School board maneuver

Army Reserves, adult ed to share center

Wayne-Westland adult education students will be sharing space with the Army Reserve under an unusual agreement approved by the school

The school district will lease nearly 60,000 square feet of space in the Cherry Hill Adult Center to the federal government, including classrooms in two corridors, the pool locker room and the cafeteria-kitch-

The government will use the building as a Army Reserve training center, replacing a similar facility in Woodhaven.

"They (the Army) have - across the country - used public buildings," sald Tom Svitkovich, associate superintendent for administration. "What makes this unique is that it is going to be a shared facility.

"I think this is going to be an asset to the district and the community." The Army is expected to occupy the building beginning Aug. 1.

Monday's agreement is the largest of several leases for space in the Cherry Hill Center, on Avondale between Middlebelt and Inkster Road in the city of Inkster. The Wayne County Sheriff's Department, a private security firm and other agencles have leased classroom space from the district.

UNDER THE agreement, the government will pay the district $356,004 annually for the space and finance cosmetic repairs and renovations to the building, estimated by school officials at $100,000 to $120,000.

School officials said the arrangement will provide additional revenue for the financially stapped district, but won't make a major impact in

Owner of former Grande Ballroom begins jail term

By Joe Bauman staff writer

Robert Cortis, operator of the former Grande Ballroom teen dance hall on the Westland-Garden City limit, began serving Monday a 10day jail sentence for violating city ordinances in attempting to resurrect the defunct club in Livonia.

Now in Hillsdale County Jail, Cortis had been locked in a bitter, six-month legal dispute with the city, of Livonia over the operation of his Grande Music Cafe and Club X-S on Plymouth Road and Middlebelt until Wayne Circuit Judge Richard Kaufman ordered the club permanently closed in June.

Kaufman ruled that the operation of the club, which Cortis and his attorneys maintained was a restaurant, violated Livonia zoning ordinances because Cortis failed to secure necessary waiver uses and dance permits before opening the dance hall.

LATER IN June, Cortis ended the legal dispute by pleading guilty in 16th District Court to nine ardinance violations in a pice agreement. The city had charged him with 19 viola tions in connection with his business.

Cortis was sentenced on five of the violations Monday by District Court Judge Robert Braesinski.

In addition to the fall time, Cortis will spend 20 days in a work program, received two years probation and was ordered to pay $1,725 in fines and court costs.

Each of the five counts carried a maximum sentence of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Despite the sentence, Cortis' legal troubles are not over. He is scheduled to appear Sept. 27 before District Court Judge James McCann for sentencing on the final four ordinance violations.

THE DISPUTE began when Cortis tried to transform his Gourmet Buffet restaurant at Plymouth Road and Middlebelt into the Grande Music Case and Club X-3.

Cortis failed to comply with the city's demand in March that the establishment be closed until he received the necessary waiver permits. The city began ticketing Cortis as he continued to keep the club open for business.

The situation escalated in April, when Livonia police arrested Cortis in his club for refusing to obey a district court order to close his busi-

Cortia then sued the city in Wayne Circuit Court in an effort to keep the business open but lost his case before Kaufman.

Kaufman's decision then led to the . plea agreement in district court.

GERRIOR WAS arrested the morning of the killings following an hourlong stand-off with police officers outside his Garden City home.

During the eight-day jury trial, the defense argued that he was mentally. ill and acting "under the influence of hot blood" after looking through the bedroom window.

The prosecution argued that Gerrior had ample time to plan the killing and take a second look at his actions when he followed the couple to LaCroix's home after seeing them

BOTH MOTHERS told the judge their families were still deeply troubled by the killings.

'I feel safe in my house, Jason should have been safe in his house," said Frances LaCroix. "He (the defendant) shot two people . . . and destroyed a lot of people's lives."

Arlene Adams, Michele's Gerrior's mother, spoke of the couple's troubled marriage and the defendant's pre-wedding promise that "I would never have to worry" about her daughter's well-being.

"She was born just before Mother's Day and I always considered her my special gift," Adams said. "She had this thing about (growing) old. Now she'll always be

Atkinson said the benefit will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and include food, prizes, games, and a drawing for a video-cassette recorder, gas barbecue grill, boys's and girls' 10-speed bikes, three baseballs autographed Ohl was diagnosed in February as by Detroit Tigers, and other prizes.

cop calls

A WESTLAND man wound up with a pocketful of ordinance violations early Sunday morning after police said he led officers on a high-speed space through neighborhoods in the Palmer-Wildwood area.

The man, 21, was ticketed for driving while under the influence of liquor, fleeing police, driving with an expired driver's license, and interfering with the police investigation by providing a false identity.

The police said the man's identity was provided by an anonymous phone caller.

Officers said they first noticed the car after it sped away from behind New Hope Baptist Church, on Wildwood near Palmer.

Police used their overhead flashers in chasing the driver through several residential streets for seven minutes, officers said. At one point, police said, the

Girl Scouts learn about past in day camp

Scouts are enjoying a step back into time during the 22nd annual Scout day camp.

With the thème of "Gold Rush '90." the Scouts made candles, quilts, butter and old-fashioned toys last week and this week, said camp director Judy Curtis.

The girls were dressed in 1890'sstyle bonnets for the camp, at Westland's Central City Park, west of Carlson, south of Ford.

In keeping with the '90s theme, the girls traveled to the nearby Westland Historical Museum, 857 N. Wayne Road, for a tour and a look into the community's past, and to the Cadillac Memorial Gardens West Cemetery to find the grave sites of local pioneers.

Musicians are scheduled to drop in Friday to perform on dulcimers, Joann Vasely, the camp's certified first aid staffer, said the camps during the past two weeks enjoyed the best weather experienced by the scouts in many years.

INCLUDED IN the camp are several junior high school-age Cadettes who worked as assistants, helping adult scout volunteers.

Alison Zalewski, 12, said she helps the leaders, watches the Scouts, and aids them in cooking.

Another Cadette is Kristine Vasely, 14, who has been in Scouting for nine years.

Mrs. Vasely said the use of Cadettes gives them an excellent leadership training experience.

On a modern tack, the girls enjoyed the nearby outdoor swimming pool, behind Bailey Recreation Center.

With Curtis as director, Belinda Nelson and Elaine Rowell served as co-directors.

The day camp is one of nine offered by the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council. The camps are manned by volunteers.

But Monday, just a few hundred yards south of M-14, the only two aircraft on the horizon collided in the sky, killing three men.

"Two bodies were found in the wooded area in the field south of M-14," Hayes said. The bodies were identified as Gunn, an instructor on a training flight, and Nix, an experienced pilot taking instruction. Master mechanic took to the skies

By Marie Chestney staff writer

Robert Gunn was as well known to local car owners seeking an honest, competent repairman as he was to fellow pilots and other lovers of fly-

Besides his family, the retired Livonia and Redford Township businessman who died in an air crash Monday had two loves in his life auto repair and flying. "All he talked about was those two," said Nancy Soper, manager of King Bros. Collision Inc., 27115 West Seven Mile, Redford Township.

For years Soper worked across the street from Gunn and got to know him well. Before retiring, the 65year-old Livonia resident owned an auto repair business at Seven Mile and Poinciana in Redford.

"He was an outgoing, friendly person, always laughing. Our phones rang here all day long Monday, because people knew we knew Bob. He was one of the most honest men in the business."

GUNN WAS the instructor on a flight from Canton Township's Mettatal Airport Monday when his singlé-engine Piper Cherokee apparently was struck by another aircraft.

Gunn, along with pilots Charles Nix of Detroit and Daniel Starr of dar Springs, were killed in the mid-air collision near M-14 and Beck Road in Plymouth Township.

Services for the veteran pilot will be held at 1 p.m. today in the Harry Achild.

J. Will Funeral Home, 37000 Six Mile, Livonia. Burial will be at Parkview Memorial Cemetery in Livonia. The family has asked that memorial contributions be made to the American Diabetes Association. Before launching his car repair business in Redford Township, Gunn operated a similiar business near Five Mile and Harrison in Livonia. One of his best customers was the Livonia Police Department.

'He serviced police vehicles and the cars of police officers, even after he moved to Redford," said Lt. Michael Murray.

REDFORD RESIDENTS and township officials also discovered the master mechanic after he moved his business to Redford.

"It was a real pleasure doing business with him," said Leo Snage, the township's director of public services. "He was the most competent, most honest, most helpful auto mechanic I've known. He wouldn't nickel-and-dime you to death. He was a credit to his profession."

After selling his business in the early 1980s, Gunn became more involved in his second love of flying. As a flight instructor, he trained pilots in the art of flying, a job he was doing Monday before the plane

What looked like white smoke surrounding the twin-engine plane turned out to be more than 300,000 federal reserve checks; a "big white stream of them," said Vorva, adding that he can't imagine how the pilots couldn't have seen each other.

Vorva ran to the crash site to see if he could be of help. "But I knew no one would be alive; it was all over except for the screaming and al Aviation Administration operahollering."

Vorva then went to the site of the second plane, which was "virtually pile of flesh.

"Tve seen some nasty car and train accidents, but this was one of the worst things I've ever seen."

this wouldn't be known until the investigation is finished - possibly as early as Friday.

The skies over rural Plymouth Township were "as clear as a bell' when the two small planes collided, said Heimbaugh. "They were exactly where they were supposed to be," he said of Gunn and Nix, flying in the single engine Piper Cherokee. Nix was training to earn an advanced license for foul-weather and instrument flying.

"Both of them were professional pilots, very experienced pilots," Heimbaugh said.

LARRY MCCARTNEY, a Federtions supervisor in Detroit, declined to speculate on why the crash could have occurred at a time when conditions were clear.

Bush tax shift riles some local lawmakers

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

President George Bush's declaration late last month that tax increases will have to be a part of any deficit reduction plan won him few new fans on either side of the congressional aisle.

One area Republican expressed disappointment with the president while another said he'll adopt a waitand-see attitude and supports the president. Area Democrats expressed I-told-you-so glee.

"At least now he's 'fessed up," said U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, who represents Garden City, Westland, Canton Township and part of

"You can't run government on credit cards and expect our grandchildren to pay for it."

Although Bush's words lift a burden from Democrats, who have long feared being blamed for any new taxes, Ford doesn't believe the president deserves kudos for admitting the inevitable.

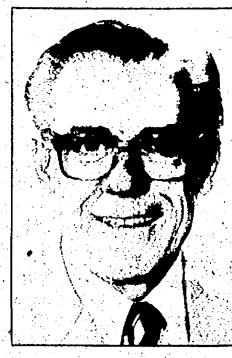

"He doesn't know anything now that he didn't know in '88. He was sweet-talking voters when he should've been shouldering responsibility," Ford said.

THE OFFICE of Management and Budget released its midyear review July 15.

OMB director Richard Darman said he expects the fiscal 1991 deficit to be about $168 billion.

BUSH'S STATEMENT divided congressional Republicans. Many feel betrayed by his retreat from the party's strong no-new-taxes stand, a platform on which many campaigned and plan to run again.

Right-to-die issue stirs up strong emotions

By Janice Brunson staff writer

Shoppers queried at random recently at Westland Shopping Center agree with the results of a recent Wayne State University study in which an overwhelming majority of Michigan residents believe they should have the final decision over whether to maintain life-sustaining treatment.

The majority of those asked in both the mall and the study also favor stopping life support systems if there is no hope of recovery and half favor letting doctors give lethal injections to terminally ill people who request such treatment.

"A person oughta have the choice," said William Bradshaw, 70, of Plymouth, whose 94-year-oldmother is in a nursing home in Florida. Attendants there have been instructed to withhold life-sustaining treatment in the event his mother becomes ill, Bradshaw said.

Bradshaw, however, may not have a similar choice here. Michigan is one of only 10 states that does not recognize living wills, granting individuals the final decision in sustaining life and allowing them to decide in advance what measures doctors can take in keeping them alive.

OF 900 PEOPLE interviewed by phone in the Wayne State study conducted by the Center for Urban Studles, 94 percent favor letting people decide in advance. Eighty-six per; cent said they would want feeding tubes removed if they were unconscious and had no chance to recover and 52 percent favor letting doctors give lethal injections to terminally ill people who can think clearly and request such treatment.

Jim Corp, 35, of Westland believes "we should have the right to make persons. individual decisions" regarding life and death. But in the event he should become unconscious or otherwise unable to make such a decision, he belleves his wishes should be set aside, with the final decision based entirely upon the wishes of family members or those making the decision.

"They're the ones who have to live with it. After all, I'd be unconscious and never know," he said.

Natalie Pence, 65, and daughter Karen, 27, of Canton, also believe in the right of choice. "I don't want to be on any machine," Natalie said. Karen agreed. "It should be our right to decide."

But on the issue of lethal injections, the two disagreed. "No, no. It's God's will. Not mine," Natalie emphasized. Karen believes it is an individual right of decision, but not one she would choose.

Richard Konjarevich, 32, of Livonia, also supports the right of choice in all life and death matters, but sald he would never opt for lethal injection, regardless of the circum-

THOUGH HOSPICE is devoted to "natural death," the issue of lethal. injection has been a topic of discussion by hospice patients since the suicide death last month of an Oregon woman who used a device provided by Michigan pathologist Jack Kevorkian.

"I can understand those feelings but we recognize natural death as a normal process of living. We neither hasten it nor prolong it," she said.

Sister Giovanni of Angela Hospice Home Care in Livonia said "familles have been talking about it," likely as a result of media exposure about Kevorkian's device.

"We support death with dignity but we don't do anything to take life," Glovanni said. Last year, Angela Hospice provided services to 135

A right-to-die bill, rejected for 16 consecutive years by state legislators, is once again pending before a state Senate committee.

Other results of the Wayne State study include 36 percent who said yes when asked if it is ever right for a person to kill a spouse who is in pain from a terminal illness. Fiftyone percent said no.

Laser Surgery

Since its introduction at Oakwood Hospital in 1979, the use of laser technology for the treatment of many types of diseases has grown dramatically. The reason is simple. In most cases, laser surgery results in less pain, bleeding, anesthesia, time in the hospital and time away from work. In fact, procedures which only a few years ago meant lengthy hospital stays and recovery at home now can be accomplished on an outpatient basis, allowing patients to get back to normal lifestyles within days.

Through Oakwood physicians, patients have access to the various types of lasers available: CO2, Argon and KTP/ND: Yag lasers. These lasers are applied in the medical specialties of ears, nose and throat, urology, neurosurgery, ophthalmology, gynecology and general surgery.

Oakwood Health Services is one of the largest health care systems in Michigan, with five hospitals, more than 30 local health care and specialty centers and more than 1,000 physicians in every major health care specialty and subspecialty. Oakwood will serve more than half a million patients this year.

Fans go to bat to save Tiger Stadium with display

By Tim Smith staff writer

The pitch from baseball fans to save historic Tiger Stadium from demolition, via the Cochrane Plan, is moving into the late innings.

"I'm upset with the whole notion the team hasn't even given considerchrane Plan, of which a model is on atlon to the Cochrane Plan," said lion.

Building another stadium either at another Detroit site or the suburbs would be a mistake, according to Marlann McNally, also of the fan

THEY HAVEN'T taken the time to study it (plan) seriously, because they're convinced they want to build a new stadium," McNally said. "It's a mistake. For one thing, it's a great stadium with a lot of history.

"Tom Monaghan in 1984, when he bought the team, sald he'd never build a new stadium as long as he is owner," continued McNally, para-phrasing a portion of Joe Falls' 1986 book, "So You Think You're A Diehard Tiger Fan."

At the fan club's urging, architects

Judy and John Davids designed the thorough plan, which can be viewed through a plexiglass shell. The plan has been endorsed by the board of directors of the Michigan Society of Architects. The renovated Tiger Stadium would retain the charm of the current park while combining those perks found in modern stadiums, such as revenue-generating luxury

Other highlights of the plan include the following: About 40 percent of the upper deck posts would be removed, at least partially addressing a long-time criticism of the Michigan-Trumbull shrine; the stadium concourse would be expanded over Cochrane Avenue, near which a pedestrian Hall of Fame plaza would be incorporated. Fans looking at the model in Southfield thought it was impressive. Designers of the model paid close attention to ballpark details, such as advertisements on the miniature center field scoreboard.

"IT KEEPS the stadium downtown, uses the best baseball stadium in the country and modernizes it," said Randy Pitler.

Jerome Barnes said he liked the plan because it would keep the Tigers downtown.

"I don't want to see another major sports team leave the city. The city has lost enough of its virtues over the last couple years. They ought to keep it in the city and rebuild it," Barnes said.

In recent years, the Detroit Lions and Pistons have migrated north to Pontlac and Auburn Hills, respectively. Besides the Tigers, only the Red Wings hockey team remains in Detroit.

The Cochrane Plan has been taken around to different locations in recent months to "show it to people and help them understand there is an alternative to a new stadium." Tre-

"It's in a restored neighborhood that's coming back very well and it's an urban park, which we feel is very important to baseball."

DURING MAJOR league baseball's early decades, stadiums were built to fit available city property, resulting in different dimensions, Tremain explained. "Those make the game a little different everywhere it's played."

Modern stadiums often are described as cement cookie-cutters with little warmth or character, traits abundant at Tiger Stadium.

Those are the same attributes McNally and other fans would miss if the Tigers moved to Dearborn or another location.

"I like going to the area around Tiger Stadium," McNally said. "It has a lot of personality. I don't think it (neighborhood) is unsafe at all and it's centrally located for people both from the city and suburbs."

Dawn found the Pride of Michigan, at left, ready and anxious to venture into northern Lake Michigan. Below is an adult zebra mussel found near Alpena.

