A Westland woman was killed Thursday night when the car she was driving was hit head on by a van swerving to avoid a collision on the other side of the road,

Suad George, 44, died from massive head injuries about an hour after the accident on Ann Arbor Trail west of Edward Hines Drive, said Officer Thomas Hissong of the Westland police traffic bureau.

George wasn't wearing a seat belt, police said. Drivers of two other vehicles received minor injuries and didn't require hospitalization, Hissong said.

GEORGE WAS traveling eastbound on Ann Arbor Trail about 7:45 p.m. when her 1981 Ford LTD was struck by a 1988 Ford van that crossed over the center line from the westbound lane, police reports said.

Garage sale to benefit school for the blind

By Leonard Poger --editor

If you are a garage sale fan looking for bargains in computers, windmills, lawnmowers or printing presses, the parents of the Penrickton Center for Blind Children have something for you.

Garden City's Donna Green, whose son is one of the 25 Detroit and suburban students at the private school, said she has been working for the past five months on what she describes as "more than just a garage sale."

It has become a mission for her and volunteers, working on the project, scheduled for 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday at St. John Lutheran School, on Wayne Road at Glenwood, Westland.

"We held our first sale two years ago and raised $2,000," said Green, 45. "The next year, we doubled our proceeds to $4,000. Now we want to double it again."

ALL THE items at the sale are donated, including food to be served to bargain hunters for the three days.

Green has been working with 10 to 12 parents on the sale. Also helping are laid-off General Motors employees who are performing community service work in the company's Job Bank program.

Area businesses are donating items for the sale or sending in checks for the school's support, Green said. Donated items are kept in five large storage lockers in the PROCEEDS FROM the event will be used to support the Penrickton al, considering his handicaps. We School, which has an annual $550,000 operating budget.

The center has 35 full-time and part-time employees, including eight professionals.

The school, on Eureka between Beech Daly and Inkster Road in Taylor, is privately operated and receives no money from any governmental agency, said Kurt Sebaly, the school's executive director.

Money comes through donations from clvic and service organizations, a mail campaign, individual contributions and the annual garage

The school doesn't charge parents any fees, but requires that they become involved in the center.

THE EVENT this week will help provide needed money for the school's students, said Sebaly and Green, whose son, Nicky, 7, has been at the facility for three years.

Nicky, who lives at the school during the week and comes home on weekends, has been blind since birth. He is partially deaf and developmentally disabled and had a severe behavioral problem.

Sebaly and Green agreed that the behavior problem has been virtually eliminated and that Nicky is making progress in other areas.

GREEN TOOK time out from taking about the upcoming garage sale to describe Nicky's earlier problems and how the Penrickton Center has helped him and other children from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties who are disabled.

"Nicky came to our home as a foster child when he was only 2 months old. He is totally blind and deaf in one ear, but as we grew to know and love Nicky, we decided to adopt

Initially, the parents were led to believe by professionals that Nicky was untrainable.

"Although his behavior was erratic, we thought this wasn't too unusudidn't understand the full extend of his disabilities. His teachers €elt that he was stubborn, hot-tempered and very manipulative."

BUT SHE then heard about the Penrickton Center from a teacher who knew about the center but had never visited it.

-Making-substantial progress, Nicky can now ice skate, roller skate, bowl and swim, said his mother.

"Nicky may never be 'normal,' but Penrickton has given hope that he will continue to develop."

She described the center, which opened in 1952, as a "miracle," not just another school. "It is a place of love and understanding in a sometimes hostile world of misunderstanding.' ABOUT TWO years ago, Green, the mother of three birth children and five adopted children, decided to repay the school by organizing and working on the first garage sale. With the proceeds doubling last year, the project became a source of pride for what Green calls a small group of "housewives." "This year, we wanted to do even more. Although we could never repay the school, we would like to make it possible for the school to do even more than it already has for more and more children.

"This can only be done with more

AMONG THE volunteers for the sale who don't have children at the center was one elderly man in her Garden City neighborhood who collected items for the sale for three months and delivered them to the sale's location.

He also gave Green a rusty tobacco can filled with coins. Among the coins was a silver bar valued at $125, Green said. "This act of love, and many more like it, make all of the work (on the garage sale) worthwhile," Green said. Volunteers are "overwhelmed" by the generosity of others in helping make the garage sale a success, she Green and other Penrickton Center parents will find out this weekend how local bargain hunters will contribute to the success.

At the time, then-mayor Charles Griffin said the city of Westland was subsidizing the program's costs for non-residents.

Despite a heavy lobbying effort by area groups representing people who are disabled, the city council endorsed the cutbacks.

New car parks in auto shop

Auto shop students at the Ford Vocational/Technical Center have the latest in equipment - thanks to a donation of a 1991 Chevrolet Caprice from the General Motors plant in Ypsilanti.

"We are confident it will provide the students with a comprehensive tool as they study auto technology," said Harvey Williams, manager of the Willow Run assembly plant.

"The students represent the future of our industry and we are happy to assist in their educational development."

The car, specifically identified as "vehicle number 38," was presented to Ford Center principal Edwin Ferguson last week. Assistant principal Greg Baracy and students Tracy Bird, Dennis Ballard, Alan Bushaw and Lisa Story were at the presentation.

THE DONATION of the new car was the third by the plant to the Ford Center in the past two months, Ferguson said.

OF THOSE PRESENT, only Rhondal Johnson opposes the death penalty. "I don't think the government should have the right to kill people," said Johnson, set to major in engineering at the University of Michigan, Dearborn, next school year.

Johnson said that in view of his position, circulating the petition troubled him. "Lot's of people were reluctant to sign it. One guy got real mad."

In contrast, Kirk Groesbeck is such an avid supporter he collected signatures from a wheelchair after breaking his leg and ankle in a snow surfing accident.

"I was shocked people wouldn't sign. They're against democracy. This is just putting it up for a vote," sald Groesbeck. An aspiring teacher, he will probably attend Eastern Michigan University in the fall. The majority of students sided with Groesbeck.

"I FEEL if someone takes a life, they've given up the right to life," said Joe Kubinski, also headed for EMU. Jenny Criscenta, planning to attend Michigan State University, said, "Murder is never justified. You never have the right."

Only Kerstin Henry, planning to major in environmental engineering at Michigan Technological Institute, and Jill Szukaitis, majoring in international busines at MSU, new question their original pro positions. Since reading meterials assigned by Phillips, both for and against capital punishment, they are less certain. "I can see how people are against

EACH SEMESTER, PHILLIPS encourages students to earn extra credit through involvement in important social issues. Previous students have participated in city, state and national elections.

"This exercises a hands-on in the political process. It's called externalization. That's very important to the learning process," said Phillips, a 23-year veteran of teaching.

He estimates students devoted well over 60 hours to this project. It took approximately one hour to complete a single petition.

Frank Wolcik, headed for Wayne State University in the fall, collected signatures by going door-to-door. "It was lots of fun. Reminiscent of the old candy-sale days - except I never got lectured for the candy." But he did for his position on the death penalty.

On one occasion, "A whole family got into an argument, the kids saying the death penalty is sick and the mother supporting it."

The majority of students favor the use of lethal injection in capital punishment. Only Scott Minor, who will attend the University of Michigan-Dearborn, favored electrocution.

Why?
"I'd just go with the electric chair," he said.

With that, day was done and students were on their way to summer vacation and then college. In 10 years they intend to meet again, at their reunion where Decade Predictor Sheets, filled out earlier in the day, will be reviewed.

All the students answered "yes" to question 75. "Will Michigan have capital punishment (the death penalty) by 2000?"

Only time will tell for sure.

Possible sale of camp fires a controversy

By Wayne Peal staff writer

For seven decades, Camp Wathana has been the kind of place where youngsters can come face-to-face with a deer, or explore a series of small, private lakes.

But now the wooded northwest Oakland County site is focus of a controversy that stands in sharp contrast to its tranquil setting.

The 380-acre camp is owned by Detroit Area Council of Camp Fire - the youth services agency known as the Camp Fire Girls before it began admitting boys several years

Detroit Area Camp Fire trustees recently voted to sell the Rose Township site because of an estimated $45,000 deficit — and estimated $250,000 in camp losses over the past five years.

"Operating the camp has been a real drain on our finances," said Renee Ahee, council vice president of external affairs. "It's not an issue of selling the camp, it's an issue of keeping the council alive."

All told, she said, the camp would put the council in debt by some $20,000 this year.

But the potential sale has divided trustees from group leaders, the foot soldiers of the Camp Fire organization. Several group leaders have banded together into a new group, Friends and Alumni of Camp Wathana, to block the sale.

"WE'RE UP in arms," sald Linda Zakoor, whose group includes youngsters from Garden City, Canton and Westland, among other communities. "Money will come and go but this camp is irreplacable."

Beyond the group in-fighting, the issue also involves potential development of one of the remaining open parcels in a rapidly-growing region.

Camp Fire trustees are drawn from area business leaders, as well as group leaders.

Some members of the Friends and Alumni group accuse business-oriented trustees of being pro-develop-

"If you look, it's the business people (on the board) who want to sell," said former group leader Pat Atkinson of Inskter.

Ahee, however, said no decision has been made on who the new owner would be.

"As far as selling it for camp use or development, I don't think anybody's made that decision," she said.

Camp Wathana (pronounced Wathane-a) has traditionally been booked for summer camps by local Camp Fire groups. There, campers make use of its three lodges, dining hall, and numerous cabins.

"The beauty is that we can use the camp when we want to," said Garden City group leader Joyce Hansen. "If we sold the camp, we'd have to use someone else's camp, but who knows if we'd even be able to schedule time."

'Those who favor the sale, say a recent membership survey indicated interest in the the camp was declining. The survey, however, was disputed by members of the Friends and Alumni group, who said it included comments from long-inactive Camp fire members.

Fire Council recently sold its own camp. Another Camp Fire campground remains in operation near Monroe.

do," Ahee sald. Camp Fire operates programs for children who attend inner city schools and latch key children, as well as anti-substance abuse programs.

Maintaining the camp, Ahee said, would place those other programs in jeopardy.

Members of the Friends and Alumni group accuse Camp Fire directors of not doing enough to promote the camp.

"The camp is just not being used to its full potential," Zakoor said. "They should be doing more to make the camp available to other groups."

Still, the North Oakland Camp said trustees weren't doing enough fund-raising.

About $8 in donations for each child who attended the camp last "Camping isn't the only thing we year would more than wipe out any deficit, they said.

Trustees, however, said they'retrying their best in an increasingly competitive market.

The issue is expected to come to a head during the annual board of directors election June 28. Those who favor saving the camp are expected to run a slate of candidates.

"Whether consciously or unconsciously, we've let the board direct us, rather than having us give direction to the board," Hansen said. "But how can you have Camp Fire with.

Check lanes upheld

Sheriff says staffing will determine if they're used here

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Wayne County drivers might not face sobriety check lanes regardless of Thursday's U.S. Supreme Court ruling and an expected follow-up ruling from the state Court of Appeals.

Sheriff Robert Ficano said his department would consider check them if they could be adequately

"Obviously, you want to look at every tool available," Ficano said. "But it could be a question of man-

Drunk driving check lanes are also still an issue in Michigan, even though they're now permitted in other states.

Despite the 6-3 U.S. Supreme lanes, but would only implement. Court ruling, check lanes are expected to be debated again before the Michigan Court of Appeals. At issue is their legality under the state Con-

Writing for the majority, U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist said check lanes did not violate drivers' right to privacy.

"The measure of the intrusion on motorists stopped briefly at sobriety check points — is slight," Rehnquist

In a dissenting opinion, Justice John Paul Stevens called check lanes little more than a political stunt.

"This is a case driven by nothing more than symbolic state action an insufficient justification for an otherwise unreasonable program of random seizures."

Michigan State Police first used the sobriety check lanes in 1986. But they were challenged by a group of state legislators.

GARDENING IF YOU HAVE ARTHRITIS My mentor Dr. Robinson said: "someone with arthritis can do anything anyone else can do. However, the person with arthritis must do it more slowly and with greater care." He exaggerated to make a point. He realized that patients with arthritis can't be expected to do everything.

