Victim believes rapist followed her from tavern

It's been more than 15 months since she was raped at knifepoint in a Livonia basement apartment.

Even as the horrible memorles of June 14, 1990, begin their inevitable, slow fade, a former Livonia woman, her family and Livonia police detectives won't give up hope that justice will be done - that the still at-large suspect will be successfully prosecuted.

They want it for themselves. And so others won't face the same night-

Westland minister Michael Enersen and his wife, Carol, could lose their four youngest children under a ruling Tuesday that made the youngsters temporary wards of juvenile court.

However, the admitted child abusers will retain custody of the children until Juvenile Judge Charles McDonald decides Nov. 22 whether the youngsters - a 3-yearold boy and three girls ages 10, 6 and 1 - should be removed from their

The Enersens already lost custody of two older children - a 16-yearold girl and a 14-year-old boy born to Michael Enersen during a previous marriage. Authorities removed the children from their home amid charges they received human bite marks and had been severely beaten with an oak paddle.

The latest developments in the Enersen saga emerged as attorneys reached a plea agreement averting a trial - set to begin Tuesday - to determine whether the Enersen children should become wards of the

Teacher hiring debate continues

By Darrell Clem staff writer

A continuing dispute over accusations that some Wayne-Westland school board members have overstepped their policy-setting duties resurfaced Monday night — the third such debate in a month.

Westland resident Val Wolf criticized earlier statements by board members Andrew Spisak, Leonard Posey and Kathleen Chorbagian all of whom have indicated the board should ease its grip on Superintendent Dennis O'Neill's administration in such matters as choosing new teachers.

Some board members, particularly Laurel Baisanen and Fred Warmbier, have raised repeated questions about the hiring of additional teachers who started their jobs before O'Neill's administration sought board approval for their contracts. The practice has come under criticism, though administrators described it as routine across the state. --On Monday, Wolf asked the board to scrutinize the policy. The board's routine approval of teachers recommended by O'Neill's staff has reinforced the belief among some district residents that the board is "a rubber stamp" for the administration, Wolf said.

Moreover, district residents have been given "good reason" to question the board because of recent comments by Spisak, Posey and Chorbagian - who have urged other board members to remember their policysetting duties and avoid delving into administrative functions, she said.

Student math skills to face more rigorous test

By Marie Chestney

Math scores on state tests are expected to plunge this year as students statewide sit down to take an entirely new math test.

The new test emphasizes not only computing skills but analytical reasoning, a higher order of thinking that will be more challenging to students.

Starting this week and continuing through mid-October, fourth, seventh and 10th graders in the Wayne-Westland district, which serves most of the city of Westland, and the Livonia district, which covers the northern section of the community, will be tackling the tougher Michigan Educational Assessment Program mathematics test.

THE NEW TEST will test students' ability to do the problemsolving and analytical work increasingly needed in the modern workplace. 👌 🗡 leaders outlined the administration's strategy in helping students with the new math test, including providing calculators for those in the previous grades.

There will also be more parent involvement and meetings of key math teachers.

"The basic mathematics skills are still being tested, but the ability to choose which strategy is needed to solve a problem is being stressed," said Adele Sobania, Livonia district math coordinator. Carole Samples, assistant super intendent for instruction, said the new test will challenge both students and educators to come to terms with an increasingly technological society.

"The workplace of the future will require workers to have more problem-solving and analytical skills than were needed in the past," Samples said. "Our curriculum is changing to meet these de-

On a late spring Thursday, with plenty of daylight left, she had been home from work less than 15 minutes, the victim said. She was already thinking about driving to the Westland sports bar where she and a group of 10-15 friends had been gathering to watch Detroit Pistons playoff games when she was interrupted by a knock at the side door. ...

Something about car trouble, the man said quickly, before forcing his way inside the home, threatening her with a six-inch knife.

Once inside, he ordered her to disrobe and then carefully, meticulously removed his own clothes - including his black tennis shoes - before assaulting her, the victim said.

"He said he had no other way to meet women.

"It was like if he was so nice about things, maybe he'd figure I felt sorry for him and wouldn't report it."

Following the attack, the man asked her what was the best way out... of the house and fled in an unknown direction, possibly on foot or to a carparked some distance away. Police canvassed the neighborhood and found no suspicious cars in the area.

THE ATTACKER was described as a white male, believed to be in his late 20s, 5 feet 6 inches tall and 160 pounds, with short, brown hair.

wanting more information about teachers before they're hired.

Ms, Ralsanen is asking some very viable questions," Wolf said. Earlier, she said, "Maybe it's not a bad idea do check into some of these (teachers) - for your own satisfaction if iothing else." Board members' roles have been ebated since Ralsanen, Warmbler ind newcomer Vicki Welty were elected in June, defeating three in-cumbents. Chorbagian has suggested a special session to discuss the separate roles of board members, who set policies, and O'Neill's administration, which is charged with implementing those policies.

In electing the three new members, Wolf said, "The district (residents) obviously were saying, 'We need some changes. We need some information. We want to know what's going on.' " school board. I do not believe that this is a divided school board," she said. "I believe that - for the first time in a long time - we have an independent board."

And she countered claims that new board members don't understand their responsibilities.

ANOTHER DISTRICT resident, Patricia Ducher, encouraged board members to respect the diverse opinions on the board.

"I think the main thing this district needs right now is respect for each other," Ducher said.

Another resident, Cathy Keyes, "I do not believe that this is a bad however, asked the board to try to resolve problems that result in meetings that go "on and on and on."

Keyes said the lengthy board meetings make it difficult for people who want to attend, but who must pay a babysitter for the long hours.

Even though the board voted unanimously Monday to hire 13 more teachers, the issue of expanding the teacher workforce - now at 915 teachers — arose.

"I don't think we want to see how much money we can spend if we're not getting comparable results," Warmbier said.

Raisanen reiterated her concerns that "we should look at all avenues of expenses," including the hiring of teachers.

Spisak urged board members to "listen to the people who are on the cutting edge (of education) - our teachers, our administrators."

Posey, meanwhile, proposed a study session to discuss staffing. In such a session, he said, board members could ask "the school administrators of the district to come in and justify their numbers."

Charles Haggerty spent two years in a coma after he suffered a stroke. His family never thought he'd live.

Nine years later, the 58-year-old Westland man remains paralyzed except for slight movement of his head and his right foot.

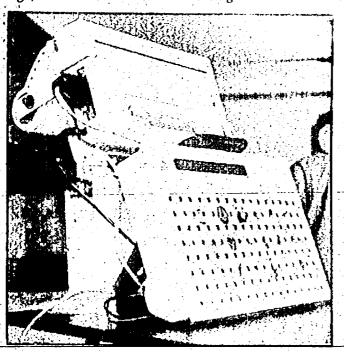

Not one to give up easily, Haggerty has learned to turn his television on and off, adjust his bed, write letters and even speak in small phrases by using his big toe to press a lever that operates a portable computer.

His ability to communicate has brought him out of a world of isolation. His grandchildren, he said, "are not afraid of me anymore.'

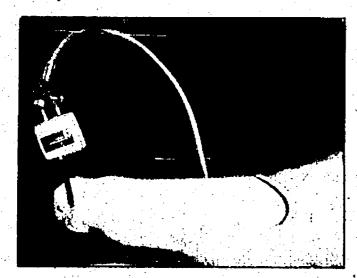

His wife, JoeAnn, says he's become rather outspoken lately. They can joke now about Haggerty's decision to grow a beard and a mustache. "I told him I don't want him growing a ponytail and wearing an earring," she said, laughing.

- Haggerty began using his special computer 11/2 years ago, when he still lived in a nursing home To "

Westhoff, married with three children, had always wanted to care for a patient in her home.

HAGGERTY'S WIFE - too frail to care for him alone - lives near Westhoff, as do other family members such as their daughter, Dina. They visit often.

"His mind's just as sharp as ours - probably sharp er," the daughter said. "For a long time we didn't think he could communicate. At least this way we know each other."

Haggerty has received much support from his family, Westhoff and a Bingham Farms based company, Rehabilitation Network, which has provided therapy and helped him find the portable computer to suit his needs. A 20-year veteran of the Air Force and Navy, Haggerty received much of the money he needed for the equipment from the Veterans Administration, which also pays his nurse's salary.

Haggerty, who has five grown children and six grandchildren, keeps busy, despite his handicap.

"He's so happy to be able to turn his TV channels. He loves the (Detroit) Tigers. He's a real baseball fan. And he loves to watch the Lions play football," Westhoff

With a printer attached to his computer, Haggerty spends much time writing letters to his family members. Flashing red lights on his computer screen light up letters and symbols, and Haggerty simply moves his big toe to press the lever and activate the computer.

THE COMPUTER also stores short phrases that the system spouts out in a computerized voice. "How are you?" it said during a visit from Haggerty's wife. "How are the grandkids?"

In another method of communication, Haggerty rolls his eyes upward if he wants to answer "yes" to a question, and downward if his response is "no."

In yet another method, Haggerty moves his big toe as family members call out letters of the alphabet. When he signals with his toe, they write down the letters to

No more feelings of isolation. No time for self-pity.

Professionals, equipment help stroke patient manage recovery

Charles Haggerty has a lot of help professional and technical - behind him since he suffered a paralyzing stroke eight years ago.

"That help is provided by Rehabilitation Network, Inc., based in a Bingham Farms office building.

The private organization makes sure Haggerty (see related story above) has the equipment and emotional support he needs.

One example of the high-tech equipment Haggerty uses is a light talker, which he received in the spring of 1990 to help him communicate with others.

"The light talker is an electronic device that allows Haggerty to communicate by activating a switch with his right toe," said Eileen Souliere, Rahabilitation Network spokeswom-

In the past six months, she has helped Haggerty sit in a wheelchair and move his from left to right.

She also makes recommendations for Haggerty to receive an environmental control unit, similar to a TV remote control which will_enable him to control his bed, TV, radio, and lights as well as talk on a telephone and call for assistance. That plece of equipment costs more than $4,000.

state. The Enersens admitted again Tuesday that the two older children had been bitten and paddled.

As he left the courtroom, Enersen commented briefly on McDonald's ruling. "I'm not pleased," he said, "but it doesn't really matter. Everything's been done."

EARLIER, BEFORE entering the court; Enersen appeared dismayed by the extensive court proceedings that began after two of his children fled their home March 11 and sought help from a former church member, who contacted Westland police.

"I'm just following instructions. I'm just going along with the plan," Enersen said.

Even though the Enersens pleaded guilty to child abuse during earlier criminal proceedings in Detroit Recorder's Court, Enersen has described the events as a conspiracy of sorts and implored his mostly loyal congregation in May to 'pray for those who hate us.".

On Tuesday, the two older children, accompanied by a foster par-came to court ready to testify against their parents.

"The longer I sit here, the more I want to testify," the 14-year-old boy said, sitting in the courtroom. "I'vebeen through it before, and I didn't die."

THE 16-YEAR-OLD girl, who also indicated she wanted to speak out, later wiped tears from her eyes as she sat outside the courtroom.

The children weren't called to testify because juvenile defender Rosemary Chase and defense attorney David Kaliman reached a plea agreement after conferring for more than 30 minutes.

Under the agreement, the Enersens admitted that they caused human bite marks and bruises on the older children. The agreement also referred to bruises on the 10-yearold's buttocks and the 6-year-old's lower back.

Carol Enersen admitted that she "forcefully hit and slapped" the two older children's heads "since early childhood." The Enersens told Judge McDonald that they understood their ent and their maternal grandmother, admission of guilt could result in their parental rights being terminated for all their children.

McDonald ordered the Department of Social Services to continue making "spot checks" at the Enersen residence until he issues his ruling Nov. 22. He also called for the children to undergo psychiatric evalua-

LARRY LEWIS, an attorney general's office representative for DSS, told the judge that DSS officials believe the four younger children are not at risk of being harmed by their parents.

We feel that adequate safeguards are in place to protect their safety," he said Tuesday.

In August, McDonald denied an emergency motion by Chase, the juvenile defender, to remove the four children from their home pending a decision on long-term custody rights. Chase said she feared the children would be abused.

After McDonald denied the motion, Chase had asked him to withdraw from the case - a move that the judge also rejected.

Ford wants more money for local school programs

staff writer

When it comes to education, one local congressman believes it's time for President Bush to get down from the pulpit and start passing around the collection

Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, is calling on the president to use more federal money to support local school programs.

"This administration has a habit of preaching from the pulpit without supporting the money that would make education changes a reality," Ford said.

The 26-year congressional yeteran is chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor. In that role, Ford said he'll press for more money for Head Start programs, as well as more money for higher education loans.

"We've only funded Head Startfor 40 percent of the people we've identified in need," Ford said, referring to the federal program for disadvantaged preschool young-

Ford and Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass, are working on legislation that would make Head Start an entitlement, available to all children for whom it's deemed necessary.

"THIS WOULD assure funding, rather than leaving it at the mercy of the appropriations process,' Ford said. "In Ypsilanti, we've been conducting the largest dropout study ever and we've learned that you don't address the problem has a habit of preaching from the pulpit without supporting the money that would make education changes a reality."

This administration

- Rep. William Ford

in high school, you address it in preschool."

Though Bush recently called on parents to improve their children's education by spending more time with them, Ford said that approach doesn't go far enough.

"Saying parents could do more flies in the face of what's going on in the real world," he said. "For many kids, there are no parents there.'

One recent study indicates that as many as one-fifth of all Ameri--can school children come home to an empty house, Ending a Reagan-era cap on higher education loans is another goal, Ford said.

"RIGHT NOW, we're looking at a family cap of $32,000, but that means parents are going to have to dip into their own pockets and if you're a working family you're going to be pressed."

This is Ford's second year as education and labor committee chairman. Action on appropriation bills for elementary and secondary education, as well as higher education, is likely this fall, Ford said, although the bills might not reach the president's desk until early next year. In last year's session, the committee saw several major education measures become law.

The National Literacy Act created a national institute to assist government and private efforts to boost reading skills. The National Education Council Act created a national council for education standards and testing, and authorized a federal study into lengthening the school year.

Tax shift approved

Most suburban senators oppose plan

By Tim Richard staff writer

A school property tax sharing bill is on its way to Gov. John Engler's desk amid predictions that signing it will seal his political doom.

"It dooms the present governor if he signs it," said Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills. "He has turned on the people (suburbanites) who supported him.

'All these are conservative people. They can't believe this is a Republican tax plan," said Faxon, whose home school district will send $5.45 million of commercial and industrial property taxes across the state this year,

Added Senate Democratic leader Art Miller, whose Warren based district would be another major loser: "Once parents and taxpayers see their dollars flowing out, I predict you will hear a loud roar of protest. The people pushing this idea willfind themselves running for cover." Engler intends to sign it.

THE SENATE Tuesday gave final 22-16 approval to a conference report passed last week by the House:

The law requires growth areas to share half the gain in their commercial and industrial tax bases with poorer districts in effort to reduce_ the gap in per-pupil spending.

Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld ruled the measure didn't require a two-thirds vote (26 senators) to give it immediate effect because it got that amount when first passed July 11.

Voting yes were 11 Republicans and 11 Democrats, including William Faust, D-Westland.

Opposed were nine Republicans and seven Democrats, including Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham, Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, Faxon, Robert Geake, R. Northville, George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, and David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield.

AMONG THE top 59 losing school districts statewide are Avondale, Birmingham, Farmington, Rochester, Southfield, Troy, Walled Lake and West Bloomfield in Oakland County, and Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, and South Redford in Wayne

Bloomfield Hills, one of the state's richest districts, would lose an Insignificant $4,000 because its base is largely residential with little business growth anticipated.

SUPPORTERS knew they had the votes. They offered little defense as suburban senators denounced the law as "a reshuffle," "tax base stealing," "a scam" (Miller), "hijacking" (Bouchard), "legal robbery" (Faxon), "more central planning" (Doug Carl, R-Utica) and "a tinge of socialism" (Gil DiNello, D-East Detroit).

House Bill 4267 was sponsored by Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City, who sees it as a small step in the right direction.

Only about $27 million will flow out in each of the first two years, according to a House Taxation Committee staff analysis - about onethird of 1 percent of the $7.5 billion Michiganians spend on schools annu-

"We're bringing down the top districts and bringing up the lower districts," said Bouchard of Birming.

Faxon agreed: "It's going to take a lot from a few (districts) and give a little to a few (districts)."

They were joined "on principle" by Sen. Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, whose 20 school districts in four counties would be gainers. "Why is it fair for someone in Midland or Monroe to work hard and expand the (local) tax base and send it to Ionia or Barry County?" Welborn said.

THE BILL'S Senate sponsor, Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, offered a brief counter-argument.

"It begins to address the gap (in spending per pupil between poor and rich districts). No one district will have less money than the year before," said DeGrow, arguing that only half of business tax growth would be shared.

The blow is softened a little by the fact-that sharing districts will get back some of their previously lost $72 million in categorical aid (such as special ed and transportation).

From pre-retirement planning to starting your own business, a number of continuing education programs are being offered in October through the Schoolcraft College continuing education services department.

Programs include:

Residents named to planning board-

Abe Munfakh, a Plymouth Township trustee, and John Stock of Livonia were among eight people recently appointed to the Wayne County Planning Commission.

Commission members review plans for county-owned land and buildings. They also serve as an advisory board on township zoning and master plans and assist local governments in applying for federal grants. Commission members also represent the county in regional planning activities conducted by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

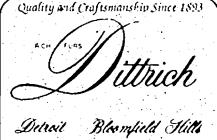

Appointments were made by Wayne County Commissioner Susan Hubbard, chairwoman of the commission's legislative research committee.

S'craft business center gets grant

The Schoolcraft College Business Development Center has been awarded a $77,500 federal grant for 1991-92, it was recently announced.

The six-year-old center assists. area businesses in securing government contracts. Staff members help businesses find government contracts up for bid.

The grant was secured through the office of U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth.

Churches, schools join together to assist youth

WTVS Channel 56, in cooperation with area youth service agencies, religious institutions, educational organizations and media, will launch Öctober as City for Youth Month.

Throughout the month, the community partnership will conduct view-and-talk groups and pulpit exchanges to rally the public as advocates of youth.

This weekend's activities include pulpit announcements about the City for Youth community network in more than 100 religious institutions including Our Lady of Good Counsel Roman Catholic Church in Plymouth, Redford United, Methodist Church in Detroit and St. Agatha Roman Catholic Church in Redford

The centerplece of the City for Youth project is a series of three documentaries and a special edition of WTVS's "Club Connect," scheduled to air four times weekly on WTVS and once a week on the network-affiliated commercial stations. More than a camera's observation of young people in crisis, the shows are designed to challenge the community to take action.

The programs were produced by WTVS Channel 56 in association with a metro Detroit coalition of WJBK-TV 2. WDIV-TV Channel 4. WXYZ-TV Channel 7 and WKBD Fox 50.

In addition to providing production facilities, the TV stations will broadcast promotion and editorial spots and a special will be simulcast by one of the commercial TV stations each week. All the stations, including WXON-TV 20, will simulcast. a "City for Youth Summit Meeting: at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 29.

Focused on the real life stories of area young people who overcome devastating odds, each of the four programs looks at the positive resources already in place for teenagers and young adults.

The television schedule includes:

• "Psalm For the City," profiles four youths who have persevered through adversity with the help of people and programs. The documentary will be aired at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on Channel 56 and simulcast at 7:30 p.m. Monday with WJBK TV 2. It will be rebroadcast at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 1 and

• "The Second Chance Gang" is composed of a group of four Detroit area young men and women who are attempting to turn their energy and talent into new productive lives. The documentary will be aired at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 56 Sunday, Oct. 6. It will be simulcast at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, on WKBD Fox 50 and WTVS Channel 56. It will be rebroadcast at 7:30 p.m, Tuesday, Oct. 8, and 7:30 p.m. Oct. 9 on Channel 56.

• "Connecting to Life: a Club Connect City For Youth Special," will be alred at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 13. It will be simulcast at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 14, on WXY2-TV Channel 7 and Channel 56. It will be rebroadcast at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 15, and Wednesday, Oct. 16. The program will explore ways teens can stop confrontations before they become violent.

• "A Time to Build" attempts to promote understanding of interracial relationships and discourage the development of stereotypes at a young age. It records a diary of an exchange between Bingham Farms Elementary School in Birmingham and Newberry Elementary School In Detroit. It will be aired at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 20, on Channel 56. It will be simulcast on Channel 4 and Channel 56. It will be shown again at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 22, and Wednesday, Oct. 23, on Channel 56.

The multiple broadcasts allow for meetings of view-and-talk groups in more than 100 sites in the metro area, including the Dashairya Foundation, 38219 Ford Road, Westland; Gibson School for the Gifted, 12925 Fenton, Redford Township; St. Agatha Church, 19750 Beech Daly, Redford Township; and the Livonia Family YMCA, 14255 Stark, Livonia.

New county group seeks to unite child programs

staff writer

A new Wayne County child care program could mean more money - public and private - for at-risk youngsters in western Wayne communitles.

The Children & Youth Initiative announced its strategic plan for 1991-94 Monday. The group is a coalition of some 300 county service organizations banding together at a time when state money for social service programs is shrinking.

CYI members said they not only seek to compete for dwindling state dollars, but also to tap into private sector sources.

In addition to keeping current programs alive, members also seek to create programs for children not served by current child care ser-

The new agency won't replace existing agencies. Instead, it will help bring them together for common projects.

"WE'RE NOT a formal organization, we're an idea," CYI president Michael Lott said.