Diverse crew sets its sail

By Pat Murphy staff writer

It was a diverse group on the Pride of Michigan as it sailed out of Escabana bound for the Poverty Islands in northern Lake Michigan.

It was 6:05 a.m. on July 9, and the 31 people aboard included a botanist from Birmingham, a businessman from Farmington and a truck driver—and son—from Garden City. The ship's captain owns an appraisal business in Union Lake.

Differences faded, however, as the shoreline slipped into the background and the 80-foot boat made its way into the gentle swells of Lake Michigan.

Those aboard the Pride were part of a project that teamed students and faculty from Oakland University with a crew of sea cadets jointly sponsored by the U.S. Navy and local businesses.

Part of the OU contingent was to study the biogeography of the islands, helping to determine, among other things, how plants and animals on the islands evolved differently from their counterparts on the mainland since the Ice Age.

Other OU scientists, headed by Douglas Hunter, focused on a more contemporary problem—zebra mussels, the bivalve molluse that has been infesting the Great Lakes since the mid 1980s when flushed into Lake Erie with a ship's ballast.

THEIR MISSION was to track any larvae in the northern Lake Michigan like other teams were doing in other parts of the Great Lakes. Their data will be collected and analyzed as scientists in the U.S. and Canada formulate a strategy to combat zebra mussels which have bred rapidly with potentially dire consequences.

In pursuit of science OU team tracks area changes

Since the time of Darwin, biogeography has provided major insights into factors influencing the evolution of plants and animals, said James R. Wells, an adjunct professor at OU and a botanist at the Cranbrook Institute of Science.

Of particular interest are garden snakes and amphibians that — like fruit flies — reproduce rapidly enabling scientists to track generational changes.

Before waters from melting Ice Age glaciers separated the islands from the mainland, plants and animals were very similar. By comparing samples from the islands with their counterparts on the mainland, scientists can detect evolutionary changes.

For Terri Empson, a biology senior from Union Lake, going to the Poverty Islands also provided information on which to make career choices. "I'm interested in medicine," she said, "but this is good handson field biology." BRIAN HUEBNER, a biology major originally from Saginaw now living in Rochester Hills, pointed out that most science is a matter of careful observation. "The garden snakes we take home will be carefully studied to see how they differ from those on the mainland."

Greg Fons, a former OU student now living in Birmingham, helped collect more than 300 samples of plants to be pressed and preserved as part of the collection at Cranbrook.

Philip WinterIngham, above, is a Farmington Hills businessman who doubles as the boat's engineering officer, a job that entails frequent checks in the engine room. At right, Olaf Kuipers, foreground, and Doug Hunter prepare to take samples to determine the existence of zebra mussel larvae.

When OU scientists were sampling the waters of northern Lake Michigan for zebra mussel larvae, Cadet Rob Allen, 17, of West Bloomfield, played an important role.

He happened to be standing fantail watch on the stern of the Pride of Michigan as the OU team lowered nets into the water, one of dozens of samples they would take while tracking the trouble-some pest from Europe.

In constant radio contact with the ship's bridge, Allen provided information that helped the boat's captain, Luke Clyburn of Union Lake, plot the precise location of this particular sample.

He was also part of the boat's security system that, among other things, kept track of approaching vessels while continuously keeping watch for anyone failing overboard.

The 13-day voyage gave all the cadets the chance to polish their nautical skills. Scott Breuer, 16, of Redford Township, for example, got lots of practice in morse code and other nautical communication systems. Breuer said the training will be helpful if he pursues a career in the Navy.

FOR TOM AMBURGY, a truck driver from Garden City, the voyage aboard the Pride was prime time with his son. Tom is a lieutenant, junior grade with the sea cadets while young Tom, 16, attends Garden City High School. "This is good time for us," he said.

Young Tom Amburgy and a Garden City classmate, Jason Gault, 16, particularily enjoyed sharpening navigational skills at the helm of the Pride.

Phil Winteringham of Farmington Hills was the boat's engineering officer in charge of several of the Pride's systems, including the diesels powering the Winteringham was born in England, but has lived in Farmington Hills since 1970. He also owns Metropolitan Diesel Supply Inc. of Detroit. "This gives youngsters a good taste of life at sea," he said. "Regardless of what they do later in life, it's the experience of a life-time"

For most of the year, Luke Clyburn is a businessman in Union Lake who operates an appraisal company. With the sea cadets, he is Capt. Luke Clyburn, commander of the Pride and responsible for all those aboard.

U.S. House approves large anti-crime bill

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending July

HOUSE:

TO ADVANCE TECHNOLOGY -By a vote of 327 for and 93 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 4329) authorizing nearly $1 billion over three years for programs to keep America a leader in technol-

The bill reauthorized the National Institute of Standards and Technology, which regulates weights and measures, and funded government research to benefit specific enterprises such as steel and fire control.

Its most disputed feature was funding of the Advanced Technology Program, which provides federal grants to help entrepreneurs develop new technologies. The bill authorized nearly $400 million over three years for ATP, compared to only $10 million annually recommended by President Bush, who prefers private funding of such ventures.

Supporter Robert Roe, D-N.J., said the government "cannot afford" to wait one minute longer" to keep America competitive with the Japanese and Europeans.

Opponent Robert Walker, R-Pa., said spending too much on ATP means "trading off core research for essentially a new program that in some cases could be handouts." A yes vote was to pass the bill.

All local representatives voted yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods; William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield; and William Broom-· field, R-Birmingham.

DRUGS AND DRIVER'S LI-CENSES — By a vote of 331 for and 88 against, the House adopted an amendment inducing states to suspend the driver's licenses of drug criminals. States not doing so would lose 2 percent of their federal highway funds. The amendment was attached to a fiscal 1991 transportation appropriations bill (HR 5229).

Supporter Gene Taylor, D-Miss., said "at times we have to forget about things like states' rights and address the horrible drug problem in

Opponent Tom DeLay, R-Texas, objected to "sort of a blackmail attitude of withholding federal highway funds because states do not pass certain laws."

A yes vote was for the amend-

Members voting yes were: Pursell, Hertel and Broomfield. Voting no were Ford and Levin. -

SENATE:

CRIME BILL — By a vote of 93 for and 6 against, the Senate sent the House a mammoth anti-crime bill (S 1970) that expands gun control and capital punishment, gets tough with savings-and-loan criminals, limits appeals by death-row inmates, creates up to 2,000 new federal law enforcement positions, imposes stiffer drug penalties and provides special funding for "boot camp" prisons that use harsh measures to discourage inmates from becoming career crimi-

Roll Call Report

Among the most disputed provisions were ones outlawing nine types of assault weapons and making 34 additional federal crimes punishable by death. Least contested were stepped up'prosecution of S&L fraud and tougher sentences for S&L executives who looted their own thrifts and left taxpayers with cleanup

Supporter Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., objected to expanding the death penalty but said the overall bill "will make a valuable contribution to fighting crime and drug trafficking."

Opponent David Durenberger, R-Minn, said "because of my lifelong. and firmly held opposition to the death penalty, I cannot support this

A yes vote support the bill. Michigan Senators Carl Levin-D and Donald Riegle-D both voted yes.

FOOD HANDLING AND AIDS -The Senate rejected, 39 for and 61 against, a proposal to remove those with AIDS from public kitchens. The proposal sought to make it legal under the Americans with Disabilities Act (S 933) for employers to transfer workers with communicable diseases from food-handling positions.

The vote occurred as the Senate sent the bill back to conference with the House. The issue was raised bedisregarded earlier votes in both chambers to keep restaurant employees with AIDS from handling

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said restaurateurs should be able to transfer a kitchen worker with AIDS "who may cut his finger or otherwise contaminate the food."

Opponent Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said there is no scientific evidence that AIDS is transmitted through food, adding the amendment is based on "ignorance, prejudice, myth and Both Riegle and Levin voted no. .

CIVIL RIGHTS AND CONGRESS - By a vote of 63 for and 26 against. the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment giving congressional employees the same right as other citizens to sue their employers in federal court under a pending bill (S 2104) to outlaw job discrimination.

At issue was the tradition of Congress exempting itself from civil rights laws on the rationale that separation-of-powers insulates it from answering to federal prosecutors and judges. Congressional aides can use administrative channels within Congress to allege discrimination.

Warren Rudman, R-N.H., who cause Senate-House conferees had voted to table the amendment,

A yes vote was to keep Congress immune from job discrimination law suits by its employees.

Levin voted no while Riegle voted

TO LIMIT FOOTWEAR IM-PORTS — By a vote of 68 for and 32 against, the Senate preserved a plan to begin limiting imports of certain foreign athletic shoes. This killed an amendment to remove quotas sought for sports shoes made overseas by companies such as Nike and Reebok. The overall legislation (HR 4328) seeks to protect jobs in the American textile, apparel and footware industries.

- Supporter Terry Sanford, D-N.C., said "domestic shoe companies have . a right to survive" in the face of unfair foreign competition.

Opponent Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said quotas mean "prices are going to go up for the consumers who buy these shoes."

A yes vote was to limit imports of certain foreign athletic shoes... Both Riegle and Levin voted yes.

EXPERIENCE THE BOATING LIFESTYLE

Dragon or damsel? Here's an easy way to tell

REMEMBER the last time you went fishing and one of those "dragonflys" landed on the end of your pole? Well, it could have been a dragonfly, or it could have been a damselfly.

If you took the time to look in a book to differentiate between the two, you would have found it difficult because both groups look similiar to each other. Damselflies tend to have heavy bodies and broad wings. Dragonflies are larger and more obvious.

A simple way to distinguish between the two next time one lands on -your fishing pole is to note how the insect holds its wings. If the wings are held out to the sides, like an airplane on a runway, it's a dragonfly. Conversely, if the wings are folded vertically over its body, it's a dam-

Both groups of insects start their life under water as a nymph, which is very different looking compared to the adults. After feeding on smaller underwater animals, and avoiding becoming food for a fish, they climb out of the water and emerge as a winged adult.

. As an adult, they are fièrce predators on flying insects such as mosquitoes. They appear like jet operated helicopters. One moment they may be hovering in one spot and the next instant they may be rocketing to a potential meal. Their large eyes enable them to see extremely well.

Once they have spotted their prey, they race after it and capture their meal in a network of spines extending between their legs. A convenient perch serves as a place to relax and eat their meal.

Because food can be patchy, dragonflies defend a territory just as birds do. If you walk the meadows, or scan the shorelines, you will note that each dragonfly has favorite perches it uses within a determined

Not only does this territory serve as a hunting area, it also functions as a display area from which a male can attract a female. Females lay their eggs on underwater yegetation.

Many species of dragonfly and damselfly are very colorful with bold patterns. They are beneficial insects and do not bite people as many seem to think. Next time you are hiking, stop and take the time to watch their aerial acrobatics.

been represented in greater percentages than most other ethnic minorities, according to Skip Alvarado, a Korean War veteran who heads up the local chapter of the G.I. Forum in Wayne County.

Alvarado cites a survey in 1968 of Vietnam casualties from California. New Mexico and Colorado, pockets of Hispanic settlement. "Better than 'one-third were Hispanic." He also said the names chiseled into the Vietnam Memorial in Washington D.C. represent a higher-than-average percentage, even though surnames do not always reflect Hispanic origins.

Luciano Adams, one of eight Congressional Medal of Honor during the Korean War, is a case in point. Since the Civil War. 37 Hispanics have received the award.

"Adams doesn't sound Hispanic but Luciano doesn't look Anglo. His grandfather was Anglo and Luciano carries the name. But he's threefourths Hispanic," Alvarado said.

An estimated 250,000 Hispanics,

Alvarado added, served in World War II and the Korean War, primarily filling "grunt" positions, at which casualities are normally high.

Perhaps the best known sacrifice by Hispanic-Americans is that of eight families on Heros Street in Silves, Illionis, neighbors living side by side on one short city block. During World War II, each family lost a Hispanic-Americans awarded the son or daughter, the only street in America where every family paid the supreme sacrifice.

In the years since it's founding, the G.I. Forum has grown into the largest Hispanic political action organization in the country, with branches for retirees, women and youth, according to Alvarez.

In addition to veterans' issues, the forum promotes civil rights and educational and economic opportunity, including computer and secretarial training in the Service Employment Redevelopment program. An estimated 21 million U.S. citizens are of Hispanic heritage, including some 100,000 in metropolitan Detroit and Garcia contacted the newly elected U.S. senator from the area, Lyndon Baines Johnson, who arranged for Longoria's burial, with full military honors, in Arlington National Cemetery.

County race

Johnson: best primary choice

County Commission primary have two cil. good choices to replace Kay Beard. They are Terri Reighard Johnson and Hilliard Hampton Jr. (A fourth candidate, Deborah Miller of Garden City, is barely mounting a campaign.)

In the past, we've supported incumbent Kay Beard, of Inkster. While we admire Beard's fighting spirit, we find that, of late, she's often chosen the wrong battles and has neglected to represent the real interests and concerns of the

Her efforts to change the county charter provision involving county commission succession failed to generate much public support. Likewise, her recent investigation into alleged misuse of county drug enforcement unit money has generated far more heat than light.

Reighard Johnson, a Westland resident, is the best choice in the race. A local businesswoman, she has received our support in races for Wayne-

OTERS IN THE 12th District Wayne: Westland School Board and Westland City Coun-

She demonstrates a good understanding of the issues facing the district and offers a positive approach to problem solving. She has the energy and determination to capably serve all residents of the 12th District.

Area voters also shouldn't overlook another candidate, Hilliard Hampton Jr. of Inkster.

Hampton is an intelligent, experienced candidate in a crowded Democratic Party primary

An Inkster school board member, Wayne County Sheriff's Deputy and longtime Democratic party activist. Hampton brings a varied, impressive background to the race.

We believe the 12th District needs a change on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners. Winning the Aug. 7 primary in this heavily Democratic district is tantamount to winning the November election. We urge voters to consider Terri Reighard Johnson and Hilliard Hampton Jr. in the Tuesday, Aug. 7 Democratic Party primary.

Help needed

County college tax hike urged

FOCAL VOTERS will be asked Aug. 7 to approve a 1-mill property tax increase for the Wayne County Community College, which serves the Wayne-Westland, Redford Union, and South Redford school districts.

" Because of the planned elimination of state. support for the college, we urge voters to support the tax proposal which will represent an increase of only $25 a year for a person in a home valued

The college has had a checkered history since it was organized more than 20 years ago.

In the early 1980s, there was a series of management problems, political in-fighting, and rapid turnover of college presidents.

But those problems are now history.

The money problem which led to the ballot proposal was created when the state Legislature acted to phase out $10.4 million in state aid over five years starting next summer.

The property tax, if approved, would ultimately replace the lost state revenues, school officials

While WCCC has been overshadowed in western Wayne County by the growth of Schoolcraft College, there is a need for a strong and healthy Wayne County Community College.

We hope local voters will support the modest tax increase to allow the community college to get on its own feet and progress.

Congress bid

Adkins worthy of nomination HE RACE for the Republican nomination competitiveness and alleged advantageous in the 15th U.S. Congressional District does not appear to be much of a race at and Japanese automakers.

The only candidate serious-minded enough and with sufficient organizational skill — to nake any kind of run in the fall general election is Burl Adkins of Southgate.

Adkins has run for the seat before, finishing First in a more-crowded GOP primary two years ago, before falling to incumbent Rep. William Ford, D. Taylor.

Adkins main issues, however, are pretty much the same ones he trotted out two years ago rovernment hindrance to American automaker "sweetheart" deals between state government

Without discounting those issues, we wish he would become better-informed about other, major issues that have arisen since 1988 — notably, dramatic changes in the European economy, both east and west, and how these changes could benefit the United States, Michigan and his district. (The 15th includes southern Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Canton, among other communities.)

To his credit, Adkins has learned something from his previous try for elective office. He's a much more polished candidate this time around.

County tax

Say 'yes' to 1-mill renewal

7 AYNE COUNTY voters should say yes to the 1 mill county tax renewal on the Tuesday, Aug. 7, primary ballot. The money, an estimated $24 million, is vital to county operations. One floor of the downtown jail might be closed - and health care, senior citizen and park programs curtailed or eliminated — if the renewal fails. As many as 400 county employees could also face layoffs.

County voters shouldn't let that happen. We said that during the last renewal campaign rive years ago, when county finances were in shambles. We say it even more strongly now, as Wayne County is on its way toward financial re-govery.

Since county Executive Edward McNamara Sook office in 1987, the county has overhauled its bostly health care system, reduced jail overtime and reached agreement with the state on a plan b reduce its mountain of past debt.

Recent county budgets have been balanced, forme even producing a slight surplus, and Wall Street has taken notice.

County bonds, once considered downright tisky, are now certified investment grade by one major investors service.

That means more county projects can be unertaken — and at less cost. Now, the battle is to keep Wayne County's budget in balance.

Since county Executive Edward McNamara took office in 1987, the county has overhauled its costly health care system, reduced jail overtime and reached agreement with the state on a plan to reduce its mountain of past debt.

Our major concern about the millage renewal is that it carries a 10-year expiration date. Since first approved in the mid-1960s, the millage has traditionally faced renewal at five year inter-

(Contrary to some campaign literature, the new county jail in Hamtramck will open on schedule. The 1-mill fail building tax and the county's non-voted 6.9 mill operating tax are unaffected by this renewal vote.)

We believe voters should approve the renewal as a reward for county efforts to put its finances

But we also believe the 10-year time frame should prove strong incentive to current and future county leaders to spend it wisely, preventing the county from sliding back into red ink.

EAA'S RESPONSE TO THE ISSUE OF METRO AIRPORT NOISE.

