'Family' of 200 ready for city festival

By Leonard Poger editor

Donna Raines will have her volunteer "family" of more than 200 people ready to help Westland families enjoy themselves in the community this coming week.

The reason is that Raines is chairing the Westland Summer Festival Committee for the third consecutive year.

In talking about the upcoming 20th community festival, Raines said the group of volunteers is like "one big family."

Raines, who will be 34 five days after the festival ends Wednesday night, said that while she puts in countless hours, "I enjoy doing it because I like helping families in the city come out and enjoy the festival.

"I like hearing people say 'what a nice festival,' and seeing local families enjoying themselves within the community and using local facili-

Another part of the enjoyment is that her two youngsters brag about their mom being the festival chairwoman to their Patchin Elementary School classmates.

The planning for this year's festival started shortly after the previous year's event ends, Raines said.

"The committee meets monthly, discussing what we liked and what we didn't like," she said. "We also try to look for ways to improve the festival for the following year and bringing in different entertainment.

Cop recovering from beating by youths

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

Gregg Brandemihl won't hesitate to get involved again. But should there be future trouble in his Westland neighborhood, the Romulus police officer said he would probably bring his gun.

Brandemihi, 30, has spent two weeks recovering from injuries he suffered during a June 10 assault by a gang of youths outside his home on S. Byfield. He was off duty at the time.

A Westland man and a Livonia man were arraigned Friday in 18th District Court on charges stemming from the beating.

Judge Gail McKnight entered not-guilty pleas on behalf of Richard Scott Wolofski, 19, of Westland, and Rodney Gene Billington, 18, of Livonia. Each is charged with one count of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder, a felony punishable by a maximum 10-year prison sentence.

Both men were released on a $5,000 bond and face preliminary examination 9 a.m.

BRANDEMIHL SAID he was only trying to be a good neighbor - protecting his and other people's property from vandals - when two men clubbed him in the head with golf clubs and a stolen baseball bat.

Brandemihl also suffered a fractured elbow fending off the attack, police said. As of Friday, he had yet to return to work. "I had surgery and they (doctors) had to put a plate in

According to accounts by Brandemihl and the Westland police, the incident began earlier in the evening when four youths were cruising Byfield in a 1983 Ford Thunderbird.

Two of the youths got into an argument in the back seat and were asked to leave the car by the driver, said Westland police detective Sgt. Russell Nowaczck. After they left the car, one youth made a phone call from a nearby

Not-guilty plea entered in shooting of city man

The man charged with killing a Westland resident at a Canton Township apartment complex June 3 pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in Detroit Recorder's Court Friday.

The defendant, William Corbin, 27, is charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Terry Ser-

At the time of the shooting, Serman was at the home of a woman he was dating. The woman, Kimberly Ann Boland, had previously lived with Corbin and the couple had a child together, à the defendant's father has said.

Corbin and Boland broke up in May.

SERMAN, 36, was shot in the abdomen and died at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne. The shooting occurred at 5 a.m. at the Canton Commons apartments.

The incident began when someone kicked in the front

Police said the person then found Serman and Boland in bed in her apartment and fired two shots. One hit Serman and the other went into the floor.

Corbin, of Van Buren Township, is also charged with felony murder because Serman was killed during a breaking and entering, and with using a firearm during the commission of a felony.

First-degree murder carries a mandatory sentence of life in prison without the chance of parole upon convic-

AT THE arraignment, the case was assigned to Judge A pre-trail conference has been scheduled for Friday.

At that time, a trial date may be set. Bond was set at $500,000. Corbin is being held in the Wayne County Jail.

Soviet tour helps teen span the cultural gap

By Marie Cheetney staff writer

Somewhere in Russia there's a teenager proudly wearing an American-made blue T-shirt that sports the words, "Bridges of Peace."

Right here in the Livonia school district, there's a teenager showing off the latest addition to her wardrobe - a green jacket once worn by a Russian soldier, complete with medals and insignia.

Now the Russian teen most likely can't read the words on his T-shirt. And Lisa Evans, a 1996 graduate of Churchill High School, which

Westland, doesn't speak Russian and can't tell whether the Russian name printed inside the jacket belongs to a male or female.

But in this era of perestroiks and glasnost, each teen's inability to understand each other's language really doesn't matter.

"We're happy about this openness," Evans said. "The Soviets

Outside again, the two apparently got into a loud argument with other neighborhood teens, Nowaczek said.

THAT'S WHEN Brandemihl got involved. Awakened by the noise, he called police at 2:21 a.m. about the disturbance. About 15 minutes later he told his wife to call police again as he went outside to see if he could handle the problem.

aren't our enemy, and more and more people are finding this out. Our cultures are more similar than people think. People are the same everywhere."

EVANS IS speaking from firsthand experience.

Along with 33 other teens and eight adults from Methodist churches in seven states, she recently spent two weeks on a whirlwind tour of Moscow and Leningrad. For Evans, one of the highlights of the trip was trading her "Bridges of Peace" T-shirt for the Russian jack-

"I think I got the best of the bargain. It's interesting that I traded a religious T-shirt for a military jacket worn by a soldier." Besides sightseeing, the teenagers had another reason for traveling to

"We brought over 200 Bibles and we passed them all out. We smuggled in the Bibles, hidden in our suitcases, but no one looked into our suitcases. We really didn't have to smuggle them in." In fact, one of the biggest surprises the teens got was finding out just how popular religious services now are in the Soviet Union. The teens attended Baptist services in Moscow and Leningrad and a Methodist service in Tallin, Estonia.

"They have services every day now because so many are interested in the church. Religions are now allowed to the point that going to church has become a fad." Evans wrote her name and address in every Bible she handed out. After returning home, she received a mysterious letter from Russia.

Because it's written in Russian, she doesn't yet know what it says. But she assumes it was written by someone to whom she had given a Bible.

FOR EVANS, the most irritating part of the trip were the young street urchins who surround tourists and beg for handouts. In return, the teens got small colorful medals from the "pests." "Those kids were little con men. They put dirt on their face, to make you give them things. They are about 10-12 years old, and some of them were smoking."

Amy Wess crowned Festival Queen

Amy Wess entered the 20th annual Westland Summer Festival Beauty Pageant just for the experience.

And she had quite an experience Saturday night when she was named festival queen during the pageant, held in the Balley Center.

Her reaction at hearing her name announced as pageant winner was "shock," Amy admitted after receiving her crown, trophy and roses.

Competing in the pageant was the first time she entered anything, Amy said, adding that she got a lot of encouragement from her mother, Susan Wess, "who had a lot of confidence in me."

The queen, 19 and a 1989 John Glenn High School graduate, will reign over the six-day festival that opens Friday and continues through Wednesday in the Westland Civic Center area.

Wess succeeded Doreen Hodor, who took part in this year's pageant.

Wess, a blonde with blue eyes, attends Henry Ford Community College and plans to transfer to the University of Michigan and study for a marketing degree. In her application, Wess said her hobbies are exercising, dancing and reading while her interests are music, fashion animal rights.

Besides the experience of being in a pageant, Wess said in her application that she became a contestant because she believes in Westland's future and feels it would be an honor to represent the city as the festival

Artist has gem of a career making handcrafted jewelry

By Leonard Poger editor

Jeanne Thomas remembers being bitten by the art bug while in elementary school.

Later, her high school art teacher and parents encouraged her to pursue an art career.

After high school graduation, Jeanne had other plans, such as getting married.

Now, 23 years later, Thomas is watching her art career take off.

Thomas, who works under the business of Menage Accents, displayed her handcrafted jewelry at a recent Friends of the Mill art show and country fair at the Nankin Mill in Westland.

The show and fair was held to raise money for the restoration of the 140-year-old mill on Ann Arbor Trail at Farmington Road.

The artist, raised in Garden City, has been busy since last winter in her specialty of making handcrafted jewelry under the business name of Menage Accents.

Working out of her Livonia home on Stark near Plymouth, Thomas said she now spends about 40 hours a week making earrings, pins, and necklaces, working sometimes to 2 or 3 in the morning.

Her husband, Jamie, is one of her biggest boosters, "helping me with art shows and continuing to push

UNTIL DEMANDS for her jewelry business increased substantially last fall and winter, "I had no idea my work would be so successful,"

The business was launched in a big way last December when she was in an art show in the Plymouth Cultural Center.

"I sold $900 of jewelry from the... show with people ordering items for Christmas gifts," Thomas sald.

Many of her customers hear of her through word of mouth. Other "customers" are relatives.

Thomas also gets many referrals from a Plymouth custom clothing store with customers wanting matching jewelry. But the route to her art career clearly didn't take the fast track when she was graduated by West

High School in 1967. Thomas, who will be 41 in August, married shortly after high school graduation. She was a full-time housewife and mother with a son and daughter. At the age of 25, she got her first out of the house job, working as a AAA travel agent for eight years.

Then she was a real office receptionist for three years before receiving her real estate license in 1987.

RECALLING HER early years in Garden City, Thomas said, "I always loved art. I used to sit and draw all the time."

In junior and senior high, she always enrolled in art classes as electives.

She began getting serious about the lewelry business last September when she contacted companies to obtain materials.

One day while shopping in a wholesale artists' supply store in Berkley, Thomas found a package of clay, bought it, and "played around with it" at home, making unusual earrings, pins, and necklaces.

One request she filled was barrettes for women members of a wedding party.

With orders coming in, Thomas is also planning to take part in four to five art shows this year.

Local students await Mandela

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Tracye Davis watched "with tears" as the image of Nelson Mandela came across her television - a free man in a troubled land half a world away.

"I never thought I'd see him leave prison, at least not alive," the Westland resident said.

In a few days. Dayis will see Mandela in person. The prospect thrills the University of Michigan-Dearborn student.

It is safe to say Mandela's visit hasn't electrified large segments of the suburban population - as did the visit of Pope John Paul II three years ago — but suburbanites will be present when the South African civil rights leader appears Thursday at Tiger Stadium.

Many will be college students, like Davis, who weren't even born when Mandela began his 27 years as à political prisoner.

"THE MANDELA visit is very, very important for us," said Daivs, a member of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority.

Though integrated, the sorority bills itself as the first of its kind geared toward the needs of African-American women.

"It was such an unlikely experience that he would be released and, now, he's here with us."

Accorded a hero's welcome by New Yorkers last week on the first stop of an eight-city U.S. tour, Mandela has been hailed as a champion of civil rights, not only in South Africa, but worldwide.

THAT REPUTATION helped draw the Eastern Michigan University-based Student Organization United for Peace to the Mandella rally, said group member Jennifer Griffith of Plymouth. "We haven't been specifically involved with anti-apartheld activities this year," Griffith said of the small, predominantly white student group. But we have been involved in the fight against racism.

'Certainly, we have nothing like apartheid in the U.S., but there is discrimination. We totally ignore the needs of the poor."

DESPITE THE warm New York reception, Mandela's first-ever visit to the United States has been tinged by controversy.

In a television interview broadcast last week, Mandela made it clear his organization, the African National Congress, would maintain a foreign policy free from the dictates of U.S. foreign policy — even to the point of embracing Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, Libyan dictator Mohammar Khadafi and Cuban leader Fidel Cas-

Money is being raised on behalf of the ANC during the Mandela visit.

While unaware of the controversy, Madonna College student Romon Oglesby said any criticism of Mandela must be weighed against his lifelong commitment to ending apartheid - the South African system that segregates non-whites and denies them the right to vote, among other civil rights.

"HE'S A man of strong beliefs," said Oglesby, a Detroit native, who immersed himself in Mandela's life and works while preparing a high school term paper on the ANC lead-

"The reason he was in prison as long as he was was because he wouldn't change his beliefs."

Stacey Moultrie, a Saginaw native who also attends Madonna, put the . matter more simply.

