Rewrite expected on recall petitions

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

An attempted recall of three Wayne-Westland school board members hit a snag Wednesday, as Wayne County elections officials rejected the proposed petitions that recall organizers had hoped to circulate.

But recall committee chairman Steven Lind, saying school board critics won't be deterred, vowed to reword the petitions and submit revised versions this week to the county elections commission.

"This is not going to stop us. We'll march forward," Lind said Wednesday, after county officials rejected the petitions during a hearing in Detroit.

The recall committee must receive petition approval and collect signatures from 4,420 school district voters before a special recall election can be held.

The three-member commission ruled that the petitions to oust school board members Kathleen Chorbagian, Leonard Posey and Andrew Spisak lacked clear language. The district includes most of Westland and part of Canton Township.

The decision came after attorney Richard James — hired by the three board members — blasted the recall petitions for what he called "plain false" and "misleading" statements.

Attending the hearing were Lind, his wife, the targeted school board members, their attorney, and Wayne-Westland Superintendent Dennis O'Neill.

'This is not going to stop us. We'll march forward.'

JAMES, ADDRESSING the elections commission, criticized a petition allegation that says board members "did not act in the best interest" of district students and residents. James called the statement "woefully short of clarity" and said he found it "impossible to respond to."

James singled out Posey in opposing a petition allegation that school board members, during their current terms, sought a tax increase on four occasions. Only two of the tax elections occurred during Posey's current term, which began July 1, 1990, James stressed.

During the hearing, the elections commission voted separately on each of the three recall petitions. The panel rejected the charges against Posey in a 3-0 vote and blocked the petitions against Chorbagian and Spisak in a 2-1 decision.

A motion by commission member Ray Wojtowicz to reject the three petitions won support from panel

Language rejected by election officials

"We feel that (Kathleen Chorbagian, Leonard Posey and Andrew Spisak) did not act in the best interest of the people and students in the Wayne-Westland school district, by cutting educational programs and class time. While in the midst of said program cuts, an 11.9-percent pay increase was ratified for teachers. Furthermore, (board members) voted to conduct millage elections for a 7.75-mill increase on four occasions, for the purpose of paying for additional wage increases for five other school unions. The millage was defeated three times, but was met with further threats of educational programs, with no attempt to restore previous cuts, despite a fund balance in the millions."

Three's a charm? DNR tests soil again

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

The Whittier school site will be tested a third time for toxic soil, in the wake of earlier studies that showed conflicting results, state officials promised last week.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources agreed to test Whittier soil this week. Results are expected next week — before the school year starts Sept. 3, said Mary Vanderlaan, DNR environmental quality manager.

The Westland school — part of the Livonia school district — has been designated for students forced out of nearby Cooper Elementary, which was built on a toxic landfill.

Soil-test results announced last week indicated Whittier is safe, but some of the 400 parents who attended a DNR-organized public meeting in Westland raised concerns Thursday about an earlier study that showed elevated levels of some metals, including lead.

Parent Charles Pare, drawing strong applause from the crowd, called for the indefinite shutdown of Whittier unless new soil samples prove the school would be safe for former Cooper students.

"The time for safety is now — not later, when it may be too late," Pare said during the meeting in which citizens' questions were fielded by the DNR and representatives from the Livonia school district, state and county health departments, and the Westland city administration.

Many parents continue to oppose the use of Whittier — on the north side of Ann Arbor Trail between Inkster Road and Middlebelt and across the street from Cooper. On Thursday, they voiced fears that students' health could be threatened at Whittier if cleanup efforts at Cooper are conducted while school is in session.

"Will you be teaching our kids how to put on a gas mask in 10 seconds, or how to seal up a room?" asked parent Mary Gesinski, a member of a homeowners' group,

Fritz returns to building director post

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Westland Mayor Robert Thomas fired his building director, Michael Cullity, last week and warned that other department heads may be toppled amid "a house-cleaning" in his administration.

"Stay tuned," he said.

In an ironic twist, Thomas replaced Cullity with Robert Fritz — the building director whom the mayor fired as part of an administrative shake-up that occurred when he took office in January, 1990.

Thomas fired Cullity Monday, Aug. 5, and put Fritz in charge of the building department two days later.

"I just wasn't happy with the direction the department was going in," the mayor said. "I informed him (Cullity) that things were just not working out."

Thomas said he wants stronger enforcement of city ordinances among other building department improvements, but he declined to elaborate on his reasons for firing Cullity — whom the mayor described as "a longtime friend."

Cullity, a city employee for 21 years, refused to discuss the mayor's action.

"I really don't want to say much. It's a real emotional thing to me," he said during a telephone conversation Friday. "I would rather keep it off the record."

Cullity's annual salary of $44,890 has been reduced to $40,165 for Fritz, according to the city's personnel department.

THE MAYOR, in an interview Thursday, conceded that his decision to rehire Fritz "was kind of a shock" to some observers.

"We have had some long talks about my concerns," Thomas said. "I told him I would give him a shot at the job again."

Gamblers fined, given probation

By Darrell Clem

Two Westland men accused of running an apartment-based gambling business were fined $1,100 each Friday, placed on probation and ordered not to gamble.

Fredman E. Cox, 62, and Paul Petryczkowycz, 56, also were ordered to perform 200 hours of community service as they appeared for sentencing before Judge Gail McKnight in Westland's 18th District Court.

Their Livonia attorney, Charles Burke, could not be reached for comment Friday afternoon. The men could have faced up to a year in prison.

Cox and Petryczkowycz pleaded guilty July 11 to running a gambling business that Westland police said resulted in potential earnings of thousands of dollars a week.

They were arrested during a March 23 raid by local police and FBI agents who seized hundreds of dollars and gambling documents from a Westland Estates apartment.

Police Sgt. Timothy Abramski said the men used the apartment as a base for a sports-betting scheme in which they accepted bets by telephone on numerous sporting events, such as the NCAA basketball tournament.

Drug law challenged by Westland mom

By Pat Murphy
staff writer

The Oakland County prosecutor believes he has some good ammunition with which to defend Michigan's tough 'over 650 drug-lifer law' — the one requiring life in prison for people convicted of possessing 650 or more grams of cocaine.

The average person sentenced to life in prison under the Michigan's drug-life law is a white male, 32 years old who sold drugs for profit, not necessarily because of addiction, according to prosecutor Richard Thompson.

Thompson said he drew that profile after reviewing statistics provided by the Michigan Department of Corrections on the 144 people sentenced under the drug-lifer law during the almost 13 years it has been in effect.

"OPPONENTS of the law want you to believe the law puts a lot of underprivileged, 18-year-old kids in prison for the rest of their lives because of a mistake," Thompson said. "That simply isn't the case."

Thompson, one of the state's staunchest supporters of the drug-lifer law, said he expects the information to be useful as state legislators come under increasing pressure to change the law.

One such person is Linda Fannon whose son, Gary, a 1986 graduate of Elections board rejects recall petitions, rewrite is expected member Fred Burton Jr., but member Maria Sieminski cast a dissenting vote on the Spisak and Chorbagian petitions.

Sieminski later said that she believed the language on those two petitions was clear.

THE PETITIONS accuse board members of slashing educational programs amid a budget crisis, yet approving teacher pay raises of 11.9 percent over two years. The petitions also say the board sought a tax increase to pay for wage increases for other employees. Moreover, the language accuses the board of threatening cuts at a time when the district had cash reserves "in the millions."

In a hallway outside the hearing room Wednesday, board members commented on the recall effort.

Chorbagian questioned the recall committee's motives, saying she has already announced her plans to quit the school board when her term expires next year.

"Is it that he (Lind) wants to be on the school board?" she asked.

Lind has said the recall committee has not identified any potential board candidates that it would support — if the recall proves successful and leads to a special election.

Chorbagian also defended her board actions as necessary so that the district could have a state-mandated balanced budget.

"I refuse to break the law for Mr. Lind," she said.

POSEY ALSO criticized the recall committee's efforts and accused its members of forming "a vigilante group."

Spisak said he would expect to be recalled if he had taken board actions to warrant it, but he has repeatedly said that he cast votes in good conscience.

Superintendent O'Neill said after Wednesday's hearing that the recall controversy has overshadowed much of the positive developments in the district — a situation that he called "unfortunate."

Whittier's soil gets third test

CHECK, an acronym for Concerned for the Health and Environment of our Community's Kids.

"Our children can't be replaced," she said.

IN OTHER developments:

- A Livonia school official promised to ask the school board to fence in the entire Cooper site while work continues there. At the DNR's request, Art Howell, the district's director of operations, said he would approach the board — probably at its next meeting on Aug. 19.
- The DNR has completed tests showing that the Cooper landfill stops at least 25 feet from the nearby Badelt subdivision, where some residents had become concerned after hazardous chemicals, such as DDT, lead, arsenic and cadmium, were found on Cooper grounds.
- Air-quality tests conducted inside Cooper indicated "no problems," Vanderlaan said.
- Near Whittier, the DNR has found several barrels — most of them virtually buried — and a thick orange liquid believed to be iron bacteria. But investigators found no evidence of a threat — either to the Whittier site or the nearby Wilson drain, Vanderlaan said.
- The DNR is setting up a citizens information committee to keep concerned residents abreast of new developments, said Andrew Hogarth, assistant chief of the DNR's environmental response division. The panel will include members from CHECK, Livonia schools, the city of Westland and the Badelt subdivision, among other groups.
- Vanderlaan said no evidence has been found to support allegations that some of the land fill brought to the Cooper site may have been dumped at Whittier.

AT THURSDAY'S meeting, parents continued to demand the permanent closure of Cooper, but they did not receive any guarantees from Howell.

"I don't think we can answer that question until the investigative process has been completed," he said. "It may well be that (Cooper) could be closed forever, but we certainly can't make that determination at this time."

Residents who spoke at the meeting voiced a wide array of concerns, ranging from the possible decline in property values to the need for free blood tests for former Cooper students.

Barbara Grulch, whose children attended Cooper, said her 14-year-old son has shown elevated levels of lead, while her 10-year-old daughter may have health problems associated with high cadmium levels. Her daughter's doctor plans to conduct more tests "to make sure her kidneys are not expelling protein," Grulch said.

Westland Scouts build signal tower

WESTLAND CUB Scouts in Den 3, Pack 881, recently completed an ambitious project in the back yard of their den leader.

With the help of 11 Cubs, a 12-foot high signal tower was designed and constructed as a lashing and knot-tying activity.

The project was "borrowed" from an older Boy Scout Handbook, said John Cargill, den leader and assistant Cub Scoutmaster.

Aside from developing lashing and knot-tying skills, the signal tower project was valuable because it helped earn an engineering patch for the boys.

"It is an excellent means of demonstrating the necessity of teamwork and cooperation," Cargill said.

The tower is in the back yard of the Cargill home on Avon Ct., in the area south of Ann Arbor Trail between Middlebelt and Merriman.

TAKING PART were Cubs Scott Balko, Scott Smith, Chris Frank, Steven Gerstenbrand, Nick Palazolla, Fernando Cazares, Justin Valentes, James Cargill, Andrew Mehalich, Jeremy Martin and Keith LaRouche.

Fathers helping out were Cargill and assistant den leaders Dan Mehalich, Brian LaRouche, Steve Smith and Larry Frank.