Money will be sought from state government as well as private ing one need at a time. charitable organizations. Contributions will be spread on a proportional basis among urban and suburban programs.

That is good news for agencles serving western Wayne County, according to the director of an area child shelter.

"For the first time, there's going to be a specific breakout for outcounty programs," said Oulda Cash, executive director of Youth Living Centers. "In the past we've tended to be washed over because the need is so great in Detroit."

Nearly two in every five Wayne County youngsters live in poverty according to some estimates, though needy children won't be the only ones served by CYI programs.

Members seek to build ties and improve communication between public and private child care agencies. CYI seeks to become an information clearinghouse for Wayne County child care agencies.

A major goal is to develop "single point" entry into the child care. system. The object is to steer at risk youngsters and families into a variety of programs designed to meet their needs, rather than serv-

Other goals include providing more in-home services to minority youngsters, increasing out-of-hospital health and mental health programs for girls.

BOLSTERED BY a Skillman Foundation grant, the group grew out of a task force that began meeting in November 1987. More than $1 million has been secured to date for CYI projects, members said.

'In addition to the Skillman Foundation grant, the group has received money from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the Michigan Department of Social Services.

CYI has also received support from the Junior League of Detroit and Detroit Department of Employment and Training Projects already under consideration include "safe houses" in Detroit and Ecorse. Safe houses would provide a variety of services for youngsters 10-14, members said, they would be placed near middle schools in neighborhoods decimated by the Illegal drug trade.

FOOD LOVER'S DIET

To introduce a new approach to dieting, free diet pills were given to 50 people. With The Omicron Diet, one man lost 14 pounds in 5 days and one woman lost 18 pounds in 10 days. The average weight loss was over a pound a day for women and over 2 pounds a day for men. The Omicron Diet is a revolutionary new concept for unbelievably fast weight loss developed and clinically proven by National Dietary Research of Washington, D.C. This significant breakthrough in metabolic weight control was made possible by the utilization of biological information overlooked by other diet programs. With a formulation of natural enzymes along with real food, you shed unwanted pounds extremely rapidly and safely.

Maintain your new weight forever without dleting!!!!!

With the special enzyme formula Metabolase, it is now possible to reduce your usual weight by up to 10% or to maintain the weight loss after dieting, without changing your normal lifestyle or eating habits. Available through physicians since 1982, the enzyme formula is now available in pharmacles without a prescription. ### On kidney board

EVIN FURLONG has been elected for a two-year term to the board of trustees of the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan. Furlong is an accountant at Milan-Brody Co. Inc. and a real estate developer in Detroit. He is a volunteer with several foundation projects, including the annual Pro-Am Golf benefit in Milford. As a trustee he will help direct the foundation in areas of program development, financial management and educational projects.

About warranties

RAD SUMMERS of Summers Dealer Services in western Wayne County recently presented a workshop on "Ford Warranty Claims" at Northwood Institute in Midland.

The Livonia businessman's presentation was part of a series of warranty administration workshops offered by Northwood at its National Association of Auto Dealers automotive education center.

The workshops are designed for people who want to become more proficient in recovering warranty payments.

Homecoming hype in swing at John Glenn

John Glenn High School is celebrating its annual homecoming week now through Saturday.

It will climax Saturday night with a dance at the school gym.

The annual series of events began Monday with students dressed as Disney characters and the introduction of the five girls who are homecoming queen candidates.

There was a hot hat and class competition on Tuesday, twin day (with friends dressing alike) and queen election on Wednesday, college day (with students wearing their favorite college logo) on Thursday and pep assembly and parade on Friday, followed by the game with Plymouth Salem at 7:30 p.m.

Parade marchers will assembly at 5:45 p.m. at the Wayne Road-Cherry Hill Kmart parking lot with the event to start at 6:30 p.m.

Theme of the dance, to be held 7-9:30 p.m. Saturday in the school gym, is "Under the Sea."

The five homecoming queen candidates are:

• Shannon Apsley, daughter of Paul and Patricia Apsley, senior class vice president, French Club vice president and varsity cheerleading squad member.

• Camara Clark, daughter of Brenda Clark, winner of an academic letter and a varsity letter in

• Carrie Mijal, daughter of Gerald and Kathleen Mijal, senior class president, JV cheerleading squad captain last year and a co-op student.

Nicole Nagel, daughter of David and Kathy Nagel, student council secretary, National Honor Society member and member of the softball and volleyball teams.

Michelle Neumann, daughter of Pamela Neumann and Michael Neumann.

Help us make steps in the fight against SIDS

If you knew a healthy, happy baby had died suddenly without reason, you'd want to help. There are over 7,000 babies who die from a cruel, mysterious killer. It's called SIDS: Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Perhaps you've heard SIDS referred to as 'Crib Death.' But maybe you didn't hear that SIDS is the number one cause of death in infants from one week to one year.

babies of all races and religions. And it's not hereditary.

Donations of your time and dollars will make a difference. And we can make bigger steps to fighting SIDS.

Abbott selection

Cable-TV choice: top rated

HE WESTLAND City Council and administration last week fine-tuned their cable-TV government programming strategy and approved the selection of Dianne Abbott and her new firm to provide local cable shows on Channel 8.

If this were a TV review, the action of city officials would get the highest possible rating.

There are plenty of reasons City Hall is enthused about the selection of Abbott and her

One is that she is a refreshing change from her predecessor, Dennis Fassett, who alienated the cable commission, the mayor's office and Continental Cablevision.

Whether the criticism of Fassett, whose contract failed to be renewed earlier this year, was fair is no longer an issue.

The key factor is that Abbott has a different management style. She is obviously a problem-

She has plenty of fresh ideas for new government programming that should serve the information needs of the community of 22,000 cable

She has an excellent relationship with city and community leaders, developed over several years of working with Fassett's Cable Management Associations.

Abbott has no other cable-TV contracts with other communities to provide cable programs a sore point with local cable commissioners who felt that Fassett was not spending enough time in Westland with its system.

The bottom line is that Abbott, a Westland resident, has an excellent feel of what the community needs and wants in cable programming and should be able to translate that into professional cable programming.

Art groups

Unity points way to funding

FICHIGAN NEEDS a United Way for the Just as the United Way will soon raise money for area charities, Michigan's arts community needs a strong, central fund-raising agency of its own. We continue to believe support for the arts is a legitimate state function, but our state will no longer support art to the extent it has in the past. Instead of crying over lost revenue, Michigan's arts community is aggressively moving forward to meet the challenge. A new Detroit chapter of Business Volunteers for the Arts, a private, nationwide fund-raising organization, has been formed. The Detroit Institute of the Arts, meanwhile, has begun marketing its wares in DIA retail stores.

Both moves are welcome, but even greater financial support is needed.

WELL-HEELED arts groups will no doubt continue to survive as they fight for new grant money. Others, no less vital, may soon disappear.

Rather than competing against each other for contributions, we urge area arts groups to band together in mutual support.

The framework may already be in place. Arts Foundation of Michigan, a private, Detroit-based agency, is considering expanding its

The 25-year-old foundation kept quiet during the debate over arts funding, but now seeks to broaden its support for Michigan artists and art

IT CURRENTLY provides cash payments to artists and helps arts groups secure grants.

But instead of an occasional grant, we'd like to see the foundation provide continuing support for area art organizations.

The mechanism: an annual fund-raising drive among Michigan businesses and residents.

We have no doubt area businesses and residents would respond generously, especially if they were assured at least a percentage of money would remain in their home communities.

Rochester-area arts supporters couldn't turn down a program that would help Paint Creek Center for the Arts. Livonia music lovers couldn't say no to the Livonia Symphony.

Heavier dependance upon private fund raising isn't risk-free.

OVERHEAD IS traditionally high for groups that depend upon private fund raising. Many end up spending more on fund raising than on programming. Even the national council of Better Business Bureaus calls a 50/50 split equitable.

In the past, that pattern has made us skeptical of efforts to reduce state arts spending and replace it with private fund raising.

Arts Foundation officials, however, have thus far given 89 percent of what they have raised directly to art programs, according to figures on file with the state Attorney General's office. That is encouraging and a strong indication of why the foundation should be the agency spearheading a central arts fund-raising program.

It must also be remembered that state support for the arts — like state government in general - isn't free of overhead, either.

Art, whether it be a painting, sculpture, symphony or dance recital, is a vital part of life. To keep arts programs alive, it is time for agencies to band together and take their case directly to the public. 🐇

2 Virginians forge a country believing in personal rights

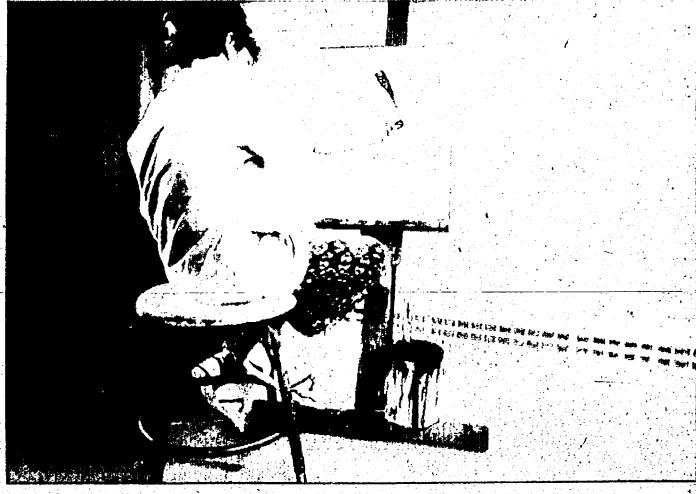

WO VIRGINIANS George Mason and James Madison, played major roles in the drama that created the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Both favored a national government that would unify the country and both firmly believed in personal rights. They differed, however, on how to attain these goals

Madison, an architect of the Constitution, believed that since the new federal government would be one of limited powers, authority not delegated to it would be retained by the people or

Mason, author of the Virginia Declaration of Rights which inspired the federal Bill of Rights, also viewed the federal government as one of limited powers. He was concerned, however, that federal powers could erode those of the states.

Both legacies have shaped America's experiment in constitutional government. It is Mason's vision of fundamental rights, as carefully set into the Constitution by Madison's crafting, that we celebrate this year in the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights

Seeking alternatives

With the reduction of state funding for the arts, area groups will have to become more creative in seeking alternative means of staying alive. For our opinion, see the editorial on the lower left side of this page.

Dems fail to recognize issues with governor

ITEM: Earlier this week, 95,000 folks in Michigan who get an average of $170 monthly in General Assistance were told they wouldn't be receiving their welfare checks as of

Item: Last weekend at the Michlgan Republican conference on Mackinac Island, Gov. John Engler told those same 95,000 folks to get off their duffs and find work. "There are opportunities in many communities to find jobs," he said, "not $10 an hour jobs but minimum wage jobs that . . . if worked half time would more than replace General Assistance."

The governor is partly right. A brief glance at the Help Wanted portion of this newspaper's classified ads will reveal a lot of job openings. Some are minimum wage, but some pay up to $15 per hour.

The governor is also partly wrong. For a poor person living in Detroit or Flint without a car and with one of the worst public transit systems in America, that nice job in the suburbs might as well be in California.

IT'S BUDGET crunch time in Lansing again, and the target of choice is the $2.3 billion Department of Social Services.

The governor and Legislature must approve a state spending plan by Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year. While the Logislature looksready to cut a $7.9 billion budget, the Engler Administration estimates

Some $400 million will have to be eliminated. The $230 million House Democratic plan to substitute job training for welfare payments is an easy target for the governor's veto So when 30 angry and noisy welcharged that the committee cochair, Democratic Rep. David Hollister, had incited the trouble. Hollister denied it, saying, "They were angry, but they should be angry." APART FROM the sense of bored

The state is in a terrible budget bind, but the governor wants to make it worse by cutting property taxes on rich people and businesses.

And so forth. Either the Democrats have lousy

Editorial is criticized

To the editor:

Your recent editorial regarding the stalled recall of the citizens of the Wayne-Westland Community Schools led by Steve Lind needs more light and less heat.

Your paper tends to applaud Kathleen Chorbagian for her wanting "unity" on the school board, and to castigate Steve Lind and company for his wastefulness amounting to $12,000 for a special election.

Your comment was that Chorbagian had already decided not to run in June, but you forgot to mention that two other board members who have been partners with her, will not be up for re-election in June, Furthermore, Chorbagian is remembered, by those of us with accurate memories, as the one who changed her mind at the last minute to give 5 Dennis O'Neill à 4-3 vote of selection eight years ago. Since that time, she has arrogantly defended her mis-

As far as the $12,000 goes, she wasted $12,000 for each of three elections in the past'two years with ill-timed, ill-conceived, and unneeded millage elections seeing there was a $2.4 million surplus in June

Lind has been quoted in the newspaper as saying that the purpose of the recall campaign, in part, is the firing of Dennis O'Neill.

The current school board could save $12,000 and a whole lot more, prevent the recall, and grant the wishes of the majority of the community by firing O'Neill now.

Of course, if the new board members do not have the courage to face the wrath and arrogance of the rest of the board and the administration now, they will have to face it after

CHECK likes public response

An open letter to the community: Thank you to members of the community and surrounding communitles for their support of CHECK. (Concerned for the Health and Environment of our Community's Kids). We have heard from many individuals via phone calls, cards, letters and personal words of encouragement. All are appreciated.

CHECK may be perceived as a minority group, but these caring parents have given so much of themselves while striving to obtain a goal that benefits the majority. The permanent closure of the Cooper School Building is a realistic goal.

In spite of recurring personal attacks, numerous political and bureaucratic road blocks and continual stress brought about all because of a dump we had nothing to do with, CHECK still moves ahead, ever strong and ever dedicated.

CHECK will not go away, because the dump will not go away.

The truth is only beginning to unfold and like it or not, cleaned-up or not, we must live with this neighborhood dump site. What we don't have to live with is the fact that someday that school building may reopen it's doors again to young children,

It has been stated that CHECK has used, controlled and manipulated the media, well for such a "small" group we certainly must maintain a large amount of power to use, control and manipulate the numerous newspapers, TV stations and radio stations.

It's very important that citizens stay informed. One thing CHECK has been pushing for from the beginning is a file on the Cooper School situation for the public to examine. Such a file has finally been provided by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and is located at the Livonia Civic Center Library.

. In closing, we live in this community and care about this community. We don't enjoy seeing it split apart. We hope that a decision can be made that everyone can agree with (including the displaced Cooper fami-'

Journalist carried on tradition

Our friend, Loraine McClish, has died. For all of us who have known her for so many years, these are very sad days. Loraine was truly a wonderful person. Her spirit will remain with us for a very long time.

For years, now, Loraine has chronicled the growth of the suburbs. It always seemed as if she knew eyeryone and everything that was going on in Farmington and Farmington Hills and before that in Southfield, where she worked for the Southfield Observer and earlier for the Southfield Sun,

She was a journalist in the oldest sense of the tradition, recording those landmarks which make life special.

Everything from births to Eagle Scout awards, weddings to deaths; Loraine fit them into the context of the community. Nothing was too small nor was anything too important. She, better than many, understood how a community feels about itself and the issues it has to address on an everyday basis.

She worked with enthusiasm whether it be a meeting announcement or a major series on a critical issue of her time.

That was the professional in Her.

BUT MANY OF us were honored to know the personal side of Loraine, and we all are better because of that knowledge. Loraine was, without a doubt, the kindest, most-compassionate person most of us will ever know. She just never had a bad word to say about anyone - ever. Loraine's life was plagued with trouble. But she never complained, about any circumstance

On the contrary. She was always looking out for someone else, asking how we were, especially during our most difficult times. She had a real talent of knowing when to help and when to stay away.

Even when the cancer struck, Loraine appeared to nearly take it in stride. That familiar, sometimes contagious laugh, continued to buoy everyone's spirits, even when hers must have been waning inside.

Throughout her illness, she missed relatively few days. We all marveled at her courage and stamina. Not until the very last did she slow down, and then it was with great reluc-

LORAINE'S ENCOUNTER with cancer was handled with typical McClish aplomb. Never the traditionalist, she only felt comfortable when she was calling the shots. She went to Mexico for treatment.

Many of us who know and loved Loraine cringed. But all of our collective persuasive efforts fell on deaf ears. Loraine just laughed and in new kinds of treatments.

We had to settle for the fact that she was going to take on the biggest battle of her life her own way,

Last week a bunch of us piled in a car to visit Loraine in the hospital, There she was, master of all, talking up a streak, laughing and generally trying to make everyone else feel comfortable. It was tough to believe that this very noble lady would soon be gone.

Loraine McClish was a genuine article, a rare combination of eternal optimist and stark realist. After bantering for a while at the hospital, she looked at all of us and said,"you know the good thing about cancer is that you get to say goodbye to your friends. It's not like getting hit by a truck where all of a sudden you're just gone."

She smiled, sighed as if to signal she would miss us all and then laughed that unforgettable laugh.

Bye, Lo. I sure hope they serve

A MYSTERIOUS explosion bearing the force of a hydrogen bomb once wiped out 1,500 square miles of what is now the Soviet Union. The big bang struck on June 30, 1908, in the remote Siberian region of the Tunguska — three tributaries of the Yenesei River - 2,200 miles east of Moscow and 750 miles north of the Chinese-Mongolian border.

It was accompanied by that same blinding flash which later in the centhey was to become so frighteningly familiar. The shock waves circled the world twice, and many nations saw spectacular fiery displays in the flawn and evening sky for days afterward.

At the railes-wide epicenter of the blast, an untold wilderness of trees was totally vaporized. Far away on its extreme periphery, there was an enormous circle wherein thousands of remaining trees were leveled flat, with others farther out twisted and

AS WE PONDER puzzles of unearthly phenomena like the Tunguska explosion and marvel at the discovery of what appears to be the first planet ever sighted outside our solar system, let us reflect upon those exotic intelligences who undoubtedly dwell in the vast void beyond the sky.

Then, with a little shiver, let us grasp each others' hands in loving affirmation that all who inhabit this earth are much more alike than different. Whatever our race, religion or ethnicity, we are interdependent brothers and sisters under the skin to an extent we haven't even begun to contemplate.

After we can fully understand this. we may one day commune with extraterrestrial souls and discover their fates and ours are also spiritually intertwined - and we are all a perpetual part of the stars.

During that distant cosmic moment of pure light, perhaps we will finally become as one with the because it was critical to my dad's work in advertising. And the kids who gathered round our set to watch Howdy Doody and Tom Corbett, Space Cadet were happy to sign the agreement, figuratively speaking, that they had to be quiet for the commercials, too.

Despite growing up in an advertising family, Friday night was the first time I had ever attended the annual Caddy Award Show, which for 17 years has honored the best advertising created in metro-Detroit.

· It was exciting, even for an onlooker, as the gowned and occasionally tuxedoed crowd made its way into the grandeur of the Fox The-

For most of the 2,000 mainly creative types attending, it was a trip into the city. These days, much of the metro Detroit advertising community is peppered across the suburbs, with the creative juices spilling primarily from Southfield, Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills and Troy.

As you may know, Best of Show went to Campbell-Mithun-Esty, Southfield, for their "Everyday Life" spread developed for Chrysler Corp., under the agency's former creative director, Michael Belitsos. Belitsos has since been wooed away by Young & Rubicam, Detroit.

I ATTENDED the Caddies as a member of the press. But with a father, two brothers and a son "in the business," as they say, people have often asked why I didn't go the advertising route.

I guess I just didn't want to make that much money.

More seriously, the Caddy Awards brought home that the reasons for choosing journalism over advertising are probably less distinct than they were when I made that deci-

As a journalist, you're your own person, not beholden to anybody, I always said. You get to write the truth - inform people about what's really going on. You don't have a client watching over your shoulder. And you don't invent reasons why one banana, for example, is better than another - when they may come from the same grove.

That's still true - mostly.

But when I went into journalism, people still got their news from newspapers, most major cities had at least two competing papers, and the very notion of a Joint Operating Agreement in a two-newspaper city would have been laughed out of the newsroom.

Back then, kids regularly went to the public library so they would have something exciting to read when they got home from school. So when they became an adult, reading a news story that ran long enough to say something was not foreign to them.

WHAT I'M SAYING, I guess, is that newspapers, not just advertising agencies, must think long and hard these days about what sells - in one case, a particular product(s), in our case, what sells our community; newspapers.

USA Today revolutionized the ways newspapers present themselves. But it was a revolution waiting to happen for a public that has easier ways to get information.

I'm not saying it's all bad. It's reacting to reality. But it does narrow the gap I used to see between what I do and what other members of my family do.

Journalists still strive to tell the story, both sides of the story. And advertising, obviously, only has to give one side.

But at Friday's Caddies, the sense of pride and worth in their creative work was clear among the copy writers, art directors, creative directors and producers responsible for the honored commercials. That's the same pride we have in putting out a prize-winning story or issue.

And the same sense of frustration that the members of the newsroom often have was articulated by Jack ! Frales, at the top of the hierarchy of ! creativity for Ross Roy, Bloomfield

Frales, one of the judges, noted the overall level of creative work was not as high as in recent years. I think that maybe the effects of hudget cuts and staff reductions are finally being realized in the creative

Rivals eye Oct. 16 date

By Brad Emons staff writer

The cat-and-mouse game will apparently continue between Livonia city soccer rivals Stevenson and

The two state-ranked teams battled to a 1-1 draw Monday night at Stevenson before a large crowd, providing even more speculation about the potential rematch Wednesday, Oct. 16, for the Western Lakes Activities Association championship (barring any unforeseen upsets between now and then).

"It seems something this intense usually ends up in a tie," said Stevenson junior midfielder Adam Pichler. It's a rivalry that lasts forever.''