"He's the man who put his life on the line for civil rights."

SOME OF the students attending were somewhat disappointed the visit wasn't receiving greater interest from their fellow students.

"People are pretty apathetic, not just about this but about other issues as well" Griffith said. "They agree in principle, but they don't want to do anything."

Davis, however, saw other reasons for the lack of interest.

"The University of Michigan is a predominantly non-minority institution. So, I'm not surprised more isn't being done."

For her part, Davis will continue her personal boycott against companies doing business with South Africa's white minority government - a. boycott that prevented the onetime high school yearbook editor from buying her own Inkster High School yearbook.

It is, she senses, what Nelson Mandela would have her do.

Equal chance

Be wary of this vague legalism

TO LEARN what some Michigan legislators have in mind for public schools, you have to know about Kentucky.

Michigan's Constitution requires a "free" system of education. But our Senate Education and House Education committees have reported out different versions of the same idea - "equal opportunity" for educa-

To hear outstate Senate Republicans and some House Democrats with poor school districts in their bailiwicks tell it, this will help Michigan avoid Kentucky's fate. It will give our legislators an incentive to fix up inequitable school funding before the state is bashed with a lawsuit saying our school system stinks because some districts have $2,500 per child while others have $8,000.

To hear the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce tell it, such language invites a lawsuit. It would give poor districts a legal tool to ask the court to raid the treasury on their behalf.

I'm with the Chamber of Commerce.

ONE YEAR AGO this month, the Kentucky Supreme Court ruled the state's entire public school system unconstitutional.

The suit was brought by the Council for Better Education, Inc., a propaganda name for 66 school districts, seven county boards of education and 22 students.

Kentuckians realized they had a problem - high dropout rates, low college attendance, high unemployment, and so on.

The high court decreed free education, available to all, "adequate" to cover basic skills. So far, so good.

It also decreed uniform educational opportunities - substantially equal education.

WHOA! IF Michigan wants to raise the poor districts up from $2,500 a student to (say) $3,200, fine. But if some of our suburban communities recruit industry, hold down city services and choose to indulge our schools, shouldn't we have that

Why can't the Michigan Legislature come up with an answer to equalize school financing, a problem that has been debated in Lansing for nearly 20 years?

Most voters want solutions and can't understand what takes so long like decades.

Nearly 20 years ago, a school superintendent gave me a copy of his doctoral thesis, which had more than. 100 pages of prose and charts showing the inequities of low-valuation and high-valuation school districts.

About that same time, Congress acted with lightning speed when it comes to other issues - like endorsing a constitutional amendment in the late 1960s to lower the voting age in federal elections to 18 from 21.

The major reason for the endless debate on policy issues is that the Congress and Legislature have different agendas than the general pub-

Agendas are different

But the top priority of elected officials in Washington and Lansing, generally, is to get re-elected. A good example was a telephone conversation I had with a state legislator in the early 1980s. . WE TALKED about the the latest legislative proposals on the major issues of the day. The legislator gave generalized answers to that and other questions.

Then the talk switched to how the person's legislative district would be changed in 1982 because of the 1980 federal census and subsequent revision of House district boundaries.

On that topic, the official had specific details memorized, including which secondary roads would be the boundaries of the latest reapportionment proposal.

A few months ago, I talked to a congressman and his staffers. The discussion focused on the administration's war on drugs and related is-

Sunday morning TV talk shows.

But our elected leaders aren't too concerned about policy debates. They are more interested in increasing their name identification are throughout the district and staying week out of trouble.

On the state school financing issue, elected officials, local school leaders, and voters all have different agendas.

Elected officials have bitter memories about the 1983 recall of two state senators who supported a mafor increase in the personal income tax rate. They aren't anxious to go that route again.

On the same wavelength are voters who, generally, don't want to pay more in property taxes. They are already faced with rising tax bills because of the annual increases in their

A clear message was sent by voters last November when they rejected overwhelmingly a modest increase in the state sales tax rate.

The proposal was buried by a 4-1 margin in western Wayne County communities.

In the June 11 school elections. most Detroit-area school districts saw money issues defeated. An exception was in Garden City, where a 3.83-mill increase was approved along with a $3 million bond proposal to eliminate a budget deficit.

IN LANSING, Gov. James Blanchard wants local schools to do more to upgrade programs. But he isn't providing any new dollars.

But local school boards and administrators are talking a different language. They want the gap between high-valuation and low-valuation school districts narrowed. But Lansing is on a different wavelength and doesn't want to spend any more money.

The problem is that with the conflicting agendas between Lansing. local school leaders, and taxpayers, no one is interested in getting the key players together to discuss how to share common goals.

Without that, discussion of specific 227 solutions is meaningless.

Being distinct in dress also

To the editor:

In the April 26 article, "But Dad, Everybody Else Is doing It!" there were a lot of logical tips to parents on how to handle a situation where their child wants to do something that "everybody else" is doing. However, you neglected to discuss handling a situation where a teen wants to dress or do something that NO-BODY else is doing.

I know a lot of people who dress in outfits which are considered weird because almost nobody else wears anything like them. One of my friends is constantly harassed by her parents about her clothing because 'nobody else at school dresses like that!" The clothes aren't revealing or obscene; just different.

Many parents are more uncomfortable about their kids looking different than their peers than their kids following fads and trends. They would much rather see their adolescent children dressed "normally" in the latest style than an alternative style which they consider "weird" or "something a drug addict would

Legislature passes budget-balance bill

AP — The House and Senate last week approved a spending plan to balance this year's budget after months of political bickering over which programs should suffer.

The measure is expected to be signed by Gov. James Blanchard, although it hurts several of his pet programs.

Of the overall $7.3 billion state budget, about $186 million was cut from some areas, and that amount and another $28 million was added to other programs which are in danger of running out of money by fiscal year's end on Sept. 30.

Lawmakers are hoping to iron out next year's budget within two weeks. The supplemental budget bill was needed to complete this fiscal year penditures and permit lawmakers to finish a eral years. Sen. Nicleately

The supplemental budget bill was approved 64-36 in the House and 25-9 in the Senate.

"We've got things pretty well under control and headed toward the finish line," said Senate Majority Leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleas-

Several cuts that had been called for were avoided due to a decision to defer capital outlay funds.

Engler voted against the bill, saying that shifting expenditures from the general fund to the State Building Authority "results in an unrealistic condition of the current budget."

State Treasurer Robert Bowman said it makes no sense to burden the current general fund hudget with expenditures that will extend over sev-

Sen. Nick Smith, R-Addison, said he was opposed to the distribution of new state police troopers, which he said favors Detroit

"I'm an unhappy camper. I feel we've caved in in a lot of areas we shouldn't have caved in on," he said.

Sen. Harry Gast, R-St. Joseph and chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said he didn't agree.

"We made considerable progress.
This compromise addresses the problem. If we don't have a supplemental, we don't have targets for next year's budget." Gost said.

next year's budget," Gast said.
Engler said later that the Senate Fiscal Agency feels the state is still about $100 million short of a balanced budget.

"This supplemental (budget bill) will allow the administration to go through the election without an admission" the budget is out of whack, he said.

The measure passed the House with little discussion. Rep. Susan Munsell, R-Fowlerville, encouraged her colleagues to reject the bill because she objected to the process used in a House-Senate conference committee.

The conferees only are supposed to work out differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill, but they often add and subtract items that weren't an issue before. She objected to that.

The agreement postpones Blanchard's computers in the classroom project until Nov. 15. A district would only be able to get a computer if it has a teacher certified in how use it as a teaching tool. About 470 districts have applied for the 24,000 computers.

The Youth Corps job training program for young adults was cut by $4' million from its $22 million budget.

The steroid preparations used stay where injected; they do not enter the blood stream. Thus, you need not be concerned that the injections will lead to hyptertension, obesity, salt loss, and softening of bones as can occur when you take steroids by mouth. The injections are longacting, so you likely will obtain a sustained effect.

However, the procedure has its hazards.

However, the procedure has its hazards.

One is that steroid crystals themselves can cause an irritation more painful than the inflammation that the injection is meant to treat. The pain comes from crystals of steroid that act like slivers in the joint. Usually this reaction clears in twenty four

Another hazard is injection when a joint is injected, in this instance the steroid defeats the body's own defenses and makes the infection worse!

Because of the above hazards, your physician may be wary about using steroid injections at a time when you want to try them without delay.

Oysters a rite of passage

I'll never forget eating my first raw oyster.

The passage into culinary adulthood was right after my 20th birthday. A group of friends had driven to Miami to catch a $39 day cruise to Freeport in the Bahamas. That day I would slurp my first bluepoint, in addition to purchasing my first bottle of $1.78 gin, inuring myself to a long week in a compact car with three other guys whose only bath was in a salt-filled ocean.

Enough said about the gin and the friends. Fortunately, that radical part of my life is behind me. The bluepoints, however, were just a start to an amorous relationship with shell-crusted mollusks. In all honesty, I never chewed the delicate bi-valved creature, instead opting to swallow him/her whole, embellished with just a splash of fresh lemon juice. There was definitely more flavor from the lemon than from the oyster, but since it was my first taste, I wasn't complaining.

Oysters are proliferous little creatures. At various stages of an oyster's life, it can be either male or female. The oyster can't seem to make up its mind which is bet-ter. Seems there are a number of factors that will help determine the sex of an oyster — the number of plankton in its diet, water temperature and the salinity of the water.

BECAUSE THEY are so sexually ambidextrous, one male, when ready to mate, sets off a chain reaction in the oyster bed. Females lay eggs in their shells and when the male releases his sperm, eggs and sperm from all the oysters in their beds are released virtually simultaneously until the water turns a milky white color.

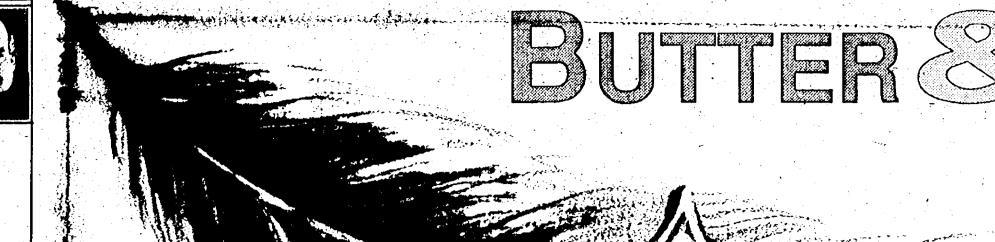

A fertilized egg then develops into larvae, which attach themselves to almost anything, only to begin a life of sedentary growth with millions of other oysters still not sure which gonads they want

Oysters have been cultivated for thousands of years. In the Eastern United States, most oysters are grown in natural beds rather than cultivated and are still harvested by traditional methods. From Long Island, home of the internationally known bluepoint oysters, following the coast past Florida to Texas and going as north as Olympia, Ore., home of the most delicate Olympian oysters I have ever tasted, coastlines are the homes of our nation's oysters. Man is presently the largest threat to oysters. Not discounting the effects of nature, the biggest threats to the oyster population are pollution and overfarming.

Oysters, unfortunately, are usually associated with many myths. Are oysters aphrodislacs? No self-respecting Roman orgy would have been complete without a Nubian slave shucking oysters by the thousands to satiate the lusty diners. Actually, any food of the sea can ride this wag-

The sea and romance will be forever intertwined because Approdite, goddess of love, rose from the depths with the power of granting beauty and invincible charm. It became a powerful notion that those who ate the most powerful seafood were the most fervent in love. To test this theory, drink the oyster liquor in your half shell - it's all sea water. Judge for yourself.