Cargill said the den was formed three years ago with some of the charter members still in the group.

In past projects, Scouts built wooden toys, wind indicators, wind chimes, model planes, model bridges, pine wood derby cars, wood storage carrying cases and toy catapults.

"Many projects are made for credit toward advancement patches while some are for fun or because of interest expressed by the boys," Cargill added.

Besides working on the signal tower this summer, the den also enjoyed a five-day summer Scouting camp and met weekly for swimming and volleyball.

Fritz returned to director's post by mayor

In firing Fritz last year, Thomas said, "It was my decision to try someone new."

In rehiring Fritz, the mayor said he wanted to fill Cullity's post with someone who knew the building department and had experience.

In his 21 years with the city, Cullity held numerous positions in various departments.

"I've been with about every department," he said Friday.

The mayor, himself a longtime city employee, recalled when he and Cullity used to trim trees together. Firing Cullity was not easy, Thomas said, "because we've been longtime friends."

Meanwhile, Thomas alluded to other administrative changes, though he declined to name specific departments that might be affected.

In a stern warning in the wake of Cullity's firing, he said, "I expect my directors to follow my lead and to work hard and diligently. If I don't get that, then these are some of the things that can happen."

Gamblers fined, given probation

UNDER A plea agreement, felony charges against the men were dropped, and each defendant pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor charges. Prior to sentencing, they had remained free on a $5,000 personal bond.

During the afternoon raid, police and FBI agents forced their way into the apartment where they found schedules of sporting events, memo pads containing the names and addresses of bettors and a calculator, among other documents that indicated a gambling operation.

Bettors waged amounts ranging from $25 to $500, Abramski has said. As many as 50 bettors were listed in documents seized by authorities.

Cox and Petryczkowycz apparently earned their living from the gambling proceeds, police said.

During the raid, police obtained more information about the case when two telephones on the kitchen table rang numerous times.

Westland mom challenges state's tough drug-lifer law

Plymouth Salem High School, was 18 in July 1987, when sentenced under the drug-lifer law. The law mandates a life sentence — with no chance of parole — for anyone convicted of possessing a pound and one-half or more of cocaine.

Thompson, who has obtained more than 80 drug-related indictments from the Oakland citizens grand jury over the last two years, says the tough law helps police use little guys in a drug operation to get to middle-managment operatives.

"Very often the little guys won't talk," Thompson said. "That is, until they realize they face life in prison . . . then they're often ready to make a deal."

LINDA FANNON insists the law is a miscarriage of justice. "Murderers and rapists aren't punished that much," she said.

Fannon, who lives in Westland, insists Thompson, and others like him, are using the law to boost their own image as tough crime fighters, ". . . to build a reputation.

"I don't defend drugs," she said. "I hate them. People like my son should go to prison . . . but not for the rest of their lives, not for a mistake."

Linda Fannon has been interviewed by newspaper columnists and talk show hosts recently as she focuses public attention on the case of her son, and what she considers the unjust drug-lifer law that put him in prison.

She said there are extenuating circumstances in her son's case. One of the Canton Township detectives involved in her son's case, for example, was subsequently fired for allegedly using drugs.

The detective's dismissal was upheld in arbitration, Fannon said. But he was never charged with a crime. "There's no fairness there," she said. "He (the officer) is involved (in drug use) more than my son, but he's not even charged. But my son's in prison for the rest of his life."

Linda Fannon challenges the validity of the conviction of her son on evidence gathered by police who themselves may have been involved in drugs.

SHE ALSO challenges the Wayne County prosecutor whose office could have charged her son with a lesser offense — one carrying a less severe sentence.

But most of all, Fannon challenges the inflexibility of the drug-lifer law that takes away judicial discretion.

Gary Fannon is currently in the Ryan Regional Correctional Facility in Detroit. His mother said he is 16 college credits short of an associate's degree.

"He's coping," she said. "He's earned numerous commendations for helping other inmates learn to read. He doesn't deserve to be in prison for life."

Linda Fannon said she favors — and will fight for — a modification like that proposed by State Rep. William R. Bryant Jr., R-Grosse Pointe Farms.

Bryant has a bill pending, H.B. 4024, that would modify the law by empowering judges to impose lighter sentences.

H.B. 4024, — which is supported by a number of people including Macomb Prosecutor Carl Marlinga and Oakland Circuit Judge Barry L. Howard — would enable judges to impose life sentences without parole, if warranted.

But it's precisely that kind of tampering with the the drug-lifer law that Thompson hopes to thwart with his profile of the typical felon now serving a life sentence.

THE U.S. SUPREME Court upheld the constitutionality of Michigan's tough drug law, Thompson said. "And I believe it will be upheld this fall (when it's scheduled to be reviewed by Michigan's highest court). But the biggest challenge will come from legislators who want to change the law."

Thompson said he disagrees with the image promoted by those who want to change the law. "They want you to believe the law picks on people who simply made a one-time mistake. That's bunk."

Statistics provided by the Michigan Department of Corrections seem to substantiate the prosecutor's contention that those doing life under the drug-lifer law are far from being the first-time innocent.

Of 144 persons convicted between 1979, when the law went into effect, and last June 27, six are age 19 or younger. Most are between 20 and 29 (52 inmates) or 30 and 39 (50 people). There are 25 people between 40 and 49 currently in prison under the drug-lifer law, and 11 who are 50 or older.

"There are some teenagers," Thompson acknowledged. "But what about the other teenagers who die or become addicted because of the cocaine they were carrying?"

RACIALLY, according to the corrections department, 70 of those serving time under the drug-lifer law are white, 63 are black, six are Hispanic and five are classified as "other" (Arabic, Asian, Indian, etc.).

But the most telling part of his profile, Thompson said, is the number of inmates who said they do not use drugs. "That disputes the theory most of them sell drugs because they're addicted. They're in it for profit."

Figures on the number of drug-lifers who themselves use drugs is incomplete and, according to the Department of Corrections, unreliable. Of the 144 inmates less than 50 answered when asked if they themselves are drug users.

And even those responses are suspect, according to prison spokesman Gail R. Light, whose office provided information for Thompson's drug-lifer profile. "The information on drug use was voluntary," Light said. "And there is no way to verify the answer."

Thompson, however, remains convinced that many dealers — particularly white-collar types in Oakland County — are not hooked, but sell drugs because of the enormous profits.

Thompson has never dealt with Linda Fannon. But he said he understands a mother's anguish at the thought of her son in prison — for life.

But that doesn't change the prosecutor's support for the tough drug-lifer law — legislation he says is necessary if society is serious about the war on drugs and drug-related crime.

SOCIETY shouldn't feel sorry for Gary Fannon, said Thompson, "he made his choice. What about the people who would overdose or become addicted with the cocaine he was carrying?"

Thompson said he doesn't know all the specifics of Fannon's case, but he presumes the Wayne County prosecutor probably considered a deal — charging him with a lesser crime providing he cooperated to get the suppliers. "Ask him (Fannon) why he didn't cooperate.

"A lot of young people get into drugs because it seems like easy money," Thompson said. "And they can't envision getting caught."

'The Doctor' thrives with Hurt

tickets please

John Monaghan

The blank expression that carried Hurt through films like 'The Accidental Tourist' is replaced here by an entire range of emotions.

William Hurt's winning performance is the right prescription in the film, "The Doctor."

In "The Doctor," William Hurt plays a self-centered sawbones who learns about life on the other end of a scalpel. A brief bout with throat cancer subjects him to the long lines, callous doctors, and reams of paperwork that define a modern hospital visit.

Treat patients with respect, he moralizes. All doctors become patients sooner or later.

If this Aesop's fable of Yuppie self-redemption sounds familiar, it should. Wasn't it just a month or so ago that Harrison Ford, as the lawyer in "Regarding Henry," went through a similar transformation?

Fortunately, this is the superior film of the two which occasionally relies on cheap sentiment and predictability. Like the fables of old, "The Doctor" delivers a simple but powerful message, helped in large doses by William Hurt's winning performance.

The blank expression that carried Hurt through films like "The Accidental Tourist" is replaced here by an entire range of emotions. The opening scene finds Dr. Jack MacKee performing open-heart surgery while singing along with The Four Seasons' "Big Girls Don't Cry," which is piped into the operating room.

A REAL cut-up, MacKee quips to doctors and patients alike, cracking jokes that aren't always in the best taste. When a woman confides that the unsightly scar on her chest worries her husband, Mitchell quips, "just tell him you're a Playboy centerfold and have the staples to prove it."

His philosophy concerning heart surgery is well-known by the young interns he teaches: "Find the problem, fix it, and get out of there," he says.

Giving a damn about the patients as people has nothing to do with surgery.

His own change of heart occurs when he meets June (Elizabeth Perkins) in the waiting room for radiation treatments. MacKee knows that the young woman, who is dying of a brain tumor, could have been saved if the proper tests had been administered.

Their blossoming relationship — as friends, not lovers — is the film's weakest link. She looks too good for someone undergoing the hell of radiation treatment, especially when she dramatically removes the scarf from her head to reveal her Sinead O'Connor scalp.

She's a life-affirming angel in a peasant skirt who has learned to accept her fate. But she's also one-dimensional and a cheap catalyst for the doctor's own complex transformation.

THEIR FRIENDSHIP does effectively contrast the problems between the doctor and wife Anne (Christine Lahti, in another thankless supporting role). She suffers because he, like many patients, keeps the people closest to him at arms' length.

"The Doctor" reunites Hurt with Randa Haines, the director of "Children of a Lesser God." Emotionally, she knows what buttons to push. Visually, she employs a simple style which at its showiest conveys the topsy-turvy feeling of being wheeled into surgery.

You don't need to be a brain surgeon to figure out what direction she's taking us in. Like the block letters MacKee scrawls on his erasable board during recovery, "The Doctor's" message is big, bold and easy to read.

'We're No Angels' doesn't wing it

By LeAnne Rogers
staff writer

pass the popcorn

LeAnne Rogers

As "We're No Angels" begins, the prison warden attempts to put the fear of God into the inmates by graphically describing how a convicted killer will meet his end in the electric chair.

The condemned man sneers and glowers but prisoners Ned and Jim, (Robert DeNiro and Sean Penn), are suitably impressed. Because the pair talked during the warden's exhortations, they are summoned for punishment in the room where the execution is going to take place.

When the killer stages a violent escape from the prison, Ned and Jim are faced with a dilemma. They are really scared of the gun wielding killer, who clearly expects them to escape with him, but when they try falling behind during the chase through the prison, the guards lay down a line of fire.

Trapped like rats, Ned and Jim conclude the killer is the less imminent danger and are soon nervously enjoying their freedom.

Exactly, what Ned and Jim did to end up in prison is not made clear. They don't seem very tough or too worldly. Probably being in the wrong place at the wrong time, based on what happens to them during the film. The duo never is actually able to make a plan and carry it out.

Through a misunderstanding, the pair, looking like a couple Bowery Boys escapees, end up posing as a couple of Arizona priests visiting a monastery at the Shrine of the Weeping Virgin.

NOBODY NOTICES they don't really look much like their pictures. The pair have their eyes set just north of the monastery, across the river to Canada.

