Men admit firing at house, witnesses say

By Darrell Clem staff writer

Two men accused in a drive-by shooting admitted they fired shotgun blasts into a Westland man's house in retaliation for an earlier argument between the man's brother and a friend of theirs, witnesses testified Tuesday.

The testimony came as Carl Emil Karcher, 19, of Westland and Richard Bronson, 21, of Dearborn Heights appeared in 18th District Court for a hearing that concluded in them being ordered to trial for firing five shotgun blasts into Timothy McLaughlin's house in the 1300 block of Easley.

They have pleaded not guilty. McLaughlin, asleep at the time, wasn't injured.

Testimony indicated the defendants mistakenly believed that McLaughlin's brother, who had earlier argued with their friend Douglas Milligan Jr., lived in the house.

That coincided with earlier reports in which Westland police accused Karcher and Bronson of firing on McLaughlin's residence in a case of mistaken identity during the 3:15 a.m. Feb. 1 incident, which occurred in the neighborhood northwest of Palmer and Venoy.

Milligan testified Tuesday that he and McLaughlin's brother, Todd, got into an altercation at a Westland bar, Greg's Emergency Room Lounge on Palmer near Merriman, before the shooting.

SECURITY WORKERS broke up the fight, but Milligan admitted he made a statement to his friends Karcher left his residence about 3 about Todd McLaughlin that, "I wish somebody would kill that bastard." Soon after, Milligan and his friends left the lounge and stopped by a friend's house, where several people, including Bronson and Karcher, had gathered. The group then went to Milligan's Westland residence, where Milligan said a discussion arose about shooting at McLaughlin's house.

"I told them it was too crazy of an idea," Milligan said. He testified that he stayed behind when Bronson and a.m. "to go take care of some stuff."

Milligan went to bed, but when he awoke later that morning Karcher had returned. "He told me that him and Rick had went out and shot up Mr. McLaughlin's house," Milligan said.

But Milligan later recanted his testimony in court and said he only "presumed" the defendants had fired the shots because Westland police had begun an investigation.

"I never said that I knew they pulled the trigger or anything," Mil-

GREG ROMEJ, another friend who had been with the group Feb. 1, testified that Bronson told him, "We shot up the guy's house." Romej, who had been drunk that morning, said his car had been unknowingly used by Bronson.

Westland police Sgt. Daniel Plannes testified that, about 19 hours after the incident, he questioned Bronson and asked him if he had been involved in a drive-by shooting. "I imagine I was," Pfannes

Teacher gets boy to give

A Stevenson Junior High school teacher was credited as being a heroine Tuesday after she talked a 15year-old boy in her class into surrendering what she and classmates

It was later discovered that it was an unloaded, inoperable BB gun.

But the father of the girl at whom the gun was pointed, in a second hour English class Tuesday, said that local parents should start "taking a second look at their own schools and that the guns-in-school problem associated with Detroit is now spreading to the suburbs."

The girl's father is Bill Caudill of Westland, who praised teacher Ann Warmington for her actions in getting the youth to surrender the weap-

Caudill praised his daughter's teacher for acting quickly in trying to get the gun away from the youth and subsequently convincing him to surrender it.

In commenting on the overall gun problem, Caudill told the Observer Tuesday that he never thought that the problem usually identified with Detroit schools would be present in the suburbs.

Warmington declined to talk about the incident, deferring the Observer's questions to the school administration.

The Stevenson incident is the latest in a series of guns-in-school incidents which started more than three years ago. The other incidents were reported in one elementary school and several secondary schools.

CAUDILL, WHO attended Stevenson on Palmer near Newburgh more than 20 years ago, quoted his daughter, 13 years old and a seventh grader, as telling him that the classmate, a ninth grader, first pointed a rubber band at her. Caudill declined to publicly identify his daughter.

According to the girl's father, the youth pulled what the girl thought was a handgun out of his pants and pointed it at her. The teacher was out of the room at that time.

