single animal has all these and other capabilities, but each animal has adaptations which allow it to survive in a very efficient manner.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

A squirrel's light-roping ability is amazing to watch. He may not calculate correctly all the time, but most of the time he's right on target.

It doesn't have to say 'poison' to be harmful

With school vacation rapidly approaching, the kids will be around the house all day. That means greater opportunity for them to explore forbidden areas which could result in an accidental poisoning. Check your poison knowledge by taking the following quiz. The correct answers are at the end.

1. Children under the age of five are accidentally poisoned more often than any other age group. True/False
2. Thousands of small children are poisoned each year by common household products. True/False
3. Only substances with a "Caution - Poison" label can harm a child. True/False
4. Mixing ammonia with bleach forms a very irritating gas. True/False
5. All medications can be used for as long as they last. True/False
6. Leftover household cleaning products can be stored in empty food containers as long as they are properly labeled. True/False

7. A potential poison is: a) a product labeled poison; b) any substance that is misused; c) a liquid harmful only to children.

8. Potential poisons include: a) aspirin substitutes; b) ammonia products; c) household cleaning products; d) all of the above.

9. Syrup of Ipecac: a) is a type of cough medicine; b) makes a person vomit; c) neutralizes poisons; d) is put on burns.

Answers:

1. True. Nearly 60% of all poisonings occur in this age group.
2. True.
3. False. Most household products do not carry a poison warning, but can do serious, if not fatal, damage if swallowed.
4. True. This gas is not only irritating but can be fatal.
5. False.
6. False. Most children do not read the labels. They recognize the container.

consumer mailbag

7. B - any substance that is misused.

8. D - all of the above.

9. B - makes a person vomit. Syrup of Ipecac should only be used on the advice of a physician.

How well did you score? The Michigan Poison Control Centers receive tens of thousands poison or suspected poison calls each year and nearly 60% of these are for children under the age of five.

The primary cause of poisoning in children up to one year of age is plants, including leaves, berries and mushrooms found in the yard. For one-to-five-year olds, the most common cause is aspirin, and now aspirin-free pain relievers.

Remember, accidental poisonings can happen to anyone, at anytime, in any situation. Survey your home closely inside and out. Make sure all medications, cleaning products and pesticides are clearly labeled in their original container and kept under lock and key. Do not assume that a high shelf is high enough. Keep the poison control center telephone number at each telephone and in your purse, wallet or car.

For more information regarding poison prevention, including phone stickers, poison prevention guides, and a list of poisonous plants, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Poison Control Center, Children's Hospital of Michigan, 3901 Beaubien, Detroit, MI 48201.

Why I had my baby at Grace.

Grace Physicians and Staff Sherri: My doctor made me feel as though I was his only patient. Patrice: A positive attitude exists at Grace. It just felt like the staff was a family.

Grace Nurses Rochelle: They were always available and made me feel relaxed. Dawn: They took the time to sit with me and even held my hand.

High-Risk Capability Thelma: I was extra nervous because I was high-risk, but being at Grace made it easier. Patrice: I was not high-risk but I felt more secure knowing Grace had the high-risk capability if I needed it.

Labor Delivery Recovery Room Rita: The staff treated my family, including the kids, like they belonged there.

A Full Range of Options Sherri: I was delighted that the program at Grace was so extensive. Natural birth, LDR rooms, traditional delivery, midwives. Grace has almost everything. Chandra: It was very important to have the option of having a midwife. She offered techniques to make labor easier.

The Wayne State University Affiliation Ilene: Because of the affiliation with the medical school, Grace Hospital is up on all the latest technology.

Sun is at highest point in sky when summer arrives

Look for the moon, in the constellation Pisces, on the morning of the 17th. Mars is five degrees below the moon. By the next morning the moon is well to the east (left) of Mars.

The moon is in Taurus the morning of June 18. Below the moon is bright Venus and to the east of Venus is the Pleiades.

A large triangle will be formed by the moon, Venus and the Pleiades the morning of June 20. The moon will be two days away from New Moon phase and will appear as a thin crescent above the Pleiades.

Summer officially arrives at 11:33 a.m. EDT Thursday, June 21. On this day the sun will be rising at its farthest point north of east, have its highest altitude in the sky, and set at its farthest point north of west for the entire year.

THE SUN appears in different parts of the sky at different times of the year.

Remember where the sun was rising back in December? It was rising far south of east and setting south of west. The days were short and cold and we had winter.

The difference in the sun's position is not due to any movement on the part of the sun. Instead it's due to the tilt of Earth's axis of rotation.

WE ORBIT around the sun, but our axis is tilted 23.5 degrees. It just happens to be pointing toward a star named Polaris, the North Star.

In summer, when the North Pole of the Earth is pointed toward Polaris, it is tilted 23.5 degrees toward Polaris. It is tilted 23.5 degrees toward the sun as well.

Six months later the Earth is on the opposite side of the sun. The North Pole is still aimed toward Po-

Raymond E. Bullock

laris, but now it tilts 23.5 degrees away from the sun. Therefore the sun appears in a different part of the sky.

The moment when the Earth reaches the point in its orbit, where the North Pole is at the greatest tilt toward the sun, is the exact moment of summer. At least it is for the Northern Hemisphere.

When the North Pole is tilted toward the sun, the South Pole is tilted away from it. We may be enjoying the start of summer, but for people south of the equator the days are short and cold and it's the start of winter.

If it were not for the tilt of Earth there would be no change of seasons. If the Earth's axis was straight up and down, everyone would have March-type weather year-round. That may not be bad if you live in the tropics, but it's awful in Michigan!

Summer officially arrives at 11:33 a.m. EDT Thursday, June 21. On this day the sun will be rising at its farthest point north of east, have its highest altitude in the sky and set at its farthest point north of west for the entire year.

NEW MOON occurs at 2:55 p.m. the 22nd. The moon is between the Earth and the sun and is not visible.

The one-day old moon will be less than one degree above Jupiter on the evening of the 23rd.

Jupiter itself will be only one degree above the horizon (45 minutes after sunset) and will not be visible. Pollux and Castor are still 10 degrees above Jupiter and can be identified.

VENUS IS six degrees and to the east (right) of the Pleiades on Sunday morning, the 24th. The orange-red star Aldebaran (al DEB a ran), the "eye" of Taurus, is 14 degrees below the Pleiades, but only two degrees above the horizon.

On the evening of June 24, the moon will form a line with Pollux and Castor. These will be your last opportunities to see the twins as they begin to fade in the glare of evening twilight.

The bright star above and to the south of the moon on the 25th is Regulus. This blue-white star is the "heart" of Leo the Lion. On the 26th the moon has moved to the south of Regulus.

Venus is between the Pleiades and Aldebaran on the morning of the 28th. Now about five degrees above the east north-eastern horizon, Aldebaran will be getting easier to spot as the weeks pass.

At 6:07 p.m. June 29, the moon is at First Quarter phase. It has completed the first quarter of its orbit around the Earth. It will rise around noon, be visible in the south at sunset, and set around midnight.

On June 30 the moon is approaching Spica for the second time this month.

An excellent aid for learning constellations and keeping up to date with the sky is the monthly "Sky Calendar." A one-year subscription is $6 and is available from Abrams Planetarium, Michigan State University, East Lansing 48824.

Raymond Bullock is the former coordinator of the planetarium and observatory at the Cranbrook Institute of Science in Bloomfield Hills. He now works for a Troy company that specializes in laser displays and effects.

Mack named to advisory team

Mack, who represents Canton, will sit on a team of advisers who will oversee a $300,000 federal market development grant.

Jenny Mayle has hurled Livonia Franklin into the state Class A softball tournament semifinals against Fraser. The junior has led the Patriots to an 18-7 overall record this season. Franklin is seeking its second state title.

Patriots proving to be no patsies

By Brad Emons
staff writer

While Joe Epstein scrambles to get a scouting report on Fraser, the Livonia Franklin softball coach has definite read on his team.

"I feel the same way as I have all season long," said Epstein. "If we get three runs and play good defense, we feel we can beat any of the three teams up there."

Epstein's Patriots may be the surprise among the final four and the most dangerous.

Franklin (31-5) will face the Ramblers (31-5) in the state Class A semifinals at 10 a.m. Friday at Bailey Park in Battle Creek. The other semifinal, also at 10, pits last year's runner-up, Jenison, against top-ranked Waterford Kettering. (The championship game is at 10 a.m. Saturday at Bailey Park.)

Fraser comes to the semifinals riding the arm of 5-foot-5 ace pitcher Jomarie Sahutske, who has hurled 28 scoreless innings during the playoffs, including a 1-0 shutout over Grosse Pointe North and a 9-0 whitewash of previously unbeaten Detroit Pershing at the regional.

"WE CAN'T worry about it, I think we'll hold our own," said the Franklin coach. "But they (Fraser) sound awesome, and with the 28 scoreless innings to boot. Of the four teams we've got to be considered the underdog because the other three teams have been rated all year."