ANOTHER MYTH about oysters, which persists through the years, is that they should not be eaten in months that do not have the letter "R" in their name. Quahog wash. No doubt, there was a basis for this belief, especially before modern refrigeration. More significantly, during the summer months, when oysters reproduce, its meat can be fat and gooey. Later it is lean and watery but in no way harmful to

Choices for lighter cooking

By Geri Rinschler special writer

O SAY THAT eating in the '60s is different from eating in the '90s is quite an understatement. In 1960, Americans consumed as much butter as margarine. Since few of us were aware of the nutritional values of the two, the assumption is that the preference for margarine was based on price.

Few of us were cooking with oil except to prepare ethnic dishes from the Mediterranean or Middle East. Without a doubt there was always a can of Crisco vegetable shortening on the pantry shelf for deep frying.

As we plunge into the '90s, it's obvious that most Americans (a ratio of 3-to-1) have given up butter for margarine, for a variety of reasons.

Margarine and the new vegetable oil spreads are still much cheaper than butter. Often they are half the price. Today, the outstanding advantage is not price but the fact that margarine has no cholesterol.

COOKING STYLES are changing quickly. Everyone is cooking lighter and healthier in home and professional Manufacturers of oils, margarines and vegetable oil spreads are constantly introducing new products increasing our options for reducing cholesterol and saturated fat from our diet.

As a result, many of us are confused, trying to decide what's best for cooking and eating.

ALTHOUGH THERE is no one answer, a few cooking tips and shopping guidelines should help you to worry less. and enjoy cooking and eating more.

Both butter and margarine are fats. Butter by law must be made with no less than 80 percent milkfat.

On the other hand, classic margarine must be made with 80 percent fat but generally from vegetable oil such as soy, corn or safflower oil.

Margarines labeled light or diet usually have less fat but contain more water. Although home cooks may substitute margarine for butter in a recipe, this often works because butter and margarine have the same fat content. RELATIVELY NEW in your grocer's dairy case are vegetable oil spreads such as I Can't Believe It's Not Butter, Imperial's A la Mode or Land o Lakes Spread with Sweet Cream. Most of these spreads have a low percentage of fat and cannot be labeled as margarine. According to the National Association of Margarine manufacturers, vegetable oil spread does not have a standard of identity and can have anywhere from 40 percent to 80 percent fat content.

Therefore, if you read the fine print you will notice manufacturers do not recommend them for cooking or

This vegetable mixture can be served alone or added to an omelet base to create an interesting frittata. Serves 4.

- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 6 medium mushrooms, sliced
- 1/2 yellow pepper, trimmed, cubed

- 5 cherry tomatoes 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

In a wok or deep skillet heat oil over medium high heat. When hot add onlon and peppers, stirring constantly until tender. Remove from pan and set aside. Add garlic when lightly golden, add onions, pepper and herbs, stirring until heated. Correct seasonings, top with tomatoes. Serve covered with Parmesan cheese.

ALONG WITH the variable fat content, vegetable oil spreads also have variable amounts of salt and milk sol-

Like margarine, vegetable oil spreads are cholesterolfree (and unlike sweet butter, which has 36 milligrams of cholesterol per tablespoon, sorry to say).

For many of us, margarine is not an acceptable alternative to cooking with butter for the sake of lowering cholesterol. Instead, substituting vegetable oil low in saturated fat works well in most stovetop recipes.

CANOLA OIL has the lowest amount of saturated fat (6 percent) and no cholesterol, according to the United States Department of Agriculture's Handbook No. 8-4.

Safflower oil has 9 percent saturated fat, corn oil 13 percent, olive oil 14 percent, soybean oil 15 percent, but-terfat 55 percent and coconut oil 92 percent. As a result, canola oll's popularity is growing rapidly.

Sharon Masselink, owner of Birmingham's Muffins and More, is very particular about the ingredients she uses in her oat bran muffins and breads approved by the American Heart Association.

"I began using canola oil about six months ago," she

"It's a very mild, light oil which I use in salad dressings, for sauteing, and for making our zucchini breads, or, for any recipe that has oil as an ingredient.

'As a matter of fact, our muffin batters are even lighter than when we used corn and safflower oil."

CANOLA OIL is a vegetable oil made from a plant called rape, which is similar to turnip greens. The oil is pressed from seeds contained in long, slender pods.

Canola oll, along with safflower and soybean oil, can be considered as an all-purpose oil for most cooking techniques. Although canola oil is lowest in saturated fat, it naise. Look for it in the health food sections in most local grocery stores or in a health food store.

BAKING AND cooking oil sprays are another way to cut back on fats from your diet.

Olive Mist, which is 100 percent extra virgin olive oil, is among my favorite new discoveries. It's great to saute vegetables and omelets, and to coat baking pans when making savory muffins and quick breads.

Olive Mist is distributed by El Molino and also can be found in grocery stores and health food markets.

Informality backdrops fine seafood

One can't go into Norm's Oyster Bar and Grill in Southfield without remembering its predecessor the Vineyards, a venerable restaurant where dining was once a formal, intimate affair.

The Vineyards is gone, and the restaurant has been dressed down. but the building's wonderful architectural features remain — brick, vaulted ceiling moldings framing the main dining room.

Under Norman LePage's ownership, the restaurant has been lightened up for a less intimate but more friendly atmosphere. The brick is now painted ivory, the booths and tables are covered with chints floral cloths, and guests' attire can range -becued shrimp.

from suits to chines.

Though much more casual, the restaurant still carries on the fine dining tradition. Seafood abounds, and judging from our experience, it is very well prepared. Our swordfish was still moist after being grilled and the bearnaise sauce served on the side provided a nice complement (though serving a bearnaise sauce in a tacky plastic cup is incongruous).

THE SWORDFISH ($14.95) was one of nine seafood specials for the evening, including a platter with shrimp, froglegs, whitefish and scallops served over pasta ($15.95).

Among the special appetizers are a saute shrimp with mushrooms and artichoke hearts ($7.95), baked brie with brown sugar and almonds, and — naturally — oysters — either baked with spinach and cream and topped with hollandaise sauce ($8.95), or served on cracked ice with cocktail sauce ($5.95). There are four types of vintages, said Bruno Prats, owner of Chateau Cos d' Estournel, a Bordeaux second growth.

• Those with ripeness and con-centration (1988, '86, '85 and '82) are the great vintages to cellar.

IN 1987, Bordeaux experienced a normal growing season until rain came early in October, right in the middle of harvest.

Early maturing varieties, such as merlot and most of the white grapes, were picked before the rain. Late ripening varieties, such as cabernet sauvignon and cabernet franc, were diluted. The 1987s are well-made wines. They tend to be light and flavorful but not as concentrated as those from vintages boasting a dry har-

IT HAS BEEN our experience that conscientious producers, those that make a severe grape selection, make good wines even underiless-than-ideal conditions.

This vintage is a blessing since most Americans buy wine, age it in the car on the way home and drink it within a week.

Unfortunately, too many consumers buy wines from the great vintages, pay more and drink the wines too early.

A RECENT tasting of 1987 Bordeaux illustrated a user-friendly vin-

"The '87s are great now and will be for the next five to six years," sald Madeline Triffon, sommelier at the London Chop House in Detroit.

"I like the delicious, unrestrained style, forward fruit, youthful balance and soft tannins. Some wines are a touch herbaceous, but that will drop off with another six months' bottle age.

"These wines are made for drinking, not collecting. They are easy, balanced and delicious. What else can you ask for?

"I will buy these wines for the restaurant and put them on our list for a good price. I will serve the '87s while walting for the '85s and '86s to mature. The restaurant trade needed this vintage. I'm very happy."

Triffon prefers the Chateau Beychevelle ($27.50), Chateau Cos d'Estournel ($32) and the Chateau Margaux ($65). For good value she selects the Chateau Meyney ($14) and Chateau Les Ormes de Pez ($14).

"GO FOR THE wines in the lower-middle-price range to drink now, not to cellar." said Richard Vincent, owner of the Traffic Jam restaurant in Detroit.

"This is classy stuff at a good price for the short term. These wines are mostly hits with few misses light and flavorful. I'll sell them at TJ's by the glass."

Vincent's favorites include an excellent Chateau Lynch-Bages ($26), a fabulously sensual Chateau La Mission Haut Brion ($47) and a chocolatey Chateau Plagnac ($7.75) that represents a tremendous value. "I also liked the Chateau Latour

($60), but for less than half its price -I'd buy either the Chateau Pichon-Longueville Baron ($25) or Chateau Gruaud-Larose ($28)."

STATUS-SYMBOL VINTAGES are easy to sell, said Claudia Tyagi, sommelier at the Whitney in Detroit. but she will be recommending several of the 1987 Bordeaux to diners.

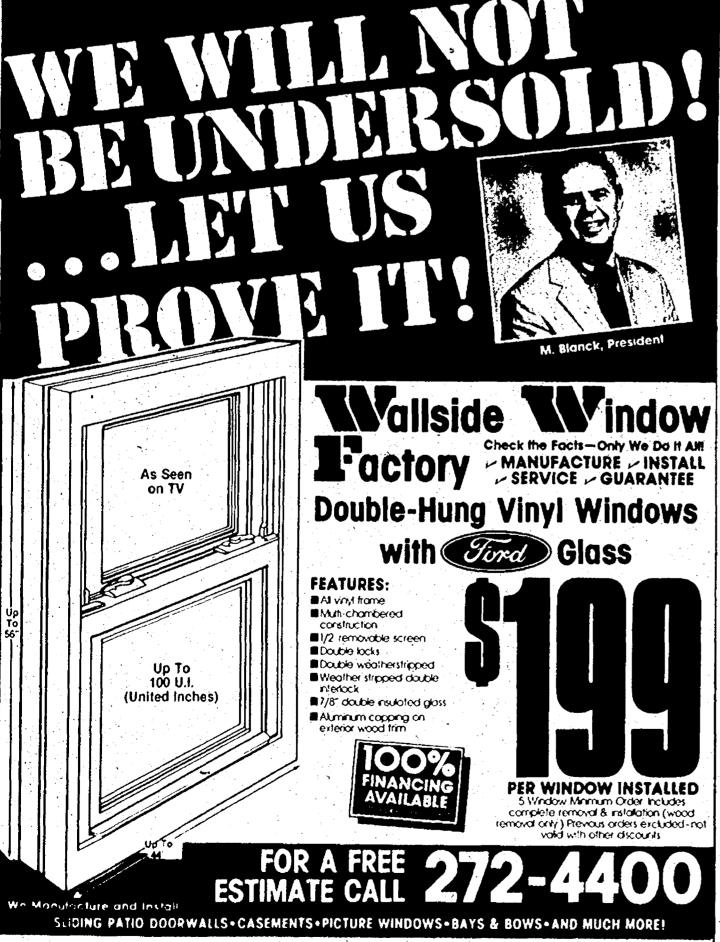

she said. "The wines are pleasant, enjoyable and very viable inclusions for our wine list.

"I noted a continuing herbal theme as I tasted the wines. That component is attractive when the wine is balanced but represents a ?. flaw when the wine is out of balance.

"I'm very enthusiastic about these wines. They are drinking nicely now and will continue to please the palate for another five years.

"Great wines do not always taste delicious when young. Someone tasting a young wine from a great vintage will certainly wonder what the critics think is so great.

Just between you and me, I am thrilled that the school year is over. Even though the boys are still involved in various activities, we are all able to sleep in a little bit longer in the morning and, oh, what a treat that is.

Of course, the flip side of the coin is that they are staying up later but that is OK, too. We are enjoying the more relaxed pace of summer living and, at least so far, no one has cut loose with that old and familiar summer lament, "I'm bored and don't have anything to do!"

As summer begins to hit its stride and the long, languld days are ours to enjoy, there is one discordant note that never seems to go away. What's that, pray tell — 'tis the dinner bell knell.

