Mayor skips special session; council fumes

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Westland City Council members lashed out angrily Monday at Mayor Robert Thomas and his department heads for boycotting a special Saturday morning session called to resolve a dispute over a huge senior citizens complex.

The council had expected the mayor's administration to attend the meeting with developers planning to build high-rise apartments, a nursing home, medical offices and a shopping center on 50 acres north of Marquette, between Carlson and Wayne roads.

"It totally embarrassed us because nobody was there to answer the questions that were supposed to be answered," Councilman Kenneth Mehl told Thomas. "If that's the cooperation you're going to give us in 1992, I don't want it."

City council members, underscoring the significance of the Westland Regional Senior Campus, called it the city's biggest development since Westland Center was built in 1965.

But Thomas, saying his directors already work some evenings and weekends without extra compensation, called Saturday's session unnecessary because his administration had previously laid out its concerns about the project. City officials had feared that a poor water supply system could virtually cripple the city's ability to fight fires at the complex, endangering tenants' lives.

On Monday, the council approved the initial phase of the long-delayed project after the developer, Senior Services Development Associates, agreed to pay to install a new water main and sprinkler system to make the complex safer for senior citizens.

But the council's action emerged only after a bitter dispute over the administration's boycott of Saturday's session — a move that not only drew fire from Mehl, but also from council members Charles Pickering, Sandra Cicirelli, Terri Reighard-Johnson and Sharon Scott. Mehl went so far as to accuse the mayor of violating the city charter.

RESPONDING TO Mehl's accusations Monday, Thomas said, "I'm really getting tired of the administration getting accused of dropping the ball on this project. If anybody's dropping the ball on this project, it's the developers."

In a Dec. 27 letter to council President Thomas Brown, the mayor had asked that the special session be rescheduled on a weekday. But the council had already agreed on the meeting.

Regardless, Thomas said the council should've known his administration's position because he and his department heads had repeatedly de-

Thomas objects to Mehl 'insult'

By Darrell Clem

> 'I think it was a direct, intentional insult not just to me, Bob Thomas, but to the office of mayor.'
> — Mayor Robert Thomas

An insulted Mayor Robert Thomas accused his arch political foe, Councilman Kenneth Mehl, of snubbing him Monday night during a swearing-in ceremony for Westland City Council members.

Mehl, presiding as master of ceremonies, failed to include Thomas when he introduced local dignitaries who stood, one by one, as Mehl called their names during the ceremony held at the Bailey Recreation Center.

"I think it was a direct, intentional insult not just to me, Bob Thomas, but to the office of mayor," Thomas said later.

Mehl viewed it differently and said, "That's just so petty it's unbelievable."

Mehl introduced such dignitaries as state Rep. Justine Barns, 18th District Judge Gail McKnight and school board President Sylvia Kozorosky-Wlacek — among others. The introductions came before council members Glenn Anderson, Sharon Scott, Thomas Brown and Charles Pickering took the oath of office for terms they won in the Nov. 5 election.

Only later, as the mayor prepared to address the audience of about 60 people, did Mehl introduce him — and then told him to keep his speech short. But Mehl stressed that he also delayed introducing council members Sandra Cicirelli and Terri Reighard-Johnson — holdover council members who didn't have to be sworn in Monday.

Thomas called it "childish politics" that Mehl would bring their political differences into the ceremony.

BUT MEHL said he saw no reason to acknowledge Thomas earlier, since the mayor would be introduced before making his speech. Other dignitaries were singled out because they were special guests, he said.

"The mayor was the only one that was allowed to talk, so I don't know what the hell he wants," Mehl said. "That's the way it's always been done. It's nothing new. If we were going to stick it to him, we wouldn't even let him talk."

Mehl lashed out at Thomas, saying the mayor criticizes him "no matter what I say." Moreover, Mehl said the mayor must believe "I'm a threat to him."

Mehl's name has been mentioned in some political circles as a possible opponent to Thomas in the 1993 mayoral election. Mehl has not confirmed that he will enter the race but said, "I have been approached by some people."

The mayor accused Mehl of "continuing the confrontation" by snubbing him during Monday's ceremony.

"I went there with a good attitude," Thomas said. "I was big enough not to spoil the moment."

Said Mehl: "If that's the way he feels, it's really too bad."

Council chief eyes peacemaker role

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

Charles Pickering admits his initial role as newly elected Westland City Council president will be that of peacemaker.

Political feuding between Mayor Robert Thomas and some council members, particularly Kenneth Mehl and Thomas Brown, has escalated in recent weeks amid accusations the mayor has clamped down on communication between his department heads and the council.

That rift appeared to widen this week — at least temporarily — when virtually every council member voiced disappointment that Thomas and his directors failed to attend a special council session Saturday.

Thomas didn't consider the meeting about a senior citizens complex pressing enough to order his directors to attend. In a letter to Brown, he said his department heads already work some weekends for no extra pay.

But the controversy followed an earlier dispute in which Thomas came under fire for ordering council members to go through his office to seek reports from his department

Woman says she was kidnapped, assaulted

By Darrell Clem

A 20-year-old mentally impaired Westland woman missing for about 17 hours claimed during a tearful reunion with her parents today that she had been raped.

Janet Alexander sobbed and trembled as she embraced her mother, Marie, after being brought by a cab driver to the Westland police department about 9 a.m. today.

"Just hold me," her mother said.

Alexander told Westland police that she had been held against her will by the cab driver since Tuesday and raped in a Redford Township motel, Sgt. Laura Moore said. Police turned the case over to Redford police after talking with Alexander and her parents late into the morning.

The man who brought her to the police station also was being questioned.

Alexander's return to her parents ended an agonizing search in which her parents combed area neighborhoods and hospitals. Although she's 20, Alexander has the mental and emotional development of a 15-year-old, her mother said.

Alexander had gone for a walk from her Ellas Street home about 2 p.m. Tuesday. About 2½ hours later, she telephoned her parents from her ex-boyfriend's residence in Livonia, her mother said.

But Alexander didn't come home after making the call. The ex-boyfriend told Alexander's parents that she had taken a taxicab that was supposed to have dropped her off at Palmer and Merriman, not far from her home. Moore said police have confirmed that Alexander had been staying with the cab driver in a motel room.

Alexander's parents had no idea of her whereabouts until they received a telephone call from Westland police this morning, telling them that they had been notified that Alexander was on her way to the police station.

Alexander fell into her mother's arms as she walked into the police station. Her father, James, also was there.

A police report indicated that Alexander might have believed her parents would be angry at her for visiting her ex-boyfriend. The couple had recently broken up after two years, her mother said.

Before Alexander arrived at the station, her parents were visibly worried as they sat in the lobby and waited for her.

"She just didn't come home, and that's not like her," her mother said. "We didn't know if she was warm, or if she had been fed, or if she was OK. As long as she's all right, that's all I care."

Gunman threatens apartment residents

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

A masked gunman broke into a Hampton Court Apartments residence early Tuesday morning, raising fears at the complex where three women were raped earlier this year.

A 55-year-old woman and her 16-year-old granddaughter were in the apartment during the 5:09 a.m. incident, but neither was attacked or injured, Westland police Lt. John Reddy said.

The intruder didn't fire any shots or point the gun directly at them, Reddy said. The woman awoke first and found him in the apartment, and then the granddaughter awoke and began screaming, police said.

The intruder warned them not to scream and then turned and fled the apartment, Reddy said.

> The break-in alarmed Hampton Court residents who feared a return of a rapist who attacked three women at the complex from late March through June 29.

THE BREAK-IN alarmed Hampton Court residents, whose nerves were rattled when three women were raped at the complex from late March through June 29. Police believe that one man committed all three rapes.

Westland police Sgt. Laura Moore said authorities couldn't say whether Tuesday's intruder was the same man.

"We don't know," she said.

The gunman was described as a 6-foot-tall white male, about 25 years old. He wore a ski mask, which made it virtually impossible for residents to provide police with extensive details that could help identify him, police said.

Westland police continued to investigate the break-in Wednesday. There also have been no arrests in the rape cases.

Residents became alarmed earlier this year following the three rapes at the 182-unit complex in the Ford-Wildwood area. In July, resident manager Tettie Judzinski said the ensuing news coverage caused undue panic among residents and embarrassment to the victims.

A telephone call to the complex on Tuesday reached only an answering machine.

Police not only believe that the three rapes were committed by the same assailant, but also have linked a fourth incident that occurred nearby. A woman was attacked during the same period at the Woodcrest Villa apartment complex on Wayne Road near Joy.

Man dies of injuries from holiday wreck

By Darrell Clem

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning for a Westland man who died Saturday night of injuries sustained Christmas Day in a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of Merriman and Cherry Hill.

William Swain Jr., 24, died about 11:30 p.m. Saturday at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor. Westland police cited multiple internal organ failure.

Swain had been a passenger in a car heading eastbound on Cherry Hill about 8:42 p.m. The car collided with a westbound vehicle that crossed the intersection in an attempt to head south on Merriman, Officer Thomas Hissong said.

The driver of the car that collided with the vehicle carrying Swain could face possible charges, though none had been filed as of Tuesday afternoon, Hissong said. The driver was described only as a 33-year-old Inkster man.

EACH CAR had two occupants at the time of the accident, Hissong said. Police believe that alcohol may have contributed to the crash, he said.

Swain had initially been taken to Annapolis Hospital in Wayne, but he was transferred about four days later to the University of Michigan Hospital, Hissong said. He had remained in critical condition until his organs failed Saturday night.

The passenger in the other vehicle had been hospitalized at Annapolis Hospital, but was released earlier this week, Hissong said.

Swain's death marked the first in 1992 caused by a traffic accident in Westland, though the accident occurred last year.

Swain is survived by his parents, William and Betty; a brother, Robert; three sisters, Angie Majewski, Debbie Guajardo and Dawn Huntoon; and two grandmothers, Mary Swain and Elma Owens.

Funeral services were scheduled for Wednesday morning at R.G. and G.R. Harris Funeral Home in Garden City. Burial was scheduled for Cadillac Memorial Gardens West Cemetery.

Council election winners give personal touch to swearing-in

By Darrell Clem

Glenn Anderson brought his grandmother's Bible. Thomas Brown kissed his wife. Charles Pickering joked of becoming an elder statesman. And Sharon Scott reveled in the moment's glory.

Each Westland City Council member who won a seat in the Nov. 5 election added a personal touch to a swearing-in ceremony Monday night at the Bailey Recreation Center.

Flanked by family members, they were sworn in, as a crowd of 60 people, including friends and even a few political foes, looked on. The ceremony came before they joined council holdovers Kenneth Mehl, Sandra Cicirelli and Terri Reighard-Johnson for the council's first regular session of 1992.

Anderson, 37, used his grandmother's Bible as he took his first oath of public office. "It sort of meant more to me than just any Bible," he said.

Anderson, the top vote-getter among eight candidates in the Nov. 5 council race, said becoming a council member for a four-year term marked "a culmination of a long desire" to serve the city.

"My family and I care deeply for our community," he said.

BROWN, WESTLAND'S grandfather of local government, welcomed his third four-year council term at age 74. Earlier, he had served an appointed two-year term. The former state representative also had been a Nankin Township supervisor before Westland became a city in 1966. He served as the city of Westland's first mayor after the township incorporated.

'I look forward to another good year in 1992. Let's all strive to make Westland the best city in the state.'
— Mayor Robert Thomas

"I very definitely will continue to serve to the best of my ability," Brown said.

In celebrating a second council term, Pickering, 48, recalled his earlier four-year stint as Westland's mayor.

"Early on, I was referred to as the kid mayor," he said. "I'm afraid now that I might be considered an elder statesman as time goes on."

On a more serious note, Pickering said the recession-plagued economy and budget constraints will force the city to deal with serious problems in 1992.

"I'm hoping that I can be part of the process of moving our community forward," he said.

SCOTT, 52, called Monday night's swearing-in "a most memorable moment." Scott, a former Wayne-Westland school board member for nine years, earned only a two-year council term because she was the lowest vote-getter among the four winners.

Scott pledged to keep her campaign promise of being "an independent thinker" and vowed to weigh all issues carefully — and listen to all sides — before casting her votes.

As new council members, Anderson and Scott replaced Thomas Artley, who lost his re-election bid, and Ben DeHart, who cited heart problems in his decision to bow out.

In welcoming the council members during a public address Monday, Mayor Robert Thomas said he's pleased with the first two years of his administration.

"I look forward to another good year in 1992," he said, and then told the council, "Let's all strive to make Westland the best city in the state."

manded that water supply issues be resolved. "Clean out your ears," he told Mehl.

Mehl was angry the mayor's directors couldn't find time to attend Saturday's session, though they often appear with Thomas on evening cable programs that allow viewers to call in their concerns.

"They sure can attend your propaganda meetings once a month on Channel 8," Mehl said.

"I have nothing else to say to you," the mayor retorted.

THE EXCHANGE marked an increasingly bitter public feud between Thomas and Mehl, whose name has been mentioned among some political observers as a potential opponent of Thomas in the 1993 mayoral race. Thomas has accused Mehl of trying to discredit him before the election. Mehl has denied the accusations and said he hasn't even decided on a mayoral bid.

Political feuding aside, the administration's decision to miss Saturday's meeting also sparked criticism from other council members.

"I was disappointed that our directors were not there," Reighard-Johnson said, adding that the administration and council need to improve communications. "We have enough problems without fighting amongst ourselves."

Cicirelli, saying her main concern about the project is senior citizens' safety, said, "I'm really disappointed that this has turned into such a political thing."

The mayor also clashed briefly with one of the developers, Arnold Shapero, after Shapero said the city should have made its concerns about water supply known earlier.

"I can tell you one thing," Thomas told Shapero. "You're not going to sit here and cross-examine me."

AT THAT point, Pickering joined the dispute and said the mayor could have avoided the confrontation had he attended Saturday's session.

"Don't throw public safety at me or anybody else on this city council," Pickering said, visibly angered that Thomas had missed the meeting.

Scott, sworn in Monday to her first council term, voiced disappointment that, as a new council member, she couldn't get her questions answered by the administration at the special session.

Mehl had warned Monday that, unless the city acted quickly on the project, the developer's financing plan could fall through. The project has been in the planning stages for three years.

New council president eyes peacemaker role heads. Thomas implemented the policy because he believed some council members, such as Brown, were trying "to run the city."

PICKERING, ELECTED unanimously by his colleagues to succeed Brown as council president, hopes to bridge the communication gap between the mayor's office and the council. He told the Observer Monday that he plans to meet soon with Thomas to discuss such goals.

His peaceful aspirations may come as a surprise to political observers who recall that Pickering, himself, was widely criticized for his confrontational style when he served a four-year stint as mayor from Jan. 1, 1982, to Dec. 31, 1985. He clashed repeatedly with the council and often refused to compromise.

On Monday, however, Pickering said he's mellowed over the years and has chalked up his mayoral difficulties to inexperience.

Engler claims Wayne County 'silent majority'

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

With a jar of nickels on his desk and a year in office under his belt, Gov. John Engler can look back on an extraordinary 12 months in which he has reshaped political debate in Michigan.

Like no other recent governor, Engler has become a political lightning rod. Some have praised the zeal in which he's trimmed a huge, expensive state bureaucracy.

More often, he's been vilified in some quarters as a heartless ogre for cutting general assistance welfare payments and other social programs.

"He's trying to balance the state budget on the backs of the poor and that's just unconscionable," said veteran Westland-area county Commissioner Kay Beard. "The role of government is to do things for people that they can't do for themselves."

But Engler is challenging that philosophy. Like Richard Nixon, also no stranger to public criticism, the governor claims support from a silent majority.

Engler staffers even claim strong backing in Wayne County, the area most affected by recent state budget cuts.

As the governor's second state of the state address approaches, Engler aides boast the governor's message — prosperity through lower taxes and reduced state spending — is gaining favor with Wayne County residents.

'He's (Engler) trying to balance the state budget on the backs of the poor and that's just unconscionable.'
— Kay Beard
Wayne County commissioner

'As I go around the county, I'm finding a lot of support (for the governor), not just in the suburbs but in Detroit, too.'
— Susan Heintz
director of the governor's southeast Michigan office

"AS I go around the county, I'm finding a lot of support, not just in the suburbs but in Detroit, too," said Susan Heintz, the former Livonia-area county commissioner who now heads the governor's southeast Michigan office. "But the message has to get out."

During his Jan. 21 address, Engler is expected to reflect on his legislative victories and, perhaps, spell out an agenda for this year's state and local elections.

Some suburban Democrats are already taking heed.

First term county Commissioner Bryan Amann, who represents Canton and other western suburbs, won't make Engler budget cuts an issue in his own re-election bid.

"You don't hear a lot of about it in public, but a lot of people are quietly supportive (of Engler)," Amann said. "I judge it by what I hear coming out of Canton, Wayne and Romulus, and there's a feeling that he's done what he told the people he was going to do."

John Santelu of Garden City is perhaps typical of the governor's quiet supporters.

A 30-year city resident, and operator of a long running family business, Santelu gives Engler credit for grappling with the state's burning property tax issue.

"I THINK he's probably on the right track, but anytime you do the kind of things he's been doing, it's going to be unpopular," Santelu said. "I wouldn't want to be in his shoes, that's for sure."

Engler has even gained grudging respect, if not support, from a potential rival.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, a rumored 1994 Democratic gubernatorial candidate, said Engler appears to be the type of politician not easily swayed by public criticism.

"He has a game plan, and it appears he's going to stick to it," McNamara said. (For more on McNamara's assessment of Engler, see related story.)

Recent statements from the governor appear to bear out McNamara's assessment.

Presence of a tent city on the Capitol lawn, dubbed "Englerville," hasn't bothered Engler a bit.

"It makes me that much more committed to cutting and capping property taxes and getting the economy moving," he said.

Recalling a 1990 campaign ad, Engler recently showed his nickel jar to reporters, claiming this year's freeze on property tax assessment will save taxpayers some $388 million. At the same time, Engler is containing the campaign to put his "cut and cap" tax plan on the November ballot.

But while Engler's supporters have been quiet, his foes have been much more vocal.

Jesse Jackson has vowed to keep national attention — and criticism — focused on Michigan throughout this election year.

Another group, calling itself the Emergency Committee for a Moratorium on Evictions and Emergency Shut-Offs, has promised a "State of the People" protest rally outside the capitol while Engler speaks inside.

Criticism is coming from the right, too.

Bill McMaster, head of Southfield-based Taxpayers United for Michigan, took exception to Engler's nickel jar and tax cut proposal.

"Engler is becoming the master of deception," said McMaster, a one-time ally who is now pushing an alternative tax cut plan. "He's up there with that jar of nickels on his desk claiming he's cutting taxes when it's just not true. The state is spending more now than it did under Blanchard."

If Engler hasn't been able to separate himself from his policies, he's been more successful in separating his policies from their effect.

"I'M HEARING a lot of criticism but the people I'm dealing with are in government," said Livonia Mayor Robert Bennett. "I'm not sure the people know what the budget cuts mean for us."

Livonia has already lost an expected $700,000 in race track revenue under a program canceled by Engler.

State Attorney General Frank Kelley recently ruled state race track grants can't be transferred for other purposes — a victory for Livonia, Northville and other race track communities — but Bennett said it's uncertain whether the grant money will ever return.

Coupled with reduced state revenue sharing, Livonia could lose as much as $2 million, 5.5 percent of its $36 million city budget, Bennett said.

McNamara on gov: Nice guy, no cash

John Engler is a nice guy but it's tough to get money out of him, said Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara in assessing the governor's first year in office.

"Basically, he's a very nice person," said McNamara, a rumored 1994 gubernatorial rival. "But when you start dealing with his people, their answer to everything is, 'We don't want to spend any money on that.'"

Last month, McNamara and Engler went to the mat over health care payments for indigent county residents.

Engler had canceled the "County-Care" program, which provided health care for an estimated 54,000 county residents through a 1987 agreement between the county and Slow Drains?

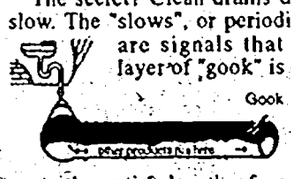
You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. The "slows", or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe from sink to sewer, or septic.



Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean®. It clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. No other product has the Plumb Clean® formula. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean® will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean® is money-back guaranteed! Don't be confused. Plumb Clean® is the brand with the guarantee right on the label.

Save Money. A 1 lb. jar of Plumb Clean® holds up to 41 drain treatments. It costs only about 35¢ per treatment.

Independent laboratory studies show Plumb Clean® more effectively breaks down organic waste than all other products tested. So, if your drains have the "slows", get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean® today!

Shuttle bus takes upscale downtown

By Pat Murphy
staff writer

JERRY ZOLYNZKY/staff photographer

Jackson's company has three vans for taking groups to places like the Joe Louis Arena, the Fox Theatre, the Birmingham Theatre, the Pontiac Silverdome and points between.

It doesn't take an economic wizard to realize times are tough.

It does take, however, something of an entrepreneur to regard the economic doldrums of 1991-92 as the ideal time to start a business.

But that's the way Ronald C. Jackson of Rochester Hills looks at the time frame in which he started The Woodward Corridor Connection.

It's a shuttle service catering to upscale clients who might want to party, or relax, en route to the airport, a hockey game, the theater or other Detroit-area attractions.

Jackson started his service last May, well after the end of Desert Storm when the U.S. economy, including Michigan's, was expected to come out of its war-time sluggishness.

The economy didn't get better, of course. And as the nation moves into 1992 more and more economists are talking in terms of recession, with no quick turn-about in sight.

BUT THAT DOESN'T bother Jackson, a bachelor in his 40s, whose professional career includes more than 20 years in sales promotion with Chevrolet and time as a part-time chef.

"If a business can make it in hard times," he said, "it can surely make it when things get better."

Jackson's company has three vans for taking groups to places like the Joe Louis Arena, the Fox Theatre, the Birmingham Theatre, the Pontiac Silverdome and points between.

Many attractions are along Woodward — hence, the shuttle service's name. But Jackson's vehicles will go anywhere in the metro area — including Metropolitan Airport — offering a variety of amenities such as beverages, meals, mobile phone service and newspapers.

For a price (ranging from $8 to $55 per person, group rates), the connection will arrange tickets, meals (in suburban or downtown restaurants) and door-to-door pick-up and delivery.

For last Sunday's meeting between the Dallas Cowboys and the Detroit Lions, for example, Jackson bought 40 tickets and made them available in various packages. One package — advertised in Texas newspapers — included admission to the game (lower level), roundtrip transportation (from Mr. B's restaurant in Southfield) to the Silverdome, beer and parking . . . for $49 per person.

"I've sold a number of tickets in the Birmingham area," he said.

Gov's local fans quiet, foes vocal

"This is something people will eventually feel," he said.

Poor people are already feeling the effect of budget cuts, according to area social service agencies.

"Demand is going up, but we have less to give," said Bryce Denison of Wayne Metropolitan Community Services Agency, a private, nonprofit agencies that serves western Wayne and downriver communities.

A $130,000 home heating assistance program has already been canceled due to declining state money, Denison said. There is also less food at Wayne Metro's nine soup kitchens and Westland food distribution center.

"We've scheduled 15 walkathons to help makeup the loss, but it's tough," Denison said.

Officials at Livonia-based Spectrum Human Services, which helps children in foster home settings, say families are severely affected by eliminated state programs.

"With elimination of the state's emergency needs program, and parents losing their Aid to Dependent Children as youngsters are placed in foster homes, it's making it difficult for families to have the money to make the kind of changes necessary to get their children back," said agency spokesman Roger Swanlnger.

Elimination of state adoption subsidies also spells trouble, Swanlnger said.

"There's less money to pay for children's medical needs, as a result they may go unadopted," he said.

Despite criticism, Engler's future could remain bright, as long as voters don't feel he's gone too far.

"I think people feel things had gone too far in one direction and while Engler might currently be going too far the other way, there's the expectation that, eventually, he will return things to the center," Amann said.

But McMaster, upset over cuts in the budget for children's mental health programs, said the pendulum might never swing back.

"There are things government needs to do, you can't dismantle everything," he said.

McNamara, Engler friendly future foes?

State legislators, however, restored money for the program, with Democrat McNamara crediting other Republicans for keeping CountyCare alive.

"(House Minority Leader) Paul Hillegonds and (Senate Majority Leader) Dick Posthumus were very helpful to us," McNamara said.

Despite the CountyCare issue, McNamara said he enjoys a "very good, open relationship" with Engler.

The governor's low public profile during last year's Tiger Stadium negotiations — Engler called it a local issue best handled by local leaders — couldn't have pleased McNamara more.

"He responded exactly the way we hoped he would respond," McNamara said.

In turn, McNamara has been judicious in his criticism of Engler. In fact, the county executive even expresses some sympathy for the governor.

"People think the governor is responsible for everything, but he's really not," McNamara said.

An entrenched public service bureaucracy and balky legislature are obstacles that can hamstring the ablest of governors, McNamara said.

"I probably have more room as county executive than he does as governor," McNamara said.

As for a potential 1994 showdown, McNamara isn't saying but for now relations between the two appear cordial.

"Heck, I even invited him to my annual prayer breakfast. I told him there's no votes to be gained by anybody at a prayer breakfast," McNamara laughed.

Lessons in service

A McDonald's restaurant joined with Abington Manor senior residents to make it possible for children in the community to spend time during the holiday season doing something special for senior citizens. On a Saturday in December children served senior citizens with hamburgers, fries and beverages. The children personally delivered the meals to the individual doors at Abington, on Joy west of Newburgh. Kelly Stevens is shown here after delivering a meal to Elna Hanna.

Dad, son give that old college try again

Several western Wayne County residents, including a father-son team, are among those returning to college to broaden their skills to become more competitive in the job market.

Jeff Klenk earned a degree in business administration from Eastern Michigan University and now works in retail sales, a segment of the economy hit hard by the recession.

Klenk's long-term goal is a position in industrial sales and marketing. Eventually he'd like to own a small business, so Klenk signed up for the master of business administration program at Lawrence Technological University in Southfield to sharpen his communication skills.

"The professors at Lawrence Tech are active professionally," said Klenk. "They really know how to apply presentation, problem-solving, and decision-making skills in a work environment."

HIS FATHER, Ron Klenk, is a strategy and planning specialist in the powertrain operation quality and reliability department at Ford Motor Co. where he has worked 25 years.

Ron Klenk holds a degree in industrial management from Lawrence Tech but he, too, returned to pursue an MBA and get a fresh perspective.

"I have 15 years to go before retirement," said Klenk, "and I plan to continue to progress in the organization. The classes I am taking now build on my background and give me a new point of view that is very useful."

William Gregg of Livonia earned a degree in ancient history from the University of Michigan and a degree in math and computer science from Lawrence Tech.

Gregg is a programmer/analyst at Ford Motor Co. where he was tapped for the prestigious Ford College Graduate Program that aims to help employees develop their management protential through a broad range of assignments.

"Staff cutbacks are a real issue in many companies today," said Gregg. "Employers want to hire people who can do more with less and have a broad range of technical skills and the ability to work with people. I want to be systems analyst so I enrolled in the MBA program to get the broader understanding of engineering, manufacturing, and management that I need to achieve that goal."

ROBERT ELLIS, provost of Lawrence Tech, said if there is any good news in these challenging times it is the growing demand for both top- and mid-level managers who know how to increase productivity and cut costs.

"Old hiring patterns are changing. As companies restructure they are seeking employees with a broader skill base than ever before. Managers that stick to the old ways of doing things are at risk in this fast-paced, commodity-based market.

"The white collar job market is particularly competitive," said Ellis. "Even longtime employees find they can't take their jobs for granted. They have to demonstrate that they deserve to be retained. Applicants for the openings that occur when underperforming managers are cut have to be outstanding in order to be noticed.

"As competition grows, and the opportunities in investment banking and brand management get harder to come by, more and more college graduates are opting for an advanced degree in business administration that links the study of efficient manufacturing operations with traditional management courses.

"Learning about shortening the product development cycle to become the lowest cost producer, and developing new distribution channels to build market share and revive America's competitiveness is the key."

Ellis said that both younger and more experienced professionals in the work force today realize that they may be especially vulnerable to layoffs in this economic environment.

SUGGESTIONS ELLIS makes includes:

- Pursue an advanced degree to obtain expertise to make your employer's operation more competitive;
- Learn a second job in your area. Many organizations are eliminating positions so if you can demonstrate you have the knowledge and skill to handle more than one set of responsibilities you will be more valuable;
- Take continuing education or professional development classes to update your skills, and give you a new perspective.

"Manufacturing technology, management techniques, and marketing strategies are changing rapidly as global competition grows," said Ellis. "In this kind of job market it's important to continue to learn the skills you and your employer need to be competitive. If you're not learning and growing, you're going to fall behind."

Companies can collect in data loss liability suits

low companies to seek claims for lost data?