The Patriots are by no means strangers to final four play. They won the Class A crown in 1986 after finishing second behind Mount Clemens L'Anse Creuse North in '85.

Franklin reached the regional final last year before losing to Taylor Center. The Patriots spent most of 1990 season playing second fiddle to Observerland rivals Plymouth Canton and Garden City.

But the Patriots caught fire at the right time, while Canton and GC were knocked out of the tournament.

Franklin made believers out of many last week after whipping through the regional at Wyandotte with wins over Belleville (2-0) and Trenton (8-3).

TOURNAMENT NOTES

The site: Bailey Park (Convis complex) is located on M-66 (Capital Avenue, N.E.) in Battle Creek. Coming from Livonia or Westland, go west on I-94, take M-66 (Exit 98) and go north, following M-66 to the park.

Tickets: Tickets are priced at $4 per person each day for each sport (softball and baseball). Admission is good for all games played in that sport all day. You must purchase separate tickets for baseball and softball.

Hotels sold out: Because of the MHSAA Baseball-Softball Finals and the International Hot Air Balloon Festival this weekend, there are no lodging accommodations for spectators available in Battle Creek. Spectators are advised to secure lodging in nearby cities, such as Kalamazoo, Marshall, Albion and Jackson.

Softball pairings (Class A): (All games at Convis Complex): 10 a.m. Friday — Livonia Franklin (18-7) vs. Fraser (31-5) at Diamond B; Waterford Kettering (33-3) vs. Jenison (33-6) at Diamond D. Finals — 10 a.m. Saturday, Diamond D. (Class D semifinals, 12:30 p.m.; Class B semifinals, 3 p.m.; Class C semifinals, 5:30 p.m.)

1989 Class A results: After 3 1/2 hours and a 17-inning pitching duel between Denise Nicker of Harper Woods Regina and Kelly Forbes of Milford Lakeland — the longest in MHSAA championship game history — Regina defeated Lakeland, 5-4, on Christina Burley's RBI single.

Tournament history: Livonia Franklin won the 1986 crown, defeating Waterford Kettering, 1-0, as Tracy Lecika threw a no-hitter after outdueling South Lyon, 2-0, in a 20-inning (two-day) semifinal. Franklin reached the 1985 final before losing to L'Anse Creuse North of Mount Clemens.

Jenison won back-to-back titles in 1987 and '88, and was eliminated in last year's semifinals.

Misc.: Fraser has three players hitting over .500 — Terri Ganuse (.515), Nicole Crane (.513) and Cheryl Beaman (.500).

Sophomore pitcher Jenni Walters of Jenison has stepped in as a full-time starter to post a 22-3 record with a 0.55 earned run average.

Last week's regional results: Livonia Franklin 8, Trenton 3; Fraser 9, Detroit Pershing 0; Waterford Kettering 10, Port Huron Northern 1; Jenison 2, Alpena 1.

among the best in the state.

SHE CAME within one out of a no-hitter against Belleville and drew a five-hitter to beat Trenton.

"She has an insatiable desire to win," said Epstein of his 5-10 ace. "She's been a hard worker, just outstanding for us. And she's willing to try new things, no questions asked."

Epstein calls most of Mayle's pitches, but junior catcher Tracy Parenti determines the location of the ball.

"Most of the year I've called for the changeups and rises," said the Franklin coach. "Basically, Jenny is a control, fastball pitcher. The pitcher calls it and the catcher moves the ball around."

Mayle only walked four in 14 innings last week.

A lot of the credit goes to her batterymate, Parenti, one of the team's unsung players.

"Tracy's up all the time, a real gamer," Epstein said. "She's fun in terms of keeping the team going. When the game starts, nobody works harder. She gives you 150 percent."

"She started out with not so strong an arm, but she's worked at it and now she's one of the best in our league (the Western Lakes).

The batting order will probably be: Dawn Warner, sophomore, second base; Parenti, junior, catcher; Karen Brown, senior, center field; Beth Hare, junior, designated hitter; Amporn Wagner, senior, shortstop; Jenny Mascarello, junior, first base; Mayle, junior, pitcher; Brenda Pierson, junior, third base; and Shannon Eberly, senior, left field. Christy McComb, a junior, will play right field, but not bat.

"If we're fortunate to get a couple of runs early, we may substitute defensively," Epstein said. "But we're going with the kids who brought us her."

Epstein expects a little nervousness before the start of Friday's semifinal.

"Last week I never saw so many injuries disappear once the game started," said the Franklin coach. "Once the game got underway, there were no complaints."

And no matter what happens Friday, Epstein won't have any complaints about the 1990 season.

"This can only help us for next season," he said.

Farmington Falcon runs on even Kiel

By Brad Emons
staff writer

JENNIFER KIEL knows what it takes to go the distance.

The senior has been leading the pack for most of her career at Farmington High.

Kiel, selected Observerland Girls Track Athlete of the Year by the sports staff, has been a fixture for the Falcons' track and cross country squads the past four years.

She capped her brilliant running career recently by finishing second in the 3,200-meter run at the state Class A meet in Midland.

"She's an amazing young lady," said Farmington coach Bruce Brown. "It's been my honor to be associated with her for four years. I have never worked with such a dedicated athlete, boy or girl. Her ability to concentrate is outstanding. She's also an outstanding student and an outstanding human being."

Kiel won the coveted honor over two highly versatile athletes, Lisa Christensen, who led Livonia Stevenson to the Western Lakes Activities Association crown, and Jennifer Harris, Plymouth's Salem's school record breaker.

JOHN GERLACH of Lutheran Westland was named Coach of the Year by the Observer sports staff after his Warriors ran away with the seven-school Michigan Independent Athletic Conference. His team also won the Ann Arbor Greenhills Invitational.

Lutheran Westland, third at the Class C regional, produced Observerland's only girls state champion, Stephanie Locke in the 800 run. The school's 3,200 relay squad, which included Gerlach's daughter Jennifer, finished third.

"We had 23 girls on the team this year and I was really pleased with that," Gerlach said. "We should be very good again next year. We lose three seniors. Ellen Anderson, who was on our 3,200 relay team, will really be missed, but we have a good group of veterans coming back."

Gerlach, a Detroit native, graduated from Concordia Teachers College in Seward, Neb. He received his master's degree from Eastern Michigan and taught 18 years at Guardian Lutheran Elementary School in Dearborn before coming to the new Lutheran High Westland, where he teaches art and religion.

Like Kiel, Gerlach is an avid distance runner.

FIELD EVENTS

Maya Lewis, Wayne, shot put: The senior, headed to Northwood Institute on a basketball scholarship, ranked second in the area in both the shot put (37 feet) and discus (122-0).

Lewis took first in the Wolverine A League in the shot put and was second in the discus at the league and regional. She also ran on the league champion 400-meter relay squad.

Jessann Martin, Stevenson, discus: Martin ranked No. 1 in the area in both the shot put (38-3) and discus (125-5), both school records.

The senior finished third in the state in the discus and was a regional champion in the shot put. She captured both events at the Western Lakes meet.

"Jessann's success in the throwing events is the result of four years of work," said Stevenson coach Paul Holmberg. "She worked hard to improve and has steadily done so. She has not fully reached her potential. She could become a great collegiate athlete."

Tracey Livermore, Salem, long jump: Her best led for No. 1 in the area with a leap of 16-11 1/2. The junior captain jumped over 18-10 four times and took the WLA meet for the second straight year with a jump of 16-7 1/2.

Livermore was also a member of Salem's WLA meet champion 400 and 800 relays.

"She combines athletic talent with a mature attitude and the result is a super example for her peers," said Salem coach

Miller hopes to follow dad's lead into pros

FOR THE FIRST time in his 22 years, Pat Miller will not be around to celebrate Father's Day with his dad. But his absence has merit. Indeed, Pat would be the first to say he's where he is today — which is just outside Phoenix — because of his father.

And his father, Bob Miller (of Redford), could not have asked for a better Father's Day gift.

Bob, you see, coaches baseball. He has coached baseball for 26 years at the University of Detroit, and he has 660 collegiate victories to his credit.

The Titans' ace this past season happened to be Pat. He had a 6-4 record with a 2.63 earned run average, allowing opponents to hit a miserly .219 against him. He was first-team all-Midwestern Collegiate Conference and became the first Titan in his father's 26 years of coaching at U-D to be named to the all-NCAA Midwest Region team.

Pat was also drafted by the Milwaukee Brewers last week in the 19th round.

THAT'S WHY he's in Phoenix, at the Brewers' rookie camp. Next week he'll depart for Helena, Mont., to play Class A ball for the rest of the summer.

It's the start of what could be a pro career, one that just might match his father's.