State races Faust, Barns merit new terms

TATE SEN. William Faust and Rep. Justine Barns, faced with nominal Democratic primary opposition, should be renominated for new terms in the Aug. 7 primary

Both of the veteran legislators have compiled records of support for issues which are important to Westland residents.

Faust, in the Senate for nearly 24 years, and Barns, in the House for nearly eight years, have long supported measures to narrow the spending gap between low-valuation and high-valuation school districts.

Faust, a Westland resident who was first elected to the Senate in late 1966, is a former Senate majority leader, one of the authors of the state's handicappers' civil rights act, and a strong backer of state support for local libraries. Looking ahead to the next legislative session, Faust has developed an environmental agenda that includes recycling and incentives for biodegradable packing.

Rep. Barns, who was a Westland city councilwoman for 16 years, serves on several key House committees, including K-12 Education, corrections, senior citizens'/retirement, which she chairs, public health, and legislative retirement.

Over the years, she has been a fighter in trying to change the K-12 school aid formula to help districts like Wayne-Westland get more state dollars.

Both Faust and Barns have demonstrated their legislative abilities and, while faced with nominal opposition in the primary, should be renominated Aug. 7.

While moneyed play all the rest of us pay

THE BIGGEST joke of this election season has got to be all these ads on television about how tough our politicians are on crime.

Don't you believe it. If you think your taxes are too high now, wait until the bill comes due for the savings and loans scan-

We have been had. And don't expect any help from the Washington politicians whose robes have been revealed because of the savings and loans scandal.

Very simply our politicians, Republicans and Democrats alike, serve at the pleasure of the wealthy.

Along with the rest of America, I've watched our political and justice system subverted by the wealthy, leaving the rest of us to foot the bill. And we, Mr. and Mrs. Middle Class, should be more than indignant about it - for our own good, for our own survival.

Think about it

AN ESTIMATED $500 billion has been stolen out of our pockets during the savings-and loans scandal and yes, you and I are the ones who will pay back the money. That's right, you and I, not the convicted crimi-

A recent report by U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh indicated that in Texas only $23,750 has been paid back out of an estimated $11.4 million swindled.

are too high now, wait until the bill comes due for the savings and loans scandal.

If you think your taxes

And these bums spend little or no time in jail. Nationwide some $56.6 million ordered to be paid back has yet to be seen.

Frankly folks, these criminals are doing nothing more than standing back and flipping the bird to you and I — and laughing while they do it.

And they have good reason to feel confident that nothing will happen. Look at the way our politicians, our "representatives" do their job. When it comes to white collar crime in this country, partisanship be damned.

NEITHER WILL the rich pay. The servants of the wealthy, our representatives in Washington, are about to conspire to raise our taxes, to cut our services, in order to pay for the crimes of others.

More importantly, they will raise our taxes to preserve the sacred 28 percent income tax ceiling for the wealthy who contribute money to their campaign and slush fund kit-

Even the most trusted politicians have been lured into the web of deceit. Republicans and Democrats alike are scrambling to splt back contributions from those involved in the savings and loans scandal.

Suddenly the green certificates which bought the sweet taste of power have turned bitter. Just ask Michigan's two U.S. senators, Donald Riegle and Carl Levin who can't write checks fast enough, who can't rid themselves quick enough of the money which is tainted from the biggest Washington scandal in our history.

The truth of the matter is this is: just another example of the wealthy having their way with the rest of us. And they've got the politicians in their pockets to protect them.

In America, the wealthy steal with abandon, rarely have to pay for their crimes and spend little of no time in .

And we let them. Shame on us.

These plaintiffs win but us taxpayers lose

EVEN WHEN the Michigan Supreme Court is nearly unanimous, our justices can still split their opinions in ways most puzzling to us ordinary mortals.

Take the case of the estate of Joseph Solomon vs. officer John Shuell and the Detroit Police Department.

Shuell and officer Richard Nixon were in plain clothes and unmarked autos one March 19 on the west side investigating a series of armed rob. beries. It seems four gun-toting men had stolen two cars from dealers while on test rides.

Shuell and Nixon stopped a suspicious car driven by Alvin Solomon, threw him toward his car and confiscated a pellet gun. Alvin called to his girlfriend to get his father, Joseph, who emerged from his home at 20045 Strathmoor with a gun and yelled, "Turn my child loose."

Joseph Solomon fired one shot. Shuell fired nine, hitting the father with eight and killing him instantly.

THE SURVIVING Solomons said police officer. The city presented evidence Shuell did.

Circuit Judge Marvin Stempien, a ern Wayne County, handled this lomons. sticky trial.

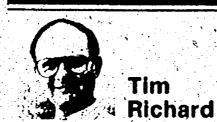

The jury found Shuell negligent and placed damages to the surviving Solomons at $100,000. But jurors also found that Solomon's own negligence was a proximate cause of his death and reduced damages by 80 percent to $20,000.

The Solomons told the Court of Appeals that Stempien had improperly admitted four police reports into evidence. The appellate judges said the error was harmless and affirmed the jury verdict.

THREE JUSTICES - Dennis Archer, Charles Levin and Michael Cavanagh, the court's most liberal members - held that reports of Nixon's and Shuell's versions of the shooting were "multiple layers of hearsay within hearsay.'

Stempien had reasoned the jury should weigh that evidence. The justices overruled him. They said "the homicide investigation reports, as well as the preliminary complaint reports, lack trustworthiness . . . ' Considering the "highly probable civil and criminal litigation and departmental discipline the officers potentially faced, (they) were not the type of records" to be admitted as

The justices also said Stemplen erroneously instructed the jury on how much danger Alvin Solomon had to be in before his father's action could be called a rescue attempt and not subject to the negligence rule.

Their 41-page lead opinion closed by ordering a new trial.

THREE JUSTICES - Patricia Boyle, James Brickley and Dorothy Comstock Riley — said the police reports were improperly admitted, but the error was harmless.

Their 15-page opinion noted that Shuell failed to identify himself as a the makers of the reports, Shuell and Nixon, testified and were subject to cross-examination on the statements. And they found some of the name known and respected in west- hearsay actually favorable to the So-

'We agree with the lead opinion's conclusion that the erroneous instruction on the rescue doctrine requires reversal of the jury's verdict, but we do not agree that the instruction itself constrained the jury to conclude that Joseph Solomon's rescue attempt was unreasonable," Boyle wrote. Justice Robert Griffin agreed in part with Boyle's opinion but would not have ordered a new trial.

FOOTNOTES: The incident occurred in 1981: It took the legal industry more than nine years to decide that the suit had to start all over again in Circuit Court.

Attorneys involved in the case included three for the Solomons; one for the city; and six for professional groups with axes to grind filing amicus curiae briefs.

The 11 judges and justices draw salaries in the mid-$90,000 to $100,000-plus range.

After all this, the Solomons still aren't winners. But we taxpayers are losers.

Teachers front liners raising achievement

Q: I teach high school social studies. I love teaching and work at it. Sometimes I get upset for constantly being blamed for the lack of student achievement on national standardized test. Many of my students don't do their homework, some don't bring their books to class making me feel like a baby sitter at times. I believe there are other factors that impact student achievement than just the teacher. What are the major factors. Are teachers entirely to blame?

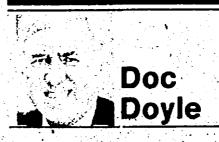

A: Many factors outside the classroom play a major role in how students achieve in school. The University of Wisconsin, under a major federal grant, recently studied all the research done on this issue.

Most students who perform well in school are raised in homes by parents who set reasonable standards. These parents are demanding and supportive but not punitive. These are parents who encourage and expect academic achievement by their children and are able to transmit this expectation in a loving, caring manner.

These parents are involved in their schools. At a minimum they at least attend their children's teacher/ parent conferences. They know what's going on. They know what their children are doing or not doing.

Peer group influence, accepted by rather than play down the importance of schooling (except in totally alienated peer groups from dysfunctional homes).

So we can't continually lay the blame on our youth. Having worked with youth all my life if seems the only time our youth are of any value is when there is a war to fight.

Generalities are often made that "Johnny" doesn't achieve because he is a product of a working mother or single parent. The Wisconsin research found that if the working mother or single parent is actively involved in their children's schools, has reasonable expectations, encourages and expects achievement, their children were successful stu-

This should alleviate some of the guilt trips I've heard from working mothers over the years. Or establish that working is no excuse for not seeing to it their children do their homework.

Part-time employment carries an academic price for many high school students. In general, the academic performance is poor for those students who work more than 15 hours A stable family that sets reasonable expectations, from my experience, is the number one factor in students achieving up to their innate ability.

a week (especially on school days). This was found to be true for sophomore and juniors who then struggle as seniors to improve their grades for college entrance or just to gradu-

There are exceptions. Some adolescents are super-human energy machines. They can work, be officers in organization, play sports or be in the band and still get A's and B's. But these are rare creatures.

Therefore, many factors impact on students achievement. It is a shared responsibility of administrators, teachers, parents, students and our nation's priority for education.

However, a stable family that sets reasonable expectations, from my experience, is the number one factor in students achieving up to their innate ability.

No, you teachers are not entirely responsible for a lack of achievement by some students.

However, we educators are on the front line in the battle to improve the academic achievement of America's children. And it is difficult for us to hide behind "other factors."

many successes - those students who have come back to visit you and in their own way said thanks.

Many who probably were distracted, uninterested adolescents in your class are now successful in ventures you couldn't event envision. All committed, quality teachers have had these successes.

So get ready. In five short weeks, like Poltergeist, they're coming back

IT'S TOO BAD the August Primary doesn't happen in February because in the summer it's tempting to take your foot off the gas and turn on the cruise control.

Because in our fair corner of the world, where no Democrat can win in Birmingham or Plymouth and no Republican can win in Southfield or Westland, our state legislators are very often chosen in the primary

Perhaps the most interesting race this year is in the 17th Senate District, which covers a wide swath of Oakland County.

It's Rick Fessler's district now. Come Aug. 7 we'll find out that it will be better represented by either David Honigman or Judith Miller. Fessier dropped out rather than run a distant third to this potent pair.

FOR THOSE of you wrestling with this race, you aren't alone. In our house, for example, after some pretty huffy battles, we are cancelling each other out.

What makes it both so difficult and also so refreshing - is that there is no good guy or bad guy here.

Miller has been more consistently pro-choice on the crucial abortion issue. But both she and Honigman oppose abortion on demand and both would continue to allow a woman the choice to abort in the first five months of pregnancy. Honigman has had the more important major legislation enacted, especially the law which gives added punishment to those who commit "hate" crimes initiated out of bigo-

He also has more consistently supported issues this newspaper has crusaded for, such as the right of college students to choose alcohol-free roommates and laws that allow music teachers to give lessons in their homes without violating local zoning laws. Miller opposed having the state intervene in either issue.

UNFORTUNATELY, BOTH MILler and Honigman voted for the noknock legislation this newspaper vehemently opposes.

Miller also allowed her name to appear on a recent obscenity bill which would define obscenity and forbid experts from testifying as to the artistic value of the material in question. Confronted with that, she now says she shouldn't have been a party to it. Honigman does not support it.

Honigman recently risked votes, but not mine, by approving legislation that will take some state aid away from well-heeled suburban school districts to redistribute to school systems in need. Miller voted to retain that aid.

There are some important differences between Honigman and Miller. It's nearly August. You're contemplating vacation. Election issues just aren't as alluring as Scott Turow's latest novel. Do yourself a favor. Start compiling information. Gather together the League of Women Voters Guide, the Civic Searchlight material, the stories and endorsements from the local papers. Watch the Candidate's Nights on your local cable station and take Then that weekend before the primary or before you fill out that absentee ballot, close your eyes and conjure up the ice and snow of Febrary and the Sunday Times.

Some 30 area high school and middle school teachers have been out along the Rouge River this month, studying the western Wayne County river, then coming back to the University of Michigan-Dearborn to report their findings.

Earlier this month, teachers gathered at six study sites, observing fish, insect and plant life, as well as land use in areas near the river. Later, they checked the water for chemical traces.

Teacher activities aren't a formal research project, such as recent river studies sponsored by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. Rather, they're a way of letting students know how such studies are completed.

"We're not talking about their (SEMCOG's) findings, but how they. go about obtaining those findings," Gelderloos said.

The class prepares teachers for participating in the larger Rouge study project brought to area high schools by Friends of the Rouge, the. environmental group that also sponsors the annual Rouge cleanup.

Ministers recall falters at the altar

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

T WEDDINGS, THINGS can falter at the altar.

Just ask those who officiate. Clergymen have seen it all. Tardy bridesmaids, rings gone astray, mothers of the groom dressed risque... yep, sometimes those wedding bells seem to toll instead of chime.

"Just about everything you can imagine has happened," said the Rev. David Church of Newburg United Methodist Church in Livonia who has performed weddings for 35 years. "The wedding party not showing up, wedding parties being inebriated. You can write a book."

Funny, that's what a few other men of the cloth we talked to said.

The Rev. Ralph Fischer of St. Matthew Lutheran Church in Westland already has some of his chapters titled. There's the "Johnny Wedding" and "Maybelline Matrimony" for starters.

In Fischer's 39 years as a pastor, grooms and brides have passed out, parents have fainted and one groom arrived in street clothes. Those incidents rate in companions.

dents pale in comparison.

"The bridesmald dropped the ring down the john," Fischer said. "It was a $1,600 ring or something like that. It got caught where the water comes in. The groom said, 'What do I do?' I had to call the plumber."

AFTER THE RING was fished out, the couple got hitched. In another flush, the bride passed out

"I couldn't get her back," Fischer recalled. "I put water on her wrist and she still didn't come to. I put a cold towel to her face. She came to and said, 'My makeup!' "

While many clergymen report one or the other passing out, the Rev. Victor Halboth of Grace Lutheran Church in Redford had a double play — both the groom and bride fainted at the same time.

"They had just exchanged their vows and were kneeling in front of me," said Halboth, who has performed weddings at Grace Lutheran Church for 33 years. "(The groom) said, 'I think I'm going to throw up.' And he did. The best man propped up the groom and the bridesmaid propped up the bride and we married them."

Another time, Halboth noticed the bride's party slowly began disappearing as the ceremony was about to start.

Apparently, an overzealous janitor locked the doors, leaving the bridesmaids who had gone outside to get some fresh air wandering around on Grand River Avenue. The custodian saw the situation and let the women back in.

Such incidents are cause to chuckle for Halboth, who's now joined by his son, Timothy, as an assistant pastor at Grace Lutheran Church.

Already, some wacky things have happened in the year the younger Halboth has been a minister.

"I HAD a wedding at a gentleman's house," the Rev. Timothy Halboth said. "... As we were going through the vows, the best man handed over the rings. I said, 'Shouldn't there be two rings. The bride said, 'Oh, no. I left it in the kitchen' and she left in the middle of the ceremony to

"Funny thing is it's on video and they're going to send it in to 'America's Funniest Home Videos.'"

The Rev. Thomas Eggebeen is new to the area, recently taking over as minister at St. Paul Presbyterian Church (USA) in Livonia. He brings one knotted tale from First Presbyterian Church in Sapulpa, Okla., where he served prior to arriving in Livonia.

"Usually, they put dummy rings on the ring bearer's pillow," said Eggebeen. "This time the actual rings were on the pillow.

"The rings were tied on the pillow so securely they couldn't undo the ribbon. Finally, the best man had a knife and he came up and cut the knot."

A knot was probably the only thing holding together the dress of the mother of the groom at one wedding. The Rev. Richard Peters of Rosedale Gardens Presbyterian Church in Livonia said: "What's the best way to describe it? Ah... extremely revealing, and most inappropriate for

THE REV. LUTHER Werth of Christ Our Savior Lutheran Church recalls one incident when the groomsmen were about to enter the side door. The sprinkler system inadvertantly came on and they got all wet.

Still, though weddings can bring some stressful moments, those performing them consider it one of the most enjoyable aspects of their jobs.

"As a pastor, you usually deal with people in times of crises," Church said. "This is a time where young people are at the height of their optimism. It's fun to be around."

She firms up healthy future with Fitnews

By Sue Mason staff writer

You could say that Kathi Carzon doesn't take rejection lightly.

She spent two years writing and illustrating a book on water exercise and waited another year for it to be published by a firm in Atlanta, Ga. But rather than publish the book, the firm went out of business.

Undaunted, the Farmington Hills resident decided to change the name of her exercise program to Aquacise and three years ago began publishing a regional health and fitness newsletter, Fitnews.

Based in Livonia, Fitnews has grown from six to 12 pages and reaches more than 10,000 people in Wayne and Oakland counties through hospitals, schools, gyms and fitness clubs.

"I'll take a subject like Seasonal Affective Disorder and break it down so simple so anyone can understand it," Carzon said. "I do that because I have dyslexia and remember how frustrating it was for me to understand what I was reading."

Carzon got hooked on exercise as a teenager. While in high school, she was involved in gymnastics and cheerleading and one thing lead to another.

"I knew what I wanted to do the day I got out of high school," she said. "I skipped all the graduation parties and went to work as an assistant water instructor at a camp in Holly. I was gone all summer."

After high school, Carzon supported herself by working in the emergency room at St. Mary Hospital. But her life in physical fitness didn't really come together until she married and "could pursue a goal."

CERTIFIED AS a fitness specialist through the Institute for Aerobic Instruction, Carzon also is certified as a water safety and CPR instructor and in life saving.

Carzon has been working on a bachelor's degree in exercise physiology since 1984, picking up credits through workshops and seminars. She also has studied at the University of Michigan and is just 13 credit hours short of getting her degree through Columbia Pacific University.