Pichler played a pivotal role in preserving the tie for Stevenson.

He played goalkeeper for an instant, stopping a point-blank Churchill shot with just under four minutes to play.

"It was off a corner kick and we didn't completely clear it out," Pichler said. "It was a mess in there. The goalie (Matt Stabile) came out for the cross and went for the ball. When I saw he couldn't get it I went for the goal and I was holding the post. I got my weight on it and stopped it."

"THAT WAS the game right there," said Churchill coach Mark Mason, whose team drew first blood "You don't get a lot of opportunia run through the middle of the field to set up teammate Mike Gentile for a goal.

"We deviated a little bit from our original game plan," Mason said. "We put Mike (Gentile) at midfield and let our three forwards spread things out.

'To get a goal that early was a little bit of a surprise to them. We had a control-game type lineup, but we wanted to surprise them with more of an open game."

The Spartans were not completely fooled, according to Stevenson coach Walt Barrett.

"It was a different look than we had seen from the scouting reports," said Barrett, who was celebrating his birthday. "After they scored, it was not as difficult to pick up.

"Gentile just lined up in the mid- . field and they gave him room to get a goal.'

and wait for your mistakes." Stevenson didn't use the long ball, however, to knot the count. The Spartans' Jeff Thomas, a junior defender, made a tremendous dash down the right side, zipping past four different Churchill defenders before tucking a shot behind goalie Jeff Cassar with 10:05 left in the first half. "That was an all-star high school type of moment, just a great run,"

Barrett said. "We had one player on it (the run), but not enough effort against the kid (Thomas)," Mason said. "It was a wait-and-see type of thing. We were not used to him dribbling down that deep. The kid put forth a great ef-

That was the extent of the scoring as the defenses dug in during the second half.

Churchill sweeper Scott Lamphear, with help from Kevin DeHority and Jimmy DeMassa (substituting for the suspended Brian Peters), kept the Spartans from owning the long balls.

CASSAR, a senior, came up with seven saves. He made a key stop against Bill Rennie with 16 minutes to play in the match.

'He played great in goal," Barrett said. "There was a battle between Cassar and Travis Roy, and the rest of our defense."

The Spartans' back-line stoppers, anchored by Roy, were no slouches either. Roy, the catalyst from the back, got plenty of help from Scott Wiggins, Bill Lanspeary and Thom-

But Barrett had to use a timeout after the Chargers stormed all around Stabile with just over three minutes to play.

"It was just time to cool down our players because they looked upset," Barrett said. "They needed some calming."

OST YOUNG PLAYERS dream of making it in the National Hockey League, but Livonian Kevin Hall has taken a slightly different route.

"I really saw that after my senior year of high school hockey that I wasn't going anywhere as a player, so I wanted to get involved in officiating," said Hall, a 1982 Franklin High grad and once teammate of Los Angeles King Mike Donnelly. "My goal was to get into the NHL program.'

"When I got the letter I can't say that I wasn't expecting it, but I was mad at myself because I kind of let my weight go this summer," Hall said. "I was up to 220. I was expected to be in good shape. I kind of kicked myself because if they can hold anything against you, they

Stevenson 'back' after WLAA win

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

With its best girls swim team in five years, Livonia Stevenson hopes 1991 is the year it returns to the top in the Western Lakes Activities As-

If the annual WLAA Relays are still a valid indicator, that could happen for the Spartans, who won the meet Saturday for the first time

Stevenson had competition from the Plymouth-Canton schools but managed to overcome host Salem 241-224. Canton was third followed by Northville, defending WLAA champ North Farmington and Livonia Churchill in the top six. See statistical summary on page 5B.

"I would have been happy with second or third, but we swam well," Stevenson coach Greg Phill said. "The relays happened to be put in the right places and it worked out for us.

"It looks like we have pretty good depth. We've got a nice team this year, and a lot of girls are contributing. Now we're hoping to go back on top for a while."

SINCE THE WLAA was organized nearly a decade ago, the Spartans' dominated in girls swimming, winning the relays and league meet every year through 1986. Their success spawned a theory that claimed the relays winner would end up as league champion, too.

North Farmington won both in 1987 and 1989; however, dual victories haven't always occurred. Canton won the relays in 1988 and 1990, but Northville and North Farmington won the WLAA title those years.

"I don't think the relay meet confirms anything," Phill said. "North is the defending champ and we beat Plymouth Salem by less than 20

"We haven't beaten either one of those teams in five years at the league meet. The winner of the relay meet hasn't won the league the last couple years. There's no doubt about it; we have a nice team, but so do

The Spartans have the most talent since their last championship team but have a younger squad than in '86, Phill said. They demonstrated their ability Saturday, using quality depth to regain the title.

Stevenson won only two of the nine swimming events but finished no lower than fifth. And the Spartans had only one fifth place; all the rest resulted in seconds and thirds.

STEVENSON SET one of three records with Jill Knapp, Mandi-Falk, Lisa Morrison and Jennifer Knapp winning the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:12.6; more than three seconds faster than what North Farmington's relay swam in 1988. All are sophomores except for senior Jennifer Knapp.

The Spartans also won the 200 butterfly as sophomore Nancy Warson, sophomore Karin Carlisle, junior Holly Palmeri and senior Heather White combined for a 2:00.85 time.

The other records were set by North Farmington in the 400 individual medley (4:26.88) and Churchill in the 200 freestyle (1:42.60) as each school broke its own record. The Raiders set the IM record (4:32.05) in . 1986 and Churchill the freestyle standard (1:44.74) last year.

Churchill (200 backstroke) and North Farmington (500 crescendo) had two victories apiece, including the events in which they set records.

The Patriots were led by senior Kim Rodriquez who figured in four first place finishes. Junior Jenny Fisher was involved in three firsts.

Rodriguez took the 50-yard freestyle (28:41) and 100 freestyle (1:04.99), and was a member of two first place relay teams. Fisher, meanwhile, won the 100 breaststroke (1:21.06) and the 200 Individual medley

The team of Fisher, Rodriguez, along with twins Kelly and Collen Hansen, captured the 200 medley relay (2:11.70). Rodriguez joined Becky Sampson, Anne Hirkey and Renee Scott to take the 200 freestyle relay (1:59.11).

Other Patriot winners individual winners included junior Nancy Noechel in the 100 backstroke (1:17.66) and Kelly Hansen in the 100 butterfly (1:16.34).

Ocelots await Macomb

By C.J. Risak staff writer

The preliminary stuff is over with. Schoolcraft College dispensed with it with ease Saturday, thumping overmatched Lakeland CC 5-0 in a Region 12 men's soccer clash at SC.

Now comes the first round of the main event.

SC travels to Macomb CC for a 1 p.m. game Saturday that will have - at least it always has had - major ramifications on who represents the region at the Inter-regional Tournament outside Chicago in November.

The Ocelots have been the benefactors in recent seasons. In the seven seasons Van Dimitriou has coached them, they have made the trip to the Inter-regionals five times.

But it has never come easily. In three of those five years, SC and Macomb split their two-game, regularseason series and had to meet in a playoff. SC won all three, including last year's 1-0 triumph.

"THIS IS not only a physicalgame, but an emotional one," said Dimitriou. "The one factor we've been stressing all week is controlling our emotions."

But Macomb has been just as devastating. Led by keeper Chris Weiskirch, an NJCAA All-American candidate, the Monarchs have yet to surrender a goal in two region games. They shutout Lakeland 4-0 and last Saturday beat Cuyahoga CC

What Dimitriou did was move Hayes to forward from midfield, where he tended to wear out late in the game. Hayes responded with his three-goal explosion against Lakoland. "He has a knack for getting open for the pass," sald Dimitriou.

Of course, a revered coaching cliche preaches that offense wins headlines, but defense wins championships. Dimitriou figures the Ocelots can put two goals on the board; question is, can they stop Macomb?

Madonna opens with easy victory

Madonna University opened its NAIA District 23 volleyball season with a 15-7, 15-5, 15-4 triumph at Siena Heights Tuesday. The win improved the Lady Crusaders' record to 12-7 overall and started them on a road they hope will lead to the NAIA National Tournament.

Elena Oparka and Dana Hicks-Finley led the attack with 13 and 11 kills, respectively. Tonia Smith and Kristy McFadden added seven kills each. Jenny Sladewski had 11 digs and Maureen Paulin got nine, while setter Penny Baker was superb with 51 assists-to-kills.

On Saturday, Madonna was just as dominating against visiting Alma all. College, sweeping the Lady Scots 15-4, 15-8, 15-6. Hicks-Finley led the assault with 15 kills, but everyone got into the act.

Last weekend, SC suffered its first loss of the season in the semifinals of the 12-team Wisconsin-Parkside Invitational. The Ocelots beat St. Ambrose (Minn.) 15-4, 15-10 and Winona State (Wisc.) 15-7, 15-8 on Friday; a team total of eight blocks against St. Ambrose's outside attack was the difference in that match, and Vah Deusen's 10 kills and Bonser's eight wrecked Winona State. On Saturday, though, SC faltered.

"We just didn't play well," said Teeters. The Ocelots beat McHenry CC (III.) 13-15, 15-3, 15-11, with Haeger serving the first 12 points in the last game, but they lost to Huntington College (Ind.) 15-11, 9-15, 15-6. Teeters singled out Bonser as his top player in the tournament.

Shamrocks face another stern test

and Brad Emons staff writers

Redford Catholic Central just played (and won) the biggest game of the young 1991 football season and must get ready for

At this point in time, it's the most important game yet for the Shamrocks, who whipped Detroit Martin Luther King 24.8 in a rematch of last year's Class AA championship game.

In a second straight battle of unbeaten (3-0) and stateranked teams, CC (No. 4 in AA) plays host to Warren De-LaSalle (No. 10 in AA) in the Central Division opener for both at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Another big game has Plymouth Salem traveling to Westland John Glenn for a key Lakes Division clash Friday night in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

In the weekly prediction contest between sports editors, Dan O'Meara was 11-4 last week, improving to $4-12 overall. Brad Emons was 9-6 and stands 30-16 for the season.

Despite the possibility of different opinions on many of this week's games, there aren't too many disagreements between the Observer writers.

An explanation of how the prediction process works might be helpful to the readers' understanding. Before anything is put in type, each editor makes his selections without prior knowledge of the other's choices. The editor in charge of writing that week takes both lists and composes the story. Thus, the respective picks are unbiased by the other's opinion, and the integrity of the contest is maintained. Unfortunately for the readers who like a little controversy, a level playing field sometimes produces less and not more of it.

FRIDAY'S GAMES

(ali 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Red. Thurston at Taylor Center, 4 p.m.: The Eagles (0-3) are looking for their first win and could find it at Taylor. Center (1-2) earned its first win last week, deleating Melvindale 19-7. Thurston has played the lougher schedule, facing undefeated teams from Dearborn Heights in its first two games, defending Class B champ Robichaud and Crestwood. Taylor Kennedy got its first win last week against Thurston, 21-14. PICKS: The Eagles are denled again.

Liv. Clarenceville at Lutheran West, 7 p.m.: Clarenceville is searchng for victory No. 1, also. The Trojans have scored only one touchdown, and that was three weeks ago in their first game against St. Clement: Lutheran West is 2-1 but hasn't beaten any powers. All three games were decided by shutout, beating Lutheran Northwest (10-0) and Hamtramck (18-0) and losing to defending Metro Conference king Auburn Hills Avondale (48-0). PICKS: The Leopards are ready to

W.L. Western at Lfv. Churchill: This game could determine which leam stays out of the WLAA Western Division cellar. Western was expected to have a possible contender this year but is 1-2 and failed to give mighty Harrison a game last week, losing 37-6. Churchill (0-3) tost to a pair of playoff teams (Dearborn and John Glenn) before nearly knocking off Livonia Franklin last week in a 16-14 loss. PICKS: The Warriors look pretty fierce this week.

Liv, Franklin at Northville: Can the Patriots contain Northville quarterback Ryan Huzjak, a gifted passer and fine runner, too? Anybody who thought the Mustangs would be weakened by graduation after a banner year in 1990 has been proved wrong. Northville lost its opener to unbeaten South Lyon and is 2-0 in the WLAA. Franklin is holding its own and also is 2-1. The Patriots' claim to fame: They beat Lake Orion, which upset Pontiac Northern. PICKS: Franklin can't corral Huzjak and

Phy. Salem at Westland Glenn: The last time Salem played here (1989), the Rocks were denied an unbeaten season and certain playoff berth when Glenn pulled out a 7-6 victory in the closing seconds. A perfect record is no longer possible and post-season play is unlikely for Salem (1-2), but this game will play a big role in determining the Lakes winner, still. Glenn, the defending division champ, is 3-0 and has everything going for it. This is the third tough game in a row for the Rocks, who can play the spoiler and keep their own hopes alive. PICKS: With enough fuel in their tanks

N. Farmington at W.L. Central: The Raiders (2-1) have recovered nicely from that first-game loss to Pontiac Northern. That was virtually another season by now. North is 2-0 in the WLAA and getting more confident each week. The Vikings are 0-3 and headed for the Lakes basement. PICKS: The Raiders get a breather before next week's show-

Farm. Harrison at Ply. Canton: Canton (1-2) gave the Hawks (3-0). one of their best games last year at Harrison before losing 21-15. But the Chiefs are in a current talispin, losing two straight after opening with a win at Monroe. The Hawks (No. 1 in BB) are as strong as ever, Harrison had outstanding tailbacks in John Miller and, in recent years, Aaron Yaverski, Matt Conley and Gary Devine, but Roy Granger might be its best breakeway runner ever. The Hawks can still pass, too. Andy Fitzpatrick (6-4, 200) hasn't been compared to Mill Coleman yet, but he is averaging 130-plus yards per game and gives Harrison a big quarterback, something it hasn't had since Vince Enright in 1984. PICKS: The Hawks hammer out a victory.

Woodhaven at Garden City: The host Cougars put one in the hincolumn last week, beating Ypsilanti Lincoln 6-0 in overtime, but Woodhayen hores to keep Garden City from winning No. 2. The Warriors are unbeaten (3-0) and have their own win streak to worry about. Woodhaven hasn't given up a point in three weeks, not since beating Southgate 15-13 in the opener. The Warriors blanked winless Dearborn Edsel Ford 20-0 in their Northwest Suburban League opener last week: PICKS: WWII stands for Woodhayen Win No. 2 in the NSL.

Wayne Memorial at Uncoln Park: Wyandotte, the Wolverine A Conference preseason lavorite, put a blerrish on the Wayne record (2-1) last week with a 21-7 victory, but the Zebras remain a quality team. Since losing 20-19 to #/dyne in the first game, Adrian is 2-0 with wins over Temperance Bedford and Alpena. The Rafisplitters also are 2-1, losing to Dearborn Fordson and beating Gibraltar Carlson and Belleville. PICKS: The Zebras rebound with a win.

Edsel Ford at Redford Union: The Panthers upset Edsel Ford last year and, though it won't be that again, could win this time, too. With two straight wins, RU (2-1) is looking impressive and gaining respect. Since losing to Livonia Stevenson, the Panthers have beaten Waterlord Kettering (26-25) and Dearborn (20-17). Ford (0-3) is winless but has played a murderous schedule that included Fordson, Lansing Eastern and Woodhaven. PICKS: RU's defense shuts off the Thunderbirds' en-

Bishop Borgess vs. O.L. St. Mary at Garden City Jr. High: This is one of those games that could easily go either way. Both teams are 1-2 but from this viewpoint are still pretty decent. Borgess beat Bridgeport, lost to Ionia, which knocked off perental BB power Chesaning and only lost 10-6 to Dearborn Divine Child (No. 9 Class 88). The Eaglets lost to a pair of unbeaten Class B powers (Kingsford and Country Day) before beating Detroit Jesuit 14-13 last week. PICKS: Expect a competitive game but St. Mary to win.

SATURDAY'S GAMES (all 1 p.m. unless noted)

Grosse Pte. Liggett at Luth. Westland: This happens to be the other game on which the Observer editors disagree. Lutheran Westland is 3-0 after its 32-20 defeat of Tekonsha and developing a reputation for being a winner. The Knights (1-2) haven't enjoyed the same success. They whipped Harper Woods but lost consecutive games to St. Agatha (27-0) and St. Clement (14-7). PICKS: Emons is convinced the Warriors are for real and will handle Liggett. O'Meara thinks a tougher schedule

Liv. Stevenson at Farmington: This will be another good test in determining where the host Falcons are in their building process under coach Bernie Call, Farmington (2-1) has beaten a pair of weaker WLAA foes, and the Spartans (2-1) represent the next rung in the WLAA ladder. Stevenson is trying to make some gains and has a good team, too. The Spartans are coming off a 35-13 loss to Glenn after wins over RU and Franklin. Farmington defeated Walled Lake Central 21-0 for its second straight win. PICKS: The Falcons are getting there, but Stevenson still has the edge.

Redford CC vs. Warren DeLaSalle at Clarenceville, 7:30 p.m.: It will be CC's size and strength against DLS's speed and quickness, according to Pilots coach Ross MacDonald. But DLS usually has some hefty linemen as well, and the Shamrocks have an open-field threat in receiver/returner Frank Yoakam. Don't worry about CC having a lefdown after dominating unbeaten King. Why? This is CC. The Shamrocks are used to playing big games each week. The Pilots have played a rugged schedule, too: Saginaw (34-18), Lake Orion (14-7) and Ypsilanti (35-16) - all playoff teams in the last two years. PICKS: If CC can beat King on King's field, how can you not pick the Shamrocks.

SUNDAY'S GAME

The Aggles (3-0) have gotten away to a fine start, including a 21-7 win Saturday over a much bigger Ontario school, Innisdate. Richard (1-2) is strugging after last week's 50-6 shellacking from Dundee. The Fighting Irish lost a shootout to Webberville (47-34) and beat Whitemore Lake (28-16). PICKS: St. Agatha begins Catholic League competition with

Rodopoulos scores 2 in Pats' win

Livonia Franklin pushed its boys soccer record over the .500 mark Monday with a 3-2 victory over visiting

It was the second year in a row the Patriots had beaten the Mustangs.

"We've won our last three games and the kids are playing much better," said Franklin coach Frantz Lamarre, whose team is 5-4 overall. "The system is working. If we play somebody tough, they have to believe in themselves.

Franklin led 2-1 at intermission on goals by Guillermo Cazares (off a restart from Vic Rodopoulos), and Rodopoulos (from Bill Binklewicz).

Bo Folwer had the Northville first-half goal,

In the second half, Rodopoulos scored his second on a punt from the goal area by netminder Brian Spitler to make it 3-1.

Northville's Steve Moore cut the margin to one with a goal in the final two minutes, but Franklin held on thanks to the play of sweeper Dave Steinert and midfielder Jason Buelow.

REDFORD CC 1, ATHENS 0: Monday at Bell Creek Park, the unbeaten Shamrocks knocked off traditional boys soccer power Athensa the same day it jumped to No: I in the Class A rankings.

CC is 8.0 overall and 3.0 in the Central Division of the Catholic League after beating Harper Woods Notre Dame 5-0 on Saturday at Bell Creek.

"If we keep on winning, good things can happen," CC coach Phil Lajoy said. "We tried not concentrating on (the rankings), but it's a good feeling to be there. This team has certainly come together. I think "The big clamp-down this year is interference on goalles."

The philosophy is completely different than college hockey, according to Hall.

"In college, they have strict rules and want you to keep the games under 21/2 hours," Hall said. "College hockey is more free wheeling, a hack and whack league."

Hall begins his odyssey Oct. 5 in Fort Wayne, Ind., for an IHL game. He'll also be in Toledo and Kalamazoo before the week is over.

"This is a major step being on the NHL staff," said the Livonian. "Thisis considered their training program. I'm going everywhere to gain experience. They're going to put you through as many circumstances as they can."

Hall could be on the road as many as 10 days in a row.

"One of the hazards is that your family life suffers," he said. "It's good that my girlfriend is going to be busy with med school. It would be tough with all the traveling for a married guy. You certainly have to have an understanding wife."

BUT IT'S FULL speed ahead for Hall, who has no fears or trepidations about the job.

He has full-fledged support from his father Don, who officiated hockey for 25 years and now is the referee-in-chief for the Livonia Hockey Association, along with his mother Barb, sisters Kathy and Colleen, and brother Tim.

They welcomed him home after his training stint in Toronto by decorating the house and throwing a small party.

"This is me, this is what I want," said Kevin, who began skating at age 5 when his father would take him to Belle Isle. "They're 100 percent be-

Franklin fortunate against RU, 49-48

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

With less than a minute remaining in the first half Tuesday night, some of the lights went out inside Livonia Franklin's gym.

Could Franklin senior guard Dawn Warner be blamed for the power

Warner laughed at the notion, but it sure seemed like she "shot the lights out" in the first half against Redford Union, scoring 19 of her game-high 35 points. The lights came back on in the second half and Warner cooled off some from the field, but she still made two free throws with 13 seconds left to let Franklin escape with a 49-48 nonleague win.

Warner made nine-of-10 free throws and her poise down the stretch proved to be the difference between the evenly-matched teams. RU and Franklin split a pair of games during the summer, with each being decided by one point - so it's no wonder this one was close.

"HOPEFULLY, WE won't have to play them again," said Warner, a five-of-nine shots, including two three-pointers in the first half, and 12-22 field goals for the game. "I'm not satisfied with the way I played. I know I could have played better."

RU, which fell to 7-2 overall, might argue that point. Franklin, meanwhile, improved to 6.1 overall.