Bob Miller pitched for 10 seasons in the pros, most of them with the Philadelphia Phillies. He was one of the Phillies' Whiz Kids of 1950, going 11-6 on a team that won the National League pennant.

To have his son follow in his footsteps is like a dream come true.

"I'm so excited about that," said Bob. And how about his son's making it big time, to play in the major leagues? "That would be every father's wish, no doubt about it."

It could happen. Already Pat has survived career-threatening challenges, both physical and mental.

C.J. Risak

HE WAS a standout at Redford Union. Before his senior season at RU, his fastball was clocked in the mid-80s. But then...

"It was in our opener my senior year against Livonia Stevenson," Pat recalled, "and there was still snow on the ground. I heard something pop in my arm twice. I kept pitching, but after that my arm was bad. It was like that my first two years of college."

His injury made an already difficult situation much worse. Pat had been recruited by his father to play at U-D. His dad signed him because he figured he had the ability, but Pat could never really display it; as a sophomore, he was 3-2 with a 7.13 ERA.

"In the beginning, it was really hard," admitted Pat. "So many players thought I was on the team because of my dad. They thought I didn't have the talent to play Division I ball, and they told me so."

His dad knew what his son was going through. "There was pressure on him his freshman season from a lot of seniors who said the only reason he was there was because of his old man," said Bob. "I was thinking about clipping some of the newspaper articles from this year and sending them to those loudmouths."

WHEN IT became obvious Pat couldn't pitch with the pain any longer, he and his dad took several trips to different doctors. The diagnosis was the same: bone chips and bone spurs in his elbow, requiring surgery. "I didn't think I would pitch again," said Pat. "I was not at all sure."

But the surgery went extremely well. Pat didn't just regain his form, he surpassed it. "My elbow's never hurt me since," he said. He was 6-1 as a junior with a 3.75 ERA.

As a sophomore, Pat's velocity had dropped to 81-82 mph; last season, he was clocked at 90-91 mph. "I can throw my fastball by people when I need to," he said.

But, like dad, he doesn't rely on smoke. Bob cajoled a sinkerball and good control into a pro career; his son plans something similar. Pat's best pitch is his slider. He also allowed just 20 walks in 85 1/3 innings.

"I think he throws a lot better than I did," said Bob. In his first year of pro ball, at Terre Haute, Bob pitched 255 innings and walked just 50. That, he claims, is what got him to the majors. "Pat's that kind of pitcher," said Bob.

PAT'S ALSO the kind of son who eagerly accepts his father's advice. Considering the source, that's sound thinking.

"All the stuff my dad taught me is coming through now," said Pat. "I still talk to him on the phone almost every day, and he always has advice for me. But I always need his advice."

"It was tough having a dad as a coach, but it was a benefit, too. It gave me a lot of confidence."

His dad shares his son's confidence in seeking a pro career. And, although there's no doubt he's at least a bit biased, Bob was, after all, a pro player; he should be able to recognize a major league prospect.

"He's got a chance," Bob said. "He throws strikes and keeps the ball downstairs, which is what the pros like. I think he's got a damn good chance."

So Pat's absence this Father's Day is easily forgiven ("This is the first time in my life I've been away from home this long without my parents," said Pat), but it's not forgotten.

"I miss him," said Bob. "It's been quiet around the old homestead."

Bob's also very proud of his son. And his son feels the same way about his dad.

Greg Haeger
Tiger signee

University of Michigan baseball standout Greg Haeger has chosen to forgo his senior season at Michigan and sign a contract to play professional baseball with the Detroit Tigers.

The former Redford Catholic Central star was selected in the 21st round of last Tuesday's amateur draft.

The highly touted Haeger was picked in the 33rd round by the Tigers coming out of high school, but chose to attend Michigan.

Haeger, a pitcher and first baseman, hit .213 for the Wolverines last season. His pitching record was 2-0.

As a freshman, Haeger hit .272 and as a sophomore he had a .292 average.

Haeger's 1987 CC team won the state championship. That season, the Livonian had a 9-4 pitching record with a 2.00 earned run average.

The 6-foot-2, 175-pound Haeger was also a member of the 1987 United States Junior Olympic Team.

Duffy's dumps Walter's

Duffy's ran its win streak to three and ended Walter's Home Appliance victory roll at the same number with an 11-2 pasting Monday in a Livonia Collegiate Baseball League game at Ford Field.

Mike Kaczmarek struck out eight and got the win for Duffy's, now 4-3. Todd Fracassi's three-run homer was the big blow for the winners; Mike Siwajek added three hits, with Rob Puckett and Fracassi getting two each.

On Sunday, Duffy's swept Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury 10-1 and 6-2 at Ford. David Jones was the winner in the opener, hurling a four-hitter. Brian Paupore took the loss. Brent Haywood led Duffy's attack, going 4-for-4. Fracassi added two hits.

In the second game, Kaczmarek, Haywood, Steve Michelz and Matt Scalf collected two hits apiece to support the combined pitching efforts of John Scheffa and Doug McGregor, who allowed just three hits. Scheffa was the winner, in relief. Geoff Allen absorbed the defeat.

WALTER'S DEFEATED Little Caesars 10-5 Friday, then swept Tom Holzer Ford 7-5 and 13-3 on Sunday, all at Ford.

Dave Houghtby was the winning pitcher in Friday's game, hurling 4 1/2 innings and striking out five while walking just one.

Damian Hull sparked the Walter's offense with three hits and two RBI. Jerry Koester chipped in two hits.

On Sunday, Kevin Walker earned the victory in the first game, pitching four innings and striking out one. Ken Droplewski had a two-run single and three RBI for the winners.

In the second game, Steve Owens was the winning pitcher. He chalked up eight strikeouts.

Walter's pounded 12 hits in the game, three of which came from Hull. Jay Gabel of Livonia Churchill added a three-run homer and four RBI, and former Redford Catholic Central star John Gotts and Koester each contributed two hits.

LITTLE CAESARS had the hitting but not the pitching Sunday as Wendy's of Ann Arbor swept a double-header at Washtenaw Community College, 8-2 and 8-5.

In the first game, Omar Ahart suffered the loss, pitching seven innings and allowing four walks and seven hits.

Caesars collected seven hits, two of which came off the bat of Joe Brusseau.

In the second game, Caesars starter Mike Boyd lasted just one-third of an inning, giving up six walks and six runs.

Caesars outbit Wendy's 8-5 in the nightcap, thanks to three hits by Ahart.

TOTAL TRAVEL Values improved its record to 7-4 overall and 3-3 in the LCBL Friday with a 2-1 win over Tom Holzer Ford at Novi.

Darren Clark earned the victory in relief, hurling 3 1/2 innings, striking out two and walking two.

Jack Herberholz collected two hits for Total Travel, both of which were doubles. He scored the winning run in the fifth. Fred Higgins added two hits, including the game-winning single that scored Herberholz.

Shamrocks crown King

Redford Catholic Central took care of some unfinished business Tuesday, whipping Detroit Martin Luther King for the Operation-Friendship baseball crown, 12-1, in a game played at the University of Detroit's Campbell Field.

The Catholic League champions, rebounding from a district playoff defeat last week by Farmington, finished the year with a 24-10 overall record.
King, the Public School League champions, never mounted a serious threat, committing eight errors in a five-inning, mercy rule shortened game.

Winning pitcher Keith Bozyk ran his record to 7-2 with a one-hitter. He struck out eight and walked only three. He yielded his only hit with two-out in the fifth when Don Smith tripled. (He later scored on a wild pitch).

"Keith pitched his best game of the year," said CC coach John Salter.

CC collected nine hits with Joe Mussat and Brett Welling contributing two each.

Kevin Wheeler, Mussat and Welling each knocked in two runs. Mussat scored three and Paul Pirronello had CC's only extra base hit, a triple.

Men's soccer coach fills huge appetite

By C.J. Rieak
staff writer

Several key players will be missing from Schoolcraft College's men's soccer lineup this fall. Guys like Chris Speen, Brian Thomas and Rick Menary are gone; so are both keepers, Jeff Shuk and Brad Burgess.

All told, coach Van Dimitriou will have to replace nearly 50 percent of his roster, which — at least initially — would make the Ocelots' prospects of repeating as Region 12 champions seem rather slim.

Not so, insists Dimitriou. His reasoning requires little research: He simply believes the new recruits will more than offset the losses.

In fact, Dimitriou is so confident, he made this prediction: "With the kids we have coming back and the kids we have coming in, we should challenge for the league title."

"I'm even going to have to go out on a limb and say we'll repeat. We'll win the region and try to make it to (the National Junior College Athletic Association) nationals. That's our goal for this season."

CONSIDERING SC has made it past the NJCAA Inter-regional round of play just once in its history, that's a tall order. But Dimitriou is convinced his new recruits can carry the Ocelots to that goal.