The dispute traces back to 1982 when Independent Management Systems Inc., a small computer service firm that has been located in Birmingham since 1975, sold and installed computers and software to a florist in St. Louis. After Independent guided its client through several system updates, the florist struck out on its own by purchasing a new disk drive from a third party in 1986, but apparently failed to inform Independent of the move.

In the resulting confusion, the florist continued to back up on the new system, but was unaware that a portion of its business records were not being copied. A year later, the disk drive failed and the florist sued both Independent and the third party claiming damages for the cost of reconstructing part of its records and for lost profits and customer good will.

UNDER THE TERMS of its policy, Independent notified its insurance carrier, State Farm Insurance Co., to handle the defense of the action, which is still pending in the St. Louis court system. The insurer entered into the suit in May 1989, but three months later, State Farm filed a separate suit in Oakland County Circuit Court against its client, stating the policy did not provide coverage for the florist's claims against Independent.

"The case really boils down to whether insurance companies are liable to their clients when it comes to lost computer data," said Kator. "In the matter of Independent, our position is the policy should cover the client in cases where they are sued for allegedly contributing to the loss of data.

"In a more general scope, the case can also be grounds for companies to seek damages under a general liability insurance policy when a computer accident does occur. It all depends on the terms of the policy."

While Kator won the opening round in the Oakland County courts, State Farm appealed the ruling to the Michigan State Court of Appeals. The appellate court is expected to make a ruling later next year. In its brief to the court, State Farm claims it is not liable to oversee the defense of its client because the policy only covers property losses, or more precisely, a physical injury to tangible property. Because computer data is stored as a series of numbers on a tape, the carrier contends the loss of data is outside the bounds of the policy.

But in what could be considered a victory for every U.S. company that uses computers to run daily operations, a recent appellate court ruling in Minhesota stated that businesses are entitled to insurance coverage for lost data.

"THERE'S NO question cases like these will become more and more common," said Bruce Burns, founder and president of the Lighthouse Group, a computer service firm in Plymouth.

"In estimates I've seen so far, a computer's hard disk will fail in the first five years of operation. Knowing the extensive damage a faulty computer can do to a company, whether it's a small or large operation, I always stress the need to back-up software programs (compute data) on a day-to-day basis. Otherwise you risk the potential of bringing your company to its knees in a matter of days."

For computer users unaware of how to record daily entries on a separate floppy disk or tape, Burns recommends consulting the owner's manual or hiring a computer service firm to adopt a program. What's more, Kator recommends companies consult with their insurance representatives to see if they are covered from computer accidents, whether it be from an electric surge that can wipe out several files or a disgruntled employee seeking revenge.

In addition, with the recent proliferation of computer viruses, Burns advocates a number of preventive strategies: tighter control over new programs introduced to computers, the use of write-protect tabs on all floppy disks and booting only from hard disks.

Auto show offers chance for comparison shopping

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

Maybe, just maybe, you're thinking of buying a new car this year.

OK, the economy isn't so hot. OK, the auto industry is in the doldrums. And OK, maybe consumer confidence is low, and no one else is planning on buying a car.

But that doesn't mean you can't take a look at the North American International Auto Show Saturday through Jan. 19 at Cobo Conference and Exhibition Center in Detroit.

Despite all the entertainment and hoopla, the real reason for the show is still the cars.

Dan Hayes, executive vice president of the Detroit Auto Dealers Association, based in Troy, said auto dealers have changed their attitude regarding auto shows in the past few years.

While auto manufacturers have always considered the auto show to be a marketing tool, it wasn't until several years ago that they realized how important shows had become.

But in 1987, the DADA surveyed more than 1,200 show attendees. One question asked how many people were planning to buy a car in the next year.

The answer was 71 percent.

"When we did a followup survey in September of that year, the numbers (of people who had actually bought cars) turned out to be about 70 percent."

It's obvious, he said, that auto shows do more than engender public relations and exposure; people are using them as a way to begin comparison shopping.

Hayes said it's worth noting that auto show attendance can be indicative of how auto sales will be in the following year.

"I've always maintained that you can tell how the year is going to be by 5 o'clock on the first day."

'It is absolutely a marketing tool — it does help to sell vehicles.'

— Larry Weiss
Ford Motor Co. spokesman

LARRY WEISS, public affairs spokesman for Ford Motor Co., said the auto shows are one of the best selling tools the manufacturers have. "It is absolutely a marketing tool — it does help to sell vehicles.

"It doesn't matter if they buy in three weeks or three months, the auto shows are often a person's first exposure to a vehicle," he said.

"One of the biggest problems we hear from salespeople is, 'If we could only get them into the showrooms.'"

By creating a non-threatening, but exciting, entertaining environment, the auto shows can do something that advertising sometimes cannot — get people to look at cars.

The auto show is also taking on greater importance in today's competition with the foreign automakers. Many people who buy foreign cars haven't given U.S. made cars a second look for the past decade.

"The auto show gives us an opportunity to get those people — no matter how slim an opportunity — to get them to take another look at what we have to offer.

"It's a big opportunity to show our competitive products — they may not be giving us credit for what we're doing today."

Finally, auto shows are a tool in domestic auto manufacturer competition. An important part of competition, Weiss explained, is what auto manufacturers call "conquest sales." Are the auto companies cannibalizing their own market or are they capturing market from another manufacturer?

How to do this and why buyers switch over is important to manufacturers. Auto shows help give some indication of this by surveys and general questions asked by consumers of show staff, he said.

GORDON STEWERT, a co-chairman for the 1992 show and a Garden City Chevrolet dealer, said the fact that the auto show is not a sales floor is why it is so well suited for comparison shopping.

"Actually, it isn't price that people are comparing (at the shows)," Stewert said. Manufactured suggested retail price stickers are in the windows, but that doesn't include options, rebates or other variables that affect the price of cars.

"What we try to do at the auto show is provide a non-threatening environment where people can compare cars without feeling obligated to negotiate a sale," he said. "We provide information — everything but the price.

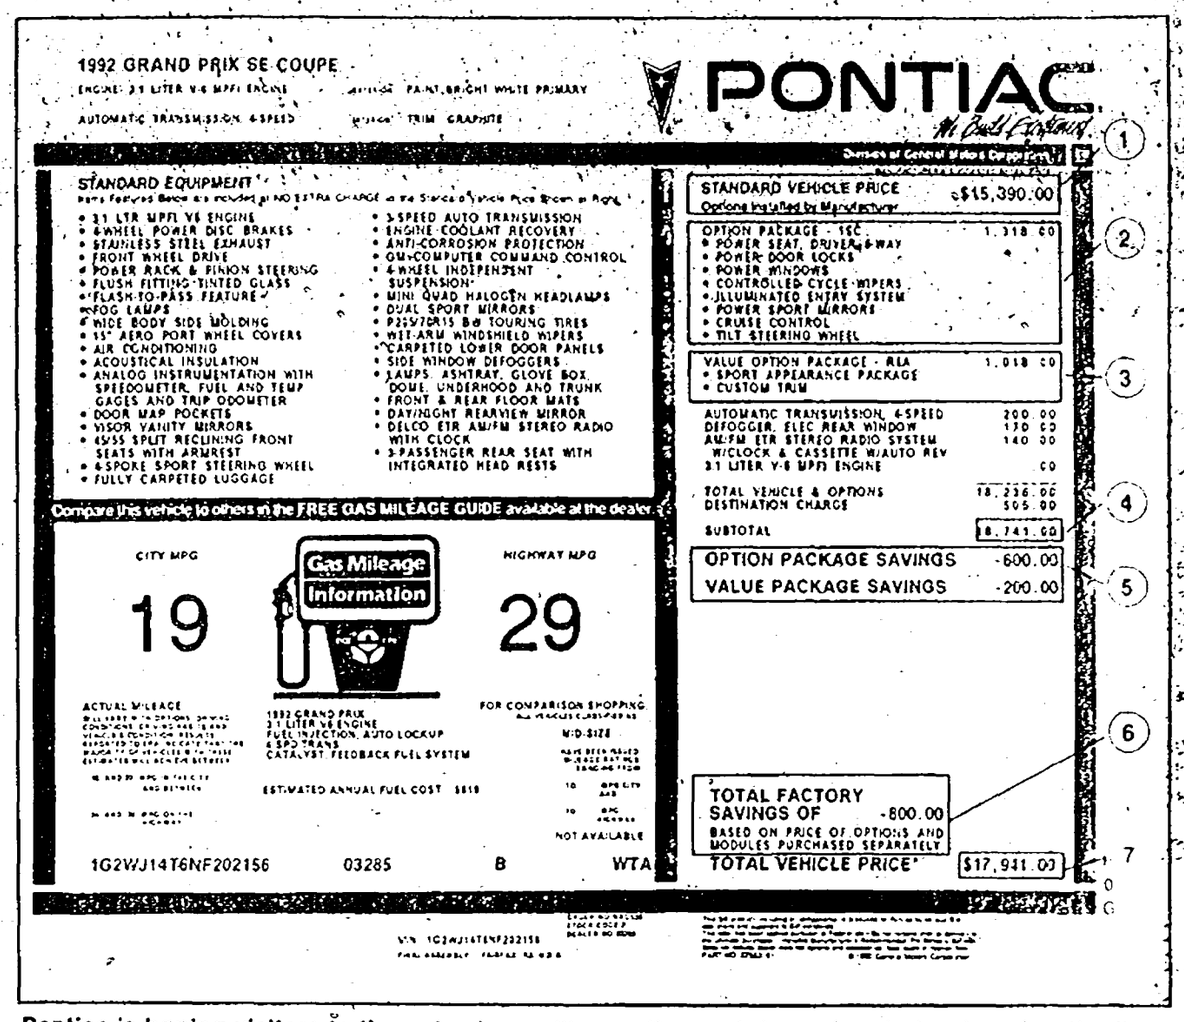
"Once you start talking price, negotiating enters into the process," Stewert said. Negotiating, he said, can be threatening to some people.

"This is a time to educate yourself — physical appearance, cubic feet, head room, passenger carrying ability, features like anti-lock brakes, all-wheel drive — if you have questions, ask them."

People staffing the displays are often salespeople, but they aren't there to sell, Stewert said. They are there because they are generally the most knowledgeable people about the cars. Some displays are manned by people from the automobile manufacturer.

Stewert said a good way to approach the auto show is to make a brief checklist of the main features that are important in a car and prioritize that list.

That generally means size, style, manufacturer, number of doors, gas milleage, and perhaps even color. "That way, the buyer can check the competition's comparable models."



Pontiac is hoping visitors to the auto show will find its window stickers consumer friendly. Breakdown includes (1) standard vehicle price; (2) option package; (3) value option package — those otpions aimed at enhancing the "excitement" factor; (4) total vehicle plus options price; (5) package savings; (6) factory savings; and (7) total price.

Features like air conditioning, power steering, power brakes, stereo and the like can be dealt with after breaking down the list of possible to probable cars.

MICHEAL MESTER, a salesman at Jack Demmer Ford in Westland and an auto show display person for several years, said when he works a display, he doesn't go down with the idea of selling a car.

"Most of the people aren't even from your area, so it's the wrong attitude to take."

But most sales people don't discourage sales. "Realistically, they're not going to come (from a different side of town) to Jack Demmer Ford after the show, but if they do, I'm always glad to help them out.

"But when I'm down there, I'm the answer man, not the salesman," he said. "When you're down there, it's like a fast-paced game show."

Mester said some people will make a choice on what car to buy at the auto show and head to a dealer soon after without ever having driven the car.

"They sit down in the car with the whole family and can generally tell right away if they like or don't like it," he said. Still, he advises people to take a test drive before buying.

People looking for a car run the gamut from people who know exactly what class of car they're looking for — say, a mini-van or a station wagon — and then go to the auto show to check out those specific vehicles, he said. Other people will go with little more than an idea — like, something with four doors.

Some people will have a very set idea about the car they want, sit in it, and find it just isn't right for them, he said.

Some people will ask questions about gas mileage, drive train warranties, trunk size and about specific features, Mester said, while others won't ask any questions.

From the auto show perspective, there isn't a right or a wrong way to approach the first steps toward buying a car.

"Whatever works for the people is the best approach."

Foland's future shaky

By Doug Funke
staff writer

While employees at Foland's stores in Livonia, Southfield and Rochester took inventory behind closed doors earlier this week, top management and their advisers pulled together financial reports and pondered the company's future.

Foland's, a privately owned catalog showroom retailer founded in 1973 and headquartered in Livonia, closed Jan. 3 for 11 days.

Management plans to re-open the stores Tuesday "to complete customer layaway transactions and processing of customer repairs," according to a statement issued by the company.

But there was no indication from the statement or from a high-ranking company official whether merchandise would be offered for sale at that time.

Creditors apparently will decide Foland's immediate future, said David Castlegrant, director of store operations.

"Our creditors requested that we close so we could do a physical inventory and summarize other accounting work for them," he said. "We're doing our best to work with the creditors. We're trying to do this in a very orderly, organized manner. We're trying to keep peace with everyone now."

CREDITORS CAN agree to a restructuring of debt or force liquidation. Foland's creditors, who met with management Jan. 3, will do so again Monday, Castlegrant said.

"We're really not sure what the complexion of our business will be on the 13th," he said. "We are in earnest planning to re-open our doors. With this situation, the complexion changes daily. It's anybody's guess what's going to happen."

Holiday sales were disappointing, Castlegrant said. He declined to provide specific numbers or discuss information from financial statements.

James McTevia, a management consultant to Foland's, confirmed only that he has been advising the retailer for some time. "We have been working with them on their financial difficulties," he said.

A couple of employees reached by phone Monday expressed uncertainty.

One, who identified herself as Linda, said an inventory crew including herself was working in the Livonia store at Wonderland Mall.

"THERE'S A number of people here," she said. "After Thursday (today), we don't know anything."

Jennifer Shoudel, who normally works in data processing but was answering calls for top management said, "We don't know if we're here for a week or for good."

Jim Simmons, an assistant manager at the Southfield store across from Northland Mall, said there had been no layoffs as of Monday.

"We're just closed for inventory. We'll re-open," he said. "Everything's fine, no problem."

Both Claudia Frederick, manager of the Winchester Mall in Rochester, and Joseph Thomas, mall manager at Wonderland, said they haven't been tipped off as to Foland's plans.

"I haven't heard anything," Frederick said.

Foland's occupies some 28,000 square feet of the 240,000 available in Winchester, she said.

"I'M SURE we wouldn't be able to fill it immediately (if Foland were to close for good)," Frederick said. "It would be a good location. I'd like to think they will be able to work this out. I understand this is one of their better producing stores."

Foland's leases more than 50,000 square feet at Wonderland, which encompasses just under a million, Thomas said.

"In today's retail market . . . a lot of major retailers are finding themselves in financial difficulty," Thomas said. "Nobody out there is exempt any more. Most people have a way of working it out. It's a matter of working with creditors."

Thomas said he doesn't anticipate a problem leasing Foland's space if the company were to go out of business.

Foland's, which also has stores in Dearborn, Warren and Clinton Township, employs about 450, Castlegrant said.

"The spirits of our employees are very high," he said. "We're doing the best we can. We've always been blessed with good employees. They're super people."

Who's liable for data loss?

By R.J. King
special writer

What happens if a computer service technician accidentally hits a wrong key at the office and wipes out a personnel file of more than 1,000 employees?

Or what if a computer virus shuts down a medical clinic for days because of a secret instruction that doubles all entries until the system refuses to operate?

While much of the data lost in such accidents can easily be restored with back-up tapes, there are no guarantees the tapes will work as advertised or even that employees will make copies of their daily entries. What's more, the costs of lost data, down time and recovery from a computer accident could cost a company thousands of dollars, both in continuing to pay idle employees and signing off on bills from a computer service firm hired to restore the system.

While in the past operations stalled by faulty computers left businesses with few avenues of redress, there are growing signs that companies can collect damages from such accidents through general liability insurance policies.

"It's a frightening prospect to consider that one innocent mistake with a computer could bring a multi-million-dollar company to a standstill," said Mary Kator, an attorney with the firm of Kaufman & Payton in Farmington Hills, which specializes in insurance litigation. "But the prospect of a computer crash is very real. Even if a company faithfully makes copies of its daily operations on back-up tapes, there is no guarantee the back-up tapes will work or copy everything that they should."

AND KATOR should know. In a case that will have national implications for computer users, insurance companies and computer service firms, Kator is representing a Birmingham client in a dispute with its insurance carrier over coverage for lost computer data.

While the case points out the need to back up even the most routine of computer tasks, it also addresses an infant issue in computer law: Does a general liability insurance policy al-

Low scores

MEAP tests' action plan set

THE MICHIGAN Education Assessment Program test scores for Wayne-Westland school district students continue to be disappointing.

But the school administration isn't moaning about the factors out of its control which contribute to the modest scores.

The curriculum staff has developed an action plan for boosting scores this year and next.

Residents should be aware that while the Wayne-Westland scores are modest at best, they weren't much different than those of the Taylor and Romulus school districts.

The community should also be conscious of the high turnover rate of students which impedes improvements in test results.

In one elementary school, there was an incredibly high turnover of 70 percent. Other schools have a smaller turnover which makes it hard for building principals and teachers to plan a curriculum for students who haven't been exposed to the same curriculum as classmates who have been in the district for their entire school lives.

Like football and basketball teams planning strategies for upcoming opponents, the school district is doing the same for next year's MEAP tests.

"WE ARE aiming for improvement, not perfection," Norine Blake, new associate superintendent for curriculum and instruction, told the school board last month.

Among the strategies for boosting scores next year are to have building principals and teachers develop a specific needs profile for their school; train teachers more in the areas which show academic weaknesses, and buy new math texts, which have been a problem in recent years.

The community which pays most of the bills for the local educational system and its students deserve more. The best news coming out of the MEAP scores is that there is a plan to improve scores in the future.

There's no sense in complaining about low scores. It wastes time and energy.

What most parents want is a plan to improve academic test scores and a full-scale effort by everyone — administration and teachers — to improve scores.

Council chief

Pickering: new political role

THE SELECTION of Charles Pickering as Westland's new city council president Monday represents a major turnaround.

Those with good memories will remember that Pickering, mayor from 1982 through 1985, was at constant war with the city council — many fights resulted in civil lawsuits.

Pickering lost his bid for re-election in 1985 — one factor leading to Pickering's defeat was his perceived inability to get along with the council.

Pickering returned two years later, winning a city council seat and won re-election in November to a second term on the city council.

SINCE RETURNING, , Pickering has gone through a political transformation. He is less confrontational and more focused on identifying problems and suggesting solutions.

His selection as council president shows movement towards a more business-like approach and a closer political relationship with Mayor Robert Thomas, who supported Pickering last fall.

With Pickering as council leader, the business of running the legislative branch of city government should run more smoothly and efficiently.

First Night

B'ham builds warm tradition

THANK YOU BIRMINGHAM and the Birmingham-Bloomfield Cultural Council for giving us an exiting, refreshing, low-cost, family-oriented way to spend New Year's Eve.

More than 9,000 people from many parts of metro Detroit roved the community, choosing among 125 live performances at more than a dozen sites at the second annual First Night/Birmingham '92 arts festival.

They gathered at midnight in the center of the city to view a laser light show, to count down the old year and to raise their voices (and kazoos) in the traditional Auld Lang Syne.

Birmingham is among 75 cities throughout the United States and Canada which this year put on the alcohol-free First Night celebration.

It's a heady undertaking, requiring tremendous leadership and organization, fund-raising abilities, an army of volunteers and a city willing to put its liability, safety, emergency and clean-up services on the line.

Birmingham is among 75 cities throughout the United States and Canada which this year put on the alcohol-free First Night celebration.

BIRMINGHAM GETS its share of knocks from those on the outside looking in on this seemingly wealthy community. It has a reputation for in-breeding and conservatism, for racism and for prejudice.

But it has taken its strengths — its strong arts community, heritage of volunteerism and the beauty of its buildings and grounds — and offered them, for this night, to everyone.

In doing so, Birmingham is helping us throw out the old and stale and build a new, warm tradition for celebrating New Year's Eve.

Education

Voters say yes to high-tech

INNOVATION IN EDUCATION will be a key to enhancing the economic viability of this nation. Parents, teachers and administrators should take a close look at the Plymouth/Canton district if they want to experience a taste of the future.

Voters in that western Wayne County district recently approved a bond issue that included $12 million for a high technology package that would wean students away from printed books and onto the computer terminal that would feed them the the latest information more rapidly and efficiently.

Interactive video, laser discs and computer links to university libraries will give students in this district a leap ahead in learning how to do business on a global scale.

Taxpayers will save money in the long run. School districts adapting this system will free themselves from purchasing tons of paper in the form of new textbooks every five years or so.

Students also will have a better ability to keep up with rapid global changes that today leave traditional publishers far behind.

Replacing books with technology may seem radical to those who want to stick with "back-to-basic" education. But as a nation that cares for its children's future, we must experiment and innovate.

As a nation that cares for its children's future, we must experiment and innovate.

Administrators in that district are working with consultants in attempts to design a program that will be applicable to future computer changes and educational needs.

With sound planning, this program very likely will succeed. But even if it fails, the district has taken a correct step. To improve education, we must encourage the educators to take risks and, yes, even fail when taking them.

The Plymouth/Canton district is to be commended for this leap into the 21st century. Administrators there hope to make their district a model the nation can follow. We wish them good fortune in this endeavor and hope that other districts follow suit.

Competitive troubles signal need to change

Philip Power

IT WAS A lousy way to come into the New Year.

The University of Michigan football team got decisively whupped in the Rose Bowl by the vastly superior Washington Huskies. And the aftershocks of General Motors' announced plant closings and work force reductions were still rattling around the state.

U-M and GM are traditionally among Michigan's strongest assets. That both should face similar competitive troubles at the same time should serve as a cautionary tale.

AS TO THE Wolverines, the suspicion had been growing for years in Ann Arbor that the U-M football program, though successful, was a long way from the top national rank of the 1940s through the '70s.

There was a growth of competition. As population moved to the warmer climes of California and Florida, high school football programs there grew and flourished.

The best competitive test: the Big Ten's continued record of failure in the Rose Bowl against the Pacific Ten. It wasn't just Bo Schembechler's fault; most football observers say the Big Ten simply isn't in the same league.

Bo had a wonderful run in his 21 years as head coach. But like the corporate momentum built up over the years at GM, his long tenure at Michigan may have solidified habits that were once good but are now uncompetitive.

GM FACES a similar challenge for similar reasons.

The rise of competition — first from Europe, then Japan — changed the face of the market.

GM looks as bad against the Japanese as the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl. In 1979 GM commanded 46 percent of the American auto market; in 1991, only 35 percent.

Like Bo stubbornly running play after play into the line, GM first tried to solve the competitive problem by a traditional method: Throw money at it. The company spent $77 billion in new plants and equipment to reduce labor costs. But as Fortune Magazine recently concluded, "Nobody spent as much as GM and got so little for it."

Finally, like Gary Moeller installing a modern diversified offense at Michigan, GM realized it had to fix its uninspired and poor quality product line. In the last two years, it has introduced a record-setting number of new products to uniform raves from the automobile press and consumers.

But with a recession on and the company still 40 percent less productive than Ford, more fundamental steps were required. Hence GM's decision to close six assembly plants, 15 other factories and shrink the labor force by 74,000 blue- and white-collar jobs.

THAT BOTH U-M and GM face fundamental problems of succeeding in today's world can be seen from two quotes:

- U-M star offensive tackle Greg SKrepanak: "We definitely need an adjustment to take our game to the next level." Possibly "adjustment" understates what needs to be done.
- Japanese Prime Minister Miyazawa: "GM is like the Stars and Stripes to the United States, so it comes as a great shock to Americans that GM has been defeated by Japanese cars." Possibly "defeated" is too strong, but make no mistake. GM's downsizing indicates quite clearly that the corporation has no plans to regain traditional U.S. market share in the foreseeable future.

Times change. More times than not, the competition improves. And all too often, the old ways that brought past success do little but hinder future accomplishment. Fundamental change is necessary, if only for survival.

Gary Moeller knows this at U-M, just as Bob Stempel knows it at GM. Let's all hope for their success in this New Year and the future.

'Fear' letter is criticized

To the editor:

We would like to respond to the letter that appeared in the December 19 paper, "Don't let fear control" written by Madeline J. Sanford.

For eight months now we have gone on a fact finding mission, in order to inform ourselves of all the information that has been available on the Cooper landfill sight.

We know that according to a Wayne County Health Department memo dated Aug. 2, 1984, "It would be unwise to assume only household refuse was brought to the site during its operation life."

We have seen test results which show that there are high levels of toxins and heavy metals at this site. These toxins pose a real and pervasive threat to children, who because of their age and size are most at risk.

We also know, that to date, no risk assessment has been done to determine what risk our children, who attended Cooper Elementary, are faced with.

How Ms. Sanford can take the cancer study, which did not take into account the toxins found at the Cooper site, the mobility of cancer patients, or the source of exposure and by the words of the Michigan Cancer Foundation, that the results should not be used to interpret any association of the risk factors and cancer incidence in relation to the landfill, is beyond comprehension.

We cannot and should not consider the study to be anything more than preliminary. It by no means gives the Cooper site a clean bill of health.

Ms. Sanford seems to feel comforted by the fact that Wayne County has refused to fence their portion of the landfill. A fence which was requested by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. Would she still feel comforted to know that Wayne County has done soil testing at this site, yet has so far refused to release the results, or even return phone calls from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, or the community, regarding this issue? Is this refusal to release the results because the site is safe or due to fear of the heavy costs incurred to protect the community from the landfill?

We do agree with her on one aspect of her article; our environment is very fragile. But to use the rational that our children are exposed to carcinogens daily, so that we should allow them the risk of having to attend school atop a toxic landfill, is ridiculous. Even Andrew Horgarth of the MDNR stated at a public meeting on August 8, "It's simply not compatible to have an elementary school in the middle of a landfill."

It's sad to think that not only are our children at risk from toxins but also from the unfortunate attitude of some members of our community, who like Ms. Sanford, have failed to look at all the facts.

We would like to suggest to Ms. Sanford, and to the entire Cooper community that they inform themselves of all information, not just selective information, as you might receive from Livonia Public Schools, (as stated by the Livonia Public Schools in a December 5 Observer article) before jumping to any conclusions.

If we can get anything out of this nightmare, it's that our community and legislators realize that concern for our children's future, far outweighs any benefits of having a school operated on or near a toxic landfill.

In conclusion, to use a familiar quote, "If you don't stand up for something, you'll fall for anything." Our children are worth standing up for.

County told: 'have a heart'

To the editor:

This is in response to your Dec. 30 article "Family Tree" (telling of a Westland mother ordered to remove crosses planted along the Hines Drive to mark the spot of her daughter's traffic death) and is directed to the county recreation department:

A grieving mother is ordered to remove two sad little crosses, placed in loving tribute to her dead daughter and daughter's friend, because the park "isn't a cemetery."

Who would it hurt? Who would it even bother?

Have a heart.

Educators should teach ethics

Q: When I was in high school and college in the early sixties it was clearly wrong to lie, cheat or steal. It not only was embarrassing but dishonorable. Recently, I heard that 60 percent of high school students admit to cheating in school. Have we lost some of the old time ethics or am I just out of touch?

A: A recent survey reported in the Boston Globe reported that 75 percent of all high school students admit to cheating. For college-age students the number is 50 percent.

You question if there is a difference in ethics and honesty between your generation and today's generation. Look at stealing? A U.S. News and World Report survey asked college-age students if they would steal from their employer. Thirty-four percent said they would steal. Only six percent of people over 45 said they would steal from their employer.

One college ethics professor was amazed to hear one of his class discussions conclude that torture may be wrong from our viewpoint but not necessarily wrong for those in other cultures.

A Harvard University history professor coined the term "no-fault history" when a majority of students in one class viewed the Holocaust as a natural cataclysm - it was inevitable and unavoidable . . . a "freak" occurrence of human nature.

THE PROFESSOR concluded that these students, if they were sitting in judgment at a 1991 Nuremberg trial, would have let everyone off. Obviously, the Holocaust didn't personally impact on them or their loved ones. What a sad state of affairs.

What's the problem besides the obvious breakdown of the family in this country, a 50-percent plus divorce rate, Savings and Loan crooks in the pockets of politicians, a $50 billion tab for taxpayers to support disability insurance for a population in which half are not disabled. And where has education fit into all this? Has education contributed to this mind set?

Back in your day, morals and ethics were directly taught in literature and social studies and often role modeled by teachers. Many teachers today still work in infusing sound ethical and moral values. But speak too loudly about morals and you may be labeled a religious fanatic.

Today, high school and college students discuss and debate social morality issues such as capital punishment, euthanasia, the ethics of transplant surgery. Critical societal issues students need to sort through. But what ever happened to the issue of one's own private morality . . . the questions of honesty, decency, personal responsibility, the pitfalls of hypocrisy, physical and (worse) verbal cruelty to others.