Shannon Morris' free throw gave RU a 46-43 lead with about three minutes left, but Warner scored the . Patriots' last six points, including all four of her free throws.

Warner's two free throws cut the deficit to 46-45 and her steal and layup off an in-bounds pass put the Patriots ahead, 47-46, with 2:25 re-

Wendy Malecki's basket helped RU regain the lead, 48-47, with 25. seconds left, but Warner was fouled while shooting on the other end and made both free throws to give the Patriots the win. RU had one last chance but Malecki's put-back went in after the buzzer sounded.

The loss might do RU some good in the long run.

"I'm proud of our effort," RU coach Gary Fulks said. "We haven't played a state-ranked team in years, and hell, if the ball goes a different Miss Basketball candidate who made way, we win. We're not intimidated

"OBVIOUSLY, WE were real concerned about Dawn. She's good with the ball and even better without the ball. Great competitors are never satisfied with their performance."

Morris isn't as highly recruited as Warner but showed why she'll probably play somewhere in college, collecting 13 of her team-high 21 points after halftime. Heather Mitchell and' Malecki added eight points apiece and Jamie Zalek finished with six.

Morris scored eight points in the first quarter when RU built a 14-10 lead, but the Patriots scored the first 10 points of the second quarter to regain the lead, 20-14. RU pulled to within 20-18, but

Warner made a three-pointer and another basket before the end of the quarter to give Franklin a 25-18 halftime lead. THE REST OF the Patriots shot a combined 7-24 from the field so it was important to get so much scoring from Warner. Seniors Patty Shea and Myrhah the Patriots, and Patty Shea had six rebounds and seven assists. Karen Potempa scored only two points for the Patriots but grabbed

Shea each finished with six points for seven rebounds. Warner led with 14 rebounds and six steals.

Franklin's Dawn Warner (white jersey) splits a pair of RU defenders.

'Karen has done a real nice job playing defense," Franklin coach Dan Freeman said. "Her offense isn't quite where she wants it but that's because we try to do other things with our guards.'

Koritnik sets new 5K mark

A.J. Koritnik posted the fastest five-kilometer time of any girl in Livonia Stevenson High history Saturday, finishing first Saturday in the Shamrock Invitational girls cross country meet at Marshbank Park. 1

Koritnik's first-place time of 19:35 led the Spartans to a second place finish in the team standings behind Mount Clemens Chippewa

The Big Reds took first with 93 points, while Stevenson and Farmington Hills Mercy each had 99. But the Spartans won the tlebreaker for second on Amy Klassa's 35th place finish in 22:22.

JOHN GLENN 33, GARDEN CITY 27: 11 was a defensive struggle all the way Tuesday as Westland John Glenn (4-3) held on for the victory against the visiting Cougars (3-5).

Glenn jumped out to an 11-0 first-quarter lead, but had to hold off a 15-10 GC spurt in the final quarter. The host Rockets, who hit only 14 of 43 shots from the floor (32 percent), got eight points and seven rebounds from senior forward Pam Dixon. Senior guard -Carrie Rachwal contributed seven points and six as-

Guard Dawn James paced the Cougars, who made only 10 of 44 field goals (23 percent), with nine points.

GREENHILLS 47, HURON VALLEY 28: Guard Standish Stewart poured in a game-high 24 points Tuesday, leading Ann Arbor Greenhills (5-2) to a win over Westland Huron Valley Lutheran (1-4).

The Hawks trailed by only nine at the half, 16.7, but got outscored 31-21 in the second half. Senior forward Sandi Dengel-scored 12 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for Huron Valley.

LUTHERAN EAST 89, CLARENCE-VILLE 10: It was no contest Tuesday as visiting Harper Woods Lutheran East (4-1) breezed to a Metro Conference opening win over host Livonia Clarence-

If GM loses, front-wheel-drive cars will disappear

I spend a lot of time talking to engineers, not much talking to lawyers. So when I got a call the other day from a lawyer researching a product liability case, I was more or less unprepared for the line of reasoning.

I was ready to dismiss the guy as an Idiot, but the more I thought about it, the more I realized he was simply following a routine that characterizes much of the litigation that already has wiped out the light aircraft industry in this country and is slowly chiseling away at the auto business às well.

THE CASE he was pursuing was startling. He claimed front-wheel drive cars — which today account for roughly 80 percent of the cars built in the world - are dangerous to drive in slippery conditions, and he had a client who claimed to be injured as a result.

First, of course, he wanted to sue General Motors, although the technology he was questioning (frontwheel drive) was in volume use by Saab, Audi, Volkswagen, Honda and Chrysler long before GM. The reason you sue General Motors is because GM has deep pockets, and foreign companies are much more expensive to take to court - the phone bill alone will kill you.

SECONDLY, HE was convinced that engineering to improve safety is driven mainly by guilt. That GM. went to the trouble to develop lowcost antilock brakes, he argued, was an admission of guilt that its front-wheel drive cars are difficult to control on ice.

I mentioned that GM might have tried to develop antilock brakes simply to improve a car's safety, and thought people might buy them, but I was drifting into alien territory.

He pounded away on the guilt theme and faxed me.a copy of the GM owners manual that said you shouldn't hit your brakes if your car was skidding - GM must be hiding something to say that, he said.

By now, I was thinking my high school driver training instructor, who told me the same thing, was probably guilty, too. Maybe I could sue him . . . naw, too late, I thought.

THE LAWYER also had an expert witness - a former GM engineer who has been soliciting liability cases for several years, offering to testify on the subject. All I could counter this one with was the notion that nearly all engineering staffs at all the auto companies in the world disagreed with the expert witness. In fact, I disagreed myself, but then who was I to argue?

As it turned out, GM had already prepared a rebuttal to the expert. witness, which is the kind of thing that keeps lawyers at GM busy. The liability, lawyer pointed this out to me and then asked why would they bother to do that if GM didn't have something to hide? More guilt.

BY NOW, I was starting to feel sorry for GM. Even worse, I was starting to feel sorry for lawyers at GM, which is a little like contributing to a fund to save killer bees. The conversation had gone far enough.

Actually, after I thought about it, I realized this could well be the liability case to end all liability cases. If the case could be proven against front-wheel drive, in all likelihood it would drive nearly all of the auto companies in the world out of business overnight: ess overnight:

Ridiculous, I thought. Then I remembered the empty Piper Aircrast factory in Vero Beach, Fla. . . . More or less as an afterthought, I checked with GM to see if anyone had actually filed any similar lawsults.

GM legal staff said that there are about six pending at the present

Discount giant launches party supply superstore

By Gorald Frawley staff writer

Armed with more paper plates, cups, plastic eating utensils, decorations, wrapping paper, banners, confetti and balloons than a Bob Hope traveling USO show, F&M Distributors is targeting the party-throwers of Oakland County and beyond.

After nearly two years in the planning stages, the Warren-based discount health and beauty chain has launched its first PartiGiant party goods superstore at Rochester and Hamlin roads in Rochester Hills.

PartiGiant, at 23,000 square feet, is slightly smaller than the typical superstore, but what it lacks in size, It makes up in inventory, according to Frank Newman, president and CEO of F&M distributor.

In addition to carrying common and theme party goods, PartiGiant also carries decorations, games, costumes, catering supplies, snacks and drinks, and specialized food products like hors d'oeuvres, appetizers and desserts, Newman said.

PartiGiant services include party planning, party equipment rental and custom printing.

POLLY PATEREK, president of the Rochester caterer Pampered By Polly, said a store like PartiGlant will be useful for local caterers - plies, since many caterers buy wholesale, but because it offers another place to send clients for party supplies not offered by the caterer.

Judy Tenjeras, owner of party supplies company Special Affairs in Rochester Hills, said she's already been by to take a look at the competition and was impressed by it, but she believes there is room for more than one supplier in town.

As for her plans, Tenjeras sald she won't be changing the way she does business because of the new competition. "We'll continue to give good service, be well stocked, and take care of our customers."

NEWMAN SAID F&M had been looking at a new venture for almost two years and had decided on a single-category, party goods superstore after evaluating its own sales. "Of the number of categories (health, beauty and party goods) we carry at F&M, this seemed the most likely."

Newman said that for single-category stores like PartiGiant to succeed, the retailer must bring a product to the public in greater quantities and varieties than competitors and sell it less expensively. "(Party goods) are a product that is generally distributed through high-cost, inefficient channels"

If it succeeds, some of the success not necessarily as a source for sup- of PartiGiant will be attributed to adopting F&M Distributors' strategy deal buying - purchasing only products manufacturers are willing to offer substantial savings on.

"But we'll also be borrowing a page from the warehouse clubs," Newman said. Efficiency and barebones overhead are the key strategies used by warehouse clubs to keep prices low.

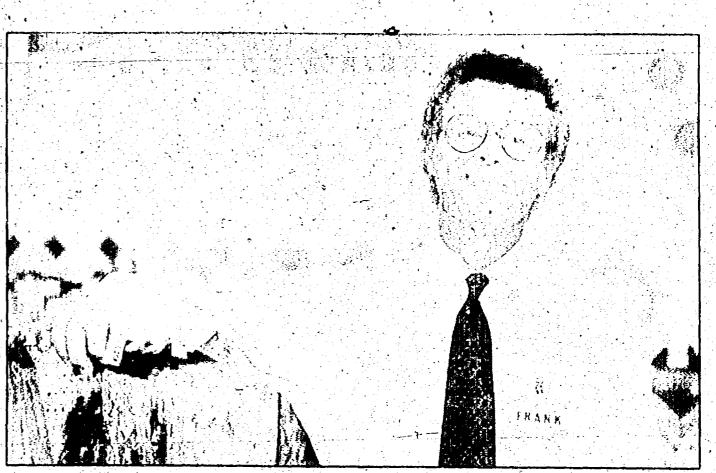

"Of course, we won't be quite as bare bones as the warehouse clubs," he said. PartiGiant won't be a Neiman Marcus, but it will be nicely decorated.

Despite some of the problems encountered by other superstores notably, a lack of interest by some name brand product manufacturers

- Newman said he found party goods distributors and manufacturers to be enthusiastic about the concept of a superstore devoted to the category.

"Before now, manufacturers didn't have a strong distribution base," he said.

THE GREATEST obstacle to pulling the new venture off, he said, is the lack of sophistication in the industry. A lack of large distributors, poor tracking of shipments and a lack of computer scanner codes all had to be overcome before PartiGi-.... ocome a reality, he said.

Frank Newman, president and CEO of F&M, called the lack of sophistication in the party goods industry his biggest challenge. A lack of large distributors, poor tracking of shipments and a lack of computer scanner codes all had to be overcome before PartiGiant could become a reality.

The greatest problem posed by these obstacles was finding and selecting merchandise.

"It's not like in appliances where there are publications that evaluate products for you - we spent a year evaluating the products ourselves. Our mission is not to carry the cheap Newman said PartiGiant will follow an everyday-lowest-price strategy with merchandise generally 30 to bulk, like office goods. "People 40 percent below retail.

Not all retail categories are ideal candidates for superstores, Newman said, but a party goods superstore should succeed for several reasons. Superstores cater to planned, Superstores also cater to either big tickets items, like appliances and computers, or products bought in rather than impulsive buying, he spend easily $200 on a party today." Finally, superstores must draw from a larger area to succeed - two factors that are aided by the wider selection and lower prices offered at Assuming party throwers can save $50, find a wider variety, and get good quality, Newman said he believes he can draw customers from all over Oakland County and parts of . Macomb and Wayne counties.

By David S. Stein special writer

Global competitiveness. Quality

They're terms that dominate the agendas of businesses, both large and small.

To help students keep abreast of these trends, Madonna University in Livonia is expanding its business graduate programs to offer new degree programs in international business and operations management.

"There is a necessity for businesses in southeast Michigan to look globally and identify as part of the global economic community," said Dr. Ernest Nolan, Madonna University's dean of graduate studies and humanities.

Both 36-semester hour programs, resulting in master of science degrees in business administration, are full concentrations, not just a specialty within an overall master's degree, Nolan said.

. The programs are designed for Germany. working business people, who are ex- OPERATIONS MANAGEMENT

THE INTERNATIONAL business program is part of Madonna's decision to expand its global involvement, Nolan said.

For the past two years, Madonna has had an extension unit of its master of science in administration program in Taiwan, where 60 students are enrolled. The international business degree includes course work in international trade structures and systems, management, marketing and finance. Students must pass a foreign language proficiency exam and complete a foreign work, study or travel experience.

Madonna has working relationships in place with Edgehill and Lansdowne Colleges in England and this fall semester, has more than 25 U.S. trade missions in Belgium and students enrolled.

sign, forecasting and planning, marketing strategy and competitive strategy analysis and planning. Each program requires a research project based on work experience, whose aim is to bring students and their graduate work to the attention of their supervisors.

But will local employers embrace these new programs over the traditional MBA path?

"Once employers look at the content of our program, they are usually very impressed," Nolan said. "Initials become less important than the content of our program."

Ester M. Yager admits to enjoying challenges.

She's been challenged in her job as a vice president at United Community Services of Metropolitan Detroit, a non-profit social help agency, and as a part-time instructor at Madonna University in Livonia.

Yager, a longtime Southfield resident, has stepped up to another challenge as president of the Women's Eco-

That non-partisan, non-profit organization, which observes its 30th anniversary next year, helps members develop leadership potential through communication, educational speakers and seminars, and camaraderie. Yager elaborated several goals.

"We want to do more with program presenters. We have 1,300 members and would like to see that increase. And we'd like to get more corporate sponsorship of luncheons," she said.

"It (membership) has crossed all economic, cultural, political and educational fields. It's a total mix." Learning and teaching have always been important

She earned a music degree from Marygrove College with an emphasis on piano performance. Later, she and a partner operated a combination record store/piano studio.

. YAGER SUBSEQUENTLY used the business experience she absorbed to train sales staff and managers at J.L. Hudson's. She later served in a variety of training capacities for several Girl Scout councils. Yager, has spent 16 years with United Community Services, a Detroit-based agency that plans and delivers social services. Her supervisory responsibilities include Tel-HELP, an information/referral service; the Center for Volunteerism; and the Tribute Fund, which provides small cash grants for individuals or groups that need a little extra push to reach a financial goal.

Along the way, Yager carned a master's degree in organizational communications from Wayne State University and completed the Leadership Detroit program. She has never regretted following the advice of men-vices, hired Yager back in 1978.

Yager now offers similar advice on networking skills - which she believes must be learned - and the value of continuing education for career enhancement as well as personal growth.

"I LOOKED at the age and educational background of people who were professional competitors and said I had better do something about this," Yager said of her decision to pursue a master's degree.

And her job? "It's tremendously satisfying," Yager said. "It calls for a lot of creativity, a lot of program design skills. There's a lot of freedom for saying, 'Here is a problem, what can we do about it?'

Any job that constantly focuses on human problems and sometimes the seamler side of life can take an emotional toll, she conceded.

"It really is not easy sometimes," Yager said. So how does she cope in the down times? "Part of it is to think what things would be like without us, and you have to have a belief what you do makes a difference."

Yager started teaching at Madonna about 10 years ago. This semester, it's a course on managing non-prof-

"I LOVE it. You learn so much when you teach. I found early on you can have all kinds of beliefs and theories. When you're in front of a group, you have to have a darn good hold on what you believe in," she said. Gerry Barrons, executive director of the Women's Economic Club, said she's impressed with Yager's leader-

Because she has worked in profit and non-profit spheres, she brings both perspectives," Barrons said. "Most of our members are women business owners or women in business.

"If you look where women are in management, one of the places you find more women is non-profits and government agencies. Ester brings that perspective.

"She also understands what it takes to run a volunteer organization," Barrons added. "I think her leadership is just unquestionable."

Welt, Roma's of Livonia is the right address — home of the 1991-92 Livonia Town Hall lecture series.

The celebrity chat and chew kicks off Wednesday, Oct. 16, with journalist Bill Monroe, creator and host of television's "Meet the Press" and editor of Washington Journalism Review.

Also on this season's schedule is designer and critic Richard Blackwell, Wednesday, Nov. 20; author of an upcoming book on Franklin Roosevelt and historian Doris Kearns Goodwin, Wednesday, Jan. 15; and antique appraiser Lawrence F. DuMouchelle, Wednesday, March 18. Lectures start at 10:30 a.m., followed by

"I think we have something that will interest everyone," said Lois Gibbons, president of Livonia Town

OF COURSE, they say that every year but Gibbons tells no tall tales. And judging by last year's batch of podium presiders, Livonia Town Hall is definitely become a popular place.

Among the highlights from the past series included the glowing singing voice of Carmel Quinn, the hard-hitting insights of media crific Jeffrey Cohen and the intriguing story behind the Dodge family legacy from author Jean Pitrone.

OK, so Joan Mondale was a bit of a snooze. The wife of former presidential hopeful Walter Mondale reportedly did spill some White House scuttle butt during the luncheon Q&A, though.

This season holds similar promise.

Bill Monroe is considered one of the deans of broadcast journalists, no doubt earned as the longtime host of "Meet the Press" and editor of WJR. Monroe has received The Peabody Award for news reporting and the Paul White Award for distinguished service to broadcast journalism.

"He (Monroe) is such a fabulous speaker," Gibbons said. "He's in the same category with John Cameron Swayze and Walter Cronkite. He's probably one of the best journalists around. I think he'll have a lot of interesting things to say."

WHILE MONROE might be reading between the lines Richard Blackwell will be ridiculing hem lines. The fashion designer and critic cuts no celeb any slack when it comes to his annual "10 Worst Dressed Women" list. Blackwell will share his favorite fashion faux paus as well as his own life story as a child star, stage and television personality and author of two published Rumors of Cher planning to attend with sling-shot cocked have not been confirmed.

Doris Kearns Goodwin will shed some light on the presidencies of John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson as well as Franklin Roosevelt. She is a former Harvard professor and fellow in the Johnson administration. Her two books, "The Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys" and "Lyndon Johnson and the American Dream" were both on the New York Times Best-Seller List.

Lawrence F. DuMouchelle has been a highly regarded appraiser of antiques for 28 years. The president of Du-Mouchelle Art Galleries Co., a family antique gallery and auction house, will appraise antiques brought in by the audience, according to Gibbons. The number of items to be assessed, though, will be limited to the first 30. Gibbons added there will be' a sign-up sheet posted at the lecture series.

- AS THE TOWN Hall series has grown more entertaining and informative, so too, has the size of the audience. Gibbons projects attendence will be larger than last year.

Proceeds from ticket sales benefit First Step, an organization that helps victims of domestic violence.

Tickets for the entire lecture series are $35 for patrons (whose names are printed in the program) and $25. Luncheon tickets for the series are an additional $40. Tickets for the individual lectures are $10 at the Phillip Hawk, who lives in Redford, carefully works on a shoe in his shop in Plymouth's Old Village.

Saddled down

Craftsman puts heart, soul into work

Hawk "fell in love" with leatherwork while designing a belt and a holster for a costume he wore on stage as a singer. 🦡

By Julie Brown staff writer

HILLIP HAWK DOESN'T HAVE A great deal of time to make his own

Hawk, a saddler and shoemaker, . moved his shop to Plymouth's Old Village in June. He'd previously had a shop inside the Scott Colburn saddlery in Livonia.

"I wanted to take a new direction. in my work," said Hawk, a Redford resident. He's begun to focus on a narrower area.

That doesn't include making a lot of shoes for himself. It was in 1984 that he last made such a pair of shoes on purpose. He guarantees the fit of shoes he makes, and has occasionally needed to make 3.3 another pair for a customer because the first pair didn't fit quite right.

"It has happened a few times in the past. It doesn't happen very much now."

He works with leather to create shoes, belts, saddles and other items. Hawk makes modern shoes totally by hand, including classic :walking shoes for women, classic dress shoes for men, and boots for both. Shoes start at around $550 and boots start at just under $800.

"THE METHODS of construction are superior, and I do use the best leathers I can find. Customers tend to take good care of their shoes, he said, and the shoes last a long time.

Hawk also creates historic shoe reproductions.

"I started shoemaking in a historical context."

Hawk was born in Denver. His father was in the service, so the family moved around.

"I consider Virginia home. I probably always will," said Hawk, who trained as a saddler and worked at Colonial Williamsburg in

A number of years ago, he was working as a singer with a Mexican musical group in Colorado. "In performance, a costume is worn."

That costume included a belt and holster with a pistol. Hawk approached a saddler in Denver for help. He then designed and decorated a belt and holster, "and just fell in love with the leatherwork."

He took an apprenticeship in the field. Hawk later moved to Virginia. He found virtually no Western riding was being done there at that time; Hawk now prefers English saddlemaking to

He was approached by Colonial Williamsburg officials. He workedthere from 1964 to 1972, beginning. in the shoemaker's shop. The man in charge there resigned, and Hawk was put in charge of both the shoemaker's shop and the harness and saddle shop.

HAWK'S WORK at Colonial Williamsburg included training others who ran those shops for "cars. "Now they're about to retire," he said with a smile. You know how that makes me feel?"

He teaches classes in various aspects of leatherwork at his shop. Hawk has also taught at Schoolcraft College.

He came to Michigan in 1972 and managed the craft division of Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in Dearborn for a little over two years. Hawk then went on contract with the National Park Service for a two-year U.S. Bicentennial program.

He became an employee at Scott Colburn in Livonia after that, and established his own business there in 1986. Hawk's now reducing the diversification in his work for economic reasons. The first thing to go was repair work.

"I must admit I do it very well." He'd done repairs as a saddler, not as a shoemaker. Saddlers normally both make and repair saddles, he said, but shoemakers typically don't do repairs.