Goal — a significant term for any soccer team. With much of the defense and midfield returning, SC has a nucleus to build around. So Dimitriou concentrated his recruiting efforts on offense and in finding a keeper; of the 10 players signed, six are forwards or offensive-minded midfielders, and two are keepers.

The following is a brief look at each of the new Ocelots:

• Chris Crawford, forward-midfielder, Walled Lake Western. All-Western Lakes Activities Association Western Division. "He gave his team some recognition. He's very polished for a kid who comes from an area not known for soccer. He has an outstanding attitude; he's hard-nosed, he wants to win and he goes all-out." Dimitriou envisions Crawford as a midfielder.

• LaJuand Grigsby, forward-midfielder, Flint Powers. First team Big Nine Conference, honorable mention all-state. Scored 18 goals and had 10 assists. "We're going to play him at forward because I don't think anyone can stay with him. He was jumping three feet over everybody on head balls when I saw him. He's going to be taking a lot of pressure off (returning forward Khaled Zeldan)."

• Phil Todino, midfielder-forward, Livonia Churchill. Second team all-state, all-WLAA, all-sectional. "He's very agile and a durable performer. He's a spark plug. He really came on last year and was the leader of that team, no question about it."

• Shane Millner, forward, Livonia Stevenson. All-WLAA, honorable mention all-sectional. "He's a big boy (6-foot-2, 170), a strong kid, and a good athlete. He's the kind we can use on specialty situations, like throw-ins. He's quick and strong for his size, and should complement our other (smaller) forwards well."

• Shawn Mac, defender, Plymouth Canton. "He's a pretty steady kid. He's an outside back; I think that's the only position he could fit in at right now. His attitude is very good, his physical attributes are very good. With a little coaching, he could develop. He's a real hard-nosed kid."

• Bob Hayes, midfielder, Livonia Franklin. All-Western Division. "He was the main player on their team; that's good. It tells me he could play and contribute for us. He's got good tools. He's the kind of kid we could use at an outside midfield position."

• Edward Dzyngel, midfielder, Farmington Harrison. Team MVP. "Again, he was the best player on their team for the last two years. I like him at midfield. He's solid."

• Jeff VanDemergle, forward-midfielder, Brighton. All-Kensington Valley, second team all-state. Had 19 goals and 14 assists. "He's a strong right-footed player. We might use him at midfield because he's not as quick as our other forwards. He uses his head, he's an intelligent kid. And he has a very good shot; I'm impressed with that."

• Scott Hauman, goalie, South Lyon. All-Kensington Valley first team twice. "He's the No. 1 man to beat right now. He's excellent in one-on-one situations and has that typical take-charge attitude."

• Tom Cventanovski, goalie, Sterling Heights. "He'll have to lose 15 or 20 pounds (he's 5-11, 200) if he's going to play. But for a big kid he really moves. He's got good keeper quickness and good hands."

The talent, Dimitriou is convinced, is in place to surpass last season's 13-3-2 team. Whether the new Ocelots blend well enough with the returnees — Dave Dinglie, Jeff Saylor, T.J. Flowers, John Cortese, Jerry Staszal and Zeldan — to bring his prediction to reality is something else again.

All-Observer members: State caliber

Quick pace for '90 team

Mark Gregor. "Tracey is a great competitor who strives to be the best in her events."

Rebecca Willey, Ladywood, high jump: A junior, Willey set a Catholic League record with an area best jump of 5'6". She is a three-time Catholic League champ.

Willey also holds the school record in the shot put (35-3).

"Rebecca works very hard and competes in three sports — basketball (first-team All-Area) volleyball and track — which is a limiting factor to her potential," said coach Tom Coram.

Willey is also carries a 3.45 grade point average.

RUNNING EVENTS

Jennifer Harris, Salem, 100-meter hurdles: The top scorer in Plymouth Salem track history, Harris was clocked in 15.1, tied for No. 1 in Observerland.

In the WLAA, Harris won the high jump, 100 hurdles and finished second in the 300 hurdles.

She finished fourth in the state in the high jump and won the Stafford, Spartan, Lady Chiefs and Tiger relays.

A state qualifier in cross country, Harris may wind up as a pentathlete, perhaps in the Mid-American Conference.

Lisa Christensen, Stevenson, 300 hurdles: The senior led the area in the 300 hurdles with a best time of 47.3. Christensen went undefeated in dual meets and won the WLAA in the 300.

She also holds the school record in the 100 hurdles with a time of 15.1.

Christensen was a state qualifier in both events. She is also Stevenson's all-time leading scorer with over 500 points in two years.

"Lisa is the most versatile girl I've ever coached," said Holmberg. "In addition to hurdling, she ran the 100, 200, 400 and 800. She worked extremely hard and was incredibly durable. In four years she didn't miss a meet or a practice due to injury, and she ran four events in nearly every meet. It will take two good athletes to replace her."

Yolanda Jackson, Salem, 100 dash: Only a freshman, Jackson led the area in the 100 with a time of 12.2. She won the WLAA meet in that event, went unbeaten in dual meets and was Tiger Relays champion.

She finished second at the regional and was the anchor leg on Salem's first-place 400 and 800 WLAA relay teams. In the high jump, Jackson reached 5-4, tying for first in the regional and third in the WLAA. She was also clocked at 26.8 in the 200 dash.

"Her athletic ability is staggering," said Gregor. "Her pleasant personality quickly changes to aggressive competitor when it's time to run or jump. A year of experience and improved work habits will take her to the next step toward elite status as a state-caliber sprinter and high jumper."

Jackson, who carries a 3.5 GPA, was also a starter on the Salem basketball team.

Shannon Capstick, W.L. Central, 200: A sophomore, Capstick ranked first in the area in the 200 with a school-record time of 26.3, set at the WLAA meet.

As a long jumper, the Walled Lake standout took second in the WLAA and ninth in Class A (16-7½).

"Shannon has all the traits a coach looks for — speed, strength, endurance, mental toughness and determination," said Central coach Bill McCord. "Along with all that she's a tremendously upbeat individual, a great kid to have on your track team."

Erica Shepard, Borgess, 400: Another fabulous freshman, Shepard tied a 10-year-old school record in the 400 with an area-best time of 58.6.

Shepard took second in the Catholic League and regional, and finished third in the prestigious Operation-Friendship meet. She also anchored the Spartans' top-ranking 800 and 1,600 relay teams.

An All-Observer pick in cross country, Shepard carries a 3.3 GPA.

"Erica is a gifted athlete," said Borgess coach John McGreevy. "She was also one of our team leaders, which is exceptional for being so young. Erica has a promising future."

Lauren Hood, Mercy, 800: The senior, headed for the University of Detroit, finished fourth in Class A with an area best clocking of 2:18.2.

Over the weekend, Hood was a member of the victorious Michigan squad, which captured the Midwest Meet of Champions' 3,200 relay.

Hood was the 800 champion at the Catholic League and Operation-Friendship meets. She also took second in the 800 at the regional and a fourth in the 400 at the Catholic League.

Her best day came at the Jackson Invitational, where she captured the 400 and 800 and anchored the winning 3,200 relay team. She also helped the Marlins to a second place finish in the 1,600 relay.

Jennifer Kiel, Farmington, 1,600: The senior holds school records in the 1,600 and 3,200 runs with area-best times of 5:14.0 and 11:22.0, respectively. She was a WLAA and regional champion in both events. She also broke the WLAA record in the 3,200 run.

Kiel was a member of the All-Area cross country team last fall.

Jennifer Ray, W.L. Western, 3,200: Ray shadowed Kiel much of the season, finishing second to her in the WLAA meet and one place behind the Farmington standout in the state meet.

Ray's best time this season in the 3,200 was 11:22.9.

She was also a member of the All-Area cross country team.

"Jennifer is an intense competitor and she is a pleasure to have on a team because her competitive spirit transfers to others," said Walled Lake coach Ed Roselle.

ence Pugh): The Spartans' foursome led the area with a time of 1:46.5, finishing second at the regional and Catholic League, along with thirds at both Operation-Friendship and state Class B.

"Florence is the hardest worker on the team," McGreevy said. "She's quiet, but leads by example."

Sears, a freshman, ran the 200, 400 and three different relay events.

"Chaquese improved consistently throughout the season," McGreevy said. "She is a joy to coach."

Bishop Borgess, 800 (Erica Shepard, Angie Hollis, Chaquese Sears and Florence Pugh): This quartet finished first at the Lady Chiefs, second in the Catholic League and Lansing Waverly Invitational, third at Algonac, fourth at Operation-Friendship and eighth in Class B.

Borgess's best clocking was 51.7.

Prostell, the only senior, competed in track for the first time and "her contributions were tremendous," according to McGreevy.

Bishop Borgess, 400 (Stacie Prostell, Angie Hollis, Chaquese Sears and Florence Pugh): This quartet finished first at the Lady Chiefs, second in the Catholic League and Lansing Waverly Invitational, third at Algonac, fourth at Operation-Friendship and eighth in Class B.