Admittedly, the piecemeal approach to her degree "is the hard way, but the only way" for Carzon. Her ultimate goal is a master's degree

Carzon happened on the idea of Fitnews as a way of using the information she had compiled for her book. Published three times a year — in January, April and September — it has evolved into articles by fitness experts on such topics as geriatric exercise, pregnancy, exercise and nutrition and FIT.

FIT is an acronym for Fitness In-

Kathi Carzon

tructors Talk, columns by individual instructors that help to introduce them to readers looking for a specific style of instructor.

"I get a lot of calls because of Fitnews and I help out a lot of people," she said. "And that's what I enjoy . . . helping people."

In addition to Fitnews, Carzon also is president of American Health and Fitness, a fitness promotion company. Through the firm, Carzon has worked with companies like Kerr Manufacturing in Romulus to develop an employee exercise and workout room.

She also teaches Aquacise through the Livonia Public Schools, community education program. She just finished a video on water exercises that is being shown on cable this month in Wayne and Oakland countles.

"IN ALL THE years I've had the class, I've never got in my car and said I don't want to do this," Carzon said of her work. "I guess it's in the blood and I feel I will be doing this the rest of my life."

Carzon believes fitness is for everyone, it's just a matter of finding what suits each person. She keeps students in her classes interested and motivated, she helps them earn the Presidential Sports Award. The award is given by the President of the United States to people "who through regular participation in sport, made a commitment to the active life."

As for the future, Carzon would like to see Fitnews go nationwide. She also will be doing fitness cruises along the Mexican Riviera and would like to do even more fitness videos, including short "Fit Fact" segments.

"My main goal is to make exercising as comfortable as I can so students will have a good time," Carzon said. "When you exercise, you feel good and you get such a high that exercising can become a religion."

Boutique gives new meaning to one-stop shopping

By Sue Mason

Where can you go and get a haircut, shop for clothes, buy a few gifts and some cosmetics and only walk through one door?

A shopping mall? Nope. One of those superduper we've-got-everything supermarkets? Nope. It's Glamour and Gifts.

In a small storefront on Rayburn, just east of Middlebelt Road, 12 crafters, an Avon distributor and a cosmetologist have put together a shop that has everything you need except something for dinner.

"We give people an opportunity to buy something very, very special," said Chris Malinowski of Livonia who got the ball rolling. Malinowski broke the mold more than a year ago by switching from in-home Avon sales to a retail setting, sharing the small shop with a weight loss program. When the later moved out, she remodeled the store and happened on the idea of adding crafters to the selection.

She found her first crafters by visiting flea markets and craft fairs and putting ads in the newspaper. Her offer of a month's rent for what it cost for weekend space at such a market was a big selling point.

"The first time I went out to a craft show, I went up to people who had a good product and a good price," she said. "Then I ran an ad in the paper and they came in. They found that the rent was like what it would be in one craft the sales, but eventually eliminated that, so the store now is run as a co-op. Each dealer works a minimum of two days a month and has a hand in making decisions about the shop.

start making Victorian a year ago while selling Home Interior products. She dresses up the small bears and candle lamps to display with the different home decorating products at home parties.

Her husband made small wooden chairs for the bear, and when she started "doing better with the bears," Crumb decided to make a switch from craft shows to the store front.

"People would ask me where I was going to be next, and I was also doing orders, so when I saw Chris and the shop, I knew this is where I would be forever," she said.

A former preschool teacher, Crumb enjoys working at the shop because she can bring her 3-year-old daughter Jaclyn to work with her. A small room has been fixed up so that the crafters can bring their children to work and avoid the cost of a baby sitter.

Dear Ms. Green,

I am very interested in your column in the Rochester Eccentric. I was hoping you would analyze my bandwriting, which I'll admit is not the greatest.

Dear L.K.,

Thank you for your interesting letter. I did not realize that educators were still switching left-handers to right-handers when you were learning to write. Your theory that your own handwriting was affected because you were forced to switch from left to right seems like an accurate assessment. However, I have been unable to locate research on this, but am receptive to any information readers may have,

The overall picture of your handwriting suggests a young man who would like to be independent and make his own way in life. In many respects, you are able to do this. Emotionally, however, you experience ambivalent feelings. On the one hand, you seek to separate yourself from some of your early experiences. On the other hand, especially when things become difficult or stressful, you retreat to the security of the past for emotional support.

In the area of interpersonal relationships, you are indeed selective. On the surface, you may mix well enough socially, but appear to trust only a tried and trusted few people. I suspect that you are more comfortable in the company of men than women.

Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are all helpful. And constructive feedback is welcomed.

COVENANT CHURCH

By Atlene Funke special writer

A funny thing happened on the way to the ballgame a couple years

The Rev. H. Dalton Myers, pastor of Covenant Community Church of Redford, was arrested for trying to sell an extra game ticket outside Tiger Stadium.

"A group of us had gone down to the game," said Myers, 60, a Livonia resident. "One had dropped out. I was just trying to get something for the ticket. I wasn't scalping."

Myers - unaware it is illegal to sell game tickets on the sidewalk recalls his feelings of anger and frustration during the incident. Now he can laugh.

"Yes, your pastor was arrested," Myers announced from the pulpit later, and the audience "really responded to that," he said. The story has joined Myers's repertoire of amusing stories, anecdotes and jokes which the pastor uses during his ser-

ACCORDING TO local pastors, humor is an effective communication tool.

"Humor helps people relax and be receptive," said the Rev. Gene Sorensen, pastor of the Unity Church of Livonia

Each of the pastors interviewed for this story uses humor during weekly sermons and in talking with parishioners. The rule of thumb: Keep it clean and don't slur individuals or groups. At Unity, a non-denominational church with around 400 members, the emphasis is on a practical, upbeat ministry, Sorensen likes to use humor. The church picnic feastory of the priest, the rabbi and the minister, the butt of the joke is always "the Unity minister."

Both Sorensen and Myers noted that the Bible is replete with humor, exaggeration and irony.

Myers cited Jesus' pronouncement that it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of Sorensen mentioned the story of when Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead. When Jesus told Mary and Martha that Lazarus was "asleep," they retorted that "His body stink-

"You can take that in a very funny way," Sorensen said.

MYERS REGULARLY consults his library of books containing famous quotations, anecdotes and interesting stories. And while he doesn't want to be known as the "joke-telling minister," he quips that sometimes humor "resurrects" the audience.

Humor shouldn't overshadow the message, said the Rev. George pedestal," Myers said. "The big thing about humor is that is can be used," Charnley said. "Hu-mor is part of life. But it can't take over the whole message."

Audiences may be self-conscious. The Rev. Arthur Wilde, pastor of the 700-member Good Hope Lutheran Church in Garden City, doesn't have the reputation of a jokester. Wilde, who prefers to use irony or innuendo, rather than funny stories, never knows how his members will people think (church) is a place of reverence and laughter isn't appropriate."

MYERS USES his "arrest" story to illustrate the point that ministers, like other people, sometimes "do humble things." It was a case of good intentions gone awry.

Myers had hoped to recoup part of the ticket price for the elderly woman who was unable to attend the

But the pastor had failed to notice a sign forbidding the sale of tickets outside the stadium. Police nabbed Myers and two other would-be ticket-sellers. After receiving a citation, he was allowed to enter the stadium. He was fined $25. "Sometimes ministers are put on a

Humor may be appropriate at funerals, particularly if the deceased person looked at life from the lighter side, according to the pastors.

"There have been times when everyone has known each other for so long," Myers said. "Anecdotes bring happiness to mind."

Charnley recently assisted at the funeral of a 104-year-old woman whom he had known for several years. He told about the occasion of the woman's 100th birthday, when a party was held in her honor at a local restaurant. -

"I forgot my glasses and couldn't read the menu," Charnley said. "She just said, 'Oh, that's OK, Father, I'll read it for you.'"

Coaster phobia beats maniacs' fear of flying crossroads

Iris Jones

I know people who are afraid to fly but will plunge to almost certain death on a roller coaster. laughing all the way. I say "almost" because I never actually met a coastermaniac who plunged to his death. But you still won't convince me that it isn't more dangerous to ride a little car down a steep slope at 100 miles per hour than it is to drink champagne at 30,000 feet.

I have enough courage to ride a mule up a mountainside or to eat snake soup in Hong Kong, but don't ask me to slide down a steep, icy slope on parrow slats of wood called skis or to ride the Cyclone, the Thunderbolt, the Magnum XL-200, the Chaos or the Big Bad Wolf.

Let's talk about planes. I've flown several light years during my career in the travel industry, but I've never seen the oxygen masks come down, and I've never seen the slides inflate for an emergency exit. The most dangerous ride I ever take is in a car between my house and the airport.

I was scared once in a plane. I was in the restroom of an El Al flight out of Tel Aviv, changing from a skirt into a pair of soft sweat pants for the long flight home, when the plane hit a hard cloud.

THE MESSAGE light began to blink, telling me to return to my seat, and the captain advised us to fasten our seat belts for bumpy air ahead. Unfortunately, I had one leg into the slacks and the plane bumped so hard I couldn't get the other leg Eventually I lurched down the aisle to my seat and found myself seated next to a young Israeli woman who was praying in Hebrew while tears ran down her face. I held her hand and tried to impart Jones Rule No. 1 about flying:

If you're going to be scared of flying, be scared during take-off and landing and then forget about

Pan Am Flight 103 notwithstanding, there is practically nothing that can happen to you when you are five miles up in the air. There's nothing to hit except clouds and all they do is make you un-

But I don't expect those who are infected with the fear-of-flying to respond to this any more than I respond to people who try to coax me onto roller coasters. I remember a horrifying ride on The Mouse at Bob-Lo; laugh, you coastermaniacs, but I saw an Australian visitor lose her false teeth on that sharp right turn.

As for the ones that go creak, creak, creak up an incline and then plunge you straight down into infanity, I can report that the most freeing moment of my life was the day I approached The Great American Scream Machine in Atlanta, and a little voice inside my head said, "You don't have to go on that thing if you don't want to."

For years, I managed to sit out every innovation from Magic Mountain to the Screaming Eagle. I even managed to write an article or two about coastermania, quoting Robert Cartmell, the guru of roller coasters about his annual list of the 10 best roller coasters in the United States.

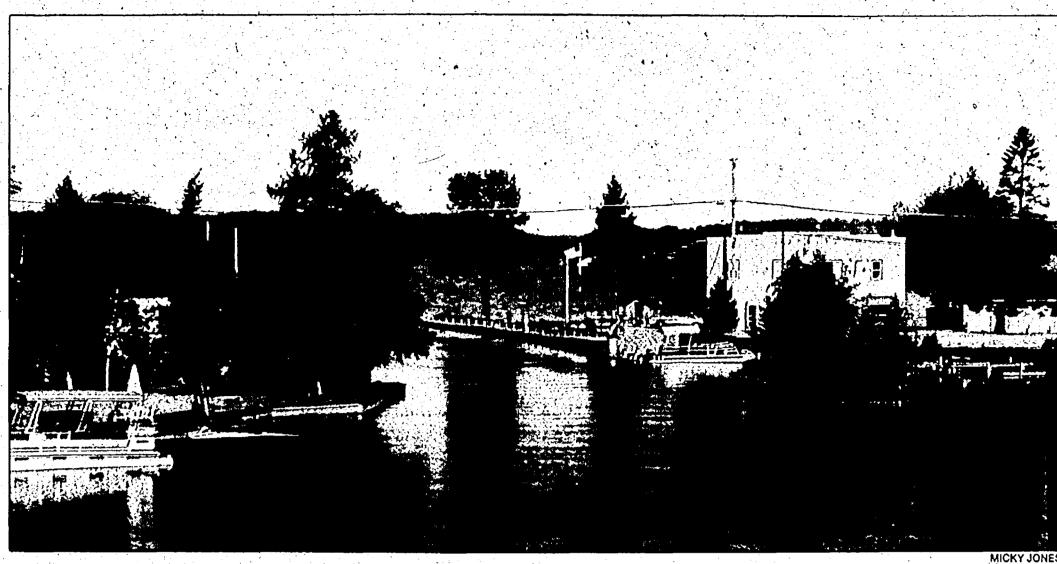

This policy worked until one July afternoon at Basch Gardens in Williamsburg, Va. was traveling with a group of friends — at least they used to be my friends — who decided I was missing something in life. They approached me from behind, grabbed my arms like a pair of terrorists, and the next thing I knew, I was sitting between them on the Loch Ness Monster. My screams went unheard-as we went creak, creak, creak to the top of the incline, and plunged straight down to our "almost certian deaths."

As you can gather, I survived, but you'll never set me within half a mile of a roller coaster

Tlying doesn't bother me a bit, but you have to be crazy to go on one of those things.

ANTRIM COUNTY CARRIES A ORCH

There is a sort of guarded enthusiasm about the area among the cottagers we know there. They all obviously love it but don't want to attract great waves of visitors We became acquainted with Torch Lake last summer, boating, swimming, fishing, good restaurants and lodgwhen we spent a few days there with Ralph and Janet Moore, friends from Birmingham.

MOST MORNINGS we took a short walk up Torch Lake Drive to Brownwood Acres, a former farmhouse where fresh home-baked doughnuts and coffee are now served. We breakfasted on the farm's cozy porch where tall vines growing up the screens were ripe with big squashes.

Lunches and dinners are served in the dining area. A gift shop offers wares that include handcrafted table linens, laces and doll clothes. In an old-fashioned general store next to the farm, we found homemade mustard pickles, corn relish, jams and jellies, and the specialty of the house-cherry butter. Jars of delicious honey came from Brownwood's own bee hives, which inspire area children to label the place "The Honey House."

The general store building has the distinction of once having fallen in Torch Lake. While being hauled across the lake on sleds, the building broke through the ice many winters ago.

Later in the day, we played tennis at a park in Bellaire, a small town near the lake. We didn't golf, but our friends played a round at the Bell Aire Golf Course. In total, there are eight golf courses in the Bellaire-Mancelona-Ellsworth area. The elegant Shanty Creek-Schuss Mountain club resort near Bellaire has three championship courses. They include the famous Arnold Palmer-designed "Legend," the sixth best course in Michigan according to Golf Digest Magazine. It costs non-resort guests $85 to play 18 holes.

FOR BEAUTIFUL views, good golf, and more moderate prices, some of our friends prefer the A-Ga-Ming course at Elk Rapids, and Antrim Dells at Atwood.

For guests at Shanty Creek-Schuss Mountain, the activities besides golf include hayrides, horseback riding, tennis, racquet ball, indoor and outdoor pools, and workouts at the health club. There are also childrens' programs to keep the little ones busy.

Just south of Lake Bellaire, hiking trails wind through the 960-acre Grass River Natural Area. The Grass River meanders for three miles through protected cedar swamps and sedge-covered islands.

This is all part of the Chain of Lakes created in 1907 when a dam was built to supply power for Charlevoix. The 65-mile chain starts at Lake Bellaire, goes down the Grass River into Clam Lake, then into the Clam River which flows into Torch Lake.

in Greenbush, near Oscoda. The cottage was one of five resort units on a sandy beach. Often our vacation would start with a trip to East Tawas to see the art fair, or a stop at an antique shop and have dinner later at the Wabun restaurant, south of Oscoda in Charbonneau on the other side of the Au Sable River.

Of course, the first thing the men wanted to do was fish. They'd set their alarms for an early hour when the "fish were biting" off the long pier in Oscoda.

The kids eyed Lake Huron and opted for swimming and sailing. Sometimes we went out on a friend's sailboat and relaxed while he spun off tales about his past

The watery necklace ends at Elk Rapids, where another hydro dam separates the Elk River from Grand Traverse Bay. Sizable boats can be portaged across the dam by the Elk River Marina at Elk Rapids.

The most sheltered waters in this chain invite canoers, and are the scene of a Paddlers' Open Canoe Race every July.

ANTRIM COUNTY contains five parks. At Elk Rapids Fishing Park, you can watch spring steelhead or fall salmon run just below the hydro

Some of the best fishing is in the rivers and small lakes connected to Torch Lake. Clam Lake, for exam-. ple, is excellent for large and smallmouth bass and small pan fish.

Although most of the land circling Torch Lake is privately owned, there are public swimming areas. Several are at Alden, one near the old depot. Another popular swimming area is near the Clam River Dockside Restaurant, at a point where the river empties into Torch Lake.

According to David Kenaga, aquatic biologist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Torch Lake is a high-quality body of water and one of the best in the state for swimming.

"In a recent survey of the best lakes in the world, it was listed among the top 10," said Kenaga. We can guarantee the water is cold.

The Dockside is a busy establishment where summer guests eat on an outdoor deck and watch boats idling up and down the river. At the bar inside, the sports event of the day is usually on television. The menu includes traditional American burger selections, Mexican foods, and a warning that tobacco chewing is not allowed.

NEAR THE Dockside is Campbell's on Torch at 6311 E. Torch Lake Drive. The rustic lodge features family dining, more formal than the Dockside.

Our friends, the Thornton Hopsons of Birmingham, like dining at the Elk River Inn and Lounge at Elk Rapids. The Hopsons have owned a cottage on Torch Lake for more than 20 years, so they should know.

Among the many other restaurants near Torch Lake are two famous ones, both at Ellsworth and serving dinners only. One is the Rowe Inn Restaurant on County Road C-48. Its culinary achievements have impressed major restaurant critics. The Tapawingo at 9502 Lake Street serves regional Michigan food and is often lauded by the critics for its high-style nouvelle cul-

"It's a great place to eat," said Pattie Findlay, who with her husband, Jack, co-owns the nearby Torch Lake Bed and Breakfast. "But you usually need a reservation."

they could afford it. They made it tablecloth, the handsome big dining happen by opening a B&B. They live room and a marvelous breakfast in Okemos and spend their summers catering to overnnight guests in a cozy-95-year-old Victorian house furnished with antiques in Alden:

Their goal is to reconstruct a time when entertaining was as much a way of life as an art. A big green lawn swoops down toward the lake and each of the three guest bedrooms has an easy chair among its attractive furnishings. Double occupancy is $55 and $65.