"I don't even repair the shoes I make."

Hawk is reducing the number of types of footwear he makes, but still does historical footwear for those willing to pay for authentic reproductions. His primary love is the 18th Century.

HAWK, WHO travels to participate in festivals and shows, has a feeling that historic reproduction is a realm he will gradually phase out. Hand crafts in general are becoming somewhat of a lost art, he said, although exceptions remain.

In the 18th Century, labor was cheap and materials were expensive. The opposite's true today, he said.

He makes saddles by hand, but finds there isn't a great demand today. Handmade saddles start at about $2,500.

At his Plymouth shop, on East Liberty in Old Village, Hawk has his workshop, showroom and fitting room in one area. Tools of his trade line the walls. The smell of leather is both noticeable and welcoming.

He'd looked at another site in Plymouth, but things didn't work out there and he's glad he ended up where he did.

"Oh, I love it," he said of Plymouth. "It's a neat little town." Hawk's wife, Jocelyn, teaches physics and computers in Dearborn Heights. Their daughter, 18, is ... about to start studies in nursing at Niagara University in New York.

Hawk also has three sons, living in Denver, Boston and Alaska, and three grandchildren.

His interest in singing is still going strong. Hawk, a tenor, sings with the Michigan Opera Theatre and does liturgical work for a church in Troy. His daughter sings and plays the violin, and they've performed together in concert.

Hawk's pleased with the fact that. his students have gone on to become excellent craftsmen. He knows that he's a much better craftsman himself than was true when he was at Williamsburg.

"I always hope that the quality of work, as in anything else having to do with my life, is growing."

Dear Ms. Green,

I always enjoy your column and try to compare the bandwriting you are analyzing with that of someone I know. In several instances your comments have described the person I had in mind. So, you have made a believer of me!

More than 300 guests attended the 50th wedding anniversary celebration of William and Velda Henderson on Aug. 16. The Farmington Hills residents came to Michigan on their honeymoon and have lived here since. The couple were married Sept.

28, 1941, in Ste. Genevieve, Mo. -The Hendersons renewed their vows in Berean Baptist Church of Livenia. Their son, Paster Dennis Henderson, performed the ceremony. The couple's five children and 17 grandchildren planned a memoryfilled reception, held at the Karas House of Redford.

One of their gifts were a handmade quilt given to them by their children. Their daughter Karen made her mother's dress, the flower girl's dress and the wedding cake, just as her mother did for her 27 years ago.

Just as they dld 50 years ago, Beulah Crabtree, the groom's sister, served as matron of honor, and Gary Roth was the best man. Daniel Henderson served as the ring-bearer and Heather Careron was the flower girl. The next day, the two families met for a reunion with relatives and friends from throughout the U.S.

The couple's children are Jerry Henderson of Plymouth; Karen Klaus of Phoenix, Ariz; Ed Henderson of Livonia; Dennis Henderson of Jamestown, Ohlo; and David Henderson of Union Lake.

God's call prompts a midlife career change for pastor

By Julie Brown staff writer

The Rev. Kevin Miles was in his 30s when he decided to leave the business world and enter the minis-

Miles is getting settled in to his new lob as associate pastor at the First United Methodist Church of Plymouth. He arrived June 23.

'So I'm a seasoned veteran already. Three months," he said with a smile. This is his first assignment following his May graduation from Asbury Theological Seminar in Wilmore, Ky.

its frustrations in too much to do and not enough time to get it done. But I really enjoy the people." He and his family appreciate the warm welcome they've received.

Miles, 40, worked in data processing for a number of years. He earned a bachelor's degree in computer procomming from Purdue Univerin Indiana and began his career with an insurance company in Fort Wayne, Ind.

· MILES, AN Indiana native, was offered a job with Federal Mogul Corp. in Southfield. The family moved to Michigan in 1977.

"I had a very good job, a secure lutore," sald Miles, who was with Federal Mogul Corp. for 11 years. He began to think about entering the ordained ministry.

"It was the call of God on my life... Basically, I just waited until God revealed more of his plan."

Miles and his family lived in Farmington Hills at the time. In 1988, he felt the time had come to move to Kentucky with his family and began graduate school:

Becoming a student again took some getting used to, but Miles has no regrets.

'It was, but I really found it much easier than I anticipated because my desire was there." The desire that God had placed in his heart "helped me make that transition very easi-

His wife's father is a retired United Brethren minister and was influential in his decision to enter the ministry. Miles, who was raised in the Methodist church, earned a master of divinity degree from Asbury Theological Seminary and requested an appointment in southern Michi-

HE AND HIS wife wanted to be close to family members. His inlaws live in Detroit and his parents aren't too far away in Warren, Ind., near Fort Wayne. Cathee Miles, his wife, has brothers in Dearborn and Redford.

Cathee Miles taught health and physical education at Asbury College in Kentucky while her husband was in graduate school. They have three children, Meran, 12, a seventh grader at Central Middle School in Plymouth; Jessica, 10, a fifth grader at Hulsing Elementary School In Canton; and Nathanael, 7, a Hulsing second grader.

They live in Canton and have enjoyed getting acquainted with a new community. They'd tended to stay in the Farmington-Southfield-Livonia area during their earlier time in Michigan:

"We're still discovering the back roads," he said. "I like it a lot. I really like the small town atmosphere in the midst of a metropolitan area."

His title at the church in Plymouth Township is associate pastor for youth and evangelism. He's concentrating on those areas and also handles such duties as preaching, marriage counseling, visiting people in the hospital and at home, and officiating at weddings and funerals.

He's enjoying working with the Rev. John Grenfell Jr., senior pastor, and with others at the church.

"I appreciate John Grenfell. He isreally a good mentor for me and he's helping to shape my current and future ministry."

MILES HAS found that people who enter the ministry later in life have experience to draw on.

"Obviously, we've seen something of life itself and that can help us approach ministry with a certain amount of realism in our expectations." Those who become pastors later in life can, however, also have some cynicism if they don't keep a proper perspective, he said.

Miles has found his business experience useful, and believes it helps him relate to the struggles and concerns of laypeople. "That really helped shape me to be who I am."

In his free time, Miles enjoys sports. He played on a church softball team this year and considers volleyball his favorite sport. He occasionally rides his bicycle to work

"A lot of the needs are the same although I would say the pressures are greater." The pace of life in a high-tech urban setting's about double what he found in Kentucky.

It's easy for pastors to get caught up in the same hectic pace. "We need to be able to draw back and offer them a perspective that they don't,

Qualifications of judge should take precedence

Until a rather short time ago, not too many of us in these parts had heard of Clarence Thomas. Now the U.S. Supreme Court nominee is a major focus of radio talk shows across the country. He is the maligned hero of one side of the political spectrum and an uncomfortable possibility for the other side of the aisle.

The hearings designed to determine Judge Thomas's qualifications to sit on the bench of the highest court in the land have to some extent become a carnival of sorts. Some want to blame the Republicans for this. Others prefer to. throw it in the laps of the Democrats on the committee.

While there are those who say that the pro-life people are making it into a dog and pony show, there - claimed as their own.

are just as many who are quick to point a finger at the pro-choice group.

IT IS DIFFICULT to find much of the truth in any blame game. By their very nature, the fires fanned in blame games are much quicker to produce heat than light. Some would suggest that smoke is closer to the mark, and we all know that looking through a smokescreen produces anything but a clear pic-So what does qualify a person to be a fair judge? Quite some time ago in another court, Solomon showed his qualifications when two women came before him to settle a dispute over who was the real mother of a child they both moral perspectives

Rev. Robert Schaden

He suggested cutting the baby in two and giving half to each. Whereupon the imposter showed herself by saying that would be fine with her. The mother, on the other hand, willing to lose her child rather than seeing it harmed told the king to give the child to the other woman.

We do not know where Solomon stood on the issues of his day. We do know, however, that in this case he exhibited a good deal of wisdom as he set up a situation in which the truth would surface.

It is quite possible that the Thomas hearings evolved into a circus, not because of the bad faith of Democrats or Republicans or even the close-mindedness of prolifers and pro-choicers. Perhaps the process itself is flawed to the point of making such circuses inev-

WE DO NOT like to question our long-treasured processes, even when they do not work well. We become addicted to them as it were, and rather than face our addiction and change our processes we prefer to blame.

This particular process begins with a flaw in that a political president - no matter his party makes a politically oriented nomination. Wouldn't you?

Then the nominee is grilled by people, many of whom already have an opinion in one direction or the other. So it is that the nominee, whoever he or she might happen to be, is judged not so much on his or her qualifications to be a well-informed, wise, even-handed and honest member of the bench.

Rather, the judgment is made on whether the nominee agrees or disagrees with positions held by the people sitting in judgment-

As I listened to the hearings, it seemed that the committee was looking at Mr. Thomas in the way that many of us look at books. We judge them as good or worthy of being read by how closely they align with our own opinions, hardly a criterion for a good writer. I am just grateful that the questioners were not up for a seat on the bench of the highest court in the land.

Crossing Delancey' is nicely staged

Performances of the Jewish Ensemble Theatre production of "Crossing Delancey" continue through Oct. 6 at the Aaron DeRoy Theatre at the Jewish Community Center, 6600 W Maple Road in West Bloomfield. For tickets, call JET at 788-2900, visit any Ticketmaster outlet or call 645-6666.

Bubble, the grandmother in Susan Sandler's comedy "Crossing Delancey" is a character actor's dream role, and Sylvia Kauders wrings every tota of humor from the part in a performance likely to set a standard for this theater season.

Kauders created the role in the original New York production and brings her inimitable Bubbie to the Jewish Ensemble Theatre in West Bloomfield. One part chutzpah, one part doting, cooking, worrying, lov-

WHEN she sets her mind to finding a nice, Jewish man for her contentedly single granddaughter, Izzy, she's a tactical genius. Bubble only looks like a harmless, dimunitive old lady wearing an apron and sensible shoes. She's really a tiger in camouflage. In "Crossing Delancey" the romantic comedy plot line offers no profound revelations. "Delancey" tells delightfully the old boy meets girl story, and affirms belief in love and marriage, in family ties, and Jewish tradition underscored by a sprinkling of Yiddish lines in the script.

'Boy" sells pickles on New York's lower East side; "girl" sells books Uptown. Boy woos girl with help from Bubble and from Hannah, a wheeling and dealing matchmaker with a big mouth, a bigger appetite, and a fondness for bright, brazen floral prints that are as colorful and as lacking in subtlety as she is. Elizabeth Welss brings Hannah to full blown life.

DIRECTOR MORTON Zieve keeps the schmaltz of the plot line in balance with the zing of humor, and the utterly non-saccharine characters of Bubble and Hannah. David Fox plays down the role of Tyler, the author who infatuates Izzy. He's a pompous egotist whose charm shines in her daydreams far more brilliantly than in life.

Both romantic leads, Carol Lempert as Izzy and Thom Galasso as Sam project'a convincing sincerity that makes their eventual pairing a satisfying conclusion - two good people who deserve each other. Lampert with her anchor woman deep voice and modern attitudes is, thankfully, no cloying ingenue. And Galasso is no schlemiel at the hands of manipulating women.

The un-presupposing open-walled set gives the play a sense of place without stealing scenes from the characters - not that any set anywhere could upstage either Kauders or Weiss - and food on Bubble's table looks luscious enough to make any good grandma proud.

An original clarinet theme threads though the action and echos Klezmer music as it recalls the modern story's ethnic roots. Black and white photographs of New York on the backdrop give particular time and place to this nicely staged boy meets girl story.

For someone who wasn't sure he'd get work, Gordon Reinhart has done very well since he moved to Los Angles last November to pursue an act-

'I had a walk-on role as a walter in the network comedy Family Man' with Gregory Harrison, and did Man in Trouble" with Jack Nicholson," said Reinhart who grew up in Westland, and graduated from Wayne Memorial High School in

"I play Nicholson's marriage therapist in the second scene of the film. You get the sense that this is my first case. It wasn't a long scene, but it was really exciting working with Mr. Nicholson."

THE FILM, a comedy, is now in post-production work and should be out next summer.

Reinhart's back in town to direct an adaptation of Mollere's comedy, "The Misanthrope," which opens Sept. 26 at the Attic Theatre in De-

'I learn a lot about directing when I'm acting, and I learn a lot about acting when I'm directing.'

- Gordon Reinhart

Last year he played the lead role in the Attic's presentation of, "Billy Bishop Goes to War," a one-character musical based on the experiences of a Canadian flying ace during World War I.

"This summer I did "Billy Bishop Goes to War," at the Snowmass-Aspen Repertory Theatre in Colorado, he said. "It was my third season as artistic director, but this is the first time I acted. The Attic production helped, the second time was much REINHART SAID he is comfortable switching between directing and acting. "I really enjoy being on both sides. For me, one informs the other. I learn a lot about directing when I'm acting, and I learn a lot. about acting when I'm directing."

In "The Misanthrope," Reinhart directs a cast consisting of Roger Bechtel, Eden Cooper, Andress Chippi, Tony Dobrowolski, Rick Frederick, Aaron Williams, Kate Willinger and Harry Wetzel.

Bechtel and Reinhart have worked together in Colorado for the last two summers. This marks the second time Reinhart has directed Bechtel in a lead role at the Attic. In 1990 the two teamed up for William Shakespear's "Hamlet."

"This comedy has been around for a long time. It something that entertains. The production is updated to 20th century Hollywood so 1 think the audience will understand the world of the play more readily," said

"The Misanthrope" finds Alceste, a writer played by Bechtel, trapped in a hypocritical and decpetive society. Much to his astonishment, Alceste falls in love with Cellmene (played by Chippi), a Hollywood starlet who epitomizes and thrives on the social hypocrisy that Alceste de-

The tangled pair of lovers must confront their deepest feelings to determine whether their futures will be spent together.

WHEN THE play ends Oct. 27, Reinhart will be "leaving on a jet film, it's something I feel I could do," he said.

"I'd like to create something that's still there. When you finish a play it's gone. They take down the set. Also you get paid more money for films. It would give me the freedom and power to do theater when I want. It would be nice to put some money in Scheduled events include an 8 p.m. afterglow reception catered by Traffic Jam & Snug on Oct. 2, a benefit performance and afterglow on Oct.

3, and talk back where audience members have the opportunity to ask questions of the actors, director, and production staff on Oct. 19; and an afternoon matinee 2 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 16 at 2 p.m.

"I would really like to see people support the Attic," said Reinhart. "It never ceases to amaze me. They've been around 20 years, and have survived a hostile environment. It's the most exciting theater in the area." Tickets to the 8 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 3 performance are $25. Proceeds will benefit the Attic's education and outreach programs for students and senior citizens.

Glynn and Louise Scanlan enjoy preserving the past. Their oak kitchen table and north-wind, press-back chairs belonged to Louise's grandmother. Glynn refinished the set.

THEN GLYNN and Louise Scanian moved into their Cape Codstyle house in Livonia. each found a place to express creativity.

Louise filled the house with simple country furnishings. Glynn probmed the 1% acres, which is a picture-perfect setting for the 52year-old house and a preserve for Michigan wildflowers.

Louise fell in love with the charming frame house as soon as she saw its paned windows and screened-in porch overlooking the yard. That was 21 years ago, yet she can't imagine leaving this dream house, tucked into a heavily freed area several hundred feet from a dirt road.

"As soon as I stepped inside, it reminded me of homes in the East." Louise said. "It was exactly what I wanted."

Since Louise always preferred simple furnishings ("nothing Scandinavian or with clawed feet"), she chose mostly 18th- and 19th-century Early American furniture for the five-room house

And because she wasn't a serious collector at the time, she retrieved much of it from her grandmother's house, used furniture stores, flea markete and garage sales.

Today we could spend $200 for an old quilt, but we couldn't in the beginning," she said.

OVER THE years, Louise has created pretty and inviting rooms that have a history of their own. The master bedroom, for example, includes her mother's oak dresser and her grandmother's old oak washistand, which is converted to a handsome night table

The room also includes an 1860s pumpkin pine blanket chest bought for $40 at a garage sale. Her latest acquisition, brought back from other stoneware. The chest, dating to 1860,

Ohio, is a stately four-poster, turn-

I'm always seeking and restoring," she said.

Sometime over the past two decades. Glynn joined his wife on her antiquing expeditions and even became an expert refinisher and collector of jelly jars, stoneware and Wallace Nutting photographs dating to the turn-of-the-century.

He has made several Shakerstyle peg racks for the house as well as handsome cabinets and shelves

"To maintain my sanity, I had to develop an interest in furniture and collecting," Glynn said, smiling.

Christine Wong demonstrates Chinese calligraphy technique. Standing over the paper, she moves with the rhythm and gracefulness of a dancer as she paints the Chinese character for love.

Show spotlights Chinese painting and calligraphy

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

Lyrical watercolor paintings of sailboats, flowers, still life, panda bears, camels and Chinese calligraphy are included in a vibrant new exhibition of 40 works by Livonia artist Christine Wong.

The exhibition continues through Oct. 12 at Nelson's Gallery, 16376 Middlebelt, Livonia.

A meet-the-artist reception will be 1:30-5:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 28. It will feature demonstrations of Chinese painting techniques in watercolor (2:30 p.m.), followed by Chinese calligraphy technique with brush (3:30 p.m.)

Born on mainland China, Wong's work serves to bridge the cultures of East and West. She combines 5,000 years of Chinese philosophy and painting techniques, ink and Western watercolor to create delicate, flowing images with a rhythmic energy that dances across the paper. In China, rice paper is commonly used to create paintings. Since moving to this country in 1971 with husband Robert, Wong has worked on a variety of Western papers, searching for one that holds color well, yet is easy to preserve for enjoyment and framing.

"I LEARN how to handle Western papers. Rice papers you can not handle as easily. There is a way for harmony between the arts," Wong said.

During the first demonstration, Wong will create three paintings of flowers and a panda bear using watercolor combined with Chinese painting techniques.

"The demonstration will show how to paint with a bold stroke and to finish the paintings in short time; spontaneous paintings in 15 minutes," Wong said.

Wong believe artists as well as arts supporters can grow and develop by sharing their talents, each with the other.

"You broaden your eyes when you share. You encourage and help by sharing," Wong said. "If people have special request, if they want to see a certain technique, I don't mind to show them."

At 3:30 p.m., Wong will demonstrate the ancient art of Chinese calligraphy using ink, water and Chinese brush. In China, students begin calligraphy lessons in second grade, much as children learn penmanship

"I CAN use the same brush for writing and painting," Wong said. "I'll do bold, large size writings as a demonstration. I'll explain the philosophies, techniques, different style and how to control brush. I'll leave time for people to ask questions. It

These symphonies are cultural pillars in community

BEGINNER ENSEMBLES they're not.

The Plymouth and Livonia symphonies boast a blend of musical and professional backgrounds. Their keyhotes range from Bach to Broadway. " And they're about to raise the curtain on new concert seasons.

Unlike larger symphonics, these community orchestras give music students, music teachers and music lovers the chance to showcase their string, wind, brass and percussion skills while working alongside veteran musicians. Cultural jewels, they also give many local musicians their first onstage opportunity to be heard by folks other than family and friends.

For Lynn Route, a LSO cellist on

The Livonia resident calls the LSO "a wonderful outlet for musicians who have other commitments and other jobs but who still have that love of music they want to express. It fulfills a real need."

STRONG COMPETITION for the entertainment dollar has prompted the Plymouth and Livonia symphonies to add a new eatch phrase to their marketing plans - "Diversify, diversify, diversify." The intent: to broaden their appeal.

Both orchestras, of course, will feature legends like Brahms and Mozart plus Tchaikovsky's holiday clas-sle, "The Nuteracker," this season.

Gershwin and Joplin, Young Artists Competition winners, a "Christmas Special," a "Merry Olde England Wassail Dinner Feast" and "Come to the Cabarat."

Plymouth's 10 event lineup also will include all-American and all-French fare as well as a PSO recital, a popse benefit and Junior Miss and off for the past 15 years, music But Livonia's 11-event schedule. will appear too.

Planist Flavio Varani, organist William Whitehead, violinist ,Victoria Haltom and cellist Nadine Deleury will solo during Livonia's 18th concert season.

Soloists during Plymouth's 46th concert season will include planists Ralph and Albertine Votapek, dancer Densil Adams, mezzo soprano Kathleen Segar and clarinetist John Mohler.

THE CONDUCTOR'S wands aren't awarded lightly, Both Livonla's Francesco DiBlast and Plymouth's Russell Reed enjoy top-flight

light's glare.

Series change each year but the orchestras' basic mission remains: to bring symphonic concert entertainment to the people.

Metropolitan symphonics are key cultural resources: no question about that. But fans of the classics don't have to go to Detroit or Ann Arbor to find the uplifting strains of symphomy music. They can satisfy their fix closer to home with the likes of the PSO and LSO.

With no general admission ticket more than $10 to $12, the PSO and LSO also offer an affordable way to introduce young people to live performances of high-quality music, And they're a godsend for local per-

Amid deep cuts in state arts funding, DiBlasi and Reed, who oversee budgets of $100,000 and $78,000 respectively, are acutely aware matching grants, corporate sponsorships and fund-raising savvy are keystones to survival. No wonder their orchestras have such vital support arms: the Livonia Symphony Society and the Plymouth Symphony

But let's remember: brisk ticket sales are the best form of advertising and the best measure of success.

When people willingly part with hard-earned discretionary dollars to buy concert tickets, it's clear the Herculean effort a community symphony demands is well worth it.

have created a house with roots. The heights of their two grown children still are clearly marked on the kitchen door.