Borgess's best clocking was 51.7.

'Kip Synatra' is their claim to fame

By Mary Jane Doerr
special writer

THE NEW MUSICAL "Kip Synatra's Mobile Musical (A Memorial)" is a moving tribute to the greatest undiscovered songwriter of the last four decades.

No one has ever heard of Kip Synatra, but then composer Gerald V. Castle of Harper Woods and playwright-lyricist Michael C. Vigilant of Auburn Hills are not famous either — at least not yet. Castle and Vigilant want that to change.

The two men are seated casually around the director's table, beneath the newly renovated stage at the Birmingham Village Players playhouse, where their newly created musical is being fully mounted for the first time, opening Friday, June 22. The articulate Vigilant says, "We are obsessed with making a success out of our songwriting team." His creative partners, Gerry Castle, and Castle's brother Dan, a Troy resident, who is director of the show, are just as fervent.

A land surveyor by day, a graduate journalist by choice, Vigilant has teamed with Blue Cross employee Gerry Castle since 1982. Together they have produced "Foiled Again! Two Musical Melodramas" published by Samuel French Inc.

"WOULD YOU BELIEVE . . . A Stable" and "The Little Star: A Christmas Fantasy" are due for publication by Contemporary Drama Service this year. Tim Kelly, the most published playwright in America, has hired the team to set to music his farce "Phantom of the Op'ry."

"Kip" is one of only eight musicals listed in the Samuel French international catalog this year out of 2,000 submissions.

The idea of "Kip" germinated in Vigilant's mind as a magazine article. Dan Castle jokingly calls it the product of Mike and Gerry's adolescent minds and warped alter egos. "It is a metaphor for the baby boomer generation."

Kip's musical journey starts in the 1950s. In an airstream trailer (created by set designer Jim Balmer), Kip travels with his bands, the Wetsports, the Gnat Pack, Francisco Bizzarro, the Lost Conquistadors, and the Band of Itinerants. His therapist, his first date, his three ex-wives and his parents tell his story.

The 12 actors never leave the stage as they travel across America, make a sea-sickening journey to Africa and a disappointing trip to Hawaii, and choreograph a nuclear holocaust for the half time show of the 50th annual Orange Bowl. Kip's left-of-center attempts to hit the big time never quite succeed.

"HE IS ALWAYS a step behind, never quite in synch," adds the quiet Gerry Castle. On stage in the musical, Castle is literally the leader of the band, the guitarist.

Musically, the show runs the gamut of American pop music — rock, big band, swing, rap, folk, punk-a-billy, calypso and show tunes. "As children we all hated disco so we left it out," said Dan Castle.

Gerry Castle has composed 19 tuneful pieces that are not easily forgotten. The melodies can stand alone as do Vigilant's lyrics, but Castle's accented musical style promotes Vigilant's clever wit in such songs as "You Can't Stick to a Girl with a Chris Gerback (left), Tim Reinman and Marjorie Gluckman rehearse scene for "Kip Synatra's Mobile Musical." The show has been added to the 1989-90 season as a fund-raiser to benefit the Birmingham Village Players Building Fund. Performances will be at 8:30 p.m. Friday-Saturday, June 22-23, 29-30 (tickets $8). In place of the customary preview night show, the musical will be presented Wednesday, June 20, as a benefit for the Attic Theatre (tickets $15). For ticket information call 644-2075.

Mike Vigilant (left) wrote the book and lyrics and Jerry Castle the music for "Kip Synatra's Mobile Musical (A Memorial)," which will be staged for the first time at the Birmingham Village Players.

Teflon-Coated Heart," "Opposites Attack" and "Fetal Position."

Most striking is the mini-musical which takes place in Act II. Vigilant describes it as a "touched view of marital destruction." Cindy Pritchard and Ed Guay's powerful voices and emotional interpretations drive home the love story about a couple who fall in love ("Infatuated" and "Doomed"), marry ("A Lifetime from Now") and divorce in about 20 minutes. Joey Johnson as the child follows with a terribly sad "Weekend Dad and Part-Time Mother."

Gerry Castle studied music theory with well-known composer James Hartway at Wayne State University in Detroit. He writes evenly for the voice, keeping the music in the middle ranges for belting and puts his ensemble of four (bass, keyboards, drums and guitar) on the stage for obvious balance and rhythm.

"HOW DO YOU stage a new show? Obviously, you can't rent a video at Blockbuster and go home and watch it on TV," said Dan Castle. (After this production Samuel French will have a video available.)

The inventive-actor/director Dan Castle has taken his freedom experimentally. A human petting zoo will be in the lobby, with characters from the show in the boxes, as the audience arrives. Costumes in the show, he said, are a cross between those of "Madame Butterfly" and "Godspell" and fly in and out of the sky to be donned by the actors. The curtain is never used. Styrofoam vegetables have been created for the song "I Hate Peas, Lima Beans and Cream Corn." Four slide shows provide a travelogue.

"For security reasons I can't tell you why the piece is called a mobile or give away the surprise ending," said Dan Castle. (Vigilant is part of the action when the secret is revealed.)

The show is co-produced by Lindsay Balmer and Bill Haycock. Village Players member Helen Balmer, who is the wife of the set director, Jim Balmer, and mother of Lindsay Balmer, couldn't help but add, "This team is going to be famous. I just feel it. The show is beautiful."

Indian Villagers reversed 'burbs trend

By Joan Boram
special writer

This the first of three stories on houses in Indian Village and the lifestyles of the people who live in them. The 11th annual Indian Village Home and Garden Tour is scheduled for Saturday. For information, call 499-0537.

A couple of decades ago it was predicted that early in the 21st century, the boundaries of Detroit, Chicago, and Cleveland would expand and merge into a "Megalopolis."

It's 1990, and metropolitan Detroit is inching toward Ann Arbor. Ann Arbor, in turn, is creeping up on Gary, Ind. It looks like Megalopolis is just around the corner.

No wonder, then, in the face of such dramatic expansion, that a slow, steady movement back into cities has been almost unnoticed.

"When a man is tired of London he is tired of life," Dr. Samuel Johnson said in the 18th century. It could have been said of any major city at any time in history, and Americans today are relearning the truth of Johnson's aphorism.

In keeping with a national trend, downtown Detroit is attracting new residential construction. Along the waterfront, several fine old buildings have been converted to residential use.

And older, established neighborhoods such as Corktown, Palmer Woods and Indian Village are luring suburban families who appreciate the quality of the architecture and the convenience of living near the city's cultural institutions and, often, near work.

WHILE DETROIT, like other cities, has had its ups and downs, Indian Village has remained a vibrant community of 350 stylish old homes. Thanks to the efforts of dedicated Villagers and significant residential architecture by Albert Kahn, George D. Mason, William B. Stratton and others, the neighborhood was entered in the National Register of Historic Places in 1972. The Village has also been entered as a state and city historic district.

When Pat and Henry Stallings II bought their house on Iroquois, they thought they knew what they were getting into. They had restored a house in the West Village when they moved to Detroit from Birmingham.

Then, in 1983, they bought the 4,000-square-foot house on Iroquois that they live in today. Built in 1917 for Armin Rickel, president of the H.W. Rickel Malt Company, the house is a hybrid of design. Rickel took out the building permit himself, so the architect is unknown.

"The house had been empty for two years," said Stallings, "and the heat and plumbing had been shut off. We knew that it needed work, but we never thought it would be 1½ years before we could move in."

THE WOODWORK, including the wainscoting leading up the imposing staircase in the front hall, had been painted and needed to be stripped. The mantle had been painted and needed to be stripped. The pewter sconces in the living room and dining room had been painted and needed to be stripped. The floors needed to be refinished. Sixty percent of the house needed re-plastering. And it needed new wiring and new plumbing.

"There was no grass in the back yard. We took out 380 bags of leaves," Stallings said, adding that he is still aghast at that.

"We thought we could do the stripping ourselves," said his wife, a systems consultant for AT&T. "Henry was with the First Independence National Bank then. We'd come home, eat, change clothes and get to work."

It didn't take long for reality to set in. Eventually the Stallings had crews on two shifts working to make the seven-bedroom home livable. "We were just going to strip the woodwork on the first floor and in the upstairs hallways," she said. "But one of the workmen didn't understand and he started on one of the bedrooms. So we wound up stripping the whole house. We finally moved in May, 1985."

TODAY, the Stallings and their daughters, Nichole, 4½, and Jennifer, 2½, are giving new life to an old house. There is a tank of helium in the hall, used to provide balloons for the girls' birthday parties and a Christmas ornament still hangs from the chandelier in the entrance hall. The lawn and flower gardens are Stallings' pride and joy and there are plans to install a covered 20-by-32-foot swimming pool along the back of the house. The house was featured on the 1988 Indian Village house and garden tour.

Stallings has traveled extensively and his collection of native arts and crafts enhances the house's period charm.