There doesn't seem to be any right or wrong in this "rap" culture . . . just get a "feel good" for the moment high. If it's cheating on a test, so what says 75 percent of our high school population.

IF IT IS SEX . . . don't sweat it. Yet, look at the price Magic Johnson has to pay. Should health educators come right out and say, "not safe sex . . . but save sex for marriage." Have I lost it in my gracefully aging years. What an anachronism.

Besides, we have value clarification in schools. Let's ask children what they like or dislike for their own personal preferences in making decisions.

Chemistry teachers don't allow children to fend for themselves in the chemistry lab because they have knowledge of chemicals. Vocational education teachers don't allow children to operate welding gear or electronic equipment before they are trained. And teachers can teach ethics and morals if they chose to do so.

One student in a college psychology class I taught plagiarized his entire term paper. He cheated. I didn't flunk him. Teachers are there to teach, not fail kids. We talked. He agreed to do a second term paper on "The Psychological Factors Inherent in Cheating in School and in Life." An excellent piece of research resulted.

Today, he is very successful in the insurance business and still takes me to lunch once a year.

Can teachers teach moral and ethical standards? I say yes.

Children, from their early elementary years should read and discuss stories that reinforce kindness, goodness and character. In high school, studying and discussing moral classics should not be looked at as old-fashioned.

And administrators and teachers should not be accused of being part of a police state or face lawsuits when they insist on honest and decency from their students.

James "Doc" Doyle, a former teacher/school administrator/university instructor, is president of Doyle & Associates, an educational consulting firm.

Jackson is still dishing out baloney, this time plaguing Blanchard's successor, Gov. John Engler, over the General Assistance welfare issue.

Jackson contends that the cure for welfare is jobs.

On his recent visit to Engler's Detroit office, a reporter asked Jackson about "welfare dependency." His floundering reply indicated he didn't know what the guy was talking about.

GENERAL ASSISTANCE, the program Engler and the Legislature ended Oct. 1, 1991, had been funded by the counties — some of them, anyway — until 1976 when state funding and rules were phased in.

GA paid adults with no children, some disabled people ineligible for formal disability programs, those whose unemployment benefits ran out, and parents who no longer were eligible for AFDC because their kids reached 18 and the parents still hadn't learned a job skill.

But go back to Jackson's and the political left's proposition: That job creation reduces the need for welfare.

Here is the average General Assistance caseload for adults without kids and those on the Job Start program:

Fiscal Year 1980 — 74,937.
Fiscal Year 1981 — 104,873.
Fiscal Year 1982 — 103,920.
Fiscal Year 1983 — 127,119.
Fiscal Year 1984 — 141,956.
Fiscal Year 1985 — 124,684.
Fiscal Year 1986 — 109,704.
Fiscal Year 1987 — 98,191.
Fiscal Year 1988 — 93,310.
Fiscal Year 1989 — 92,714.
Fiscal Year 1990 — 100,722.
Fiscal Year 1991 — 99,959.

Blanchard became governor in Fiscal Year '83 and four years later was campaigning for re-election on the basis that 600,000 new jobs had been created.

About half those jobs were filled by people in the unemployment line. A few were filled by previous AFDC recipients. And a very few were filled by those who had been on General Assistance.

In short, Blanchard's "Michigan Miracle" only dented the welfare caseload — which wasn't Blanchard's fault.

Tim Richard

GENERAL ASSISTANCE had a life of its own.

Unemployment today is in the 9 percent ballpark versus 16 to 18 percent in the bottom of the 1979-83 recession. Yet the GA level was nearly the same in FY '90.

The Rev. Lloyd Thiel recently reported that in 1978 the Capuchin Soup Kitchen in Detroit distributed 179,000 meals, and in 1990 it distributed 1,212,000 meals.

If your calculator isn't handy, I'll save you the trouble: a 677 percent increase.

"Anyone who comes to our kitchen six months or more will come the rest of their lives," said Thiel.

Or as the old saying goes: "Give a man a fish, and you make him a dependent slave. Teach him to fish, and you make him free."

Jackson can't grasp that. When Jackson returns Jan. 15, Engler needs to preach to him, not the other way around.

THIS LEAVES us in a dilemma:

• God-fearing folks don't like to see others go hungry, so they give. Even agnostics and atheists are known to share this view.

• But the more and longer we give, the more who wind up as perpetual clients. To pay for the ever-increasing burden, we short-change our schools, colleges, natural resources and the arts.

Far from being a scissorhands, Engler has replaced GA with a new disability program, EDGE (Educational Design for Gainful Employment), a $60 million emergency shelter program, and so on.

Essentially he juggled the programs to maximize federal matching grants. The result of his allegedly conservative action was a $5.9 billion social services bill — the highest in Michigan history.

The cure for welfare dependency? I don't know. But at least some of us know the cancerous phenomenon exists. Jesse Jackson doesn't.

Tim Richard reports reglarly on the local implications of state and regional events.

Facts dispel myths about legal system

By By Jeff Stewart
special writer

IT IS HARD to pick up a newspaper or magazine these days without seeing an article claiming that America is swimming in product liability and malpractice claims that are destroying the country's competitiveness and health care system. However, the facts just don't bear this out and people ought to know that before they give away rights that have evolved over two centuries. Let's look at some of the myths that are being repeated so often they are beginning to pass for fact.

• MYTH 1: America is losing its competitive edge due to the filing of millions of lawsuits per year nationwide.

THE FACTS: Americans file fewer lawsuits per capita than did our forefathers in colonial times, and the population rate is rising faster than the rate of case filings. According to the National Center for State Courts, only 2.4 percent of cases filed in the U.S. are tort claims, the balance include every kind of case imaginable including real estate, divorce and business to business cases. When it comes to product claims, the United States Consumer Product Safety Commission estimated in 1988 that 33 million Americans suffered product related injuries resulting in more than 29,000 deaths. Less than 3 percent of these victims ever filed a claim.

A 1991 Rand Institute Civil Justice Report estimated that in 1989 alone, non-fatal injuries cost the U.S. economy $176 billion with only about 10 percent of the compensation paid passing through the tort liability system. This means that 90 percent of the cost of these injuries was passed on to society as a whole and borne by all citizens collectively, while only 10 percent was attributed to wrongdoers. In the medical malpractice field, a 1990 Harvard Medical School study in New York City showed that less than 10 percent of the victims of malpractice ever filed claims.

The Rand Corp. also recently compared the number of claims made by Americans with those of other democracies having similar tort law. They found that the differences in the number of claims filed were statistically insignificant. In fact, while America's product liability tort system is under attack in this country, it is being modeled in Europe. The European Community Council directive of July 25, 1985 calls for American style product liability law to be adopted by each member nation by 1992.

• MYTH 2: Damage awards are getting out of hand, often paying millions of dollars for minor injuries.

THE FACTS: In a study performed by the General Accounting Office (Congress's watchdog agency), a review of product liability verdicts from every case tried in a five-state sample showed that "in general, damage awards were not erratic or excessive . . . the size of compensatory awards (which include both economic and in non-economic damages), is strongly associated with injury severity and the amount of the economic loss. In every single award topping $1 million, either death or serious, permanent injury had occurred.

When 20 years of product liability awards were reviewed by Consumer Reports magazine, relying on data from the independent research service by Jury Verdict Research Inc., it was found that the size of verdicts had just barely exceeded the Consumer Price Index as of August 1986 ("The Manufactured Crisis," August 1986).

• MYTH 3: Medical costs are out of control and doctors are being driven out of the state of Michigan by malpractice claims and the high cost of insurance.

THE FACTS: Medical liability costs add about 1 percent to the cost of medical care. As for doctors fleeing the state, a June 1990 report prepared by the Office of Health and Medical Affairs, Michigan Department of Management and Budget, shows that Michigan retains almost exactly the same percentage of its obstetrician/gynecologist physicians (92.4 percent) as its physicians in other specialties (92.5 percent).

Studies showing that doctors educated here tend to flee the state upon graduation disregard the fact that Michigan is one of the leading medical training centers in the country and imports medical students, interns and residents who naturally leave to return to their home states.

• MYTH 4: The country has way too many lawyers with 70 percent of the world's attorneys, even though we have 5 percent of the population.

If the U.S. calculated the number of litigating attorneys the same way the other countries do, there would be about the same relative number of litigators per capita, approximately one for each 14,000 citizens. The article "The Myth of Japan as a 'Land Without Lawyers' " in the International Bar News shows that Japan has about the same number of people performing legal services as the U.S., approximately one for each 700 citizens.

It is time to recognize that the battle over tort reform is a political one, not a moral, ethical or even economic one. When the facts are examined, it is hard to see the basis for overhauling a civil justice system that has been evolving for 200 years.

"People want to avoid the hassle of driving and parking.

"THEY'RE ALSO CONCERNED about the new laws," Jackson said, referring to tougher laws against drinking and driving that went into effect Jan. 1.

Jackson sees the possibility of other business Jan. 26, the day of the Superbowl (in Minneapolis), with or without the Lions. His shuttle is ready to pick revelers up at their door, deliver them to watering holes hosting Superbowl parties and then take them home.

"People just don't want to drink and drive," he said. "And it makes good sense."

Jackson was raised in southern Ohio and attended evening classes at the University of Cincinnati, graduating in 1971. He lived in Birmingham during the last 10 years of his tenure with Chevrolet, during which he was a manager in sales promotion.

That's when the idea — and marketing plan — for the Woodward Corridor Connection took shape.

"I saw a lot of companies and conventions that had out-of-town clients who wanted to see the Detroit-area attractions," Jackson said: "I also saw potential in family reunions, bachelor parties or bridal showers."

AS PART OF his promotion material, Jackson did the research and the drawing for a colorful poster (at left) featuring focal points of the Woodward corridor. It begins at Belle Isle and includes well-known landmarks like Cobo Hall, the General Motors headquarters and the Kingsley Inn.

Shamrocks find Justice

By Brad Emons
staff writer

basketball

Redford Catholic Central was hurting Tuesday, but newcomer Eric Justice helped relieve the pain.

The Shamrocks rallied in the second half to gain a 62-54 Catholic League basketball win at Redford Bishop Borgess in the Central Division opener for both schools.

Justice, a 5-foot-7 point-guard eligible to play his first game after transferring from Dearborn Heights Fairlane Christian, netted only two free throws, but was instrumental in quarterbacking CC to the come-from-behind win.

CC, now 5-1 overall, played most of the night without top scorer Chad Varga, who started, but played sparingly because of a sore upper shoulder.

The Shamrocks were also without starter Brian Paluk, who is out three weeks with a broken thumb.

"He (Justice) definitely gave us a boost," CC coach Bernie Holowicki said of the transfer. "The first time he got out there (second quarter) he was kind of out of control, but when he keeps it in order, like he did in the second half, he can drive, dish and go to the basket. His quickness means a lot. He got trapped a lot, but he was able to split the seams and we got some three-on-two breaks. And he (Justice) caused it."

WITH THE emergence of Justice, 6-6 Bob Kummer was able to go inside and outside.

The senior forward finished with a game-high 20 points, including four 3-pointers to go along with a nice two-hand slam dunk to open the fourth quarter.

The Shamrocks also had three others score in double figures: Tom Laco (16), Mark Gondek (11) and Will Marcoux (10).

A pair of free throws by Gondek with 4:36 to play put CC ahead for keeps, 51-49.

The Shamrocks capped their pivotal six-points on Laco's tip-in with 3:04 left to make it 55-49.

Justice's feed inside to Marcoux with 1:53 remaining gave CC a seven-point cushion, 59-52, and sewed up the win.

"Will (Marcoux) was playing for Chad (Varga) and played the game of his life," Holowicki said. "And when you play the other kids, the next time they're going to be more into it."

On the flip side, Borgess was out of it during the final 16 minutes of action. The Spartans were outscored 37-20.

Borgess trailed during the early stages of the game, but outscored CC 21-11 in the second quarter to take a 34-25 halftime lead.

BORGESS, which led by as many as 13 in the first half, went cold in the second half hitting only seven of 27 shots from the floor (25.9 percent).

"In the middle of the third quarter we lost a step of intensity," said Borgess coach Mike Fusco, whose team fell to 2-2 overall. "We had the shots, but we didn't put it down. We didn't get back what we had established in the first half. We always talk to our players about playing for the moment. In the second half our minds were not on the moment. We have to maintain consistent levels of performance."

Senior guard Lamar Westbrook scored 16 in a losing cause, while Jermaine Parker (off the bench) and Darwin Cegers contributed 15 and 11, respectively.

"This was a great win because we were reeling at halftime," Holowicki said.

One key statistic on the night was turnovers.

CC had 13 at intermission, but had only seven in the second half.

Borgess, meanwhile, had 21 on the game.

Stevenson gains new frontier vs. Pioneer

Livonia Stevenson on Tuesday handed visiting Ann Arbor Pioneer its first loss of the boys basketball season, 58-48.

The non-league win improved Stevenson to 3-1 overall. Pioneer fell to 4-1 overall.

"We had four decent quarters of effort," Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre said. "The kids came out and matched Pioneer with intensity. All the kids did the little things necessary to control the tempo and handle Pioneer's pressure. Pioneer's got enough talent to make a dent in its league (South Central)."

After playing to a 15-15 tie after one quarter the Spartans outscored Pioneer, 18-9, in the second period to take a 33-24 halftime lead. Stevenson raised the lead to 43-32 after three quarters and held off Pioneer in the fourth quarter.

Senior guard Matt Grodzicki led Stevenson with 17 points, including eight in the second quarter. Senior forward Colin Stockton scored 16 points, while senior guard Ryan Furkas contributed 11 points.

Furkas sank three 3-point field goals and Grodzicki buried two. The Spartans had six for the game.

Dan Okomkmo led Pioneer with 15 points and Adam Comstock added 12.

FRANKLIN 64, REDFORD UNION 58: Senior Jeff Witkowski made a 3-pointer with 1:57 left to give Livonia Franklin a 54-53 lead Tuesday, and the visiting Patriots outscored the Panthers 10-5 the rest of the way for the non-league win.

The Patriots are 3-1 overall, while RU fell to 2-3 overall.

The Patriots helped assure the victory with clutch free-throw shooting down the stretch and they finished the game making 21-of-26 from the line.

"That was the best free-throw shooting we've had in my five years as coach," Franklin coach Rod Hanna said. "Our seniors (Witkowski, Keith Roberts, Russ Keberly and Jeff Hunt) really played hard the last four minutes. RU is not a bad team, but we made mistakes defensively and didn't do a good job rebounding."

Roberts led the Patriots with 23 points, including two 3-pointers, while Keberly contributed 15. Junior forward Jason Facione had 10. Witkowski scored all seven of his points in the fourth quarter.

Senior guards Bill Maleckl and Paul Nowak paced RU with 17 points apiece, but the Panthers could not hold 45-39 advantage after three periods.

WAYNE 71, TRENTON 37: After playing evenly for two quarters Tuesday at Trenton, Wayne Memorial showed its strength in the second half against its Wolverine A League opponent.

The Zebras, who led only 29-28 at halftime, outscored Trenton, 25-3, in the third quarter and 17-6 in the fourth to win easily. Four players scored in double figures for the Zebras, led by DeMarco Robinson's 16 points and Dontez Prewitt's 15.

The Zebras improved to 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the Wolverine A. Trenton is 2-3 overall and 1-1 in the league.

Wayne seniors Rick Barnes and Greg Hartmann contributed 12 and 10 points, respectively.

HURON 70, JOHN GLENN 36: Westland John Glenn made only 13-of-52 field goal attempts and shot even worse at the free-throw line (7-20) Tuesday in losing this non-league game at Ann Arbor Huron.

The Rockets trailed only 16-13 after one quarter but Huron outscored Glenn, 14-6, in the second quarter to open up a 30-19 halftime lead. The onslaught worsened in the third quarter when Huron enjoyed a 19-11 edge to take a commanding, 49-30 lead.

Junior forward John Miller led Glenn with 12 points.

Huron outrebounded Glenn, 32-22, and got a game-high 19 points from Zane Phillips. Teammates Demone Brown and Noah Maurer contributed 16 and 11, respectively.

CLARENCEVILLE 79, TRINITY 59: Dan Nunnery led three Livonia Clarenceville players in double figures with 24 points Tuesday as the Trojans routed host Detroit Trinity Baptist.

The win moved Clarenceville's record to 3-1 overall. Trinity is 7-3 overall.

Johnny Kalaj scored 15 points and Mario Ivezaj added 10 for the Trojans, who led 42-32 at halftime.

OAKLAND CHRIST. 77, LUTH. WESTLAND 46: Lutheran Westland couldn't overcome a 23-3 deficit after one quarter Tuesday and suffered the lopsided loss at Auburn Hills Oakland Christian.

Senior guard Scott Mehlberg led Oakland with 21 points and teammate Mike Carter added 20. Junior forward Rich Mobley had 15 points for Lutheran Westland. Junior center Kevin Nelson contributed 12.

The loss dropped Lutheran Westland to 1-4 overall, 0-1 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Association. Oakland Christian improved to 4-0 overall, 1-0 in the MIAC.

Churchill girls continue winning ways at Saline

Defending state Class A volleyball champ Livonia Churchill, despite losing five starters from a year ago, isn't about to roll over and play dead in 1992.

The Chargers ran their overall record to 6-1 with a 15-5, 16-14 victory Saturday over Dearborn High in the finals of the Saline Invitational.

The victory avenged Churchill's only loss of the season.

"We've been making steady progress," Churchill coach Mike Hughes said. "We're going uphill, even though we're not going to threaten anybody of consequence at this time of the season."

The Chargers went 2-1 to finish second in pool play, defeating Ypsilanti Lincoln (15-8, 15-4) and Dexter (15-6, 15-8). They fell to Dearborn (9-15, 9-15).

The Chargers beat the host Hornets in the semifinals (15-10, 15-10) before downing Dearborn for the title.

"We played much better defense," Hughes said. "It was nice to come back to beat Dearborn and win the tourney. We switched our middle hitters. We made a small change, we tipped and rolled the ball more and I think it changed the tenor of the game. We had more variety in our attack."

Setter Kristi Szymanski sparked the victory with strong contributions coming from starters Ellen Lessig, Julie Campau, Vicki Lucas and Chrissy Daly.

Churchill, which started the year with victories over Westland John Glenn and Wayne Memorial, plays Saturday in the Portage Northern Invitational.

LIVONIA STEVENSON reached the finals of the 15-team Temperance-Bedford Invitational before losing to defending state Class C champ Hanover-Horton, 15-3, 15-4.

The Spartans earned a trip to the finals with a quarterfinal win over Monroe St. Mary's and a semifinal victory over Grosse Pointe South (15-6, 12-15, 15-9).

"We played exceptionally well all day," said Stevenson coach Lee Cagle, whose team is 8-5-2 overall. "We improved as the day went along. There were some individual points where we looked awful, but we came through at the right time and played very well."

Leading the Spartans were setter Patty Diamond and senior middle hitter and blocker Teresa Sarno.

Outside hitters Kristen Drabicki and Karen Groulx also lended good support, along with the play of Julie Martin and Heather Taylor.

LIVONIA LADYWOOD, a two-time state champion, opened its season Monday with a 15-5, 15-11 triumph over visiting Harper Woods Regina in a Catholic League (Central Division) match.

Junior Mary Jo Kelly recorded six kills in 13 attempts. Teammate Andrea Putti, also a junior, added five kills in eight attempts. (Each had one error.)

Nancy Burr added three kills and two service aces. Liz Gunn also contributed two ace serves.

Junior setter Valerie Adzima registered 13 assists, while Michelle Wilson recorded six digs.

New Wing optimistic

By Brad Emons

hockey

'I ran the gamut of emotions from surprised, to shocked, to nervous, to excited, to being happy to be there.'

— Chris Tancill

Chris Tancill was in the middle of unpacking.

"My next task is to connect the VCR," he said. "Then I have to set up the stereo, but we had a pretty long practice today and after driving back all night from Springfield (Mass.) we're not settled in quite yet. It's been pretty hectic, but it's part of the business."

Tancill, a Livonia Stevenson High grad who starred on the University of Wisconsin's 1990 NCAA Championship team, is now property of the Detroit Red Wings.

The right winger was traded Dec. 18 by the Hartford Whalers to the Wings for Daniel Shank.

Tancill, who has had two short stints during the past two seasons with the NHL Whalers, simply changed American Hockey League affiliates, going from Springfield to the Wings' top farm club in Adirondack (N.Y.).

Shank, who was playing at Adirondack, was brought up Hartford.

The trade took Tancill and his bride of six months, Jill, somewhat by surprise.

"IT GOT PRETTY crazy being that it was around the holidays," Tancill said. "My wife had to quit her job (as an occupational therapist) in Springfield, and it was a very good job. But she realized when she married me that this would happen. Right now she's going to take off a couple of months and see where I end up, then get a job wherever I go."

The trade, ironically, was rumored only days before it came off.

"My parents read something about it in the Free Press and I kind of laughed it off," Tancill said. "I ran the gamut of emotions from surprised, to shocked, to nervous, to excited, to being happy to be there. I had mixed feelings coming to Detroit because they are so good (first place in the NHL's Norris Division), and I was leaving friends that I had fought many wars with (at Hartford and Springfield). It was tough."

WHILE SHANK gives the Whalers a physical presence, Tancill brings to the Wings smarts, speed and skating ability.

Since he joined Adirondack, the Wings are 4-5.

"We won three right away, then lost the next three," Tancill said. "The team is kind of struggling at the halfway point, but this is a very talented team."

Tancill is paired on a line with Sheldon Kennedy and Keith Primeau, each former high draft choices by Detroit.

"They (Adirondack) told me to contribute any way you can," he said. "They expect me to contribute offensively and score goals. They said just keep doing the things you've been doing and play hard. They are a skating, up-tempo type of team and that suits my style."

In 26 AHL games this season, Tancill has 18 goals and 16 assists. Adirondack is currently in third place in the Northern Division of the AHL with an 18-20-1. (Springfield, the defending Calder Cup champs, lead the division at 19-16-5.)

"Hartford is trying to find the right chemistry and a lot of guys were going back and forth (from Springfield)," Tancill said. "If you're up there and you're not winning . . . boom, you're gone.

"The day I was sent down to Hartford they just told me to keep working hard. I didn't think it (the trade) would happen, so that's why it was quite a shock."

TANCILL SAID the transition has been made easier by the fact that couple of familiar faces are on the Adirondack roster in former Wisconsin teammate Gary Shuchuk, along with ex-Compuware teammate Chris Luongo.

"It's a crazy game, but these guys have been great and they've made it easy to fit in," Tancill said.

Meanwhile, where does Tancill fit into Detroit's future plans?

"They have a lot of centers and a lot of right wingers, too," said Tancill of the first-place NHL Wings. "It's a tough lineup to crack, but you have to look at it that good things happen to good teams. I've heard nothing but positive things about the organization. And if there was any place to be traded, that's where I'd want to be.

"I know it sounds corny, but you always want to play for the team you rooted for and watched most of your life. I would hope I could finish my career in Detroit. And with expansion coming up there may be some holes in Detroit, but right now all I can do is prove my worth."

And despite the sudden move, Tancill is starting to get comfortable in his new surroundings.

"With the holidays over and once I've moved in, I'll be able to concentrate more on hockey," he said. "Actually we're in a condo on a lake. It's pretty picturesque. My wife thinks it's a nice place."

CC icers draw blanks

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Slumps are something athletes are all too familiar with.

Any member of Redford Catholic Central's hockey team can supply a vivid, first-person description. The Shamrocks are mired in the middle of goal-scoring slump: eight periods without a goal. The last three, Saturday night at Redford Arena, saddled them with their first loss of the season, 3-0 to Trenton.

When you're going against the No. 2-ranked team in the state (Trenton), you need the breaks going in your favor. CC, ranked fourth, was going to have trouble containing the Trojans anyway. But when a team's slumping, this kind of stuff happens:

● Trailing 2-0 in the second period, a lazy Shamrock shot from the blue line seemed to fool Trenton goalie Jim Blackledge. It went right past him — then hit the post. It bounced out behind Blackledge toward CC's oncharging Bill Baaki on the right side, and ended up going right over his stick.

● Down 3-0 four minutes into the third period, Mike Seiler carried the puck around a Trenton defenseman toward the net, but Seiler couldn't maintain possession. The puck rolled off his stick toward the goal — once again getting past Blackledge and bouncing off the goalpost.

● CC's best chance to score was, unfortunately, completely missed. Three minutes into the game, Blackledge mistakenly thought a penalty had been assessed against CC and raced to the Trenton bench for an extra attacker. Upon reaching it, one of the team's five coaches greeted him, asking, "Where are you going?" CC, though, never got a shot at the empty net.

"We had some opportunities," said Shamrock coach Jack Gumbleton, whose team slipped to 6-1-1. "We just couldn't finish. We're having trouble putting the puck in the net."

Why? "I don't think we shoot enough," Gumbleton answered. "We try to work it in too close, and you can't do that."

GUMBLETON FIGURED to beat Trenton (now 5-1-2), CC "had to keep them in their end. We had to forecheck and keep them bottled up." But the team that did the bottling was Trenton.

The Shamrocks had problems getting the puck out of their own end. Trenton's tough blueliners, led by senior Mike Lazorka, excelled at keeping the puck in CC's zone.

Trojan coach Skip Howey had one concern entering the game: "We've been off 10 days for the holidays, and you never know what kind of effect that will have."

He got the answer early: None at all. Trenton scored 45 seconds into the game when Sean Slater took possession of the puck at center ice and sped down right wing, unleashing a hard shot at CC goalie Mike Brusseau. The blast went over Brusseau's right shoulder and Trenton was up 1-0.

PERSISTENCE PAID off for Trenton in the second period. Brusseau had made several tough saves, killing off three successive penalties, but no sooner had that been accomplished than Damian Frederick finished off a play started by teammates Keith Kneiding and Lazorka, who kept the puck in CC's end.

Frederick poked at the puck once, twice, thrice — and in it went, making it 2-0.

The final goal came with 2:32 left in the second period, and it, too, benefited from a CC mishap. Two Shamrocks collided, leaving the puck for Slater to carry in and push past a prone Brusseau.

"CC had some chances," admitted Howey, "but they just couldn't put the puck in the net. They have a lot of good young talent, though. They won't have any trouble scoring."

Gumbleton wants to believe that. "This may be a wake-up call for us," he said hopefully.

No. 1 Brother Rice topples Churchill, 9-4

Livonia Churchill stayed with the state's top-ranked Class A hockey team for a period, but that was the extent of it as Birmingham Brother Rice cruised to a 9-4 triumph Saturday at Compuware Arena in Oak Park.

Churchill (5-4 overall) trailed only 2-1 after one period thanks to Jamie Allen's goal from Todd Siedlaczek and Larry Allen.

But the unbeaten Warriors (7-0) struck for six unanswered goals in the second and third periods to put the game away.

Matt Green and Dale Rominski each scored twice for Rice. Mike Jalaba added one goal and three assists.

Churchill scored three times in the final period — Dan Imperati from Flo Jentzmik and Dan O'Connor; Mike Johnson (unassisted) and Siedlaczek (unassisted).

Troy Henderson and Dave Watson split time in the Churchill nets.

FRANKLIN 4, HARTLAND 1: Livonia Franklin coach Terry Jobbitt called it "an ugly victory" after the Patriots won Saturday against the host Eagles.

Franklin, which outshot Hartland by an incredible 52-5 count, led 3-0 after two periods.

Matt Leirstein scored twice for the winners, while Rick Bernard and added a goal and two assists.

Justin Osman also scored for the victorious Patriots, now 7-1-1 overall.

Shane Hastings contributed two assists, while Darren Catanzarite, Joe O'Connell and Jeremy Klosowski each had one.

Goalie Joe Huber lost his shutout bid on a breakaway in the final period.

The Patriots were able to fight off a four-minute, two-man disadvantage behind the penalty killing of Mike Nutting, Bernard, Hastings and Klosowski.

Borgess football coach Bazylewicz retires

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Walt Bazylewicz, who kept the Redford Bishop Borgess football program going the last three falls, has decided to make a move of his own.

After guiding Borgess to a three-year record of 12-15, the 69-year-old Bazylewicz on Monday confirmed he has resigned as head coach of the Spartans.

Bazylewicz said he made up his mind prior to the first game last fall but didn't let his players know until the end of the season. Despite dwindling enrollment and a small coaching staff to work with, Bazylewicz led the Spartans to a 5-4 record last fall and a 6-3 finish in 1990.

Borgess suffered through a 1-8 campaign in 1989, his first at the helm.

"I felt this was going to be the last year (at Borgess), win, lose or draw," Bazylewicz said. "I came there to help restore the program and I felt I did what I could do and it's time to move on. I really enjoyed it. It got me back in the fire of it and I really felt good about coaching and teaching."