The pair make an unlikely set of priests. The biggest laugh I had from the movie was a scene when DeNiro and Penn nervously try to sing along with the French prayers before dinner.

DeNiro provides some rather unorthodox advice to a deputy who is making a confession about cheating on his wife.

Penn's character, a simple and rather gentle soul, uses billboard quotes and comic books as the basis for philosophical statements his listeners find profond.

One amusing bit occurs with the explanation he offers a young monk who notices Penn has a clothes pin attached to the collar of his shirt, swiped earlier from a clothes line.

For a comedy, this film from "Mona Lisa" director Neil Jordan is surprisingly short on laughs. The script by David Mamet is often angry and loud, the violence too much for what should be a light comedy.

SET IN 1935, the film doesn't capitalize on the humor that could evolve out of the situations in which DeNiro and Penn find themselves.

The best performance comes from Penn, who through his simple openness starts feeling drawn to the contemplative life of the monastery. The more peaceful Penn gets, the more desperate DeNiro becomes.

The agitated DeNiro keeps working on schemes to get over the bridge into Canada, a journey foiled several times by police checks. So near, yet so far.

The film moves rather fitfully to the expected conclusion, bringing in a subplot with Demi Moore as a bitter single mother to a deaf mute child.

In the end, "We're No Angels" seems like a lot of talent and potential without a lot to show for it.

County profiles its communities

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Plymouth Township is part of Michigan's "Golden Corridor."

Westland boasts "excellent access to the freeway system as well as air, sea and rail transportation".

Livonia, meanwhile, "has it all."

At least that's the way all three communities are described in new Wayne County community profiles.

The just-released profiles of all 43 Wayne County communities are part of the county's business-attraction strategy.

"WHEN PEOPLE want to move into Wayne County they often are looking for this kind of information and we wanted to provide it at their fingertips," said Timothy Johnson of the the county office of jobs and economic development.

The surveys have been sent to each community, as well as to area Realtors and business developers.

Printed in blue on white stock, each four-page profile contains a treasure trove of information on each community.

Leading employers, financial institutions and utilities are listed. But the profiles also include such details as community income levels, tax rates and average home sale prices.

Statistics for western Wayne communities are as follows:

- Canton — Described as "rapidly developing" with "a combination of single-family and multiple-family dwellings," nearly 40 percent of Canton households have incomes over $50,000. Its tax rate is 60.39 to 68.55 mills, depending upon school district. Average home sale price is $100,930, a 50 percent increase from 1979-89.
- Garden City — Nearly 30 percent of households have income over $50,000. The tax rate is 76.69 mills. Average home sale price is $57,600, an increase of 43.2 percent from 1979-89.
- Livonia "has it all," according to its profile, including a full array of housing plus substantial commercial, industrial and office development. Nearly 40 percent of households have income above $50,000. The rate is 55.1325 to 65.68 mills. Average home sale price $94,740, a 60.7 percent increase from 1979-89.
- Plymouth — Roughly 25 percent of households have income above $50,000. The tax rate is 65.1. Average home sale price is $97,280, a 61.9 percent increase from 1979-89.
- Plymouth Township — Roughly 50 percent of households have income above 50,000. The tax rate is 54.75 mills. Average home sale price is $151,610, a 103.2 percent increase from 1979-89.
- Redford — Roughly 30 percent of all households have income above $50,000. The tax rate is 60.41 to 68.75 mills. Average home sale price is $56,800, a 38.6 percent increase from 1979-89.
- Westland — Roughly 25 percent of all households have income above $50,000. The rate varies from 58.04 to 77.39 mills, depending upon school district. Average home sale price is $59,770, a 45.67 percent increase from 1979-89.

Priest feted on 50th

Rev. H. Norbert Clemens

Rev. H. Norbert Clemens of Detroit Catholic Central High School will commemorate his 50 years of priesthood by celebrating Mass, 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 25 in St. Genevieve Catholic Church, Livonia.

A reception in the parish hall will follow at 5:30 p.m.

Born in Youngstown, Ohio, Clemens was ordained in 1941. He has spent 43 years at Redford-based Catholic Central, teaching an estimated 9,000 students. He has taught English, supervised several school organizations and directed school drama productions.

He currently teaches theology, is moderator of the senior class and mother's club and is athletic department chaplain. From 1965-68, he supervised construction of El Centro Cultural, a Mexican mission.

Breen sweeps through primary

There was no trouble for 10th District County Commissioner Maurice Breen in Tuesday's primary.

Running unopposed, Breen nonetheless received 4,919 votes in capturing the GOP nomination for the two-year, $41,396-a-year county seat.

Breen's district includes the cities of Livonia, Plymouth, Northville, as well as Plymouth and Northville townships.

The former Plymouth Township supervisor was appointed to the seat earlier this year after three-term incumbent Susan Heintz resigned to become director of the governor's southeast Michigan office.

Breen will now run unopposed in the Aug. 27 commission election.

Primary turnout was boosted by the heated GOP primary for the 36th District state House seat. Northville Township Supervisor Georgina Goss — a friend of Breen — was the winner in that race with 3,061 votes, compared with 2,794 for Plymouth City Commissioner Jerry Vorva and 2,517 for Canton resident Deborah Whyman.

Like Breen, Goss will also appear on the Aug. 27 ballot without a Democratic Party challenger.

Co-workers share journey toward independent lives

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Just like everyone else, Betty Grantz and Linda Mardirosian share in the easy banter of co-workers. Day is done at the Westland TJ Maxx store where they work and they're on the way home.

It's a short trip in terms of miles, but a long journey in many other ways.

Betty, 63, and Linda, 44, have spent a combined 52 years in mental health care facilities before their new jobs gave them perhaps their best-ever chance for independence.

Linda, a small, energetic woman, will return in a few days to clean windows, tidy up and stock shelves at the Warren Road store.

Betty, a grandmotherly type for whom legal blindness is no barrier, also stocks clothing at the store.

"THEY GET treated just like anybody else here," said their boss, assistant merchandise manager Marshall Falconer.

Popular with co-workers, the two recently shared the store's "Associate of the Month" award, voted by the store's 65 workers. "I think the award shows how their co-workers feel about them," Falconer said.

"They're good workers," added job coach, Gertrude Potts. "They want to do their own work, they don't want anyone to do it for them."

Potts, employed by Saints Inc., a private, Romulus-based social service agency, works with both women, helping accommodate them to the workforce.

The process is called supported employment, but the day is coming when the support will no longer be required.

"What we like to see is a situation where they can work on their own," said Denise Mogos of Wayne Community Living Services, a state agency that recommended both women for their jobs. "The purpose is for them to become as independent as possible."

Neither Linda nor Betty had ever worked before, according to state records, but their success in the workforce has been accompanied by an upgrade in living conditions.

Linda, a former group home resident, now lives in an apartment in nearby Inkster.

"It's what we call supported independent living," Mogos said. "There are people who look in on her, but she has a degree of independence."

Both women are classified as developmentally disabled, but Mogos said the classification shouldn't lead people to limit them as capable workers or citizens.

"The message we want to get across is they they are people, just like everybody else," she said.

In addition to working two days a week at TJ Maxx, Linda works another two days at a nearby McDonald's and an additional day per week at Saints, Inc. offices.

Betty, a two-year TJ Maxx employee who works five days a week, recently moved into a smaller, less restrictive Redford group home.

At the new home, Betty is responsible for her own cooking, shopping and cleanup, as well as taking care of her two beloved cats.

She also attends night school in the Redford Union Schools.

"She goes everywhere," said home manager Kim Prophet, "out for ice cream, to the movies, to the beach. She really seems to enjoy her autonomy."

Betty states her reaction to her job and new home more simply: "I like it a lot."

In conversation, it's obvious both women take pride in their new responsibilities.

Benefits outweigh danger of liberal meddling

Leonard Poger

ONE OF MY co-workers continually complains about so-called liberals screwing up the country.

Those liberals, he continues ad nauseum, are merely a bunch of whiners who cry like babies if they don't get their way on issues ranging from gun control to U.S. Supreme Court nominees.

Another colleague frequently complains that government is too involved in issues that are none of its business and that should be left to individuals or the private sector.

Please, the barf bag on both beefs.

IT'S THOSE same people, usually conservatives, who generally complain when something is amiss and when their ox is gored. They want government to step in and do something about it.

I recall a former state representative, hardly a liberal in anyone's mind, addressing a western Wayne County Republican convention. The audience was made up entirely of white, middle income people, mostly male.

I expected the legislator to deliver a talk that was safe. After all, the time was the late 1970s, President Jimmy Carter was in the White House, interest rates were soaring, the economy was beginning to plunge because of a new surge in the wholesale price of Mideast oil and other factors.

BUT HE avoided taking a slam at the Democrats and voiced insight for all middle Americans to remember when they bellow about the liberals or big government messing up the country.

The legislator, as memory recalls more than a decade later, told his audience that they should avoid complaining about Democrats and liberals and remember that most new government programs or services were created because a group of people wanted them.

Many of those were far from liberal. They were probably conservatives whose wallet or purse was threatened and wanted help or protection from the government — federal, state or local.

LET'S TAKE a quick look at several examples of the "big, bad government" and what it did to mess up the country.

When few people could afford a single-family house, the government created FHA- and VA-backed mortgages.

This created an instant market for Realtors because now millions of people could afford houses and could move out of rented apartments or flats.

During the Great Depression, people lost their money that was on deposit in banks and savings and loans.

The liberals then created the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which provided government guarantees that deposits (later increased to $100,000) would be safe.

That created a new confidence in savings institutions that helped them make loans and make money.

WHEN ANIMAL lovers were upset about people harming cats, dogs and horses, they were successful in having state and local ordinances enacted to make that a crime.

When industrial employees wanted to gain an advantage in collective bargaining with uncooperative employers, they pushed Congress into enacting the National Labor Relations Act, which establishes guidelines for union organizers and companies in union recognition and bargaining matters.

Later, when corruption was discovered in the Teamsters Union in the late 1950s, the government got into the act again to make sure union elections and pension funds were run honestly.

Under the conservatives' views, let the unions run their own business and take a chance on their own crooks.

CONSERVATIVES USUALLY want government out of our lives — until they find an objectionable book at their local library and then demand that city officials remove the "dirty" books and consider ordinances prohibiting those books from circulation.

Benefit attracts rockers

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

In a fitting tribute to the legacy of Detroit rock'n'roll he helped create, several area musicians are putting together an all-star benefit concert for the family of guitarist Joe Kubert.

The former member of the Detroit Wheels died June 19 of cancer.

The concert Sunday, Aug. 18, at Harpos Concert Theatre, Harper at Chalmers, off I-94, in Detroit will feature a special appearance by Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels. Doors open at 7 p.m. (For information, call 824-1700).

Scott Campbell, Detroit Blues Band, The Rationals with Scott Morgan, The Polish Muslims, Twiggy Barbust & The Lizards in Jars and the Garfield Blues Band are also scheduled to perform.

All proceeds from the concert will go to Kubert's widow and 9-year-old daughter.

"It's important the community supports itself," said Scott Morgan, whose Rationals was another Detroit act making a name for itself in the late '60s. "This is something definitely worthwhile doing.

"It's what the local music scene should be about — being more connected."