AMONG OTHER B&B's in the area, we favor the Widow's Walk in Elk Rapids, a big 19th-century house built with six bedrooms, servants quarters and several parlors. Dave and Cindy Felker preserved high ceilings, original chandeliers and gorgeous oak and maple floors when restoring the house.

They also left the rooftop spot where visitors can look out on Grand Traverse Bay, which laps the shoreline just across the street. Each of four big bedrooms includes a private bath. Double occupancy ranges from $65 to $85.

One of the things we like about B&B's is the interesting people you meet over breakfast. At the Widow's Walk, we enjoyed the embroidered have to worry about booking a year in advance, and being disappointed if our favorite cottage was taken. On the other hand, we were giving up the carefree life of renters for the responsibility of cottage owners.

We drove through the worst winter storm of the season to look at a cottage 10 miles south of Saugatuck, and peeked through the window with a flashlight. What sold me on the place was the breathtaking sunset on Lake Michigan when I glimpsed through the cottage's huge picture windows. We bought it.

Our cottage is on a bluff, like most in the area, so we painted, cleaned, mowed grass and built 78 steps going down to the beach that first summer. You work a lot harder at your own cottage than you do at a

Since the summer of 1988, lakefront property prices on both coasts of Michigan have soared. So if your dream has been to own a second home on Lake Michigan or Lake Huron, you'd better hurry because vacant lakefront land is at a premium and is going fast.

Property in the western half of the state with frontage on Lake Michigan in Saugatuck and South Haven is about $1,500 a front foot. According to Sondra Stevenson, of Unique Properties, Inc. in Saugatuck, it can go as high as $11,000 a front foot if it's on the Kalamazoo River.

The price of cottages on Lake Michigan in the Saugatuck or South Haven area range from $185,000 to Cottage rentals are $750 a week, if you can find someone to rent to you, added Stevenson. Old cottages in town are $500 a week. Unlike the east coast with its rows of small rental resort cottages up and down US-23, rental cottages on Lake-Michcan are scarce. Most of the time you have to deal with a realtor or know someone who has a cottage to rent.

There aren't any bargains on the east coast either. According to Gary M. Thomas, associate broker of Lake and Country Real Estate in Au Gres and Tawas, "If you can find vacant land in a prime area, most of it is going for $1,200 a front footage."

Thomas, who also is a member of the Sims Township Planning Commission, said that since the summer of 1988, there has been an increase of 25 to 30 percent in the price of lakefront property. Summer cottages on Lake Huron with a good, sandy beach start at $70,000, depending on size, and go up from there. Thomas added that in the shallow, reedy part of Saginaw Bay in the mid to southern portion, property is about $425 a foot.

Renters will have no problem finding a cottage on Lake Huron. There are rows of cottages, and prices start from $250 a week for a onebedroom cottage to $750 for lakeiront condominiums.

The Oakland-Troy Airport and other smaller airfields in suburbia have the potential to experience more take-offs and landings with expansion at Detroit Metro.

Small airstrips have room for more pilots

By Peggy Aulino staff writer

Big airports are where thousands of people go each day to hop a commercial plane for business or pleasure. Little airports are where rich people go on weekends to fly for pleasure.

If you buy that statement, you don't know beans about general aviation. General aviation is the term those in the-field use when referring to small aircraft, such as single or twin-engine planes and jets under 12,500 pounds. And general aviation, those same experts will tell you, is an important part of the economy - especially the economy of suburban communities that depend on industry to strengthen their tax base.

Operators of general aviation airports in the suburbs say the planned expansion of Detroit City and Metro airports will not take business away from the smaller fields. On the contrary, the expansions will mean more room for commercial airliners but it may result in smaller planes migrating to the suburbs.

"I'm hoping that the people that are currently based in Detroit Metro, the smaller general aviation planes, will become customers and tenants of our airport," said Ken Pogue, manager of the county-owned Troy-Oakland

Anna Main, the owner of Big Beaver Airport in Troy, said it "remains to be seen" whether the expansion will have any effect on her facility.

"We have room to accept a little more traffic," said

Oakland-Pontiac Airport is what's called a "reliever airport" for the bigger air fields, said manager J. David Vander Veen. That means it is already getting small aircraft traffic that might otherwise go to the Detroit air-

"To the extent that general aviation leaves those airports, I suppose we would experience some growth from that." he said.

A STATE AERONAUTICS official said landing and hangar fees for general aviation aircraft were recently increased at Metro. That caused some small-aircraft pilots to bail out and head for the suburbs, said Richard Jackson, Assistant Deputy Director of the Michigan Aeronautics Commission.

Expansion plans call for the building of a new runway and another control tower at Metro. An existing runway will also be lengthened there. That work will be "phased in," Jackson said. Plans for the expansion of Detroit City Airport are incomplete, and improvements there are "quite a ways away yet," he said.

'General aviation is the key to all business. We are the business and education side of aviation.'

During the construction, some companies and private pilots may find it more convenient to use smaller airports. And, said Jackson, they may end up becoming permanent tenants.

Paul H. Jones, a private pilot and the director of public services for Plymouth Township, did research on air transportation in southeastern Michigan during his master's degree program. He compared small planes landing at Metro to "a slowpoke on the highway."

'It just slows down the whole process," Jones said.

SO LARGER airports would rather handle only large aircraft. That gets planes in faster and customers home that much sooner. But both Detroit airports are publicly owned, so they can't prohibit small planes from landing.

A Federal Aviation Administration study of air traffic conditions in the metro area concluded that general aviation planes should be given alternatives to the large airfields. But the powers-that-be have yet to decide where small aircraft should be encouraged to go.

It is possible that Mettetal Airport, a privately owned field in Canton Township, will not be available to handle any landings or takeoffs. The owner of that field has indicated the operation is not profitable and it may be

But Ashley Heimbaugh, who operates Mettetal, is hopeful for its future.

"We are the last private airport in Wayne County," Heimbaugh said. "One hundred-thirty aircraft are hangared here. There are five business flights daily.

"General aviation is the key to all business. At big airports, commercial airlines carry people. We are the business and education side of aviation."

High-tech business doubles in Oakland

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

The number of Oakland County high-tech firms with an emphasis on research and development nearly doubled during the 1980s, according to a new directory of Michigan high tech firms compiled by University of Michigan researchers.

Produced by the U-M Industrial Development Division, the "Directory of Research, Development and Testing Capacity in Michigan: 1990" includes information on 376 companies based on their responses to a written survey.

Oakland County saw an increase from 61 to 112 high-tech firms during the previous decade, according to the survey. Wayne County experienced a slight decrease during the same period, from 67 in 1984 to 64 in 1989.

"Oakland County has worked hard at developing land. There are more than 10 industrial parks in the county developed exclusively for hightech firms," said Jeffrey Stuit, a U-M research associate who worked on the directory.

Despite the slight decline in Wayne County, Stult called that market stable and cited Metro West Technology Park in Plymouth as an excellent example of a first-class, high-tech industrial park.

THE THREE key elements for development are available land, a good labor force, and markets, Stult sald. Proximity to university research centers and auto production were

"We figure there's definitely an economic base of employers (in Oakland County) selling goods or services out of the area. They are good at bringing money in," Stult said.

Joseph Joachim, Oakland County Director of Economic Development, wouldn't argue with that assessment.

"We see continued growth," Joachim said, "U-M has an economeforecast projects another 48,000 new private sector jobs in 1990-91. We're seeing that trend. Obviously if there is a serious change in the national economy, it will have some impact. We still feel quite comfortable.'

Although most of the high-tech companies are auto-related, there are several different types of research and development facilities, such as Rockwell International, Compuware and BASF Chemical. Many employ hundreds of workers and help to diversify the nature of the parks, Stuit said.

"I CAN think of at least two major firms, Electronic Data Systems and GMF Robotics, which have as their goal 50 percent non-auto-related business," Joachim sald. "That holds true in many other firms. The industries are diversifying themselves."

Another boost to research and development firms has been the amount of automotive research, development and engineering jobs contracted out to suppliers by the Big. Three and other major car compa-

"DuPont and GE Plastics grew from mere sales offices to major research and development and englneering facilities," Joachim said.

Also making Oakland County attric model for Oakland County. Their tractive to companies - its pool of highly educated workers and an ability to attract new young talent from across the country, Joachim said.

Washtenaw County also saw an increase in the number of high-tech firms over the previous decade, from 68 to 97.

"More than 580 companies responded to the survey, but only those with research and development testing facilities, significant numbers of engineers or scientists on staff, or a major focus on research and development were included," said Michael Conboy, research program manager for the Industrial Development Division in the U-M College of Engineering.

ONE DRAMATIC increase illustrated in the directory is growth in technology parks near the state's research universities. In 1970, Michigan had only three research parks with less than 400 acres. The 1990 directory lists 33 high-tech industrial parks in 15 countles totaling nearly 7,000 acres.

Michigan's technical diversity is reflected in more than 100 specialty categories of products, processes or services listed in the U-M directory. Highest number of responses were for computer software, computer related services and automotive equipment.

In the academic section of the directory, 69 major laboratories in 15 universities list their research capabilities, equipment and scientific personnel.

Preparation and printing of the research and development directory was funded by U-M and the Michlgan Department of Commerce.

"This directory is a great vehicle for helping our state's firms get in touch with Michigan's abundant research, development and testing capacity," said Mark Murray, director of the business research office in the Michigan Department of Commerce.

Small airstrips still have room for pilots, airplanes

Heimbaugh says the job market is wide open for aircraft mechanics and pilots. Western Michigan University, Lansing Community College and Schoolcraft Community College are a few of the schools offering such programs.

HEIMBAUGH SEES the proposed airport expansion at nearby Metro an asset for Mettetal, which could operate as a relief airport for smaller aircraft:

"I've been based at this field 10 years, and I'd like to stay another 20 years," he said. "I believe we're an integral part of the community."

Township officials are considering buying and operating the airport, but that plan has gotten mixed reactions. Pilots say the field should be preserved, but some township residents have said they don't want their tax dollars supporting it. But Heimbaugh believes Mettetal "would be completely self sustaining."

A 12-member committee from the township is studying the proposal and Heimbaugh is optimistic.

If the township doesn't buy the airfield, there are plenty of developers who are willing to expand Canton's industrial area, which borders Mettetal.

"It would be too bad to see Mettetal go the way of the developers, the way everything is," said Main, who said she is approached by developers

"I just tell them that I don't want to sell," Main said. And when they "get to be a pest," she said, "I just get firm."

THE IDEA THAT small airports like Mettetal are playgrounds for people with a lot of money is "a real myth," said Jones.

"It just costs too much to have an airplane just for fun," he said. "You have to have some way to support it, like a business."

In fact, most of the general aviation planes that use small airfields serve double duty, airport operators said. During the week they are used for business and on weekends they may or may not be used for plea-

"Just because it's a small, singleengine doesn't mean that the owner doesn't use it for business," Pogue

Jones said Traverse City used its airport to attract industry, and he thinks the same potential exists in

"Mettetal can serve as a drawing? card for industries," he said. "It can I be a very valuable asset."

As for the argument that taxpay-1 ers shouldn't be required to contribute to the cost of air transportation, Jones said: "Nobody objects to all 3 that money poured into SEMTA for α empty buses."

Ask questions of free-lance writer before you do any hiring

When looking for a qualified freelance writer to help expand your company's word power, there are several questions you should ask. By doing so, you will help the two of you learn about each other's needs and work styles; you will also know whether you feel comfortable with the idea of doing business together. "What are your writing qualifications" is a basic question. But it isn't asked nearly as much as it should by small business owners and managers. Even if you are familiar with the writer's previous work, ask periences. Also ask for published are realistic.

samples that relate to your business or industry. Your writer should also provide you with references without being asked to do so.

Next, most freelancers follow a formal planning process before beginning a given project. The "turnabout time" from start to finish may range for one to several weeks depending on the project's length and complexity. When asking about turnaround time, you must make your deadline dates clear to your freelancer. He or she will be able to about specific past training and ex- tell you if your project expectations

focus: small business Mary DiPaolo

If your project is complex, you might want to receive and approve it in stages. For example, you can ask the writer to submit a full outline before developing a first draft; or present the layout before submitting any final provisions. This practice offers both you and your writer the opportunity to continue with the project or turn it over to someone else when and where appropriate.

The form of your final project may range from a very rough draft to a printed copy of your material.

Regardless of the form you may request, your writer should be willing to produce as many rewrites as you require with adequate review time in between. If the freelancer is unwilling to produce no more than three versions before calling it quits, you may want to search for assistance elsewhere.

Additional questions to ask relate to your writer's need for office space if appropriate, supplementary services offered (such as writing skills training, serving as project liaison between you and the members of testing), contract requirements, outof-pocket expenses and payment arrangements. If you have any other concerns, do not hesitate to discuss them before agreeing to a project.

In two weeks, this series will conclude with the fees you can expect to pay for specific types of writing projects.

Sense of whimsy drives solar-powered car racers fastest cars in the GM Sunrayce USA probably with less sweat than poured from the drivers in the 100degree cockpits where they lay for 1,400 miles, whirring along the road between Lake Buena Vista, Fla., and Warren, Mich.

Indirectly, the motivation for racing 32 solar-powered cars across the U.S. midsection can be traced to another hare-brained idea of GM Chairman-elect Robert C. Stempel, who harbors a secret passion for this kind of thing.

NOT SO much because he sees any particular future in replacing gas stations with a couple of microchips, but because he still believes tinker. ing is a good thing, particularly for college engineering students.

Aside from Stempel, the idea of a solar-powered car seems to catch

A good bicyclist could beat the the sense of whimsy of nearly everybody who sees one coming down the road. Light, elegant structures that barely touch the ground, supporting a silvery skin of solar cells that give each car a vaguely reptillian appearance, a solar car must move on about 1.2 horsepower max, which is just about what a good rider delivers to his bicycle.

> THE CARS set bystanders to dreaming about some future age when they, too, can climb into a bubble propelled by the sun and head off

Hard physics, intervenes in this fantasy, when you realize the machines, about 20 percent efficient, barely exceed 20 mph and weigh about the same as a medium-size motorcycle. In fact, if they were developed beyond their builders' wild- solar-powered at all, but electric est dreams, they would barely keep cars that recharge their batteries. Michigan emerges as victor, mainly legs, soaring by stretching a mem-

Seen from the sidelines, this is a good thing, since if the sun delivered enough energy per square foot to make a solar-powered car practical, it would make the surface of the earth akin to the inside of a microwave oven.

*Have children likely to need help and parents likely to need long-term care

This column is based on a recent survey, "Americans Cope with Their Finances." conducted for the International Association for Financial Planning by the Gallup Organiza-

The poll asked respondents a series of questions dealing with everyday pocketbook issues. Most Americans were overwhelmingly pessimistic about what the 1990s hold in store

A huge majority, 86 percent, said college costs have risen beyond the reach of most American families. The same percentage, 86 percent, said severe inflation is likely to be a problem within this decade, and 83 percent said day-care expenses have become a serious burden for most families with small children.

MORE THAN two-thirds see a good possibility for a deep or prolonged recession in this decade, and 66 percent said there is less chance for retirees to be self-sufficient in the 1990s than in the 1980s.

The long-term outlook of the American psyche is depressing - 86 percent of consumers cite fears of inflation, and 69 percent fear deep

Especially pessimistic are the "Triple Squeeze Generation," the 25 ages of 35 and 44, who see their own college costs of their children and the long-term care needs of aging .

AS A result of these pressures and their pessimistic outlook, 61 percent of Americans say they are less inclined to take financial risks, and 62 percent are more inclined to save over the next 10 years. Taken as a whole, the survey paints a picture of maturing baby-boomers at the end of a consuming binge begun in the 1980s and poised on the brink of a savings scramble in the 1990s.

While this pessimism was pervasive throughout the entire society, it. was most pronounced among heads of families, ages 35-44, who say they will have kids in college and be taking care of aging parents just when their own retirement needs should be paramount. These "triple-squeeze" boomers were more apt than the rest of society to say that shouldering percent of Americans between the these reponsibilities would harm their lifestyle.

> FOR INSTANCE, 75 percent said that sending their kids to college would affect their standard of living compared to a 70-percent agreement among all parents with collegebound children.

> Similarly, 60 percent of the squeezed group (see accompanying retirement being squeezed out by the table) said providing money for a college education would limit their ability to help parents, while only 50 percent of other parents said that.

> And 66 percent say providing longterm care for a parent would affect their ability to save for their children's education. Only 53 percent of other parents made that statement.

Safety tips to beat the heat

With the hottest days of the year approaching, Consumers Powers advises area residents to take safety steps to beat the heat.

Heat stress is a particular problem this time of year.

To avoid heat stress, stay indoors whenever possible. Cold baths or showers and lightweight, loose fitting clothing are also recommended. Hats and caps are recommended for people traveling outdoors.

Drinking water often and in reasonable amounts is also recommended, though hot beverages like coffee and tea should be consumed in moderation.

Hot, heavy meals should also be `avoided.

Salt tablets should only be taken with a doctor's permission.

Signs of heat stress include dizziness, rapid heartbeat, diarrhea, nausea, a throbbing headache, dry skin with no sweating, chest pain, great weakness, mental changes, breathing problems, vomiting and

Anyone exhibiting any of these signs should immediately seek medical help.