WORKING LONG hours, even in the off-season, helped Bazylewicz decide to resign. Although he has ruled out head coaching again, Bazylewicz said he hopes to land a job as an assistant on the high school level for the 1992 season.

"I was there (at Borgess) in the winter, getting a weight program going, making sure the kids were going to class, running the concessions on Bingo nights . . . in the Catholic League you fund raise, do everything you have to do to keep a program going," Bazylewicz said. "I said, 'Gee, I'm putting too much time into this job.'"

Bazylewicz, who also coached football at Redford St. Mary's, Harper Woods Notre Dame, Dearborn Heights Riverside and Detroit St. Thomas, has a career record of 172-61-5.

Bazylewicz came out of retirement to take over the Borgess job after being the Catholic League Director for 15 years. He also was a professional football scout for several years in the 1970s and 80s.

BORGESS ATHLETIC director Mike Fusco appreciated the job Bazylewicz did.

"He basically saved our football program," Fusco said. "Those are very difficult shoes to fill because he's a well-known football person."

Teeters breaks record in CC dual meet victory

Posting five state qualifying times, Redford Catholic Central rolled to a 60-33 boys swim triumph over Northville in a dual meet Tuesday at Farmington Hills Mercy High.

Randy Teeters was the catalyst, figuring in three of the five qualifying times including a school record clocking of 59.33 in the 100-yard breast stroke. He eclipsed the mark of 1:00.77 held by Jim Surowiec since 1986.

Teeters also captured the 200 individual medley (2:02.07) and teamed up with Steve Reinke, James Leslie and John Brogan to win the 200 medley relay (1:42.97).

Other state qualifying times were posted by Reinke in the 100 butterfly (54.86) and Leslie in the 500 freestyle (4:50.93).

Other CC individual firsts were recorded by John Brogan in the 50 and 100 freestyles with times of 23.06 and 51.25, respectively, and Reinke in 100 backstroke, 57.89.

The foursome of Brogan, Devon Fekete, Paul Magoulick and Kevin Markell took the 200 freestyle relay (1:35.81), while the quartet of Leslie, Markell, Reinke and Teeters added a first in the 400 freestyle relay (3:28.43).

CC is 1-1 overall.

The Shamrocks were beaten Saturday in their season opener by Toledo St. Francis, 202-176.

Kelley leading by example college sports

By Ray Setlock
staff writer

The temptations are there — sex, drugs and alcohol. But University of Detroit-Mercy basketball star Dwayne Kelley chooses to ignore them.

Kelley, a former standout at Redford Bishop Borgess, said he'd rather concentrate on playing basketball.

"As a college basketball player, you are targeted more than most," Kelley said. "A lot of people are jealous of the recognition you get and they want to take you down a couple of notches by suckering you into trouble.

"Me, I want no part of that. If I get into trouble, my reputation is not only tarnished, but the reputation of the U-D Mercy basketball program is hurt as well, and I don't want any part of that."

Kelley said he had a difficult time earlier this season when Titans coach Ricky Byrdsong scheduled 6 a.m. practice sessions.

Was getting up that early tough on Kelley?

"Tough is not the word," Kelley said. "Those three weeks were terrible. Getting up at 6 is tough, but getting up and going to practice at that hour is a whole different story. I worked hard in those practices, but I'm sure glad that time is over."

KELLEY'S WORK ETHIC has paid off and he has 2½ seasons worth of statistics to back it up.

Kelley, a junior, is presently fourth in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference (MCC) in scoring, averaging 15.2 points per game, including 22 three-pointers.

Last season, the 6-foot-4 guard was fourth in the MCC scoring race, averaging 15.9 points per contest, including 41 three-pointers. He was selected as an honorable mention all-regional player by Basketball Times and Basketball Weekly magazines.

As a freshman, Kelley averaged 10 points per game. His 47 three-pointers set a U-D Mercy freshman record.

U-D Mercy forward Michael Lovelace said Kelley is successful because he works diligently on his game.

"Dwayne is a pretty low-key guy and keeps to himself off the court, but on the court his work ethic is unmatched," Lovelace said. "Dwayne is a veteran who leads by example and everyone seems to respond. Dwayne is one of the reasons that we are having a successful season."

KELLEY SHOULD crack the U-D Mercy top 10 assist leaders list Wednesday when the Titans host Butler. He has 236 and needs just one to pass Brendan McNamara, who tallied 237 from 1948 to 1951.

Kelley has also passed Archie Tullos (1985-88) and Bill Wood (1987-90) this season to become the U-D Mercy all time three-point leader. Tullos netted 104 career triples, while Wood made a school record 107. With his three treys in an 89-81 loss at Eastern Michigan Dec. 30, Kelley has a career total of 110.

"I'm in a great situation playing here at U-D Mercy," Kelley said. "This is the best team we've had since I've been here. Hopefully we can enjoy a successful season."

The Titans are 6-5 heading into the MCC portion of their schedule, but three losses have come against Big Ten Conference opponents in Michigan, Michigan State and Minnesota.

Kelley said his upbringing and successful prep career at Borgess are responsible for his success both on and off the court in college.

"I'm doing well in school and playing good basketball," he said. "Borgess was great for me. It says a lot for the school when they turn out so many successful Division I players."

Madonna no match for Manchester

The trials and tribulations of a resurrected team.

Madonna University is finding out how difficult they can be. The Fighting Crusaders' women's basketball team, resuscitated after being forced to cancel their 1990-91 season, have been battered all season long; they've won just one of 13 games.

Their latest setback came at the hands of Manchester College (North Manchester, Ind.). The host Crusaders fell behind 35-20 at the half and never recovered, losing 65-37 Monday.

Sophomore guard Jill Burt's 12 points paced Madonna. Lyndell Ingalls added 11. Manchester was led by Ann McGuire's 12 points and Beth Boon's 11.

It won't get easier. Madonna visits Aquinas College at 6 p.m. tonight.

Shanlikian wins title

Mike Shanlikian came away with the 160-pound title, leading Livonia Churchill to a fifth place finish Saturday in the 11-team Dearborn Fordson Invitational wrestling tournament.

Grosse Ile took the team title with 167 points followed by the host Tractors (112½), Grosse Pointe North (108), Dearborn Divine Child (101) and Churchill (95).

Shanlikian won his weight class with a 9-2 decision over John Sanom of Berkley.

The Chargers also gained a pair of second place finishes.

Damian Taucher (119) lost his bid to Divine Child's Brian Beuckeleure, 8-4, while Craig Shepley (130) was denied against Grosse Pointe North's Keith Giannico, 6-2.

Four other Churchill wrestlers earned fourths: Matt Cooper (125), Scott Doerr (140), Ali Ramlawi (171) and Shawn Donaldson (189).

Payne match off

A scheduled six-round pro boxing match between Livonia heavyweight Craig Payne (3-0-1) and Robert Smith (9-3) of Wisconsin did not go off Tuesday night at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

"They (Smith's camp) pulled out at the weigh-in Monday because he had a cut over his left eye and they didn't want to take a chance," Payne said. "I'd like to apologize to all the people. There were about 400 people who had bought tickets to see me. I tried to get a hold of everybody, but for those who went out there, I apologize. It was unfortunate, but I couldn't help it."

Payne is not sure when the bout will be rescheduled.

Pure fun

'Babes in Arms' dazzles audience

Performances of the Birmingham Theatre production of "Babes in Arms" continue through Feb. 2. For ticket information call the box office at 644-3533. The theater is at 211 S. Woodward, Birmingham.

SONGS 10, plot 0, but who cares when the songs are vintage Rodgers and Hart, enhanced with dazzling tap dancing by the talented young cast of "Babes in Arms" at the Birmingham Theatre.

Following last month's production of "The Wizard of Oz," the Birmingham is again offering a bubbly concoction of musical nostalgia that is pure fun.

WHILE "BABES in Arms" is considered an early attempt to have a musical where the songs actually advance the plot, there really isn't much plot to advance. A group of summer theater apprentices are planning to end the season with a show of their own.

Complications include a mean-spirited employer (Carlton Carpenter), multiple romantic entanglements and misunderstandings and a visiting movie star (Michelle Blakely) and her domineering mother (Lucille Naar), but the plucky young performers see that the show does go on.

ALONG THE way "Babes" features five major hit songs — "I Wish I Were in Love Again," "Where or When," "My Funny Valentine,", "The Lady Is A Tramp," and 'Johnny One Note." The remaining six numbers include the lovely ballads "You're Nearer" and "I Didn't Know What Time It Was," plus an amusing "Way Out West on West End Avenue."

Director/choreographer Randy Skinner has created wonderful dance routines that repeatedly draw applause on their own, and the whole show moves along with effervescence. Some of the corny 1937 dialogue is handled with just the lightest touch of camp, and the cast is so endearing that one cares about them despite their thinly drawn characterizations.

As Bunny, co-owner of the theater but struggling to hold on to it, Teri Gibson has a powerful voice that really belts out great renditions of "Way Out West", "The Lady Is a Tramp," and "Johnny One Note." She also delivers her lines with a pleasantly flippant comic style.

Blakely is convincingly vulnerable as Jennifer, the former child film star still living in terror of her mother's wrath, and her voice is lovely in the "Where or When" and "I Didn't Know What Time It Was" duets.

MICHELE PIGLIAVENTO puts lots of heart into Susie as she sings the plaintive "My Funny Valentine," Val (short for Valentine) is the songwriting apprentice Susie is stuck on, but he regards her as "just a kid" and instead pursues Jennifer.

David Gunderman is very fine as Val, singing and dancing in a majority of the numbers and featured in "Where or When" and "You're Nearer." The same for Kevin Petitto's Gus, who sings "I Wish I Were in Love Again" with Jeanna Schweppe's Terry and also dances up a storm.

Schweppe is cute as the gal who plays hard-to-get. Kim Morgan is hopelessly perky as the slightly bubble-headed Libby, and Jeffrey Kubiatowicz and Sam Samuelson also add good support to the singing and dancing apprentices.

Carpenter is amusing as the Scrooge-like boss who keeps threatening to fire everyone, and he is well-matched with Naar's shrewish mother. Oliver Woodall is good as a conceited writer/director/actor, but Scott Willis is weak as Jennifer's true love despite his good voice.

In addition to all the wonderful song-and-dance numbers, "Babes" has one hilarious farcical scene where everything goes wrong for the apprentices backstage and screws up the onstage performance.

Barbara Michals is a retired Southfield English teacher. A theater critic for the last 17 years, she is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

'How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying' works

Performances of the Jewish Community Center and Nancy Gurwin production of "How to Succeed in Busines Without Really Trying," continue through Jan. 19 at the Aaron DeRoy Theatre at the JCC, 6600 W. Maple Road, West Bloomfield. For ticket information call the JCC at 661-1100 or Gurwin at 354-0545.

Exuberant music and a top-notch cast make a winning combination for "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," the current Nancy Gurwin production at the Jewish Community Center.

The Frank Loesser-Abe Burrows Pulitzer Prize-winning musical satirizes the world of big business where everyone strives to do as little as possible, mediocrity is highly prized, and one climbs the corporate ladder based on who you know andr cultivate.

AT THE Park Avenue headquarters of World Wide Wicket Company a brash young man named J. Pierrepont Finch (Danny Gurwin) applies for a job in the mail room. Finch was a window washer until a little "How to..." booklet inspired his assault on big business. After unabashedly buttering up all the right people and trading on the inside knowledge he acquires, Finch maneuvers his way up the corporate ladder in record time.

Gurwin is outstanding as Finch. In addition to his strong singing voice, he has a vivacious style and enormous poise. His affable grin and occasional feined bouts of humility make him a lovable rascal, a reminder that Finch is only capitalizing on the foibles of others. Finch's greatest asset is his unshakable faith in himself, ably conveyed by Gurwin in a winsome rendition of "I Believe in You."

JAC CORTES is very funny as company president J.B. Biggley, letting his lively eyes and facial expressions speak volumes. Filled with self—importance and romancing a young floozy on the side, Cortes shows Biggley at his silliest when he extolls his alma mater "Grand Old Ivy" in a duet with Gurwin.

Though 'How to Succeed' is now 30 years old, the satire remains fresh and pertinent today as exemplified by the bouncy numbers 'Coffee Break', 'The Company Way,' 'A Secretary Is Not a Toy,' and 'Brotherhood of Man.'

Missy Gallant exudes sweetness and wholesomeness as Rosemary, the secretary enamored of Finch, but often ignored. Her pleasant vocal skills enhance "Happy to Keep His Dinner Warm," "Been a Long Day," and "Rosemary," the latter two with Gurwin.

Susan Friedman is excellent as Smitty, the competent and bespectacled secretary that men never seem to notice.

Elaine Keinert is amusing as Miss Jones, Biggley's secretary, whose glacial exterior is quickly melted by Finch's endearing charm.

SAM JUNGERMANN is wonderful as Twimble, the mail room head who only thinks "The Company Way." Jungermann also doubles as Womper, the plain-spoken chairman of the board.

Charles Greenia is hilarious as Bud Frump, Biggley's whiny nephew and Finch's constant rival at World Wide Wicket, barely suppressing his wicked glee beneath his mild—mannered demeanor.

Among the talented supporting cast of businessmen and secretaries, Richard Schultz as Gatch and Mark Honeyman as Bratt stand out.

As Hedy LaRue, the floozy who tries to be a secretary, Jane Shaffmaster ably captures the stilted enunciation but never quite conveys Hedy's warmth and sex appeal.

Though "How to Succeed" is now 30 years old, the satire remains fresh and pertinent today as exemplified by the bouncy numbers 'Coffee Break", "The Company Way," 'A Secretary Is Not a Toy," and "Brotherhood of Man."

Director/choreographer Kathi Bush does a fine job throughout, and cannot be faulted for the tedious 24 scene changes that slow things down even though they are handled very efficiently.

The small combo under music director Roger Bingaman sounds fine. The very simple, representational sets work very well. With only a few special costumes required, the evening gowns for the "Paris Original" number are the one amateurish flaw to this stylish production.

A call to arms?

Her life includes firearm

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

One thing Kathleen Camps doesn't want people to think is she's paranoid or some gonzo gun-toting zealot just yearning to pull the trigger.

The pistol she possesses is a by-product of reality.

A single woman and mother of two grown daughters, Camps hears and reads the endless stories of crime and its continuing trail of victims — females more times than not.

Those news clips are real. So, too, are the fears they breed.

Like when a car pulls up next to her on the freeway while she's driving home from work, Camps wonders if the occupant has a gun. Or when she's stopped at a light, she worries someone might pull a weapon and steal her car.

"It's a shame you have to think along those lines, but that's the way the world is," said Camps, a Westland resident who works as a secretary in Detroit. "But if you don't think along those lines, you're blocking yourself out from reality."

For Camps and a growing number of women, such every day reality has forced them to turn to the security of a cold piece of steel nestled in a night stand.

Camps owns a .38 caliber five-shot revolver, which she's had for four years.

SHE KEEPS a firearm in her home. She never has been the target of a serious crime. Her neighborhood is not one riddled with robbery or murder.

Such fate doesn't offer solace to a woman living alone apparently as much as a gun does. The anxiety and feelings of vulnerability constantly lurk like a shadow.

"You would have to be a woman to understand," she said.

While many toy with the idea of having a gun as an instrument of self-protection, few actually follow through on the idea. Usually, a crime to them or someone they know leads them to buy one.

A domestic dispute involving her daughter's disgruntled boyfriend prompted her to buy a revolver for protection.

The incident occurred after the two had broken up. One day, a series of firecrackers went off outside her home. When Camps went to investigate, she found a dead animal of unknown origin doused with ketchup.

"OK, I thought, there's a real person out there thinking of harming us," Camps said, "and that's when I bought a gun."

Even before then Camps considered buying a firearm for security. Divorced and raising two daughters by herself, she likened her family situation to being "sitting ducks."

SOMEWHAT intimidating was the process of buying a gun.

Friends and family members — with the exception of her parents — initially tried to sway Camps from getting a firearm. Others refused to take her seriously.

For women, safety has shape of a gun

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

In life threating situations, apparently it's women who want to be the ones left holding the gun.

According to Gun News magazine, women account for 50 percent of the gun sales in this country in 1991 and an estimated 12 million own them. The numbers grow every day.

Since applications for handgun permits are not registered according to sex, statistics of gun ownership among women in this area are difficult to obtain. A sample of registrations done by the Livonia Police Department revealed 7 percent of women own handguns in that community while Redford Township had 14 women apply and receive handgun permits in 1991.

The numbers are the result of another statistic: Crime.

Women are the victims of some 2.5 million violent crimes (assault, rape or robbery) each year, according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics. Such figures don't even include domestic assaults committed against women.

Understandably, women are feeling threatened and want to protect themselves.

"Usually, they've been associated with a crime, like a break-in, threats, angry sons-in-law," said Roger. Little, store manager of Shooters Service in Livonia. "I've heard them all."

LITTLE ESTIMATES that two out of every 10 customers are usually women. John Simon, manager of Northwest Gun Shop in Redford Township said there's also been a fair amount of women buying guns in the past five to six years.

They tend to be single and less likely to be vocal about handgun ownership. Several women who are registered handgun owners in this area declined to be interviewed.

"They're just scared," said Sister Angela Hibbard, a spokeswoman for the Detroit branch of the Anti-Handgun Association.

Nonetheless, a new round has opened up the age-old debate on the right-to-bear arms issue to sway women's opinions on owning handguns.

Anti-handgun advocates quite readily cite statistics such as the one that shows a gun is 43 more times likely to be used against a family member in the home. Or the one that shows only 3 percent of handguns are actually used against an aggressor.

Those in favor of owning handguns tend to use anecdotes. Like, for example, the woman in Wisconsin whose estranged husband threatened to kill her. She tried to buy a gun, but was told there was a two-day waiting period.

She was killed along with her two sons, 17 and 3, the following day.

"WE'RE OPPOSED to any proliferation of any handguns," said Jeff Muchnick, legislative director for the Coalition to Stop Gun Violence. "We take a dim view of women owning handguns."

She's at the top at TOPS

By Sue Mason
staff writer

WHEN BETTY DOMENOE and her sister went to their first TOPS meeting in 1955, she had no idea she would eventually get a watch for being in longer than any other person in the United States.

Nor did she think she'd end up as president of the corporation's board of directors.

Well, that's what happened to the 67-year-old Westland resident.

"I never thought I'd be president," Domenoe said. "But I love TOPS; I believe in TOPS. It worked for me."

In December, Domenoe was elected president of the board of directors of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) Clubs Inc. last month. She is only the second person to hold that title in the organization's 43-year history, succeeding founder Esther Manz who stepped down because of health problems. Manz remains chairman of the board.

TOPS, the oldest major weight control group, was founded in 1948 by Manz, a Milwaukee homemaker. Manz' idea was clubs that would help overweight people attain and maintain physician-prescribed weight goals through group support and fellowship while promoting a sensible approach to weight control.

Today, TOPS has 300,000 members and 11,600 chapters worldwide. For Domenoe, her introduction to TOPS was a 1955 newspaper article about the first chapter formed on the eastside of Detroit. When a second started in the Joy-Evergreen area of Detroit, she called her sister, who, like herself, was overweight.

Betty Domenoe

TODAY, SHE admits that if it hadn't been for her sister's dedication, she wouldn't have stayed with the program. The weight recorder quit shortly after they joined, so members had to remember their previous weight for the weekly weigh-ins.

"It wasn't as organized as clubs now are," Domenoe said of the first meetings. "But then maybe I was looking for an excuse to go home and eat."

Domenoe had 45 pounds to lose. It took seven months and one weight gain to reach her goal. Her sister had 95 pounds to lose. She, too, reached her goal, but later dropped out of TOPs and has since gained back the weight.

Eventually, Domenoe was elected club leader, the first step in her career with TOPS.

"I remember when I got to be leader and had to speak in front of 40 women," she said. "I asked a friend how I did and she said, 'Fine, but next time try to smile.'"

In 1959, Domenoe was elected to the organization's board of directors and worked as a coordinator, signing up new members. In 1965, TOPS created the position of of regional director and Domenoe moved into a niche, training coordinators in different states.

SHE IS still a regional director, working with TOPS people in Michigan, Florida and Kentucky. One bedroom of her two-bedroom apartment serves as her office.

Her territory may be far-flung, but Domenoe doesn't mind the travel. Unlike a traveling salesman, she doesn't have a set route to travel, visiting the states for workshops and state recognition days (recognizing TOPS members for their weight losses).

She also doesn't mind being president of a company whose headquarters is in Milwaukee, Wis. As a board member, she has had to travel to Milwaukee several times a year for meetings, a plan she'll continue as president.

"I'm not planning to move there," she said. "If I'm going to move, it's going to be in the opposite direction."

Under the TOPS program, members who reach their weight goals become KOPS (Keeping Pounds Off Sensibly). Their weight can fluctuate up to 10 pounds (seven under or three over) before KOPS revert back to being TOPS.

Today, of TOPS has 300,000 members and 11,600 chapters worldwide, 40,000 are KOPS, a testimonial to the success of the TOPS program, according to Demoenoe.

"WE HAVE incentive programs to help inspire members and a book to help them with their food exchanges," she said. "We don't talk calories, we talk exchanges to limit fat in their diet. There's a lot of comraderie in the groups, so it's more fun losing weight."

Domenoe has fluctuated between TOPS and KOPS over the years, having a hard time keeping within the 10-pound limit.

"I blame it on the traveling, but I'm always looking for a way to cop out," she said. "I don't bring things into the house I know I'll eat. I don't bring in peanut butter unless my great-grandsons are coming over.

"I'm not to be trusted with peanut butter; it's a real disaster for me."

Lions' All-Pro Bennie Blades is attentive to details

Congratulations to the NFL Central Division Champion Detroit Lions.

Today we are featuring the handwriting of All-Pro football star Bennie Blades. Not only is he a remarkable football player, he is a young man of intelligence.

His mind is fast and fluent, and he is assidiously attentive to details. He has learned to use his time wisely. These are valuable assets in all areas of life.

As a free safety for the Detroit Lions, he utilizes these traits effectively. Whether studying game film or reading his opponents' strategies during practice or games, his mind and memory come into play.

His legible signature with unadorned capitals speaks of a strong sense of pride in accomplishment. He is a team player who is happy to share the spotlight with his teammates.

This handwriting sample was collected from Bennie Blades when he was a a guest speaker for the Unlteens youth group at Unity of Livonia. He shared his time and motivating ideas with the teen group.

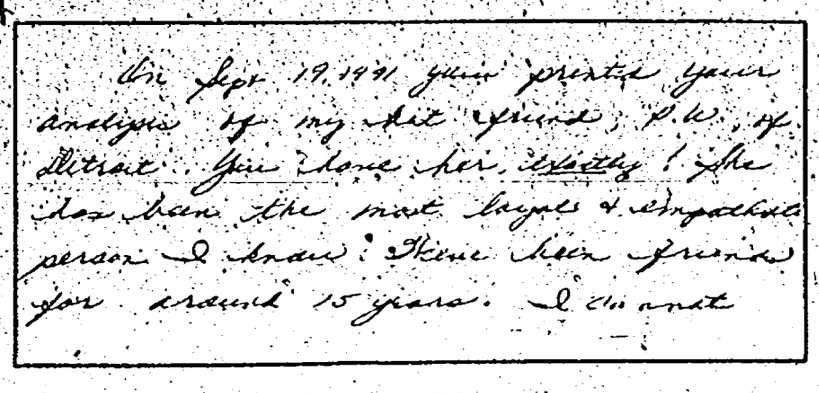
Lorene Green



Dear Ms. Green,
On Sept. 19,1991, you printed your analysis of my best friend, P.W. of Detroit. I have her exactly! She has been the most loyal and empathetic person I know. We've been friends for around 15 years. I cannot tell you what her friendship has meant to me. Will you please analyze my handwriting so I can see what type of friend I have been in return.

I'm right handed and 39 years of age. Thank you.

B.C.,
Westland

This is the handwriting of a very sensitive and caring young woman. She has a deep desire to be helpful to others. I think she would be especially kind and patient with children and older persons.

Our writer is also emotional. She often wears her heart on her sleeve. If I tell her a sad story, she can empathize with it. By the same token, if I tell her a happy story, she can become elated right with me. Her emotions seem to vacillate at times, going from the peaks to the pits.

Raised in a home where self-discipline was ingrained early in life, she is conscientious and dependable. She exerts undue pressure on herself by striving for perfection.

Her choice is a routine lifestyle. A conservative nature has her clinging to the tried and the true. This tends to impede her creativity. She also has a rather narrow philosophy and is not actively searching for any other.

This may sound paradoxical, but she has made a break with some aspect of her past. However, her security needs are so strong that she continues to adhere to much of her early conditioning.

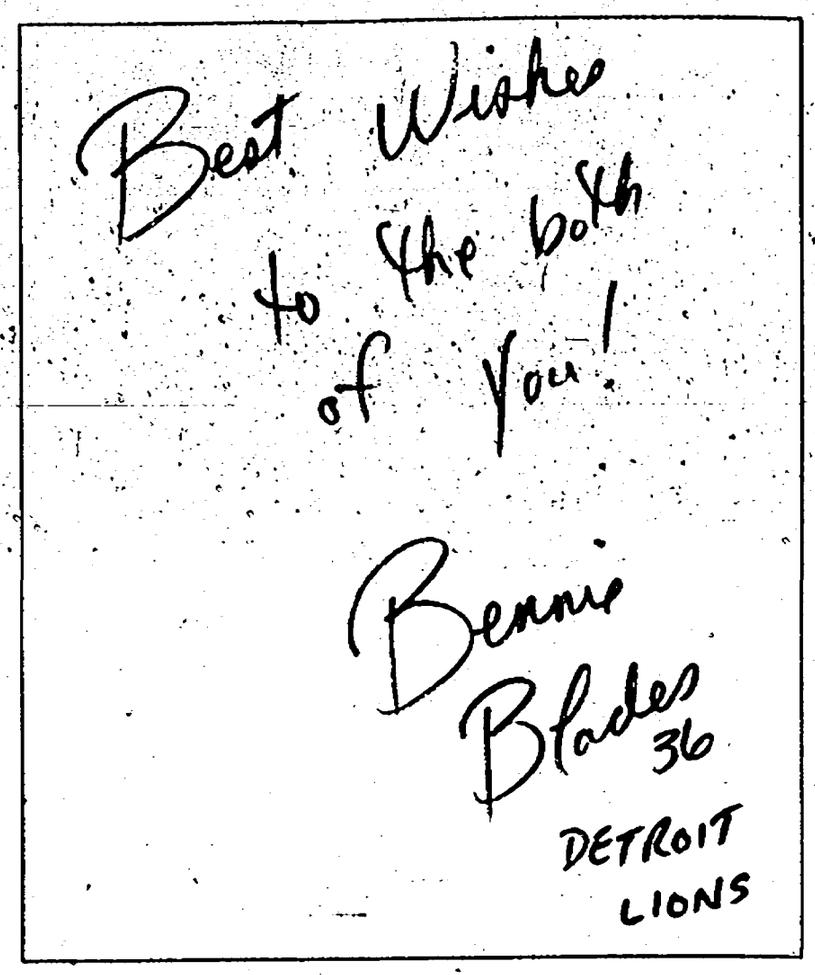
There is a tenseness to this handwriting. It would be difficult for her to completely let herself go and just relax.

It is very important to our writer that she receive approval from those around her. She would probably be much happier, if she could find this within herself.

Authority figures are held in respect. Friction and/or confrontation is unsettling to her. Our writer seems to be a tad possessive of her friends. The green-eyed monster may creep in when new members invade her old friendships.

The humor I see here delights me. When I see humor, I almost intuitively know she also likes to laugh and can see the lighter side of life.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. PLease use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, full signature and handedness are all helpful. And objective feedback is always welcome.



The feel of a gun provides a new security for women

Muchnick believes the gun market for males was exhausted by the mid-'80s and manufacturers have simply found a new avenue for sales. For example, Smith & Wesson has introduced a Ladysmith line of handguns and other manufacturers have followed suit.

Spiraling crime statistics are the best advertisement, but added Muchnick: "What they're selling is fear."

Women & Guns Magazine, which is published by the Second Amendment Foundation, hit newsstands recently. The premiere issue last September featured Geena Davis and Susan Sarandon of "Thelma & Louise" fame on the cover.

Inside are several articles on self-defense and gun ownership issues regarding women. Also, there are advertisements for bra holsters and sandwich styled purses to carry concealed weapons in addition to touting the latest line of small revolvers and semi-automatic weapons.

The magazine recently conducted a reader survey. Seventy-nine percent of respondents said they have guns out of concern for personal safety.

"I THINK it's mainly the self-knowledge that you can protect yourself," said Peggy Tartaro, associate editor of Women & Guns Magazine. "People in this country have been conditioned that there are outside forces to protect them, but the reality has intruded on them — You're the last line of defense."