Plans include having the show digitally recorded for a live album to be released at a later date along with material Kubert recorded with the Detroit Blues Band.

KUBERT WAS considered to have had a large role in the Detroit Wheels' sound when the band was kicking out hits like "Jenny Take a Ride" in the late 1960s.

"He provided that nice little rhythm," said Mitch Ryder, whose friendship with Kubert dated back to junior high school.

Kubert performed with the Detroit Wheels until 1967 when the Vietnam draft decimated the band, according to Ryder. Kubert later hooked up with Jimmy McCarty and the Detroit Blues Band.

Ryder said the two kept in contact and even worked together a couple of times.

"I have very few male friends in my life," said Ryder in a telephone interview. "I definitely count him as one of them."

"After he left the band, we never got close again," Ryder said. "It's sad. We should have been."

Four months on Nagle Street in Hamtramck? Let's just say 13 Engines ran idle.

"We didn't do much I tell you that," said John Critchley discussing the band's temporary residence two years ago. "We watched a lot of TV. We probably drank a lot of beer and wrote a lot of songs."

THE TORONTO-based band returns to old haunts Friday, Aug. 16, headlining at Alvin's in Detroit. Doors open at 9 p.m.

13 Engines did time in Detroit in the fall of 1989. The four-member outfit hung out here while their second album for Nocturnal Records, "Byram Lake Blues," was being released.

A majority of those songs, in fact, were written during the band's stay in Byram Lake, Mich. Likewise, a portion of the numbers can be heard on 13 Engine's recent SBK release "A Blur to Me Now."

So does this mean members consider Detroit/Michigan something of a second home? Well . . . Critchley is quite the diplomat but he won't go that far.

Instead, the Motor City dwelling is chalked up to the band paying their dues.

"Blur to Me Now" is a back-to-basics in-your-face rock'n'roll album. There isn't an ounce of extraneous guitar matter or pop bombast on this effort.

Part of the credit for that goes to producer David Briggs, who's best known for his work with Neil Young. 13 Engines recorded "Blur to Me Now" in a flat six weeks, rehearsing for awhile at Young's California ranch.

COMPARISONS to Mr. Young are natural, but their validity only comes in the way 13 Engines' streamlined aesthetics when making music.

"If you spend your time in the studio, triggering drum machines it's no longer 13 Engines," Critchley said.

Speaking of studios, Park the Karma is in Tempermill Studio, recording their yet-to-be titled debut album for Black Garlic records. The band features members vocalist Lori Wyatt, Jack Smith, Raquel Salaysay (formerly of The Truncheons) and Kerry Gluckman (formerly of Walk the Dogma).

Fanzines are few and far between Fanzines are tiny independent music papers put out by regular people instead of some huge publishing corporation. They're usually cheaply printed on mimeograph paper with crude graphics, a bunch of misspelled words and a casual writing style.

But that's what makes them great.

Instead of beginning a record review with phrases like "the thematic elements and poignant tonal quality . . . " Fanzine writers tend to use sentences like "These boys have plenty of neat-o effects pedals."

Back in the 1960s, alternative magazines were in their heyday and anyone who had something to say would write it down and voila, they were in the publishing biz.

Lately, however, fanzine production — at least in this area — has gone the way of bell bottoms, lava lights and altruistic behavior. A survey of local record stores (the major distribution point for fanzines) revealed that most had zero or at most three copies of local magazines.

Most fanzine producers today have to be well-versed in ad rates and distribution techniques. But there's still a few people, armed with only a copier and something to say, who manage to make their little place in the literary world.

Of the few that are out there, these are some of the best:

New Direction — This is a junior-sized fanzine put out by a guy who calls himself Nick Name and his "proofreader, lover and best friend" Spirulina. Although the mag is tiny, it does get around. The mail section in the front of the book has letters from readers as far away as England.

Anyway, New Direction focuses only on music. Mr. Name's taste in tunes runs toward the alternative/college sort. One issue featured interviews with That Petrol Emotion, Snuff and Lovers and Other Monsters as well as live reviews of bands like the Chills and Social Distortion.

But the real body of the magazine consists of "Nick's Picks," a lengthy section of record reviews. Nick's reviews are like listening to that friend of yours who frequents the indie bin at the record store — they're smart and full of obscure music info.

Scattered throughout the text are a bunch of funny/philosophical quotes like Hans Selye's "If you do what you like, you never really work. Your work is your play." or George Carlin's "I am not a complete vegetarian; I eat only animals that have died in their sleep."

New Direction only comes out twice a year — in June and December — and can be had by sending $1.50 to New Direction, 520 N. Ashley, No. 1, Ann Arbor 48103.

Brassneck — It's a music rag with a wicked sense of humor put out by Chip Porter (lead-off hitter, token chump) and Tim Sendra (field general, token grump).

They say that their debut issue "generated about as much excitement as a Flock of Seagulls reunion," but since Tim is a recent graduate and "doesn't have a job or point in life" and Chip is a worker in a party store where he specializes in stocking canned shrimp, they decided to put out a second issue since they had nothing to do.

The first issue was nearly a masterpiece in "zinedom." It features a comic about Snuggles the cuddly fabric softener bear having a bad day and going on a killing rampage, plus two "horror" stories about the tragedy of going bald at a young age written by the two Sendra boys (baldness runs in their family).

The second issue is more music-oriented, but written in the typical Brassneck style. In his review of the Ride LP, for example, Sendra writes, "Reviewing this record makes me feel like an elephant in a patch of daisies or a cement mixer driving over eggshells."

To get your hands on Brassneck, send one buck to Brassneck HQ, 4746 Northgate, Ann Arbor 48103.

Motorbooty — This is a good bet for those of you are interested in Detroit's infamous past music history circa the late '60s-early '70s.

Mol Triffid goes 'western'

Yes, Kurt Serbus will don the dinner jacket and designer eyeglasses for the last area rendition of "The Devil and Sammy Davis."

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Someone better tell Don McLean that Mol Triffid has gone to catch the last train for the coast. Don't worry, the music hasn't died.

It's just moving.

A farewell dose of vocalist Kurt Serbus' apocalyptic screeches and Kimo Ball's double-barreled guitar will be given Saturday, Aug. 17, at Club Heidelberg in Ann Arbor. Oh, but to see Serbus don the dinner jacket and designer eyeglasses for the last area rendition of "The Devil and Sammy Davis."

Then in one fell swoop, Mol Triffid will be off to San Francisco. They're even taking Bloomfield Hills Lahser graduate/drummer Scott Mast, who replaced John Westerman last September.

Simply put, Mol Triffid has grown tired of the scene here.

"There's not a hell of a lot of places to play," said Kimo Ball, sitting in the living room (we think) of their Ann Arbor apartment with a 'For Rent" sign on the door. "Detroit is sad. It's either people loyal to their favorite punk band or apathetic to a Martian band from Ann Arbor."

There's no bitterness in Ball's voice, just resignation. Mol Triffid accomplished more in three years here than the average bunch of long-haired, power-chord metal churning quartet.

THE BAND'S first single last year, "I Want to See Pretty People Doing Ugly Things," revealed Serbus' penchant for exploring the bleakest realms of the human spirit.

Instead of wariness, the lead singer's trembling screams seemed to revel in the madness as he vividly describes a pathetic creature alone watching pornographic films. Ball's incendiary guitar pieces only made the package more hypnotic. More importantly, the 7-inch single was instrumental in garnering the band an instant following.

Since then, Mol Triffid toured the East Coast and the Midwest region extensively and set up a home base in Ann Arbor. While on the coast, the band recorded a majority of their upcoming release, "Touch the Monkey," in Boston.

The six-song project is 50 minutes long and will be released on (fast becoming extinct) vinyl in the fall.

Among the selections will be a number, "Satin Rules," in which Serbus pokes fun at the hysteria revolving around alleged devil worship. Another song is titled, "William Shatner Sleeps on the Eve of the Harmonic Convergence: He Dreams."

MANY OF the Serbus-penned numbers come from his own twisted perspective of every day events. "The Devil and Sammy Davis," for example, was the result of the late singer's biography, which divulged Davis' alleged involvement with the Church of Satan.

Whether a move to the Golden Gate City will lighten up Serbus' songwriting remains to be seen. He wasn't present at the interview.

"He's into it (the move)," said bassist Dave Sahljdak.

As, too, are the rest of the band members. For Mast, the relocation is of particular excitement. The drummer always wanted to be a member of Mol Triffid ever since his former band, Pontiac, opened for them at a show in Ann Arbor.

"Kurt has a lot to do with it," Mast said. "So does the music. He has such a presence. He's so intense."

Mol Triffid will perform with guests, Thudpucker, Saturday, Aug. 17, at Club Heidelberg, 215 N. Main, Ann Arbor. Cover is $4. For information, call 994-3562.

Oakland County artists received most arts grants

The Michigan Council for the Arts has redistributed money from the poorest parts of the state to the richest, a conservative think-tank study says.

In 1981-86, artists in Oakland County, with Michigan's highest per-capita income, received 46 arts council grants, the largest total of any county in the state, according to a study released today by the Mackinac Center, a Midland-based public policy think tank.

MCA distributed 83 grants to artists in Oakland and Washtenaw counties, which has the state's second-highest per capita income.

Artists in 24 of Michigan's 25 poorest counties received no grants from The Michigan Council for the Arts during a five-year period.

"BY REDISTRIBUTING tax dollars from poor and middle class to rich areas, the Michigan Council for the Arts has failed to serve the public interest," said Greg Kaza, the study's author. The group recommended abolishing the MCA.

Gov. John Engler last week reversed his decision to abolish the MCA, instead establishing a new group that will phase out grants over three years.

The MCA gave more than one-third of its total number of arts council grants to counties with less than one-seventh of the state population, said Kaza, vice president for policy research at the Mackinac Center.

The Mackinac Center study recommended phasing out all state funding to the Detroit Institute of Arts, Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Michigan Opera Theatre and other cultural groups over a three-year period so that they are able to secure alternative funding from private and non-profit sources.

"REFORM IS necessary because there is no empirical evidence documenting that these state-funded organizations are serving the poor," Kaza said.

"The State of Michigan can ill afford the arts council given the prevailing economic recession, budget crisis and the needs of middle-class taxpayers for property tax relief," Kaza said.

The 1981-1986 period was analyzed because it is the most recent time span for which figures are available, he said.

The 24 poorest counties which received no grants are: Lake, Keewenaw, Ogemaw, Baraga, Oscoda, Houghton, Presque Isle, Montmorency, Clare, Schoolcraft, Chippewa, Missaukee, Gogebic, Iron, Kalkaska, Osceola, Alcona, Iosco, Luce, Cheboygan, Arenac, Roscommon, Gladwin and Mackinac.

WHEN CHANGE IN THERAPY IS NOT IN ORDER
When your body aches despite therapy, you may feel it is time to change medications. Unfortunately, the pain may be a reaction to stress not reversible by medical therapy.
For example: you hurt in your heels. The basic problem could be that distortions in the position of the toes make it impossible for you to strike the floor with a normal stride. Your heel pain is the result of a structural impairment of your foot, no medical regimen can straighten the toes, let alone resolve your heel pain.
When your doctor questions you about your joint pain, he gains an idea if a structural problem rather than inflammatory reaction is the cause. Structural pain is boring, continuous, not relieved by rest, and not diminished by heat or medication.
Examination helps decide the question. Looking at the toes often reveals why the heel hurts. An x-ray of the knee, revealing previously unsuspected joint loss, may explain why you developed an ache down your leg that prescriptions or injections fail to relieve.
At times, the alternatives for care are either surgery or acceptance. The experienced doctor knows when you have arrived at such a point, and that trying other medications is a gamble likely to cause more hazard than help.