Clarenceville hires Ladd

By Brad Emons staff writer

With his background in the Army, Mark Ladd will try to be all he can be as Livonia Clarenceville's new varsity football coach.

The 30-year-old Ladd becomes the Trojans third head coach in three years, succeeding Vic Balaj, who left to take an assistant's job at Wayne State after posting a 7-2 record in his only Ladd, a medical specialist who was stationed four years in West Berlin, Germany, will take a somewhat disciplined approach.

"I'm not a veller or a screamer, but I want the players to understand what I want," said Ladd. who spent the past five years as an offensive backfield and quarterbacks coach at Madison Heights Lamphere.

Clarenceville principal David Simowski noted "a couple of different factors" in hiring Ladd.

"He's young enough to relate well with our students, and he's open to new ideas, and I really like that aspect about him," Simowski said.

LADD, who majored in history at University of Michigan-Dearborn, plans to substitute teach in the Clarenceville district.

"Since he'll be available to sub, he'll have no problem getting into our building almost on a daily basis," Simowski said. "The contact with our students is very important as opposed to hiring someone else who teaches in outside our district and can't get to our school until 3 p.m. each

Simowski is also impressed with Ladd's organizational skills.

"He's already sent out letters to the kids and contacted parents," said the Clarenceville principal. "He's already got the ball rolling and I don't think we'll miss a beat if he does what I think he's capable of doing. We've been struggling a little after Vic (Balaj) left (in April), but this man is committed to the program 24 hours per day."

Ladd wasted little time in naming a staff.

Russ McKenzie will be the defensive coordinator and Tony Jarana will coach the offensive line. Greg Jefferies and John Garrett will team up to coach the JV squad.

"I'M THEIR third coach in three years (Ralph Weddle was the other)," said Ladd. "They've had pretty good success, but I understand they've had trouble with numbers. Last year they didn't have a JV squad.

"I'm just going to try and go in and rebuild the program one more time. I'd like to have 55 kids out (by the first practice Monday, Aug. 13)."

Ladd, who has opened the weight room three times a week, said he has met with some of the

"I understand they have a half-dozen lineman coming back and one receiver," he said, "but other than that I don't know that much about

(Clarenceville's top player returns in senior Kendrick Harrington, who made first-team All-Observer last season after gaining 852 yards on 41 receptions.)

The new Clarenceville coach, who said he patterns himself after former University of Houston coach Bill Yeoman, plans to implement the veer

"It's triple option football where you're not just looking at one hole, but you have other choices to find holes if the quarterback reads it right," Ladd said. "In order to run that offense you need someone that can run, and hopefully that someone can pass the football as well."

DEFENSIVELY, Ladd will employ a 5-2 align-

"He comes to us with tremendous references and he comes to us highly recommended," said Simowski, who along with athletic director Leo Kinsella, selected Ladd over five other candidates.

Former Lamphere coach George Jesko, along with current Lamphere coach Joel Kessler, each gave the ex-Madison Heights High gridder a blanket endorsement.

"George Jesko gave me my start (as an assistant) and he taught me a lot," said Ladd, who has also coached basketball, baseball and track on the high school level.

After spending time in the Boston area following high school graduation, Ladd entered the military, where he worked in a hospital alcohol and drug rehabilitation ward.

He came back to the Detroit area to finish school and now resides in Hazel Park.

All-star classic highlights QBs

By Jim Toth and Steve Kowalski staff writers

A check of the calendar says it's way too early to be butting heads on the football field. Especially in actual game situations.

That will be the case, however, Saturday at Michigan State University's Spartan Stadium when 88 of the top high school graduates from last spring don helmets and pads for the 1990 Michigan High School East-West All-Star Football Game.

The game, televised on PASS, begins at 1:35 p.m. Tickets are $6 and may be purchased at the gate.

Divided into two squads of 44, the 10th annual affair will provide the West team an opportunity to deadlock the series at five wins apiece. The East took a one game series advantage with last year's 31-26 win.

"They say they do get pretty intense," said ex-Birmingham Brother Rice standout Steve Morrison when asked of what to expect from the game. "Close games are not boring, they're always exciting. It should be fun and I'm looking forward to it."

MORRISON, A 6-FOOT-3, 220pound linebacker who will pursue his gridiron career this fall at the University of Michigan, is one of 13 Observer & Eccentric-area players named to the East squad. Only one player from a school can be picked to play in the all-star classic.

"Last year (Rice grad) Marc Milia made it and I thought it was pretty cool," explained Morrison, who follows a long line of Rice graduates who have played in the game. "We had really good guys on our team this year and I wondered if I'd make it. It's a lot of fun for everybody and builds a lot of football for the state of Michigan."

Joining Morrison on the East squad will be Ryan Bell (Redford Catholic Central), Ian Coleman (Troy Athens), Mill Coleman (Farmington Hills Harrison), Mike Cowen (North Farmington), Craig Fischer (Rochester Adams), Larry Johnson (Wayne), Ryan Johnson (Plymouth Salem), Nick Kiffner (Walled Lake Central), Marc Mitchell (Troy), Mike Montico (Country Day), Dennis Parker (Redford Bishop Borgess) and Eric Stover (Westland John Glenn)

The East coaching staff will also have an O&E look to it with Chuck Apap of Walled Lake Western and Bob Sutter of Harrison part of the six-man contingent.

Mill Coleman and Stover, who played against each other in the Western Lakes Activities Association, will share quarterbacking duties for the East. This is the second all-star game appearance of the summer for Coleman, who played earlier this month in the National High School All-Star game in Neva-

Being up-front

McIntyre shows he has NBA skills

OU'VE HEARD ABOUT stationary fronts from Jerry Hodak, putting on a front and somebody ringing the

But since I've been away (on vacation) for awhile, it's time to catch up on a few items on the local sports

John McIntyre at the Palace. I spent three nights last weekend watching the free agent/rookie camp games between the Pistons, Pacers, Bullets and Bucks.

I saw Pervis Ellison (nervous), William Bedford (disappointing), Lance Blanks (not bad), Mark Hughes (why didn't he get to shoot at U-M?), A.J. English (remember this name) and John McIntyre (remember him from Redford Catholic Central High?)

McIntyre, the 6-foot-5 guard who helped Missouri to a No. 1 ranking in college basketball this season, is getting a look from the Bucks.

I must say that "Mac" has potential to play in the NBA if he gets a break with the right team.

McIntyre proved he could pass, shoot (not free throws), rebound (six in one half) and score (13 points in one game and 11 in another).

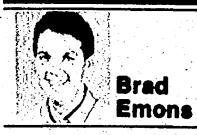

"He kind of reminds me of Brian Winters who used to play for the Bucks," said a scout from the Spanish Professional League, "He sees the floor well, handles the ball and is hard-nosed. Somebody in Europe will take a chance on him."

I asked the scout if "Mac" may be a step slow for the NBA.

"Is Jeff Hornacek (of the Phoenix Suns) quick?," said the scout. "He's learned some tricks defensively, playing a step off his man and handchecking without getting beat to the basket.

McIntyre, who headed to Los Angeles this week to play for the Bucks free-agent/rookie team in the California Summer Pro League, has an uphill battle facing him to make the Bucks' roster.

Voterans Jay Humphries, Alvin Robertson, Paul Pressey and Ricky Pierce are all scheduled to return; Second-round pick Steve Henson (Kansas State) seems to be a favorite with coach Del Harris.

But McIntyre proved he belonged in camp and may catch the eye of some pro team. His free throw shooting, however, must improve. He was 5-for-10 on Sunday, missing three straight with eight seconds to go, but the Bucks ended the Pistons' unbeaten streak at three with a twopoint win.

"Mac" needs playing time, but his best basketball may be ahead of him.

College football: If you love college football, go out and buy the 1990 Sporting News Yearbook. The price ($4.95) is kind of steep, but it's loaded with pertinent information. Several players from Observer-land popped out. U-M's Alex Marshall (Redford Bishop Borgess High) is rated the nation's 15th best linebacker. "Too passive to rate higher," said the magazine. Defensive lineman Matt Fras (Redford CC) is ranked as a preseason all-league pick for Holy Cross. the No. 2-ranked team in Division 1-AA. CC products Chris Kovath and

Pete Dankert are also on the squad. Speaking of CC grads, Nick Varaion of Toledo is a prajected starter. Meanwhile, Livonia Stevenson's Mike Nettle and Redford St. Agatha's Kevin Rich, are both expected to start on the defensive line for Central Michigan. Long snapper Brett Naumcheff of CMU, a Livonian from Dearborn Divine Child High, ia tabled as the MAC's best special teams player. At Michigan State, Toby Heaton (Redford CC) is penciled in as a starter on the offensive line.

In the Ivy League, Yale is the favorite with the Michalik twins, Chris and Rob of Redford CC, returning as starters on the offensive line.

By the way, the Sporting News picks Auburn No. 1 and Notre Dame

Say Yes to Tennis, No to Drugs: Through the combined efforts of New Balance, Racquets Unlimited and the host Livonia Family Y, 75 youngsters (ages 8-17) attended a free tennis clinic on July 14.

It was a huge success, reports Ben Tasich, owner of Racquets Unlimit-

Steve Rollet of the Livonia Community Counseling Center talked the kids about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse, while the Y tennis staff of Jack Kingsbury, Phyllis Nelson, Bob Miller and Judd Kingsbury gave free lessons.

New Balance, the sports shoe company, provided free hats and Tshirts.

Because of its success, another clinic is set for $ p.m. Saturday, Aug. 18 at Schoolcraft College to youngsters 18 and under. New Balance, Racquets Unlimited and SC tennis pro Joe Brennan will put on the clin-

Hockey front: Dennis Smith, a Livonia native, has signed on with the Los Angeles Kings, perhaps to join the Great Gretsky?

Smith, former property of the Washington Caps, was a secondteam pick in the American Hockey Another Livonian, Mike Donnelly, is an unrestricted free agent and could be moving soon from the Buffalo Sabres organisation. Yet another Livonian, all-star defenseman Al Iafrate (Toronto Maple Leafs), has reportedly been working hard in rehabilitating his injured

Weather front: Let's hope it's cool by the Friday, Aug. 31, the first night of high school football.

Northwest Suburban meet on tap Saturday

The club swimming season, which began in June, will come to an end

Leagues involving area teams are hosting championship meets Thursday, Saturday and Sunday at sites throughout metro Detroit.

The Tri-City League will be the first one decided, as the championship will get under way today at Pontiac Central High School.

The Old-Farm Club, out of West Bloomfield, will try to make it three straight Tri-City Meet titles. Old. Farm was second during the regular-season race, finishing its league record at 5-1 in dual meets.

· Old Farm had a 31-straight dual meet win streak snapped earlier this

swimming

rie McClelland and Paul Salgado. Meanwhile, the larger Northwest . Suburban League meet will be at the Beech Woods Recreation Club on Nine Mile and Beech Daly Road in Southfield. The preliminary rounds begin Saturday with the championship set for noon Sunday. The top 12 swimmers in each event Saturday qualify for Sunday's action. Woodside is the league's defending champion, and coached by Darin Abbase, probably again has a fighting chance of retaining that honor.

Leading Woodside's charge are Jenny Vanker (9-10). Norah Cooney (7-8), Stacey Hill (9-10), Camilla Anden (11-12), Brian Musich (11-12), and Liz Huckabay (15-18). Vanker broke a pool record earlier this year in the 50-yard freestyle (31.02), and the other swimmers, during more than one dual meet, captured two events each.

In the Inter-Club Swim League, the site is the Detroit Golf Club off of Seven Mile and Woodward in Detroit. The preliminarles are Saturday, with the championship scheduled for noon Sunday.

The Grosse Pointe Yacht Club has won eight-straight Inter-Club League titles. Birmingham Athletic Club coach John McGuire picks Grosse Pointe to win another crown, with second place up for grabs.

McGuire believes Birmingham which placed second during the regular season with a 5-1 dual meet record — is one of four teams in the hunt for second.

"Looking at the preliminary seed sheets, four teams (Birmingham, Oakland Hills, Detroit, and Lochmoor Golf Club) should battle for second," McGuire said. "We've had a nice year. We're hoping to get second, and I look for our kids to swim real well. We have good kids in every age group."

Among the leading point-getters for Birmingham are Bonnie Benjamin (15 years old), Brooke Schoenherr (16) and Doug Cash (13).

BCC RULES: The Birmingham Country Club rolled to a 337-174 win over Orchard Lake Country Club. Birmingham, which is undefeated in four meets, swims in the Suburban Inter-Club Swimming Association league meet the first weekend of August:

Leading the way against OLCC were Chris Tennyson and Christina Wright, each of whom set new club records.

"It's good to get back in the football frame of mind," said Coleman, who holds the career record in Michigan for yardage thrown by a high school quarterback. "Playing out there (in the previous all-star game) got me used to getting hit. The coaches are telling me we're one game up. We're going to try to make it 6-4."

One of those coaches inspiring Coleman is Sutter, an assistant at Harrison under head coach John Herrington. Sutter is a defensive coordinator for the two-time defending Class B state champion Hawks, but his responsibility this week is the East's defensive line.

He couldn't think of a better way to spend part of his summer. "I've been looking forward to this for a year," said Sutter, who was in a joking mood. "I enjoy coaching the down three lineman because I only have five kids to think about and while the other coaches are sweating I can be out golfing."

Ryan Johnson, of Salem, is settling on the defensive side of the ball after playing both fullback and linebacker in high school. Johnson, head-ed for Eastern Michigan University on a football scholarship, has extra incentive in playing Saturday's game.

"I know a lot of players on the West team, playing little league with them as a seven-year-old when I lived near Grand Rapids," sald Johnson, a 6-2, 216-pounder. "Unfortunately, they play defense, too, so I can't play against them. I'm pumped and am looking forward to Saturday. We can't blitz, so that kind of leaves us blind. We'll just have to play hardnosed football."

Last year's Roadrunner Classic in Livonia might have seemed like a hard act to follow - it had a record field of about 1,500 and post-race good times to match - but race director Doug Kurtis says this year's version will be "the best ever."

"Things are looking great," said Kurtis, a former Stevenson prep star who set a world record with 12 sub-2:20 marathons last year. "We've had much more support - from the city, from the YMCA and from the police - than we've ever had before.

"And the volunteers are the best organized they've ever been."

Kurtis said that registrations are running about 200 ahead of last year, and that he expects about 1,750 for the various events.

As in the past, a one-mile run is scheduled for 6 p.m., with the bulk of the field running the eight-kilometer race at 6:30 p.m.

Added to the schedule this year is a 3-kilometer (1.86 miles) race for kids 12 and under, which goes off at 5 p.m.

ALL RACES start and finish at Veterans Park, north of Five Mile and west of Farmington. Runners car. 4 can register on race day beginning at 4 p.m., with late registration for and $10 for the kids...

The Classic is annually named as area for post-race viewing.

one of the top 50 of the 500 or so races in the state by Michigan Runner Magazine. The flat, fast and accurate course helps, but much of that rating is because of the postrace extras.

The Livonia Y, located next door, will open its doors and showers to runners until 9 p.m., or they can hose off (in their running gear) in the outdoor showers hooked up in the parking lot. Masseusses will give free post-race massages, as well.

Other post-race goodies include fruit drinks or pop, beer, hot dogs, chips, bagels, fruit, chocolate chip cookies and dancing until midnight to the Redford Roadrunners' Club.

The race is big on the wheelchair racing circuit, and one of the highlights each year is watching the so-called disabled racers dancing the night away in their chairs, tilting from wheel to wheel or spinning around to the sounds of Motown or rock 'n' roll.

ANOTHER NEW touch this year will be the classic car parade that will precede the runners along the course. Included are a 1982 Ferrari, a 1965 Mustang, two Plymouth Road Runners and what Kurtis describes as a Mayberry RFD-vintage police

Volunteers will be taping the race the 8K at $20 and at $11 for the mile at various points along the route, with five TVs set up near the finish

Mid-America wins state

The Mid-America Mustangs defeated their arch rival, Osburn Trucking, in back-to-back games Sunday to win the girls 13-14 softball state champlonship.

Having lost to Osburn earlier in the tournament, the Mustangs came through the losers bracket to face their nemesis in the final.

Needing two wins to take the title, Mid-America handed Osburn its first loss 8-7 and won the second

The Mustangs turned three double plays in the last game, including one to shut the door on Osburn. With one out and runners at first and second, second baseman Jenny Garvey fielded a ground ball and After stepping on the bag, Lehnis dropped the ball but threw to catcher Sarah Rowe for the putout on the lead runner at home plate.

MOE DRABICKI was the winning pitcher in each of the final games against Osburn and had plenty of hitting support.

In the title-clinching second game, Jenny Horosko was 3-for-4 with two RBI, and Lehnis had two hits and two RBI. Stacey Fields drove in a run with a triple, and Dani Mortiere chipped in two RBI, also.

Drabicki also was 4-for-4 in the first game, and Fields and Lehnis had run-producing triples. Jamie

Cook scored the winning run on Mortiere's groundout. Mid-America opened the tournament with an 11-2 victory over Clinton Valley. Horosko went 4-for-4, and Lehnis and Michelle Bohnke had three hits in as many trips to the plate.

Mid-America followed that victory with 8-4 and 11-8 wins over Garden City and East Detroit to earn the right to face Osburn Trucking again. Stacy Movinski pitched four innings of scoreless soft-

Peter, Paul and Mary will be appearing at 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at the Meadow Brook Music Festival at Oakland University in Rochester Hills. The grounds are open at 6 p.m. for picnickers. For more information, call 377-2010.

ATERIALISM tends to shortchange social values and social justice in favor of more and better

But there are still those who believe, "We shall overcome."