Tartaro said women who own guns feel more confident, especially after formal training. They feel more secure about working late or driving at night to relatives.

Lisa Hale understands the fears women have. After all, the officer with the Garden City Police Department carries a gun 24 hours a day. Hale believes, though, women should consider all the pros and cons before buying one.

"I'm very open to women I talk to," said Hale, "and I ask them, 'Do you have children in the home; how are you going to secure the weapon? . . . Is this going to be more detrimental to you than a help?

" 'Where's that weapon going to be when you need it? Is is going to be accessible?' Just because you have it, doesn't mean it's always going to be there for you."

HALE REGULARLY conducts classes in the area on sexual assault. She points out the average rapist is not armed. A woman who pulls a gun or a knife could have it wrestled away from her by the perpetrator.

Hale also wonders if many women would fire the gun when actually threatened.

"Females, by and large, do not have the instinct to kill," Hale said. "A weapon could give them a false sense of security. 'I have a gun. I could use it if I had to.'

"But unfortunately, the mind set is not there. If they were backed into the corner, a lot of women would not pull the trigger."

Hale paints a scenario where a woman feels endangered, buys a gun and puts it into a drawer. She does not fully know how to use it properly unless she receives training.

State law doesn't require training in order to receive a handgun permit.

Simon of Northwest Gun Shop said he often refers new gun owners to National Rifle Association regional safety course.

"If they don't know anything about guns," said Simon, manager of the outlet, "they're more than willing to learn."

The reality of today prompted purchase

After walking into one shop by herself, Camps spotted a .38 revolver she wanted. The sales clerk was condescending, instead trying to convince her to buy a smaller .22 caliber hand gun.

"They said a .22 doesn't do as much damage," Camps said. "I was furious. They're going to tell me to buy a gun and not be able to kill someone with it. If someone is breaking into my house, I want to kill them."

Camps walked out. The next time, she took her father with her to another shop where she found the same type of gun and bought it. The owner of the Dearborn Heights store also had a shooting range next door and offered training.

She had shot a gun only once before. At first, the kickback took some getting used to, but Camps soon found herself in command of the weapon.

Instead of feeling powerless, for a change Camps experienced a sense of accomplishment.

After the initial training, though, Camps admits she hasn't been back to the range.

"I'VE BEEN a little lazy, I guess," she said. "I figure if I need to use it, I'm not going to have to make a long distance shot. I figure they'll be in the same room."

Owning a gun has changed her attitude about the right to bear to arms issue, adopting the NRA's theory of "outlaw guns and only outlaws will have guns."

Her tone is not bolsterous nor apprehensive. Camps talks calmly, directly about using a gun — if necessary — to kill someone who enters her home to harm her.

She's quick to make the distinction, though, about using a gun to protect herself against an attacker and brandishing a firearm to fend off a robbery. Admittedly there's a fine line, but once crossed she has no hesitation about firing.

WRC serves lunch, dinner

The Women's Resorce Center of Schoolcraft Center is serving up lunch . . . and dinner . . . this winter season.

The WRC will kick off its winter luncheon series Friday, Jan. 31, with social worker Sandy Bauman who will help participants remember the things they want to remember with "I Forgot Where I Put My Memory."

On Friday, Feb. 21, Colette Bielat of Sparr's Gardenhouse in Plymouth will provide the how to and how not to of caring for plants in "How Not to Kill Your Plants and How to Arrange Your Flowers."

The final program will be Friday, April 3, with "18th Century Tea" by Roger Kerr, a member of the 64th Regiment of Foote. Kerr will be dressed in appropriate period costume and will describe the intricate design of the formal tea. He also will have 18th century teacups and utensils on display.

The luncheons will be 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Waterman Campus Center-West End. The meals — appetizer, salad, fresh bread and rolls, entree, vegetable, dessert and beverage — will be prepared by the college's food service program.

The cost is $10 per lunch. Seating is limited and prepaid registration is required. Tickets will be distributed on a first come-first-serve basis.

The WRC advisory board will be serving up dinner, its annual spaghetti dinner and wine glow Tuesday, March 24, at the Waterman Center.

The annual fundraiser kicks off at 6 p.m. with the wine glow. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m.

Entertainment will be by the Livonia Civic Chorus. Door prizes will include a weekend for two at the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth, two roundtrip airfares to Chicago from World Travel Inc. of Plymouth and four tickets to a Detroit Pistons game from Dick Scott Buick of Plymouth.

Tickets cost $45 for sponsors — two dinner tickets and a listing in the program — and $17.50 for individuals. Tables for eight are available. Reservations must be made by Monday, March 16.

Checks for both the luncheon series and the spaghetti dinner should be made payable to Schoolcraft College. Paid reservations can be sent to the Women's Resource Center, Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty Road, Livonia 48152-2696.

Reaching out

Renovation project opens church's doors to all in community

By Julie Brown
staff writer

The doors of the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth have long been open to the community, but getting through those doors has become easier for disabled people.

Making the building accessible to all is the primary goal of a reconstruction project at the church in downtown Plymouth. The project includes adding ramps to improve accessibility for those who use wheelchairs or walkers.

An entrance on the west side of the building provides easier access for disabled people, including access to the elevator.

That elevator won't be in place until early March, said the Rev. Philip Rodgers Magee, senior minister of the congregation. It will provide access to all three levels of the church.

Church members voted several years ago to remain in downtown Plymouth "and to update and adapt our building to the needs of the future." They wanted to continue to provide whatever ministry of compassion they could at that site.

THEIR PRIMARY concern was making the building accessible to disabled people, not all of whom are senior citizens.

"We've got some very young people who are encumbered and need access. We want to make our building totally accessible to everyone."

Church leaders set a fund-raising goal of $500,000, began the Vision 2000 campaign in June 1991 and are close to reaching that goal. Dr. Robert Evans served as chairman for the financial campaign. Linda Luke and Harve Bock lead the church's building and grounds committee. They're working with other church members on overseeing the renovation project.

The reconstruction work began in early September and is close to completion.

"Of course, this was a dream of mine," said Magee, a Plymouth resident who's in his 20th year as pastor of the church and plans to retire this summer. "This is one of my fondest dreams." He's pleased to know the work will be done when he retires.

The project includes restoration and preservation of the building's exterior brick and mortar. That work is just about done, Magee said, although a repellent coating will need to be added in the spring when it's warmer outside.

The project also includes an extension on the main entryway to the new stairway. That provides access from the main floor to the fellowship hall in the basement, and was done to enhance fire safety, he said.

ABOUT 20 PERCENT of the money raised through Vision 2000 will be used for mission work in the U.S. and overseas. A portion of that will be used to assist in building a wing for Alzheimer's patients at Presbyterian Village of Detroit.

Church members are pleased they'll be able to remain in downtown Plymouth for worship and other church activities. The First Presbyterian Church, Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church and St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church have remained downtown, Magee said, although many other churches have moved out of the downtown area as their membership has grown.

The Presbyterian congregation was established 156 years ago in Plymouth, Magee said, and has been in different buildings at the same site on Church Street since that time.

A 1935 fire did extensive damage to the building, which was reconstructed in 1937. Three renovation efforts, including the current one, have since taken place.

The project has been a bit of an inconvenience for church members and staffers, some of whom moved to the nearby Dairy King to work. The construction work created a great deal of dust, and there was concern about that causing breathing problems, so some staffers moved around the corner to the ice cream shop.

"They camped out there," said Magee, who remained at the church site with several other staffers. Those at the Dairy King jokingly complained that no ice cream was available, that business was closed for the season and was made available to the church during the reconstruction.

Those staffers will soon return to the church building. Magee knows that God doesn't have a problem with their working temporarily in an ice cream shop.

"Absolutely no problem at all. I don't think God minds particularly where people meet."

Church secretary Judie Ford and some of her colleagues have temporarily been working in the Dairy King, which is closed for the season. They'll soon move back to the church.

Yuletide fund- raising a success for Salvation Army

Generosity isn't a rare commodity in the Plymouth-Canton community. Contributions to the Salvation Army this Christmas season show that area residents have generosity to spare.

Contributions made during the red kettle campaign totaled $96,060.01 for Canton, Plymouth and Northville, said Lt. Jeffrey Beachum, corps commander for the Salvation Army. That's about $30,000 over what was raised last year and about $15,000 over this year's goal.

"It was an incredibly successful effort," Beachum said of the kettle campaign, which ran from late November through Dec. 24. Money was collected by bell ringers at 18 sites throughout the community.

"Thousands of volunteer hours" made the 1991 kettle campaign a success, said Beachum, a Canton resident. Many service-club members, church members, students, business representatives and other volunteers helped to staff the kettle sites.

A MAIL APPEAL ran concurrently with the kettle campaign and will continue through mid-January. That too is going well, he said, and organizers anticipate reaching the goal of $125,000.

The kettle campaign was coordinated by Paul Ross, community center director for the Salvation Army, and Cindy Merrifield, an advisory board member. The kettle campaign and Christmastime mail appeal are tremendously important, said Beachum, who leads the Plymouth-Canton-Northville Salvation Army with his wife, Lt. Aleta Beachum.

"A lot of people give to us largely at Christmastime." Money and non-cash contributions help the Salvation Army provide much-needed services all year long, he said.

Beachum was a little nervous early on during the fund-raising campaign. He feared that the economy's slump might mean reduced contributions to the Salvation Army, but found residents and businesspeople were willing to go the extra mile to help those in need.

Some people are, however, a bit surprised to learn that needy people do live in the Plymouth-Canton community. They assume everyone who calls the area home is doing just fine.

"That's not true. There are all kinds of people that have difficult times," Beachum said. "Those are the people that we see."

Some people have lost their jobs and need short-term help from the Salvation Army, he said. Some have been abandoned by the family breadwinner and need help making ends meet.

Some area residents need help this time of year making utility payments. The Salvation Army's "PeopleCare" program is a cooperative effort undertaken with utility companies to assist those who have difficulty paying utility bills.

The Salvation Army and other local churches provide such help so needy families don't lose their homes and end up on the street.

"We try to keep them from becoming that way," Beachum said.

Roll Call Report

Members of the 1991 session of Congress were faulted for almost everything from worsening the recession to bouncing their personal checks at the House bank.

But whatever they did right or wrong during the 11-month legislative term, they cannot be accused of avoiding roll call votes on the House and Senate floors.

Once again in 1991, the great majority of lawmakers registered high attendance at record votes conducted in the two chambers, according to a survey by Roll Call Report Syndicate.

This includes Michigan's senators and House members from the Observer & Eccentric area.

In the House, where 428 roll calls were held, the average member's voting attendance was 95.1 percent. In the Senate, which conducted 280 roll calls, the average was 97.4 percent. Lawmakers had to cast a yea or nay to be counted in attendance.

Eight House members and 19 senators recorded 100 percent attendance and overall legislative competence. But they support the notion that incumbents who are excessively truant invite political trouble ranging from newspaper editorials to negative television commercials.

SEN. CARL LEVIN, D-Mich, was one of those senators with 100 percent voting attendance. Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., was close behind, with 99 percent voting attendance.

All of Michigan's U.S. representatives had at least 90 percent attendance.

In the Observer & Eccentric area, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, was highest with 99 percent. Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods was next with 97 percent; William Broomfield, R-Birmingham, had 96 percent; Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, had 92 percent and William Ford, D-Taylor, was lowest of all Michigan's state representatives, posting 90 percent.

The lowest attendance among all House members — 36 percent — was registered by Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., who spent much of the year back home in a losing campaign for governor of Kentucky.

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., ranked second from the bottom with 60 percent attendance. An undeclared candidate in the 1992 U.S. Senate race in California, he attributed most of his misses to the demands of getting his campaign under way.

Voting absenteeism was an issue in the 1990 California race for governor. Republican Pete Wilson, then a U.S. senator, caught so much flak for missing votes that he left the campaign trail only weeks before election day to return to Capitol Hill.

Levine's aides sought to downplay their boss's absenteeism. "He's had excellent attendance" throughout his 10-year House career, said a spokesman. "Mel's been asked this question before, and one of his responses always is that he never misses votes that are close."

Ranking third from the bottom, with 64 percent attendance, was Rep. Robert J. Mrazek, D-N.Y., whose misses also resulted mainly from getting an early start on a 1992 U.S. Senate campaign.

ANOTHER NEW YORK Democrat, freshman Rep. Jose Serrano, acknowledged "politically there could be a problem." over his 87 percent attendance.

Most of his 55 no-shows occurred when he remained in his South Bronx district to speak at more than two dozen school graduations, "telling the kids to stay in school, stay off drugs, showing them what I've done with my life."

Serrano doesn't feel he missed much on Capitol Hill, because "there are a lot of votes that I wonder why the heck they're being taken."

Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., who voted 84 percent of the time, feels many votes are staged for political posturing. He, too, often preferred working in his district to returning to Washington for roll calls.

An aide pointed to "the congressman's growing displeasure with the (Democratic) establishment in Congress" over its scheduling of House business. "He has constituents in Montana, he has family in Montana and he has events that he's invited to in Montana" that sometimes take precedence over House votes.

It's called Very Special Arts Michigan.

And its intent is to hone the artistic skills of physically and mentally disabled students.

Observerland schools interested in taking part in this very special program should call Livonia Arts Commission chairman Jack Olds, Very Special Arts' southeast Michigan chapter treasurer and a state board chairman, at 591-0842.

Affiliated with Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, Very Special Arts Michigan "has never been strong," said Olds, who chairs the statewide programs committee.

"It's the victim of stops and starts. But we've always stuck in there and tried to make it work."

Chapter highlights include scholarships to art camp, an art festival, bringing professional artists into the classroom and helping professional artists build recognition.

Olds, former Michigan Council for the Arts assistant program director, hopes to bring Very Special Arts' southeast Michigan chapter art festival to Livonia this spring.

The festival draws entries in a variety of media: ceramics, glass, textile, jewelry, prints, paintings. Regional winners will move on to state competition at Western Michigan University and possibly national competition. This year's national competition theme: "The White House."

Olds' motivation for working with Very Special Arts? "It's a feeling of doing something for the community. After all the years I worked on the outside with the Michigan Council for the Arts, this now gives me a chance to work on the inside."

Did you know that three American Revolutionary War soldiers lived in Livonia?

A state historic marker at the Edward A. McNamara Bicentennial Park on Seven Mile honors that.

David Dean was born in 1763 and enlisted in the New York militia in 1778. He settled in Livonia about 1836 and died two years later.

A Connecticut native, Salmon Kingsley belonged to a company of minutemen who aided in the defense of Boston. He came to Livonia in 1825 and died two years later.

Born in New York about 1763, Jeremiah Klumph was a messenger in George Washington's Army. He lived in Livonia from 1836 until he died in 1855.

"These men were a few of the many Revolutionary veterans who settled in the West. All three journeyed with their families and settled in this area," relates the historic marker, erected in 1976 to commemmorate the U.S. bicentennial.

Film crew works magic with festival

By Mary Klemic
staff writer

Those who were involved with a film project over the last two years in a small Michigan town had the magic touch — literally.

Beth Winsten of Birmingham, Pamela Conn of Plymouth and Sue Marx of Detroit, all of Sue Marx Films Inc., are co-producers of "It's Magic," a film for National Geographic Television's "Explorer" series. It will air at 9 p.m. Sunday on Turner Superstation WTBS.

The annual "magic get-together" that takes place each summer in Colon, Mich. ("The Magic Capital of the World") is the subject of the 16-minute film. It is the first National Geographic co-production with a Michigan company.

The women are thrilled and excited about the film, its subject and its setting, a small community (population 1,200) near the Irish Hills.

"It's just a feel-good film," Winsten said. "It's not going to save the world, but it might make it a little more cheerful."

"It was a good story about Michigan," Marx said. "It was a story that relatively few people knew about."

"The whole experience of making the film itself and doing the filming at Colon was wonderful," Conn said. "I do enjoy the place a lot. The whole film, the whole experience was fun, it was just plain fun."

"IT'S MAGIC" presents acts and looks behind the scenes of the festival. It features a gamut of performers, young and old. Among those are one whose whole act consists of tearing a newspaper, a funeral home director who calls himself a "gentleman planter," a man who "preaches the message of Jesus" and an English visitor who has the patter down — pat.

Conn told about the pig that presented a special challenge. "There was this pig backstage they tried to dress up like a rhinoceros," she said. "It kept alleviating itself backstage."

"It's just all so magical," Winsten said. "Almost everyone there is a character in their own right. It's more of a sense of the entire place."

The film project came together almost like — well, like magic.

Principal filming took place in August 1990, with final photography completed in 1991.

Watercolorist Billie Thompson of Livonia enjoys painting on the family's kitchen table. Thompson began watercolor classes with Edee Joppich of Farmington Hills in 1972. She has been a Farmington Artists Club member ever since. Thompson continues to study watercolor and sharpen her skills under the tutelage of Donna Vogelheim and Alice Nichols, both of Farmington.

Exhibition will showcase full spectrum of media

WITHIN THE broad spectrum of art media, bronze and watercolor undoubtedly seem to fall at opposite ends.

But one can be as alluring as the other to the viewer as both must hold to the same principles of design, relationship of shapes and mastery of the medium.

Bronze sculpture takes the viewer into a world of three dimensions while the two-dimensional medium of watercolor delights the eye with a full palette.

Like night and day, the strength of line in James Bouchey's abstract bronze sculpture, "Ascension," complements the vibrant palette of Billie Thompson's watercolor, "Fall Festival."

Their artwork, on exhibit Jan. 15-20 in downtown Plymouth, are part of 43 pieces chosen for Plymouth Community Art Council's statewide fine arts competition, Michigan Art '92.

"I'm very excited about being in the show. This is the first time I'll be showing this piece," Bouchey said. "'Ascension' was done in memory of my mother."

Bouchey's mother died two years ago after a lengthy illness. The contemporary piece, "Ascension," is the second sculpture in tribute to his mother, who strongly encouraged pursuit of his dream to become an artist.

AFTER SIX years of study at Livonia artist James Bouchey created the contemporary piece, "Ascension," in cast bronze. The 90-pound abstract sculpture stands about 40 inches high. It is priced at $2,500.

Plymouth to host statewide art fest

Plymouth Community Arts Council will exhibit winning and selected artwork from Michigan Art '92, its third statewide fine arts competition Wednesday through Monday, Jan. 15-20, in Saxton's Showroom, 587 W. Ann Arbor Trail, adjacent to Kellogg Park.

Running concurrently with the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular, the exhibit features 30 two- and three-dimensional pieces by fine artists working in a variety of media through Michigan.

Exhibited media include oil, acrylic, watercolor, colored pencil, clay and bronze sculpture, lithograph and mixed media.

"The Plymouth Community Arts Council is very excited about presenting Michigan Art '92. It gives people a chance to see what Michigan artists are doing and there's a variety of media there. It's a very high quality show," said Doris Chatterley, event co-chairman with Janet Campbell.

Juror for Michigan Art '92 is Mary Stephenson, assistant curator for the Department of Twentieth Century Art at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Arts commission homes in on exhibit gallery at library

MONTHLY ART exhibits probably will adorn the Livonia Civic Center Library gallery by spring.

Friends of the Library and the Livonia Arts Commission are poised to split the $16,000 cost to equip the glass-enclosed, second-floor gallery with suitable display panels.

"Once we get the panels, we'll have a very fine exhibition area," said Jack Olds, arts commission chairman and liaison to the Friends. "It's a key project right now."

The city council will consider the arts commission's share of the cost next Wednesday. The money will come from the commission's trust fund, not the city's general fund.

The freestanding, slatwall display panels will be expansive enough to accommodate a typical 45-piece individual exhibit and versatile enough to showcase three-dimensional pieces like sculpture and jewelry.

"SHOWS WILL be similar to what we do in the city hall lobby," said arts commissioner Dorothy Wilshaw, who will team with Olds to coordinate art exhibits at the library.

"The gallery will give us more opportunity to showcase artwork although it's probably not big enough for large club shows.

"A lot of people who come to the library don't necessarily have reason to go to the city hall so they miss out on the art exhibits there," she added. "And the library is open evenings and weekends."

Wilshaw hopes the gallery opens in early spring with an invitational exhibit and reception for Livonia artists.

A COMMITTEE is looking into whether the arts commission should consider hosting an annual fine art show at the library gallery. Such a show would be different from the commission's spring Arts and Crafts Festival at Greenmead.

"We'd be able to buy high-quality art at two city-sponsored shows under this scenario, giving us another chance to add to our city collection of artwork," Olds said.

An arts commissioner for 18 months, Olds brings an impressive resume to the commission chairmanship, which he assumed Dec. 1.

He retired about 1½ years ago after 10 years as Michigan Council for the Arts assistant program director. Before that, the former University of Northern Iowa art professor headed the Iowa Arts Council for 12 years.

He's also a regional treasurer with Very Special Arts Michigan, which brings the arts to special education students.

OLDS, AN unassuming ambassador for the arts, sees the arts commission as a source of "excitement in the community.

"A city the size of Livonia," he said, "should be involved in everything from art in public places to special art events for children, the elderly and the general citizenry.

"Art's an enhancement for our quality of life. The arts commission ought to be a leader in providing this type of service."

Working with an $18,000 annual budget, the 15 commissioners, appointed by the mayor, provide such diverse programming as chamber concerts to Music Under the Stars. The Library Show Series ranges from art lectures to magic shows.

The commission has lent a financial lift to selected cultural groups, including the Livonia Symphony, Livonia Public Schools theater students and the Livonia-Redford Theatre Guild.

Says Olds: "We support other arts groups to help them succeed in what they're doing but we also try to initiate activities not done by others."

AN ARTIST himself, Olds likes to do wood cuts (social justice issues ranging from civil rights to women's rights) and watercolors (often scenescapes from his camping trips across the country).

On a recent three-week trip to France and Spain, he made a wealth of sketches, from small towns along France's Loire River to Spain's sidewalk cafes. He hopes these drawings provide fodder for his watercolors.

Livonia Mayor Robert Bennett says Olds has developed a real good rapport on the art commission and should do a nice job as chairman.

"He's working with an energetic commission that's very conscientious," the mayor added. "I'm looking forward to a very productive year from them."

the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit, where he experimented in a variety of media, Bouchey turned to bronze in search of permanence. "I had to find a niche and I found it in sculpture," Bouchey said.

He favors bronze for his sculptures because execution of a piece requires completion of a variety of tasks before reaching a final state.

"It's a wonderful medium to work in and it involves a very complex process," Bouchey said. "Bronze will outlive me and it'll be here for generations. It's been around for thousands of years."

Bouchey began the long process of creating "Ascension" by sculpting it in wax first. The wax model included a framework of channels, built around what would eventually become the actual sculpture. The channels would ensure an absence of air pockets once the molten bronze had been poured and cooled.

"You can sketch in three dimensions with wax," he said.

Over a period of months, Bouchey built up a ceramic shell around the wax, a layer at a time. Once the shell had completely dried, he burned out the wax in a kiln, using what is referred to as the lost wax method.

BOUCHEY THEN cast the piece in bronze. After it cooled, he proceeded to remove one by one the framework of channels necessary for pouring a nearly pit-free surface. Filing and finishing concluded the extensive process.

The contemporary piece was cast at Center for Creative Studies with the help of Jay Holland, professor of sculpture, and Todd Erickson, head of the foundry.

In "Ascension," two vertical lines starting at the base thrust upwards. Geometric shapes at angles leading upward crisscross the vertical lines carrying the eye around and through the space, as should a strong three-dimensional piece.

The hard, smooth element of the bronze contrasts the texture provided by a piece of rope, which binds but does not deter vertical movement. "The rope is the binding that's still bonding the family she left behind here on Earth," Bouchey said.

Bouchey's family supports his decision to become an artist. "My father has been very encouraging throughout my career."

TO PAY bills a year ago, Bouchey began a business with his wife, Tracey, also a CCS graduate. Metro Art specializes in security locks for artwork. It also deals in packaging and transporting of art.

"Eventually I'd like to do commissions full time," Bouchey said.

"When he takes a commission, he puts his whole heart and soul into it," Tracey said.

"I can't think of any better way to make a living than to do something you love," Billie Thompson said.

"Fall Festival," as with all of Thompson's work, is an evolutionary process. Starting with a watercolor wash as a base, she builds up her color through a series of glazes allowing each to dry. "It's better for me to take my time. Your first layer is very light."

Subsequent glazes of watercolor methodically build intensity until vibrant reds, greens and yellows dazzle the eye.

"I like to push a piece as far as it will go, to go for broke," Thompson said. "Watercolor shines through and you can only get that with watercolor. That's something that just seems to fascinate me."

THOMPSON BEGAN her art career taking drawing classes in Farmington's adult education program 20 years ago. From 1972 until 1975, she took acrylic painting classes with Edee Joppich of Farmington Hills. From 1979 through 1988, watercolor classes with Joppich turned the tide for Thompson. It has been watercolor ever since.

She has been a member of the Farmington Artists Club since 1972. In October, Thompson exhibited work in the annual watercolor show at the Scarab Club in Detroit. Now she's involved with painting murals on walls at Roosevelt Elementary School in Livonia.

Thompson believes that to keep growing, she must continue to study. She's taking painting classes in watercolor with Donna Vogelheim and Alice Nichols, both of Farmington.

"I think composition is very important. I will continue learning composition, learning to repeat size and shape," Thompson said. "I seem to do a lot with foliage, leaves and plants. I like some texture and I particularly like nature. Their texture and the color excites me."

IN "FALL Festival," deep red veins in beet leaves shine through the translucent green. A sectioned bunch of carrots divides the roots into dark, lighter and medium values of orange.

The watercolor montage of beets and carrots, some with greater transparency than others, contrasts an opaque green pepper. In the center of the composition, an autumn yellow square of color, ties it all together.

"I used the yellow to keep pushing it back. I admire the impressionists, Cezanne and Van Gogh, their use of color," Thompson said. "I will continue pushing this palette, continue to use this palette, and fine new ways to use it."

Bourchey's bronze, Thompson's watercolor -- as different as they are alluring.

OTHER OBSERVERLAND residents appearing in Michigan Art '92 include:

- Plymouth — Tivador Balogh, sepia pencil; Mark Evers, watercolor; Toni Stevens, watercolor.
- Farmington Hills — Janus Benda, watercolor, monoprint; John Harnois, lithograph.
- Farmington — Thomas Keno, pen and ink.
- Canton — Connie Lucas, watercolor.

"Fall Festival" by Billie Thompson of Livonia is one of 43 pieces exhibited in Michigan Art '92. The watercolor was selected in the third statewide fine arts competition sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council. It is priced at $450.

cious enough to come out Sunday and help us set up the exhibition the way she envisioned it when jurying the competition," Chatterley said.

STEPHENSON HAS been an assistant curator and Michigan Artists Program coordinator at the DIA since 1987. She earned master of arts and master of fine arts degrees at Wayne State University and a certificate of museum practice at Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies, University of Michigan.

She has served as a juror for the Ella Sharp Museum in Jackson, Buckham Art Center in Flint, Kalamazoo Institute of Arts, the Scarab Club in Detroit and Detroit Artists Market. She has worked with the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum, Smithsonian Institution and the Michigan Commission on Art in Public Places.

A Michigan Art '92 kick-off luncheon at 11:30 a.m. Monday, Jan. 13, hosted by Cafe Bon Homme in Plymouth, will feature Stephenson as guest speaker. She will discuss her role as a fine arts competition juror, including what factors she considers in the selection process.

"Mary Stephenson will tell how and why she chose certain pieces. Then she'll do a walking tour through the exhibition," Chatterley said.

Tickets for the luncheon, including the exhibition tour at Saxton's, are $15. Since seating is limited to the first 50 reservations, call the arts council's office about buying tickets early.

AT AN opening reception 7-9 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14, the arts council will honor winning artists with awards, including a Best of Show and a Purchase Award, totaling $2,000. The $250 Purchase Award will honor a painting selected to permanently include in the arts council's Art Rental Gallery.

Stephenson will pick the Best of Show. She'll work with Therese Gall, gallery chairwoman, to present the Purchase Award.

A sponsor since the competition's inception, Michigan National Bank contributed in part to making cash awards possible.

The Michigan Council for the Arts also is an event supporter.

"Many local businesses including Michigan National, Saxton's and Cafe Bon Homme have contributed in kind to making Michigan Art '92 a reality," Chatterley said.

All artwork in the exhibition is for sale. Prices range from $150 to $3,000.

"We hope the competition and exhibition will become an annual event," Chatterley said. "It originally started because we thought the arts council should encourage young fine artists and Michigan artists in general. There are many talented fine artists in Michigan."

Exhibition hours, beginning Jan. 15, are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Wednesday, Thursday and Monday; to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

For more information on Michigan Art '92, call the Plymouth Community Arts Council, a non-profit group promoting and serving the arts since 1969, 455-5260.