What he wanted to show was that such individuals can do more than they realize. What they need to recognize is the necessity for patience and planning. Gardening presents a good example. Having arthritis means you need to adapt tools to your hands. Using a short-legged stool to sit on and a stout staff to help raise you up allows you a position which substitutes for kneeling on the ground.

You may have to change the mix of your garden to flowers from vegetables so you will dig less and trim more. If you change, you can keep your goal of getting out of the house, improving the look of your lot, and enjoying sun and shade. The same approach of continuing on by improvising more, holds for shopping, and for traveling whether through Michigan by car, or across the nation by plane,

Accepting a slower pace and taking time to plan with your limits in mind provides the way to preserve your mobility and your freedom.

Health food store provides punch for Pistons

By Jill Hamilton special writer

HEN PATRICE Musto's parents told her to eat her vegetables, she didn't mind at all. She found that she enjoyed eating carrots and other healthy stuff - she enjoyed it so much, in fact, that when she grew up she opened a store of her own to teach others to eat Musto's Sylvan Lake health food store, You Are What You Eat, hasalready attracted a group of devoted fans — among them, Detroit Pistons star Vinnie Johnson.

Musto met Johnson late last summer at Max and Erma's restaurant, where she has worked for more than six years as a cocktail waitress. Knowing of his penchant for health ___ But perhaps there is something to food, she mentioned she'd opened a

"He showed up the next day," Musto said. He's been coming in once or twice a week ever since.

Johnson and James Edwards were in Musto's store following practice the day of Game Five of the series between the Pistons and the Chicago Bulls, loading up on ginseng products and other energy boosters. David Greenwood was due in at any time. The rest is history.

JOHNSON said he was introduced to health foods 11 years ago in Seattle by Paul Silas, then a Seattle player and now a New York Knicks assistant coach.

"He turned me on to it," Johnson said. "He had played for 17 years and he didn't have great skills but he was still there."

And Vinnie, older than most of his teammates, is also "still there" and a key factor in many Piston victories, including Game Five.

But what can health food do for ordinary mortals? Musto, a vivacious woman who at 36 looks years younger, is living testimony to the value of her products.

"People say to me, 'How do you look so young? How are you so energetic?" Musto sald. "I tell them it's due to eating well."

Just eating well? Is that all? Musonly been open for a year, but it has to said that she has another secret of youth. "You might not be beautiful feature-wise, but your looks really radiate from the inside," Musto confided. "If you have a positive attitude, you become beautiful." Easy for her to say - she happens to be quite blessed "feature-wise."

> all this eating right talk. The employees at You Are What You Eat including Musto's sister Darcene and their mother - are amazingly friendly and cheerful. There's not a surly one in the bunch. Could it be . . . good nutrition?

> If it is, they're certainly working in the right place. You Are What You Eat has something for every taste. The store has food supplements, microwaveable vegetarian meals, natural soda pops, organic vegetables and even what Musto calls "natural junk food" - chips, popcorn and candy bars, not the usual type of the latest in healthy cereals.

And along with free samples comes free advice for those just entering into healthy eating patterns. For instance:

• Eliminate sugar from your diet. "First get off sugar because it's the robber of nutrition. Plus, it's addicting," Musto said. "Big industries used to say that candy gives you energy. It does, but it's bad energy."

34-year-old Westland resident, triumphantly turned to the Palace crowd after Piston Vinnie Johnson hit the winning basket.

The Palace of Auburn Hills is a roaring sea of fans at the beginning of the fourth quarter with the Pistons trailing, 75-76.

Bedlam rocks Piston Palace

By Raiph R. Echtinaw staff writer

An ecstatic young woman grabbed my arm as I walked toward my motorcycle and screeched in a loud voice, "I can't bleeping believe it! I can't bleeping believe it!"

One might expect that she'd reached the ga-ga threshold by touching one of the New Kids On The Block, but, au contraire, she was thrilled beyond belief because a hoop squad from Auburn Hills beat a similar collection of tall guys from Portland, Ore., for what passes as the world championship of basketball.

The Detroit Pistons' unbeaten record, when televised on "Palacevision," remains unblemished as they beat the Portland Trail Blazers 92-90 Thursday night.

'What's Palacevision?" you ask. It's a Sony JumboTron TV set built into the scoreboard at the Palace of Auburn Hills. More than 15,000 rabid Pistons fans turned out to watch the roundball boys on the scoreboard Sunday before last. Then the place day and Thursday.

two hours before game time beseeching strangers, "Do you have any extra tickets?'

But what's so great about watching the game on a scoreboard when you could be sitting in your own home where the seats are more comfortable and the beer significantly less expensive?

"IT'S AWESOME," said Judy Dul of Redford. "It's just like being at a game only better, like the announcers make fun of the Portland peo-

Judy's friend Anne Marie Rosni, also of Redford, seconded the motion. "It's more fun here," she shouted into my ear to make herself heard. "These are the die-hard Pistons fans."

Livonia residents Mary Beth Marshall and Michelle Larsen were taking a smoke break in the first half. "It's the best party I've had in years," Michelle said. "Party with the true Pistons fans."

Somewhat older than the decided-

"People around us were telling us to sit down," Michelle said.

"They're young, so we ignore them," Mary Beth added. "We're having a great time!"

Westland resident Tim Hendershot sipped his beer and noted, "It's just like your own house and having a major party. It's just wild." Although modern times have de-valued the English language to the extent that incredible means what good did 20 years ago, the word "wild" still comes very close to describing Thursday's pandemonium.

The place was so darn noisy that you couldn't have heard Dick Vitale talking if he were three feet away, not that you'd want Dick Vitale three feet away from you.

BART SIMPSON signs seemed to be all the rage, with four or five examples floating around. Other signs said, "We love Palacevision," "Bill is our hero" and "This one's for Joe."

Paper airplanes created from R.I.P. Portland signs rained on the ly teenage crowd, mary Beth and Palace floor, some particularly well-ticularly friendly and good natured in a Robocop suit trotted around the floor. A Palace attendant distributed ear plugs to members of the media as WLLZ's Michael Fox exhorted the crowd to new levels of fervor.

While one might figure they'd seen the extent of what inveterate, runamok fandom can do to ordinary people during the first three quarters of the game, records for insane loquacious behavior were broken when Vinnie hit the hoop that put the Pistons in the champagne zone.

To say the primarily teenage crowd "went nuts" is exaggeration, of course, but in the days of runaway language inflation, it's an understatement.

Total strangers were high-fiving each other. Everyone was on his or her feet, screaming like drunken banshees, which some of them were. Even the normally staid "may I see your ticket please?" ushers celebrated in uninhibited fashlon. One removed his clip-on tie and whirled it over his head.

Yet nearly everyone seemed par- and ay and Thursday.

Michelle engendered a bit of anger crafted models coming all the way and the rampaging that plagued DePeople were out in the parking lot with their proclivity to eschew their from the upper deck. A guy dressed troit far away.

Everybody just loves the noodle

If there is just one food that comes close to global popularity, it has to be the noodle.

Noodles are beloved in every European country, in the Far East, the Middle East and everywhere in between. Even in the Janes gang kitchen, noodles are at least a once-a-week staple that find themselves in everything from spaghetti sauce to plerogi.

Noodles reproduce themselves in just about every nationality. There are the classic Italian raviolis, the Chinese won tons, the Jewish kreplach, the Polish kolduny and the German maultaschen. You name it, and noodles can be a part of just about anyone's heritage.

The USDA, which sets the standards for domestically manufactured as well as imported noodles, describes noodle products as "the class of food prepared by drying formed units of dough made from seminola, durum flour, farina, flour or any combination of eggs, with or without water." Macaroni, in contrast, does not contain egg.

NOODLES ARE made from flour or vegetable starch, either of which is mixed with a liquid to form a dough, then divided into individual strands or pieces by rolling and cutting or through an extrusion device. What enables these noodles to hold their shape is gluten, that tangled network of protein filaments that forms as a wheat flour dough is kneaded.

The more protein in the flour, the more gluten it will develop when moistened and worked: Eggs will coat the flour granules and interfere with gluten formation, so they can act as a tenderizer in noodles. That is why egg noodles are always flat. If shaped, they would tend to oversoften when cooked.

Any pasta maker worth his or her weight in dough knows that seminola flour makes the best noodles. Indeed, in Italy, a law passed in 1967 decrees that all pasta must be made from semi-

While all-purpose, cake, pastry and whole wheat flours are milled from various mixtures of hard and soft wheat kernels, seminola is made exclusively from durum wheat - a different species, which is golden in color and harder than any other wheat. Since most wheat protein is insoluble in water, and of all the commonly grown wheats durum has the highest protein content, seminola will always make the most resilient dough that holds together best during cooking.

Not to be outdone, Oriental cuisines feature noodles that are made from all manners of vegetable starches: rice, corn, seaweed, potato, yam, mung bean, taro and even acorn. First the starch is steamed to create a paste. Then it is frozen, defrosted and dried. After this process, the starch is so easily rehydrated that the noodles generally need not be boiled but just softened by soaking. They will, in fact, turn mushy and gluey if boiled.

IT'S REALLY NOT difficult at all to prepare your own homemade noodles. A few pounds of good seminola flour, a few eggs, a splash of olive oil, a sprinkle of salt and a few drops of water are all that is needed to prepare great homemade noodles. The difficult technique arises when it's time to roll and cut the noodles, but this is where an inexpensive pasta machine can perform wonders.

Sure, you can roll and cut your own and, as a matter of fact, Momma to this day still does it by hand, but investing in an under $40 pasta machine can turn an hour into a fun experience for anyone in the kitchen. Kids from 1 to 100 will marvel at the rolling process that stretches the dough into inhuman lengths. Cutting can be done with a sharp knife or, again, with pasta machine in hand, just a few cranks of the handle.

Edible flowers and blossoms of herbs from Marty Figley's garden in Birmingham include pinks (or Dianthus), Johnny-jump-ups (Violas), chamomile, chives, sweet woodruff and roses.

lowers make meals bloom

By Marty Figley special writer

LOWERS HAVE BEEN used for culinary purposes for centuries and have long been used in Europe and China.

Their use is becoming more popular in this country as cooks discover new ways to use them to enhance the flavor and texture of foods and to make the presentation very special. It's fun to try new and exciting recipes in our own kitchens and be creative.

While doing research for this article, the more I investigated, the more I learned. A Texas friend sent a recipe for Redbud cookies. I hope to share some of the information with you so that you can enjoy new experiences. Some flowers such as nasturtiums have a great deal of taste, while others are used for garnishing, although they are still edible. Rose water adds a delicate flavor to cookies and other foods, and squash blossoms can be used to hold foods such as chicken salad. Tulips, with their pistils removed, are a delightful treat stuffed with tuna salad. Lily buds added to stirfrys add a unique flavor.

From main dishes to desserts, edible flowers will make any meal more interesting. Conversation will be lively around a table when they are used.

I must caution all cooks to be positive in the identification of the flowers used and to always choose those that have not been sprayed with pesticides. Although many flowers would make attractive garnishes, they may also be toxic. Don't guess, be positive. The botanical names will help, since a particular plant (or parts of it) in a species may be toxic while another one is.

Pick flowers at their peak, cut off stems and leaves, wash and drain carefully.

Presented in alphabetical order, here are some of the more interesting and readily available flowers:

Apple Blossoms (Malus spp.) have a delicate taste and can be used as a garnish right from the tree, sprinkled over a fruit salad to welcome spring. The can also be crystalized.

Borage (Borago officinalis) flowers are a bright starlike blue and can be used the same as apple blossoms. Cakes and other desserts and salads are improved by their use, or a single blossom floating on a cup of punch is nice. Borage has been known as the herb of courage. for many centuries.

Bergamot (Monarda didyma) leaves and blossoms were used to make tea by the Colonists after the British wanted to tax the imported tea. The flowers also make a suitable garnish. Sugar can be flavored by putting a handful of the leaves in a cup or so of white sugar and letting it set for several weeks. Use the leaves when a minty flavor is desired, perhaps on fruit or in a cup of tea.