When the teacher returned to the classroom, the girl asked to talk to her and then relayed the incident about the gun, Caudill quoted his daughter.

While the girl was talking to Warmington, the boy offered an excuse for leaving the classroom, but was stopped by Warmington who struggled to get the gun away from the youth, according to Caudill.

The teacher wasn't successful, but she did talk the boy into giving up the gun so it could be locked away.

TOM SVITKOVICH, deputy school superintendent, declined to confirm or deny any details of what the girl's father reported to the Observer, but did disclose that the boy has been "suspended indefinitely pending the administration's investigation and determination."

He stressed that the administration takes gun incidents seriously.

Syltkovich added that a central office administrative team will investigate the incident over and above the investigation of the building administration.

School board recall group misses deadline, but vows to continue drive

By Darrell Clem staff writer

A recall group seeking to oust three Wayne-Westland . school board members will begin losing petition signatures Sunday, but its leader vowed the campaign will

State law requires the committee to collect, within a 90-day period, all of the signatures it needs to petition the Wayne County Elections Commission for a special recall election.

Sunday marks the 90th day of the petition drive by New Beginnings for our Children (NBC), which wants to recall board members Kathleen Chorbagian, Leonard Posey and Andrew Spisak. The group hasn't collected enough signatures - 4,420 for each recall target - to put the issue to the voters. Under state law, NBC can continue its petition drive past Sunday. But for each day the campaign continues, a day of signatures is erased from the campaign's beginning. That keeps the 90-day limit intact.

Recall leader Steven Lind conceded that the group received numerous signatures early in the campaign signatures that could be lost - but he pledged to continue the fight. "I will continue to keep going. We're close enough (to getting the required signatures) that it would be a shame to throw the effort away," he said.

"We won't make it by Sunday," Lind confirmed Tuesday, but added, "We are still collecting signatures."

NBC WANTS to recall Chorbagian, Posey and Spisak for voting last February to approve a two-year salary increase of 11.9 percent for Wayne-Westland teachers. The raises came as widespread program cuts for students loomed, though the cuts were averted in June after voters approved a tax increase.

Lind didn't say when he expects his group will receive the signatures it needs to petition county officials for a special election, which would cost the Wayne-Westland district $12,000.

Meanwhile, a separate recall group that has halted its petition drive against board President Sylvia Kozorosky-Wlacek is expected to renew its campaign - if Lind's group succeeds in getting a special election set.

"If Lind's group goes through with it and gets a speclal election scheduled, we'll definitely try to be on that ballot," said Fredric Hagelthorn, leader of Citizens for Honest School Government (CHSG).

CHSG launched its recall campaign against Kozorosky-Wiacek in response to NBC's efforts. CHSG's 90-day period will also elapse soon.

Kozorosky-Wiacek also voted to approve the teacher salarles, but she voted against the program cuts that other board members had approved. Prior to the tax increase, most board members had believed the cuts might be necessary to balance the district's budget.

3 injured in fire at Venoy Pines

By Darrell Clem staff writer

Fire swept a Westland apartment building Tuesday morning, injuring three people and leaving 25 homeless. One woman escaped to safety from a second-story window, fire officials sald.

The 8:44 a.m. blaze erupted in an apartment living room at Venoy Pines, a 106-unit complex southwest of the Venoy-Warren Road intersection. The fire gutted one apartment, and damaged seven others, officials Westland fire marshal Robert Perry estimated the damage at $240,000, including the apartment building and its contents. The cause of the blaze remained under investigation Wednesday.

One female tenant who was forced to escape from a second-story window received minor injuries from smoke inhalation, Fire Chief Larry Lane said. Emergency crews treated her at the scene, and she didn't require hospital care, he said.

"She was evacuated from the second floor by ladder," Lane said. Two firefighters also suffered smoke inhalation, Lane said. One of them, identified as Larry Carignan, was briefly treated and released at

Annapolis Hospital in Wayne, Lane

FIREFIGHTERS BATTLED the blaze for about 27 minutes, though they remained on the scene for nearly three hours. Work crews continued to clear debris from the building late Tuesday afternoon.