The house has a lived in look and is filled with things that convey warmth and hospitality," Glynn said.

A spinning wheel dating to the 1800s (a birthday gift from Glynn) fills the living room window and is almost a symbol of what's inside.

The room also holds a large pie safe, which Glynn bought in spite of its dilapidated condition. Herepaired torn screening and fixed a broken leg, making it a handsome addition to the room.

Glynn made two sinall table lamps from a 25-cent crock and a wooden spool. A large, worn tool . chest serves as a coffee table. Stereo equipment is stored in an oak cabinet with speakers concealed in an old Vernor's crate and a basket.

A camel back sofa upholstered in burnt red and an Ethan Allen library chair are the only pieces bought new.

The room, lined with tongue and groove pine paneling, has a lofty cove celling and a dramatic fieldstone fireplace, which the original owner made from handpicked stones.

THE DINING area includes a blind cupboard dating to 1860. It is the room's focal point and an ideal spot for Glynn's collection of jars and crocks. A drop-leaf dining table and a long Deacon's bench complete the room.

After years of planning, the Scanlans enlarged their small kitchen to make it more functional. The new ceiling was carefully contoured to match the roof's original 19-foot slope. A structural beam in the addition is covered in wood and decorative beams were placed in the original kitchen area.

The couple selected simple maple cabinets and refinished the pine peg flooring that was covered with three layers of linoleum. An oak table and four north-wind, press-back chairs that belonged to Louise's grandmother fill the room. Old baskets, glassware, pewter and a dry sink decorate the kitchen.

Besides furnishing with antiques and collectibles, Louise has accessorized the house with her own dried flowers, potpourri, handmade pillows and quilts.

"So much of who we are is evident inside and outside the house," Glynn sald. "We like preserving something of the past."

Spruce up home for the holidays

Two HOME magazine designers are coming to share their creative talents with those interested in sprucing up their homes for the holiday season.

"HOME for the Holidays," sponsored by Schoolcraft College in Livonia, will be Friday, Oct. 11.

Registration begins at 9 a.m., followed by luncheon and a guided tour of the Michigan Design Center, I ay.

-While the design center is usually open only to the trade, arrangements have been made for this program to be open to the public. Program fee of $55 per person includes lunch. Registration informa. Jo-Anne Pier tion and a descriptive brochure can be obtained by calling Schoolcraft lishing director, and Jo-Anne Pier, retail merchandising editor for the publication. Ruggiero is flying in from Los Angeles and Pier from New York for the seminar.

Ruggiero is an authority on home remodeling and decorating. He has designed a textile collection, developed an audio-visual magazine for Ethan Allen Inc. and developed television's' first series on decorating and entertaining, Living Magazine." His most recent television work includes his role as chief decorating consultant for the PBS "This Old House" series.

As retail merchandising editor for HOME magazine, Pier is responsible for designing marketing programs for home furnishings, specializing in decorating clinics, seminars and how-to demonstrations.

Those attending "HOME for the Holidays" may bring fabric swatches and pictures of their rooms or areas on which they want Pier and Ruggiero to comment.

Since Wong's return from a monthlong visit with her parents in Talwan, she has developed a new style of calligraphy painting that breaks from tradition into what she refers to as decorative calligraphy.

Inject humor to 'lighten up' photo portfolio

We've all heard the expressions "lighten up" and "don't take life so seriously" as common phrases of how to best deal with life's day to day stresses.

And we all know how important it is to have and maintain a good sense of humor to get us through pressure-filled days.

Have you ever thought about "lightening up" on your photography by putting some humor in your shots? Doing so can be refreshing and will add variety to your photographic portfolio.

You can put humor in your photographs two ways: intentional planning or stumbling onto a funny situation.

PLANNED HUMOR can begin at home with your children and family pets. You can dress up your little girl in Mom's high heels and makeup, or pose your labrador on the plano bench, paws on keys, ready to play a Mozart concerto!

Have a cat and a goldfish? How about setting your feline alongside the goldfish bowl and then waiting for that hungry, lip-smaking look in his eves?

Or the next time Grandma and Grandpa come to visit, think up some slapstick routine involving the family that you can capture on €ilm.

The advantage of planned humor photographs is that you have time photography Monte:

Have you ever thought about "lightening up" on your photographyby putting some humor in your shots? Doing so can be refreshing and will add variety to your. photographic portfolio.

You can put humor in your photographs two ways: intentional planning or stumbling onto a funny situation.

to prepare yourself photographically. You can compose, focus and determine exposure in advance.

THE SECOND type of humor photography requires more spontaneity on your part, because most often the action is in front of you almost before you know it. And unless you're prepared, you may miss the shot.

Strolling down a back street in a small Greek village on Corfu, I chanced upon a donkey, with a small kitten playing nearby, Anticipating a humorous confrontation, I quickly determined exposure and pre-focused on the donkey.

Sure enough, within seconds, the inquiring kitty rambled over and the alarmed donkey suddenly raised his head, frightening the inquisitive pussycat. Being ready enabled me to record this charming close encounter on film.

I always try to be on the lookout for humor both with and without my camera. After all, lightening up is a real "snap"!

Study up

New garden books abound

FROM THE bookshelf:

• "Secrets of the Great Gardeners," by Peter Loewer and Anne Moyer Halpin, in cooperation with the Brooklyn Botanic Garden (Summit, $19.95), contains gardening advice from successful gardeners at the BBG.

You are led on private visit with the experts and learn about their successes and sometime failures. Lists of plants used in these gardens are given with care instructions. Seasonal advice is included.

• "The Complete Book of Flowers," by Denise Diamond (North Atlantic Books, $16.95, paper), contains much information about growing and using flowers in many ways. The botany section, "Getting to Know the Flowers," is very clearly explained - first rate.

I like the way the book is organized. Drawings are crisp, and myriad ways to use flowers in crafts, cooking (nice recipes), beauty concocilons and more are featured. A chapter on relaxation is interesting, as is the one entitled "Spirits and Fairles of the Flowers."

• You may already own "The Complete Shade Garden," by George Schenk (Houghton Mifflin, $17.95 paper), first published in 1984.

Don't let the date inside discourage you from a purchase. In the 1991 edition, two chapters have been added to increase its usefulness.

Schenk addresses all the ways to grow shadeloving plants, from preparing the soil to pruning. His word pictures are easy for the layman to understand and visualize how the plants look and how they will perform. This is not a "pretty-pleture" book, but one full of good information.

• "Herbs for All Seasons, Growing and Gathering Herbs for Flavor, Health and Beauty," by Sally Freeman (Plume, $9.95 paper), explains how to grow herbs and use them in many ways, as the title indicates.

Although the book generally deals with modern medical care, much other information is given, such as their historical uses and how they are becoming valuable in modern medicine. • "Successful Flower Gardening" (Ortho

Gardeners' oook nook

Books, $29.95) was written by Ortho staff editors, and what a fine job!

It guides us across the country to visit eight private gardens, and features different types and explains how the owners and landscapers developed and care for them. One or two small gardens are featured. The others are larger.

One public display garden, Gilberg Perennial Farms near St. Louis, Mo., which I visited earlier this month, features many garden styles. Much can be learned by visiting just such a nursery.

Two-thirds of the book is an encyclopedia, showing photographs and describing many speoies,

Three more "keepers" from Ortho:

-- "Greenhouse Plants" ($7.95) describes more than 500 plants suitable for greenhouse conditions and instructs about light, humidity, fertilization, propagation and all the rest.

- "The Easlest Flowers To Grow" ($7.95) features a variety of flowering plants and gives buying and planting tips as well as garden design information.

--- "All About Vegetables" ($12.95) is an updated and expanded edition for the '90s that addresses such things as composting, mulching, responsible water use, coldframes and growing in containers. Many vegetables, some unusual ones that are becoming popular, are described and we learn how to use the harvest.

• "How Does Your Garden Grow," by Pamela Jones (Penguin), reviewed in September 1989, is now available. I repeat: A thorough book especially good for new gargeners.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham.

ARIANA GALLERY

Functional and decorative hand-crafted teapots, made from clay, paper, glass, fiber and metals, by artists across the United States, are featured in a show through Oct. 26, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 386 E. Maple, Birmingham, 647-6405.

SHERRY WASHINGTON GALLERY

Thursday, Sept. 26 - Oil and watercolor works by Richard Mayhew are on exhibit Sept. 26 to Dec. 24. Reception 5-8 p.m. Thursday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Friday and noon to 5 p.m. Saturday, L.B. King Building, 1274 Library at Grand River, Detroit, 981-4500.

● PEWABIC POTTERY

"Mexican Folk Ceramics," curated by Van Deren Coke, continues through Nov. 9, 10125 E. Jefferson, Detroit.

We need carriers for Observer & Eccentric routes. Call 591-0500 o find out all about it.

Homeowners lax about insurance

staff writer

You can recall almost instantly many facts about your house - attractive, features, improvements made over the years, approximate market value.

But what about your homeowners insurance policy?

protects your castle and its contents from storm, fire, theft and vandalism losses. The insurance also pro--tects you from liability for injuries sustained by others on your property and damages caused by members of your household elsewhere.

Homeowners generally don't know exactly what they have, insurance professionals maintain.

'Most people have no idea what they're covered for," said Alice Malkowych, an agent with Johnston Lewis Associates.

Sue Kesling, a customer services representative for Emerson-Prew, added. "I don't think they know where they stand." Advised Jeff Ashton, a Farmer's Insurance agent: "The thing they should be concerned with is not what they're covered for but what they're not covered for. It's easier to explain from that perspective."...

"PROBABLY THE the most That's right, the document that misconstrued comment is, 'It's rotects your castle and its contents covered,'" Malkowych said. "The question should be, 'Covered for what?' Consumers think they're totally covered for everything.

What they might not know about jewelry is that there's a $500 limit, a · $100 deductible, it's only for theft and they need to file a police report," she added.

The most basic coverage generally protects against 11 perils including fire and theft, according to the Michigan Association of Certifled Public Accountants.

Middle coverage provides for additional protection including damages from frozen plumbing, falling objects and the weight of snow and

Deluxe coverage, the most popular plan nowadays, covers all risks not specificaly excluded. Flooding and earthquakes are common exclu-

"Back-up of sewers and drains also isn't covered," Ashton said, "Lately, companies have been defining an earthquake as earth movement. That means you wouldn't be covered if a lake undermines or a sand dune shifts."

BUT YOU CAN buy extra cover-

Flood insurance is expensive. Kesling recently wrote a flood insurance rider for structural damage on a $150,000 house in the Grosse Pointes. That rider cost $655. The rest of the homeowners policy came Kesling provided an earthquake coverage quote of 40 cents per $1,000 for a brick house, 20 cents per $1,000 for a wood frame structure. Different companies may treat a similar set of facts differently. Some policies will cover the cost to remove a trèe that blows down on private property without causing physical damage, Some policies cover food spoilage in a freezer from power outages.

On losses or damages to contents, consumers can choose replacement cost or actual cash (depreciated) value. The latter is cheaper by about 10 percent, but agents are virtually unanimous in recommending that homeowners opt for full reimburse-

Consumers also can save money by increasing their deductible, outof-pocket expenses they pay on a claim before insurance picks up the balance, to $250 from $100.

WHAT DOES A BASIC HOMEOWNER'S POLICY COVER? Fire or lightning? Windstorm or hail? Explosion? Biot or civil commotion? Aircraft and vehicles? Smoke? Vandalism and malicious mischiel? . Theft? Glass breakage?

Seminar set to explain buyer agency concept

Richter & Associates of Northville will sponsor a half-day real estate buyer agency seminar from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday at the Plymouth Elks, 41700 Ann Arbor.

Fred Richter will discuss the concept of buyer representation in which the buyer's agent works for the client in contrast to working with a traditional agent.

"The biggest difference is a traditional agent can work with a buyer, but is required by law to protect the seller's interest," Richter said. "A buyer's agent works for the buyer, protecting the buyer's best interests."

Topics include: buyer agency contracts, fee structures, marketing the concept, office procedures and liability issues.

Richter lists some of the benefits to the buyer who selects and buyer's agent as:

• Access to the housing market beyond multi-listed houses.

Confidentiality owed to association

Could you please explain the duty of confidentiality that is owed to our association by our attorney? I am concerned about an apparent lapse of security between the management company and the attorney who is in close geographical proximity to the management firm. Can you give me any suggestions on how to deal with this perceived problem?

An attorney has a professional responsibility to maintain client confidences and to take reasonable measures that are necessary to ensure that those confidences are preserved. Included within that responsibility is the need to ensure that persons outside of the law firm are not given access to confidential information of the client that is to be

If, for example, the attorney is sharing space with other lawyers or employees of the management company, there could be situations where the confidences of the attorney-client relationship are compromised. This would include the possibility of sharing a secretary or other personnel. I would strongly urge that the board of directors bring this matter to the attention of the attorney and obtain adequate assurances that the confidences of the association are being preserved. If you are not satisfied that the attorney is assuring these confidences, the board should seriously consider retaining other legal counsel.

Building a better auto dealership

Marilyn Fitchett editor/953-2102

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

When it comes to automobile dealership architecture, you might think the practical applications of running a business with five components would severely limit options.

But in the past year several area auto dealerships have opened or have begun construction, and although each accomplishes the same purpose, none of them look alike.

There are new Saturn dealerships in Troy and Plymouth. Meadowbrook Dodge is being built in Rochester. Fred Lavrey Infiniti is in Birmingham and Estate Motors in Bloomfield Hills.

Of course, there are similarities. One reason, according to Richard Trost of Saturn Corp. is the automobile companies are exercising control over the architectural process.

Trost, a member of Saturn dealership retail environmental design committee, sald General Motors' newest car company spent months designing its prototype dealership.

"It is a business — it's not a museum (so) it has to be efficient," Trost

THE STARTING POINT for Safurn and most dealerships is a concept called "functional adjacencies," he said. This means that dependent functions - like the service and parts départment - are positioned near one another.

Different companies may prioritize some relationships differently, but some are obvious in all dealerships. More subtle relationships result in striking differences between dealerships, he said.

... Most dealerships, for example, would place the customer lounge near the service area. "We at Saturn thought it would be better to place the customer lounge near the front (of the dealership)."

Placing a lounge at the front accomplishes two things — customers don't feel forgotten, and the mostlikely future customer is exposed to new products, Trost explained.

Another trend in dealerships, he sald, is the growing importance of service departments. Saturn and other dealerships are placing service entrances at the front adjacent to new car showrooms.

Sometimes function takes a back seat to other considerations like site restrictions and sales and marketing strategies.

FRED LAVREY Infiniti in Birmingham has the same goal - selling cars — as other dealerships, but it takes a different approach.

Here, the facility is a showplace for its products, architect Ron Kaliszewski said. "It (the dealership) looks almost like the cars were there and the building was built around

Kaliszewski, a partner at the architectural firm Luckenbach-Ziegelman in Birmingham, said he had to comply with design and architectural restrictions handed down by Infin-

When the concept was developed, a decision was made to emphasize appearance and feel, rather than function and foot traffic flow. "This isn't a showroom you can just walk through."

Instead, the design encourages visitors to walk around in much the same way an art gallery might be designed, Kaliszewski said.

There are four viewing areas where people see the automobiles. These viewing areas surround what Infiniti calls a "contemplation area" - an area set apart from the automobiles and the sales people designed to give customers a chance to think and relax.

Despite these differences from the typical automobile dealership, Infiniti still recognizes necessary functions, Kaliszewski sald.

Site restrictions limited what could be included. The service area is across the street at Lavrey's Owners no longer have carte blanche in the design of their facilities. Both auto companies and dealers are hoping architects will help the car-buying public to beat a path to their newly-designed doors.

Porsche-Range Rover-Audi dealership. "We had to get special dispensation from Infiniti for that."

Kallszewski said another important element is the reception area. "It's really a practical decision."

A receptionist can direct people to where they need to go, whether it is to talk to a service manager or ask a salesperson a question, he said. "And people appreciate the professionalism they associate with (reception

BUT FUNCTION alone does not an auto dealership make.

Here is where auto dealers differ wildly. Sometimes, dealers will strive for a conservative, traditional look; other times, companies will strive for a striking contemporary "Architecture is a reflection of the mood of the times." Trost of Saturn said. The challenge for dealers is to create a timeless, undated image.

Saturn wants its dealers to promole an image of a new kind of car company. Concepts such as a sense of being inviting, uncomplicated, friendly, and timeless are best conveyed by appearance, he said.

"We wanted something instantly recognizable (as Saturn) — the intent was to make it say Saturn," he said.

This was accomplished in several "One way to make a building look more inviting," Trost said, "is to include a canopy (that shelters visitors as they approach the door)."

A canopy also makes certain there is no doubt on the entry location, Trost noted, adding one of the biggest problems with automobile dealers of the past is there was no central entry point.

To convey a sense of the uncomplicated, Saturn decided on simple, flat walls in Saturn colors of white, with gray and red accents. When coupled with the canopy, the simple walls are intended to create a sense of excitement.

"It's called the concept of stimulation through contrast," he said.

COMPLETING THE design required various elements of landscape architecture, parking and driveways. "We had to give individual dealers a lot of room to maneuver

Entrance drives, Trost noted, were intentionally designed to approach the dealership from the front and center so visitors can take in the whole dealership. Conventional dealerships might have several entrances from the front and side, but Saturn's dealership model attempts to focus the visitor's attention. Kaliszewski said he also had to tions from Infiniti. But in his case, he was granted a great deal of leeway in which to design the dealership. Most Infiniti dealerships are beige with black trim and have a relatively smooth-textured surface; Fred Lavrey Infiniti is brown brick with comply with architectural specifica-green trim. "Fred Lavrey and I felt (the more contemporary Infiniti design) wasn't appropriate for Birmingham," he

"We wanted a low-pressure, lowprofile, low-statement facility," he Further complicating the design was a need for leasable office space above the dealership, Kaliszewski sald. Most Infiniti dealerships are stand-alone facilities, but land prices in Birmingham necessitated expanding the facility.

The growing importance of service departments is being reflected in new auto dealerships. Saturn and others are placing service entrances at the front, adjacent to new car showrooms.

The canopy of the Don Massey Saturn dealership in Plymouth tips off the location of the entry, resolving problem of dealerships built years ago.

Most infiniti dealerships are beige with black trim and a smooth exterior surface. But in keeping with Birmingham's architecture, Fred Lavrey Infiniti is brown brick with green trim.

Bank on architecture

Free tours of the Standard Federal Bank corporate headquarters in Troy will be offered from 1-4 p.m. on Architect's Sunday - Oct. 6. The event is sponsored by the Detroit Chapter of the American Institute of Architects with architect WBDC Group, Interior architect Ford & Earl, and construction manager Barton Malow Co. Standard Federal headquarters is a seven-story building on a 27-acre-site on Big Beaver east of Coolidge, Its interior is dominated by a granite-clad atrium that floods the building with natural light. The stepped-up design and open floor plan around the central atrium allow each office a view of the skylight.

Houses revert from borrowing machines to homes

By John Cunniff AP Newsleatures

One positive consequence of weakness in housing markets over the past few years has been a return to common sense on the part of buyers and sellers.

Common sense says a single-family home is for living rather than investing, but that seemingly obvious truth had been distorted in many geographic areas where prices escalated far beyond the general inflation rate

In parts of the Northeast, for example, houses literally doubled in price within a few years, and homeowners tended to talk not about the qualities of their homes but the potential for making a killing in the marketplace.

The house became equated with a

When market values slowed after the mid-1980s it seemed for a while that families would recapture the spirit of the house as a home. But then came home equity loans that in effect turned the house into a borrowing machine.

It is hard to dispute the investment value, especially since the investor buys on credit and lives in the investment.

It is almost impossible for a small investor to be granted such a glorious opportunity. In stocks, for instance, an account is opened with cash, not credit. A line of credit, called margin, might or might not come later.

"Assume a buyer purchased a median price home in 1980 for $62,200. By 1990 the median price had risen to $95,500, an increased in value of 53.5 percent or a compound annual yield of 4.4 percent.

"However, factoring in the typical 20 percent downpayment of $13,500 produces an equity of $46,600 in 1990. This represents a total in-crease in equity of 250.4 percent."

It leads him to conclude that "clearly, a leveraged housing purchase has been a good financial investment, even in a decade when prices in general slightly lagged inflation."

Arts and Crafts furniture's popularity rejuvenated

By Helen Diana Vincent special writer

HEN IS a table not just a table but an ethical statement? And what metaphor for a better life?

These broader implications surface when the subject of Arts and Crafts furniture come up, particularly Gustav Stickley pieces.

Perhaps more than any other style, Arts and Crafts furniture seems to attract many collectors and dealers as much for its social ethic and strict design principles as for its increasing market value.

Bruce Szopo of the Duke Gallery in Birmingham is just one of those fascinated by the social ethic behindthe Arts and Crafts and the meaning it has for today's collectors.

He describes the situation in this way: "As we come close to the end of the 20th century, we're reaching a 'new level of consciousness, especially in the greater respect for the environment and increased value for Jamily and home.

""You might even consider it a part of the New Age philosophy. What is happening now has many parallels with what happened at the end of the 19th century, when the old Victorian order gave way to the Modern period."

GESTURING TOWARD a Gustav Stickley arm chair, Szopo goes on to say, "What this chair embodies can be summarized in four points underlying the entire Arts and Crafts movement and its revival.

"Foremost, it symbolizes the revolt against the 19th-century industrial revolution, which the English founders of the movement saw as demeaning the individual, excluding the very privileged upperclass. Writers and artisans such as John Ruskin and William Morris wanted to humanize the workplace and society in general.'