Calendula (Calendula officinal) is) is often called Pot Marigold. Its bright golden-hued color is used to tint dishes with a saffrony gold, and the blossoms are used to garnish tossed salads or soups. You might want to sprinkle some petals on brown bread and butter for tea sandwiches, which will impart a slightly salty taste. Folklore tells us that their bright colors wards off evil charms of witchcraft.

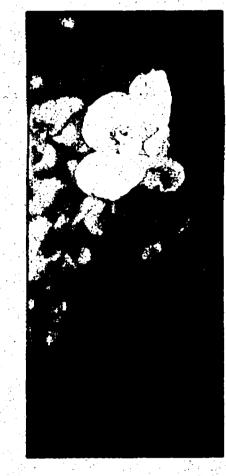

Chive Blossoms (Allium schoenoprasum and A. tuberosum) are so versatile in cooking, with their mild onion flavor, when used in tossed salads or floating on a clear broth they add a delicate touch. The blossoms can be steeped in white vinegar resulting in a lovely pink, onion-flavored vinegar, handy to use in a dressing or marinade. Its symbolism means usefulness, and that it is.

Daylily (Hemerocallis spp.) often used in Oriental cooking also can be used fresh. A simple preparation is to gather buds while they are still quite green and boil then in salted water for three minutes. Serve with butter, oil and vinegar or a cream sauce. They can be added at the last minute to soups and stews. So named because the flowers are open for only one day, they bloom for several months and won't miss the harvesting.

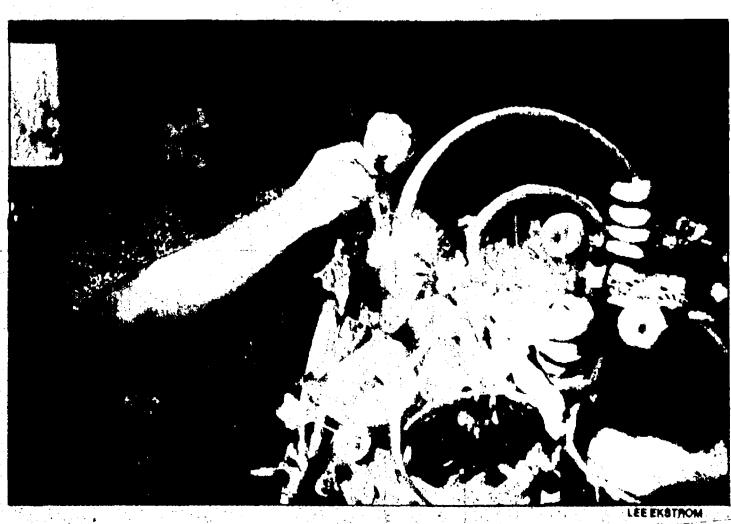

Scented Geraniums (Pelargonium spp.) are used in many culinary recipes. The rose, peppermint and lemon varieties are especially nice. A petal or two placed in the bottom of a well-buttered pan before pound cake batter is poured in will impart a special flavor to the cake. The leaves can be used to flavor sugar the same as is done with Ber-

These centerpieces really have bite

Basket sculpture filled with delicious food is just one of the imaginative centerpieces created by Judy Opie of Clarkston.

The bouquet, a breathtaking centerpiece of exquisite loveliness, looks good enough to eat.

To eat?

Indeed. The arrangement, artfully planned with consummate skill, consists of strawberries, dipped in redor pink-toned chocolate; melon and pineapple chunks; and strands of grapes — hundreds of pieces of fruit flowering from an abundant bed of decorative lettuce.

The unusual inspiration, a creation of new Oakland County resident Judy Ople, is an edible piece of art meant to adorn the most lavish of tables.

"It's elegant. It's extravagant. It's a stunning statement. And, it tastes great," said Opie, quick to point out these are the comments most often repeated to her by those admiring her work.

"It's very interesting. People och and aah, even little kids. Crowds always gather around. They have never seen anything like it before and, cause it's so unusual, it always becomes a topic of conversation. Lot's successful formula, a meaningful of times people don't realize you can -cat it."

IT WAS LATE SPRING 1981 and the eldest of Ople's three sons, Edward III, was set to graduate from high school. Ople wanted the postceremony party to be memorable.

Letting her imagination run wild, & Opie began experimenting, expanding on an hors d'oeuvre vegetable theme that could serve as both appetizer and decoration.

Amid a sturdy base of 12 pounds of lettuce, Ople strategically nestled whole artichokes and cabbages whose centers had been hollowed

She artfully placed skewers of plump mushrooms and ripe cherry tomatoes, intertwining them with scented sprigs of eucalyptus and drapes of ivy. Slender asparagus shoots gracefully blended the cre-मां ला:

Finally, cabbage bowls were filled with celery and carrot sticks, wedges of green pepper and caultflower pieces:

THE TOTAL effect was pure artistry, an edible sculpture. Judging by the reaction of her son and his guests. Ople knew she had hit upon a gamot leaves, and they also can be used as a garnish. The flowers can be candied. The first geraniums arrived in Europe about 1632 on Dutch and English ships from the South African Cape.

Lavender (Lavendula spp.) blossoms are used to garnish iced beverages, and a few petals placed in the bottom of a jelly glass before adding the preferred jelly will add a gour-

Lavender flowers are always used in the dry culinary mixture, Herbs de Provence, for flavoring poultry and meats. Lavender has long been used to scent linens; toilet water was a necessity for 19th century ladies. The fragrance can evoke many nostalgic memories.

- Nasturtium (Tropaeolum majus), called Indian watercress, is probably one of the most recognized edible met touch to the finished product. flowers, with its peppery and plquant flavor. The orange, red, yellow and creamy white flowers make any dish sparkle when used as a garnish and in tossed salads. The stems can be chopped and added to vegetable soup, a favorite of President Eisenhower. The blossoms will hold dips or sandwich fillers while the leaves make an attractive bed on which to put pickled carrots and the like. In addition, the seeds are pickled and used as a substitute for capers. Nasturtiums were highly valued by Thomas Jefferson.

Pinks (Dianthus spp.) grow readily in the garden and with their clovelike taste add a pretty touch to many dishes. Float some on cold soups or in a punch bowl, or add to a salad. A relative of the carnation, they can be used in a similar fashion. A carnation-flavored vinegar will dress a summer fruit salad. In olden days they were used to flavor wine, hence the name Sops in Wine.

Roses (Rosa spp.) have been used since the beginning of civilization and are the flower of Venus and a symbol of true love. The petals can be candled, used in salads, used as garnishes and even used to make rose-flavored butter and water. Roses can be combined with other flowers for tasteful vinegars. Always cut away the bitter white tip of rose petals before using.

Squash Blossoms (Cucurbita spp.) will elicit surprised exclamations when served, and since the vines are prolific bearers, a few blossoms rosemary. A cupful of petals to a won't be missed. Even pumpkin blosplint of warmed white vinegar, soms can be stuffed, and don't forget the zuccini. The flavor is mild, squash-like. There is evidence that used as long ago as 2000 B.C.

Viols, Pansy and Johnny-jump-ups (Viola cornuta) have a light floral flavor, while the Violet (Viola odorata) is stronger. All can be candled and used to add the finishing touch to cakes, pudding and other desserts. Fresh ones can be floated in a tea cup or punch bowl. They complement fruit salads, cottage cheese and sherbert and are used in fritters. Happy thoughts are associated with these little gems.

- Many flowers can be frozen in icecubes or ice rings to add elegance to a punch bowl. Try borage, sweet woodruff and the violas. Vinegars can be made with a combination of flowers. Try 4 parts fragrant rose petals and 1 part lavender blossoms, or equal parts, pinks, rose petals and infused 10 days in a warm place, then strained and bottled, will do the trick. If the vinegar is made of just this vegetable from antiquity was rose petals it will be ready for the rose petal salad which you will find in the accompanying recipes.

Here's an easy way to candy flowers. Pick the flowers after the dew has dried. Then use a soft paint brush or your finger and paint the flowers with a lightly beaten egg white mixed with 1 tablespoon cold water. Dip the flowers in extra-fine sugar, dry in a very slow oven until crisp, or lay in a single layer on an uncovered dish, placed in the refrigerator for several days. The flavor of these flowers can be enhanced by adding to the egg white: For violets, 2 drops almond flavoring, or to rose petals, 2 drops lemon extract. Mint leaves, dipped in green colored sugar, will be especially colorful. Enjoy! Flower cookery should be an adventure, not a chore.

Family saves 'dough' with homemade pizza

My goodness, the pizza pie has certainly come a long way, hasn't it? Although no one knows for sure, it has been thought that pizza was invented by a frugal Italian housewife from Naples who had some extra bread dough she didn't want to waste. Just as we women of today do, she was simply trying to stretch her grocery dollars - oops, I mean grocery lire - by creatively using up her left-overs.

Wouldn't she be shocked beyond belief if she could see the tremendous impact her culinary invention has had in our modern world today? We in Detroit especially feel the effects of pizza profits as two of our city's top professional sports teams are owned by competing pizza magnates. And just the other day I heard on the news that a race car sponsored by Domino's Pizza won the Indy 500. I always thought that those cars were sponsored by motor oil or shock absorber companies, certainly not by those that made pizza.

Yes, it is true that pizza has become very high profile and very big business, but if you are tired of ordering out and paying all that "dough" for your pizza, then this week's Winner Dinner is for you. Submitted by Kathy Husk of Redford Township, this easy recipe for spicy pepperoni and sausage pizza will convert you and your family into homemade pizza lovers. Husk likes to serve a simple green salad tossed with honey-French salad dressing. Sliced, fresh strawberries, either eaten plain or as a topping for vanilla ice cream, complete this favorite family menu.

Native Michiganders, Husk and her husband are the parents of three children. Although she is home fulltime, she looks forward to teaching her weekly water exercise class at Thurston High School in Redford Township. She and her husband enjoy cooking, and together they developed this pizza recipe. Because their children love this dinner so much, they are eager helpers and like to add their own touches, such as sliced black olives and crumbled bacon, to

Delightful accident created sparkling wines

Champagne is a wine region in France about 90 miles northeast of Paris. The Romans introduced viticulture in this celebrated region in

"But in fact, the word champagne didn't appear on the label until 1927," said Philippe Court, director general of Champagne Taittinger in

Until the latter half of the 17th century, the still wines of Champagne were rivaled only by those of

In their friendly competition with the Burgundians, the Champenois sought to create wines not previously known. They were the first to perfect the production of light-colored wines from dark pinot noir grapes.

FIRST ACCOUNTS of sparkling wines date from 1660, but it is evident that their effervescence occurred by accident.

The first successful, deliberate methods of capturing the bubbles in the bottle were due to the inspired efforts of Dom Perignon (1639-1715) and Frere Oudart (1654-1742) within the monastic orders of Pierry and Epernay, the birthplace of naturally sparkling wines now called cham-

Eleanor and Ray Heald

The innovations made by these monks in the late 17th and early 18th centuries remain the fundamental principles in champagne production.

These techniques include blending wines from various vineyards to obtain a wine complexity greater than the sum of its parts, clarification of the wine by removal of yeast sediment, and the use of cork as the accepted bottle closure.

EARLY STYLES of champagne were governed by the region's northern location, often receiving insufficient sunlight and warmth to yield ripe fruit.

Consequently, adding sugar to sweeten the wine and smooth its rough, "green" edges became common practice.

Jean-Antoine Chaptal advocated adding sugar during, rather than after, fermentation, to increase alcohol content, a practice beneficial to wine quality.

In 1836, a landmark discovery was made. A pharmacist from Chalonssur-Marne determined a method for measuring a wine's residual sugar.

This made it possible to assess how much additional sugar was required to make wine of a desired al-

Since fermentation produces carbon dioxide gas, this also made it possible to calculate the pressure inside a bottle. Too much pressure creates the danger of exploding bottles.

CONSIDERING THE nearly 330year history of champagne production, Champagne Taittinger is a fledgling in the industry.

In 1931, Pierre Taittinger bought Forest-Fourneaux, the third oldest existing Champagne house, and began to rejuvenate the firm and buy vineyards.

He continues the tradition of producing light and elegant champagnes so appropriate to a modern lifestyle that emphasizes healthful culsine.