You know the scenario. You have put in a long day with the kids, it's hot, the back of your neck is sticky, it's 5 p.m. and one of the kids asks, "Hey, Mom, what's for dinner?" You, who have been busy all day playing camp director, realize with horror and disbelief that the fact of the matter is there is nothing for dinner. This situation probably never happens to you. After all, you are an organized, efficient woman of the '90s who always plans ahead. But in case it ever does, I send the following Winner Dinner to your rescue.

SUBMITTED BY Jayne Wochomurka of Farmington Hills, this week's menu features a meal that can be prepared entirely in a food processor. Wochomurka has worked as a food processor demonstrator for seven years. The mother of two boys, she has found the machine to be a time-saver on a daily basis.

Her menu for chicken salad, garnished with tomatoes and cucumbers; blueberry muffins, and strawberry ice offers a cool and refreshing summer dinner for you and your family that can be prepared from start to finish in one hour.

A native Nebraskan, Wochomurka and her family moved from Tennessee to the Detroit area two years ago. They love Farmington Hills and feel very at home and settled there. Besides loving to cook and doing a lot of car pooling, Wochomurka has done volunteer work for the Farmington Hills school system. She is a member of the newly formed Parmington Hills Community Education Advisory Council and is looking forward to teaching food processor cooking classes for the Community Education program as well.

CHICKEN SALAD GARNISHED WITH SLICED TOMATOES AND CUCUMBERS

Recipes

Chicken salad has never been easier or better. This recipe, which generously feeds four, is intended for a smaller food processor and easily can be doubled. Although using a food processor will speed up the preparation time, the recipe can be made just as easily by hand.

1 pound cooked, whole boned skinless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pleces (Wochomurka recommends using two packages; 7.5 ounces each, of Tyson frozen marinated chicken breast filets/ Italian style)

2 tablespoons parsley leaves 1/4 of a small onlon, peeled and · guartered

3/3 cup mayonnaise 2 celery stalks Salt

Pepper Curry powder (optional)

Chop parsley and onion fine with the metal blade, about 10 seconds. Scrape down the work bowl and add mayonnaise and chicken pieces. Pulse/chop 3-5

Leaving chicken mixture in bowl, remove metal blade and insert the medium slicing disc. Cut celery into 4-inch lengths and slice vertically through the feed tube.

Remove the slicing disc and use a spatula to incorporate celery into chicken salad. Season to taste with salt, pepper and, if desired, curry powder to taste.

Place a rounded mound of chicken salad on a bed of lettuce and garnish with sliced tomatoes and cucumbers.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

The crunchy clnnamon sugar topping adds a special touch to these fluffy muffins. It is a wonderful way to make use of in-season berries. Paper baking cups can be used to line the muffin pans. Yields 12 muffins.

- 1½ cup flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda 1/2 cup milk
- 1 stick melted butter or margarine 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla 11/2 cup blueberries (frozen
- blueberries can be substituted for fresh berries.)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Topping 2 teaspoons sugar -1/2 teaspoon cinnamon*

Grease required number of 1/2cup mulfin pans. Mix flour, sugar, salt, baking powder and baking soda with the metal blade until combined, about 5 seconds. Stir milk, butter, eggs and vanilla together in a bowl. Add to dry ingredients and pulse only 2 times. Do not overprocess as the muffins will be tough. Use a plastic spatula to gently stir in berrles. Divide batter among prepared pans. Combine remaining sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle over muffins. ## How to make chocolate candy

AP — For making molded chocolate candles or dipped chocolates, use the slow, low-temperature melting method. The candles can be stored at room temperature without developing streaks or smearing when touched.

MELTING CHOCOLATE

• In a 4-cup glass measure or 11/2-quart glass mixing bowl combine the amount of semisweet chocolate pieces and shortening called for in your recipe.

• In a large glass mixing bowl pour very warm tap water (100 to 110 degrees F) to a depth of 1 inch. Place measure or mixing bowl containing chocolate inside larger bowl. Water should cover the bottom half of the measure containing chocolate.

• Stir chocolate constantly with a rubber spatula until the chocolate is completely melted and smooth. This takes about 15 to 20 minutes.

When water begins to cool, remove measure containing chocolate. Discard cool water; add warm water. Return measure containing chocolate to bowl of water.

• If chocolate becomes too thick while dipping candies, remove measure containing chocolate and replace water with warm water. Return measure containing chocolate to bowl of water and stir chocolate until it again reaches dipping consistency.

CHOCOLATE TIPS

• Avoid humidity, steam and wet utensils. Even a minuscule amount of moisture can cause melting chocolate to thicken or crumble. Be sure candy-making utensils are dry, and watch carefully to make certain that not even one drop of water enters the melting chocolate. Don't try to melt chocolate on a hot or humid

• For even melting, constantly scrape and stir chocolate. Don't hurry the process. It's important that chocolate be melted slowly and evenly.

• Use solid vegetable shortening when melting chocolate, not butter or margarine. These fats contain moisture that could cause the chocolate to thicken and become grainy.

• Add no more than 1 tablespoon shortening for each 6 ounces of chocolate. Extending chocolate with extra shortening or water will ruin it.

• Store chocolate in a cool, dry place between 65 and 70 degrees F, with less than 50 percent humidity. Higher temperatures or humidity may cause a gray appearance called "bloom" to appear in the chocolate before or after melting. Bloom won't affect the chocolate's flavor or quality.

CONFECTIONERS' COATING

• It can't match chocolate for flavor or texture, but it doesn't require a special melting process. Just chop and melt it on the rangetop or in the microwave. Don't add shortening.

• Made in several flavors, confectioners' coating is usually stocked with the baking supplies in your supermarket. It's sometimes called "summer coating," or "candy coating," or "almond bark."

All-Observer contingent versatile

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

BSERVERLAND PRODUC-ES fine baseball teams and talent every year, and the Class of '90 can be content in the knowledge it has continued that tradition.

Farmington and Redford Catholic Central, champions of their respective leagues, have two players aplece on the 11-man squad.

Pitcher Chris Schmid and outfielder Kevin Young led the Falcons to the Western Lakes Activities Association crown, their first district title and a regional final appearance. Farmington's Kevin Kansman, who spent three seasons molding his talent and preparing the Falcons for this season, was named the Coach of the Year after guiding Farmington to its first league championship in 12" years and a 22-4 record.

Shortstop Paul Pirronello and pitcher-outfielder Keith Bozyk were the leaders on a CC team that captured Catholic League and City championships.

Plymouth Canton also placed two players (catcher Jason Dembny and pitcher/shortstop Geoff Allen) on the honor roll.

Introducing the 1990 All-Area baseball squad:

FIRST TEAM

Chris Schmid, pitcher, Farmington: Schmid could have made the allarea team for his hitting as well as his

"Chris has been valuable to the team. the last three years, because he can pitch and field," Kansman sald. "I'm just happy (Schmid and Young) had good years. Chris didn't hit for average the last two years, but he's always been able to hit. I'm glad he has the stats to prove it."

Schmid had a 2.38 earned run average. Facing 323 batters in 73% innings, he struck out 79 and walked 28. Opponents had 72 hits and scored 25 earned runs off

At the plate, he also had 15 extra-base hits, which included 11 doubles and three home runs, and 29 RBI. He struck outthree times in 90 at bats.

Rob Kowalski, pitcher, Salem: The senior right-hander was largely responsible for the Rocks' late-season surge, which included a championship in a highly competitive district tournament.

He finished with an 8-2 record, both losses being to WLAA champion Farmington. Kowalski struck out 55 and walked 15 in 52 innings. He had a 15-4 career record.

Having the reputation of a battler who confronted opposing hitters with an 85mph fastball, he had a 3.37 ERA.

HONORABLE MENTION

Farmington: Dave Wilson, Eric Miller; Redford Catholic Central: Brett Welling, Kevin Wheeler, Joe Vondracek, Steve Ross, Mark Clary, Dennis Pirronello; Westland John Glenn: Lawrence Scheffer, Brian Stephenson; North Farmington: T.J. Orman, Jason Hamill, Jason Horwitz, Plymouth 8alem: Tom Noonan, Eric Nielson, Jeff Paluk, Dave Mackowiec; Walled Lake Central: Trevor Hopper, Plymouth Canton: Ron Groh, Scott Kennedy, Walled Lake Western: Chris Schneider, Joe Kalhom; Livonia Franklin; Craig Overaltis; Farmington Harrison: Andy Smith; Livonia Churchill: Bob Melster, Mike Thomas; Livonia Stevenson: Sean Henkel, Phil Woods; Redford Thurston: Steve Koss, Jim Stephenson; Wayne Memorial: Jason Welmore; Garden City: Nate Hines, Matt Ward, Nick Mutafis; Redford Union: Joe Bosio, Brian Theis: Redford St. Agatha: Rick Fowler, Livonia Clarenceville: Chris Foss, Kendrick Harrington; Lutheran Westland: Mike Hardles.

"Rob is the most dependable pitcher I've ever coached at Plymouth Salem," coach John Gravlin said. "When the game is on the line, we wanted the ball to be in his hands — and that for the last 'He's probably a better reliever than he is a starter. The closer you are to the end of the ballgame and the more important the situation, the better he is."

Jason Dembny, catcher, Canton: Dembny, a three-year starter for the Chiefs, is noted for his defensive ability but was an offensive threat, too, hitting Dembny, who signed to play for Henry Ford Community College next year, had seven extra-base hits out of 30, including five doubles and one homer. He drove in 26 runs and scored 24.

"You have to be willing to sacrifice your body to play there, and he does that." coach Fred Crissey sald. "He frames so well and blocks so well. Those are the kind of things you look for in a catcher.

"Jason improved every year. He's worked so hard at a tough position and never gives less than he can give."

Jason Gabel, Infielder, Churchill: Considered a pure hitter, Gabel established a single-season, school record with a .492 average and 31 RBI this year.

The senior first baseman had 31 hits, and 14 went for extra bases. He belted eight doubles, two triples and four homers. Gabel also scored 23 runs.

"Offensively, his skills are the best a Churchill player has had since I've been the head coach," Herb Osterland said. "People talk about having a quick, live bat. The ball just files off Jason's bat. From an offensive standpoint, he has been a fantastic player the last two years."

Paul Pirronello, Infielder, Catholic Central: Pirronello, a member of the Class A all-state first team, hit .452 with 42 hits in 93 at bats. He had 17 extrabase hits, including 12 doubles.

Pirronello, who will play for Madonna College next year, also hit two triples and three homers. He knocked in 31 runs and scored 43.

"He's the top hitter we've had in my nine years at CC, average wise," coach John Salter said. "He played very well at shortstop. Actually, his best position is outfield, but we had to use him at shortstop. He has a strong throwing arm, runs the bases well. He's a smart baseball player - knows the game."

Geoff Allen, infielder, Canton: Allen was an all-WLAA pitcher, but his versatility afforded him a place as an infielder on the all-area team. He played shortstop when he didn't pitch and, like Schmid, was equally as good at both.

Allen, a senior who is considering Hardin-Simmons or Kansus City Community College, hit .420 with 28 hits in 69 plate appearances and had 28 RBI. His hits included six doubles, two triples and two

As a pitcher, he was 8-2 with a 2.09 ERA. Allen threw a no-hitter and three shutouts. He struck out 74 and walked 17 in 68 innings. Opponents had 40 hits and

"You'd like to have nine guys like him," Crissey said. "Every day he comes to the ballpark, win or lose, he gives his best effort. To me that's the mark of an athlete who's going to successful if he goes on."

Jerry Shippe, infleider, John Glenn: Shippe was one of the most feared hitters on yet another quality Glenn ballclub, having eight extra-base hits and a .410 average.