A fine assortment of masks from China, Ghana, Nigeria, the Ivory Coast and Fuji is installed in the wainscoting's panels. Egyptian masks and vases from China grace the dignified mantle. The cozy, pickled oak library, with its heavy ceiling beams, is alive with photos of family and friends.

Why did they do it? Why would anybody leave a fine home in the suburbs and take on the grief, to say nothing of the expense, of restoring an older home?

The woodwork and wainscoting in the hall and along the stairway were stripped and redone. Some masks which Henry Stallings collected are mounted along the stairs.

Maestro claims Detroit done him wrong

By Avigdor Zoromp
special writer

Gunther Herbig experienced many ups and downs during his six years here as music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. It was the downs that prompted him to accept the position as music director of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. His final week here followed a world tour with the Toronto Symphony.

Strikes or work stoppages (depending on which side is using the terms) clouded both ends of his time here. The first took place in 1982 when he was scheduled to make his debut here as guest conductor. The rehearsals were held, but the performance was canceled because of the strike.

The issue was the so-called "conductor clause," a provision in the contract that gave the musicians a voice in the selection of the music director. Management was attempting to rescind it. The clause survived and Herbig was the first beneficiary of it when he was chosen for the post following his 1983 debut at the Meadow Brook Festival.

A work stoppage occurred again at the beginning of the 1987-88 season and it resulted in a major overhaul of the management staff. Herbig announced his resignation the following season, but stayed on to fulfill the balance of this three-year contract.

MAJOR EVENTS DURING HERBIG'S six years were the hiring of a new concertmaster, establishment of the Detroit Symphony Chorus, the permanent move from Ford Auditorium to Orchestra Hall and the European tour in January 1989.

In the final phase of his tenure here, Herbig seemed much less concerned about being diplomatic that he was when he first arrived. As he spoke about his experiences here, he said, "When I was still in (East) Berlin, I talked to Dorati (music director 1977-81) who warned me about Detroit and its problems. I disregarded his advice and now I feel that this was a mistake."

He cited the problems leading to the labor disputes and the failure of the previous administration to live up to its contractual agreements as some of the reasons for his frustrations. "... They promised me all kinds of things — recording contracts, international tours, hiring enough musicians to get a 105-member orchestra and more. But, there was never enough money for any of it with the exception of the European tour which was a great success."

"These problems were brought about by a most insensitive city administration which doesn't care at all about the cultural life of this city. Nobody among the leadership of this city has ever been seen at these concerts with the exception of one occasion in which somebody came and walked out."

The last remark was a reference to something that happened before he came here. Mayor Coleman Young addressed the audience at a sold-out concert at Ford Auditorium featuring the orchestra with Itzhak Perlman, violinist, as the soloist. There was a championship boxing match at Cobo Hall at the same time. Young expressed sympathy for those who were "stuck" with the musical event and couldn't get to see the fight where he was headed. I remember it well, I was at the concert."

Gunther Herbig has said that even as a youngster studying a variety of instruments, his dream was always to be a conductor because he was interested in the "totality of a musical work."

ANOTHER THORNY ISSUE that strained the relationship between the Orchestra and some segments of the community was the Affirmative Action demand that the Orchestra hire more black musicians or risk losing state aid.

The Orchestra's answer was to waive the "blind audition" and hire black bass player, Richard Robinson, (who was unanimously endorsed by all members of the section).

Herbig said about this problem, "The only way to get enough qualified musicians, as well as potential younger audiences, is in exposing school students to more art and culture. Those who are not exposed to classical music at an early age are less likely to be attracted to it later on. This city, however, does not consider these things to be important. In fact, programs of art and music, which are already poorly funded, are among the first to be cut or eliminated whenever there is another financial pressure."

IN SPITE OF SOME recent positive changes, Herbig doesn't see an end to the major problems. "There is better attendance this season and the present administration of the Symphony is making sincere efforts in solving some of the major problems. However, we are not out of the woods yet and there will probably be some more serious problems down the road." (This statement was made before Deborah Borda, executive director, announced her resignation.)

He added, "This is a very fine orchestra — among the very best. We also have a sophisticated and supportive audience, but, unfortunately, this may not prove to be sufficient. The future of such a great orchestra depends on large support and financial commitments. A small number ... even with the best intentions, may not be enough."

Would he have done things differently if he could have foreseen the future? "Yes, there is one thing that I would have definitely done differently — I would have never come to Detroit."

Yet, there was an occasional conciliatory note. The Herbig's will retain their Bloomfield Hills home which they hope to visit from time to time. Thus, he plans to keep in touch after his departure. "You will probably see me at some of the concerts as a listener, provided, of course, they will be willing to give me complimentary," he added with a touch of humor that had more serious undertones.

Concert-goers cite Herbig for dedicated leadership

By Isabelle Smith
special writer

Detroit Symphony Orchestra music director Gunther Herbig ended his Detroit career June 2 as he began it six years before — to the strains of Beethoven and in a spirit of hope and good feeling.

TV crews and an SRO audience began arriving more than an hour before the concert — a gaggle of teens, large parties of young professionals, groups of well-known urban and suburban powers-that-be, a plethora of senior citizens — to wish farewell and God speed to the German-born maestro who led the orchestra safely through some of its most perilous years.

The prevailing feeling was almost universally expressed in terms of gratitude, even affection, both for the man and the musician. Words and phrases such as "honest," "dedicated," "a stabilizing force," "intelligent and disciplined," "a man of courtesy and honor" were used repeatedly as this reporter approached concert-goers throughout the hall.

American Symphony Orchestra League board member Marcella Wiltshire said, "Herbig was very dedicated to this orchestra. He inherited a vastly talented but floundering, divided group and turned it into a finely tuned instrument."

Betty Gerisch of Bloomfield Hills, long active in DSO affairs, spoke of Herbig's "warmth and charm," saying, "Both Herbig and I became a part of the community. The maestro brought the DSO (which had been leaderless for more than a year before he arrived) back to a world-class level. All of us who care about music — and the symphony — are in his debt."

• Symphony stalwart Gina Bedrosian was ecstatic about the sold-out house. "What a fantastic crowd. Detroit should be like this all the time. I'm truly sorry that he's leaving. He and Mrs. Herbig (concert pianist Jutta Czapski) are delightful people, and he has been a fine, dedicated conductor. I am grateful for the honest effort he made, in some very difficult circumstances, to keep the DSO world-class. We will miss him — even as we look forward to welcoming Neeme Jarvi."

• Former DSO board member Walter Murphy of Southfield (the spark plug behind the Dorati/DSO World Tour) praised Herbig as a "solid conductor. He's no Dorati, but his mark will remain. Under the toughest circumstances, he was a force for progress and stability. He may well be appreciated more in retrospect — as was Sixten Ehrhling. I think he will be a smash in Toronto."

• A young lawyer, who said he didn't find Herbig particularly "inspiring" conductor overall, insisted, nonetheless, in praising his championship of contemporary music. Herbig conducted three world premieres during his six years and programmed other previously unheard-in-Detroit post-1900 compositions. The lawyer praised his mastery of Mahler, Bruckner and Schumann, "a repertoire too often neglected before he came."

• A college music student standing nearby spoke glowingly of the maestro's founding of the Detroit Symphony Chorus and of his frequent use of it. "What a plus that has been."

• Birmingham Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra music director Felix Resnick, the DSO's assistant principal second violinist and most senior orchestra member, used phrases echoed by a number of his colleagues when he lauded Herbig as "a thorough, well-schooled musician, always carefully rehearsed. He did well with the DSO — played some good concerts and conducted a fine world tour. He is, above all, a civilized man and a sincere, dedicated musician."

Another instrumentalist thoughtfully described the departing conductor as "a man of control and understatement leading an orchestra of spontaneity and passion. We may not always have meshed well, but he kept us technically fit. We respect and like him."

THE "GRATITUDE, respect and liking" were much in evidence June 2. Orchestra, chorus and soloists radiated high-voltage intensity as they went to do the departing maestro's will. The artistic electricity crackled throughout Orchestra Hall, and the musical results fittingly bore the hallmarks of Herbig's leadership — precision, control, clarity and cohesion — as well as a strong sense of dynamic contrast and musical form. There were also moments of real, heart-grabbing poetry and power.

Although the Orchestra Hall windows already displayed posters of Neeme Jarvi and big banners proclaimed "A New Spirit, A New Season, A New Look," this night still belonged to Gunther Herbig. Both musicians and audience made that clear.

Q: I've been saving a long time to buy a well-appointed 42-foot cruiser. My brother-in-law and I plan on using it a lot, and our wives will occasionally join us. This is where the problem arises: My wife and I can't agree on which of the four color options to choose for the interior that the manufacturer is offering. I like the blue, silver-grey and white interior — that incidentally coordinates with exterior accent colors. It's my idea of a suitable color for a boat. My wife wants the deep burgundy, rose and white, which also includes the silver-grey accents. She says this combination is more in keeping with fashionable colors and will make the interior look more elegant. Am I making a mistake insisting on the blue option? The other two colors in the line are a blue-green and a bright yellow that don't interest either of us. I expect to keep this cruiser a long time. Can you help in making a decision?