As of April 1, 1990, a long-standing, fixed-price structuring agreement between the Champagne district growers and producers witnessed a dramatic change that will escalate the cost of all champagnes in the future.

WE WON'T detail the scenario because it's long and complex.

Essentially, the prices should not be affected until wines from the 1990 harvest begin to be released.

But we all know that proposed changes seem to have a way of affecting any industry well in advance of scheduled restructuring.

The price-conscious wine lover should keep a sharp eye on prices and stock up.

Contrary to popular myth, the better champagnes do age gracefully in the bottle for a minimum of two to three years, if properly stored. Bottles should be kept on their side in Ironically, despite the five fielding errors, Franklin made several brilliant defensive plays. Shannon Eberly made two diving catches in left field. Brown, the center fielder, ran down a shot off the bat of Battjes to end a potentially disasterous situation in the fifth.

Walters, however, may have been the one player who kept Franklin from winning its second state title.

"After they (Franklin) scored eight runs against Fraser, I knew they'd be coming in hitting the ball," said Jenison coach Jerry Hoag. "But Jenny's done a fantastic job during the tournament. She keeps it (the ball) low."

Something other than Rice Krispies went snap, crackle and pop Friday morning in Battle Creek.

Unranked and unheralded Livonia Franklin snapped Fraser pitcher Jomarie Sahutske's scoreless inning string at 30 in the state Class A softball semifinals at Bailey Park, as the Patriots scored a convincing 8-1 victory over the heavily favored Ramblers.

Franklin (19-7) cracked 12 hits, three each by Karen Brown and Tracy Parenti, in ousting Fraser, which bowed out with a 31-8 record.

The win moved Franklin into its third state championship final in six years. The Patriots met Jenison, a 3-1 victor in the other semifinal over Waterford Kettering, for the title. (See related story.)

All-stars descend on Palace

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

The Pistons are done, but there's still some basketball to be played Saturday at The Palace.

For the first time in its four-year history, the site of the 1990 Michigan/Ohio High School All-Star basketball games will be The Palace of Auburn Hills.

Detroit Country Day's Peggy Evans, this year's Miss Basketball, will lead the girls team against Ohio in Saturday's first game at 6 p.m. The boys, led by Benton Harbor's Mr. Basketball Anthony Miller, will play Ohio in the second game at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $7.50 and are available at The Palace Box Office and all Ticketmaster Outlets, including Hudson's, Harmony House and Great Stuff! stores. Tickets for children 12 and under and those 65 and over are $4.

Evans, who will wear the No. 1 on her Jersey, is excited about making an appearance against the best team Ohio has to offer.

Plymouth Canton's Susan Ferko and Dearborn Divine Child's Shawn Bannon (Livonia) will be two of Evans' teammates.

"I THINK it'll be fun," said Evans, who averaged 28.7 points and 13 rebounds per game last fall to lead DCD to a Class C state title. "It hasn't really dawned on me yet. I'm really looking forward to it because it's coming up really soon.

"It's good that they have the game more spectacular event. What start-

Birmingham Marian's Mary Lillie-Ciccerone will coach the girls team, with help from Dearborn Divine Child coach Nancy Sullivan.

"It's going to be fun, but challenging," Lillie-Ciccerone said. "The 10 players are used to being stars, but now I've got to get them to work together as a team. But the Ohio team is in the same boat."

It'll be a busy week for Evans and other local stars, who also will play Tuesday in the Basketball Coaches Association of Michigan All-Star Festival at Battle Creek's Kellogg Center.

EVANS, FERKO and Marian's Hazel Olden will play for the East team in the Class A game against the West, beginning at 7:30 p.m. West Bloomfield's Michelle Aerts and Farmington Hills Mercy's Jenny Clinton will play for the West team, while Bannon has secured a spot in the B-C-D game beginning at 5:30

Clinton, who finished her career as Mercy's all-time assist leader, has been playing basketball and running every day in preparation for the game.

"It's really an honor for me to be selected," she said. "I've been running a lot and playing at the Y (YMCA) and in my backyard. It's real hard to play well (in all-star games) because everyone is for themselves, but it'll be a good time. I don't take it that seriously."

Lillie-Ciccerone will coach the East squad, assisted by DCD's Frank Orlando.

On Wednesday, the boys all-star games will be played, with the B-C-D game at 5:30 p.m., followed by the A game at 7:30 p.m. at the Kellogg Country Day's Kurt Keener will help Detroit Cooley's Ben Kelso coach the West team.

· Redford Bishop Borgess' star Shawn Respert, sidelined late in the season by a knee injury, might play in the B-C-D game if she's healthy

It's like some sort of sick joke, a grostesque comedy that attempts to squeeze laughs out of a terrible misfortune.

Only no one's laughing. And this is no movie. It's the real thing. How does the adage go? "Fact is stranger than fiction." So true.

Or try borrowing an advertising slogan and twisting its meaning into something altogether different: "Can't beat the real thing."

God knows Hollywood-types have tried. Detroit provides the background in a movie scheduled to be released this summer - Robocop II. In the original, the Detroit of the future was scripted as a dangerous town overrun with crime, so treacherous that a supercop was invented, a nearly unbeatable robot-and-man combination to clean up the mess,

IT WAS a big smash at the box office. And those of us in Detroit who flocked to see it could giggle and dismiss this dismal outlook on our city as so much Hollywood hogwash. Never happen, we

Well, folks, the future may be a lot closer than we thought.

What's farfetched about the movie is that a superhero will appear to save us. Forget it. Even if a superman suddenly appeared, chances are better-than-even he wouldn't stay. He'd get nauseated after a brief introduction to a town lacking sanity and morality.

The Pistons win a world title. And how do Detroiters celebrate? They kill each other.

I guess that makes sense - in a place that op-

WHAT DO you think the rest of the world will say about Detroit now? The Pistons shoot down Portland in a game; Detroiters shoot down anyone in real life. Estimates ranged from nine to 20 dead Friday.

And that's after the Pistons won. What would have happened if they had lost?

We all share the blame for this situation. Question is, what do we do about it?

Or, to raise money to fight crime, we can legalize gambling. Yeah, sure.

I think we've had enough of Coleman's ideas. Before Thursday, I might have thought about joining a crusade to move back to the city, just prior to election time, to run that sucker out of office.

BUT AFTER Thursday, forget it. Detroit is like a a giant whirlpool sucking everything around it into the deepest depths man can imagine.

● KLEPPERT IS 2ND

Pat Kleppert, of Rochester Hills, earned second place honors recently in the Operation Bass Redman Michigan Division opener on Grand River. Kleppert caught a limit of five bass with a total weight of 8pounds, 9-ounces.

At the completion of six Red Man qualifiers, the top 30 anglers in the Michigan Division, determined on a basis of pounds and points, will advance to a regional. competition where they will compete against 120 other anglers from four other divisions. The top 10 regional finishers advance to the $150,000 Red Man All-American in which the winner receives $100,000.

Last summer, Kleppert placed eighth in the Michigan Division, but ran into mechanical difficulties with his boat at the regional and failed to score.

All Red Man tournaments are catch-and-release events.

● STRITMATTER APPOINTED

Farmington native JoAnne Stritmatter has been named park manager of the Island Lake Recreation Area at Brighton.

Stritmatter joined the Michigan Department of Natural Resources as a seasonal park ranger in 1969 and became a full-time park ranger in 1971. She has worked at both Island Lake and Proud Lake recreation areas as a ranger and became unit supervisor at Leelanau State Park in 1978.

Before returning to Island Lake, Stritmatter was the manager of the Michigan Civillan Conservation Corps camp at Proud Lake for three years.

NEW LIMITS

The Natural Resource Commission recently authorized raising the minimum size limit on trout and salmon from eight to 16 inches and reducing the daily possession limit from 10 to three trout or salmon in any combination. The new limits will be in effect year-round on an approximate 10-mile stretch of the lower AuSable River from Foote Dam to Lake Huron.

The new regulations, which take effect immediately and remain in effect through March 31, 1995, will help protect newly stocked steelhead and encourage high quality fishing in the entire area.

how to discover and remove zebra mussels from their boats by reading a new brochure produced by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

Zebra mussels originated in Europe and have recently invaded the Great Lakes after being dumped here in the ballast of oceangoing ships.

The mussel has serious implications for fisheries, not only by competing for food, but by competing for space as well. Zebra mussels like to colonize on gravel or rocky bars which many fish prefer for spawning. They can also clog water intake and sewer pipes along with bilge pumps and engine cooling systems.

The mussels also cling to boats, trailers and engines, allowing them to be transported to other inland bodies of water.

The DNR's goal is to slow down the spread of zebra mussels to inland lakes until effective control strategies can be implemented.

Brochures are available at marinas, balt shops and state parks along the east cost of Michigans' Lower Penninsula, at all DNR regional offices or by contacting the DNR at: P.O. Box 30028, Lansing 48909.

In addition to learning how to rig the boat, sail away from a dock, sail in any direction, head up, head down, come about, jibe, return to the dock and properly put the boat away, students will learn the basic theory of sailing: why the boat moves through the water and why sails power the boat. Students will also learn knot tying, nautical terminology and safety procedures.

For information on the classes contact the Jack Leverenz Sailing School at 886-7887.

• FISHING REMINDER

Anglers should remember that the daily walleye and sauger limit on Lake Erie has been reduced from 10 to six fish.

Youth rollers plan get-together

Young American Bowling Alliance of greater Detroit will be 7 p.m. Thursday, June 28 at Bowl One Lanes in Troy. The meeting is open to anyone who wants to attend. Bring your suggestions and comments.

Bowl One is at 1639 East Fourteen Mile Road, east of the Oakland Mall. The Y.A.B.A. is the sole governing body for all organized youth bowling leagues in this area. They do an excellent job of grooming youngsters in the sport.

• The next stop of the Domino's Mid-States Masters Tournament will be Sunday, July 8 at the Avon Recreation Center in Rochester. This is a great bowling competition for the advanced bowler. The format is 193 and under bowling

The prize list is usually around $1,500 for first, $750 for second, $300 for third and $200 for places four through six. Over the past 20 years, since its beginning, the Mid-States Masters has paid outover 1.2 million dollars in prize money.

THE TOURNAMENT schedule calls for two qualifying squads 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. to narrow the field to the top 80 bowlers.

The qualifications for entering the Mid-States Masters is to verify your eligibility based on average. When this is done, a $30 per year fee is due to join the association. The tournament fee is some $50 per tournament.

10-pin alley

Harrison There are a few special tournaments, such as the annual championships in August, which award $3,000 for first place. At the present time, there are almost 500 members enjoying competition. Anyone interested in becoming a member should call Dan Vanderhemel, 773-

This is the last year of sponsorship for Domino's Pizza and if anyone has any ideas for future sponsors they should call Vanderhemel.

• Tom McKay of the Greater Detroit Bowling Association wants to thank all league officers and secretaries for onceagain getting in all of the averages for the yearbook. This is a monumental task and the complete cooperation of everyone is vital to the success of the book.

IT WAS THE 17th consecutive year that all leagues are in the book with all bowlers listed. The new books will be available in August. They will be available at the league officers schools. The dates are Aug. 9 at Airway Lanes, Aug. 15 at Ark Sterling Lanes, Aug. 16 at Satellite Bowl and Aug. 27 at Thunderbowl Lanes. League secretaries should make note of these dates and plan to attend one of them.

• If you are serious about improving your game, try this: Mary Mohacsi and Mark Mohacsi of the Right Approach Pro Shop at Merri Bowl Lanes in Livonia are. conducting a bowling class this summer, appropriately call "Up Your Average".

The sessions are run on Thursday. The July 12-26 and the Aug. 2-16 sessions still have openings.

These classes are good for just about every level of ability, from the beginner to the advanced bowler.

The cost is $75 for the class and includes lineage, lessons and video taping. For more information call 427-2695.

• BRUNSWICK CORP. has just moved its manufacturing of bowling pins from Muskegon to Wisconsin in a joint venture with another company. The bowling balls and other goods are still made in Muskegon.

Merri Bowl Lanes in Livonia presents Rock-N-Bowl every Friday 7-9 p.m. for kids ages 10-15. Admission is $4 and includes bowling, shoe rental, disc jockey and dancing.