"He's hit well ever since he was a sophomore," said Glenn coach Norm Hoenes. The second baseman didn't strike out once in 61 at-bats, scored 31 runs and batted in 21 runs. His extra-base hits consisted of five doubles, three triples and two homers. He also stole 12 bases. "Jerry worked hard this winter on his defense and it paid off," said Hoenes. "Jerry wasn't going to be a DH. He wanted to be a full-time player, and he made Kevin Young, outfielder, Farmington: Possibly the best player in the state by some estimates, Young had an Impressive .511 average and 38 RBI.

The senior all-stater, who also pitched and played third base, had 46 hits - including nine doubles, three triples and four homers — In 90 chances. His .473 career average is a school record.

Young, a three-year varsity player, struck out only four times and walked seven. He also stole 22 bases.

"Kevin has the best baseball skills of anyone I've ever coached," Kansman said. "He's strong all the way around. He has a good glove, a good arm and hits well. I don't think he has a weakness."

Andy Weighill, outfleider, Clarenceville: Weighill was the most valuable player in the Metro Conference; hitting .438 with four homers and 19 RBI. He had 14 stolen bases.

The senior captain, who hit .550 as a junior, was twice an all-league player and was named the top male athlete at Clarenceville this year. The center fielder would like to continue his career at the University of Detroit.

"Andy was our team," said first-year coach Mark MacDonald, who had Weighlif on his South Farmington Connie Mack team last year. "He's the reason I coached the team. He's a great kid on and off the field. He has excellent speed, quick hands and great awareness."

Gary Devine, outfielder, Harrison: Devine also excelled as a pitcher and fielder, leading another late-season district champlonship game.

As the lead-off batter, he hit .410, walked 23 times and scored 36 runs. He also had 18 stolen bases, nine RBI and 11

extra-base hits. He had eight doubles, glving him a school career record of 18,

He had a 5-6 pitching record and was one shy of a single-game record when he struck out 14 against Auburn Hills Avondale in the district. Harrison won nine of next year, also became a force with the bat, hitting. 333 and, with 19 walks, having a high on-base percentage.

"He helped us as much offensively as he did with his pitching," Salter said, "He really improved over his junior year. He was under .200 last year and hit .333 this year. He batted lead-off and had a knack for getting on base."

Salem pitcher paces All-Stars

By Brad Emons staff writer

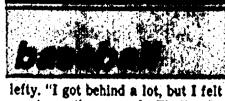

From their view atop the mound. Tiger Stadium never looked better for pitchers Brian Feldman of Birmingham Country Day and Rob Kowalski of Plymouth Salem. The two combined to hold the West squad hitless over the final four innings Friday, leading the East to a 6-3 victory in the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association All-Star Classic.

Feldman and Kowalski were the most effective of the five O & E players selected for the ninth annu-

Feldman, who went 8-0 during high school season patterning himself after Sandy Koufax and Frank Viola, used his craftiness to set down six straight batters in the sixth and seventh innings.

THE COUNTRY DAY ace is headed to Michigan this fall, which is currently under probation for NCAA violations. He opted to walk on after turning down a scholarship offer from Miami of Ohio.

"It's always been my dream to play there," said Feldman of U-M. "It's one of the top 20 schools in the nation academically. After they're off probation next year, I'll be able to go on scholarship."

Kowalski, meanwhile, is undecided about his future, but may have turned the heads of a few college scouts after striking out five of the seven batters he faced in the en innings (for Troy's American eighth and ninth innings to earn a

I felt real good because it was the first time I pitched since Sunday and my arm was well rested. I was a little nervous, but once I got the first strike over, the adrenaline took over."

Kowalski, who walked only one, said he has not selected a college, but hopes to "go somewhere and play."

EAST LEFT FIELDER Kevin Young of Farmington, named to the Coaches Association Dream Team, went 0-for-2, but scored one of the East's four runs in the fourth inning to hand Petoskey left-hander Toby McFarland the loss.

Awaiting test results which may determine where he'll play collegiately, Young called the experience "something I'll always remember, I had a good time."

In the meantime, he'll play in two summer baseball leagues including the Livonia Collegiate circuit for Little Caesars.

Rochester Adams' shortstop/catcher James Bonnici was reduced to cheering from the sideline.

The 6-foot-4, 200-pound draft pick of the Seattle Mariners sat out the game with a broken hand, suffered earlier this month while diving back to the bag in a district semifinal game against Rochester.

BONNICI'S future, however, is bright. He has the option of signing with the Mariners, or accepting a baseball ride to Michigan State.

"Right now I'm leaning to go to school," he said. "Wherever it is, I'll go anywhere they'll play me." Missing a chance to play at Tiger Stadium, however, couldn't dampen Bonnici's spirits. "It was tough not being out there," he said. "But it's still fun being here." Bubba Wyngarden, a catcher/outfielder from St. Joseph, hit an inside-the-park homer in the second inning en route to West team MVP honors. Steve Bender of Utica, who knocked in a pair of runs, was named East squad MVP.

Aaron Knieper, a pitcher from Saginaw Nouvel Catholic Central, was voted Mr. Baseball by the Coaches Association.

The right-hander worked the first three innings, giving up a pair of runs.

The winning pitcher was right-hander Dave Wood of Berkley, who hurled two innings, giving up a run. He relieved starter Bill Hardy (Detroit Benedictine), who went the first three, allowing a pair of runs.

Metro summer league features college talent

The Metro Suburban Hockey, League begins its eighth year of operation this week. The league's longevity is a tribute to its creator, A.J. Baker.

Baker has seen to it the MSHL remains functional each year, and the 1990 season starts Wednesday with a 7 p.m. double-header at the Plymouth Cultural Center. The five-week regular season features games on Sunday, Monday and Wednesday nights at the Plymouth facility and Thursday nights at the Wayne Ice Arena. The regular season ends Monday, July 30. The playoffs begin the next day and conclude with the championship game on Tuesday, Aug. 7. According to Baker, commissioner of the MSHL and its driving force since its inception, the percentage of returning players is near 70 percent. "That's a big part of what the league is based on — guys getting to know each other and wanting to play with people they know,"

Baker will have two leagues once again, the MSHL and the fourteam MSHL II. Both are for players 15 and above, but the younger ones fill out the MSHL II ranks with some exceptions.

The college players include Glen Revak of NCAA champion Wisconsin, Plymouth Salem grad and Western Michigan player J.P. LaRoche and Dave Burke, a Redford Union grad, former Compuware player and member of the Cornell squad. Some of the familiar names include Alan Carnes and John Smith of Plymouth and Mike Stahley and Dan Phelps of Livonia. Pietila is a plentiful name with 10 brothers and cousins in the league, including vets Tim and Keith.

It's a dream come true, or so hope the 13 players who were invited for a return trip after the Detroit Rockers' open tryout June 16 at Beechwood Arena.

Chances are still slim that any of the returnees will advance much further. They may never get a shot with the newest entry into the American Indoor Soccer Association,

But don't tell them that. Besides, getting a shot at least provides a chance.

Of the 13 (out of almost 90 who tried out) invited back for a closer look are a couple of local players who will be facing decisions, if they are to pursue a career in soccer.

For Erik Enyedy of Southfield and Oakland University, the decision could alter his career. Edward Dzyngel faces a different choice, an educational one.

BOTH, INSISTS Rockers' coach Brian Tinnion, could make it with the Rockers. Their chances are improved by their hometown status and, hopefully, appeal.

Of Enyedy, a midfielder for OU whose collegiate eligibility ended last fall, Tinnion said: "He's the type of player who's got very good speed, good endurance and bravery. He's not afraid to go in after a ball. His weakness was he didn't pass the ball as well as we'd like.

"But four years of college have improved that. And training with regular players on a regular would his education, if he is relying on athletic reserve basis in case of injuries to starters.

Dzyngel has been playing indoor at Tinnion's Total Soccer facility in Farmington Hills since it opened, eight years ago.

"WHEN HE first started, he was just an average player, but he's developed," said Tinnion of Dzyngel. "He's got a lot of heart. He's hard in the tackle. He just needs to get a better understanding of the game."

Enyedy will graduate in the fall after completing an internship this summer. Any job opportunities after that will have to wait, though, if pro

LIKE ENYEDY, Dzyngel played midfield in school. Both figure to be defensive specialists with the Rockers. Both also think they have what it takes to make it.

"I feel stronger indoor (than outdoor)," said Dzyngel. "I like the pace better outdoor, but I'm more confident indoor towards my defense. In indoor, everything changes so fast."

Enyedy agreed. "Indoor is a much faster game. It's a lot different. You're so much more involved, you're constantly being called upon."

Things could change faster if both survive the next tryout, scheduled for September. The Rockers' season opens in November.

The uncertainty doesn't bother Dzyngel. "If you can do what you love, and get paid for it, I think that's great," he said.

The Rockers will also be looking at local goalkeepers at a later date. Fifteen showed up at the last tryout, far too many to rate accurately. Among the leading keeper candidates to make it to the Rockers are Brian O'Shea and Chris Moore, both of Livonia and former Schoolcraft

Time to learn

Teachers offer lessons

along with certain other sports, all have the common factor in which participants can get some instruction and be able to improve their game.

Fortunately for bowlers, there are plenty of very fine professional instructors around who are available to work with the bowler to improve his/her game at a relatively nominal cost.

If you are already a good bowler, you might think twice about taking lessons. It is a fact that even the big name professionals still receive a lot of help from their coaches and instructors.

In bowling, it is difficult to see yourself bowl; therefore, a knowledgeable observer can pick out the faults and show how to make the necessary corrections. Now that summer is here, this is the Ideal time to get lessons if you are ambitious enough to seek personal improvement. The bowling centers have plenty of open lanes available at summer rates.

There are a lot of qualified instructors and the opportunity is there for plenty of good practice time between now and when the fall leagues begin.

Following is a list of some instructors in the area: · David Mahaz at Cloverlanes in Livonia works by appointment only. He can be reached at 525-5090.

• Mike Samardija and Bryan Gogolin at K&S Bowling. They can be reached at

• John Bennett at Plum Hollow Lanes in Southfield is a former touring professional who can instruct at all levels of ability. He is generally available on weekday afternoons at 353-6540.

Hall-of-Famer Ed Lubanski is available to meet for a lesson at any convenient bowling center. He can be reached at 514-4135.

· Ray Kreuter handles pro shop dugoals. They won their semifinal ties at Westland Bowl. He works by apmatchup in a shootout before falling pointment at 722-7570. There may also be an open clinic Thursday from 2-4 p.m. for Members of the team include anyone who wants to get some pointers. Jonathan . Hunter, keeper/striker;

 Randy Pierce and Tom Marlow op-Drew Leppert, keeper/striker, Joe erate the pro shop at Super Bowl in Can-Nichols, sweeper; Daniel Goldin, ton. They offer instruction by appointment before noon and after 7 p.m.

 Mary Mohacsi and Mark Mohacsi have been teaching bowlers for many years at Merri-Bowl in Livonia. They will give private lessons and also offer a group course called "Up Your Average." Mary and Mark are known for their expertise. Call them at 427-BOWL.

 John Fallows operates the pro shop at Country Lanes in Farmington Hills. He is an expert instructor and can help the more advanced bowlers. His number is 478-1112. Jim Hamlin and Jack Treolar Jr. are available at Country Lanes for additional coaching.

of the Year, is oriented toward the youth bowler who has competitive ambitions. Ed can be reached at 477-5047 for an appointment. He can also advise young bowlers as to getting started in YABA competitive leagues. • At Bowl One in Troy, Helen Wolak is available for instruction. She does exceptionally well with the youth bowlers and ladies. The number to call is 588-

 Howie Gerenraich of Southfield is available for instruction in the Oakland County area. He operates the pro shop at Century Bowl in Waterford, but he can meet at a more convenient house.