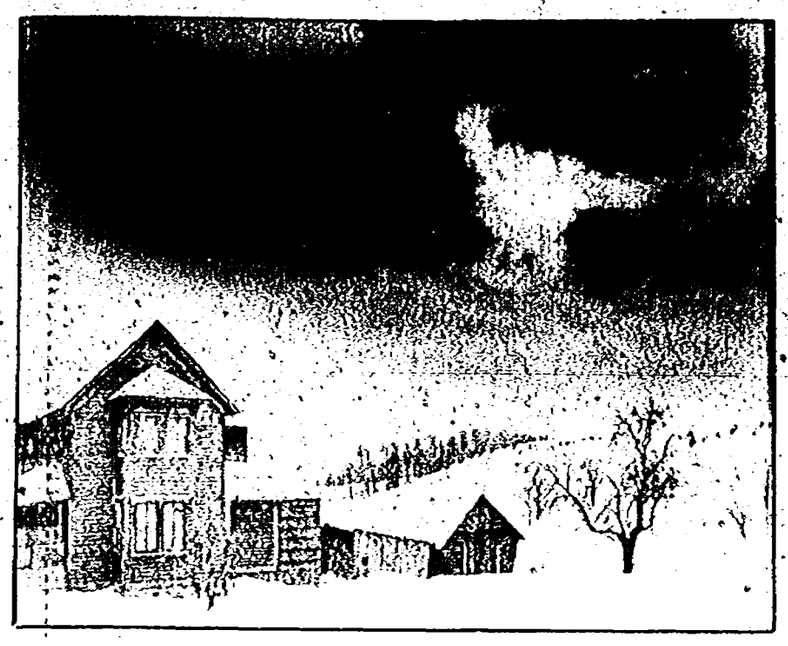
Make resolutions in photography



Resolve to bundle up and take more outdoor shots this winter. Monte Nagler took this dramatic scene near Empire, Mich.

A new year is upon us, and as you make up your list of resolutions, don't forget to include your photography.

Begin with that new camera, lens or flash unit you found under the tree by resolving to thoroughly read the instruction manuals and familiarize yourself with all controls and functions.

Check out your existing equipment to make sure everything is in good working order. Now is an opportune time to change all batteries in all of your equipment to avoid a possible future problem.

Been procrastinating on insurance for your camera gear? How about resolving this year to check into an insurance policy? Premiums are inexpensive when compared with the financial and emotional losses if some of your equipment is lost or stolen.

RESOLVE TO take a photography class in 1992 to improve your knowledge and appreciation of photography. Many fine classes are available in the area, probably in your own community.

Browsing through photography books at your favorite bookstore will be a most valuable experience. This year especially has produced a terrific crop of photography books.

And don't forget the many fine photo galleries where you can really begin to look and learn from photographs. I can't overemphasize the importance of looking at pictures and the rewards you can gain by doing so.

Monte Nagler

MOST IMPORTANT, make that all-meaningful resolution to take more pictures in 1992. The more you shoot, the more photographic knowledge you'll gain. Branch out in new areas, too, by including shots of subjects different from what you're used to.

Begin to concentrate more and try to look deeper through the viewfinder. Tune into your feelings and think about what you want to "say" with your photographs. Get into the frame of mind that you are making a photograph, not simply taking a snapshot.

Resolve to take some of your favorite negatives or slides, have them enlarged, get them matted and framed and hang them on your walls. You will find that living with photographs will inspire you to go out and take even more.

To all of my readers, please accept best wishes for a joyous, prosperous and photo-filled New Year!

Monte Nagler is a professional photographer based in Farmington Hills.

● THE ARTISTS' GALLERY

Thursday, Jan. 9 — "Beginnings," a new show for 1992, featuring the works of well-known artists Lil Langerman and Iris Czajkowski, will run through Feb. 29. A party open to the public will take place 5-8 p.m. Thursday. The show will include oils, watercolors and collage, as well as works by gallery regulars. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday, until 8 p.m. Thursday, in Applegate Square on Northwestern Highway between 12 and 13 Mile in Southfield, 353-4707.

● SCARAB CLUB

Thursday, Jan. 9 — The 1991 Annual Printmaking and Works on Paper Exhibition will run to Jan. 25. Opening reception and awards 6-8 p.m. Thursday. The purpose of the display is to recognize achievement among Michigan and Ontario artists.

Also at the Scarab Club, prize-winning sculptor Philip Newton Kellogg of Detroit will be featured in a one-man exhibit through Jan. 31. Kellogg's work has been shown in many major museums throughout the United States, and is in private collections in Rochester, Royal Oak and Pleasant Ridge.

Hours are noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday, 217 Farnsworth at John R in Detroit's Cultural Center. Call the office at 831-1250 between noon and 5 p.m. Tuesday-Friday.

● DETROIT FOCUS

Friday, Jan. 10 — The gallery reopens after the holidays with Group II from the Review Committee Selections. Two of these Michigan artists — Marcia Freedman and Jacquelyn Ruttinger — placed work on the wall. Works by the other two — Pi Benio and Tzufen Liao — were installed. The exhibition will run to Feb. 8.

Freedman's mixed media drawings are a personalized expession of grief. Using various textures and dark, introspective tones, she creates a somber, thoughtful mood. Ruttinger uses interweaving of form and space, along with airbrushed glazes of interference and iridescent pigments to create works that evolve with regard to the viewer's perspective.

Benio created an installation using linen paper and life-size handmade paper figures. Her work is a response to her frustration with the spirit's ability to soar wile the body is incapable of mobility. Liao sardonically juxtaposes fake fur and steel to create a tool whose presence speaks of a kind of illogic.

Opening reception 5:30-8:30 p.m. Friday. Hours are noon to 6 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday, 743 Beaubien, Detroit, 962-9025.

● DETROIT ARTISTS MARKET

Friday, Jan. 10 — The Detroit Artists Market announces its 60th anniversary with the "Select 5 Collect" exhibition by Michigan photographers John Carney, Joanne Leonard, Bill Sanders, Michael Sarnacki and Carl Toth, running to Feb. 7. The exhibit is to honor the artists, inform the audience and encourage the collecting of Michigan photography. Opening reception 5-7:30 p.m. Friday. Pieced work by Dusty Fleming, Cynthia Greig and Carole Zak in the upper gallery. Gallery hours 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, 1452 Randolph, Detroit, 962-0337.

● SYBARIS GALLERY

Friday, Jan. 10 — One-person show of sculpture by New York artist Susan Martin, who works with such materials as wax, wood, plaster, lead and paper to create minimal and sensuous forms, will continue to Feb. 8. Opening reception for the artist 6-8:30 p.m. Friday. Hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, 301 W. Fourth, Royal Oak, 544-3388.

New TV movie features tricks and treats

The festival has been taking place for about 53 years. It occurs the second week in August in Colon, the home of the Abbott Magic Co.

About 1,000 magicians and fans from around the world attend the event. Among them is world-famous magician Harry Blackstone Jr., a Michigan native.

Famed magicians Doug Henning and David Copperfield have attended. Blackstone told about the time Arsenio Hall couldn't get a ticket and he let him in. Years later, the magician appeared on Hall's TV show.

"We all agreed we love magic," Marx said.

"We all fell in love with Harry Blackstone," Winsten said.

"We saw Harry Blackstone Sr. perform," Marx said. "So we decided we would see what this was all about. We just hopped in the car."

THE TRICKS brought many treats. The festival delighted the women.

"We loved it," Marx said. "We said, 'There's a movie here.'"

It happened that a reporter from a New York magazine was at the same event.

"We knew we were on to a great story," Marx said.

The tricks at the festival are more traditional, less flashy, Conn said.

They liked the community, too.

"The people in Colon are so friendly," Marx said.

"A small child can talk to Harry Blackstone on the street and he'll do a trick," Winsten said.

And they got to know Blackstone and his family.

"They're special. Very special," Marx said.

IT WAS hard to get financing for the film because it wasn't about a serious subject.

"In the past we would go to the Michigan Council for the Arts but it's not there any more," Marx said.

At one point it didn't look as though the project would be completed.

But then Mary Jo Bales of Consumers' Power set up a meeting with John Clark, senior vice president of Consumers' Power and president of Consumers' Power Foundation.

"We see 'It's Magic' as a way of offering a striking visual message that documents why Michigan is such an outstanding place in which to live and do business," Clark said.

"The opportunity to work with Michigan's only Oscar-winning documentary company and reach 57 million households on WTBS through the prestigious National Geographic 'Explorer' series is a very exciting partnership for us."

"For a company like Consumers' Power to step forward . . . is a major statement," Winsten said.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC read about the festival in the New York magazine and called to see "It's Magic." It was impressed that film was used instead of videotape.

"Sue Marx Films is a perfect fit for us," said Patrick Prentice, senior producer of the Explorer series.

"They make top-quality documentaries and they work in film. We look forward to doing other projects with them."

"It's Magic" will be rebroadcast on WTBS. Sue Marx Films plans on having a premiere in the future.

One Abbott employee told the filmmakers that there's no magic, it's all props. But the project could turn anyone into believing in a special magic.

PAMELA JARVI

Pamela Conn (back row) of Plymouth, Beth Winsten of Birmingham and Sue Marx of Detroit, all of Sue Marx Films Inc., are shown here with famous magician Harry Blackstone Jr. The women met Blackstone and other performers while making "It's Magic," to be seen on WTBS Sunday night.

The lectures will take place at 3 p.m. Sundays at the Detroit Artists Market, 1452 Randolph, in Detroit, in conjunction with the current exhibition. The cost per person is $25 for the series and $7 per lecture.

Light refreshments will be served. Space is limited for some events. Call 962-0337 for information.

The scheduled events are:

— Jan. 12, with the "Select Five Collect and Pieced Work" exhibition. Speaker will be Hope Palmer, adjunct professor in art and art history at Henry Ford Community College.

— March 22, with the "Message and Medium" exhibition. Bill Porter, instructor of history of design at Wayne State University and the Center for Creative Studies, will be the speaker.

— April 26, with the "Image/Text: Language in Art" exhibition. MaryAnn Wilkinson, associate curator of the Department of 20th Century Art at the Detroit Institute of Arts, will be the speaker.

— Oct. 18, a private off-site tour, open to Artists Market members only. Collectors Gayle and Andrew Camden will open their home for viewing and discussion of their collection, built by many Artists Market purchases.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Check insurance, taxes after mortgage transfer

Don't be surprised if at some point during the life of your mortgage the lender sells or transfers the servicing of your account to another financial institution.

And don't worry, either, if that happens, advises the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

It's a common practice that shouldn't effect terms and conditions of your mortgage including interest rate, monthly payment and due date. The only thing that should change is where you mail the check.

Financial institutions generally sell off the servicing of mortgage accounts to raise cash. Others buy to earn the fraction of a percentage point for servicing and interest on the escrow accounts.

A mortgagor doesn't need your permission to transfer the servicing. But several procedural things should happen when a transfer occurs.

Expect a termination letter from the institution with which you've been doing business. That letter should identify by name, address and telephone number the firm that will service your mortgage and exactly when you should start sending payments there.

YOU ALSO should receive a letter from the new servicing agent instructing you when and where to mail payments.

If you receive notification only from a new servicer, warns the Mortgage Bankers Association, contact your original servicer to verify that your loan actually has been transferred.

If you have been paying your mortgage through an electronic funds transfer or automatic check draft each month, it's up to you to fill out forms for payment to be sent directly to the new servicer.

The old servicer should notify homeowners insurance companies and taxing authorities about a transfer to a new servicer. But it never hurts to follow up yourself to make sure that's been done.

Remember that escrow accounts also will transfer.

"The transfer servicing market is becoming much more professional," said Daniel B. Smith, vice president and Plymouth branch manager for Republic Bancorp Mortgage. "There were a lot of problems initially. The biggest bitch I hear is taxes and insurance not being paid and in a timely manner."

Republic, which isn't selling mortgage accounts now, has sold about 65 percent of its accounts over the past three years, Smith said.

"IF A LOAN is sold, a customer should take precaution for the first year and really keep an eye on things," he advised. "Make sure taxes are paid on time and make sure payments are posted properly as to interest versus principal."

Toll-free telephone numbers often are provided by servicers, but be aware that larger institutions may be difficult to reach, Smith said.

Standard Federal Bank, the largest in Michigan in terms of mortgage dollar volume, also buys the right to service other mortgages.

"There's nothing another lender can do to alter the (original) contracts," said Robert Spehar, vice president for loan administration and acquisition at Standard Federal.

"It is a normal business transaction," he said, adding that a transfer isn't a reflection on an individual borrower's credit position.

Spehar passed along other advice.

"If their loan is subject to electronic transfer, they want to see if that can continue. It's not contractual, but an accommodation banks make.

"Also, life insurance and disability insurance is not part of a mortgage contract. Most can be transferred but check.

"Pay attention to those hello and goodbye letters. They want to be real concerned about the effective date of transfer, especially at the end of the year, so they get proper credit," Spehar said.

THE MORTGAGE Bankers Association offers the following consumer checklist:

- Keep your servicer informed of changes in your address and telephone number.
- When a transfer occurs, be sure you receive both a goodbye and a welcoming letter. Carefully read those letters and note the new servicer's name, address, telephone number, contact person and payment schedule.
- Make sure that your taxing authority and insurance company know about the transfer.
- Find out which company will be reporting mortgage interest paid for income tax purposes.
- Ask questions and iron out details as close to the time of transfer as possible. If problems subsequently arise, contact the new servicer.

Condo's redeeming qualities has owner confused

I am a co-owner in a condominium whose lien has been foreclosed on by the condominium association. A sheriff's sale was conducted, and I have six months to "redeem" the property. I am not sure what that means. Do I have any recourse?

What apparently has happened is that the association is foreclosing on its lien for non-payment of assessments and has conducted a public auction with respect to your unit. Presumably, the association was the highest bidder at the Sheriff's sale, but that cannot be determined without checking the records.

The redemption period, as it relates to the sale, means that you would have within six months from the date of sale to repay the Register of Deeds the amount bid at the sheriff's sale, together with interest on the amount bid.

It is highly advisable that you contact an attorney. If you do not redeem the property within the appropriate statutory period, you will lose the property outright. If there is equity in the unit, that is, if the value of the unit is in excess of the amount that you owe to any secured creditors, including the mortgage company and the condominium association, that money will be lost if you do not redeem the property.

You should consider selling the property if you cannot afford to pay off the redemption amount before the expiration of the redemption period so that you can use the sale proceeds to pay off the amount owed, thereby at least keeping part of your equity in the property. You should also confirm exactly how long you have to redeem the property before you will have lost your rights.

Robert M. Meisner

Our condominium complex is a conversion from an apartment with both upper and lower units. The developer, upon the sale of the two lower units, authorized removal of two existing balconies for replacement with 9-X-15 decks. After turnover of the complex to the association, the remaining balconies were found to be unsafe and were replaced with decks, the same size as the original 5-X-8 balconies. A recent buyer has requested approval to enlarge his balcony deck to match the two larger decks. There are may contrary opinions in regard to the propriety of this action. The question presented by an opposing co-owner is: Does the board have the authority to approve an encroachment onto a limited common element with the enlarged deck?

If the limited common element area in which the deck is to be expanded is that of the co-owner who has asked to expand the deck, it is more than likely that the condominium bylaws would allow such extension, subject to approval of the board of directors. But an analysis of the condominium master deed and bylaws would have to be made to assure this fact. If the deck was extended onto general common element property, the board would not have that authority unless specifically given that right in the condominium documents, which is generally not the case as it would be deemed an expropriation of property. You are best advised to get a written legal opinion on this issue before the board grants any approval to any modifications.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

ONCE AGAIN, Detroit's North American International Auto Show (NAIAS) begins Hollywood-style with a black-tie charity preview in the Cobo Conference & Exhibition Center the eve of opening day.

This year's star-studded event, which includes a sneak preview of the show itself, is hosted by television actor Robert Urich (star of the recent series "Spenser: For Hire"), Detroit's own Grammy award-winning singer Anita Baker, who returns to the show for a second year, and Detroit radio personality J.P. McCarthy.

Joining Urich and Baker in the two-hour special are the Hinton Battle Dance Troupe and four supermodels from the United States and Europe, who'll add more glamour to an already flashy lineup of new production cars and concept vehicles.

The Oak Ridge Boys will appear via a prerecorded performance. Jason Priestly and Jennie Garth of the television hit, "Beverly Hills 90210," also will be on hand.

For the second consecutive year, WKBD-Channel 50 will produce and televise the charity bash live from Cobo Center, 7-9 p.m. Friday, Jan. 10. The show's producer is Sam Riddle, producer of the well-known show "Star Search."

For the second consecutive year, WKBD-Channel 50 will produce and televise the charity bash live from Cobo Center, 7-9 p.m. Friday, Jan. 10. The show's producer is Sam Riddle, producer of the well-known show "Star Search."

SPONSORED BY the auto show and the Detroit Auto Dealers Association (DADA), the charity preview, the auto show's traditional kickoff, brings together executives from the Big Three, auto manufacturing leaders from Germany, Japan, England, Sweden and France, local financial and government leaders and national celebrities.

Besides attracting the automotive bigwigs and other notables, the annual charity event this year is expected to raise $1 million for eight local children's charities, according to DADA.

Anita Baker
singer

"We're excited again about the charity preview. Last year, we raised over $700,000 for children's charities and this year will be even better," said Rod Alberts, DADA associate vice president. "Support from manufacturers and dealers is tremendous, so in general it's a great event for the city and local communities."

Besides the live and prerecorded interviews with leaders of the Big Three, automotive designers and members of the show's organizing committee, viewers at home will see many of the 1992 production cars and trucks and concept vehicles displayed at the fourth annual auto show. The show is open to the public Jan. 11-19.

"MOST OF all the show is for a good cause. But what we've tried to do is bring an entertainment value to the automotive product. All of the entertainment segments have an automotive theme and some numbers are even done on the show floor around or on the cars," said Toby Cunningham, WKBD director of creative services and local programming.

Show coverage continues on Channel 50 Saturday, Jan. 11, with live updates and an hourlong special hosted by Urich, said Cunningham.

Besides the local coverage, highlights of the charity preview will be edited for a one-hour auto show special being sold to about 200 television stations nationwide. This syndicated show airs around the country in February or March.

Tickets for the charity preview are $125 per person. Proceeds from ticket sales go to the charity selected by the purchaser.

J.P. McCarthy
radio host

Charities benefiting from ticket sales include Barat Human Services, Boys and Girls Clubs of Metro Detroit, The Children's Center, Detroit Institute for Children, Easter Seal, March of Dimes, Children's Services of Northeast Guidance Center-Assistance League and the Detroit Police Athletic League.

Chrysler's dream car, Viper, marks Motor City debut

CHRYSLER'S SPORTY Dodge Viper RT/10 has come a long way in just three years when it dazzled spectators as a concept car at Detroit's North American International Auto Show.

Production of the two-seater muscle car, with a mighty all-aluminum 8.0 liter V10 engine, began Nov. 18 at the company's high-tech New Mack Avenue Viper Assembly Plant.

Though the Viper's worldwide debut was at the Los Angeles auto show Jan. 2-3, Viper's hometown debut will be during the Detroit auto show Jan. 11-19.

The car displayed at Cobo Center will be the second production version made at the Mack Avenue assembly plant.

The Nissan FEV electric concept car has sufficient range for normal daily urban use.

Nissan displays future electric car

DETROIT WILL see the North American introduction of Nissan's new Future Electric Vehicle at the North American International Auto Show.

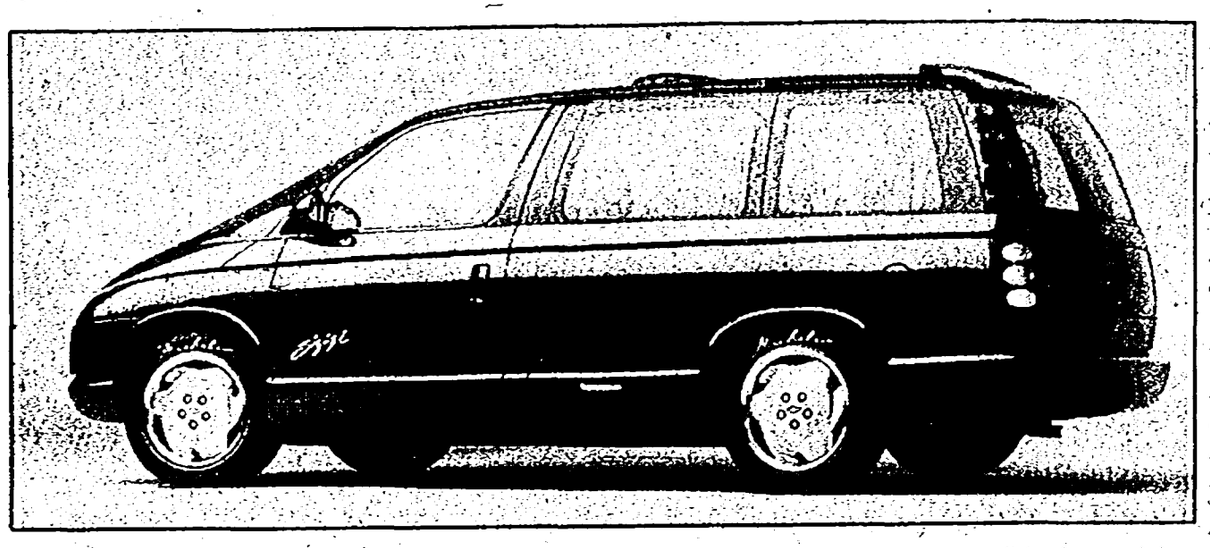
The FEV is an urban family car that can be recharged to 40 percent capacity in six minutes and 100 percent capacity in under 15 minutes, one-fifth to one-fourth the time of conventional systems.

The concept vehicle is a 2+2 coupe with sufficient range for normal daily urban usage. It has creature comforts and conveniences to which car buyers are accustomed, including ample interior and luggage space.

The FEV was specifically designed as an electric vehicle and features an aerodynamic design.

Powered by an advanced high torque electric motor, the coupe provides performance comparable to today's high mileage economy cars. It boasts a top speed of 81 mph and a cruising range of 100 miles at approximately 45 mph.

The FEV's advanced Super Quick Charging battery system, weighing only half as much as conventional electric car batteries, not only reduces re-charging time but cuts vehicle weight and increases range.



Chevrolet's Sizigi could be the family van of the future. Special features include reversible seats and tracks that allow seats to slide forward for more storage space.

Chevrolet unveils futuristic family van

CHEVROLET WILL unveil Sizigi, a concept Lumina all-purpose vehicle, at the Detroit auto show.

Presented as a future possibility for family transportation, Sizigi has advanced convenience and flexibility. Special features include reversible seats, track seating, dual sunroofs, a sliding table with a TV and VCR, a credit-card-type ignition, hidden running boards and halo lighting.

Track seating allows the second and third row of seats to slide forward to provide storage space. Or the seats can be removed for even more cargo room. Driver and passenger seats also have storage space underneath.

The second row of seats revolves 360 degrees so that rear passengers can use a table that slides along a track down the center of the van. The driver isn't disturbed by halo lighting around the perimeter of the passenger area.

Outside, Sigizi has a rounded nose and a curved glass windshield. Running boards provide easy entrance and exit.

Still flashy

Economy no setback for 1992 auto show

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

FROM THE looks of this year's North American International Auto Show at Detroit's Cobo Center, you'd never guess the nation is in the thick of an uncertain economy.

Participating in the flashy show isn't cheap, yet foreign and American nameplate passenger cars and trucks will be displayed with the same pomp and circumstance as ever. And as usual, it's still the best place in town (or in the world for that matter) to see almost every foreign and domestic vehicle that automakers produce or hope to under one roof.

This year, 57 manufacturers will parade more than 700 production and concept cars and trucks before the public Jan. 11-19 to kick off what car dealers and manufacturers hope will be a robust buying year.

But even if you're not in a buying mood, the show is well worth the $6 admission, said Carl Fischer, show co-chairman and owner of Fischer-Buick-Mazda-Suzuki in Troy.

DETROIT AUTO show goers will see 16 worldwide or North American introductions and 23 concept cars and trucks.

For starters, Chrysler Corp. will debut its sporty Dodge Viper RT/10 (a product of Detroit's high-tech Mack Avenue Viper Assembly Plant) before a waiting audience that will remember Viper as a concept car that stole the show in 1989.

Mercedes will make a worldwide introduction outside Germany for the first time in its history. The prestigious automaker will premiere the Mercedes S Class Coupe priced somewhere between a cool $125,000-$150,000. BMW will unveil two new models here and Ford shows three concept trucks.

"There will be a lot of 'firsts' at the show this year, but no disappointments," Fischer said.

Because of the show's international status, more production and concept cars are introduced in Detroit than in any other host city in the United States.

This year marks Detroit's fourth international show, a status granted in 1989 by a coalition of Detroit auto dealers and industry leaders "who decided it was time to redefine Detroit's position as the center of the auto industry," said Gordon Stewart, show co-chairman and owner of Gordon Chevrolet-GEO in Garden City, Stewart Chevrolet-GEO in Trenton and two dealerships in south Florida.

"A TRUE international show didn't exist in North America at the time, and we found the likes of Ford, Chrysler and GM very supportive of the idea," Stewart said. "I think the big turn came when it was decided that both Lexus and Infiniti would be introduced worldwide at our show."

And because the Motor City show produces an abundance of company executives, it draws an increasing number of "important" foreign and domestic auto writers who not only have influence over which cars consumers check out, but which ones they eventually will buy, Stewart said.

"We really have two shows, a press show and a design show," said Stewart, adding that it is not a "selling show" like Chicago's, for example.

"The show was created to give consumers a non-threatening place to compare cars. Dealers are forbidden to sell at the Detroit show," he said.

Maybe you can't place orders here, but the show tends to start the selling season early by dangling flashy new vehicles before hungry consumers like juicy beef tenderloin. And wise dealers and manufacturers try to get as much mileage as possible from the show, hoping it will generate sales far longer than the nine show days.

WHAT'S THE outlook for passenger car and truck sales?

"We're in an industrywide down period right now. But it's the nature of the business to go in cycles and that will never change," Fischer said.

"This is a high-priced consumer item, but people have a love affair with the automobile. The good news is that we have a good product today and the quality gap between domestics and imports is narrow."

'We're in an industrywide down period right now. But it's the nature of the business to go in cycles and that will never change. This is a high-priced consumer item, but people have a love affair with the automobile.'

The Volkswagen Chico is a 2+2 hybrid-powered city car prototype. It features constant-demand fully automatic switchover between conventional power and electric drive in response to speed and throttle pressure. It has a top speed of 75 mph, a range of 250 miles and a 0-to-50 mph acceleration time of 19 seconds. Small, light and fuel efficient, the prototype seats two adults comfortably in the front compartment and two small children in back. A 2.1-cubic-foot, low-entry trunk expands to 21 cubic feet when the rear seat is folded forward.

Concept cars — wild and practical

WHY DON'T they build that?

That's the most-asked question in reaction to the concept cars that salt the aisles of any major auto show. Why, indeed?

The role of one-of-a-kind concept cars — once known as dream cars — is more or less unique to the auto industry.

One could scarcely imagine someone in the computer business putting some future product on display in an environment where new products are born, grow old and die off in discount catalogs within the space of a few months.

In fact, future-oriented concept cars often seem deliberately designed to mislead competitors

The Audi AVUS Quattro concept car, named after the AVUS race track in Berlin, is an all-aluminum, pewter-tone recyclable vehicle. The entire exterior weighs 220 pounds. The 12-cylinder, 6.0-liter, 60-valve, rear-mounted engine, covered with a see-through plastic, produces 309 hp. The AVUS Quattro accelerates from zero to 60 mph in three seconds and can reach a top speed of 180 mph.

Preview days mix suppliers, car makers

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

SUPPLIER PREVIEW Days at Detroit's North American International Auto Show is one way to bring automotive suppliers face-to-face with the world's automakers — and a darned good way, says Daniel Hayes, show general manager and Detroit Auto Dealers Association executive vice president.

Supplier Preview Days — (formerly called Industry Trade Days) will be held Thursday and Friday, Jan. 9-10.

The event gives automotive suppliers worldwide a chance to examine the new cars and trucks firsthand and meet with the automakers and dealers in a central location. It's also an opportunity for suppliers to tour the show with customers and point out their company's contribution to the production and concept vehicles on display.

"First of all, it's an opportunity for the automotive suppliers to see the show and state-of-the-art manufacturing without the crowds," Hayes said. "These days give suppliers a chance to stand back and see the part they play in the whole automotive picture."

THE PROGRAM for suppliers only started just last year after DADA representatives saw how well supplier days worked at other international auto shows. But unlike the other shows, Supplier Preview Days in Detroit is sponsored by the DADA, not the suppliers.