Friday June 22 is 'Dick Tracy Night" and June 29 is "New Kids on the Block

• Fiesta Lanes is offering free bowling to all of its summer league bowlers. Fiesta is also hosting unattached singles bowling 9 p.m. each Friday (singles only).

This week starts our youth learn to bowl "Coke and Bowl" program and Bumper Bowl League. Youth bowlers receive instructions. Coke, hot dog and two hours of bowling. This summer our bowling bargains are Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 5 p.m. until midnight. All you can bowl for

There is also Good Ole Days Bowling on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The cost is just 50 cents per game.

Clarenceville grad given all-city status

Robert McDonald, a senior at Livonia Clarenceville High School, was named to the Greater Detroit Young American Bowling Alliance's All-City

McDonald was honored along with other bowlers at the organization's annual awards banquet May 17 at the Pollsh Century Club.

The award is based on games, series, participation in tournaments and overall average during the season. Only five boys are selected from each age division.

McDonald, who competes in the Boys Major Division, also received an award for the high boys game of 289 in the City Tournament and was honored for the 811 series he bowled last November, a state record until recently.

McDonald has bowled in youth leagues since the age of 8 and recently completed four years with the Sunday Youth Classic Traveling League. His high average for the season was 207. He also shot a 300 game last October.

Other accomplishments in the last year include third place in All Events, fourth in City Mixed Doubles and fifth in doubles and singles play.

While your cooking was supposed to help you win someone's heart, it may also help you destroy it.

Because a diet that's too high in fat may increase the risk of heart disease as well as certain kinds of cancer. Fortunately, you can help reduce your risk simply by eating a low-fat diet containing lots of fruits and vegetables, whole grain foods, lean meats, fish, poultry and low-fat dairy products.

For a free booklet on how to reduce the fat in your diet, call 1-800-EAT- LEAN.

AT HER best, she is reminiscent of the girl at summer camp who gave you a wink and invited you behind the tree for a quick kiss — and who then stomped on your heart

Her songs speak of love and relationships, yet her actions and her dominatrix appearance depict a Yeh, well Elvis was from Tupelo, woman flexing her muscles and putting men in their place.

Her 18-song performance was a visual assault, at times in itself very entertaining. An elaborate stage setup masks a performer who is not a great singer or a great dancer but good enough to release a record every 12 months.

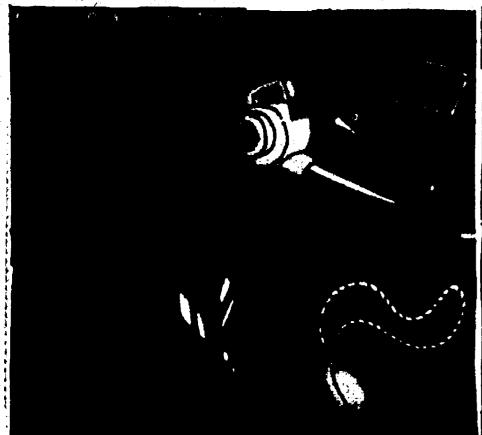

And to keep the Greg Gostanians C'mon. Madonna grabbing her following her along the way.

> Madonna, the hometown girl who's made it in music, has caused more than her fair share of stirs with her use of bustiers as costumes for her stage acts.

DT: Just a 'comic'

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

by JUDGE NILSSON

There have been others who have waged one-man wars on crime.

Super-powered do-gooders with the ability to leap tall buildings in a single bound, nearly psychotic dark knights driven by a need for vengeance, human arachnids with great powers and correspondingly great responsibilities.

But none like Dick Tracy - an ordinary man doing an ordinary job for ordinary pay who just happens to be the second most famous detective in the world, bowing only to Sherlock Holmes in popularity and longevity.

Dick Tracy was, is, and always will be a cop. No super powers, just dedicaingly dedicated, totally incorruptible - but still human and still someone people can relate to.

Stylized 'Tracy' holds true to spirit of comic

Walt Disneyworld and Touchstone Pictures staged the ultimate Hollywood premiere Thursday night for thousands of media personalities, contest winners and other glitterati from all across the country.

Parades, shows, fireworks - all this for a comic strip character, "Dick Tracy" (A-, PG, 105 minutes). After multiple screenings on 10

AMC screens at Walt Disneyworld's Pleasure Island entertainment complex, everyone was bused to the Disney-MGM Studios for a buffet dinner, entertainment and parade of the film's stars. Dick Tracy (Warren Beatty), Tess Trueheart (Glenne Headly) and Mumbles (Dustin Hoffman) were among those handprinting the cement in front of replica of Grauman's Chinese Theater.

The evening concluded with spectacular fireworks, narrated by Vin-

And there was plenty of sparkle in the movie as well as Dick Tracy (Beatty) steps out of the funny papers to combat the evil underworld. MANY OF Chester Gould's original comic strip characters are on hand for what Disney obviously hopes will be this summer's blockbuster film. Figuring prominently in the action are Pruneface (R.G. Armstrong), Flattop (William Forsythe), Numbers (James Tolkan) and Mumbles (Hoffman).

Naturally, Dick Tracy's got a few helpers - Pat Patton (James Keane), Sam Catchem (Seymour Cassel) and, of course, Chief Brandon (Charles Durning), to whom, as comic strip lovers will remember, Tracy often said on his two-way wrist radio, "I'll get right on it, Chief."

On the homefront, let's not forget Tess Trueheart (Glenne Headly) and as an extra, added attraction, Kid (Charlie Korsmo). He's a young boy who should be at home but winds up as Tracy's faithful (and helpful) sideklck.

All these characters and the all gangland violence are less important than the style with which the story is told. Therein lies the secret of what should be the success of "Dick Tracy" as the blockbuster of 1990. It may even beat "Batman" at the box office.

"Dick Tracy" was filmed in primary, saturated spectrum colors matching the inks Chester Gould employed for many years in his famous comic strip. The make-up, matte painting and, in fact, the entire production design strike just the right visual balance between animation and reality. Thus the dankness of depression vistas are leavened by the brilliance characteristic of cartoons.

MUSIC, ACTING, costumes (you'll love Tracy's hat and coat) - everything is carefully balanced between unbelievable contrivance and warm sentimentality. The scenes between Tracy and the Kid strike a particularly excellent tone.

In the shadow of all the Dick Tracy hoopla, "Gremlins II: Another Batch" (B., PG-13, 100 minutes) snuck into town Friday but there's little change. First they're cute, sometimes comical but quickly they turn ugly, nasty and ridiculous.

'Monsieur Hire:' Leconte comes up with a thriller

By John Monaghan special writer

Voyeurlsm, or the act of secretly looking into someone else's life, is the stuff of countless thrillers and movies in general. The French, taking their nod from Hitchcock, have perhaps been more successful than American directors in updating the popular genre.

"Monsieur Hire" is an elegant case in point. This cleverly conceived psychological thriller and love story originally played in April at the Detroit Film Theatre. It returns for a limited run at the Maple Theatre in Bloomfield.

Michel Blanc plays the title character, a tailor who raises white rats and keeps to himself. He grows obsessed with the beautiful young woman named Alice (Sandrine Bonnaire) who lives in the apartment next door. He starts watching her and, oddly enough, she starts looking

The romantic relationship that develops borders on the bizarre. Blanc, the balding, pale comic actor from domestic French comedies like "Menage," is not what you'd call a romantic lead.

Bonnaire, the amoral heroine of films like "Vagabond," is one of the most sensual women in French films today.

As the film develops along with their intimacy, we question her motives. When a young woman is found murdered in a vacant lot nearby, we wonder if the quietly repressed Hire is behind it. The film keeps an audience marvelously on edge.

THE MATERIAL is based on two sources. Georges Simenson's novel "Les Fiancailles de Monsieur Hire" was originally adapted for the screen by Julien Duvivier as "Panique" (1946). The new film's director, Patrice Leconte, has shown an admiration for both works and then gone off into new directions.

"Monsieur Hire" is shot in a subdued but very expressive palette which drains the color from the images and replaces it with blacks. whites and silvers.

The film also employs wide screen, which focuses not on epic s scenes but on claustrophobia. The camera rarely looks farther than the actors' tortured faces for the drama. to unfold.

There are also little clues in the mise en scene. Alice, upon entering. Hire's little rooms, notices a photo-, is graph from his school days. She record ognizes immediately that the fat little boy obviously not allied with the others has skipped childhood altogether. He has grown old well before. his time.

And the audience is taken into the gaze. Like the woman in the apart-, -; ment across the way, the movie has a seductive, hypnotic quality that -- ; × underscored by Michael Nyman's haunting music - won't let you turn eg

VIDEO VIEWING

By Dan Greenberg special writer

Two documentaries about areas crucial to world peace, areas of major significance on the international scene — the Middle East and Indo-China (Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam) - are now available for home video viewers — "Israel's Shattered Dreams" (1987, color, no rating, 173 minutes) and "Peter Jennings Reporting From the Killing Fields" (1990, color, no rating, 150 minutes).

The first, "Israel's Shattered Dream" is in English, Hebrew and Arabic with sub-titles for those last two languages. It is a much-touted British documentary film, directed by Victor Schonfeld and produced by him and Jennifer Milestone: Unfortunately, both politically and cinematically, it falls short of its highly touted critical assessments.

"Shattered Dream" is a confused jumble of historical footage, current interviews and contemporary actuality shots with voice-over commentary by Jack Klaif. In this context, "current" and "contemporary" presumably mean just prior to its 1987 release. The fact that viewers must assume that and have absolutely no way of knowing when the historical footage was shot is a fatal flaw for a documentary which pretends to deal accurately with issues.

As any film goer will testify, images may be arranged and re-arranged to prove almost anything. Seen any good science fiction lately?

"SHATTERED Dream" is guilty of not dating its materials which, in our rapidly changing world, makes all the difference. As well, the film fails to identify personalities or issues clearly. Even for viewers wellversed in Israel politics, it's a struggle to sort out the details of this long, often repetitious documentary.

"Peter Jennings Reporting From the Killing Fields" is an MPI Home Video Presentation of an ABC News Production which originally aired in April on the 15th anniversary of the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam. The video cassette jacket is mismarked and there's a real bonus on this tape - the 50-minute ABC News special is followed by a fascinating 100 minutes - "ABC News-Time Forum: Beyond Vietnam."

Originally broadcast after the 11 p.m. news the same night as the Jennings special, it's the sort of program that's hard to watch late at night. Hence, MPI Video performs a valuable service by making it available for viewers to watch at their government is still fighting the Vietnam War even though that means supporting - directly or indirectly - Pol Pot and the Khmer Rouge.

The world seems to have forgotten that these criminals killed at least a million of their own people, the Cambodians, in the mid-'70s after the U.S. left Vietnam. THIS GENOCIDE was detailed in Sidney Schanberg's Pulitzer Prize-winning N.Y. Times story about his Cambodian photographer, Dith Pran. That story later became an Oscarwinning film, "The Killing Fields." Despite all this, the U.S. government supports the Khmer Rouge in order to continue the battle against the Vietnamese. That premise and the background of the Indo-Chinese conflict is welldefined in the Jennings News Special. The "Forum" which follows is even more fascinating with an incredible collection of personalities in the studio discussing the issues.

It's a fascinating, carefully, moderated exchange that, with the Jennings documentary, ought to be required viewing in every American ...

Oh, Boyea!

Music is a tapestry of pop and folk sounds

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

For a singer/songwriter who has a sure thing, Joel Boyea doesn't sound

"They're going to tear me up," said Boyea, between sips of a Coca-Cola. "The British tabloid press reviews all of Utility's records. I'm interested in what they have to say, but I'm scared."

Boyea is somewhat frightened only because his songs are truly his. Like a diary, they're personal feelings Boyea has captured in music.

Music that the Livonia Bentley High School graduate plans to share with all of Europe. If all goes to schedule, Boyea's first album will be released sometime in the fall on Utility Records, the independent label founded by British political folkie Billy Bragg.

The yet-to-be titled LP will be distributed to all of Europe. Ideally, a major independent stateside will follow suit here.