Howie recently shot an 846 series, which included a perfect game. He attributes some of his success to the fact he is giving lessons to others, which seems to help his game as well. Call him at $55-

I am sure there are many other fine bowling instructors out there that should be mentioned. If I have missed someone, drop me a line and I will include the information in the next issue of 'Ten Pin

● Every Monday at 10 p.m. during the summer, the Sweepers competition goes at Country Lanes in Farmington Hills. This is a series of two games for qualifying followed by match-play eliminations to determine the money winner.

Last week Jason Stephenson beat out Larry Franz for the top prize, and the week earlier Ken Harvey took Dan Myers down to the wire for a pocketful of gold.

Playing 'cat and mouse' on a bicycle

By Pat Schutte staff writer

It's known as a "velodrome."
To bicycle enthusiasts, it's home for a high speed sprint style of bl-cycle racing. To the casual onlooker, it may seem more like an old, broken down reservoir or an odd-looking foundation of some sort.

It's definitely not something you'd expect to find on the outskirts of Detroit.

But there it is, Hidden inside a hilly park on Outer Drive that used to be used to race Soap Box Derby cars, it sits foreign to all of the other architecture in the area. as if allens of something had constructed it centuries ago.

But instead of allens and centuries, it was Mike Walden, Sam Ruzzin and Fred Cappy and it was a few decades ago.

Created with sweat and cement in 1969 by the Wolverine Sports Club, the Dorais Velodrome has seen a lot in its 21 years. It's survived on very limited funding. It's felt the freezing and thawing and shows it in its cracked surface. And it's put up with the idiots who think it's a proving ground for their cars.

And through all the years, it's been the velodrome's friends at the Wolverine Sports Club who have kept it going.

"We're in the process of trying to get Detroit to back the building of a new facility or re-vamping this one," said Walden, 72, of Royal Oak, who coaches at the track and was just elected to the National Bicycling Hall of Fame in Summerville, N.J. "It would take $50,000 to re-build this track and that's with no lights or bathrooms. It would take millions to build one like they have at Indy (Indianapolis)."

THE VELODROME'S cement oval is one-fifth of a mile around. The turns are banked at 28 degrees with the straights gradually flattening out to 12 degrees. Its banked curves and the transition between the corners and the straights that allow for such speeds to be attained.

"I'd say that sprint speeds on a good course approach 45 miles per hour," Walden said. "Here, we reach about 40 miles per hour."

The bikes that they race and work out on at the velodrome are unlike a normal 10-speed, although they look similar. The most notable characteristic is that they have no brakes.

Called track blkes, they also have a direct drive mechanism which allows the riders to finely tune their speed with their pedaling, so they don't need brakes. That also means that the bikes don't coast.

They also are considerably lighter than the average 10-speed, weighing only, about 20 pounds, have a stiffer frame and smaller tires. The cost for one of these bikes runs from $300-400 up to $2.000.

Bottom line . . . They're built for speed and nothing else.

The riders are dressed for speed much the same way the bikes are. "Second-skin" Lycra shorts and shirts, foam helmets that are flared in the back for minimum wind resistance and shoes built for maximum power that clip into the pedals. And to top it of, the guys shave their legs.

Along with the difference in styles, the shapes of the riders themselves can be compared to the difference between speed and endurance athletes.

"THE TRACK riders are more like sprinters, shorter and chunkier," Walden said. "The road men are more like cross-country runners, long and lean."

Races are counter-clockwise against other riders, teams of other riders or against the clock. There are basically two types of races. Pursuit or chase races are where two riders line up on opposite sides of the track and try to catch each other. Match, or sprint, races are shorter in length and involve more "cat-and-mouse" strategy. Match races run three laps, with the last 1½ laps being the actual sprint.

"There's a lot more action than road racing," Charlie McCall, 19, of Dearborn, who's been racing at the velodrome for four years. "I like the feet page of it."

Sitting next to McCall, getting ready to drop into the bowl-like track, was Doug Chubb, 18, also of Dearborn. There was one noticeable difference between the two. While McCall was snapping his shoes into his pedals, Chubb was wrapping gauze and bandages around his leg. . . from the ankle to the hip, he looked like he'd sideswiped a "cheese garter."

"I was racing at Indianapolls, with three laps to go, when a guy crossed in front of me and hooked my front tire," said Chubb as he kept wrapping his leg. "I slid all the way down the track on my side with my foot still in the pedal. It was my worst crash in 3½ years of racing."

BOTH CHUBB and McCall agree that velodrome racing is more intense than road racing.

"The track races are short and extremely fast," McCall said.

"Yeah, and everything's magnified," Chubb added.

The two racers also mentioned that things can also get pretty

"Guys use their elbows and knees to get ahead in a race," Chubb said. "And the new thing is head butts. You see people getting away with just about anything as long as they keep their hands on the bars."

Getting in shape: 12 pounds to go

By Bill Parker staff writer

Its' hard to believe six weeks have passed since I started a 90-day training program at the One-on-One Athletic Club in West Bloomfield. But hey, time files when you're having

Under the watchful eye of my personal trainer Mike Anthony, Mr. Michigan 1990, I've been working on a weight loss/tone-up program. My ultimate goal is to drop 30 pounds and firm up my (aching) muscles.

So far, I'm ahead of schedule. I've dropped 18 pounds already, but I'll be the first to admit it soasn't easy.

Anthony broke me in easy the first week. It was more of a feeling-out process — a time for me to become familiar with the exercises and Nautilus equipment and a time for Anthony to learn a little about my attitude, desire and work ethic.

The second week we went to work, and to be honest, there were times I wondered if I hadn't made a big mistake.

I worked muscles I hadn't used in years and the end result was a lot of aches and soreness in my legs, arms, chest, back, etc. . . . etc. . . . etc.

"Ninety days of this," I thought to myself. "I'll never make it. I'll burn out. I'll come apart at the seams. I'll never walk again without a limp."

THEN THE REALIZATION set in that those aches and pains were good aches and pains. They weren't like the pain you get when you wrench your back or twist a joint. After I

If could go wrong it does when Eddie Hopper (Alan Alda) gives his daughter Betsy (Molly Ringwald) a fantastic formal wedding in "Betsy's Wedding." Also appearing in the film are Ally Sheedy, Dylan Walsh and Madeline Kahn.

This 'Wedding' is terrific

The world premiere screening of "Betsy's Wedding" (A, R, 90 minutes) June 15 was in the shadow of the "Dick Tracy" hoopla at DisneyWorld in Orlando. Nonetheless, it's a terrific film, synthesizing American concerns with family, ethnic diversity and making choices about whether or not you're going to be your own person.

Ethnic diversity and family are at the core of "Betsy's Wedding." A very imaginative Italian builder, Eddie Hopper (Alan Alda), and his wife Lola (Madeline Kahn) who is Jewish, have two daughters, Betsy (Molly Ringwald) and Connie (Ally Sheedy). Connie's a police officer and Betsy, a design student, is about to marry Jake (Dylan Walsh).

In real life, Alda is Italian and his wife Arlene is Jewish. They have two daughters. He started making notes on this picture when his youngest daughter got married and fin-, ished editing it when his oldest daughter got married.

Betsy's fiance, Jake, is a pretty straight guy with waspish parents, Nancy and Harry Lovell (Bibl Besch and Nicolas Cage). They're also quite wealthy. Therein lies the plot's chief motivation. Eddie can't let the Lovells pay for the wedding despite the fact that his business is coming in on a wing and a prayer.

Despite his inability to pay for it, Eddie assumes the father of the bride's responsibility for an expensive wedding. When one has a family, there's always someone who will help. Eddie turns to his brother-inlaw Oscar Henner (Joe Pesci) who is a successful contractor albeit with certain questionable associates, in particular, Georgie (Burt Young) and his nephew Stevie Dee (Anthony La-Paglia), two characters straight out of Damon Runyon's gallery of comic Complications mount, of course, but always revolving around family and always reiterating the value and importance of that relationship.

The Hopper/Henner/Lovell families have lots of relatives with all the quirks we recognize from our own experiences. Ready recognition of those foibles is important in comedy and Alda exploits them very well.

Excellent performances by the entire cast, in particular the stylized characterizations by Burt Young and newcomer Anthony LaPaglia, highlight this excellent comedy about doing your own thing in that particularly American institution, the ethnically mixed family.

"Betsy's Wedding" proves that people can be individuals and disagree while still loving one another. That's about as nice as it gets.

"Robocop 2" (F, R, 115 minutes) is a grossly violent sequel with little of the style or novelty that made the original interesting thout all it has going for it is an excess of gratuitous violence.

Although the film is supposed to be about Detroit, a phone number on what was represented as the Rouge Plant has a Chicago area code and none of the locales looked familiar.

Certainly, the uni-dimensional caricatures of a black Detroit mayor and a local corporate head were so transparently awful that even Coleman Young's and Roger Smith's strongest critics will not be amused.

There's also a lot of questionable science and murky cyborg psychology while Robocop Murphy's strengths and weaknesses are unclear. Also, the plot is simple-minded. Some bad guys cut up Robocop, some nastier guys reprogram him but a good jolt if high voltage cures everything. Zap and powie . . . Boy, I needed that.

'Zhivago' makes epic return

By John Monaghan special writer

If the world was a scorching sandbox in David Lean's "Lawrence of Arabia," the the director's follow-up epic, "Doctor Zhivago" uses the icecoated cottages, trains and mountains of Mother Russia as its physical and emotional landscape.

"Doctor Zhivago," released in 1965, is a great big lumbering epic

- immensely popular, extremely corny and heavily symbolic. The film makes you realize that with all its excesses, David "Lean" was perhaps the screen's most inappropriately named director.

I've always avoided films like this, partially because I knew they'd lose any power on the the confines of a television screen. What a treat then to see a new print (in its original 197minute running time) unreeled in 70mm Panavision at the epic Fox Theatre downtown.

The theater enjoyed phenomenal success with extended runs of "Lawrence of Arabia" and "West Side Storv." Though playing to considerably smaller houses last week, "Doctor Zhivago," with its timely reference to life in the time of Russia's last revolution, is another excellent

By Dan Greenberg special writer

For video viewers who can't wait until Warren Beatty's current hit, "Dick Tracy," reaches video cassette distribution, there are plenty of older Dick Tracy movies available this Everyone's been discussing the background of the comic strip started by Chester Gould in October 1931. What hasn't garnered as much interest are the old movie serials and television programs done in the '30s. '40s and '50s. Now that Dick Tracy is back in the public eye, some of those programs and movies are being released on video.

Ralph Byrd starred in a 1937 Republic Pictures serial, "Dick Tracy," followed by additional episodes in 1938 ("Dick Tracy Returns"), 1939 ("Dick Tracy's G-Men") and 1941 ("Dick Tacy vs. Crime Inc.). All were 15 episodes each.

In 1947, RKO continued the series with four features including "Dick Tracy Meets Gruesome" (not rated, black and white, 65 minutes) which is available June 27 from Media Home Entertainment. Anne Gwynne is Tess Trueheart and Borls Karloff Billed as a "second feature," Tracy combats a mad slasher, known as 🙏 "Splitface," which was the title it was released under in England. In this film, Junior, Tracy's son, helps unravel the mystery.

For those suffering from Dick Tracy overkill, there's plenty of other videos being released this week. Four episodes of "Bonanza" modestly billed as "America's most loved westerns" — are now on the stands. ## Lloyd Cole discovers music without a band

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

This Lloyd Cole chap is quite a conversationalist. In the course of 15 minutes, subjects shift from golf's U.S. Open, soccer's World Cup, a girl from Kalamazoo, the literary works of Raymond Carver and a little thing called love.