"Three years ago, when we saw the success of Supplier Preview Days in Frankfurt (Germany) and England, we decided it was only logical to do the same in Detroit, where locally there are so many automotive suppliers," Hayes said.

"Last year, we called it Industry Trade Days, but no one knew what that meant. So we formed an advisory committee and decided to make it simple. We're calling it Supplier Preview Days, like Germany does."

In spite of its name, last year's two-day program brought 2,325 representatives to the show from nearly 400 automotive supplier companies. This year, requests for credentials (at $30 a head) should reach 4,000, Hayes said.

What makes Supplier Preview Days unique is its informal agenda. Unlike the annual Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) show, where suppliers attend scheduled conferences to learn about new manufacturing techniques and materials used in the automotive industry, Supplier Preview Days encourages suppliers to roam through the show at their own pace to examine the finished products and talk with company representatives.

"I'm sure there will be an exchange of ideas. This is an excellent opportunity for suppliers and manufacturers to interface," Hayes said. "Suppliers might introduce new products to manufacturers, but that's up to the suppliers."

AFTER LAST year's successful premier of Supplier Preview Days, the DADA set up a committee of supplier charter members to discuss how to expand the range of this two-day event.

The involvement of charter members "proves the suppliers see this as an important function in their business practice, above and beyond normal contacts," said Carl Fischer, show co-chairman.

For Joe Bactor, business development and marketing vice president at American Sunroof Corp., last year's Supplier Preview Days was an education.

"By creating new ideas on current production vehicles, as opposed to building futuristic concept cars, we can show the customer the final product right there on the floor. This also offers us the opportunity to bring in components and parts and not just the whole car," Bactor said.

PPG Industries, a major supplier to the automotive industry, will return to preview days this year. "We saw six months worth of people in two days," said a company spokesman.

Concept pickup debuting

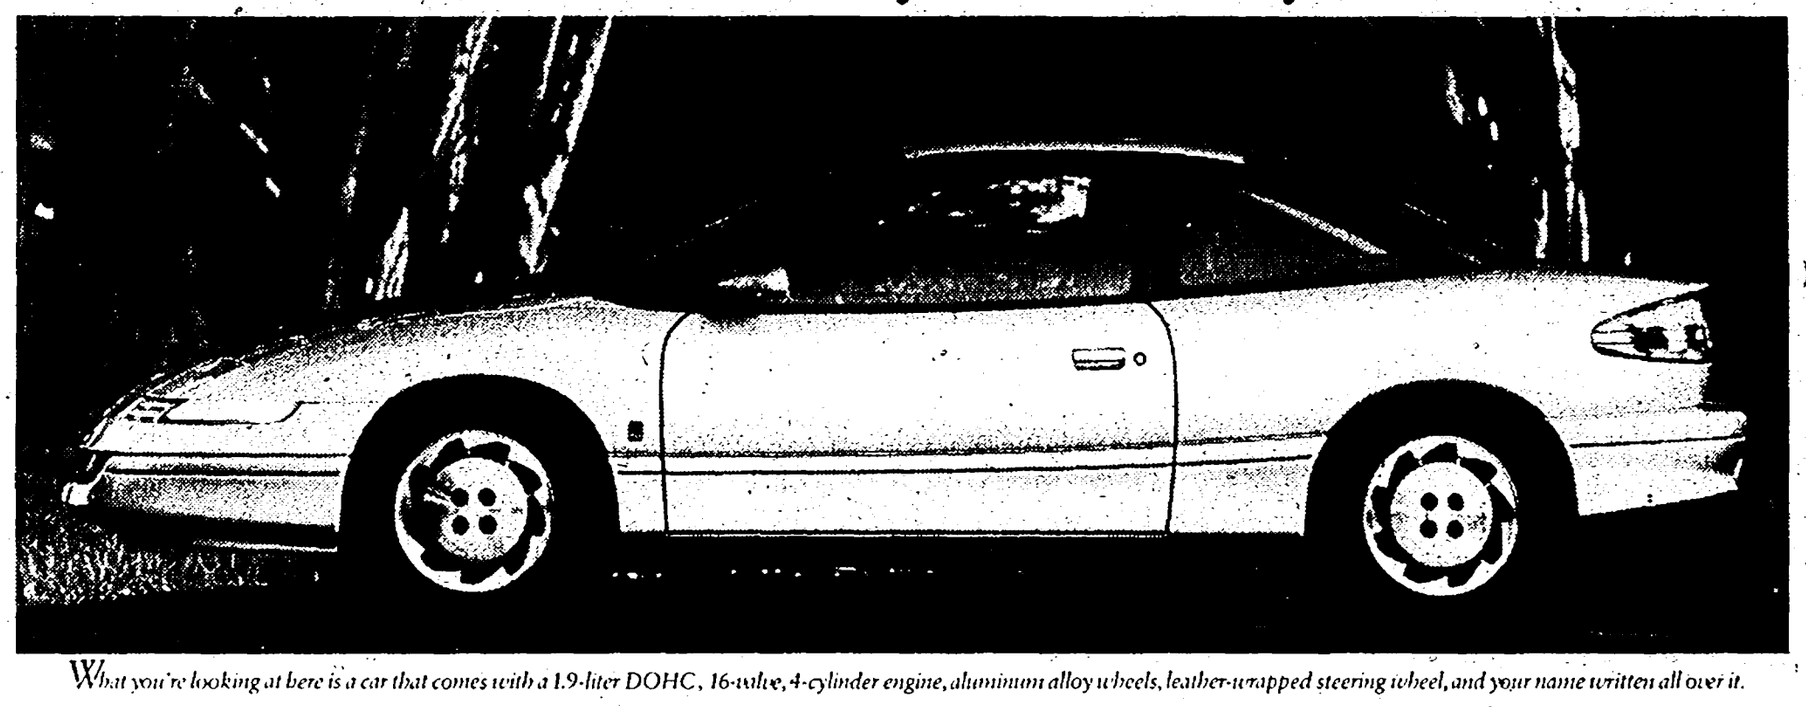
THE FORD F-150 Super Flarside, a concept vehicle based on the Ford Flarside pickup truck, will make its worldwide introduction in Detroit.

The vehicle has a cobalt blue exterior finish with purple highlights. The color is carried through to the grille and bumpers as well as to the cab and seven-foot long pickup box.

Dual Power domes in the hood continue the theme as does a new combination front bumper/brush guard with integral fog lights, a unique cab step bar/roll bar with airfoil driving lights, a dual exhaust and 17-inch wheels and tires.

The Super Flarside's tailgate is modified and includes a new "duck tail" spoiler that opens to the pickup box.

You know that car you always wanted?



What you're looking at here is a car that comes with a 1.9-liter DOHC, 16-valve, 4-cylinder engine, aluminum alloy wheels, leather-wrapped steering wheel, and your name written all over it.

Domestic cars span price spectrum

NEW CAR buyers or just browsers will have plenty to take in at this year's North American International Auto Show, where about 700 American nameplate and import cars and light trucks will be packed under one roof.

And if you're a serious car buyer, the show is the only place in North America to see almost every car made on display.

Price-conscious buyers still can find a handful of American nameplate cars under $10,000, but expect a wider selection of new cars with a base sticker price of about $14,000-$18,000.

For car buyers looking for price, fuel economy, reliability and good performance (you determine the order), there's the Ford Festiva. The L model, two-door hatchback, has a modest price tag of $6,941, making it the lowest-priced American nameplate car.

Festiva has no new exterior styling for 1992, but look for three new exterior colors — bright aqua, cayman green and brilliant blue.

Standard are front-disc brakes, steel-belted radial tires and a MacPherson-strut front suspension. Festiva comes with a five-speed manual transmission, or add $515 for automatic.

FORD INTRODUCED Festiva to North American consumers in 1987, hoping to attract first-time and import-oriented car buyers; nearly 200,000 cars have been sold in the past three years.

Besides price, part of Festiva's appeal is its outstanding highway fuel-economy rating of 43 miles per gallon, possibly the highest in its class.

Festiva's sportier GL model, also a two-door hatchback, is $7,980. Look for a new GL sport option, including aluminum wheels, six tape-stripe designs, a rear-roof-edge spoiler and sporty fabric for seats and door panels. Power steering isn't available on the L or GL models.

"Our goal is to deliver a reliable, fuel efficient, sporty car at a practical price to first-time buyers," said Ross Roberts, Ford Motor Co. vice president and Ford Division general manager.

IF PRICE is no object, consider the Cadillac Allante with a price tag of $58,470 for the convertible model and a whopping $64,090 for the convertible hardtop (the most expensive of the American nameplates).

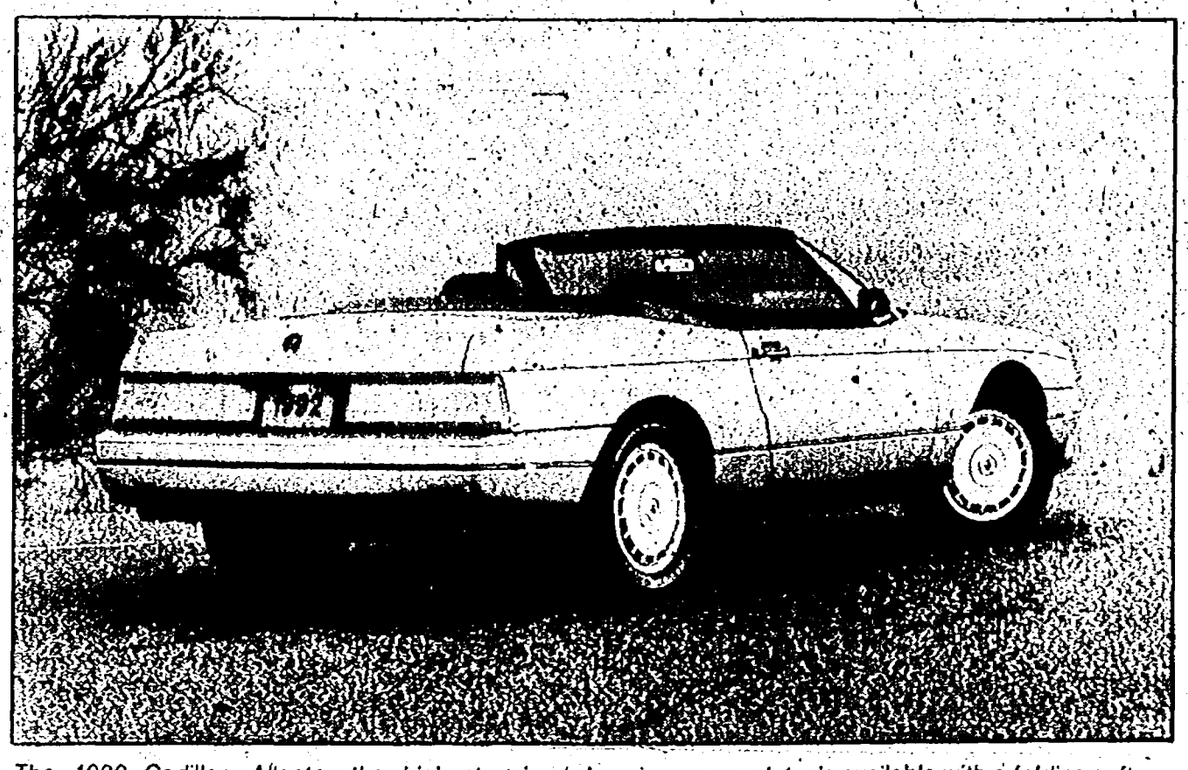
The Allante, Cadillac's flagship vehicle, begins its sixth model year in 1992. (The 1993 model makes its worldwide debut at the Detroit show and should be in dealer showrooms in April).

For 1992, Allante keeps its 4.5-liter, tuned port-fuel-injected V8 engine and Traction-Control System. Allante is capable of reaching more than 130 mph and zero to 60 mph in just eight seconds. Its fuel economy rating is 15 miles per gallon for city driving, 22 miles per gallon on the highway.

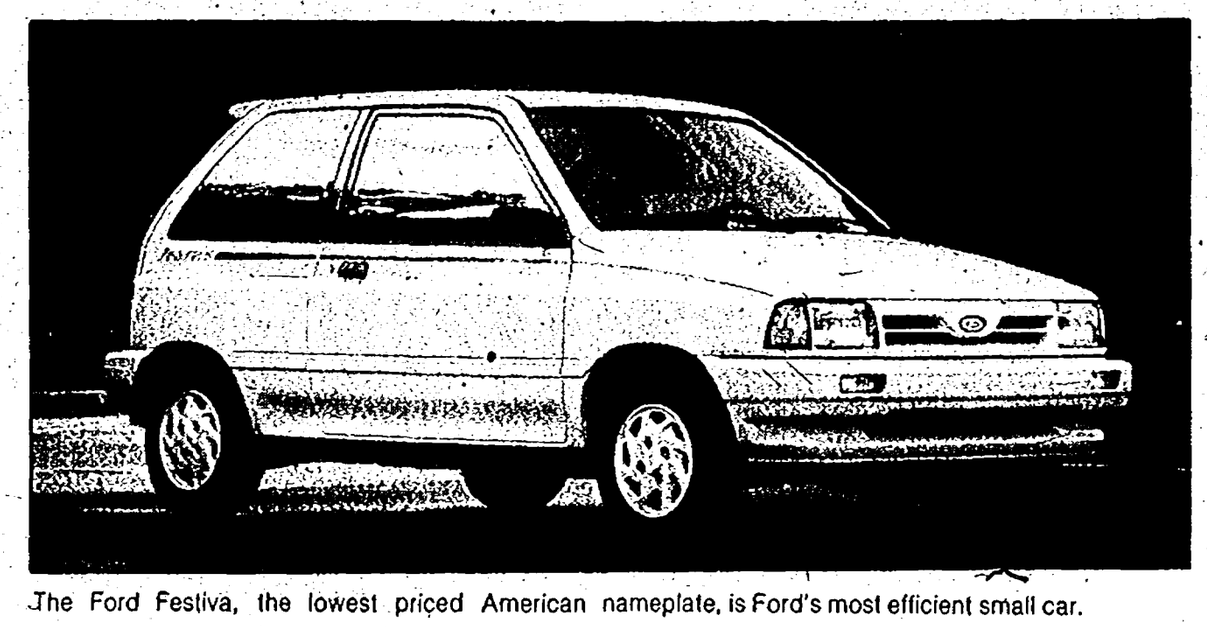
The 1992 model features a folding soft top with a gas spring-assisted cover and power latch designed for driver convenience. Allante can be equipped with a removable hardtop. Tops are fitted to handcrafted bodies made by Pininfarina of Italy.

Cadillac has boosted Allante's standard Delco-Bose Gold Series Symphony system (including AM/FM stereo, compact disc and cassette player) to 200 watts.

Other features include a Bosch III anti-lock brake system, multiplex wiring, forged aluminum wheels and 10-way seats.



The 1992 Cadillac Allante, the highest priced American nameplate, is available with a folding soft top or a removable hard top.



The Ford Festiva, the lowest priced American nameplate, is Ford's most efficient small car.

Steer into future at Safety Theater

VISITORS TO the North American International Auto Show will get a glimpse of what it's like driving in the year 2010 at the General Motors Corporate display featuring a simulated driving course.

The GM Safety Technology Theater, which allows show goers to experience GM's present and concept safety features and technology, represents a windshield and instrument panel measuring approximately 50 feet long and 13 feet high.

Throughout the nine-day auto show, visitors will take their places before the open theater for a 10-minute narrated "drive" through the roads of today and tomorrow.

Using video and film, the automaker shows the head-up device, onboard navigation, vision enhancement, crash avoidance and holograms for traffic control.

Head-up, an option on GM's 1992 luxury cars, projects turn signals, low fuel warning and other

Spectacle boasts a checkered history

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

VISITORS TO Detroit's fourth North American International Auto Show may wonder "What recession?" as they roam through the expansive — and expensive — displays of nearly 60 of the world's leading auto manufacturers.

As usual, Cobo Center will be filled with elaborate displays that accentuate, spotlight, dramatize and sometimes suspend the new production cars and trucks and innovative conceptual vehicles.

And this year's show will have more worldwide and North American introductions than ever before, promises Carl Fischer, show co-chairman.

When did it begin? Detroit's show, one of the oldest in the U.S., goes back to 1899 when it was billed as a livestock and car show at the Light Guard Armory.

A year later, the first National Auto Show was held in New York. In 1907, the Detroit Auto Dealers Association (which still sponsors the show) put together its first show in Beller's Beer Garden.

THE DETROIT auto show has come a long way from a primitive beginning when it shared floor space with beef tenderloin.

Just four years ago, the show was granted international status when a coalition of Detroit area dealers and auto manufacturing leaders decided to escalate it beyond a big arena for the local dealers to sell cars.

Ford, Chrysler and GM supported the idea and the imports followed. The show's big boost came when Lexus and Infiniti decided to make worldwide introductions in Detroit.

What makes the Detroit show special — besides its international status — is that it's the only international show under one roof. (The Frankfurt and Tokyo shows, for example, are housed in several buildings).

And the environment of Detroit's show is designed for browsers — some want to compare the prices and engineering offered by the American and import automakers; others simply want to see what's new in automotive technology.

THIS IS the second year the DADA will sponsor Supplier Preview Days (formerly Industry Trade Days), giving automotive suppliers a chance to see the show and tour the displays with their customers for two days before the show opens to the public Jan. 11.

In just four years, the show's influence has grown throughout the world. Last year's show brought nearly 700 corporate representatives to Detroit from 27 import automobile manufacturers.

And because the Detroit show includes the Big Three as well as the major import car makers, it draws an increasing number of important journalists who write the "buff books," or auto trade magazines. Last year, more than 250 foreign journalists from 19 countries covered the event. Overall, 967 members of the press attended; at least 1,800 are expected this year.

This year, 600,000 people are expected to attend the show, literally put together by about 13,000 people, including electricians, assemblers, models and automotive reps.

Not in a position to buy? Even so, for just $6 show goers again will be entertained, enlightened and informed by displays put together by the automotive geniuses of the world.

Finding Your Way

You might need some help finding your way around the 1992 North American International Auto Show. Now in its fourth year, the show will feature more than 40 manufacturers displaying 750 vehicles. This map shows where the exhibits will be located at Cobo Conference/ Exhibition Center.

The Chevrolet Corvette Sting Ray III concept car features dramatically angled headlights, pedals that move with a memory for pre-set positions and a longer wheelbase.

Futuristic 'vette taps best of past

THE CHEVROLET Corvette Sting Ray III concept car incorporates the best of past Corvettes while surging into the future.

Born at General Motors' Advanced Concept Center in California, Sting Ray III represents a substantial change from the already exotic Corvette platform. A coil-over-shock front suspension design replaces the transverse leaf spring version.

The design contemplates use of a sophisticated and powerful engine usually found in a Corvette. The gearbox is positioned between the rear wheels for more even weight distribution.

And Sting Ray III's stance is even more aggressive than a production Corvette. The wheelbase is nearly seven inches longer, yet the overall length is two inches shorter.

Lower side sills ease entry and exit and passenger room is greater.

FROM THE front, Sting Ray III's dramatically angled headlights point up the car's extraordinary styling. Even the color is different — dark black cherry.

Inside, there's more room and a cockpit-like area for the driver. Efforts at optimizing driver comfort include the outside armrest being on the seat rather than the door. The seat itself is fixed, but the pedals move with a memory for preset positions. The height of the center console can be adjusted.

Instruments are viewed over the steering wheel rather than through it.

TIDBITS ABOUT automobiles from Copley News Service:

● Save the environment by driving a well-maintained car. Make sure tires are inflated properly to cut fuel consumption, keep the engine tuned and replace the air filter every 15,000 miles.

● Driving at 55 mph on the highway burns at least 15 percent less fuel than driving at 65.

● Most of the materials in old cars that end up in junkyards and landfills can be recycled for new automobiles. BMW is experimenting with recycling techniques at a plant in Landshut, Germany.

● High-tech developments will make it easier for motorists to navigate through traffic. Computerized navigation systems with display terminals will alert drivers to traffic snarls and suggest alternate routes.

The sporty Viper RT/10 makes its worldwide debut at the Detroit show. Chrysler unveiled the two-seater as a concept car at the 1989 show.

Shelby Cobra) become a reality in just three years?

"It's simple," said Tony Cervone, public relations manager for design and motorsports. "The public demanded that we build it."

After Viper's overwhelming reception at the Detroit, Chicago and New York shows in 1989, Chrysler was besieged with mail from consumers wanting to know when Viper — a lightweight, classically styled sports car reminiscent of the 1960s — would be available.

Chrysler responded by forming "Team Viper," a volunteer group whose job was to decide if it was feasible to make the car. And could it be done with a sticker price of around $50,000? It could. And in May 1990, Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca gave Viper the green light.

THE RESULT is a car almost identical to the concept model that wowed spectators in 1989.

Besides the powerful engine packed under a fiery red hood, the rear-drive sports car will pioneer an all-new, six-speed manual transmission that won't be available on other vehicles until 1993.

Twin side exhausts make the car look fast even in a parking lot — acceleration time is 0-60 mph in just 4.5 seconds. A first for Chrysler is the engine's bottom-fed fuel injection system.

Most exterior body parts are made with a resin transfer molding (RTM) composite process, a first for an American-made car. Chrysler also used structural urethane foam trim throughout the interior, another first for a U.S.-produced car. Viper also sports a Chrysler-patented, single-piece windshield frame that becomes a part of the inside instrument panel.

TO CUT the car's development time, Chrysler used preformed tubular steel (a material as strong as stamped steel) for the frame.

To reduce speed from 100 mph to a standstill in under five seconds (if you dare), Viper features a breaking system generally found on race cars.

Viper's two-piece cast aluminum wheels (17 in. x 10 in. in front and 17 in x 13 in. rear) reduce the car's unsprung weight.

The soft, fixed top snaps on and stores in the trunk.

First-year production is limited to 200-300 cars, available only in bright red. Next year production could be as high as 2,000-3,000 with additional colors available.

Viper should be available at selected dealers by March or April, said Cervone.

Described by Chrysler as the "definitive example of a classic high performance car," Viper was a bold experiment for the automaker.

UNLIKE OTHER new-production groups from the Big Three, the Viper group included under 100 designers and engineers who worked on a tight budget and production schedule in an unassuming building on Detroit's west side.

A DIFFERENT KIND of COMPANY. A DIFFERENT KIND of CAR.

The 1993 Ford Probe makes its worldwide debut in Detroit. The new Probe (not available at dealers until June) has an all-new aerodynamic design and powerplant.

Style

New, redesigned cars in spotlight

First of two parts.

HERE'S THE line-up of most of the new and redesigned American nameplate passenger cars you'll see at this year's North American International Auto Show in Detroit's Cobo Center Jan. 11-19:

● BUICK

● Skylark — Completely redesigned coupe and sedan feature a 2.3-liter single overhead cam shaft engine and the highest level of standard equipment ever offered in compact Buicks.

Skylark Gran Sport coupe and sedan include a 3300 V6 engine.

New standard equipment includes anti-lock brakes, power door locks, split-folding rear seat and manual remote trunk and fuel-filler door releases.

● LeSabre— The redesigned full-size LeSabre is three inches longer and 2½ inches wider than last year's model. Besides an all-new interior and exterior, LeSabre Custom and Limited sedans have a new powertrain — 170 hp 3800 V6 with tuned port injection and an electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmission.

Anti-lock brakes are standard on the Limited, optional on the Custom. New features include a wrap-around instrument panel and flush-mounted glass to reduce wind noise.

● CADILLAC

● Eldorado — Eldorado is more than 11 inches longer, two inches wider and almost an inch higher than last year's model. Rear-seat comfort is improved with an increase in the seat's back angle. There also is more rear seat room and increased knee clearance.

The new model again has the 200 hp, 4.9-liter V8 and 4T60-E four-speed automatic transmission.

Wood-like plastic accents are replaced by real wood features on the doors and instrument panel. You'll see less lettering and ornamentation on the new model.

● Seville — The five-passenger Seville is more than 13 inches longer than the previous model. Wheelbase is increased three inches. Overall roof height is slightly increased.

All exterior panels are new and not shared with other Cadillac models. Only the front windshield is common to Eldorado and Seville. Upfront, Seville features composite headlamps and wrap-around parking, signal and cornering lamps. An all-new grille is chrome plated with light gray inserts.

Front and rear seats are redesigned for increased back support. Base interior features electronic instruments, a column shift transmission, knit cloth seating, power window and door locks and the express-down driver-side window.

The new model has the 4.9-liter V8 engine and 4T60-E four-speed automatic transmission.

● FORD

● Probe — The 1993 Probe will make its worldwide debut at the Detroit show. It's distinguished by an all-new aerodynamic design and all-new powerplants. The new model will be offered in a single configuration (2 + 2) in two series, Probe and Probe GT. For 1993, Probe is lower with a wider track and has a cowl (base of windshield) almost three inches lower than the current model.

● Taurus — The 1992 model receives the greatest redesign since its introduction in 1986. The sedan has an all-new body (except doors) and new interior and mechanical improvements.

There are four Taurus four-door sedan series: L, GL, LX and SHO.

The car's corners are softened and horizontal lines are emphasized. For a sporty look, the wheel openings are fully radiused. Overall length is increased by 3.8 inches, with a slight increase in trunk volume. There are nine new colors and detail changes such as tinted outside rear-view mirrors, new aluminum wheels and wheel covers.

The interior is also redesigned, improving safety and driver comfort. Driver's-side air bag is standard on all models.

● Thunderbird — Ford's 1992 standard and LX models feature an aerodynamic front-end similar to the Super Coupe model. Also new are color-keyed body-side moldings on the standard, LX and Sport models and full-width, tail-lamp illumination. There are four new exterior colors.

The standard 3.8-liter, V6 electronic fuel-injected engine will continue as the base powerplant for the LX while a 200-hp, five-liter V8 is standard on the Sport. A 210-hp, 3.8-liter supercharged V6 engine is standard on the Super Coupe.

● Crown Victoria — In the first major redesign since 1979, Ford softens Crown Victoria's lines to create a sleeker more aerodynamic car.

Among the standard equipment is a driver's-side air bag, four-wheel disc brakes, child safety latches on rear doors, 4.6-liter, SEFI overhead cam V8 engine, tinted glass, air conditioning and an AM/FM cassette stereo radio with door mounted speakers.

A six-passenger Touring Sedan is added to the 1992 line. Functional features include a high performance overhead cam V8 engine, anti-lock brakes with traction assist, performance tires and a touring suspension with special springs, shock absorbers and anti-sway bars for flatter cornering.

The sedan features contemporary styling, cast-aluminum wheels and unique interior appointments, including standard cloth-and-leather seats.

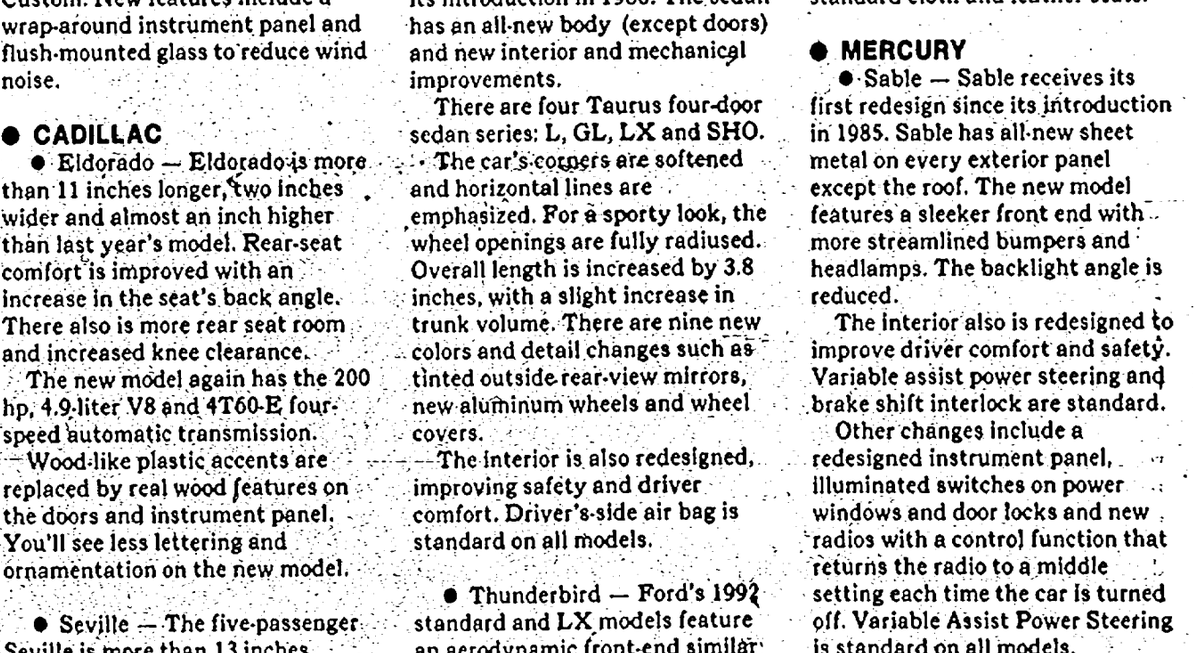
● MERCURY

● Sable — Sable receives its first redesign since its introduction in 1985. Sable has all-new sheet metal on every exterior panel except the roof. The new model features a sleeker front end with more streamlined bumpers and headlamps. The backlight angle is reduced.