All the songs are completed, just some remixing needs to be finished. Boyea enlisted the services of Hippodrome cohorts, guitarist Chris Richards and drummer Doyl Dean, on the nine-song project, which was recorded at Dave Feeny's Tempermili Stu-

The music itself is a rich tapestry of electric folk and pop, ushered along with well-written lyrics that at times bleed hurt and uncertainty. The dubbed tape of a rough mix Boyea passes along is simply brilliant.

But back to this Billy Bragg thing. Who, what, where and why? Even Boyea is a bit amazed at what has transpired in the past year.

THE STORY goes like this. Boyea played briefly in high school with a rock'n'roll outfit. He then went to college at Western Michigan University and, for the most part, gave up performing.

With the emergence of Suzanne Vega and Tracy Chapman, though, Boyea got the hankering to play again. He picked up his guitar for the first time in two years and began writing songs.

Later, Boyea wanted to put together a demo tape. He chose three numbers of his own and another a cover version of a Billy Bragg song. On a whim, he sent the tape to England for Bragg to have a listen.

Then a telegram followed. Bragg's managers wanted Boyea to call them immediately.

"I thought they were going to sue me," Boyea said. "I couldn't sleep the night before. I was really scared.

"I talked to Peter Jenner (Bragg's manager). He said (Boyea in an Englishman's voice) 'No, we're not going to sue you. We like the tape and we want to know if you'll play some shows with us."

As it turned out, Boyea was only able to perform one gig with Bragg in Cleveland. But Bragg and Boyea hit it off immediately, sharing a laugh about the parody rockumentary "Spinal Tap."

In his one gig, Bragg liked what he heard and told Boyea his label would release an album of his work. End of

Not quite.

ALONG WITH knocking the album into shape, Boyea is tackling that ever evasive skill of performing live. That aspect of being a singer is a new arena for him. He recently made his Detroit debut, performing at the Hamtramck Pub. The show went well, but left Boyea with a task

Slowly, he's gaining confidence in his music that certainly will be a sound for sore ears on the hard rock heavy local scene.

list of needed improvements.

"For a long time I thought, 'God these songs will never stand up as powerful as other bands because of the volume.' But they do. They're clean and they're easy to listen to."

Easy to understand, perhaps, but for Boyea they were very difficult to write. His most polgnant numbers center around two failed romantic relationships while attending college. In both cases, the women moved away to attend colleges else-

Without sounding like self-indulgent melancholy, Boyea expresses his feelings metaphorically as in the numbers "Table for One" or "Pouring Rain." The sound is crisp and almost frentic, but flows with ease.

With college out of the way (Boyea recently graduated with a bachelor's degree in education from WMU), his major inspiration for songs (tenuous relationships: lovers, friends and otherwise) could well have dried up. Boyea, though, sees himself dabbling in the overt political muses such as those of his musical hero Billy Bragg - a devout socialist.

"His music is very serious, but he has this funny side to him. He's got a subtle sense of humor," Boyea said.

WALK ON WATER

- Jerry Harrison, Casual Gods

The Talking Heads have talent to spare. While David Byrne is busy ripping off Brazilian rhythms, some of the leftover members used the spare time to put out an album by a little outfit that they call the Tom Tom Club. Jerry Harrison, keyboardist and guitarist for the Heads, has been keeping occupied by recording the follow-up to his mildly successful last offering, "Casual Gods."

With "Walk on Water," Harrison preves once again that Byrne is not the only talented member of the Heads, "Walk on Water" is the work of a whole artist; not one who is only a sideman. "Walk on Water" is what you might call a "mature" album. Although Byrne's influence is obvious, Harrison is not merely a paler and smaller suited version of his bandmate. Sure, on some of the vocals Harrison sounds like he's doing a Byrne imitation, but, those two have been together more than a decade - how could their styles not rub off on each other?

Soon into the record, Harrison develops his own vocal style. His voice ends up sounding closer to Robbie Robertson's than Byrne's. It's not an amazing voice, but it's quite serviceable.

The prominent theme of "Walk on Water" is environmentalism, politics, war and all that other stuff that is so unpleasant about life on earth.

In "I Cry For Iran," Harrison sings, "I cry for love/I cry for man/I cry for woman/And I don't understand." In the hypnotic tribute to the artist, "Cowboy's Got to Stop," Harrison quotes liberally from Jeffrey Potter's book, "To a Violent Grave: An Oral Biography of Jackson Pollock." For this effort, Harrison recruited Heads helper Adrian Belew to play guitar on several tracks and vocalist Joyce Bowden whose smooth voice is a lovely asset to the

HELL TO PAY - The Jeff Healey Band

Joel Boyea has captured his personal feelings of Europe with his new release through Utility in his music and it's music he's sharing with all Records.

The flavor of Jeff Healey's second Arista offering is enhanced with a sprinkling of superstar seasoning from George Harrison and Mark Knopfler. But the band does enough on its own to bring this tasty set to a rock-and-blues boil regardless.

Well-crafted from start to finish, the blind guitarist shines on a reverent cover of Harrison's "While My Guitar Gently Weeps" that in-cludes precise backing vocals from the ex-Beatle.

Healey also kicks out the stringbending blues with Knopfler on "I Think I Love You Too Much." The track concludes with a hot guitar duel that conjures up images of the pair blasting away in concert. That such legends would help out well-earned clout he has gained, relatively quickly, in music circles. Reasons for that kind of respect abound on "Hell to Pay," which combines rock muscle with pop sensibili-

For fans who remember last year's "Angel Eyes," Healey serves up the heartfelt (but never sappy) ballad "How Long Can a Man Be Strong." And "I Can't Get My Hands On You" provides a strong hint that Healey's art was influenced by Eric Clapton. The guitar intro is suspiciously similar to Cream's "Tales of Brave Ulvsees." Although Healey leans on a few legends here, they are by no means used as a crutch. In fact, with more outings like "Hell to Pay," it shouldn't be too long before this guitarist, singer and songwriter himsel joins the ranks of rock's elite.

THE GENERALS — The Generals

The Generals are a loud, raucous party band - nothing more, nothing less.

So, in that sense, the Detroit outfit's debut album offers few surprises. A grungy guitar sound provided by Kevin James and howling vocals courtesy of Tony Cole race against one another throughout the eight-song package

The Generals' full throttle sound is borne out of the since departed, yet nonetheless highly-revered punk scene of the early 1980s. This has both its blessings and curses.

The kick-start guitar gives the Generals' music considerable verve. But, by the same token, it's a wellworn path taken previously by many bands of their ilk.

For one, the lyrics don't require much thought. Heard in "Watering Hole" is such proce as "If you dig my dirt/Up from the ground/Don't you know you'll find me/Lying down to it/If you turn this soil/Sort out the stones/Plant so seeds/Feed them to you think/Just bring me another drink."

"Watering Hole" is easly one of three numbers where lyrics are actually provided. The liner notes then tell us to figure the rest out for our-seives. The Generals' finer moments come when they deviate from the slam barn pure punk kick. "She's Sleeping" certainly offers a change up, featuring an acceptic ballad bemoaning a woman whose nodded off in a dreamless sleep. "I asked her to tell me about her dreams/She said, 'I don't got none.'i" (No. Sparky Anderson didn't write that song). On a similar note, Scott Anderson's harmonica on "I'm Different Now" breaths a bit of the blues into otherwise guitar-freezied sumber. Likewise, the sax on "Young Man" and place on "Never Say Goodbye" also help spice up the package. And, perhaps, they offer a hint of or tapping into in the future.

Special services available for mother

Dear Ms. Schiff,

Several months ago you published a letter from a mother of a twoyear-old daughter with cerebral palsy. The mother wrote of her conflicting feelings and frustration in accepting her daughter and addressing her needs within the immediate and extended family. She signed the let-'ter "Imprisoned."

The mother's description is any mother's description of life with a child with complex needs. You were correct in your response that it was OK for her to have these feelings and that there was no need for her to have feelings of guilt.

The suggestion that she get what help she could so she could have some time for herself was sound, and all of us who have been in slmilar circumstances will attest to the importance of respite care for the person who is the caregiver in this or any similar situation.

However, your suggestion that institutionalization was inevitable is really shortsighted. In the first place, the public policy of Michigan is not to institutionalize anyone, so this may not even be a possibility in the future.

The entire thrust of public services and even the most private services is toward inclusion of persons with disabilities in the typical life experiences of persons without disabilities. Where support is needed for the individual to be successfully included, that support is to betailored to the unique needs of the

The future for this child is much more likely to hinge on the use she and her family make of early intervention services, specialized and supported education programs, vocational training and employment (with support, if needed) and supported independent living, if that is needed by the time she reaches adulthood.

You also mention that she should not expect other people to understand how important it is for her to have a life of her own. That really sells short all the tens of thousands of parents of people with disabilities in Michigan and their families, neighbors and friends.

There are hundreds of parent support groups, parent advocacy organizations, voluntary associations and other resources where people do understand both the enormity of the

Carvey: Pumped up on comedy, 'Saturday Night Live'

By Bob Sadler special writer.

It is generally accepted that comics usually fall into one of two categories - observational comics who ply their craft by simply observing things and telling us how funny they are, and character comics who actually become someone else to evaluate life from a different perspective.

There are few people performing today who have as many characters in their comedic arsenal as Dana Carvey, most recognized for bringing the self-righteous "Church Lady" and the muscular Hans of "Hans and Franz" to television screens everywhere on "Saturday Night Live."

Carvey, 35, brought a lot of his characters with him when he joined the "SNL" cast in 1986, having developed them over his previous nine years on the stand-up circuit. He admits that converting a stage character to a television skit-com was a sizable challenge.

"I was worried about whether I would be able to do it well," Carvey said. "I had never done sketch comedy on television at all. But it actually was kind of fun.

"It's neat to be able to just get involved with one character (instead of jumping back and forth as he would on stage.)."

IN ADDITION to the characters Carvey has created, he also has an array of impressions, ranging from old standards like Johnny Carson and Jimmy Stewart to George Michael and George Bush. Carvey considers being able to do the current president a major coup for his ca-

"Reagan was boring; anybody could do Reagan," Carvey said. "Bush is hard. It's a wierd tone. It's (sounding like the president) kind of high pitched but it's not. You can almost slip and end up doing Jay Leno (sounding like Leno)."

Carvey and his wife live in New York from September to May and goes on summer hiatus. Doing the show only 20 weeks a year leaves a lot of time for going out on the road or working on other projects like Carvey recently appeared on the big screen in "Opportunity Knocks," in the role of a two-bit con man who makes good. He wasn't completely satisfied with the results.

"It could have been a much bigger bomb (it only grossed $12 million in its four-week run), considering the turmoil behind the scenes," Carvey said. "It was the most miserable experience of my life. The director head to Los Angeles when "SNL" (Donald Petrie) completely controlled me. You couldn't improvise.

> "IT'S NOT THE worst movie I've ever made. It just didn't represent me. Transferring a stand-up to film is obviously fraught with danger."

> As a result of his problems with "Knocks," Carvey pulled out of another movie project called "Beverly Hills Ninja" and now is concentrating on his stand-up act. He is playing 25 cities during his summer tour, including Detroit and is more than ready to hit the stage.

"Now, I have the greatest hits like

James Taylor," Carvey said of his current act. "People want to hear Church Lady, Hans, George Bush, etc. . . and I really enjoy it.

"I don a lot of other stuff, too. There's not rules for me. I'm the Wayne Newton of comedy. I go all. out. I've had a month off, I'll be.

Don't look for super hero when looking for Tracy

It's hard to believe he got his start taking a punch at a transvestite. Ahh, but more on that later.

Dick Tracy was born from the front pages of the early 1930s newspapers. It was a time of gangster wars and prohibition when the innocent were often victims.

In 1931 Chester Gould pitched an idea for a comic strip to Chicago Tribune Syndicate president Joseph Medill Patterson. Patterson - who was famous for nurturingcomic strips including Little Orphan Annie, the Gumps and Gasoline Alley - liked Gould's character, an intrepid tough guy called Plainclothes Tracy, but suggested Gould change the name to "Dick" Tracy - Dick being the vernacular for a cop or detective.

THE REST, as the cliche goes, is history.

In his very first appearance, Dick Tracy was called in by the chief of police to look at a lineup of suspects because he was the only witness to a robbery.