Burton lifts Wolverines

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

hockey

Joe Burton was the Metro Summer Hockey League scoring champion this year, so it was fitting he should be the one to score the last goal of the 1991 season.

Burton scored just 16 seconds into overtime last week to give the Wolverines a 5-4 victory over the Lakers in the MSHL championship game at Plymouth Ice Arena.

The 24-year-old Garden City resident fired a slapshot from the right wing and decided the issue at 6:44 in the extra session.

"In overtime, you try to get as many shots as you can and, hopefully, one goes in," said Burton, who serves as player/coach along with former University of Michigan-Dearborn teammate Tim Osborn. "I felt like I got all of it; I shot it hard and it went in."

The Wolverines were rewarded for a persistent effort with their overtime win.

THEY TRAILED for much of the game and rallied from one-goal deficits three times in the third period to tie and eventually force the overtime.

The Lakers led 2-1 after Mike Krygier scored late in the first period and held that edge until Osborn tied it at 10:39 in the third. The Lakers tried to win it, twice going a goal up only to have the Wolverines show new life.

"We just tried to keep it close; we knew we could score," said Burton, who led the league with 28 goals and 50 points in the regular season. "As long as we weren't down more than three going into the third, we felt pretty confident."

The Lakers went ahead 3-2 and 4-3 on goals by Krygier and Jim Mitchell at 6:09 and 2:20 in the last period, but the Wolverines pulled even a short time later when Scott Dresch and Mark Issel countered with the tying goals at 5:23 and 2:02.

"What really hurt us going into the third period was a lack of bench strength," said Lakers coach Mike Kesler of Livonia. "With our two lines going up against their three, we had to play strong defensive hockey if we were going to hold that lead.

"They also had two or three saves by their goalie (Darren Burton). We had him down and out; all we had to do was put it on the top shelf. But we put it right into him, and they were excellent saves."

KESLER ADDED some of his better players began to tire late in the game, but he didn't want to diminish the effort and ability of the Wolverines by using that as an excuse.

"Nobody else in the league can put five guys out there who are as good as the five they had on the ice at the end of the third period and going into overtime," he said.

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Wolverine goalie Darren Burton watches the puck sail wide of the mark as teammate Dennis Schimmelpfenneg converges on the play.

Kesler added he never thought the game was his to win even though the Lakers held the lead most of the night.

"Never. They have too much firepower on that team," he said. "That's when you start getting into trouble, when you start thinking like that."

Mitchell opened the scoring in the first period, and Burton tied it before Krygier put the Lakers in front 2-1.

In addition to his goal, Osborn had three assists for the winners, and teammates Dennis Schimmelpfenneg, Issel, Max Westphal and Jayson Weatherington one each. Brent Bessey also had three assists for the Lakers, Chuck Carvey two, Krygier and Mitchell one apiece.

BURTON WON'T have much rest until next season. He reports Sunday, Aug. 18, to Denmark where he will play for Rungsted in the Danish Tier II professional league.

"I'm a little nervous, but I always wanted to play hockey at a higher level," he said. "I've been playing seniors for two years and finally got a break.

"The European style is more my style — played on the open ice and not as physical. I should be able to skate with them.

"I'm hoping to have a good year and maybe get an offer from a better team. Maybe I'll get noticed and come back over here."

In the MSHL semifinals Sunday night, the Lakers doubled the score on the Spartans 10-5, and the Wolverines whipped the Falcons 13-3.

Bessey and Mitchell scored three goals apiece and also had three and two assists, respectively. Krygier chipped in two goals and three assists. Phil Berger scored three goals for the Spartans.

Osborn racked up five goals and four assists to lead the Wolverines, who also got a three-goal performance from Burton.

MIAA features local standouts

football

It was really no surprise, what college topped the list when the results in the coaches' vote for the preseason favorite in the 1991 Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association football race were announced.

Albion College first, followed by Hope, Olivet, Adrian, Kalamazoo and Alma.

It would be difficult to argue with Albion's pre-eminence. After all, the Britons were 7-1-1 a year ago (4-0-1 in the MIAA), winning their second-straight title.

What's worse — for everyone else in the MIAA, anyway — Albion returns seven starters on defense and eight on offense, including the league's top passer, sophomore quarterback Mike Montico, from Detroit Country Day.

Of course, it should also be noted that in the previous 23 coaches' preseason polls, the right team was selected just eight times.

BUT THIS year, it looks like a lock — even though there are no more patsies in the MIAA. Kalamazoo and Olivet, for years the league's doormats, are both much improved.

Still, Albion has all the ingredients — including depth, with players like junior linebacker John Brannan (6-feet-1, 205 pounds), a Plymouth Salem graduate, and sophomore receiver Mike Spaccarotella (5-7, 155), from Livonia Churchill.

"We've got some holes to fill on defense," said Albion coach Pete Schmidt, trying valiantly to dodge the burden of the favorite's role. "But we have a fine linebacking corps and secondary coming back. That will help."

Hope, which tied Albion 10-10 in '90, and Olivet, which lost 21-20 last year on a blocked extra point in the final minute, will challenge only if they can replace some key people.

At Olivet, that means filling the holes created by all-MIAA first-team quarterback Ken Kubiak and the league's most valuable defensive player, linebacker Jeff Veronie. Bill Thams (5-11, 225), a junior defensive tackle from Plymouth Canton, should help.

BEFORE ALBION'S emergence as favorite, there was Adrian. The Bulldogs were trying to three-peat last year (they tied Albion for the 1989 title), but fell flat with a 4-4-1 overall record, 2-2-1 in the MIAA.

Now Adrian must replace quarterback Pete Mazzoni (Livonia Stevenson), a three-year starter. Entering fall drills, there are eight candidates.

No wonder coach Jim Lyall said "we have a lot of gaps to fill. Our defense will have to carry the load until the offense can come around.

"We are cautiously optimistic."

One reason: the return of senior linebacker Kevin Messner (5-11, 195), a Redford Union graduate. Sophomore Brian Connell (5-10, 210), from Plymouth Canton, could help, too.

Kalamazoo improved to 3-5-1 in '90, but the Hornets were still just 1-3-1 in the MIAA. The hope of coach David Warmack is that they are headed in the proper direction.

"WE MAY surprise some people this year," Warmack said. "We'll be bigger than in the past. And our numbers are up, from 64 to 82 players. Plus, we've had a good recruiting class. I think we'll be more consistent offensively."

Junior John Moldovan (6-0, 195), from Livonia Franklin, may help at offensive guard. And junior Scott Myrand (6-0, 225), also from Franklin, could be a contributor on the defensive line.

One freshman the Hornets figure will have an immediate impact is Westland John Glenn grad Tony Prey (6-1, 248). The only question is where; Prey could win a starting spot on either the offensive or defensive line.

Sophomore Bryan Schultz (6-3, 170), from Plymouth Salem, and junior Dale Coller (5-10, 170), from Churchill, will provide depth in the defensive secondary.

At Alma, hope is high, but reality can be a wearisome weight. First-year coach Jim Cole doesn't have a lot to work with, but junior defensive lineman Jeff Skinner, from Farmington Harrison, may provide some relief.

Livonia goalie cool on ice

By Brad Emons
staff writer

The only thing missing from David Mitchell's busy summer itinerary was a trip to Japan.

Mitchell, who will be a senior this fall at Livonia Churchill High, got as far as the U.S. Olympic Training Center, July 21-28 in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The goalie was one of two alternates on the 22-member USA National Select-17 Junior Hockey Team.

Despite being the odd man out among three goaltenders vying for a spot on the Select-17 squad, Mitchell is quickly becoming one the country's rising sons.

"The other two guys — Jeff Moen (of Roseville, Minn.) and Tom Ashtley (of Wheatfield, N.Y.— — were both really good," Mitchell said. "They had both been on the National 16 team and had more experience in international competition.

"But at least I got my foot in the door with USA Hockey."

(Perhaps the Select-17 could have used Mitchell in Japan. The team finished 0-2-2.)

Mitchell made the most of his opportunity after attending a regional camp at Oak Park's Compuware Arena, gaining an invitation to attend another USA Hockey regional camp (June 23-30) in Lake Placid, N.Y. (Little Caesars Midget squad teammate Greg Logas, who will also be a senior at Churchill, was another camp participant.)

DURING HIS STAY in Lake Placid, Mitchell was able to raise his game a notch.

"Basically at that level it's all evaluation," Mitchell said. "They (the coaches and scouts) want to see where you fit in the USA program.

"You just go out and try to impress the scouts. I went out pretty laid back and played well. I thought I had a good shot of going on to Colorado Springs."

The regional camp in Lake Placid enabled Mitchell to get acclimated to a new style of play.

"Everything is so high tempo because the international game is so high paced," Mitchell said. "You have to be ready all the time."

Mitchell has been well-schooled in the game since he was 5½ years-old.

The son of former University of Michigan-Dearborn and ex-Churchill High coach Adam Mitchell, David began in the Livonia house leagues as a defenseman before making the switch to goalie with a Westland travel team.

The past seven years he's played for Little Caesars in the AAA leagues. Among Caesars' prominent alumni are Westland's Mike Modano, now with the Minnesota North Stars, and Pat Peake, a recent first-round NHL pick of the Washington Capitals from the Detroit Ambassadors.

IN 1989-90, Mitchell played on the Little Caesars Bantam Major team that won the state championship and finished second to Alaska in the nationals.

Last season he led Caesars' Midget club (16-17 year-olds) to state and national crowns. He was also the Michigan National AAA Hockey League's top goaltender the past two seasons.

Mitchell's ultimate goal is to play Division I college hockey. He was recently drafted by the Detroit Junior Red Wings of the North American Junior A Hockey League (Tier II), and also by the Omaha, Neb. Lancers of the U.S. Junior A Hockey League.

Despite the two offers, Mitchell is not tempted. He plans to stick with the Caesars Midgets for another year.

"I'll be only one of three returning players," he said. "We're not nearly the same team, but we'll play 80 games and get to travel all over. We have something like 13 trips planned. We're going to Calgary and Montreal and out east two or three times. I'll be able to get more exposure. The Junior Wings have their goalie coming back anyway. The main thing is to play."

MITCHELL doesn't believe he'll receive an offer from a Division I school during the NCAA's early one-week November signing period. Mitchell, however, is an attractive package, carrying a 3.25 grade-point average while having passed ACT and SAT requirements.

"I hope to catch a scholarship somewhere, maybe a partial as a third goalie, it depends on what kind of year I have," he said.

Caesars goalie

Judging by his summer showing, Mitchell has already impressed some college coaches.

The 5-foot-11, 165-pound Mitchell, meanwhile, tries to keep improving, patterning himself after Red Wing netminder Tim Cheveldae.

"He stands up and tries to cut off the angles," said the Livonian. "I don't try to be flashy. I don't try to hot-dog it. That's not my style."