A: It sounds as if your long-awaited dream boat is about to be scuttled by a color trend — and a passing one at that — unless you stand up for your decision. This advice won't minimize your wife's right to her color preferences, but is intended to focus the decision around the more important idea of suitability.

all about color

Considering you have a greater emotional investment in the boat and will be using it more frequently than your wife, your color preference should prevail. This is all the more so because your color preference connects up with the powerful idea or image of what a boat should look like. It's certainly shared by a very broad consensus, because blue remains the number one selling color for boat interiors.

Not for a moment am I suggesting you adhere to a consensus or reject new colors because of their unfamiliarity. As a matter of fact, I commend boat manufacturers for their efforts in expanding color options. Some of their newer introductions look fresh and inviting, yet remain very nautical because they fit into a very fundamental idea of what a boat should look like. Unsuitable colors are those that try to imitate something foreign to a boat, like an automobile or a trendy color with a deliberate appeal to romanticism or a historic tradition.

Your wife's preference for burgundy and rose is just such a color combination — it's been fashionable for some time now and is gradually losing its popularity in both home furnishings and apparel. It will linger on for some time because it is so basic to home furnishings. But I'm not so sure this combination will serve you well even on a 42-foot boat. Dark coloring, such as burgundy, requires a much larger scale, something on the order of an 80 or 100 foot yacht, with its room-sized staterooms, regular, free-standing furniture and elegant accessories. Only then can you achieve elegance. Putting burgundies into a smaller space will provide a closed-in look. Inevitably, you'll both get tired of the effect.

Basic blue, on the other hand can eventually be modified with new colored accessories and carpeting. For now, reserve the pink and a touch of burgundy for the forward stateroom's bed sheets and pillowcases.

Q: I buy a lot of my husband's clothes and have done so for years. Now that his hair is turning gray, I'm not sure if some of the usual khaki and tan colors look as good on him as when he had a dark brown head of hair. I've thought of applying the seasonal color approach to complement his coloring, which is very balanced, but wasn't sure the same principles apply to men as they do to women. Give me some of your ideas.

A: The so-called seasonal approach of enhancing women's appearance by complementing their cool or warm coloring with cosmetics or apparel doesn't entirely apply to men. This is because of a social convention that requires men not appear too "colorful," but more subdued and dignified instead.

In this instance you're right in recognizing how much the dull khaki and tan colors can deplete your husband's appearance and make him look older than he should. To compensate for the gray hair, I would introduce greater contrast in his clothing. One example would be shorts or pants in the putty shades currently being shown in stores and better catalogues.

Golden oldies make for good summer reading

By now, you've probably read several lists of what's au courant for summertime reading. I know I have. You can be sure that I look forward to these snippets of information every vacation season, hoping they'll put me onto something I haven't yet heard about that will make for worthwhile reading during my favorite time of the year — and they almost always do.

For this week's column, however, I thought I'd put together a slightly different kind of list. After a recent afternoon at my favorite library, and a look at my own bookshelves, I found a dozen "golden oldies" that aren't on any current publishing lists but which definitely make for fascinating reading nonetheless. What's more, you can get every one of them simply by handing over your library card. Also, most are in paperback and consequently make great traveling companions.

So if you're looking for a good read in the coming months, consider:

- "Diamonds Are Forever: Artists and Writers on Baseball" (1987). Contains essays, poems and random thoughts of American writers on "the thinking man's game." Supplemented generously with fine illustrations by noted artists. You can almost taste the hot dogs and hear the clatter of the Louisville Slugger as you settle back with this highly attractive book, edited by Peter Gordon, Sydney Waller and Paul Weinman.

- "A Kiss is Still a Kiss: Roger Ebert at the Movies" (1984). Film critic Ebert writes not of movies here, but of film stars. In his lively, conversational style, he records observations on such diverse personalities as Mel Brooks, John Wayne and David Bowie. There's even a brief chapter on Muhammad Ali. I'm not sure what it's doing in a book on film folks, but it's fun to read anyway.

- "Night Shift" (1976). In the opinion of a book columnist we all know and love, these lusciously terrifying short stories, written in the days before Stephen King became Stephen King, are far and away his best efforts ever.

- "Twice Over Lightly" (1972). Take an unusual tour of New York with actress Helen Hayes and writer Anita Loos. Pay a visit to Bellevue Hospital at night, take a cruise aboard one of New York's famous garbage scows, drop in on His Honor at Gracie Mansion, experience Thanksgiving at a Salvation Army center, explore the Lynne Palmer School of Astrology, the Atlas Barber School, a super-lively Puerto Rican market in Spanish Harlem and much more. Photos included.

- "Angle of Repose" (1971). If you're looking for something a little different, try this offbeat Western by Wallace Stegner. Stegner puts his emphasis on his unforgettable characters and not on a lot of shoot-'em-up, cowboys-and-Indians folderol.

- "Little Big Man" (1984). Told by the fictional Jack Crabb (who claims to be the only non-Indian survivor of Custer's Last Stand), this novel by Thomas Berger is another offbeat Western and makes for a sometimes funny, sometimes sad, always enthralling look at the Old West.

book break Victoria Diaz

- "I Sing the Body Electric" (1989). A terrific collection of 18 pleasantly bizarre short stories by Ray Bradbury. In "Tomorrow's Child," you can read about the unfortunate Peter Horn, who happens to be "the father of a small blue pyramid." In "The Tombing Day," Grandma Lobblin exhumes the body of her long-dead lover and makes an important discovery. And in Bradbury's popular title story, a motherless family is cared for by a practically perfect grandmother — so what if she isn't quite human. Bradbury at his best.

- "them" (1969). One of Joyce Carol Oates's most dramatic novels. Set in Detroit, it covers a period of almost 40 years, climaxing in the 1967 riots.

- "The Last Picture Show" (1966). Larry McMurtry's greatest gift is for capturing the essence of Texas in the 1950s. Nobody does it better. A hundred years from today, this sparsely written masterpiece is what McMurtry will be remembered for.

- "The Day of the Locust" (1939). Read of lost dreams and lost souls in Nathanael West's splendid evocation of 1930s Hollywood.

- "The Painted Word" (1975). Whether or not you agree with author Tom Wolfe's irreverent conclusions on modern art and its creators, you'll be entertained by this short book on the subject. The little man in the white suit takes on here such giants as Jasper Johns, Andy Warhol and Picasso as well as Fauvism, Cubism and Pop Art. Includes photos.

Idea showcase opens

What's new at the spring Homearama now through July 8 in Shelby Township?

Among other things, a cedar spa room with hot tub, a great room with a 17-foot ceiling, a master suite with a pyramid ceiling, a contemporary home with seven levels plus a trend toward libraries.

"Most people who come through Homearama have no intention of buying homes. They're borrowing ideas," said Peter Logan, a publicist for the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, the show's major sponsor.

Rochester builders James Rutkowski and Paul McGillivray are among 10 who constructed homes for public viewing in the Pheasant Run Subdivision.

McGillivray, president of Baypointe Homes, has built a 3,600-square-foot house with four bedrooms and 2½ baths designed by Russo/Bennett Associates.

"It's a nice, open floor plan," McGillivray said. "It gives you good living areas with an outside patio and a spa room right off the day room."

THE MASTER bedroom/bathroom suite is on the first floor, three other bedrooms upstairs.

The spa leads to the day room, which leads to the kitchen/snack bar, which in turn leads to the great room.

The great room has a fabricated fireplace, a 17-foot ceiling and a wet bar near the kitchen.

"One thing we did there was get away from decks," McGillivray said. "We feel that was something for the '80s. We feel patios and paver stones are a trend for the '90s."

The house, lot, fixtures, other decorative touches and landscaping carries a price tag of $369,000.

Rutkowski, president of Masterpiece Homes by James Joseph Enterprises, has designed and constructed a 3,300-square-foot house with four bedrooms and 2½ baths.

"IT'S A VERY adaptable floor plan," Rutkowski said, adding that he intends to mass produce the model.

The dining, media and family rooms can be oriented differently depending on the mood of the buyer.

The media room features a built-in surround-sound system and big screen TV. "Kids can have their Nintendo game in there or a home computer," Rutkowski said.

A circular staircase leads upstairs. The master bedroom suite is downstairs, the other three bedrooms up. A large study/den is just off the front entrance.

The house is priced at $349,000.

Perhaps the most unusual model in the show is The Belaire, a contemporary house of 3,000 square feet designed by Guy Caccamo and built by Frank Sgroi of Sterling Heights.