The fire forced the evacuation of a building whose front address was 7065 Venoy, south of Warren. The flames drove 25 people, including 16 adults and nine children, from their homes, Lane said. It was not imme-

One apartment was gutted, fire officials said, and another received heavy smoke damage. Two units had light smoke damage, and four apartments received water damage. The blaze was contained to one building in the complex.

"There are eight units in the building. All are damaged to some degree, either by smoke or water," Perry said.

Perry said the blaze should serve as a warning to apartment tenants everywhere.

building that sparked strong opposition from neighbors encountered more problems Tuesday night, as the Westland City Council voted unanimously to deny the project.

The religious Kingdom Hall that had been proposed near the north. west corner of Ford and Venoy prompted several neighbors to attend a council meeting Tuesday night to show their opposition. They applauded when the council rejected the project.

"I'm not real happy about a Kingdom Hall going up in the back of my house, and I'll be quite frank," said Linda Bialo, a 24-year Hampshire Street resident who spoke for the neighborhood group.

Neighbors appeared concerned that the Jehovah's Witness meeting place would cause traffic congestion to worsen on heavily traveled Venoy.

"You have no idea just how hard it ; is to get out on Venoy," Bialo told the city council. "It's just terrible." Councilman Kenneth Mehl, in a study session before Tuesday's meeting, had voiced similar concerns. 'To be honest with you, I don't know if Venoy can handle that much additional traffic," he said. Venoy has only two lanes near the site, and council members had been told as many as 200 people would attend church services four nights a week, plus Sundays. Blalo noted that Jehovah's Witnesses already have a large meeting hall on Palmer, near Newburgh.

MEHL AND some neighbors also appeared worried that the religious organization might eventually want to expand the project and build condominiums on the site. But church spokesman Dennis DeCarlo denied it, saying the group only wanted a meeting place.

Bialo told the council that neighbors feared the building would result in more electrical and telephone wires in the neighborhood.

IN HIS motion to deny the project, Mehl noted that the land's zoning remains residential and that a special land use permit would be necessary to grant the project.

"That land should stay residential," he said.

Tuesday's session came, after neighbors had lobbled the city planning commission, seeking to thwart the project earlier. The commission had recommended approval of the project, but with certain contingencles such as an extra lane on Venoy near the Kingdom Hall site.

mony, Wayne district Judge Carolyn Archibald, sitting in for Westland Judge Gail McKnight, ordered Karcher and Bronson to stand trial on charges of discharging a firearm into an occupied dwelling, which carries a maximum penalty of four years in prison. She also ordered Karcher to face a felony firearms charge that carries a mandatory two-year term upon conviction.

Archibald dropped a follow firearms charge against Bronson after his attorney, Richard Jarosz, argued that no evidence had emerged indicating that Bronson had fired the shotgun.

The judge continued a $20,000' cash bond that has kept Bronson in jail since the shooting. Karcher's family posted an identical bond. and he has been freed.

The defendants will appear in Recorder's Court Monday, March 3, for an arraignment on information. A trial date hasn't been set.

JUDD BORROWS from her own varied ethnic heritage - Choctaw, Scots-Irish, Cajun French and Italian - and respectfully borrows from Africa, China, Japan and many more cultures to add a multicultural aspect to her storytelling.

She also uses mime, poetry, Irish drumming, improvisational acting and dialects to add spice to her performances, which focus on folk and fairy tales, myths and current literature.

She has worked as a puppeteer for an ABC-TV series, conducted workshops at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., and directed and performed for three seasons at Meadowbrook's Children's Concert Series. And those are just a few of her professional highlights.

Coincidentally, Judd's visit to Westland came as local schools celebrate "Reading Month," which is being observed throughout the 16,000-student Wayne-Westland school district.