Mitchell admits hockey takes up most of his time.

"I like to fish and play tennis with some of my friends," he said. "But right now we're having tryouts for our Little Caesars team. We're going to a tournament in the middle of September in Toronto."

Hebestreit's stint in Europe a Dutch treat

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

soccer

David Hebestreit enjoyed his recent European stay so much, he's planning a return visit.

This time for good.

Hebestreit, a 1989 Livonia Churchill graduate, just returned from Amsterdam, Holland, where he played for FC Volendam, a Division II soccer club. Playing forward for the first time in his career, instead of his usual halfback position, Hebestreit was second on the team in scoring with 10 goals and nine assists.

Volendam finished 13-5-4 during an International Tournament Tour of five different countries, and Hebestreit played well enough to earn a professional contract offer from FC Brugge, a First Division team in Belgium.

Hebestreit said he could sign immediately and begin playing for Brugge in September, or he can wait and start a professional career with the team next year.

Hebestreit, who played in 1989 for Schoolcraft College, also has three years of college eligibility remaining and could decide to stay in the United States and play soccer and finish a degree. Whatever the case, he plans on playing professionally overseas sometime in the near future.

"IF I CAN get into a nice college I will stay here and try over there in a few years," said Hebestreit, who has been staying in shape since returning from overseas by playing with the Plymouth Football Club, including former Salem standouts Jeff Gold, MattGold, Matt Tudor and Greg Christiansen. "It's a goal of mine to make Europe my home and to play soccer there. I love seeing new things, meeting new people and playing soccer. It's the love of my life."

Money isn't the motive for Hebestreit, he said, since Brugge only offered 37,000 Belgium Franks a month ($1,200 in American money). One of the fringe benefits of living there, however, is he won't have to pay for housing.

One of the incentives Europe can offer on the field is an enthusiastic crowd.

"The difference between American soccer and foreign soccer is some games they have 15 to 20,000 people in the stands and it's overwhelming playing in front of that many," Hebestreit said.

The highlight of Hebestreit's season came against a Czechoslovakian team when he scored FC Volendam's only goals in a 2-1 win on the road. He is glad, also, to have switched to forward.

"I like to finish now," he said. "Being over in Europe playing is excellent, but to score two goals against another team is a rush. My knees got weak."

THE FC VOLENDAM team first heard about Hebestreit two years ago, when Hebestreit was named Most Valuable Player of the Michigan Gold during a European tour. Hebestreit was going to play for an Elite USA team this summer during the recent International Tournament Tour, but instead hooked up last spring with FC Volendam to get more exposure.

"It was a big decision on my part, whether I wanted to go with the U.S. team or get exposure and get to know the Dutch players and coaches better," he said. "I was the only American on the team and it was a lot of fun. With all the Dutch guys I had to conform and learn from them. They've played the game since they were two. They live for it."

Language isn't a barrier for Hebestreit since most of the people he met spoke English. He also enjoyed some of the comforts of home in the form of fast-food restaurants.

"They have McDonald's, Pizza Hut, Burger King — they're very Americanized," he said.

Burton Hollow prevails

swimming

Burton Hollow extended its reign in the Independent Summer Swim League by winning its fifth consecutive championship recently in the Plymouth Colony pool.

The defending champion so dominated the meet with 378 points the contest for second place was the only real issue to be decided.

Northville was runner-up in the five-team meet with a one-point edge over Fairway Farms, 252-251. Plymouth Colony finished with 243 points, Newburgh 63.

"We have a lot of year-round swimmers on the team, and that's basically what it is," said Jane Whitney, who co-coaches the Burton Hollow team with Mike Goeke, when asked about the club's continued success.

"One time this year a lot of our swimmers went to Cedar Point, and we lost a dual meet for the first time in five years. When we have all our people we're really strong."

Plymouth Colony, the team that defeated Burton Hollow in the dual, held the early lead Saturday, but Burton Hollow was ahead following the morning session with 183 points. Fairway Farms had 147, Northville 132 and Plymouth Colony 123.

"WE WERE losing for a while and were getting kinda worried," Whitney said "We had a lot of our younger swimmers in the easier freestyle and backstroke events. But we came through in the harder strokes (breast, fly and individual medley) because that's where we put more of our year-round swimmers."

Burton Hollow, which has won or shared the title nine times in the 15-year history of the ISSL, won 19 events, including six relays.

The champs had a trio of double winners in individual events. Anne Aristeo won the IM and butterfly in the girls 11-12 age group, Sarah Rieder the same events in girls 13-15 and Kevin Reinke the backstroke and IM in boys 11-12.

The 10-and-under girls division was one of Burton Hollow's strong suits. It had three winners in the age group with Kristin Derwich winning the backstroke, Julie Kern the breaststroke and Becky Peterson the butterfly.

Other gold-medal swimmers from Burton Hollow were Cassie Ehlendt, 8-under backstroke; Jill Knapp, 13-15 breast; Mike McCowan, 10-under breast; and Aaron Rieder, open back.

Jennifer, Dave and Lynn Knapp, Marti and Marla McKenzie and Tracey DeWitt also starred for Burton Hollow, according to Whitney. DeWitt had a "fantastic" swim with a second-place finish in the girls 10-under breaststroke.

The only other individual double winner was Steve Domin of Fairway Farms. He won the boys 10-under backstroke and butterfly.

MARY MOHACSI to the rescue! After hearing that an 88-year-old man was robbed of his car, clothes off his back and his bowling ball, the Livonia resident and proprietor of the "Right Approach" pro shop decided to replace his stolen equipment free of charge. This sort of news is welcome, to know that there is somebody who cares enough to do something for someone else who went through a bad time.

The "Right Approach" is located in the Merri-Bowl Lanes in Livonia.

The Bowling Centers Association is again sponsoring this promotion this month of bargain rates and some snacks at rolled-back prices for all bowlers. Most area bowling centers are participating.

When the BCA first tried this August promotion, they had a set schedule of prices and dates which each center went along with. Now, after several years of the promotion, it has been decided that the centers can each select their own dates and rates in keeping with their local demographics.

Call your favorite bowling center for times and dates of the "Good Old Days" promotion.

The Good Old Days" is an opportunity for families to come in and enjoy some very affordable good times. The regular bowlers can stop in and sharpen their old skills prior to the start of the season and others who have not been active in the sport can come in and give it a try.

This is also a good time to visit the bowling centers and find out what kind of leagues they offer, and which need bowlers.

• The Western-Wayne Youth Travel League will be holding a "Mini-Camp" for youngsters of prep age from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Aug. 17 and 18 at Town & Country Lanes on Wayne Road in Westland. The instruction and bowling are free for youth league bowlers.

The instruction will cover the basics of the game, such as stance, ball position and grip, the release, spare shooting and more. Registration for the Youth Travel League will also take place at Town & Country on the 18th, starting at 11 a.m.

This league bowls at 10 a.m. on Sundays, with the bowling held at the following lanes: Satellite Bowl (Dearborn Heights), Lodge Lanes (Belleville), Westland Bowl, Town & Country and Plaza Lanes (Plymouth).

For further information on the Mini Camp and the Western Wayne Youth Travel league, call Joyce Zelek (453-2388), Norm Kluska (522-1243) or Hal Winters (459-5380).

Youth bowlers who are ready to get into a competitive state of mind have a choice of three excellent travelling leagues within the area. Besides the Western-Wayne Youth Travel League, there is the Sunday Youth Classic, which bowl locally at Drakeshire Lanes (Farmington Hills), Novi Lanes, Country Lanes (Farmington Hills), Cherry Hill Lanes (Dearborn Heihgts).

They also start at 10 a.m. Sundays.

They are directed by Jim Lhamon (476-8815) and Ed Wright (477-5047). Call them for more information.

The oldest of the youth travelling leagues is the Cecil Ward League, which generally bowls at Bowl One (Troy), North Hill Lanes (Rochester), Astro Lanes (Madison Heights), Century Bowl (Pontiac), Cherry Hill North (Clarkston), West Bloomfield Lanes, among others.

The league usually starts at 1 p.m. Sundays, although times can vary.

For details on the Ward Travelling Classic, call Betty Helder (542-5690).

All three of these leagues are sanctioned by the YABA and the kids who have the ability usually graduate into the adult leagues and the classic leagues.

The youth leagues also do much for the social development of the kids as they learn to relate well in a highly competitive atmosphere.

• The Michigan BCA-YABA is announcing the scheduling of coach/instructor schools. They will conduct five separate schools around the state in August and September with the one in this area slated for Saturday, Aug. 24, at Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park.

Anyone interested in becoming an instructor for youth bowlers is invited.

The schools have been revamped by the YABA to include and update teaching techniques of the junior bowler. Dan Ottman, a Troy resident and all-star bowler, is with the local BCA office in Southfield. He and Sharon Schildroth of the Michigan state YABA are conducting these schools.

Cost of the class is $16. The classes are scheduled to run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

If you have any questions, feel free to call Dan Ottman at the association office (559-5207) in Southfield. If interested in the class, don't delay. Entries are limited to 64 people.

Savor the rewards of gardening

I'm feeling a little "deja vu" here as I sit and once again, ponder the abundance of zucchini and tomatoes overpowering my garden.

This year, because of composting all of last year's leaves, clippings and food waste, the garden has sprouted forth like never before, while the jar of Miracle Gro sits lonely and untouched on the garage she'f.

I really thought I had planned it a little differently this time. In addition to my over-sized plot of fresh herbs, a single tomato plant coupled with a single zucchini would suffice.

What I didn't plan for were the sprouting of virtually hundreds of pumpkin and spaghetti squash plants inadvertently tossed in the compost pile and tilled into the rich soil from last fall. On returning from a two-week vacation, I found my entire rear yard enmassed in diabolical looking fronds and blossoms. I pulled at least 60 or so plants and left but a few.

As of this writing, I already have pumpkins the size of three gallon stock pots, enough spaghetti squash to half fill a Michigan basement and yes, 5-foot tall tomato plants and zucchini that seems to grow virtually overnight.

As the pumpkins begin to turn a hazy orange and the spaghetti squash fatten with every morning shower, I focus most of my attention on the zucchini, tomatoes and fresh herbs.

This year I have discovered pesto. Having always been a fan of the basil, pine nut, garlic and oil concoction, this year's abundant basil crop has spurred me on to making pesto pasta sauces, not to mention canning herbaceous tomato sauces.

One of the best finds of the summer, however, was locating Alcamo's Market. This old time Italian market on Shaefer just south of Michigan Avenue in Dearborn stocks everything Italian. I could easily drop a paycheck picking up their outstanding imported Mozzarella (that tastes so good layered between thin slices of ripe tomatoes) and Prosciutto de Parma.

On hot summers eves, I wrap paper thin prosciutto around hunks of honeyrock melon with just a twist of cracked black pepper. The taste is nothing short of "dying and going to heaven."

This summer, the Janes Gang has enjoyed baby zucchini, zucchini blossoms dipped in tempura batter, zucchini bread, zucchini and potato pancakes and ratatouille up the kazoo. All this from just one plant.

Momma used to make a dish of sliced cucumbers with buttermilk, sour cream and dill that always tasted so good. I compromised and took some baby zucchini, sliced them as thin as Momma's cucumbers and did the same. Simply out of this world.