Tracy quickly scanned the lineup and determined the culprit was not present. As he and the chief left by way of the holding area, Tracy spied a woman sitting alone in a jail cell and asked if he could see

And then he took a swing at her. The police chief was, not surprisingly, nonplused and demanded Tracy explain himself.

"Take it easy chief — didn't you see how she dodged? You never saw a woman dodge like that did you?" Tracy replied as he ripped off the woman's wig and hat. "Just as I thought. None other than 'Pinkle, the Stabber,' ex-boxer and stickup ace and the man that robbed the hotel."

A fight ensued and Tracy, naturally, won. "Well, there's your man, chief - and when it comes to women, all I can say is you pick 'em rough - plenty rough."

ACCORDING TO Lauren Kline of Tribune Media Services, the syndicate that owns the comic strip, Dick Tracy is currently running in almost 150 newspapers, including 25 foreign newspapers, with a combined readership of more than 20.

In addition to Dick Tracy's many English-speaking readers, the strip is also printed in Japanese, Spanish and French.

In its heyday, the strip was published in more than 600 newspapers, but Dick Tracy is enjoying a recent resurgence as interest in the character is fanned by the movie. Fifteen new papers, including such notables as the Philadelphia Enquirer, the Houston Chronicle, the Dallas Times Herald and the Rocky Mountain News, have picked up Dick Tracy since March, Kline sald.

Dick Tracy is more than just a comic strip; it is as much editorial as entertainment, according to essayist Richard Marshall, writing in "Dick Tracy: America's Most Famous Detective" (Citadel Press,

While Dick Tracy emphasizes humor, action, plot and character development, it also presents a morality play with one overall theme - crime is evil; evil must be pun-

"No citizen is safe and too often the decent, hard-working Joe minding his own business is drawn into horrific circumstances; all people suffer from crime, indirectly at least," Marshall writes.

In a world gone wrong, there was a need for a white knight, an avenging angel — Dick Tracy was Gould's answer, Marshall concludes.

GOULD'S MESSAGE is clear: villains are evil and they do evil things. They shoot innocents, kidnap children, and even assassinate each other, but in Dick Tracy, justice is served. Gould found little inspiration-in-other-comic strips of his time. Tarzan and Flash Gordon, Dick Tracy's immediate predecessors, were heroes out of touch with their readership. Dick Tracy and the villains he battled were ripped straight from the daily headlines. In fact, Tracy's first Nemesis, Big Boy Caprice, was modeled after the 1920-30s' most notorious gangster, Al Capone.

The public ate it up. Dick Tracy caught on like gangbusters.

Max Allan Collins, the writer of the Dick Tracy since 1977 and perhaps the most knowledgeable Dick Tracy scholar since Chester Gould died in 1985, said Dick Tracy appeals to people because he is a larger than life hero going up against larger than life villains.

"Dick Tracy is nothing without his villains," Collins said.

All heroes must have their Nemesis with which he is compared or the hero loses his mystique, Collins said. If a hero has no challenges, no one who can potentially beat him, people lose inter-

In testament to Gould's creation, few heroes have seen as many of their villains become a part of Americana as Dick Tracy, Collins continued. Flattop, the Brow, Pruneface. 88 Keyes, Mumbles, Mrs. Pruneface, the Blank - the list COLLINS SAID he is often asked about the odd names and bizarre abnormalities Gould gave to Tracy's villains - "Considered silly today, they are actually more significant than people realize.

"You must remember that when Tracy began, gangsters often had nicknames - Baby Face Nelson, Legs Diamond Scar Face - that's where many of Gould's creations come from," he said. "A lot of them had a basis in fact."

For example, Flattop is clearly Pretty Boy Floyd - both were ruthless hired guns, both came from the Plains states and both had similar personalities.

The villain's physical abnormalitles were made to reflect the names, Collins said. "The crazy names and faces is taking reality one step beyond."

And where villains lurk, violence is not-far behind, he said .--

Gould's use of violence in a comic strip was unprecedented, Collins said. Bullet wounds, corpses, burning bodies — all were staples of the early Dick Tracy strips.

USE OF violence was necessary, Gould thought, because although Dick Tracy is larger than life, he is still very much a man and the issues he tackles are often current and real, Collins said. "Gould always considered himself to be in competition with the front page, not the other comic strips.

'Tracy:' Marketing the memorabilia

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Get Tracy! Or if that fails, get the next best thing. It's merchandise mania time and why should one of the most eagerly awaited movies of the summer be any different?

T-shirts? Got em. Hats? How many do you want? Buttons? What color?

Toys? Ditto. Movie memorabilia? Is this America or what? Two-way wrist radios? Uh. Japan is working on it. Publicity-shy Walt Disney, which is handling the merchandising for Dick Tracy since its Touchstone Pictures is distributing the movie, is mum on exactly how much and what kind of products we'll be seeing in the coming months but some products have already begun to hit the ture Twelve Oaks Mall store manager Ted Schaafsma. Suncoast, with stores in major malls throughout the country, including Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi and Summit Mail in Pontlac, specializes in movie related items.

Schaafsma said Suncoast is carrying everything from key chains and T-shirts to buttons and post cards.

"We've had them for a couple of weeks now," he said,

With the exception of Dick/Tracy key chains, Schaafsma said most items are being received with lukewarm response.

Few movies generate enough advance excitement to result in significant sales prior to its release. Last summer's Batman, Schaafsma said, is the rare exception, but then Batman related items might sell without a movie because the Batman has a stable following from his comic book, Saturday morning cartoons and the 1960s' TV show.

"I don't think people are that much into Dick Tracy," Schaafsma sald. Dick Tracy does not have the same appeal among young people today as he did several decades ago.

BUT DON'T count Dick Tracy out, say others. Dick Tracy has been shot, stabbed, burned, drowned, crushed, blown up, beat up and just about every other form of punishment short of decapitation and he's still around. What's a little competition from one of Hollywood's hottest stars.

Melissa Crane, of United Stars of sion of J. G. Hook headquartered in New York, said the firm is banking its line of Dick Tracy T-shirts, sweat suits, boxers, neck wear and related items will top its sales of Batman movie related items.

Heavier items, including fleece movie. tops and sportswear, are under way for the fall.

United Artists of America made nearly $1.5 million on its Batman related line and "we expect to double that with Dick Tracy," Crane said. Crane said that while Batman had a tremendous amount of advance sales, purchases dried up quickly after the movie premiered. Dick Tracy, which is only beginning to be promoted, isn't as widely anticipated as was Batman but Crane and J.G. Hook is expecting a longer afterglow, she said. Designed by J.G. Hook's in-house art studio, the characters were designed to depict the characters in Touchstone's "Dick Tracy."

Walt Disney, which owns Touchstone and is controlling the licensing for the Dick Tracy character. It requires that all memorabilia depict the movie, rather than classic comic strip characters, according to United Stars of America designer Carol Algenstark.

"I DON'T think this was really a problem," she said. If the movie is as much of a success as people are expecting, the appeal of the film's stars will be selling points in them-

Aizenstark said that while nostalgia buffs may have fond memories. of the Dick Tracy character, inspired by his creator Chester Gould, J.G. Hook officials strove to combine the qualities of the strip and the

"We think it's a nice marriage." she said.

All of United Stars of America's line, for example, strives to mirror the primary color scheme used in both the comic strip and the movies. Adding to the appeal, she said, will be the various depictions of everyone from Dick Tracy and Breathless Mahoney to Flattop, the Brow and Pruneface.

"It's makes for a very bright, very colorful line," Aizenstark said.

The character's real life counterparts - particularly in the case of Breathless Mahoney who is played by Madonna - may indeed be "the selling point," according to T's-N-Things buyer Amy Simpson. T's-N-Things, in Livonia, carries numerous Dick Tracy related apparel items.

Madonna related Dick Tracy merchandise, have been the most popular items from the movie thus far. Simpson said.

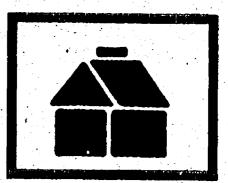

REALIZING THIS, most of the merchandisers are designing most products that accent the Breathless Mahoney character. One manufacturer, Mayfair Industries, is selling only Breathless Mahoney related apparel, Simpson said. For the most part, however, Dick Tracy merchandise hasn't been selling, Simpson said.

"I don't think it's ever going to match Batman," she said. "The whole Dick Tracy thing is geared to an older market."

Designing a career

Artist succeeds after 'brutal' start

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

Elise Covlin of New Mexico did a sharp about-face with her career in her mid 20s. That was five years ago when she went from petroleum engi-. neer to furniture artist and as a result she has a love of life and her work that's hard to top.

Now, instead of sitting in front of a computer in a Denver office building, she's building, designing and painting furniture in rural New Mexico. Her furniture is on display at Mesa Arts 32800 Franklin Road, Franklin.

Not that it was easy. Her decision to make the change came after a lot of thought and re-evaluating, done while she went for a 7,000 mile bike ride in Australia. "That changes you, you see things differently," said the pretty, slim blond with the aqua eyes and the kind of facial bone structure that will still be great 50 years from

What she had seen before she left was herself sitting in front of a computer "living the same day over and over." What she saw after she returned was herself being an artist and living the kind of life she loved.

She described the process of getting started in business as "brutal," adding, "but, I had a total commitment.

SHE GREW UP in a family that loved and collected art. She had made her furniture for herself when she was 17, "I've been making art ever since I was a little kid," she said. "My father painted, my parents collected - they made regular trips to Taos to collect art. That was a great influence on my life. And belleving you can do it is half the bat-and had them cut. I just had a drill and several bits."

Now that she has work in many galleries, she's hired a helper who works with her. She does the designs and all the painting and still does some of the building when she feels ·like it.

Her home and studio are a ranch 15 miles north of Taos where she keeps several horses and two Rhodesian ridge backs (dogs).

She said when she started she made smaller pieces such as jewelry boxes (there are some in the current show). The smaller pieces would turn over more quickly. But, now, among the pleces at Mesa Arts opening day was an entertainment center, tables, and a variety of chests, mirrors, paintings and wall pieces.

THE BRUTAL PHASE EASED when she drove a truckload of her things to a store in Santa Fe "and they bought every piece on the truck." She sent a lot of pictures of Covlin has hit the world market at the right moment, when painted furniture is a hot item. She shows in galleries in Paris and Tokyo as well as throughout the United States. But, even at the wrong moment, she might have made it. Her work has . . . If I had one wish it would be to charm, the long legged horses have a natural excitment about them. Her colors are subtle, her designs engaging and her things carry a kind of friendly naturalness about them, much like the courageous artist who makes them.

Work smart, plan ahead

Q: I'm getting discouraged at work. I work hard and always have too much to do, yet it seems like I continually have bad luck. The last thing to happen was I got beaten out of a promotion by someone who's only been there half as long as I have. Somebow it seems I'm always a "day late and a dollar short."

A: From the tone of your question, I'd say you need to learn two lessons: 1) To stay in control of the present by working smart and 2) to plan ahead. I realize this is easier said than done.

Working smart means calculating the value of the results of your actions and concentrating on your most important tasks. (Never underestimate the value of staying organized as one of those important issues.) Since I've written much on Lesson No. 1 before, I will elaborate on Lesson No. 2 to-

Advance planning is vital to success and no business, government or individual can remain successful without it. People don't usually fail because of bad luck — they fail because of lack of anticipation. In other words, they don't plan to fail they fail to plan.

Sunday Strolls start this week

The Detroit Historical Society is sponsoring a series of walking tours this summer and fall in the city and surrounding communities. The "Sunday Strolls" programs begin, rain or shine, at 2 p.m. and last two to three hours.

The schedule is: • June 24 - Fort Wayne/Indian/Tuskegee

- July 15 Historic West Village District;
- July 22 Historic/Future Plan of Royal
- July 29 Old Corktown Area; • Aug. 12 - Stroh River Place/Renovation
- Aug. 19 Historic Redford/Theatre Tour; • Aug. 26 - Old Grosse Pointe Farms;
- Sept. 16 Belle Isle/Dossin/Aquarium/
- Sept. 30 Ford Historic Homes, Dearborn;
- Oct. 7 Elmwood Cemetery:
- Oct. 31 Woodlawn Cemetery

Tickets are available by mail only from the DHS, 5401 Woodward, Detroit, 48202. The cost is $3 for society members and $4 for non-members. Meeting places and parking instructions are listed on the tickets.