Except the latter seems more than just a little thing with Lloyd. In fact, judging by "Lloyd Cole," it's almost an obsession.

His self-titled solo album on Capitol Records tackles love and relationships in a sardonic sort of way, sounding a bit like Morrissey on the rebound.

Yet, the solo effort sparkles with freshness, a direct way of looking at the emotions at hand. Coupled with the fact this is Cole's first LP minus the Commotions makes this record a triumph of sorts.

"Frankly, I'm relieved I can make a record without a band," said Cole, who will perform on Sunday, July 1, at Clubland with Michael Penn. "That was the real challenge. Once that was overcome, it was to make depressing."

the best record we can."

Also, "Lloyd Cole" is a personal record. Most of the emotional aspects in his life he said had ended in 1988, splitting from his band and his personal life in a funk. He decided to write about it.

IN THE COOL style of Lou Reed or Bob Dylan, Cole expresses his feelings lyrically . . . although he's a bit bitten by cynicism.

Heard in the number "To the Church:" "I'm looking for a religious girl/With child-bearing hips and a wedding veil/But I'm saddened to report that it's not easy."

Ironically, after Cole had written the songs for his solo album he became married. His wife, Elizabeth, was born in Kalamazoo. They were married in December of last year.

"I've always had a skeptical view of romance," he said. "That's not to say I don't encourage it. I think I do. I think life is full of contradictions. I think the song that says it best is . . . 'We're forever saying of forever.'

"Life is full of irony. Without irony, life would be excruciatingly

The most depressing aspect of Cole's career is his lack of recognition stateside. He's always been something of a pop idol in England, yet in America his work has been only appreciated by college and alternative listeners.

Therein lies the irony, since Cole's music is a bit quirky, but certainly palatable for commercial radio with its melodic pop leanings.

FOR THE FIRST time, Cole's touring American venues on his own. He said it's somewhat scary, but so far fans have been receptive. A' hardcore following is familiar with all of his songs.

Cole has always been lauded for his highly literate lyrics. He studied American literature at Glasgow University before forming the Commotions in 1983.

Without a doubt, American author Raymond Carver is his favorite. Cole calls him the greatest writer of the century.

"He seems to get right to the heart of the matter," Cole said. "I just worship the guy. Unfortunately, to the extent it damaged my music for awhile by me trying to become the Raymond Carver of the pop world.

Lloyd Cole expresses himself musically in the cool style of Lou Reed or Bob Dylan.

"On the second album ("Easy Pieces") I think I tried to cram so many words into so little a space."

This double bill was actually part stage presence throughout. of the preliminaries for the Rik Emmet (ex of Triumph) and Eric "I Used to Be an Animal" Burdon Saturday night sets at Hart Plaza dur-

The Detroit quartet, recently signed to EMI Records and now promoting their first major release "Mood Ring," may still be used to performing in more intimate settings because they displayed a lack of

The interplay between brothers Michael and Andrew Nehra and the rest of the band was nice, but they seemed to be playing for themselves. Leaving the door open for improvement, however, were Self's renderings of "Lose Those Shadows" and "Lock Me

The contrast between Second Self and the more experienced four of Rhythm Corps was surprisingly evident as soon as the Corps took the stage. Their 10-song, 50-minute set showed an overall polish that only a little seasoning can bring. Mixed in with the new material were a few from "Common Ground," their major label debut. The anthemic title track and single was the most well-received in the set - not a surprise.

THE BERLIN WALL OF SOUND - The Chesterfield Kings

Today's subject is the new album by the Chesterfield Kings. It's called "The Berlin Wall of Sound." There are many reason why you probably shouldn't buy it. Eight reasons, in fact. Here they are: • The album cover. It features all four of the Kings sitting around after some probable debauchery an empty vodka bottle sits on the floor, beer bottles are strewn around and someone is smoking a cigarette. One of the Kings holds a Weekly World bearing the headline "Hitler Is Alive." This is presumably to show us that he can, in fact, read.

• Lyrics like, "Gonna get myself a shotgun - I only want a little revenge get myself a shotgun - my trigger finger's itchin' again."

Perhaps he is interested in history.

• The look. This is known as the stereotypical rock star look. If you don't know what that is, watch a Bon Jovi video - that's the look. Bangs in eyes, cowboy boots and lots of black. The Chesterfield Kings have dutifully watched Bon Jovi videos, wearing exact replicas of the clothes from the video "Dead or Alive."

• Lyrics like, "I been drinkin' again/it's too bad she couldn't say/ In a trash can I threw her away." It addition to this lyric's obviously Waters. Poor Mr. Waters. • Lyrics like, "I'm gonna shoot to kill I got my ray gun/I'm gonna shoot to kill I'm gonna have some fun." Yeah, it's true, there's nothing more fun than walking around with a black dialect. Didn't this sort of humor go out of style when "Amos 'n Andy" was cancelled?

Other favorites, including "Domi-"Wild Night," "And It Stoned

Though the material spans about a quarter-century, sound quality holds up. The acapella opening to "Jackle Wilson" is surprisingly clean.

Almost from the beginning, Morrison has laid claim to a spot in the rock pantheon, yet his contributions have sometimes been over looked perhaps because his work has been spread over so many labels and not always in print (this album's compiler Mercury Records, is Morrison's fourth U.S. label).

While a boxed set would have been preferable, this one CD package does put things in better perspective and should further secure Morrison's position as one of rock's major artists. - Wayne Peal

Trench warfare

Go ahead. Ask me anything about basement waterproofing.

What's that? You're not the slightest bit interested?

Believe me, it's only a matter of time until hydraulic cement becomes the hot topic around your house. Usually, the event that sparks. this new interest is opening the basement door and seeing your furniture bobbing around in two feet of water.

Until you can experience your own personal flood, take my word that leaky basements build character. They even build muscles.

Today, there are several waterpoofing systems to choose from, but the most permanent solution is still the original technique of blowing up your entire yard with explosives and encasing your foundation in a 40-foot ring of concrete.

If local zoning prohibits the use of TNT, you'll have to resort to digging around the outside of your basement by hand. At first, this sounds difficult, but as you get further into the project, you'll realize that it's merely impossible.

Your goal is to dig a narrow trench, eight feet deep around your entire home. Nature's goal is to bury you alive in the process. Nature uses two weapons to entomb you:

FIRST OF all, it always rains at the most critical time. This dramatic event not only fills the trench with muddy water, but causes it to collapse on you in a true avalanche experience previously known only to miners and mountaineers.

The other trick of nature is a physics principle called the "angle of repose." Theoretically, this dynamic tension between gravity and friction determines the relation between the height and width of a pile of soil. In Teality, it means unless you heave the dirt from your hole 30 feet into your neighbor's yard, it will spill back into the trench and bury you.

If the prospect of digging your own grave doesn't sound challenging enough, consider these additional

First, all your valuable shrubs must be removed. Professional gardeners suggest you carefully dig around each bush and encase the root ball in damp burlap to "reduce trauma." My method is no doubt more upsetting to the plant's psyche. Wrap a chain around the bush, tie it to your car's bumper and accelerate wildly down the driveway.

Secondly, the loose top soil you first encounter will give you a false sense of progress. About 18 inches below grade, you hit a cement-like barrier known as Michigan clay. For the next seven feet, you'll need a pick to loosen it and a burro to haul

THE WORST enemy is tree roots. Even if the nearest tree seems miles from your home, you'll spend the better part of your active years hacking and sawing roots. Why? Botanists tell us that root systems will travel incredible distances to find water. This insatiable thirst means the roots choking your trench probably belong to a tree standing somewhere in Alpena. Barring death from heart attack or cave-in, you will eventually unearth a row of ancient ceramic drain tiles. These are the culprits. They must be replaced with new corrugated plastic tubing that looks exactly like the arms on Will Robinson's robot in "Lost in Space." Incidentally, "Lost in Space" premiered on CBS in 1965, starring June Lockhart (Lassie's mom) and Guy Williams (the original TV Zorro). Despite heavy inter-planetary rainfall, their stranded spacecraft never had drainage problems.

Next, the leaky walls must be sealed with black, gooey pitch often used to repair roofs and trap mastadons at La Brea. Ideally, this tar is applied with a trowel.

HOWEVER, WHEN the fumes and fatigue kick in, you'll plunge your bare arms directly into bucket. Before long, you'll smear your body from head to toe and just roll along the walls as a human applicator.

The final step is hanging giant sheets of plastic to completely seal the walls against, pardon the expression, hell or high water.

At last, you're ready to back fill the trench. Using an expression like "Hey, I'm not shoveling, I'm back filling!" may make you sound more important, but is better translated, "I think my spine is broken." Note: If there is anything you wish to bury (time capsule, toxic waste, pesky neighbor), this is the ideal time.

Congratulations! By doing it yourself, you now have a dry basement, a new job skill and a sense of accomplishment. Best of all, you saved about $3,000 which can be applied directly to back surgery.

I am writing about a matter of the heart. I am in the midst of a divorce and my dilemma involves a teacher at my daughter's junior high.

He is a single parent and I have known him casually over the last three years. Both of my daughters had him as an instructor and I have spoken to him many times when volunteering at the school.

To the point, I think I am falling in love with him. I am not normally a fickle person and in fact, usually let my head rule me rather than my heart.

I think about him constantly, but I would never dream of making a move! I am not quite liberated enough - or confident enough - to be the pursuer. I know he likes me, but not necessarily in a romantic thought about it a little while, I realized that the pains made me feel good. I realized I was finally doing something positive for my body.

With that philosophy in mind, I focused my attention on the work-

Originally, Anthony and I had decided to work one hour a day, four days a week. But because I wanted to lose so much weight I've decided to do more cardiovascular work (Stairmaster, which simulated climbing stairs, and a stationary bicycle), so I could really sweat it off.

I'm up to about 11/2 hours a day with 40 minutes dedicated to cardiovascular work. The rest of the time I work out with light weights and do three sets of 12-15 repetitions on each machine. Two days a week we work my upper body — arms, chest, back and shoulders. The other two days I work my lower body calves, thighs and hamstrings. I rotate between upper and lower body so we don't work the same body part two days in a row.

"To build your muscles up, you actually have to break them down, then let them repair themselves; that's how they develop," said Anthony. "If you don't rest your muscles for a day between workouts, they don't have any time to repair them-

We work abdomen and waist each day because that's where I have the most fat to burn off.

BY THE END of the second week, the soreness began to subside and I was ready to increase the pace of my workouts, but a setback occurred.

About 10 days into the program I had a pair of wisdom teeth extracted which laid me up for over a week. I didn't work out. I didn't even work. I spent most of the time flat on my back with a cold pack plastered to

When I finally went back to Oneon-One after eight days of inactivity, it was like starting all over again. The muscles I had built up through the first eight days had lain dormant while I slept off the anxiety of oral surgery. The only good thing to come out of the ordeal was that I lost five pounds because of the liquid diet I

Anthony was concerned I would gain some of the weight back once I started eating solid food again, but I didn't. I was lucky.

I've been back working out for four weeks straight and I can already see (hear) some results. My pants (38-inch waist) don't fit very well anymore and my shirts are no longer bursting at the seams.

A month ago I was getting razzed by friends about being overweight. Now they say things like "You really are losing weight," and "Hey, have you been working out?".

Things are beginning to look up, and its going to get even better. Wait self-indulgent.

HIS LIFE is contrasted and intertwined with Lara, the beautiful seamstress' daughter who inspires Zhivago's greatest poetry. She's played by Julie Christie, at the height of her beauty - though still far from a great actress.

The title role of Zhivago also could have used a stronger presence. Omar Sharif, the popular Egyptian actor, made an excellent sidekick to "Lawrence of Arabia." But his deep brown eyes can't hold an entire film, looking beyonnd the fact that he — and most of the performers in "Zhivago" - don't look or talk remotely Russian.