Next week, I get out the old Foley Food Mill and begin the annual Janes "puttin' up the salsa" week. About 5 pounds of onions, equal amounts of tomatoes and peppers, not to mention a basket of garlic gets simmered and jarred for those showy winters eves when you need a little warming up.

If you have a garden, no matter what size, and you still haven't discovered the joys of finding free pay dirt every spring, now is as good a time as any to begin composting. The library has loads of information, as do all the environmental chapters in the area.

This is my first year reaping the rewards of last year's leaves. And if my pumpkins, spaghetti squash, tomatoes, zucchini and herbs are any indication, you just can't beat what you make yourself!

Herbs and spices lend flavor and scent to bread recipes

By Marty Figley

Garden fresh herb bread surrounded by dill, sage, parsley, thyme, wheat flour and dry sprigs of wheat and rye.

JERRY ZOLYNSKY
staff photographer

BREAD! JUST the word suggests a picture of bread baking in the oven and the aroma wafting throughout the house! With herbs, fresh or dry in the mixture there is a provocative aroma, and the flavor is exquisite.

Bread has been a staple food for centuries; grains used for this purpose have been found dating back 25,000 years. Most every country has a bread suitable for their cuisine, culture and climate.

Wheat, rye, bran, buckwheat, rice, amaranth and others, or a combination of these grains, are used for bread-making. Whole-grain breads are gaining in popularity because they are healthy and give such unique texture and taste.

Of all the grains commonly used, wheat contains the highest amount of gluten (a protein) which, when mixed with water, forms an elastic network to help the dough rise. Many bakers prefer unbleached flour to bleached.

YEAST IS a key ingredient in bread-making and is activated when it is mixed with a sweetener such as sugar, honey or molasses. When it is then mixed with the flour a fermentation process begins.

It isn't clear whether the Chinese or the Egyptians first used yeast, but it is the most common leavening agent for bread. Others are eggs, baking powder, baking soda and starters. . . mixes that were kept for years by the homemaker for this purpose.

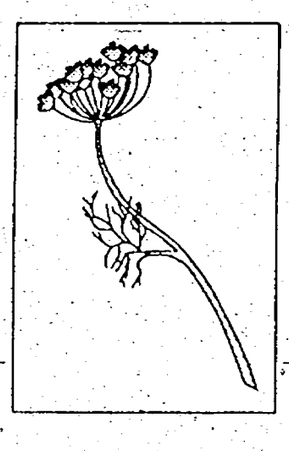
On the other hand, salt slows down this action. It also brings out the flavor of the bread. Fat, whether butter, lard, oil or margarine, or a combination, lubricates the gluten in the dough and facilitates rising. It also adds flavor, richness and tenderness. When milk (butter or sweet) is used, the loaf is softer than bread made without it.

Kneading develops the gluten and incorporates air into the dough, causing carbon dioxide to form. This makes the dough rise. After the first rising, it is sometimes necessary to punch the dough down to redistribute the yeast and let it work again before baking.

One grain, amaranth, is new to me. It is very high in protein and is available as an un-hulled whole-grain, a finely-ground flour and and in pasta. Substitute ¼ cup of this flour for all-purpose flour for a fresh and unusual flavor. Look for it in health food stores.

Just about anything can be added to bread dough. Fruits, nuts, meats, cheeses, vegetables and wine enhance the flavor, as do many herbs.

TRY ONE or more of the following: basil, chives, dill, garlic, marjoram, parsley, rosemary, saffron, sage, savory, tarragon or thyme. Herb seeds also add their special pizzaz. Anise, caraway, cumin, dill, fennel, poppy and sesame are possibilities. Ground spices such as cinnamon, nutmeg, and coriander also change the taste and are fun to try.



There is no set way to incorporate herbs into breads. Dried herbs can be mixed with the dry ingredients; fresh or dried herbs can be mixed with the liquid or infused in the oil before they are mixed with the dough.

Kneading herbs into the dough will also work. A pinwheel effect can be achieved by sprinkling them over the dough when it is flattened and rolled, before it is put into the pan.

As a general rule, use a tablespoon of dried herbs or ¼ cup of fresh for each loaf. Used alone or in combination with others, herbs can help you make a bread to suit your own palate.

Here are some combinations to get you started: equal parts sage (or garlic chips, oregano) and parmesan; equal parts basil and chives; one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg with a half tablespoon of thyme; or plain parsley added to the dough. . . all are good. A quarter cup of rosemary is also recommended.

BECKY, OF Becky's Oven in Royal Oak serves the wholesale and retail trade. She told me that when onions are put in bread a bit of garlic will sweeten the flavor. For two loaves, use less than ⅛ teaspoon garlic and ⅛ cup of dehydrated onion flakes, or ¼ cup fresh onion.

Dave Auer, of Baking by the Auers in Southfield (also wholesale and retail), uses only fresh herbs and ingredients. He makes bread using rosemary, basil and red and yellow peppers.

Jim Maier, Executive Chef, Henry Ford Museum, Greenfield Village, suggests sprinkling the herbs used in the bread on top of the loaf before baking. If the top is lightly brushed with water or egg and water, the herbs or seeds will adhere better. To add crunch to some breads, cornmeal is sprinkled on the bottom of the pan.

Breads can be made quickly using one bowl, or at a more leisurely pace (especially when yeast is used). Whether you begin with frozen dough or a box mix or start from scratch, experiment and enjoy. Bread making has been around for a long, long time, and many wonderful meals can be planned around this simple food.

Chill out with pasta

Sometimes Janet Bondar and Frank Blair get a little too involved in their work. The two are owners of Francois' Gourmet to Go in Farmington Hills.

What could be more "summer" than a refreshing plateful of chilled pasta salad?

"It's good, healthy food and fairly inexpensive," said Frank Blair, 30, who sings the praises of the versatile pasta salad.

Blair and his partner, 31-year-old Janet Bondar, operate a Farmington Hills restaurant called Francois' Gourmet To Go. The pair have made pasta salads the centerpiece of their summer lineup.

A PASTA salad can be made with any kind of noodle, cooked al dente — until it offers slight resistance to the bite. Once cooled, it can be garnished with carrot slivers or broccoli, olives, sweet onions or any desired vegetable. Toss in some diced meat, cheese or seafood, if you wish.

The crowning touch is a coat of glistening, zesty vinaigrette dressing. The result: an easy, tasty summer meal or tempting side dish.

Blair likes to combine fresh herbs and special ingredients such as pea pods and shiitake mushrooms, along with the pasta and dressing.

"People want something fresh and something different," Blair said.

Francois' Gourmet To Go, which opened almost 1½ years ago, is in Muirwood Square, at Grand River and Drake. Although there is seating for around 20 people, the bulk of the business is in carryouts.

BLAIR TAGGED his restaurant with the name Francois to reflect his upscale goals. Francois is the French equivalent for Frank.

Bondar, 31, of Farmington Hills, is a former banquet sales manager for a local hotel.

Blair is a former maitre 'd for several hotel dining rooms. He also worked as manager for a catering firm and prepared sauces at a local restaurant, now closed.

Blair's style is "fusion cooking," which he defines as blending regional spices and ingredients to create exciting new combinations.

"If something looks good and smells good, chances are it tastes good," Blair said.

The restaurant's popular shrimp salad Oriental combines linguini or angel hair pasta with cooked shrimp, pea pods, red onions, chunk pineapple, shiitake mushrooms, toasted almonds and baby corn ears.

The dressing is a spicy mixture of fresh ginger, garlic, teriyaki sauce, pepper, curry powder, lemon juice and oil.

Blair uses fresh pasta. He often mixes two kinds of oil for a richer blend. Potato salads are made with redskins. His Caesar pasta has sun-dried tomatoes, capers, red onions and parmesan cheese.

A NEW chilled bean salad, which provides protein and fiber, is a nutritional powerhouse.

"If you are taking the meat out, you have to put in some protein," Blair said. "That comes from the beans."

The salads range in price from around $3 to $3.75 for a half-order and from $5.50 to around $7 for a full order.

The restaurant features a number of other specialties, including several hot pasta dishes, grilled chicken, and spicy, blackened meat.

Catering also is available, and the restaurant has served a variety of functions, especially office parties and business meetings.

Francois' Gourmet To Go is in Muirwood Square, Grand River Ave. and Drake, Farmington Hills. Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Mon.-Sat., and 3 to 8 p.m., Sun. For information, call 471-6618.

DILLICIOUS BREAD IN A CASSEROLE

This light-textured bread is great to serve with a hearty soup. The "secret" ingredient is cottage cheese.

1 pkg. active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
1 cup creamed cottage cheese
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 tablespoon softened butter or margarine
2 teaspoons dried dill weed
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking soda
1 egg beaten
2 ¼ to 2 ½ cups all-purpose

Soften yeast in warm water. Heat cottage cheese to lukewarm and combine with yeast mixture. Add remaining ingredients, except flour, and blend together.

Add enough flour, in several additions, beating well after each, to form a stiff dough. Cover with buttered wax paper and a linen towel. Let rise in warm place (80-90 degrees) until light and double in size, about 50-60 minutes.

Stir down dough and turn into a well-buttered round ceramic or glass casserole (1 ½ - 2 qt. size). Cover and let rise again in a warm place until light, about 30-40 minutes.

Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 40-50 minutes until golden brown. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle lightly with salt. Remove from casserole and cool on rack. Serve warm. Makes one round loaf.

HERBED BREAD FROM A BOX

The herbs can be changed to suit your taste.

1 pkg. (13 ¾ oz.) hot roll mix
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon sage (or rosemary)
⅛ teaspoon thyme
⅛ teaspoon oregano (or marjoram)

Mix hot roll mix as directed on label, add seasonings with flour mixture. Cover with cloth and let rise in a warm place about 40 minutes or until doubled in size. Punch down and roll or pat into a 9 x 5 inch rectangle; place in a greased loaf pan 9x5x3 inches. Cover and let rise 30 minutes. Bake in 375 degree oven 35-40 minutes or until done. Remove from pan and cool on rack. Makes one loaf.

GARDEN-FRESH HERB BREAD

The combination of herbs inn this recipe can be changed to use herbs growing in your garden.

2 cups warm water
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon instant chicken boullion
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup oil
3 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh chives
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh dill
2 tablespoons parmesan cheese
3-3 ½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour

Combine first three ingredients and let set 3-5 minutes to activate yeast. Stir in the next four ingredients and beat well. Blend in the herbs and cheese. Gradually add the remaining flour; turn out on a floured board and knead until smooth. Place in a greased bowl, turning once to grease the top. Cover and let rise until double in bulk 45-60 minutes. Knead dough down in bowl and divide in half. Shape into loaves and put in 9 x 5 inch rectangle pans, or shape into balls and put into round pans (well-greased). Cover and let rise until almost doubled 30-45 minutes. Bake 350 degrees for 40-45 minutes. Cool on wire racks. Makes 2 loaves.