"Second, art and design is seen as a stimulus to life. Design of objects gained a new respectibility by not being thought of as separate from art, but part of it.

"Third, and perhaps the most important," Szopo emphasized, "all of these objects were designed for the home, considered the very center of life itself, the key environment that nurtured individuals, who, in turn, helped to create a better society."

"Finally," he summarized, "this ideal environment could not foster a better person unless there was a simplicity to life and this simplicity was reflected in the design of all -furnishings."

CONTINUING WITH his observations, Szopo observed, "Whathas made Arts and Crafts a major collectible today is an attitude that has begun to recognize the validity of these principles. Today's younger collectors appreciate the furniture for its simplicity because they are looking to simplify their own lives and re-order many priorities inherited from a previous generation."

It was Gustav Stickley, credited for bringing the English Arts and Crafts philosophy and design principles to America, who also referred to raising the level of education so that it was suited to make real men and women and not just grist for the commercial mill.

But it was the commercial mill, including two of his own brothers, who competitively manufactured thousands of his furniture designs up until the end of World War I.

This is when financial overextension and changing tastes drove him into bankruptcy, He didn't live long enough to enjoy the revival of his style that began with tentative stirrings in the early 1970s.

During the 1970s, glossy shelter magazines would feature Hollywood celebrity collectors of Stickley Locally, Tom Monaghan's collection became widely known. Prices, as might be expected, soared. By 1987, furniture manufacturers began to show their versions of Stickley designs at High Point, N.C., as they continue to so do today, promoting it as "Mission" style.

GIVEN THESE circumstances. Szopo emphasizes the importance of legacy: "Availability is not the Craftsman Workshops (Gustav Stickley) - Furniture made in the Craftsman Workshops was some of the greatest ever executed. Early pieces (1900-03), 1903-04 Harvey Ellis inlaid designs and spindle pieces represent the most sought after Craftsman furniture today.

Over the years, various marks and labels were used. The marks not only identify Craftsman pieces but date them as well. Gustav Stickley chose as his mark the furniture maker's most basic tool, the jointers compass. To it he added the flemish words Als Ik kan. (if I can).

problem, but authenticity and lineage is. With so many manufacturers, both the old and new, involved, how to distinguish between the good and the mediocre becomes

"It takes considerable background and knowledge to evaluate the design, the construction, overall quality and coloration. The original Stickley furniture, for example, achieved its unique coloration through an ammonia fuming process that today's commercial pieces cannot replicate."

Roger Ellingsworth of Vertu Galleries in Royal Oak confirmed that Arts and Crafts has gone from "unloved and abandoned furniture to a true collector's item."

Margaret Basta of DuMouchelle Art Galleries stresses that "even the type of label used, whether burned in furniture such as Barbara Streisand. or paper, makes a difference on what price can be commanded, as far as the older pieces are concered."

> PAUL SADOW of Paul Sadow Auction Galleries in Clarkston discovered during a trip to London three years ago that "collectors and dealers were going crazy over better quality Arts and Crafts pieces."

It was about this time that Baker

Furnishings: Romance with tradition unwavering

By Helen Diane Vincent special writer

HERE ARE certain habits of the heart that cannot be broken, and America's love affair with traditional home furnishings is one of them.
Early American colonists rejected

Early American colonists rejected rule by Britain, but not its Chippendale and Queen Anne highboys, chintzes and other furnishings that embodied a quiet dignity and gentility.

Also, colonists were no strangers to Continental and more exotic designs from around the world.

Today, those Americans who continue that love affair are able to locate, through decorators or retailers, a wide range of finely executed, historically authentic reproductions and adaptations. And they don't have to rely on antiques and imports since some of the best home furnishings are made in the USA.

Moreover, the push toward high quality and authenticity is advanced by organizations such as the National Trust for Historic Preservation as well as museums with decorative arts collections being offered for licensing to select manufacturers.

The Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village in Dearborn is well on its way to becoming a formidable presence in generating good 18th and 19th century design for the public with its fully coordinated American Life Collection involving 100 pieces made by more than 10 manufacturers.

AT THE International Home Furnishings Market in April, Century Furniture of Hickory, N.C., one of the licensees, first displayed its American Life furniture based on select originals from the Henry Ford Museum.

The line, fully coordinated in a setting with other licensed products, drew an enthusiastic response from press and buyers alike. Locally, Hudson's, Jacobson's and Classic Interiors will carry Century's American Life furniture.

Henry Ford Museum also will have a permanent exhibit of the entire collection opening in November. If public response to the total line is anything like the buyers' and the press', we should expect to see more pieces of the collection at local retail stores in time.

As the American Life Collection is launched, it joins the distinguished ranks of a number of licensed furnishings already on the market.

Among the oldest furniture companies engaged in several authentic and licensed reproductions is Baker Furniture Co. of Grand Rapids, represented locally at the Michigan Design Center, Hudson's and Jacobson's.

Colonial Williamsburg, the oldest and largest museum reproductions program in the USA, has asked Baker to join its successful and respected program, which now has 53 licensees with 3,000 products.

The first Baker collection with Colonial Williamsburg will include 35 pieces of furniture from late baroque, rococo and neoclassical periods dating from 1710 to 1810. Expect to see special design detailing, such as exquisite inlays and hundreds of new upholstery patterns in subtle colors.

F. SCHUMACHER & Co. stands tall among the many fine textile companies that have successfully interpreted historic fabrics.

Perhaps it's their scholarship.
11,000 document archives or 102-year history that has made this possible. Whatever the explanation, Schumacher is again making a significant contribution as a 50-year textile licensee of the National Trust with the introduction of wallpapers from Colonial Williamsburg. These additions strengthen the line and provides clients with a more coordinated look.

Historic Charleston Foundation is yet another source for maintaining and licensing regional treasures. This time, John Jacoby, designer for Brunchwig & Fils, has collaborated with the Foundation and created a beautiful Charleston Collection of five designs inspired by the magnificent architectural detail and sumptuous floral gardens of Charleston.

Meanwhile, Bernhardt Furniture of High Point, N. C., is bringing out a special quality of the deep South with licensed adaptations from the Louisiana State Museum Foundation.

As Ken Fonville, Bernhardt vice president of casegoods, said:
"Craftsmen from Brittany ports in Northwest France often immigrated to New Orleans. Using native woods, they fashioned simple and sturdy versions of furniture they remembered from the Old World, England as well as France."

The result of this collaboration is the Bellwood Collection, which can be seen along with other Bernhardt lines at Norman Lackoff's showroom in the Michigan Design Center.

NOT TO be outdone, Harden Furniture Co., whose manufacturing facilities are in New York State, has been pursuing creation of historically authentic furniture through five generations of Harden family craftsmen.

Today, its collection has grown to 750 pieces, including the roundabout, or corner, chair — a unique style evolved from the 15th century and primarily used by men. The Harden line is available to the decorator trade at the Marie-Howard Interiors showroom in the Michigan Design Center and at Stewart-Glenn's in Bloomfield Hills and Classic Interiors in Livonia.

Undoubtedly, the consumer is wellserved by the upper echelon of the American furniture industry in its effort to bring it high quality, historically accurate lines, whether through the licensing or in-depth respect for historical tradition.

An upsurge of hand-tufting is also occurring in the decorative rug business, increasing the array of traditional patterns previously seen only in 17th and 18th century French Aubusson flat weaves and English needlepoint rugs.

Lacey-Champion Rug Co., from Fairmount, Ga., a recent addition to the Michigan Design Center, joins the other sophisticated resources, such as Ghiordes Knot and Stark, which have held a nearly exclusive position with the local decorating profession. Each of Lacey-Champion's hand-tufted rugs is made to design specifications by one artisan who signs the rug upon completion.

WHEN TRADITIONAL furnishings are viewed not so much for their authenticity, but for the power to evoke nostalgic feelings, you enter the world of lifestyle merchandising, itself a growing trend.

One of the first to get the idea of lifestyle merchandising off the ground was Nathan Ancell, founder of Ethan Allen. That was in 1932.
Today, there are 350 Ethan Allen stores in the United States, Japan, England, Saudi Arabia and Australia. There are four of these stores in the immunitate and cache thind around themes using 18th century furniture as well as the more casually styled Country look.

Also going along with lifestyle flow

Also going along with lifestyle flow is Gorman's Drexel-Heritage store in Troy. This fall, it will feature The Estates Collection by Lynn Hollyn. The real impetus to the line, even though it uses various traditional European furniture and accessory styles, is a "warm sense of intimacy and graciousness," said Jeff Roberts, Gorman's manager.

But it is Ralph Lauren who generally is regarded as one of the most successful masters of lifestyle merchandising, both in apparel and home furnishings. He recreates a romanticized version of past eras for today's consumer by artful

Help capture spirit of times past

By Cathleen Collins Lee special writer

S IT possible to have both charm and convenience? To have lots of character — and lots of storage?

For those who would like to preserve a piece of the past in their home, that is the challenge. And nowhere is that challenge more difficult to meet than in kitchens and bathrooms.

The fact is that kitchens and bathrooms have changed a great deal over the years. A hundred years ago, most people were grateful just to have an indoor bathroom. Nowadays, we expect space and luxury. And it's hard to make a kitchen look like great-grandmother's — while accommodating the dishwasher, espresso maker and toaster oven.

But as more people turn to traditional designs, companies are coming out with products that can help to capture the spirit of other times. Cross-handled brass and porcelain bathroom fixtures. Clawfooted, free-standing bathtubs. White kitchen cupboards with leaded, beveled glass doors.

'This kitchen is the room that, when we walked into it, I said we're not buying this house. It was totally unfunctional. But my husband has the gift of seeing beyond.'

- Kathy Clark

There is also room for your owncreative solutions. Two area couples who are restoring historic homes have used care and imagination to blend the past with the present in their kitchens and bathrooms.

RUTH MOSSOK Johnson and her husband, nationally known artist David McCall Johnston of Farmington Hills, wanted the kitchen of their 1840s Greek Revival home to be as authentic as possible, but also able to accommodate the serious cooking and entertaining that likes to do.

At first glance, their kitchen has more in common with one at Greenfield Village than with one down the street. The room has white-plaster walls, wide, straight chocolate brown moldings around doors and windows, checkerboard ceramic tile on the floor — and no built-in cupboards or counters.

Their only workspace is a goodsized piece of counter from an oldgeneral store, set with black and white ceramic tiles on the top and terving as an island in the middle of the room. Pots and pans, groceries and small appliances are tucked in odd places: in an Amish jelly cupboard, on a small French art table, on shelves under the island, around the corner in the dining room.

But this kitchen belongs in the 20th century as well. Ruth cooks on a six-burner commercial stove and uses a restaurant-size refrigerator. That quaint butcher-block island has two round sinks in the top and a built-in dishwasher underneath. The only real compromise the couple made is storage.

"I look at that wall over there and

KATHY AND Tom Clark began renovating their 101-year-old, Italianate-style house in downtown Plymouth seven years ago. But they almost didn't buy the house in the first place.

"This kitchen is the room that, when we walked into it, I said we're not buying this house," Kathy said. "It was totally unfunctional. But my husband has the gift of seeing beyond.

The Clarks took some space from an adjoining bathroom and planned carefully to make sure use of every inch in the long and narrow kitchen.

Tom Clark made the cupboards himself in a golden oak, with raised center panels and brass fixtures like those on the old ice boxes. He built them to the top of the nine-foot ceilings, and added space-saving features like a small spice cabinet, a shallow pantry whose door also has shelves on it, and pull-out counterspace.

Once they knew the kitchen was as efficient as possible, the Clarks set out to make it charming as well! The major addition was an old tin ceiling. that Tom repaired, installed and painted forest green.

OTHER FINISHING touches included a refurbished ceiling fan from an old bar, green marble tiles behind the stove and a canister set from an old soda fountain that sits behind the stove as well.

The cream-colored wallpaper has a small green pattern and a traditional feeling to it; the border is a dramatic blue, rose and green floral that draws attention to the ceiling.

In the kitchen, the Clarks started from scratch. But in the bathroom, they began with one major asset: a beautifully shaped claw-footed tub. They added warm wood moldings, several antique pieces, and muted beiges, mauves and greens.

Their sink is an old pink marble top, embellished with new porcelain. pistol-style handles and an oak commode that Tom built. A low antique chest on the other side of the tub and an old wood medicine cabinet on the wall add charm as well as storage.

In both rooms, the Clarks feel they have preserved the feeling of the 19th. century while including many of the conveniences of the 20th.

"We tried to keep the look of the old with the convenience of the new." Kathy Clark said. "We have things that you wouldn't find in an older home, but that I wouldn't live without."

While it's difficult to duplicate an older kitchen, there are a growing number of products that use traditional styling.

In traditional kitchen cabinets, . you can find everything from dark cherry to white painted wood and the new white laminates, which are said to have a more durable finish. They come with raised center panels (squared or with a cathedral arch), fluting, molding, dish-drying racks and open cupboards. You can even have leaded, beyeled glass in a few of your cupboard doors.

HIS LARGE Tudor home, on a nine-acre site along Cass Lake in western Oakland County, has many traditional features that help create a rich and warm environment.

Two dark oak staircases curve from the first floor to the second. Simple pieces of limestone surround the home's many fireplaces. And the view of the lake is framed by leaded windows.

But one of the staircases was built in 1934, and the other in 1990. Ditto for the fireplaces and the windows.

What looks like a spacious Tudor is really a medium-sized Tudor with a recent addition. But inside and out, builder and developer Paul Norman of Orchard Lake worked with the owners to painstakingly duplicate. the original materials and feel of the

The owners, a middle-aged couple who prefer their names not be used, wanted to make sure there wasn't a jarring difference from one part of the house to the other. And they have a great deal of respect for the charm and workmanship of the original.

home. "There's something traditional, homey and cozy about an older home," she said. "I like to cuddle up with a book near a fireplace."

DESPITE ITS charm, the house also had the major flaw of many older homes, a small kitchen.

The addition, designed by architect and interior designer Bob Abramson of Boca Raton, Fla., gives the couple a spacious kitchen with white cherry cabinets and green marble countertops. It also provides a master bedroom suite, a dining area with attached sitting room and a lower-level family room that leads out toward the lake.

Outside, the entire home looks like it has been comfortably settled among the trees for some time.

The builder duplicated the gray slate tiles on the roof, a three-part red-brick chimney and an additional garage. A craftsperson leaded the storms for the new windows to match the original ones. And since it would be impossible to duplicate the aged quality of the brown wood trim, the entire house was repainted a soft

Decorating the home was a labor of love for the woman of the house, who was happily involved in many aspects of the design. Assisted by Birmingham interior designer Jean Comb, she browsed discount stores as well as the Michigan Design Center in Troy to find just the right furniture and accent pieces.

"She and Fjust clicked," the owner said. "I needed someone to say, 'Yes, that will work.' It was really fun to work with her."

THE TWO also found many interesting pieces at antique stores in Saline, Among them were ornate tin door frames that they used to frame a couple of mirrors and an antique wooden chest serving as the cabinet for the master bedroom sink.

The result is a home beautifully decorated, but also comfortable and personal. The dark oak moldings, staircase and floors create a traditional feeling and tie the house together. Rich peach walls and a mix of bright fabrics add color, pattern and warmth.

The center of the addition is a large dining room with a sitting area that faces the lake. A curved, oak staircase along one wall roughly divides the room in two. A tail stoneplanter with a spray of silk flowers is tucked into a curve of the staircase.

The focal point of the dining area is an Oriental rug in shades of peach, green and blue under an antique oak table. The oak chairs are upholstered with a muted floral tapestry. The table is covered with a cream-colored crocheted table cloth.

Behind the dining room table is another of the large fireplaces, framed with a curved piece of limestone. The ornate dark, wood mantlepiece has a lion's head at each of the upper corners and was made especially for the house. On either side of the fireplace are built-in oak cabinets with leaded windows, a small shelf and drawers below.

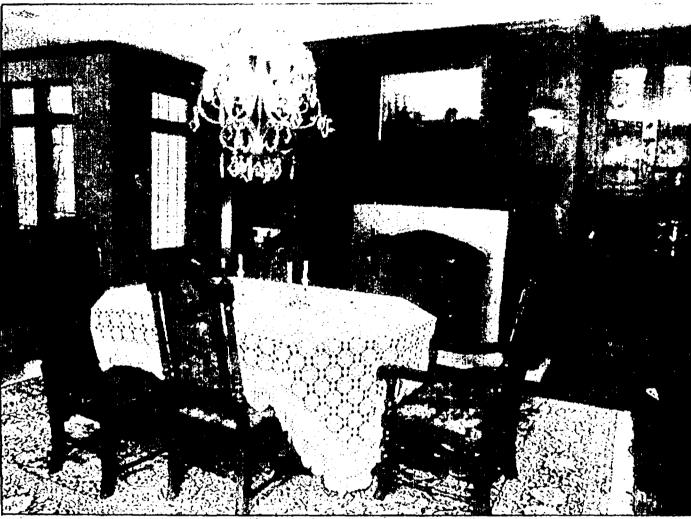

THE SITTING area, anchored by a similar Oriental rug, is a comfortable place to move to after a meal and enjoy the view of the lake. A teal leather loveseat with floral pillows and a grouping of traditional chairs in an interesting mix of prints provides seating. Classically shaped columns topped by large ferns stand on either side of the doors leading out to the patio.

This sunny sitting area adjoins the dining room and is part of the nowspacious Tudor home's addition by builder Paul Norman. Surrounded by leaded windows, it looks out toward Cass Lake in western Oakland County. The room is anchored by an Oriental rug and teal leather love seat, with a mix of fabrics and patterns in the chairs and pillows. The statue on the small, round table adds height while forming an attractive grouping with the antique green picture frame and

Although this dining room is part of the home's recent addition, it still retains the warmth and charm of the original Tudor home, built in 1934. The limestone frame around the fireplace and the oak floors and leaded windows are careful replicas of those found throughout the home. The peach, blue and green Oriental rug is a warm, rich focal point; the antique green and crystal chandelier adds interest.

Nostalgia can accent even kids' rooms

By Debbie Walls Landau special writer

ODAY'S CHILDREN are enticed with so much hightech stimuli. Video arcades, amusement parks and home computer games increasingly tantalize the captive young audience of baby boomers'

It's pleasing, therefore, that manufacturers of children's furniture are creating expanded lines of bedroom pieces that offer some of the nostalgia, charm and serenity of times long past.

Many Victorian, country and European style designs are cropping up from renowned companies like Lexington, Simmons, Lea and Universal.

Whether in indestructible hard woods or lovely treated veneers, local stores and designers are promoting and selling these themes to patrons tired of the impersonal laminate look.

"People are much more inclined to invest their money on beautiful things that last," said Terry Ellis, a Bloomfield Township interior designer and an associate with Barbara Kopitz Design Associates of Birmingham. "Children are especially mesmerized by the way things used to be."

Ellis recalls accompanying her 8year-old daughter Dory's school group to the Troy Museum and historic village green, which she calls a delightful, scaled down kind of Greenfield Village. "They were enchanted by the antique furniture, toys and household items people used a hundred years ago.'

COORDINATING HER design expertise with Dory's hobbies and interests, Ellis created a Victorian bedroom for her daughter.

An antique reproduction sleighbed from Link Taylor's "Directoire" series is angled diagonally from a corner and covered by an exquisite, washable Battenburg lace comforter.

The Victorian dollhouse Ellis built five years ago is a perfect blending of past and present because that's. where Dory plays with her modern -Baroie dolls.

The antique armolre is a repository for a comprehensive assortment of books. Hats, one of Dory's dress-up favorites, adorn the wall above a floral border printed in rose, teal and lilac tones.

"I think a bedroom should contain elements of one's life," said Ellis. pointing to Dory's oversized wooden Pinocchio lounging next to the dollhouse.

Dory's love of Disney characters is reflected in the large framed commemorative poster of the movie version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Her wicker night table lightens the impact of the wooden pieces and is the perfect showcase for some of Dory's miniature collectibles and a floral arrangement.

WICKER'S COMEBACK in the design industry lends itself perfectly to infants rooms, too.

Gert Glazer, manager of Bellini Juvenile Furniture in Birmingham, displays a gorgeous handpainted wicker basket on a stand that can be recently in the store boasted mint green and pink fabric ribbon accents. With the mattress, the basket is priced at $490. Adding a coordinated comforter and triple ruffled pillow will cost about $900.

"This basket has been a strong seller for us. Although it may seem expensive because it's limited to . infancy, it lends itself beautifully to an heirloom," Glazer said.

/ Bellini sells a matching wicker mirror in coordinated colors. Miniature lamps and wastebaskets crafted of wicker also are available.

THE WICKER rocking chair in 21-month-old Mikayla Bouchard's bedroom is a nice counterpoint to sturdy period pieces her parents have discovered through the years.

Pam and Mike Bouchard bought their daughter a Jenny Lind crib. The antique dresser circa 1860 and an old school table with chairs are substantial and multi-use: As Mikayla grows, she'll probably enjoy tea parties with the commemorative tea set in her room, or she can do homework on the school table.

"Mikayla's room carries out the more traditional theme of our home." said Pam Bouchard of their Birmingham residence. "Now that she's outgrown it, her antique wooden cradle is in our attic.' The choices in wooden case pieces, which grow with one's children, are abundant at Baby and Kids Bedrooms in Novi.

While furniture in cherry or maple are available, manufacturers are: bringing forth lots of whitewashed oak and solid pine. But they're giving their lines satin finishes, bead uldings, bisque finishes and ling colors in the rose and blue nilies reminiscent of the pastoral idscapes of Europe. This is rticularly true of the "At Home" llection created by designer Lynn olland for Lexington Furniture.