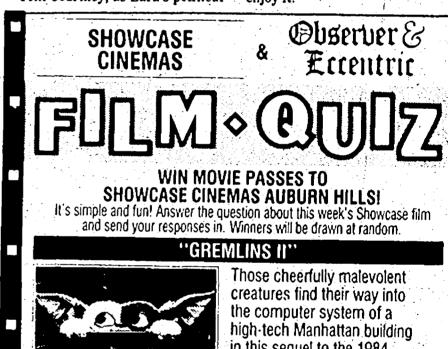

Rod Steiger highlights the excellent supporting cast as a memorable villain. Always up to a challenge, Alec Guiness grows here from a calculating young Bolshevik to the highlevel commander whose narration puts a frame around the film.

Tom Courtney, as Lara's politically driven husband, was the only performer in the film nominated for an Oscar. A young Klaus Kinski has a memorable bit as an intellectual who agitates an already grueling cross-country train trip.

Lean is a master of making an epic personal, and he plays across the planes of characters' faces with the same emotional effect as his widescreen vistas of the Ural Mountains. There are memorable shots from the elegant furnishings of a country estate covered completely with ice to Lara's face after she has succumbed to Steiger's upper-class

It's the visuals that stick with you long after the trumped-up romance in "Doctor Zhivago" and the constant strains of Maulce Jarre's "Lara's Theme" on the soundtrack. More is more for David Lean and the Fox, Detroit's shrine to cinema selfindulgence, is the perfect place to enjoy it.

Just Dumm luck

ast name, magic make for a 'winner'

By Julie Brown staff writer:

Ken Dumm's last name has inspired some jokes over the years.

When Dumm appears at local comedy clubs, he starts by playing off the "dumb" pronunciation of his name, "sort of to loosen people up a little bit. I've lived with it, I might as well keep using it."

Dumm, 26, was born and raised in Redford. He graduated from Bishop Borgess High School in 1982 but wasn't known as the class joker

"Actually, I was pretty shy in high school. I never really was a class clown or anything."

He went to Wayne State University, earning a bachelor's degree in mass communications and television production in 1987.

"I've been doing magic for about 15 years now," said Dumm, a Redford resident who works for Metrovision in Livonia. More recently, he's begun to add comedy to his performances.

HE'S PRIMARILY a self-taught magician. Dumm watched "The Wonderful World of Magic," a 1970s syndicated TV show hosted by Bill Bixby, and became interested in magic. He got some props and books from a magic store and went on from there.

"It was something I just started doing for the fun of it." He met other magicians at conventions and lectures and learned from them.

Throughout high school- and college, Dumm did local magic shows. In recent years, he found he particularly enjoyed performing for adult audiences.

With adult audiences, Dumm is able to be more spontaneous. He also benefits from their lengthler attention span, and is less concerned. about offending an adult audience.

"Kids really don't view magic as entertainment, they view it as a game they want to learn to play." Performing for children can be even more difficult than performing for adults, although Dumm likes to do children's shows.

About five months ago, Dumm began to expand into the territory of comedy. He appeared at open mike nights at comedy clubs, including Chaplin's Comedy Club West in De-

He went on to do some emcee work at Miss Kitty's Comedy Club in Oxford. Dumm participated in a competition for comics there and placed third.

HIS PERFORMANCES include comedy and magic tricks, He's written some material to go along with the magic and includes some one-liners or "groaners."

He uses a number of props and gets some help with magic tricks from people in the audience.

"It involves them in the show. It makes the evening even better for the entertainment value."

In one routine, he borrows a coat from an audience member and proceèds to hide a lit cigarette in the coat's folds, making the cigarette disappear.

"Of course, at the end everything works out fine."

Performing doesn't take all of Dumm's time. His work at Metrovision involves producing cable TV commercials for local businesses, primarily those in Redford, Livonia, Farmington, Farmington Hills and DUMM, WHO is single, has worked for Metrovision for nearly three years and started in the Oakland County office. He's not sure he'll end up working in comedy full

"It's just a matter of seeing what will happen with my career. I really enjoy producing commercials."

"Night Court" star Harry Anderson, who got his start as a magician, went on to do comedy and then got his own TV show.

"He's the success story," Dumm said. He wouldn't mind if his career took a similar turn.

For now, Dumm's trying to get an agency interested in booking him at comedy clubs. He's working on getting as much stage time as possible and making contact with club owners.

"It's kind of tough to break in, because there are a lot of talented guys out there. Some people make it, some people don't."

Dumm's concentrating on doing the best he can and wouldn't be devastated if his name didn't end up in

"For me, it's a kick just to be able to perform. I'll always continue to be doing magic on the side."

Ken Dumm will appear at 8 and 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, July 13-14 and 27-28, at Miss Kitty's Comedy Club, 595 N. Lapeer Road (M-24) in Oxford. For reservations, call 628-6500.

By Pat Schutte staff writer

Mountain Man: A rugged and intense individual. Uses nothing but his hands and simple tools to survive off the land. Rigid yet resilient, he possesses a husky dominance over the outdoors and its elements.

Mountain Bike: What the Mountain Man rides.

Well, you don't really have to be a "mountain man" to ride a mountain bike. Maybe if you're just a, say, "hilly person" or a "frequent 10-speed rim bender," you can own a mountain bike.

Come to think of it, if you can ride a blke, you can be a mountain bike person.

You've seen them. They look like a 10-speed with pregnant tires and straightened-out handlebars. They work as well on the street as they do in grass, gravel, sand, mud and any other obstacle that Mother Nature can throw in their way. They've been around for years, but more recently, they've developed as a hybrid cross between the 10-speed and PMY hits.

speed and BMX bike.

Their origin is arguable..., as with most sports. The most documented case for the mountain bike's origin is the "re-pack run"

Here goes. Back in the 1960s, in Marin County Calif., a handful of bicycle/speed enthusiasts used to truck their old Schwinn "Typhoon" style bikes, the one's with the balloon tires and frames that resembled the skeletal remains of a Humpback whale, up to the top of the local fire roads in the Marin County foothills. Once at the summit, they'd hop on their bikes and turn them loose down the steep and windy gravel roads, reaching speeds in excess of 60 miles per

THE TERM "re-pack run" came about when the riders got to the end of the steep road. They'd have to re-pack their blcycle hubs (where the axle is housed) with grease . . . the speeds they attained actually liquefied the grease in the hubs.

The mountain bike was born. Now, it is raced.

A case in point — the 1990 National Off-Road Bicycle Association Coors Light National Point Series which made a stop at Sugar Loaf Ski Resort on the Leelanau Peninsula outside of Traverse City for a weekend of thrills and spills, the likes of which a tornado rodeo couldn't match for excitement.

The bikes were there. Thousands upon thousands of dollars represented in tubular, two-wheeled fun tickets.

The riders were there. Clad in skin-tight spandex in so many colors that some of haven't been named yet, they stood with their bikes like warriors with their horses preparing for battle.

It was pretty cool.

The downhill portion of the races, which drew the most spectators, opened with a bang . . . the "Kamikaze Downhill." Up to automotive type speeds of 45-50 mph. beginner to expert mountain bikers dared the serpentine steeps of Sugar Loaf's back runs.

Some met the finish line with success, while others ended up in the weeds or carrying their bike back down the mountain. But for all, the Kamikaze Downhill was to foreshadow an exciting day of racing to come.

"You just try not to think about it too much," mumbled Brad Stanley, 26, of Clarkston as he climbed aboard the starting ramp, obviously focusing on the hell-ride he was about to endure. "First, you have to finish before you can finish first."
"GET OFF THE brakes, get off the brakes . . Pedal, pedal, pedal, pedal," screamed people lining sides of the course, oblivious to the terror many of the riders were feeling as they sped by.

The knobby tires, which hummed across the sandy portions of the course, sounding like a swarm of bees, were rivaled only by the clanking noise of the chain banging on the bicycle frame.

Next was the Scot Trials, or the obstacle course, a course so treacherous that even a "Weeble" hiker stood a good chance of tipping over.

Although the speeds were not nearly as breakneck as they were in the downhill, the Scot Trials course was much more physically demanding. Riders took on natural items such as logs, rocks, ditches, water, mud, sand and even spectators in a cross-country romp that tested balance and stamina to the hilt.

One log setup in particular, at the base of a steep loose dirt hill, captured riders like a tiger trap. One after another they dropped down the hill, only to dig their front tire into a log and launch over the handlebars and onto their helmeted heads.

The crowd loved it. The riders didn't care . . unless they were run over by another racer.

Everybody in attendance was pumped for the next and final event . . . the Dual Downhill Slalom. Head to head action. Furious speed. Grinding turns. Dust and dirt. Nano-second margins of victory. And losses that end your week-

THE DEEP SAND, gravel, and weeds of the Kamikaze Downhill gave way to burnt grass, ruts and black soil in the Dual Downhill Slalom. Racers hiked up the hill with their bikes, scoping out the course, looking for the best lines.

"Start your turns early...don't get behind," said one racer to another. "It's just like skiing."

"But I've never raced on skis before," said the other guy.

"To bad," the first one sald.
With break-away gates (the poles that mark the course), the course did actually act like a downhill skiing slalom course. For many of the racers, this would be their first time through a course like this.

You could tell.

In the opening round, every other run show cased some kind of crash, a bevy of body-slams, lip-stands and a couple ugly frame-tangle torture rack dives . . . OUCH! The crowd loved it, the racers were into it, even the announcer was going bananas. And the best thing about it, nobody was seriously hurt.

Mid-year goal re-evaluation

It's almost the Fourth of July and most of us have our minds on fireworks, picnics, swimming or vacations. Except those charged with handling fiscal year budgets, most of us feel it's a time to "get away from it all" rather than to concentrate on work. The first of July, however, marks a milestone in our year — the mid-way point. Incredibly, half of 1990 is already gone. What do you have to show for it?

This is a perfect time to review your progress in the last six months. Do you remember those New Year's Resolutions you made back in January? Did you put goals in writing? If so, can you find where you put them? Have you worked on the goals you sald you were going to accomplish?

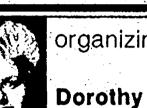

For some, reviewing your goals will be a time to sit back and enjoy a feeling of satisfaction and accomplishment. You've put your goals in writing and things just seemed to take shape and happen. For others, despite good intentions, nothing has changed and things are still exactly the way they were the first of the

One woman has kept on her bookshelf a separate loose-leaf notebook of her goals since 1985 and she says it's amazing to go back over her folder and see the progress she's made during that time.

Not only does she set yearly goals, she writes out long-term five and 10 year goals, as well. She also sets out the steps necessary to accomplish each one and transfers those tasks to her calendar to act on them regularly. My friend keeps separate Personal Growth pages of improvements she wants to make. Another page lists goals which will provide the greatest financial income.

BEHIND THAT section she has a page of roadblocks or obstacles which are on-going problems for her, along with ideas of how to overcome them. These have proven especially valuable because they specifically point out the areas needed to accomplish her goals. In other words, they explain what's holding her back and remind her to face her problems

Not only has this method kept her focused on what she wants to achieve, the book has turned out to be a kind of journal showing her progress, because she dates each goal as she enters it and then marks organizing

the date each one was accomplished. The best page of all is the first one in her notebook which lists a summary of her accomplishments. Each time she opens that folder she is confronted with a wonderful long list of her personal successes. Even if she was feeling discouraged when she took out her folder, that feeling quickly dissipates as she reviews her achievements.

My intention in writing this article is not to ruin your 4th of July by nagging you to work harder. Instead. however, I hope you will find just a little time to review the first half of your year and to renew your vigor for the coming months.