Planning ahead saves time in the long run. Too many managers come up short on their budgets and are forced to do work the hard way because they failed to anticipate peripheral needs. Some great social events have been missed because of incomplete office work that had to be done. One General Motors executive told me recently after a hiring freeze was lifted another department head complained that before she could fulfill the requirements necessary to hire another person, the freeze was reinstated. When he remarked he had hired someone the day the openings occurred, she asked incredulously, "How did you do that so quickly?" He smiled and answered, "Because I had already picked out the individual I wanted and when the opportunity arose, I grabbed him."

In planning ahead, it is necessary to "question the daylights out of it," as one IBM manager says she does. "You have to keep coming back with questions about how something will work, what will be necessary to accomplish a project, what roadblocks might be encountered, etc. You have to know what questions to ask and just keep pounding away at what may be needed ahead of time - whether it's a sales call, an annual budget or a planning meeting with the vice president," she said. If you don't know what questions to ask, find someone to help you learn them.

A good bidding rule in the game of bridge is to know before you bid what your response will be to your partner's answer. Try applying this rule to your life. By anticipating possibilities and planning your responses to them, your bad luck can turn to success.

Rent clubhouse to church?

queries Robert M. Melsner

Our condominium is thinking about renting out our clubbouse for use as a Sunday school service for a local church. The board says that they will be paid approximately $50 per Sunday and thinks it is contributing the clubhouse for a good cause. Do you have any comments?

This is a particularly controversial issue because. the establishment of a church at the condominium may well be a violation of the "commercial activity" section of the condominium documents. It is more difficult when you consider that there are members of the association who may disagree with the use of the clubhouse for any religious institution of any type. They may argue that the use by the church is no different than a member of the association using the clubhouse for a personal property or a business gathering. Others may argue that it is no different than allowing an aerobles class in the clubhouse because presumably members of the association may be able to use it and renting the use of the clubhouse for a church is, in effect, a good deed. I would suggest that you have your association attorney thoroughly review your condominium documents and provide you with an opinion regarding the legal and perhaps the political remifications of this decision. It may be very similar to the controversy created by the abortion issue.

I am writing in regard to a continuous problem I have had with my basement flooding in my condominium. I have lived in the condominium for 11/2 years and the basement has flooded four times. My unit is 10 years old. Neither the management company nor the association has done anything to resolve the problem. Each time the basement floods, a company has been out to take care of the flooding, but it comes back a year later. Is the association responsible to fix the problem and are the previous owners responsible for any other obligations me since I was never informed of the problem before buying the unit?

You have asked a very complex series of questions. First, it would be necessary to review your condominium documents to confirm that the condominium association is responsible for taking care of the basement of your unit. In many condominium documents, the basement is a common element, and the association has the responsibility to maintain, repair and replace it if necessary. Assuming that is the case, there may be a number of causes of the basement leak problem from rod holes to insufficient drainage. If your association has been unsuccessful in obtaining a competent contractor, you should put the association and the managing agent on notice that you will be retaining a consultant, i.e., either an engineer or architect to investigate the basement problem. You will expect that it reimburse you for this expenditure since it has pre-sumably been unable to find the real source of the problem. Hopefully the association or the management agent will accept our suggestion and pay for and authorize your retention of an architect or engineer to find out the source of the problem. After that time, it will take the recommendations of the architect or engineer and the hiring of a contractor to fix the problem. If the association is responsible for the basement, it is not necessarily the previous seller's responsibility to have the problem fixed: Obviously, if the association is not responsible and the basement problem was, in a sense, a latent defect, you may have recourse against the previous

Office rates used as barometer

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Metropolitan Detroit office leasing costs are some of the lowest in the world. Take that Jakarta, In-

Ranked among the 30 least expensive major office markets, the Detroit area is well below the international average at $24 per square foot, according to a global office market survey by Colliers International Property consultants, released by the Byron W. Trerice Co. in Birmingham.

The international average is $36 per square foot. Byron Trerice is an owner/member of Colliers, a federation of independent real estate firms with more than 100 offices world-

Byron Trerice president Leo R. Tosto said it's unlikely the lower rates will attract tenants strictly on their own merit, but international companies use the report for a variety of purposes.

The report lists only market averages. Prices within the market can vary depending on the local community and the incentives a building owner uses to attract investors.

Companies use the report to determine if offices are paying too much, when looking toward expansion to see what they can expect to pay for office space and for general cost comparisons, Tosto said.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN office rent levels and conditions across the world are heightened because there is no stock market for real estate to establish the daily value of space, Tosto said.

Tokyo has the most expensive rental rate average at $192 per square foot and Denver has the low est rate at $13 per square foot.

Other selected market averages include Toronto and Washington, D.C., the North American leaders, at $49 per square foot; New York at $45; Chicago at $39; Los Angeles at $35; and Cincinnati at $26.

By the way, Jakarta, Indonesia, tops the Detroit area at $27 per square foot.

Several factors cause the lower lease rates, Tosto sald, notably the diversification of southeast Michi-

MEADOWRIDGE CONDOMINIUMS

Diversification, he said, speaks for itself. Since the area is no longer automotive dependent, other office space users are entering the market. Various professions including lawyers, advertising agencies, computers, telecommunications and public accounting firms are taking up substantial amounts of square footage, he said.

Tosto said the fact that southeastern Michigan is not as overbuilt as other major office areas is also help-

"For example, we may have a two-year supply, but others have a four-year supply," Tosto said. While it's true massive overbuilding would create huge office vacancies and push prices down for tenants, the result would be an unhealthy office market.

"Once building drops off significantly, people get the perception that local real estate is devaluating," Tosto said.

, MILD OVERBUILDING keeps prices down and favors gradual office development, Tosto said. Many companies are locating or expanding into this area and without steady, albeit slow, office development, the scales would tip into the landlord's favor and rates would increase considerably.

Many factors affect lease rates, including vacancies, incentives, the local customer base and construction to name just a few, Tosto said. "You have to lump it all into supply and demand and figure in timing." Low lease rates should continue for the next several years as current building projects are completed, Tosto said. But now that lenders are tightening up the money supply, building is going to slow even more.

Tosto said barring the passage of unforeseen anti-development measures or an economic crash, office rates in the area should remain stable for two to four years.

If the economy continues its steady, if unspectacular growth by then, demand will exceed supply and lease negotiations will favor the landlord.

Is Your Vehicle Prepared For Vacation Motoring?

The answer will likely be a confident, "Yes," if all the items on this list are checked and necessary maintenance performed. Some of the items listed below will require assistance from a professional mechanic, although many may easily be performed by car owners themselves. A few other service items may require am ore experienced do-ityourselfer.

Will it overheat?

- ☐ Check hoses. They should be firm, but flexible with no cracks, bulges or soft spots. Check connections for
- ☐ Check belts. When pushed with a finger, they should not "give" more than one-half inch. They should show no signs of fraying, wear or age.
- Check radiator coolant. (Do not remove radiator cap.) The recovery tank should be filled to "cold" mark.
- ☐ Check pressure. Test cooling system with pressure to determine if there are any leaks.
- ☐ Check radiator cap. It must hold

Will it keep you cool? ☐ Check air conditioner. If it is not working effectively, it may need a shot of freon. Will its tires survive?

- ☐ Check tire pressure. Owner's manual will give proper tire pressure for your car.
- ☐ Check condition of all tires. There should be no excessive wear, cuts or other abrasions.
- Check spare tire. Its pressure and condition are important too.

is it wasting fuel?

- ☐ Check spark plugs. If they are worn or have dirty deposits on firing end, replace them. Check gap on each to determine if it meets your car's specifica-
- ☐ Check air filter and PCV valve also requires periodic replacement.
- Tune up the engine. This includes inspection of points (if equipped), ignition wires, and distributor cap and adjustment of timing and carburetor idle set-

Are its inner workings lubricated?

- ☐ Check oil. Examine dipstick and fill if necessary. Change oil at mileage listed in owner's manuel.
- Replace oil filter, when recommended in owner's manual.
- ☐ Check transmission fluid. Check level when engine is running and warm and gearshift is in park.

Is it safe?

- ☐ Check brake fluid. Fluid should be 1/4inch from top of reservoir.
- ☐ Check brakes. Examine brake linings, pads, drums, discs, etc., for wear of degradation.
- Check all lights. Headlights (low and high beam), tail lights, brake lights, parking lights, instrument panel lights and all turn signal lights must be functioning.
- ☐ Check horn.
- ☐ Check exhaust system for leaks

INTERRUPTED TRIP—The heat of summer can play havoc with cars that have been neglected, and can bring happy vacations to a screeching halt.

- ☐ Check windshield wipers. They should: be working and able to clear moisture without streaking, skipping or smearing. If not, replace them.
- Check windshield washer system, Washer pump should be working and reservoir filled with fluid.
- ☐ Check power steering fluid. Examine dipstick when engine is warm.
- Clean windows and mirrors. Visibility is. essential for safe driving.

Will it start?

- □ Tune engine, Ignition systems, including spark plugs, wires, timing distributor and coil must be functioning properly for sure starts.
- Check the battery. If it is not a maintenance-free battery, check the fluid level and fill if necessary. Clean any corrosion from battery terminals. Test battery for charge; winter may have eroded some of its power.

How does it handle?

Check shock absorbers or struts. Worn out shocks alter a car's handling characteristics, make the ride less comfortable and increase tire wear.

- Check universal joints, tie rod ends, ball joints and steering linkage. Failure of any of these can lead to an acci-
- ☐ Check wheel alignment. Problems can lead to steering difficulty and prematurely worn tires. Many newer cars require alignment service on all four

Automotive Travel Surges Forward

According to the U.S. Travel Data Center, for the first time in six years, the increase in automotive travel last year exceeded all commercial modes of travel.

The driving public registered a 7 percent rise compared to no growth for mass transportation, which includes air, bus, and rail.

Vacation travel, which rose 7 percent, accounted for 67 percent of all travel.

Business travel went up 1 percent. These statistics marked the fourth consecutive increase for annual domestic travel.

Just for Brides

The Monthly Album is published the third Monday of each month for the announcements of engagements and weddings.

Engagement announcements will be accepted no later than 45 days prior to the wedding. Wedding announcements must be submitted within 60 days after the wedding. All announcements are run on a space available, first come, first served basis.

Information sent must be legible and include a contact telephone number so if there is a question the staff has a number to call.

Photos submitted should be black and white glossies, preferably 5 by 7 inches in size. Color photos can be submitted and will be accepted but they do not reproduce as well.

Due to the volume of photographs handled, the newspaper will not be responsible for any that may get lost or damaged. Photos can be picked up after publication in the Farmington Observer office, or, if a self-addressed sufficiently stamped envelope is received with the photo, it will be returned.

Engagement and wedding announcements pertinent to Livonia, Redford, Garden City, Westland, Farmington and Farmington Hills are to be addressed to Loraine McClish, in care of The Farmington Observer, 21898 Farmington Road, Farmington 48024.

Inquiries are taken by McClish or Rose Butler in the Farmington Observer office, 477-5450.

to Glenn Griese, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton E. Griese of Adams, Wisc.

Why is the diamond engagement ring worn on the third finger of the left hand?

Ancient people believed that the vein of the third finger of the left hand ran directly to the heart. Medieval bridegrooms placed the ring on three of the bride's fingers in turn, to symbolize the Trinity: 'The Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.' The ring remained on the third finger and that has since become the customary ring finger for all English-speaking cultures.

From the editors of Bride's magazine.

Why are diamonds considered the ultimate symbol of love?

Nature invests millions of years of great heat and pressure to crystallize a single diamond, which is the hardest natural substance known to man. Found in its natural octahedral form, a diamond appears as two pyramids base to base, which in the early ages, could not be split. Thus, the diamond became a natural symbol of an impenetrable bond, representing enduring and eternal love. The mysterious inner fire of a diamond was likened by some to love's passion.

From the editors of Bride's magazine.