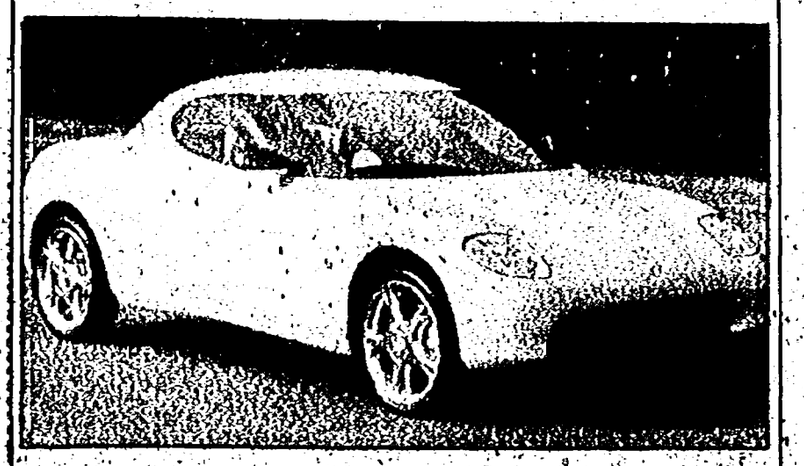
The interior also is redesigned to improve driver comfort and safety. Variable assist power steering and brake shift interlock are standard.

Other changes include a redesigned instrument panel, illuminated switches on power windows and door locks and new radios with a control function that returns the radio to a middle setting each time the car is turned off. Variable Assist Power Steering is standard on all models.

You'll also find significant improvements to decrease noise and vibration.



The all-new 1992 Buick Skylark includes the highest level of standard equipment ever offered in compact Buicks.



An experimental two-stroke engine powers Toyota's ultra-light-weight AVX-IV concept car.

Toyota concept car: ultralight commuter

THE TOYOTA AVX-IV concept vehicle will be the highlight of a display focusing on the automobile and the environment.

The AVX-IV, making its North American introduction in Detroit, is an ultra-lightweight commuter designed to give high fuel economy without sacrificing driving performance and comfort.

It is powered by Toyota's experimental S-2 804 cc two-stroke engine. Aluminum, magnesium and other lightweight materials are used extensively in AVX-IV's body.

Other features of the environmental exhibit include Toyota's chlorofluorocarbon (CFC) refrigerant recovery machine, designed to remove ozone-threatening CFCs from air conditioning systems before servicing and a new environmentally sound coolant, HFC-134a, which will be used in all new Toyota vehicles equipped with air conditioning by 1994.

readouts about six feet beyond the windshield; this lets drivers keep their eyes on the road instead of the instrument panel. GM is the world's first automaker to include this safety feature on production cars.

AS THE ride reaches the turn-of-the-century, when there are few gauges on the dashboard, the narrator introduces a concept safety feature called onboard navigation, a map that pinpoints the vehicle's location. And if the driver is approaching a traffic jam, the "navigator" suggests alternate routes.

Into the 21st century, show goers will experience vision enhancement, a concept system that adjusts driver's vision in glare, fog, snow or rain.

By the year 2010, viewers experience crash avoidance, a futuristic radar that alerts drivers to another car or object in the vehicle's way. If an oncoming car crosses the center lane, "Lanetrak" automatically steers your car away from danger; "Lanelok" then steers your car back into the proper lane.

The ride ends with holograms showing Hughes satellites that one day may predict traffic data, control toll booths, regulate the traffic on expressway ramps, control street lights and raise and lower train gates.

GM's display, in the northeast corner of Cobo Center between BMW and Isuzu, also includes a concept vehicle and examples of the automakers current and concept engine technology.

THE 700-PLUS cars and trucks displayed at Detroit's North American International Auto Show will share the stage with local and national sports and radio and television celebrities, who will meet the fans, sign autographs and field questions from show goers on opening weekend, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 11-12, at Cobo Center and the adjoining Joe Louis Arena.

Celebrity Weekend features television star Robert Urich, host of the show's charity preview Friday, Jan. 10, who returns to the show Saturday for an appearance on Cobo's television stage. Show goers will meet Miss America, Carolyn Sapp, at the Chevrolet exhibit 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

"While we are proud of the increasingly international stature of our show, we never want to lose sight of the local flavor of the event," said Gordon Stewart, show co-chairman. "The presence of Detroit-area sports and media personalities enables us to retain the hometown spirit of the show."

ON OPENING day, Saturday, Jan. 11, look for former Detroit Tigers Milt Wilcox and Willie Horton on Stage Two and Tigers shortstop Alan Tramell on Stage One.

The Detroit Pistons will be well represented. Joe Dumars will meet fans at the GMC truck display 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday. Isiah Thomas appears at the Toyota display 2-4 p.m. Sunday. Pistons Darrell Walker and Orlando Woolridge also will make guest appearances opening weekend.

Professional golfer Johnny Miller meets the fans 2-4 p.m. Sunday at the Chrysler display. Golfer Wayne Levi will appear at the Buick display.

Visitors will meet race drivers Bill Elliott 10 a.m. to noon and Geoff Bodine noon to 2 p.m. at the Ford display. Driver Carroll Shelby and downhill skier Billy Kidd will greet fans at Chrysler. Driver Dave Rosenblum also is scheduled to appear.

"Detroit is synonymous with two things: cars and sports. Given this fact, it only seems natural to bring these two important elements of our community together at an event that showcases our city to the rest of the country and the world," said Carl Fischer, show co-chairman.

Besides local celebrities and athletes, show goers will see television stars Jason Priestly and Jennie Garth, from the hit show "Beverly Hills 90210," at 11 a.m. Saturday at an upbeat music-oriented fashion show of trendy clothing for teens, sponsored by Twelve Oaks Mall, in Joe Louis Arena.

about an auto company's future intentions, since so few of the far-out designs ever make the showroom.

Regardless, to auto buffs there is nothing quite as visceral as viewing a well-thought-out experimental car that embraces either some outrageous performance specification, or genuinely innovative features.

The lack of practical restraints often lets the designer's imagination run wild, with the result a study in impracticality.

BUT OFTEN, the best concept cars are a demonstration of the abilities of the manufacturer — sometimes answering questions that are only beginning to be asked.

The North American International Auto Show in recent years has become both a showcase for new concept cars and a stopping point for some cars that were first introduced overseas and now are making the rounds of the major auto companies.

Nationalism, always implicit in any multinational auto show, is even stronger than usual this year, as a few highly charged efforts by the Germans, Japanese and Americans make clear statements about the future intentions of their respective creators.

One reason is the pending unification of Europe — an event that has most major European carmakers pondering the effect on their futures.

Some, including Peugeot, have already withdrawn from the U.S. to concentrate their resources in their home markets. But others, particularly the major German carmakers, are attempting to establish some clearly European goals that mesh with the future when Europe becomes one huge coordinated market.

BUT THE major goals clearly are in conflict. Audi's awesome high-performance sports car, the AVUS Quattro, is an all-aluminum technological tour de force that evokes images of pre-World War II Germany: high horsepower and high technology.

But it's high-performance theme is a long way from the goals of the growing environmental movement in Europe that threatens to set speed limits on the Autobahn network where a car like the AVUS could be driven flat-out.

The so-called green movement has put considerable pressure on the likes of BMW, Mercedes and Audi. The German automakers built their image mainly on high-performance, the main factor that separated them from the upstart Japanese.

But the upper echelons of speed conflict badly with the environmentalist movement that already has unified Europe on its own. The result is the odd juxtaposition of the monstrous AVUS against the tiny Volkswagen Chico or the BMW E1 electric vehicle — two cars obviously developed to make their manufacturers look soberly responsible.

MEANWHILE, THE Japanese are under the strongest pressure in decades to stabilize world trade routes, but are likewise anxious to demonstrate that their technical capability is being used to solve the world's automotive problems.

The result is a combination of gadgetry (epitomized by the Mitsubishi project car that operates without foot pedals) and technical solutions to air quality, including multifuel vehicles and an electric car by Nissan.

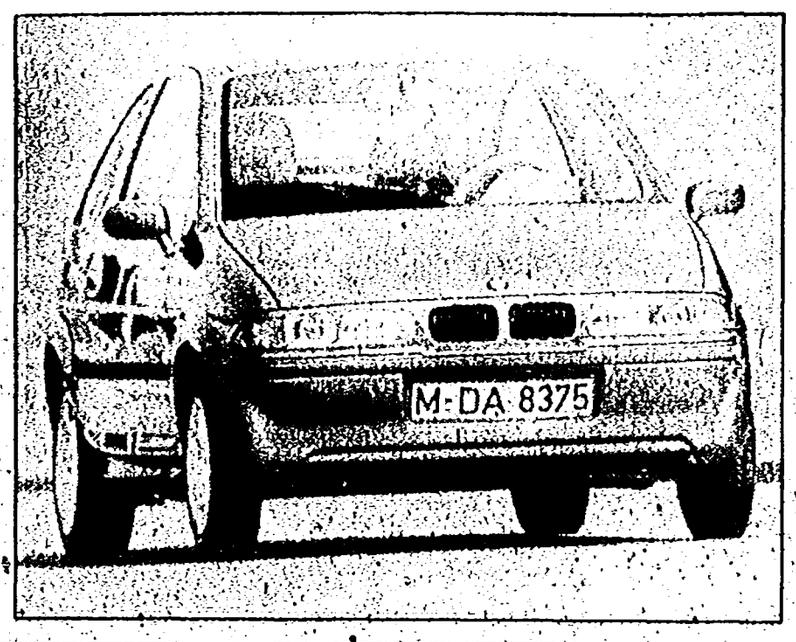
Interestingly, the main pressure to produce environmentally harmless vehicles is coming from the U.S. and Europe, but Japanese carmakers still are anxious to take the lead in developing responsible technology that will prove useful in their export markets.

One result of the European and Japanese efforts is that for perhaps the first time, concept cars brought to the show by offshore car companies will dominate rather than the exercises done by the U.S. Big Three.

THE FEW domestic trendsetters are particularly, however. Chrysler has put together a new coupe powered by an intriguing new two-stroke engine, as well as an electric minivan. More than any other car company, Chrysler seems interested in using concept cars as a basis for its real future product line. Proof is in the introduction of the new Viper, which had its origins in Detroit as a concept car just three years ago.

But the U.S. companies mainly are anxious to launch new cars, not concepts. Chrysler will unveil its striking new LH car lines, as well as the Viper, while GM highlights its new intermediates. Ford is introducing a new range of trucks, plus a new Probe and minivan.

In the midst of this auto recession, it's hardly surprising that the first concern is not future concepts, but raising public interest in the here and now.



BMW's first "purpose built electric car," the E1, is powered by a sodium-sulphur, high-energy battery and an electric motor. It's designed to meet the strictest U.S. environmental standards. The four-passenger E1 can reach a top speed of 75 mph and has a range of more than 155 miles under ordinary driving conditions. A standard power supply can recharge the vehicle in 6-8 hours. Classic styling includes the kidney-shaped grille and circular headlights. Air bags and anti-lock brakes are standard on all BMWs.

Glieberman sets goals for BASM

By Doug Funke
staff writer

More jobs and more people will lead to more building activity.

That's the philosophy and focus of Bernard Glieberman, a West Bloomfield builder and incoming president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

He succeeds James Bonadeo, a Plymouth builder, who served as BASM president for an unprecedented three years.

"My main goal is to create jobs in Michigan. That's my thrust," Glieberman said. "Every new job represents a housing start."

Glieberman, 52, who said he's been a BASM member for some 20 years, estimates that he's constructed 8,000 residential units during that time. He's president of Crosswinds Communities and was selected Builder of the Year in 1991 by the association.

"Demographers say there's no population influx in Michigan; people are just moving around," Glieberman said. "We've got to change that. When EDS came to town, housing boomed. We need to bring more jobs to Michigan. To me, that's my most important job as president of BASM."

GLIEBERMAN SAID he intends to meet regularly with county and state commerce officials to promote southeastern Michigan.

"I told the county I'm willing to sit down with a prospect and show them what a town we have," Glieberman said. "I think a businessman gets a comfort there. I think I can get other builders to join me and help out.

"We have a state here when you compare it with other parts of the country and quality of life here, you've got everything you want — great recreation, good schools, culture, very affordable housing, affordable water, affordable utilities," he said.

"We have to shake the bushes and make companies understand we have a good supply of skilled labor."

Bernard Glieberman: "Builders and communities have learned there's a middle ground we can go down to live happily ever after. I think that happens in more and more communities."

Glieberman also intends to keep active on other fronts that affect the professional association of builders, suppliers and others affiliated with the construction industry.

"I'm going to propose to our board of directors that we get more directly involved with legislators," he said. Areas of concern impacting employment generally and the building industry by extension include import/export restrictions, workers compensation and the single business tax.

BASM, WITH some 2,000 members, is the third-largest nationally in terms of numbers even though building activity volume here ranks only 15th or 16th nationally, Glieberman said. "I want to remain number three or move up in membership."

Membership offers all kinds of benefits from informational meetings to reduced-cost medical insurance, he said.

"You join because of networking. When you first join, you talk with other builders, hear what they're doing, attend seminars, meet subcontractors to further your knowledge of the business. If you look at the BASM schedule, there's about a meeting a day."

Technical service staff also is available to provide information on product use, he added.

Builders and community activists concerned about overbuilding still eye each other cautiously, Glieberman added, but both sides seem to have taken a hard edge off their positions.

"We're starting to learn how to coexist," he said. "Builders and communities have learned there's a middle ground we can go down to live happily ever after. I think that happens in more and more communities."

Glieberman assured that his avocations — ownership of the Ottawa Rough Riders professional football team and an extensive car collection — won't interfere with his building business and his BASM leadership responsibilities.

"As a businessman in Michigan my goal is to get other people in here now," he said. "The state of Michigan should have as its number one priority to do whatever it takes to get more jobs in."

And more jobs means more people and more people means more building opportunities.

Local builders' optimism triggered

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Last year wasn't exactly a banner one for residential construction here, according to leadership of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, but several factors are in place for a turnaround during 1992.

That was the message Tuesday during BASM's annual news conference on the state of the local building industry.

BASM leaders pin their optimism on declining mortgage rates and a boost in consumer confidence and pent-up demand.

"With lower interest throughout 1991 — really plummeting, especially during the last quarter — and with mortgage companies being extemely cooperative, buyers can find some really sweet deals in new homes," said Robert Halperin, a BASM vice president and Birmingham real estate agent.

According to figures provided by BASM from the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, single-family building permits in southeast Michigan fell to 9,200 last year from 10,700 in 1990 and 12,400 in 1989.

"I THINK that customer confidence, consumerism, was the single biggest factor," Halperin said. "That has been one thing that put a hold on (housing starts) more than anything else. I don't think we even thought of it, absolutely."

Bernard Glieberman, BASM president and a West Bloomfield builder, while not committing to a specific number, said he anticipates that residential building permits issued this year will at least match the 10,700 issued in 1990.

"With interest rates as low as they are, with the movement we already are beginning to see in the marketplace and given competition in the business, there's a window of opportunity right now to get more value at less cost than we have seen in 20 years," Glieberman said.

"A look at Wall Street tells us things are beginning to move," he added. "The stock market usually is about six months ahead of the marketplace, and it has just achieved its highest level ever."

BASM will do its part to stimulate the market by sponsoring three Homearamas this year.

ONE IN Oakland Township will include a Smart House featuring an electronic automation appliance control system. The second will be in Detroit, the first subdivision built there in three decades. And the third, a planned unit development in Sterling Heights, will feature both condominiums and houses.

BASM annually also sponsors the largest local building and home show in North America, Glieberman noted.

"Our goal is to help consumers make informed decisions about new homes and financing so that they can take advantage of market opportunities this year," Glieberman said.

Mark Guidobono, BASM vice president and a Novi builder, briefly spoke about what buyers specifically are looking for in new homes.

"Openness is a feature many seek today, with soaring two-story foyers and great rooms that provide a feeling of spaciousness," he said. "A lot of people want special areas such as media rooms and fitness rooms.

"There also is a trend toward multi-purpose areas that serve as computer or office space, a child's play room and at times a guest room.

"BUILDERS ARE adding more skylights and windows not only for light and air but to enhance the design element of the home," he said. "We are seeing more fireplaces that serve two rooms at the same time, accent lighting in kitchens and steeper roof pitches."

Other touches mentioned by Guidobono — video security systems, motion sensors in rooms and more energy efficient furnaces.

Other topics were addressed.

- Abe Ran, BASM vice president and a Troy developer, noted that developers are aware of the need for more residential lots. They're responding by preparing land in Novi, Canton, West Bloomfield and Sterling Heights in particular.

"Every builder we deal with, they want lots," Ran said.

- Peace seems to have been made between developers and no-growth community advocates, at least from BASM's perspective.

"Planners have to be aware of a happy medium. We do, too," said Irvin H. Yackness, BASM executive vice president and general counsel. "Environmentalists and builders recognize there has to be a balance. Growth is an affirmative thing. It means more jobs, more prosperity for everybody."

Survey seeks dream home specifications

If house designers would just ask me, you may have thought, I could tell them what people really want in a house.

Well, here's your chance. Landmark Designs, in partnership with Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, is asking you to tell them exactly what features and amenities you would include in your dream house. Now in its 15th year of designing houses and writing a house design column, Landmark Designs has learned that readers can always teach them a thing or two. Or more.

WHETHER YOU plan to build a house, filling out the form can help clarify your preferences. And it's an opportunity to let your imagination soar. Landmark Designs has provided the accompanying survey form that includes the same questions architects, designers and real estate agents ask to determine clients' wants and needs.

Readers are encouraged to attach letters, sketches or other comments — the more detailed, the better.

Once the nationwide results of the survey are tallied, Landmark will design a national dream house. And because regional preferences vary widely, Landmark will design a house to meet the specifications preferred by Observer & Eccentric readers.

FLOORPLANS AND artist's renderings of the dream houses will appear on these pages in the spring.

Following publication of these plans, Landmark will provide a free set of working drawings to the first person who is willing to build one of the dream houses and open it to public display for a limited time.

Mail forms to Landmark Designs, Dept. 92, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene Or. 97402. There is no charge to participate in the survey. But those interested in receiving a copy of the national survey results must include $4 to cover the cost of postage and printing. Those persons must include their name and mailing address.

These charts show the impact of land costs on the price of a new single-family house. Recent technological advances in house building have significantly increased efficiency and reduced the proportionate costs of labor and materials. In 1949, labor and materials accounted for 69 percent of the cost of a new house. By 1990, the total had dropped to 53 percent. But the drop was offset by a sharp increase in the cost of a developed lot.

Tis the season for building awards.

The Livonia-based Masonry Institute of Michigan in cooperation with the Michigan Society of Architects will host its 16th annual awards banquet on March 7 at the Northfield Hilton in Troy.

The masonry industry will honor Michigan architects for their accomplishments in design. In cooperation with Lawrence Technological University, the ninth biennial student masonry design competition will also take place.

A photo display of winning entries and architectural students' projects will be featured during the cocktail reception beginning at 6:30 p.m. A slide presentation of all entries and the presentation of honor awards will follow dinner.

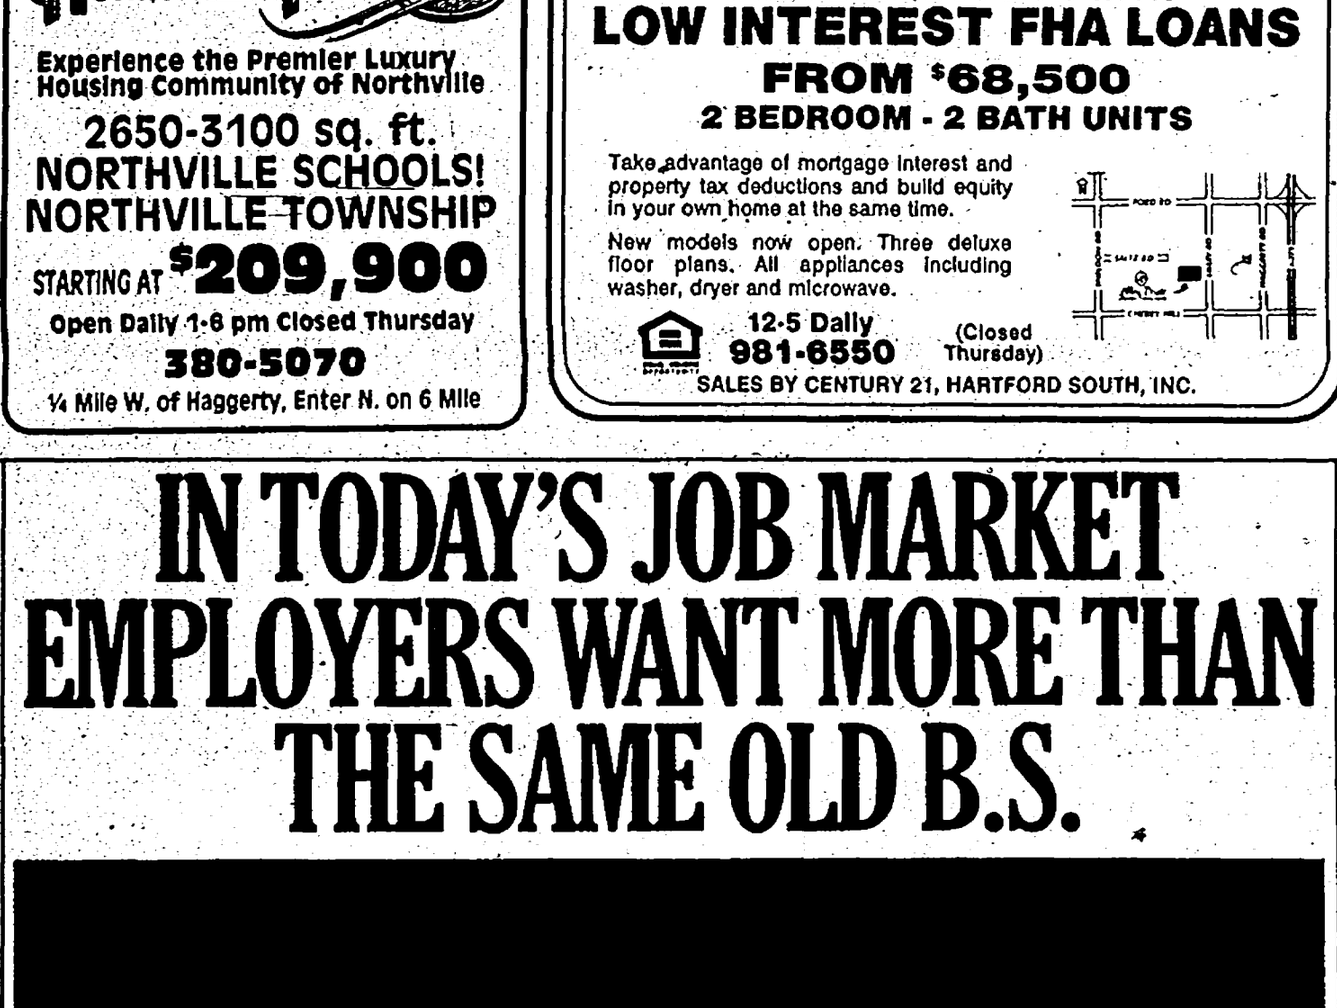
IN TODAY'S JOB MARKET EMPLOYERS WANT MORE THAN THE SAME OLD B.S.



Every year, over a million new college graduates put on their new blue suits and go job hunting.

All of them have degrees. Most of them have hearty handshakes. But very few have what employers want most — practical work experience.

That's why there's a nationwide program called Cooperative Education. It allows students to alternate studies at the college of their choice with paid, practical work experience in the career of their choice.

So Co-op Education students graduate with more than a degree. They have practical knowledge. And a competitive advantage in today's crowded job market. And that sure beats trying to B.S. your way into a job.

Hotness index registers gains

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Single-family residential building activity is on the rebound nationally and in the eight-county metro Detroit area, according to an analysis of figures compiled by U.S. Housing Markets, a Livonia-based research/reporting service.

Building permits issued nationally for single-family houses and townhouses July through September increased 4.4 percent from the corresponding period last year, the service reported.

In Detroit/Ann Arbor, single-family permits increased 9 percent during the third quarter of 1991 compared to 1990.

(The Detroit/Ann Arbor area includes Oakland, Wayne, Macomb, Monroe, Washtenaw, Livingston, St. Clair and Lapeer counties.)

But when multiple-family construction, basically apartments and condominiums, is included, building permits nationally slipped 4.1 percent and in Detroit/Ann Arbor 7.9 percent during the third quarter when compared to the same period in 1990, U.S. Housing Markets reported.

A hotness index — units permitted per 1,000 population — also indicates an improving market.

In Detroit/Ann Arbor, the hotness index, including the first three quarters this year and the last quarter of 1990, is 3.0 per 1,000. That compares to an index of 2.3 per 1,000 for the first half of this year and the second half of last year and 2.6 for calendar year 1990.

THE HOTNESS index improved dramatically during the third quarter for all nine other Midwest metro areas surveyed by U.S. Housing Markets.

- Chicago jumped from 2.1 to 2.8 per 1,000.
- Cincinnati 3.4 to 4.9.
- Cleveland 2.3 to 2.8.
- Columbus 4.0 to 5.7.
- Indianapolis 4.6 to 5.6.
- Kansas City 3.9 to 4.6.
- Milwaukee/Racine 2.3 to 4.6.
- Minneapolis/St. Paul 4.6 to 5.3.
- St. Louis 2.7 to 3.2.

"The numbers show a moderate but unmistakable single-family upturn in most cities across the country," said Gene H. Bishop, president of Mortgage USA, which publishes U.S. Housing Markets. "The single-family sector is carrying the whole load, however. Multi-family construction is still in a state of collapse."

Lack of financing for multiple-family construction has put the lid on that activity, U.S. Housing Markets reported. Declining mortgage rates have put more first-time buyers in the game.

"THE KEY ingredient in the turnaround is the long-suffering, first-time buyer, who now has a reasonable opportunity to become a homeowner after years of being knocked out of the marketplace," said Jess Hay, chairman of Lomas Financial Group, parent company of Lomas Mortgage.

"The hot air is gone from the resale market after years of hyper-inflation in many metropolitan areas," Hay said. "More home builders are returning to the grass roots of housing and addressing the needs of first-time buyers and other buyers of more moderate means."

Brian Bragg, editor of U.S. Housing Reports, attributed the improvement in the building outlook to a couple of factors.

"What we've got nationally was inventories worked off," he said. "Builders are not putting up speculative homes any more. You don't take out a whole bunch of permits and wait for sales to catch up. Permits and sales run parallel.

"Now, we're looking at five or six years since the last wave of building nationally. The Midwest was a little later, 1987, '88. People in those houses are ready to move up. Interest rates are down. First-timers are able to buy off somebody who wants to move up, and they buy off somebody who wants to move up. It's a domino effect."

In spite of the third-quarter comeback, residential construction permits of all kinds issued through the first nine months of this year are down 19.1 percent nationally and 22.7 percent in Detroit/Ann Arbor compared to the January-September period of 1990, U.S. Housing Markets reported.

Bedroom as hideaway

AP — When deafened by the roar of the busy working world, come home to quiet comfort. Slip into a bedroom decorated in eloquent and understated tones, suggests Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

Begin with a sense of simplicity derived from the out-of-doors. Imagine dropping out of the rat race and letting a decorating style grow naturally. Then take these simple steps toward creating a relaxing room:

- Unclutter the view. It's a good idea to pare down from time-to-time, clearing the decks of non-functioning possessions. Sell or trade them, or store them until donating them to a better use.

If privacy isn't necessary, uncover windows to let nature's panorama entertain. For privacy, hang simple roller shades or miniature blinds that disappear during the day.

- Brandish the brush. To simplify the room, paint the walls and furnishings white. Coat the ceiling with white enamel that will reflect the light around the room. Then, add white accessories. The beauty of an all-white room is not having to worry about coordinating colors. Also, white cleans and purifies, sets the room aglow, and helps the space seem larger than it really is.
- Touch with whimsy. Hang on to a sense of humor and include it in the bedroom. For tickling the eye, choose one or two accessories that make tongue-in-cheek statements.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT: Holy Spirit, You make me see everything & show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen. jb