Paul of the "Peter, Paul and Mary Trio" - performing in concert at Meadow Brook Aug. 4 - is one such individual. "Paul" is the name in lights but it's really Noel Paul Stookey, formerly of Birmingham and a Birmingham High School graduate. Born in Maryland, he moved here in his junior high days when his father was transferred.

Stookey's commitment to social issues and human rights evolved with his association in the early '60s with the trio. "I'm the least political of

IN THE mid-'50s; Stookey's rhythm and blues group, "The Birds of Paradise," sang at high school functions. Stookey visited black music stores in Pontiac looking for music the group could use. In 1954, and again in 1955, the group won Ed the group. Peter and Mary taught McKenzie TV Talent Contests.

EVEN WITH connections, there's a lot of hard work. Rubin spent over a year getting "Ghost" to a point where he could pitch it. Then, all at once, four people wanted to produce

it and he chose Lisa Weinstein be-

After graduating from Birmingham High, Stookey spent three years at Michigan State University study-"I was the eclectic type of music ing radio/TV journalism and continuing his music in various radio workshops. Then he was on to New York and work as a stand-up comic/host in Greenwich Village coffee houses, most notably the Gaslite.

During the early '60s, the Village was a place of great political and creative ferment. Stookey met Mary Travers and Peter Yarrow there. and, after seven months of rehearsal, helped launch "Peter, Paul and Mary" at the Bitter End in 1961.

In the three decades after that debut, their concerts and records became popular standards as well as the voice and conscience of social justice in this country, particularly during the trying and turbulent '60s.

While the group is best known for popular hits like "Puff the Magic Dragon," "If I Had a Hammer," and "Leaving on a Jet Plane," its commitment to human rights and social justice is deeply ingrained in its songs and in the kinds of appearances its members make outside the concert hall.

STOOKEY SAID, "I didn't really understand the value of music within a political context until I went to Selma (Alabama in 1963 with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.). I saw the value of 'We Shall Overcome.' Music restores, reinvests and ennobles a cause because it is a recitation of those values held most dearly by members of the cause.'

Despite his long-term involvement with the trio and their involvement in such activities as the 1969 March on Washington during the Vietnam War, which was co-organized by Peter Yarrow, Stookey "didn't write a political song until 'El Salvador' about five or six years ago" when he was disturbed by our Central American policies. "It's less a rallying song and more like a broadside," he said.

Stookey thinks that "Peter has an amazing talent for writing a coalescing and focusing song." One of Yarrow's new songs, "Don't Ever Take Away My Freedom" will be on the Aug. 4 program at Meadow Brook.

About one-third of that concert will be Peter, Paul and Mary's popular songs from the '60s, and another third will be songs from the intervening years. The rest will be new songs such as "Don't Ever Take Away My Freedom."

"It's OK to look at the past," Stookey said, "but I wouldn't want to get caught staring at it

FOR STOOKEY, music is a way to express and affirm important social values. "The gift of music focuses us and reminds us what the cause is about," he said. "Without something worth defending, we'd all

"You can sing folk music on a party basis on Saturday night, but Pete Seeger's tradition was to be responsible to your lyrics," he said.

Responsibility is Stookey's phrase and the trio's hallmark.

In that, the group is part of folk music's long tradition of singing out Paul Stookey, the individuals, testito make a difference in people's fies to their humanistic commitlives. Commitment to social justice, political action and the importance

Rubin's mother, Sondra, now of West Bloomfield, was active locally in the Woods Theater Workshop, the Jewish Center Theater and other groups. She appears as a nun in "Ghost." "I always wanted to give my mother something back for what she had given me," Rubin said."

Birmingham baritone appears with Detroit Symphony Pops

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

Lewis Dale Von Schlanbusch, baritone, wasn't thinking that someday he'd be on stage at Meadow Brook when he sang the role of Lt. Cable in "South Pacific" at Birmingham Seaholm High about 18 years ago.

The class of '72 graduate said he' was thinking of music more as an avocation when he accepted a scholarship to Olivet College - "which was too good to pass up - they were trying to build a music department."

Nevertheless, Von Schlanbusch will be returning to his home territory to perform as he has for several summers. This time it will be with Eric Kunzel conducting the Detroit Symphony Pops in "A Cole Porter/ Leonard Bernstein Evening" at 8 P.M. Friday at Baldwin Pavilion on the Oakland University campus, Rochester Hills.

He'll be back to appear with the Detroit Symphony in a concert at Chene Park on the Detroit Riverfront on Saturday, Aug. 4.

VON SCHLANBUSCH, son of a General Motors accountant, brought up on the old Midwestern work ethic, said the turn to music as a career came while he was at Olivet.

This gave him confidence. He found that he could handle this sort of thing and he liked it.

He completed his master's in music at Indiana University, "where I was working with world renowned opera stars," and taught voice there as well.

He describes the opera roles he likes as "more buffo," such as Figaro in "Barber of Seville," Dr. Malatesta in "Don Pasquale" and Sharpless in "Madama Butterfly," and the "real conniving" characters.

Life partly nomadic for serious crafters

Sue Smith of Canton Township knows the show circuit well. A veteran crafter and a crafts show promoter herself, she has seen eve rything from the small church bazaars to the huge country crafts shows during the past 15 years.

She has worked ankle deep in the rain, has chased her canopy as it tumbled down the street in the wind, and has seen her tarpaulin ripped asunder and her inventory thrown to the ground. But she keeps coming back.

ginger root, to name just a few.

"It's definitely the smell (that grabs the customers' attention), but it's also the fact that it's different. They've never seen anything quite like it," said Smith, while exhibiting at the Farmington-Farmington Hills Founders Festival in downtown Farmington July 13.

A simple, yet disarming idea, the spice wreaths - which range in price from $13 to $23 — are shaped like circles, ovals, and single and joined hearts.

"I've never seen anyone else do something like this," Smith said, adding that she has applied for and received a copyright for the idea.

There are 11 steps to making the spice wreath, Smith continued. They begin with her partners and parents, Ed and Bernice Fuller of Greenwood, S. C., cutting the polystyrene-foam base and attaching "sweet gums" - an exotic-looking burr found in their area - which

History book well done; house is worth restoring

TYING UP some loose ends:

• Worth reading - It's a terrific history book and a darn good read. So I leaped at the chance to write a letter supporting the Farmington Hills Historical Commission in nominating "I Went to the People . . . Fred M. Warner, Progressive Governor," by Jean M. Fox, for a Historical Society of Michigan Award.

As a local historian and author, Fox. current Farmington Hills mayor, has few equals.

Not surprisingly, she's channeling all proceeds from the sale of the $24.95 hardback to the Farmington Hills Historical Commission's book development fund.

A stickler for accuracy, Fox, a newspaper publisher by trade, shuns historical liberties in telling the story of Farmington's favorite son, Fred M. Warner, a Republican Party leader who always remained a business and civic leader back home.

NOBODY'S PUPPET, Warner moved from the state Senate to Secretary of State under Gov. Hazen Pingree in 1901. From 1905-11, he was Michigan's first three-term governor, never shying from legislative battles to secure needed reforms.

A master storyteller, Fox weaves a scholarly topic into magazine-style reading. Many parts of Warner's life and times date back to the turn of the century. But Fox colorfully captures them.

Bob Sklar

Amazingly, Fox's book on Warner provides the first definitive picture of a 40-year-old governor who fought for "the enactment of legislation designed to supply the needs and safeguard the interests of other people."

Two of Warner's top achievements as governor were the direct primary voting system and the direct nomination of Michigan's U.S. senators.

He also tightened control of public utilities, insurance companies and the railroads; encouraged the dairy industry as well as factory inspections and purer food products; established remunerative labor for prison convicts; and curbed stock manipu-

His administration pushed for the first state highway department and for the Public Domain Commission, today's Department of Natural Resources.

In 1911, the English-born foster child of Rhonda Botsford Warner and P.D. Warner "resumed life in Farmington with the affection and interest with which he always bore his hometown," Fox tells us.

Without Fox's flair for research and writing, these mile markers on the Michigan landscape might never have come to life for the many folks who shy away from textbook histo-

 ◆ Looking ahead — By next year, the Livonia Historical Commission hopes to open its newest restoration project at Greenmead: the former family home that stood next to the A.J. Geer General Store at Newburgh and Ann Arbor Trail. The four-room, 900-square-foot bungalow, now situated across from the restored Newburg Church, will be moved next to the restored general store. The Geers lived in the house for a short time after it was built in 1913. It was moved to Greenmead in 1979.

"We restore one building at a time," says commission chairwoman Sue Daniel. "When we get one open, we go on to the next."

Restoration is a slow process that's dependent on funding. The commission is supported by the city and donors. It oversees planning but contracts out most construction Work doesn't come cheaply. The Geer House will cost upwards of $70,000 to restore.

But when opened, it will represent another jewel in Livonia's historical village at Greenmead.

Bob Sklar is the O&E's assistant managing editor for special projects.

By Loraine McClish staff writer

ICK CARVELL is looking for volunteer docents for the Farmington Historical Museum: gardeners to care for the spacious grounds of former Gov. Fred Warner's home and folks who can do small maintenance repairs.

"Large repairs, like the new porch railing that is being restored by the Quakertown Questers, would be taken care of by an architect," he said. "If you're talking 40-foot ladders, we have pro- Dick Carvell fessionals for that. We need someone handy with small repairs around the house and who we can call on," said Carvell, chairman of the museum committee and spokesman for goings-on at the 123-year-old home. "We've never had a paid employee," the Farmington resident said. "If something goes on we can't handle, we call a Department of Public Works employee, who is the only paid person we've ever had on the premises. "Take that back. We tried professional maid services once and that just didn't work. They did a good surface job, but you have got to like that antique before you're going to give a good polish job to it. The people who do come in to polish for us enjoy it.".

CRITERIA FOR any of the volunteer jobs, but especially the docents, Carvell says, is: "People who feel free with people, a liking for antiques and history, and a liking for passing it along."

About 30 docents are needed to take care of the visitors who come to tour the house and grounds, at 33805 Grand River, west of Farmington

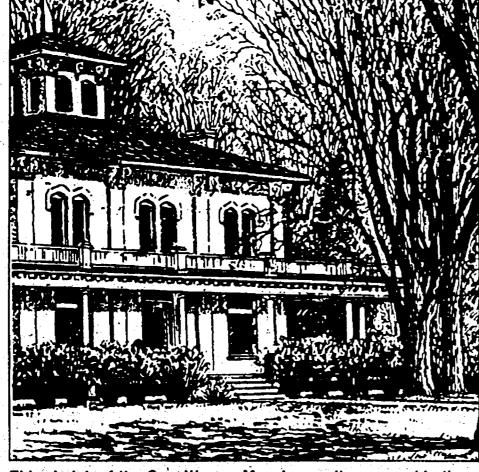

The number of docents is down to about 20 while the number of guests steadily increases. The Civil War-era house is an example of Victorian Italianate architecture. The Warner family deeded it to the city of Farmington as a museum in 1980.

"The school groups are getting heavier. There are more club groups coming through. Of course, we encourage them to come on Wednesday afternoons when we are open, but for some reason that doesn't seem to happen," Carvell said. "That scheduling, to handle one group, would be about two hours' time."

The time that Carvell, who retired from Michigan Bell in 1981, gives to the museum is about five hours a week: "never mind the phone calls." "Just the phone calls that have to do with a wedding in the gazebo, I wouldn't venture to guess — and that is one very good reason I need more volunteers to call on.

"Who is going to take care of the

Balustrade to be restored

Quakertown Questers has received a grant from the International Organization of Questers to be used to build a balustrade for the frontporch overhang at the Farmington Historical Museum in downtown

Farmington. Restoring the exterior with the balustrade will make the 123-yearold, two-story home appear the way it was when Fred Warner lived there as Michigan's first three-term governor, 1905-11. The home's architecture is an example of Victorian Itali-

Picking a book that truly made a difference

I DON'T know about you, but I was crazy about books long before I could actually read them.

I not only enjoyed someone reading them to me, but, for some reason, I also found a great deal of pleasure in just choosing a book, settling down with it, opening it up and gazling at the mysterious polyglot of words, paragraphs, chapters.

Looking at the very first word at the beginning of a book like "Ginger and Pickles," I'd carefully recite each letter and ask my mother what I'd just spelled. Then I'd go on to the second word and the third and the fourth, etc., until my astonishingly patient mother would strongly suggest we continue our "reading" at a later date.

Since "Ginger and Pickles," I've spent a lot of time reading. If I had been deprived of my access to books For my ability to read. I've no doubt my life would have been another life altogether because I would be a person other than who I am. I'm totally convinced the books I've read along the way have shaped me that much. Perhaps you feel the same way.

If so, here's a challenging question: What one book has made the greatest difference in your life? Hmmmm.

THIS WEEK, I came across a slim, paperback volume called Books That Made the Difference." Published through Library Professional Publications and compiled by journalism professors Gordon and Patricia Sabine, it's the printed result of a survey sponsored about five years ago by the Center for the Book in the Library of Congress.

For the project, the Sabines asked each of more than 1,000 readers two questions: (1) What book made the greatest difference in your life? (2) What difference did it make?

You'd be mighty surprised at some of the answers.

Actor Walter Matthau chose a rather obscure book published in 1955, called "The Secret in the Daisy" by Carol Grace. "I fell so in love with the book that I searched out and married the girl who wrote it," he

The late cartoonist Milton Caniff, creator of high-adventure comic strips "Terry and the Pirates" and "Steve Canyon," claimed Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights," with its theme of unrequited love, served as a major inspiration to him when he began work on "Terry and the Pirates" during the 1930s.

Writer-actor Alan Alda said he read copies of "The Congressional Record" when he was 12 and found he "had never read anything so funny. From then on, I knew I wanted to do comedy."

OTHER CHOICES were a bit more predictable. Betty Osborne, a nurse in Peoria. Ill., chose Norman Cousins' popular "Anatomy of an Illness." Jane Gordon, director of the Louisa May Alcott museum in Lexington, Mass., named Alcott's classic, "Little Women." A chairman of a large university's political science department selected "The New Science of Politics" by Eric Voegelin.

Several people named the Bible, of course. A few readers chose "the dictionary." A number picked classics such as "The Wizard of Oz," "The Odyssey" and "Leaves of Grass."

Others picked lesser-known works. William Barrett, author of "The Lilies of the Field," selected "Woman on Horseback," his first published novel. Though it didn't sell especially well, it did convince Barrett that he was "someone who could write books."

The late baseball impresario Bill Veeck named "The White Company," a novel of Englishmen archers that, literary-wise, had negligible in Brittany during the middle ages (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first published novel). For Veeck, it provided sorely needed escape during difficult times and appealed to him personally much more than did any of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes mysteries.

AS TO my own choice, I am here to tell you that this was no easy task. But, after some hard-and-long, heart-and-soul-searching, I finally arrived at a decision.

merit. The plot was thin or non-existent. The characters were highly stereotypical and certainly undeveloped. The "story" was chock-full of redundancy and repetition that slowed the action considerably. The narrative was stilted and the dialogue so wooden that it often struck even the most unsophisticated readers as absurd.

No doubt about it, though - it made a difference in my life that would prove to be immeasurable. Years ago, I came across a book. And despite all the book's shortcomings, I had quite a bit of fun with "Dick and Jane."

What would your choices be? Don't be bashful. Let me know. And no cheating - you must pick only

Ann Arbor fairs showcase local art

By Amy Harmon staff writer

LMOST 500.000 art lovers descended on Ann Arbor last week, eager to look and to buy from the nearly 1,000 artists lining the streets at the annual mid-summer Ann Arbor art fairs.

Artists from all over the United States came to participate in the three-pronged fair, one of the largest of its kind in the country. But the fair's national character and rigorous selectivity didn't stop local artists from turning out to display their talents in a variety of artistic forms.

Livonia resident Paul Miller returned from the pizza line just in time to sell one of his photographs to an interested shopper. "I've been doing art fairs for 11 years now," he said. "I was doing about 16 fairs a year, but I cut it down to about five."

Miller said he prefers to go to the better shows, where he is more assured of financial success. "This is probably the best. I get a lot of orders for work to be done later."

Miller's experiments with photography started 44 years ago, "when I was 12," he said.

About 15 years ago, he started to submit his work to magazines and galleries, and a few years later, having met with some success, he joined the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans.

In order to participate in any of the three fairs held concurrently in-Ann Arbor, artists must submit their work for approval by a committee of experts in their field.

Miller said the Michigan Guild does its jurying internally, requiring that all of its members maintain certain standards. "I'm up for jury in the next review," he said, leaving his pizza as he attended to another

THOUGH HE has a job in the engineering division of UNISYS in Plymouth, Miller said his photography "provides me with a fair share of my income." He has had his work published and has decorated several offices - "primarily for physicians and dentists."

"It's pretty eclectic," Miller said of his photography. "I often wish I'd settle down on one specialty, but it never seems to happen. I gô from scenics to flowers to nudes, to whatever strikes my fancy at any given time."

Arriving each morning at 6:30 and leaving at 10 p.m. can be grueling, Miller admitted, but that doesn't stop him from coming back for more. "It's long days in the sun, but I enjoy talking to people even if they don't buy. There's something about it that gets in your blood."

On the other side of town, through streets knarled with people and food stands and artwork, Miller's fellow Livonia resident, Barbara Gibson, explained her philosophy of art as she wrapped, boxed, bagged and exchanged her ceramic sculptures for money in a virtually continuous pro-

"I like a lot of structure, a lot of movement, I like the structure of a building before they put the skin on it - I reverse it and put it on the outside," she said, turning to advise a woman with small children who was considering the purchase of a piece to hang on her wall. "It won't break easily," Gibson assured her. "I mean, they can't throw a football around, but . . . " .