TRACI FORS, Baby and Kids drooms buyer, explains, folland's pieces resemble family heirlooms but they don't present a stuffy appearance. Her case pieces truly do grow with children. The line offers a dresser, an etager and a nightstand crafted of solid white pine, stained a bisque finish but embellished with floral handpainted designs. The pieces also come in blue or terra rose."

If you look at one of Holland's brochures, you see her personal philosophy is that "surrounding oneself with beautiful things is one of life's pleasures." Baby and Kids Bedrooms carries some of the baby bedding and artwork available at Lynn Holland's Madison Avenue, New York store, which offers bedding from infancy to adulthood, floral arrangements, wallpaper borders, scented pomanders and china.

Sleighbeds, armoires, vanities with tri-fold mirrors and unusual desk/ gossip bench combinations are a growing trend. Fors said. Her store's top seller is the "Secrets" line by Universal: "Its warm, oak sleighoed is $500, reasonable compared to some companies."

Simmons' spindle crib, double dresser, mirror and chest could definitely be unisex, said Fors: Likewise for the oval wardrobe with door mirror, nightstand, double sleighbed and four- and five-drawerstyle dressers, which is part of the "Secrets" line from Universal.

MANY A young lady, however, will fall in love with the vanity dresser and triple-wing mirror from the "Country Lace" collection of Lea Industries.

Mikayla Bouchard's wicker rocker complements the Jenny Lind crib and labric balloon shades of her bedroom. Floral wallpaper, commemorative plates and collectibles give her room a Victorian air.

Antique treasures provide home's backdrop

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

TEP THROUGH the double doors into the Plymouth home of John and Peggy Blaisdell, where a trip back in time awaits with freasures from 1790 through the late 1800s.

An early 19th century walnut, 12pane cupboard greets-visitors with a complete set of Mulberry ware from 1850, displayed on its shelves.

The step back cupboard, crafted in south central Ohio, features strong architectural lines. Its overall style isconservative as opposed to the ornate English styles of this era.

"It's a good example of an early American, walnut cupboard," said John, in his antique-furnished home.

American, English and Prench furniture fill the interior of the contemporary-built home, decorated with authentic art from the mid 1800s to 1936. Oil paintings, pastels and reverse paintings color the home and lend to its historic theme.

To the right of the cupboard in the entry hall, two pastel portraits are hung, one above the other. One portrait seatures John's 90-year-old aunt when she was a little girl growing up in Maine.

John comes from an old New England family that practically goes back to the landing at Plymouth Rock," Peggy said.

an imposing Eastern Pennsylvania corner cupboard from 1790 captures the eye. The focal point of the room, the 16-pane cherry cupboard of simple lines is at once stunning and impressive as it looms to within inches of the ceiling.

'Cup boards' appeared in America in the 1600s. Originally, the term referred to open board shelves that held cups and assorted tableware. By the end of the century, the shelves were encased and doors added.

American cupboards of the 17 and 18th century were constructed for use as storage areas because homes, built then, lacked closets and cupboards. The free-standing utilitarian cupboards were marked by strong architectural lines, conservative in na-

"John loves massive cupboards and cabinetry," Peggy said. "He admires the painstaking efforts that went into early cabinetmaking."

A pair of early 18th century mahogany dressers also grace the living room, one with a bow front, the other,

"The dressers are good examples of early English cabinet work with golden inlay," John said.

The Blaisdells have spent the last eight years furnishing their home with pieces from the late 1700s to the turn of the century. "We find things at antique show, shops, auctions, as well as being heir to family pieces," Peggy said.

One of the family heirlooms, an 1820 drop-leaf Winthrop table, rests comfortably between the pair of English dressers. The walnut table from New England features hand-carved Antique brass candlesticks, stuffed rabbit toys and teddy bears, wooden terns and sandpipers line the mantel and shelves of the family room. A Victorian whisk broom holder in the shape of a dog's head is displayed on the wall opposite the 1800s oil painting of an English Setter.

In front of the sofa is an elm, English blanket chest on the side of which an oil painting featuring fresh caught fish on pine board by John's great-aunt Fanny is displayed. An 1860 coverlet complements the sofa.

AN OAK table in the kitchen is from the back porch of a home, owned by John's grandfather in Maine. Beside it, an oak Welsh cupboard from England graces the cozy kitchen. The open cupboard from the mid 1800s features a display of "antique Blue Willow dishes and Staffordshire statues."

Welsh cupboards or open-top cupboards were designed according to European style. The welsh cupboard, a popular English country piece, is actually a dresser or sideboard with open shelves above it. Upper shelves were stepped back. This allowed the top of the lower cupboard to be used as counter space for dressing or preparing food for the table.

"Furniture making in America was influenced by several different factors," John said.

Colonial settlers on the Eastern Seaboard brought handmade furniture of European styling and construction traditions to America.

New England furniture was heavily influenced by English settlers and to a lesser degree by the Dutch and Germans. Background differences among East Coast settlers together with influences found in the New World created regional distinctions in style and construction.

"If you know what you're looking for, you can tell if a piece was made in south central Ohio or eastern Pennsylvania," John said.

From the cabinetry of an American cupboard to the reverse painting of George Washington, visitors to the Blaisdells' home sense our historical legacy as they step back in time to a new land, open to immigrants with freedom ringing through the air.

19th century art enriches decor

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

MERICAN PRINTS and pastels from the 19th century can brighten a :home's decor while lending to a historical theme.

A drypoint etching (circa 1899), a portrait of Boardman Robinson, was created by Allen Lewis (American, 1873-1957). Robinson was a draftsman, illustrator and cartoonist who focused on social and political scenes. The portrait's price: $325.

Architectural etchings, impressionist oil paintings. engravings of Detroit and Oakland County landscape, portraits and figure drawings add authenticity to a home decorated with furnishings from the 1800s.

Availability of 19th century art and how to buy it are two of the questions that instantly darken thoughts when considering art from the 1800s for home interiors. But researching books and shopping galleries in quest of knowledge and a reputable dealer can lead to a pleasurable purchase of history.

"I regret that most people don't shop around," said Arnold Klein, coowner with wife Karen of Arnold Klein Gallery in Royal Oak.

"I refer people to books and libraries," Klein sald. "People have that choice to make an informed

Before opening the art gallery more than 20 years ago, Klein worked as a curator's assistant for six years in the graphics department at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"People should look as many places as they can and read books,". Klein said.

READ BOOKS on print collecting to find answers to such questions as, "Is a 19th century print worth less if it is unsigned?"

"There are many books in the library and that are (in the gallery) here, reference books that people can use," Klein said.

The gallery offers a bookcase filled with art reference for the use of potential art buyers.

After gallery hopping and shopping around, Klein's "advice to buyers is to buy what you like, buy what they think is significant."

"I will not show people things I like or things that I think are of value," Klein said.

"People should look as many places as they can, as many cities asthey can. If they can, go to the galleries in Chicago, they'll be surprised what they can learn. Information, they might not know like the fact hand-colored engravings were colored recently, not back then," Klein said.

They will learn signed prints are a 20th century phenomena. Artists of the 1800s typically did not sign their prints.

PRICE NEED not be a deterrent when considering a print purchase from the 19th century.

"You can buy anonymous wood engravings for a few dollars to a Toulouse-Lautrec for $500,000," Klein said. "There are many prints for under a $100."

An 1860 engraving of Detroit can be bought at the gallery for $50. "We specialize in prints and drawings," Klein said. "Our focus is the late 19th century and first half of the 20th century."

Additional criteria need to be met when seeking to buy antique oil paintings not only for decorative purposes but for investment as well.

Mark Doren, owner of Gallerie 454 in Birmingham and Grosse Pointe, has some valuable advice for people buying oil paintings from the bygone Victorian era.

'The more you're paying for a painting, the more you need to know about the painter. Buy books," Doren said. "Then establish a source for procuring a painting. Find a reputable dealer first."

"WHEN LOOKING for an antique painting, find out what's been added, what's been done to it. Look to see if it's been poorly restored. If it's for investment, make sure there is no inpainting," Doren said.

Investment paintings need to have an established history of changing hands. "Look for a provenance. There has to be a credibility established," Doren said. "There are many forgeries out there."

Of utmost importance, find out what the gallery policy is on returning a painting. "When you're dealing with art, you're dealing with emotion," Doren said. "Ask what is your policy on return because buying art is such an emotional thing."

Right: An etchina (c. 1895) of a magnificent old tree by Ernest Haskell (American, 1876-1925) leads the eye into the center of the composition where lyrical lines wind and flow. Influenced by Rembrandt and Whistler, Haskell produced 414 prints, many of which featured powerful themes dominated by nature. The etching is priced at $500.

Lenox offers historic pedigree

By Helen Diane Vincent special writer

N A MARKETPLACE besieged by many sophisticated imports, Lenox China, a thoroughly American company with a 101-year history, continues to occupy an important position with its new introductions for 1991.

Each of the patterns owes its existence to a historic legacy or to a disciplined interpretation of a cherished mood.

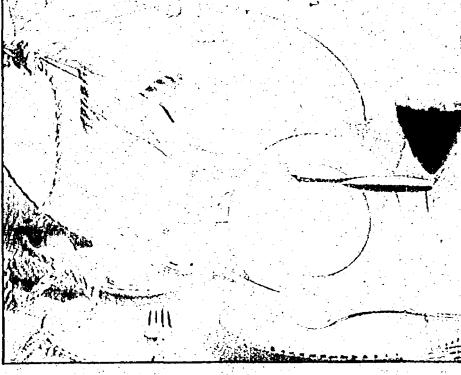

Lucia (TM), one of the seven natterns from Lenox's Grand Tie Collection takes its inspiration from the dramstic power and grandeur of the opera, Lucia di Lammermoor. It is clearly intended to make dining a heightened and opulent experience.

Its highly theatrical Art Deco design, actented with salmon, black, turquoise and 24 karat gold, coordinates with Lenox's fine crystal as well as antique linens and silver. For a firsthand view, Lucia can be seen at Slade's in Applegate Square, Southfield. In quiet contrast to the Grand Tier Collection are the many other. collections that pay homage to various historic periods and are uncomprisingly designed for sophisticated taste. For example, the Citation pattern from the Temple Collection, with its intricate fluting, draws heavily on the image of ancient Greek columns. The Ambassador Collection becomes a veritable tour of old French courts and English castles.

THE CLASSIC Collection,

Along the way, the Collection stops at the 18th century with its Georgian Shell and Federal Platinum lines that reflect the graceful styles of Queen Anne and Chippendale furniture, so very well established in home furnishings.

Lenox anticipates the new lines will appeal to yet another generation. of Americans as the company embarks on its second century of creating fine handcrafted china and crystal.

After all, Lenox's own tradition has not only become intertwined with the White House by providing commissioned table settings, as it has, since 1918, but it continues to bring some of that history for us to consider using in our own homes.

The addition is somewhat of a departure for builder and developer Paul Norman, who specializes in new, million-dollar and multi-million-dollar custom lakefront homes. Another home he is just completing, also on Cass Lake, will be featured in national magazines this fall or winter.

But whether adding on or building new, Norman prides himself on wellthought-out details that make each house suit its owners. In this case, that meant creating many attractive spaces throughout the home and taking full advantage of the lake.

THE ORIGINAL kitchen of the home is now a sunny sitting room alongside a windowed hallway that bridges the two parts of the house and faces the lake.

The raised tub in the master bath looks out on the lake from a large window and is surrounded by green marble. And outside, the lawn is edged by rows of large boulders that curve down to the lake and serve as a border for the many trees and , wildflowers behind them,

The owners are quite pleased with their home and enjoy sharing it with family and friends.

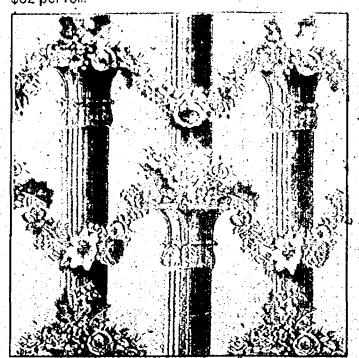

"When we bought the house, our kids said we were nuts," the woman of the house reports. "'It's just an old house,' they said. Now they absolutely love it. It's like being up north, but you don't have to drive. It's quiet and private."

combinations of all the elements that go into design: style, scale, color, detailing. But it is his pattern-on-pattern combinations that give his lines a unique character.

The Ralph Lauren Home Collection continues to expand with each season. This fall's introductions include an industry first: nine Tartan furniture pieces that feature a red Highland pattern on mahogony, reminiscent of Scottish tartanware of the mid-1800s. It is designed to mix with the tartan lifestyle collection across all product categories.

THERE IS no better testimony of tradition's power than its influence on contemporary. John Mascheroni, designer of the Swaim furniture line, has grown in stature as he embraces this influence.

Mascheroni, who helped define the hard-edged contemporary look in the '60s and '70s, is now designing sofas and chairs with softer curves that echo 18th century camelback sofas and tables with the restraint of neoclassical furnishings.

Swaim's full line is available at Zeising Associates in the Michigan Design Center; select pieces are available at Gorman's in Southfield and Scott-Shuptrine in Bloomfield The softening of contemporary design is also evident in

Jay Yang's most recent work, which can be seen at the

Robert Allen showroom, also in the Michigan Design . Yang is now also using the most sophisticated technology in re-interpreting traditional designs for Fabriyaz. It involves cross-piece dying of various combinations of yarns and yields subtle effects just weaving or straight printing can't do alone. Another tour de force is Stroheim Romann's woven Jacquard damask "Marella," which shows us that American manufacturers can successfully compete with a flair and technological control long associated with only imported goods. Tradition is still the inspiration, but the style is definitely contemporary. This pattern can be seen at the Stroheim/JAB showroom in the Michigan Design

Arts and Crafts: It boasts multiple lures

Knapp & Tubbs, in the Michigan Design Center in Troy, first showed its Mission Oak line, a reissued Stickley design from the L. & JG Stickley Co. (brothers of Gustav. Stickley) that never ceased production since they began in 1902.

Shirley White, showroom manager, points out, "It was one of the most successful introductions we've ever had, even though it takes a special client to understand the style. I'm finding interior decorators are selecting it for clients who live in some of our older Michigan homes, or for their fine bungalows up north."

On the other hand, Donna Stevens, director of the interior design studio at Hudson's, sees "Arts and Crafts as a minor trend at the retall level," which may help to explain why Hudson's isn't carrying the line at this time.

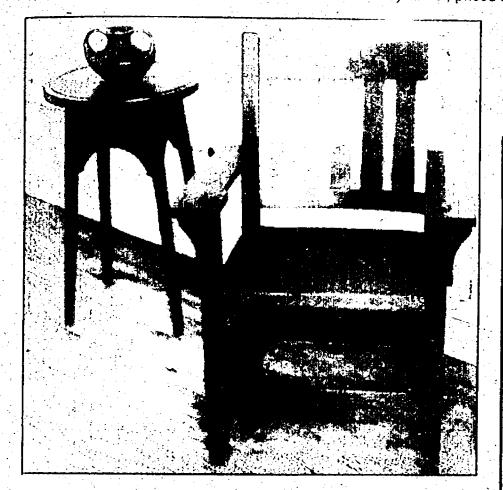

It can be special ordered through the design studio," Stevens said. We expect it to be purchased as an accent item, a collectible piece and mixed and matched with other furniture. We don't see Arts and Crafts becoming a mainstream design. It contradicts the dominant trends in home furnishings, the desire for comfort and projecting an image of luxury, even opulence.

"We see Stickley furniture as a collectible, even at the retail level."

Historic feeling

Left: A long, whitewashed pine table from the late 1800s runs along one side of the keeping room. The room has many other interesting antiques, such as the pine cupboard in the corner, topped by a wooden bowl filled with dried pineapples. Below: A'Hudson River Valley drop-leaf Queen Anne table from 1710-20 is the focal point of the living room and serves as a coffee table. The room also features an early New England Country Hepplewhite table (in front of the window) and a Chippendale sofa with rolled arms.

Log cabin provides authentic setting for antiques

By Cathleen Collins Lee special writer

MAGINE, IF you can, finding a carefully restored example of a pioneer house at a local museum — a log cabin complete with worn floorboards, smokey walls and pots hanging in the fireplace.

Now, go one step further and imagine packing your belongings and living there. Then you'll have some idea of what Don and Brenda Henderson's everyday life is like.

The Hendersons live in an 1830s log cabin that they took apart piece by piece and moved from Kitchener, Ontario, to a 10-acre lot in Oakland County.

From the narrow stone walk lined with lavender out front to the huge, walk-in stone fireplace in the "keeping room," the house faithfully recalls another time and another way of life.

Modern conveniences like electricity, indoor plumbing and central heating have been added, of course - but they're hidden so that nothing mars the historic feeling of the house.

The house is so authentic that it is being used to depict the 19th-century boyhood home of the Rev. Solanus Casey, a Catholic priest being considered for sainthood, in a Channel 2 docudrama with Joe Weaver. The house will also be featured in the October issue of Country Living magazine.

sold antiques for 20 years, love to be surrounded by well-worn and unusual items from the past.

Brenda is an interior designer. Don is a builder who enjoys working on historic houses. Last year, they opened a store in Birmingham called Ol Susanna, which specializes in unusual antique

The couple spent 10 years looking for a log house because they felt it would be the most authentic setting for their many antique furnishings.

"I have always wanted a log home," Brenda said. "It has a whimsical charm that's hard to duplicate in a new home. A log home has been lived in for hundreds of years."

"The stairs in our house are worn in the center. Loften look at them and wonder how many people have walked up and down those steps."

But pioneer houses are small. The couple had a hard time finding one large enough for themselves and their two children, Heidi and Matthew, now 14 and 19. In 1985, they finally found in Kitchener 'a two-story log house that was larger than

BUILT BY German immigrant John Nicholi, it was owned at the time by a Mennonite family and hadn't been modernized at all. The Hendersons spent 11/2 years taking apart the house, numbering the irregularly shaped pieces and carefully reconstructing the house.

Don has a lot of respect for the work

"I like to look at every board, and see how it's aged," he said. "It probably took them 20 years to make it. It was a lot harder for them to build than it was for me."

The house is built of rough-hewn logs with square sides that have weathered to a soft gray. The off-white chinking between them is a mixture of horsehair, lime, straw, plaster and sand that Don developed himself.

Upstairs, the couple installed new drywall on the interior walls but used oil to recreate smoke and water stains. Downstairs, the log walls are exposed, forming a wonderful background for the many well-worn wooden furnishings.

Interestingly shaped lamps and wall scounces throughout the house offer a contrast to the plain lines of the furniture. And simple accessories such as burlwood bowls filled with potpourri, pewterplates and redware (glazed pottery made from red clay) are placed in simple, attractive arrangements.

A LONG, whitewashed pine table from the 1880s dominates the keeping room, which runs all along the back of the house. It would have been the center of a pioneer family's activities. Across from the table is the magnificent stone fireplace, stacked high with wood and large enough to walk

In the living room, a beige Chippendale sofa with rolled arms and two wing chairs upholstered in old linen sheets provide comfortable seating. A low, drop-leaf Queen Anne table circa 1710 sits on a worn Oriental rug in front of the couch and serves as a coffee table. The mustard-colored interior wall around the fireplace looks as old as the logs themselves - but it is a feather-edged, raised-panel wall built by Don.

Don's handiwork is also seen throughout the house in the form of worn wooden walls and doors that cleverly disguise modern conveniences. One such wall in the kitchen has two doors: one opens up to reveal a refrigerator, the other a cupboard containing the dishwasher, and microwave and toaster ovens.

THE DINING room is a cozy room with a round hutch table - the top flips up so it can be pushed against the wall when not in use surrounded by black, late-17th-century, bannisterbacked chairs. A hooked rug in an abstract red and blue design is draped across the table.

Although they live busy contemporary lives, raising their children, running the store and pursuing a mix of professional activities, the Hendersons find that their unusual house is a welcome refuge.

"It's a nice place to go after school or work," Brenda said. "It has a cozy 'I'm home' feeling.

"Anyone can build a new home. But the cracks and crevices and the feeling you get from an early Thome are wonderful."

Susanna

O! Susanna, 570 N. Woodward, Birmingham. 11 a.m. to $30 p.m. Tuesday to Saturday.

Brenda and Don Henderson's store, O! Susanna, which opened last year, carries a multitude of antique and unusual home furnishings from all over the United States as well as from Prance and Italy.

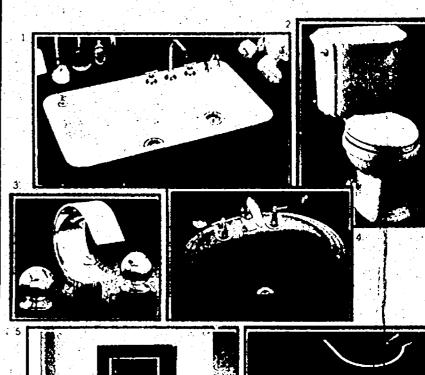

Because the items are often one-of-a kind, the stock varies from day to day.

But the couple often has antique outdoor wrought-iron furniture and gates, antique wooden pieces such as armoires and old wire bird cages.

Also spotted there: swags and garlands of dried fruit, gourds and chili peppers; French soaps; beesewax candles; soapstone plates; fruit made of clay; apples made out of twigs; and topiary trees, both dried and fresh.

The Hendersons also carry a four-poster, pencilpost bed, which Don makes himself.