'One thing we did there was get away from decks. We feel that was something for the '80s. We feel patios and paver stones are a trend for the '90s.'

— Paul McGillivray

GOING FROM one level to another — there are seven in all — almost gives the impression of different levels on a cruise ship.

Skylights can be found in the master bedroom, solarium and kitchen. Southern windows in the family room, dining room and kitchen provide sunlight throughout the day.

Circular concrete steps rise to the front door of the house from the sidewalk.

"The Jacuzzi is right in the bedroom," Sgroi said. "You see that in Hollywood movies, in presidential suites, but you never see it in homes. To me, that's new and exciting."

"The kitchen is different. The cooking area is in an island, not up against the wall," he added.

The large basement is divided into several sections with high walls. One observer suggested that you could play handball there.

"I WANTED to try something that was totally different. It was a challenge," Sgroi said. His asking price is $365,000 to $375,000.

Interesting features provided by other participants include:

- A pyramid ceiling with chandelier in the master suite built by Dwight Parsley of Roseville.

- An open, high-ceiling design with loft and bridge overlooking the main floor built by George Lini of Lake Orion.

- The trend of several builders including Gaetano Rizzo of Mount Clemens, Anthony Chirco of Mount Clemens, Rutkowski and McGillivray to put libraries or studies in their models.

- An inlaid brick carving of a barn above the kitchen fireplace to carry out the country theme in the Weatherlane model by Gemcraft Homes of Mount Clemens.

The Pheasant Run subdivision is east of Schoenberr between 21 and 22 Mile roads.

Show hours are 9-11 p.m. weekdays, noon-11 p.m. weekends and holidays. Tickets are $5. Discount tickets at $4, good only Monday through Friday, are available at Detroit Edison and Standard Federal Bank branches.

A vote for the new classics

(AP) — While in the Midwest this spring, Lou Gropp, editor of Elle Decor Magazine, went furniture shopping. In a shop on an Indiana farmstead, he saw some furniture by Paul McCobb, an American designer active in the 1950s.

"There were three chests and several stacking pieces," he said, "and they were not cheap — the figure of $5,000 for the set sticks in my mind."

What greater proof, asked Gropp, that postwar modern American furniture designs are becoming classics? It's a positive sign, he said, since he regards the 1950s as one of the most creative in American design.

It was an era when designers such as McCobb, Charles Eames, Eero Saarinen, George Nelson and Harry Bertola were at their peak.

"Whenever Eames or Saarinen introduced a new piece, it was a major event."

MODERNISM IN furniture design and architecture has been getting a bad rap recently, but it still has a loyal following, especially among arbiters of taste such as Gropp, who put his stamp on House & Garden and other publications before joining Elle Decor.

Although Gropp is constantly exposed to the latest furniture designs at work, his personal acquisitions are carefully measured. When he and his wife, Jane, recently moved to a new apartment in New York City, they took with them some pieces they have owned for more than 30 years.

Most of their acquisitions are from the second half of the 20th century — furniture by individuals who today are icons of modern design.

GROPP SAID his love for modernism began when, as a recent college graduate, he managed to save $500 to furnish his first New York apartment. He wound up with two chairs and a bedroom dresser by Eames and a bench by Nelson.

Over the years, Gropp said, his respect for this furniture has grown, and he has slowly added more of the increasingly expensive pieces.

"I saved up for a long time to buy the leather Eames armchair and ottoman."

Two plywood dining chairs by Eames, which now sell for hundreds of dollars more than their original price, came his way for next to nothing.

He bid on one at auction. "Scared to death, I raised my hand and bid $5, and I got it."

Years later, he picked up the second chair from the streets of Manhattan.

"Someone who didn't realize what they had threw it out, and I rescued it."

THOUGH OF THE 20th century, the pieces are classics, said Gropp, who sees youth as no deterrent to timelessness. "There are many lovely things we fall in love with momentarily, but classics are those pieces that look as good today as when they were first introduced."

"A classic doesn't happen by accident, and it isn't about fashion. It takes a long time to develop and a good deal of experimentation, false starts and refinements."

A number of landmark pieces offer both new technology and design departures, he said. "Eames' molded chairs, which combined molded wood and new adhesives, rubber mounts and steel with great design, were a first which started a new range of designs."

'A classic doesn't happen by accident, and it isn't about fashion. It takes a long time to develop and a good deal of experimentation, false starts and refinements.'

Know architect and his roles

Before you approach an architect to develop plans for your dream house, think about your goals for the project, the Michigan Association of Home Builders advises.

What kind of design and materials do you envision? Does your budget match your aspirations?

While your architect will help you think your project through, you should have a general understanding of your goals and resources to help you select the architect who's best for you.

Look at parts of projects similar to yours that you especially like. What is it about them you find appealing?

CONTACT THE owner and ask which architect they selected and why. Names and addresses of architects are available from the Detroit chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Keep in mind that some architecture firms specialize. Interview several architects.

When talking to candidates, ask to see photographs of projects they have worked on that are comparable to yours in size and type.

Ask for names of owners you can contact. Ask to meet any other members of the design team who may be involved in the project.

You should walk away from your meeting knowing how the architect expects to work with you and other members of the team. What does the architect see as the most important issues or considerations?

Is his style and approach similar to yours? Do you feel good about the architect as a person? Is the "chemistry" right?

DON'T HESITATE to ask questions. Think of the architect as a professional who will bring experience and specialized knowledge to your project.

Once you've found an architect you feel comfortable working with, sit down and discuss exactly what services will be needed. Some owners bring their particular expertise to the owner-architect relationship; some will need step-by-step guidance.

Basic architectural services include: schematic design, design development, construction documents (working drawings, specifications and contract), bidding and negotiation (contractor selection), and construction contract administration.

BUT THE architect may be helpful in other ways such as providing financial feasibility studies, assisting in site selection and zoning applications, exploring energy-saving systems, providing landscape and interior design and helping you through the approval process required by many local jurisdictions.

The complexity of the project will often dictate the level of service supplied by the architect. The formal agreement between you and your architect — the owner-architect agreement — spells out what both you and the architect expect from the professional relationship. If you've agreed to a list of services and discussed the budget, the formal agreement should follow without difficulty. Be sure to show the agreement to your lawyer before signing.

HOW MUCH MONEY an architect receives depends on how much work he does — the more complex or experimental the project, the more you should budget for architectural services.

Architects are sometimes paid a percentage of the construction cost. Other times, they charge an hourly rate and can estimate the total hours required to complete your project.

IN TODAY'S JOB MARKET EMPLOYERS WANT MORE THAN THE SAME OLD B.S.

Every year, over a million new college graduates put on their new blue suits and go job hunting. All of them have degrees. Most of them have hearty handshakes. But very few have what employers want most — practical work experience. That's why there's a nationwide program called Cooperative Education. It allows students to alternate studies at the college of their choice with paid, practical work experience in the career of their choice. So Co-op Education students graduate with more than a degree. They have practical knowledge. And a competitive advantage in today's crowded job market. And that sure beats trying to B.S. your way into a job.

Co-op Education

You earn a future when you earn a degree.

Ignore whistles, bells

When it comes to product selection in a new home, nearly every new home buyer leaves all the decisions to the builder. But that doesn't mean you can't be educated about what goes in, on and around your new home and select the products with your builder, says Richard Binsacca, new products editor of Builder magazine.

Although many products installed in a speculative housing project are dictated by the type of buyer the builder hopes to attract, you should still be aware of the quality of the products relative to the price of the house. Almost all builders offer upgraded product packages.

"Buying a new home is one of, if not the, biggest investments you will ever make," Binsacca said. "Yet most buyers make that decision based on nothing more than esthetics and location. Ignore the latter for now and think about how far good looks really go. The attraction starts to wear thin if the windows are drafty, the linoleum floor peels and the siding fades."

Basic home appliances and building products can be easily researched at consumer-targeted showrooms, do-it-yourself home center stores and in home-improvement magazines. Binsacca cautions against upgraded products for the sake of getting more whistles and bells.

"NEW HIGH-TECH toys with a lot of flashing lights and push-button controls often mesmerize buyers without really doing more than their standard counterparts," he said. "Technology should be functional as well as attractive and fun."

"For instance, what does a touch-control dishwasher do any better than a conventional, turn-the-knob model? Probably not much. But if the upgraded appliance offers better performance (varied cycles, a more powerful spray, better energy efficiency) then it might be worth it."

Binsacca says one high-tech product worth buying is a thermostat. Electronic programmable controls for the heating and cooling system can reduce your energy consumption by allowing you to schedule the system to operate at peak efficiency.

But even in energy-conscious areas, where builders make a point to offer an energy package, many buyers don't think about it beyond the sales brochure. High-efficiency furnaces, heat pumps and air conditioning systems are a bit more expensive but worth the money, Binsacca said.

You should be aware of the quality of the products chosen for your new house.