GIBSON'S SEVEN years of college work earned her a bachelor of fine arts degree and a master of fine arts degree from the University of Michigan and an associate of fine arts degree from Schoolcraft College in Livonia, where she now teaches classes in clay when she isn't traveling around the country to display and sell her work. She also attended Washtenaw Community College to learn welding, a skill she incorporates into her work to create the designs she sells at 66 shows a year.

Working out of her studio on Six Mile Road in Livonia, Gibson has turned her hobby into a business. "It's a family business, she said. "My son works with me and my daughterin-law is an ex-clay student of mine. It's a nice life, traveling around and going to different cities."

The Ann Arbor fair is special to her because of its size and because "it's our home show," Gibson said. Gibson derives personal enjoyment from traveling to different cities and different fairs, but she also believes that art fairs, as a concept, play the crucial role of making art accessible to the public.

"Street fairs are responsible for making consumers more sophisticated," she said. "Fairs took the art out of the museums and put it on the streets. It's us that educated the public about art."

CERAMICS ARE Farmington Hills resident Arlene Schultz's specialty as well, but her Schultz's striped snakes and spotted sunglasses were a far cry from Gibson's abstract designs.

Narrowly avoiding disaster as a browser accidentally dislodged a shelf holding the popular sunglasses and several clay bowls, Schultz said this was her first year at the Ann Arbor fair. "It's been going great," she said, "It's been non-stop,

Her first hint that she had a talent for ceramics came in high school, when Schultz won a school scarab contest and had her piece displayed with the other winners in a museum. "Then I got married, had kids, and raised my kids," she said. "I started doing a little painting at home, but I got very frustrated."

About five years ago, she decided to again try her hand at clay.

Working six days a week from the Pat Kelly, Farmington Hills, fiber. basement in her home, Schultz has been very happy with the results of the last five years. "I feel I can be very creative," she said. "Sometimes, I'll just be thinking and a design will come to me."

"Say how she's patient," added a browser who had been deliberating for some time over which bowl to buy. "Those sunglasses are a scream," another shopper exclaimed.

THE ANN Arbor art fairs were hard work for all of the artists who participated, but in an expression of a sentiment common to most all of them, Schultz explained why it was worth it. "I get real pleasure out of hearing people say, "Wow, that's great. I really appreciate when somebody likes what I made."

The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, the granddaddy of the three concurrent juried art fairs, is 31-years-old. It boasts fine art. The State Street Area Art Fair (contemporary art/ fine crafts) is 23 years old and the Summer Art Fair (wide range of media) is 20 years old. Nearly 1,000 artists and artisans showed everything from prints to paintings to photogra-

clarification

The headline in Monday's Observer & Eccentric about Art in the Park should have stated that the July 14-15 art fair was held in downtown, Plymouth, not Plymouth's Old Vil-; lage. The story correctly identified the fair's location as Kellogg Park.

Q: We're remodeling several rooms and combining them into one Great Room. Our problem is that fonce we removed the wall to the kitchen and replaced it with a lowcounter, the all-white kitchen cabinets and appliances look out of place gext to the Great Room's formal setling of furniture and carpeting mostly in beiges and greens. We can't afford to replace the cabinets at this lime, but we're wondering how color could be used to coordinate the existing kitchen with the rest of the furnshings?

A: If you do these three things, you should achieve a very nice look to your remodeling project:

• First, introduce a new color to be used in both the kitchen and the Great Room. If you want to maintain the soft look you have now, the coordinating color can be a coralrose shade. This will harmonize with your existing colors and add a touch of warmth to the kitchen.

If you want more drama, then make this coordinating color black, navy or a deep burgundy. You should have no difficulty in finding a needlepoint rug or an upholstery chintz with these darks as background colors for the Great Room.

The touch of black or navy will also make the kitchen area look more sophisticated. You can accomplish this by painting the walls around the cabinets in one of these colors, or tiling the area between the counters and the cabinets.

• The second thing you should do: is to accessorize the kitchen as you would a dining or living room. Introduce brass or black porcelain handles or pulls for the cabinets and place a dhourrie rug on the floor.

• The third thing that will soften the hard-edge kitchen image is to use brass or colored-glass hanging lighting fixtures. Avoid the diffuse - or even - lighting most kitchens have, and position as many of these fixtures as you need. You will also maintain a softer, warmer look by using four 25-watt bulbs for every 100-watt bulb.

The consistent use of one color. across two areas, combined with a dramatic approach to lighting and accessorizing, will minimize the hard-edge whiteness of the kitchen and help to coordinate it with the softness and formality of the new Great Room.

secret," Smith replied. "What would be the sense of copyrighting the idea if I told all the tricks that go into making them?"

BUT THERE'S another story that people don't see on the wooden, crafts-lined shelves.

There are the many miles traveled between shows each weekend, the long hours looking for materials and the days spent in basements creating the various crafts for the next show.

Being a crafts show veteran means setting up stalls in strange towns and dealing with inclement weather. It means waking up at the crack of dawn, loading the car and setting off for different locales every week.

Smith planned to follow up the Founders Festival with a trip to Houghton Lake before a short vacation, then a return to the road in August.

August and September will include trips to crafts shows in Allen Park, West Branch, Howell, Muskegon and Ohio and at Amish Acres in Napanee, Ind., she said. "We're on the road for most of the year, except when things slow down in January and February. "I have no idea how many miles I travel in a year," Smith said.

And not every crafts show is a success. Sometimes, especially when a crafter is first starting out, attending crafts shows is like holding your own hand at a romantic movie - it's far too quiet and not much fun.

"This is a full-time business and like any business, there are things you like and things you don't like," Smith said.

DESPITE ALL the work that goes into working the crafts show circuit, Smith said she has never contemplated giving it all up. "I enjoy it too much for that. I've had some days - those days when you're really busy and just tired but I've never said I wouldn't want to do that again."

There are many things to enjoy. The little surprises, the return customers who share the pleasure they received from spice wreaths they have bought and, of course, there's the money a successful business can bring.

Smith said she enjoys the busy, albeit hectic, crafts shows, where helping customers and restocking displays keep her so occupied that by the end of the day, she's exhausted.

"(And) I've always enjoyed the crafts part of it," Smith said, adding that some of the thrill she gets from making crafts has faded as crafts shows become more of a business than a hobby. Smith still makes floral arrangements and floral wreaths for personal enjoy-

ONE OF the best things about crafts shows is the camaraderie shared by the crafters. Crafters share information on upcoming events, engage in shop talk and generally discuss what any group of people might talk about. There's also that common bond that crafters share. "They can appreciate the work that goes into making a piece," SMith said. It's little wonder, then, that some of the best customers are fellow crafters. Smith's own house is done in the Victorian country tradition, with crafts decorating almost every nook and cranny.

"But I don't buy many crafts anymore - not because I don't like ' what I see, but because I have no place left to put them."

Down with the old to make way for the new

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Consider a perfectly good home that is, quite frankly, in the way.

Picture a nice house in a great location (probably lakefront property) perfectly suited for one of those huge expensive homes if not for the fact that the site is already occupied.

Without breaking some of the more basic laws of physics (two objects cannot occupy the same space at the same time), the perfectly good home would have to be demolished.

Which is where Andrew Adelson comes in.

Adelson's company, Everything Goes - Estate Liquidators in West Bloomfield, specializes in a unique form of demolition - instead of destroying a home and carting waste off the site, he sells the home piece by piece.

Everything Goes has been involved in estate liquidations for nearly 13 years but has been involved in demolition sales only since 1987.

'We used to do just four or five homes a year, but now we're doing between 15 and 20 a year," he said. "A lot of the stuff we do now has to do with building because we do a lot with lake housing."

CERAMIC TILE, carpet, windows, hardwood floors, complete baths, lighting, exterior decks, heating and cooling systems, marble, bricks, bushes, trees, fireplace mantels, doors, duct work, kitchen cabinets - if it isn't nailed down (and in many cases even if it is) Adelson sells it until barely a shell remains.

Adelson said even though his business sprang from his estate sales business, he wouldn't have attempted it without a building background.

"I've built a house before so I know a little about taking them apart (without destroying the things he wants to keep). It's not salvage, but it's like salvage. You have to know what you're doing."

Adesion said the most unusual sale he ever made was at the end of a demolition sale when almost everything was gone. "This guy came in and said he wanted to buy all the copper pipes in the home - I don't know what he wanted it for, maybe for salvage, but we took apart all the walls and he got the pipes."

Most homes, Adelson said, would generate between $5,000 and $10,000, but demolition sales aren't really profitable unless revenues reach $10,000. "I generally won't do it unless I can hit between $10,000 and $25,000."

PEOPLE WHO hire him use the proceeds from the sale to defray the cost of demolishing the remainder of the home, Adelson said. "Most demolition costs are between $8,000 and $9,000.

"This works out for everyone, the people who come to the sales buy good but used things at a cheaper price, and the people selling the home make a profit which can be used in the next home," he

Items are priced before the sale by Adelson who is paid a flat fee for his ser-

The average demolition sale house is 20 years or older, but he has done sales in newer homes, Adelson said.

Real estate agents have noted the trend, especially in lake-rich Oakland, County, where people buy property' strictly for the lot and tear down the old home and then build a new one on the

Paul Wonsack of Chamberlain Realtors in West Bloomfield said selling homes for the property is hardly an everyday occurrence, but he has seen several sales and heard of others.

What's driving these sales, he said, is Commercial boom over?

By Tim Richard staff writer

The construction boom of shopping centers in the 1980s is not likely to continue into the '90s.

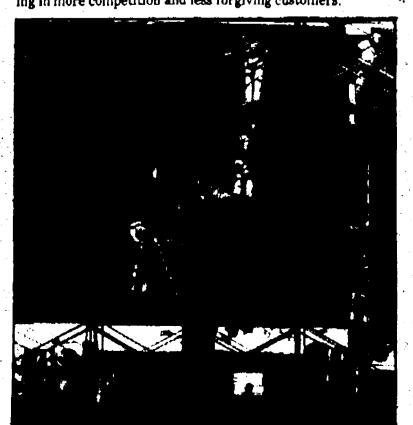

All the factors that went into making the '80s a boom time irom the young population with disposable income to the availability of land — no longer exist, speakers told the International Conference of Shopping Centers at a convention in Dearborn July 17.

"The '90s will be lean and mean," predicted Ginny Colvin, general manager of Maple Hill Mall in Kalamazoo.

Commercial real estate developers will be hard pressed to raise money for new construction for several reasons, including the savings and loan bail out and levereged buyouts of retail corporations, Colvin said.

The high interest rates generated by these two events have impacted the profitability of shopping centers, he said.

Frank A. Newman, chairman and chief executive officer of F&M Distributors, said for most of the 1980s retail space grew much faster than anyone could have anticipated resulting in more competition and less forgiving customers.

Expect to see fewer commercial developments built as developers face a credit crunch and retail space is lees in demand.

The 1990s, at least the early years, will be a sharp contrast as lenders are less willing to loan money for building projects, he said.

Only retail projects that have a major tenant, preferably a major national chain store, are able to get loans, Newman said. "Spec (speculative) building is being replaced by power centers (large strip centers with a major national anchor) leaving less room for independent retailers.

"There will be fewer and fewer retail centers built," he predicted. "Some of the more successful will grow, but there will be a loss of those less successful stores that would have surfaced in the 1980s."

BIRMINGHAM REAL estate agent Barry Klein pointed to the over expansion of malls during the '80s as one reason why retailers won't be looking toward new construction in the Commercial real estate is over built when it comes to retail space, Klein said. More retailers came into southeast Michigan during the past decade than in any decade previously and it will take some time before the area will be able to absorb the existing retail.

Even if developers were willing to build, banks are tightening credit and are auditing bank loans more carefully, he said. Only those projects which are significantly pre-leased are granted loans. Klein also said the shrinking youth segment of the American population will force retail developers to consider carefully expansion in the 1990s. While younger people have the time and desire to frequent mall and strip centers, older shoppers often shop by mail or even computer, he said. Finally, Klein said, there is the "no-growth, slow-growth" movement which is putting the breaks on development in much of southeastern Michigan. While most developers were welcomed to build in most communities in the 1980s as retail:

construction generated more jobs and a higher tax base, in the 1990s, communities are seeking to retain the status quo and stave off further urbanization. ROBERT SCHOSTAK, vice president of Schostak Brothers & Co. in Southfield, said the current political reality will not permit continued commercial real estate development at the present rate.

"A lot of environmental and public interest view shopping centers as traffic and environmental problems, but they don't recognize what we bring to the table - jobs and taxes,"

Although real estate developers were able to succeed despite these concerns, those same concerns will pose more of a problem in the next decade, Schostak said. "But the '90s are not gonna be what the '80s were," he warned.

Gerald Frawley contributed to this story.

Promote dining room use through better planning

(AP) - Because it is the leastfrequently used space in the house. people tend not to give too much thought to the dining area when building a house. But the key to success is careful advance planning, according to House Beautiful magazine.

First consider how you are likely to use a dining area. How often will you entertain how many people? Are your guests usually close family and friends with toddlers? Or do you prefer fancy-dress occasions? Informal buffet dinners? Barbecued burgers? Impromptu potluck dinners?

If your idea of a successful dinner is one that lets you get in and out of the kitchen in an hour or less, you need relatively little room for food preparation and might want to give up space to create a dining area in the kitchen.

Consider moving the laundry room nearer to the bedroom, where most laundry is generated, to make a family eating area.

The presence of children will affect your dining style. If the children are small and you have the room, opt for more than one dining space, such as a formal area for holidays and entertaining and a breakfast nook or snack counter in or near the kitchen.

One third of the participants in the Better Homes & Gardens Consumer panel, made up up 1,000 members demographically representing the magazine's readers, said they are doing more - and more complex - projects than they were doing two years ago. Some of these projects are room additions and electrical and plumbing work. A majority said they are willing to pay more for better tools.

Bill Mack Knowledge is power

Talk show tackles building beat

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

Whether building a new house or remodeling an old one, tackling a major project or tinkering on a small job, Housecall is the place to pick up a wealth of information every Saturday at 1 p.m.

WEXLAM (1340) radio host Bill Mack of Troy envisions listeners tuning in while gardening, painting or tackling any number of household chores usually reserved for that day.

"Saturday mid-day is one of the most intense radio (audience listening) times after morning drive time," said Mack.

One might say home repair is in his blood.

"I grew up watching my father change attics into bedrooms and basements into rec rooms." said Mack in his small studio at the Royal Oak station where he has worked as years. Housecall debuted this past

"I had worked as a draftsman during high school, later for an engineering firm and also a number of construction companies."

HIS INTENTION with Housecall is to help make home remodeling less stressful for both do-it-yourselfers and homeowners hiring professional contractors.

"It helps to know what's involved - whether you do it yourself or contract it out. (Remodeling) costs a lot of money. You want it done right. Preparation is the key that makes jobs come out smoothly."

Some of the problems Mack has seen include room additions settling away from buildings, materials not quite meeting ends, and questionable quality of materials.

"When someone knows precisely what they want, they can get a bet-an announcer/engineer for seven ter price that is accurate. You have to know what you want."

With the homeowner, knowledge is power. And Mack wants his listeners to be well informed.

"Home building has gotten out of reach of young home buyers. They're holding onto their older homes longer. But they always want to improve it, make it look better."

ON HOUSECALL, Mack chats with guests running the gamut from cabinet makers to electricians, usually three guests for each hour show. 'A local attorney is featured regularly to address house construction matters.

Although a phone-in format was adopted at first, Mack found it took too much time away from each guest. Instead, he would prefer listeners to write and suggest topics to be covered.

Mack sells advertising time for the show when he's not lining up guests or dreaming up topics. He said he works 10 to 12 hours a day to produce the weekly show. "The feedback has been really positive. It's bright, it sounds good, the pace is quick." Mack said the audience he reaches is both young and old, male and female — the common denominator being house ownership.

"Sixty-eight percent of the population live in their own home. They could be in their early 20s or late we 50s. Regardless, we are talking to them, the homeowner."

REGULAR LISTENERS are better informed on custom stairs, custom blinds, swimming pools, security systems, real estate inspection, interior decorating, water well drilling and all the building trades.

Most homeowners know that caulking cracks in the exterior of their house helps reduce heat loss in winter and makes it easier to cool in summer.

Caulk also keeps out moisture and pests. But with so many kinds of caulk available, deciding which to buy can be daunting:

Here are the facts so you can fill those cracks.

Caulking compounds are sold in bulk cans, in cartridges for use with a gun, in squeeze tubes and in ropelike strips good for temporary seals around storm windows and air conditioners. For a homeowner, it's usually most convenient to use cartridges in guns.

THERE ARE six basic types of

- Oil-base caulk is inexpensive and will bond to most surfaces including wood, masonry and metal. But it dries out relatively fast and is recommended only for temporary, • Latex-base, water-thinned
- caulk is fast-drying and will take paint very well. It's a good allaround caulk that is easy to use and relatively long lasting.
- Butyl rubber caulk is long-lasting and best suited for making metal-to-masonry joints.
- · Polyvinyl acetate caulk is a durable material that adheres to all surfaces, including paint.

• Silicone caulk is long lasting and takes well to all surfaces except paint.

Because paint won't adhere to pure silicon caulk, it's usually best to choose clear caulk or a color that goes with the color of your house. Or use a silicon acrylic caulk, which is paintable and fairly durable.

• One-part polyurethane caulk is and gable molding. the longest lasting of all the compounds. Applied to a properly prepared surface, it will last for up to 40 years. But it won't take paint and it comes in a very limited number of