FRANCOIS' SUMMER BEAN SALAD

½ cup black beans
⅓ cup garbanzo beans
⅓ cup navy beans (Great Northern)
⅓ cup lentils
⅓ cup pinto or kidney beans

1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

Prepare beans. Heat to a boil and simmer 1-2 hours depending upon the beans. Rinse and reserve. Canned beans may be substituted to minimize preparation time. Don't cook all beans together because they have different cooking times. If canned beans are used, rinse them with cool water. In a large bowl combine beans, peppers, salt, pepper, garlic, dressing, onions, basil and vinegars. Garnish with more basil and serve over lettuce or as a cool side dish.

BASIL VINAIGRETTE

½ teaspoon garlic, minced
½ teaspoon shallots, chopped
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon fresh basil
salt to taste
½ teaspoon cracked black pepper
½ cup olive oil
½ cup salad oil

Combine first seven ingredients in mixing bowl. With whisk, mix vigorously. Slowly add oils to emulsify. Yield 1 cup.

SHRIMP SALAD ORIENTAL

½ cup pea pods
½ cup red onions, diced
½ cup chunk pineapple
½ cup shiitake mushrooms, cut in julienne strips
2 tablespoons toasted almonds
½ cup baby corn ears
½ pound pasta, cooked (linguini, angel hair or cellophane noodles)
½ cup oriental vinaigrette (see below)

Combine all ingredients in bowl. Chill and serve. Serves 4.

ORIENTAL VINAIGRETTE

1 teaspoon fresh ginger, chopped fine
1 teaspoon garlic, crushed
¼ cup teriyaki sauce
⅛ cup red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon fresh cilantro
dash cayenne pepper
dash white pepper
dash curry powder
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon sesame oil
1 cup salad oil

Combine first nine ingredients in a mixing bowl. Mix with whisk vigorously. Slowly add oils to emulsify or use food processor. Yield 1 ½ cups.

4 chile peppers, broiled
¼ teaspoon sea salt
1 pound tomatoes
½ cup chopped onion

Planets less visible this month

skywatch
Raymond E. Bullock

This month is going to be a slow month, astronomically speaking. Of the five naked-eye planets, only Saturn will be easy to see in the morning sky. Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter can be seen only with difficulty; they all appear close to the sun this month. The highlight will be the annual Perseid (PER se id) meteor shower.

The amount of sunlight we receive in August decreases by one hour and 16 minutes. On Aug. 1, the sun rose at 6:29 a.m. and set at 8:57 p.m. for a possible 14 hours and 28 minutes of sunlight. On Aug. 31 these times are 7:01 a.m. and 8:13 p.m., which permits 13 hours and 12 minutes of sun.

New Moon was at 10:28 p.m. on Aug. 9. The moon is located between the earth and the sun and is not visible.

One of the year's best meteor showers, the Perseids (PER see ids), reaches its peak on the mornings of Aug. 12 and 13. Meteor showers are named for the constellation from which they appear to radiate, in this case Perseus. The Perseid shower will be especially nice this year because there will be no moon in the sky scattering light. The darker the sky, the more meteors you can see.

Meteors are more commonly known as 'falling stars' because they look like little stars falling from the sky. Some American Indians thought they were stars running from danger. But they have nothing to do with stars; meteors are rocks falling out of the sky.

But in space there are rocks, stones, grains of dust, and other rubbish tumbling around. If one of these objects falls into our atmosphere it heats up because of friction, burns, and gives off light. A patient skywatcher can expect to see a few sporadic (occasional) meteors any clear night.

Many of these meteors are orbiting around the sun in well-defined orbits. They may be trailing along as the debris of a comet, or they may be the remains of a comet that disintegrated long ago. When the earth passes through the orbit of a meteor swarm, many more meteors than usual can be seen, and we can predict precisely when that will happen.

THE PERSEID swarm is one of the richest. A patient observer can expect to see an average of 50 meteors every hour, which is about one every minute. The best meteor display occurs between 2 a.m. and sunrise. Although Perseus is nearly overhead, the meteors can appear in any part of the sky. Their trails can be traced back to Perseus.

Meteors burn up about 20 miles above the surface of the earth, but if an exceptionally large meteor fails to burn completely, it could strike the earth and produce a crater. Most of Earth is covered with water, so any meteor impact is more likely to produce a big splash than a big crater. Is it possible to be hit by a meteor? The chances of that happening are "astronom-ical."

The bright star above and to the left of the moon on the evening of the 13th is Spica (SPY ka). This is the brightest star in the constellation of Virgo. Spica is about 275 light years away.

Notice the moon's position on the evening of the 14th. It is now below and to the left of Spica. The motion of the moon in just one day is very apparent when it passes a bright star or planet.

The moon is approaching the star Antares (an TAR ees) on the evening of the 17th. Antares is the bright orange-red star to the left of the moon. One night later the moon has passed Antares.

Jupiter is officially in conjunction with the sun on the 17th. It is located behind the sun, as seen from the earth, and is not visible. Late in the month it emerges into the morning sky.

MERCURY is at inferior conjunction with the sun on Aug. 21. It is located between the earth and the sun. On the next day, Venus is at inferior conjunction. Don't worry about collisions occurring during all these conjunctions; the planets are millions of kilometers apart.

You can use the moon on the evening of the 22nd to locate Saturn. Saturn is two degrees to the south (right) of the moon. Saturn's beautiful ring system is easily visible through a small telescope.

Full Moon occurs at 5:07 a.m. on Aug. 25. The moon is fully lighted by the sun and will set in the southwest as the sun rises in the northeast. On the evening of the 25th the moon will rise in the southeast as the sun sets in the southwest. It will rise in the early twilight during the next three nights as well, resulting in the "Harvest Moon" effect that occurs next month.

The Perseid shower will be especially nice this year because there will be no moon in the sky scattering light. The darker the sky, the more meteors you can see.

Mercury, Venus and Jupiter are officially morning objects by the end of the month, but they are very close to the horizon and will be difficult to see. You might want to use binoculars and give it a try. Look toward the east northeast, about 30 minutes before sunrise on the 29th. Venus will be six degrees to the left of due east, just barely clearing the horizon. Mercury will be four degrees to the left of Venus and four degrees above the horizon. Jupiter will be four degrees to the left of Mercury, but only two degrees above the horizon. You have to have a clear, unobstructed horizon to have any hope of seeing these three planets. (A spectacular grouping will occur on September 10.)

The moon is back in Taurus on the evening of the 31st.
Look toward the east northeast around 11:45 p.m. and you'll see the Pleiades rising above the nearly last quarter moon.

Giddyap, city slickers, dude the ranch thing

Area residents saddle up in Wyoming

Julie Candler of Birmingham joined other local travelers recently in Laramie, Wyoming.

By Julie Candler
special writer

You may be met by Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid if you visit the Wyoming dude ranch known as the Vee Bar. The sturdy pair of Belgian horses will provide an old-fashioned Western-style welcome by hauling a hay wagon to meet the train from Laramie.

The railroad line is the Wyoming/Colorado, built in 1887 to run to the tiny gold-mining town of Centennial, just a couple of miles beyond the Vee Bar.

As our group leaves the train and climbs aboard the wagon where baled hay perfumes the air, we are greeted by a handsome man in a cowboy hat. He is Duane Harm, formerly seen in Michigan doing commentaries on WJRT-TV in Flint, which he managed in the mid-'60s.

After Harm signals a giddyap to Butch and Sundance, the two horses bounce us through tall yellow prairie grass. We clomp across lands where the Sioux and Cheyenne once rode, near a marker that says, "Overland Trail, 1862-1868."

A CAREFUL observer sees ruts left by pioneer wagon wheels. Everywhere we look, the horizon is lined with mountain ranges. If we watch closely, we can see antelope, deer and elk on nearby hills.

Butch and Sundance slow to cross a narrow wooden bridge. The rippling, rock-bottomed river below us is the Little Laramie, well-known to local trout fishermen. Just beyond, a huge log structure is the barn where horses were stabled when the Vee Bar was a stage coach stop. Alongside is a corral filled with beautiful saddle horses.

After a turn, we see the lodge, built 114 years ago and once a guest house for weary overland travelers. Inside, the walls seem to emit the ghostly figures of hardy homesteaders and settlers who once stayed here.

Harm retired last year from a career in TV management and bought the 870-acre Vee Bar. He and his partner, wife Susan, turned it into a dude ranch because "we wanted to be with people, as well as horses."

Duane and Susan Harm turned the Vee Bar in Laramie, Wyo., into a dude ranch.

Now people come to ride horseback over 26,000 acres of plains and mountain trails. They also fish, hike, eat good food, shoot trap, go tubing on the river, play horseshoes and volleyball.

THE HARMS have renovated the lodge and added a roomy area where people can relax, around a big stone fireplace. Susan used her talent as a professional decorator to add color and coziness to the three cabins and 10 guest rooms, each with a bath.

Among recent guests in these rooms were sportscaster Curt Gowdy, his wife and daughter. Wyoming Governor Michael Sullivan stopped by the Vee Bar recently for a quiet getaway. Vicki Lange of Birmingham and Dutton Morehouse of Bingham Farms are here for a tour and outdoor barbecue with our group.

In winter, skiers using the nearby Snowy Range's 23 runs stay at the Vee Bar. Corporations and groups move in for secluded seminars and conferences.

But the Vee Bar's biggest attraction is 30 beautiful riding horses. "We work hard to pick the right horses," says Harm. "We look for gentle, well-trained horses that know how to be ridden."

Horseback riding and all other ranch activities, plus three meals a day, are included in the Vee Bar's daily rates ranging from $95 a day for one person to $432 for five people.

IF YOU come to the Vee Bar for a week, your riding skills will be assessed and a horse that suits you (with Western saddle) will be yours for your entire stay. You and your horse can go on breakfast, lunch or dinner rides, where guides stop along the trail and prepare food flavored by delicious mountain air. Or you can choose to ride to a picturesque spot in the hills for tenting overnight.

Guests say they prefer the down-to-earth atmosphere at the Vee Bar to what they call "yuppie ranches" with condos and golf courses. Other dude ranches in the area are also serious about horseback riding and outdoor living.

Contact Vee Bar Guest Ranch, on Highway 287, 27 miles south of Laramie, by calling (307) 742-6072. Contact Laramie Area Chamber of Commerce, 800 S. Third St., Ste 200, Laramie, Wyo. 82070 or telephone toll-free (800) 445-5305.

3 Michigan travelers reach mountain top

Three Michigan travelers climbed the three miles from Lake Marie, at 10,000 feet elevation, to the highest peak in the Medicine Bow National Forest, at 12,013 feet, for a great mountain-top view of Laramie. In the group with writer Julie Candler of Birmingham was Vicki Lange of Birmingham and Dutton Morehouse of Bingham Farms.

About two miles up, the trail turned into piles of huge boulders to scramble up. Leading the group on was Shirley Nielsen, an experienced climber. Another seasoned mountain person, Sandra Rardin, was assigned to the rear, to help the stragglers.

"I seldom saw Shirley," Candler said. "I nearly caught up to her when she stopped for a breather once, but then she moved ahead. But I saw a lot of Sandra. I kept asking her, 'Are we almost there?"

"With lungs that wouldn't adjust to the altitude, I was the last of the group to huff and puff to the top. Without the helping hands of Sandra and another veteran climber named Dick Reddeck who carried my pack, I never would have made it. The view from the top was worth the struggle."

Birmingham writer Julie Candler catches her breath on the mountain top looking down on Mirror Lake.