Lyons, the Wilson Center's director, said Judd's inspirational storytelling not only provided a day of fun for the Wilson students. It also provided an incentive for the children to want to learn to read for themselves, just for the pure enjoyment of it.

Like storyteller, like student. Storyteller Roan Judd inspires a student to follow her lead as she tells a story to children at the Wilson Early Childhood Center.

Roan Judd uses her hands to emphasize a story that captures the attention of the children. Storytelling Isn't just a hobby for Judd. It's her work. She recently visited a preschool program in Westland.

Westland police arrest truck driver after chase

Three main concerns cloud the issue as the Livonia school district's Board of Education debates whether to air school board meetings on cable television.

At a March 9 policy committee meeting, trustees will discuss the pros and cons of a cablecasting proposal recently made by trustee Joseph Laura.

We are an entity that controls three times the tax dollars the city does," Laura said. "We should be more visible. The time has come for us to enhance our public image."

WHILE TRUSTEES generally like the idea of airing board meetings, they cite three major questions that must be answered before cablecasting could begin. The issues are:

· Whether to add camera and other equipment costs to the budget at a time the district's income is increasingly being cut by the state.

• Whether an agreement can be worked out between MetroVislon, which serves the city of Livonia, and Continental Cable Vision, which serves Westland, of which the northern portion is in the Livonia district.

• Whether the names of students expelled by the school board should be aired throughout the entire community. The names of expelled students are read at board meetings.

THE DISTRICT already owns some cable equipment, including one camera and some switching and wiring equipment, said Jay Young, director of community relations.

The district would have to pay the cost of a second camera as MetroVision already has fulfilled its obligation to provide $1 million worth of community access equipment to the city, said MetroVision regional manager Tom Bjorklund.

Bjorklund estimated a second camera and related equipment could cost the district more than $5,000.

"At this time, anything that's an against it," said trustee Marjorie

The recently passed $62.1 million bond issue would not pay for cable equipment, Sari said, as the funds are earmarked for K-12 buildings.

THE DISTRICT also must decide how to broadcast into the six-mile part of northern Westland that is in the school district.

Board meetings start at 7 p.m. Monday.

The session could be broadcast in Livonia over MetroVision at that time but most likely not in Westland over Continental.

"We can't air in both places at the same time," Laura said.

The meeting could be taped for airing at a later time in both communities, Laura said.

The state's Open Meetings Act requires expelled students to be specifically named when the action is taken at board meetings.

At its Feb. 3 meeting, the board expelled a Stevenson High junior forthe rest of the 1991-92 school year. He was specifically named.

Some board members said airing the name could be embarrassing to the student.

"If a child makes a mistake, why should everybody in the community know?" Sari asked. "You couldn't get their name from police if it was a police matter."

Trustee Richard McKnight said he'd back the airing of board meetings if the request to air them had come from the public.

"There's been no significant indication that the public wants us to do this. Why should the board promote it? If the public wanted it, I would not be opposed."

McNamara won't budge on SMART, Tigers

By Wayne Peal staff writer

SMART won't tap its $10 million pension fund surplus - at least if Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara has anything to say about it.

And McNamara; one of the socalled Big Four, has plenty to say about the suburban bus system's

"We are not going to be tapping the pension," McNamara said after Wednesday's annual State of the County address. "It's not enough money to keep us going for long, plus it's money that's only going to have to be replaced down the line."

SMART is scheduled to cease major bus service next month, stranding an estimated 30,000 riders, due to an estimated $6.7 million deficit.

The pension fund surplus is the most recent issue to emerge in the controversy over the Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation's future.

McNamara's speech also came amid speculation about two recent offers for the Detroit Tigers, and the county executive didn't resist bashing current Tigers owner

Thomas Monaghan. "Our community needs to make it clear that this city's future cannot be built around fortressed stadiums surrounded by a sea of concrete," McNamara said, stressing "cooperating, sharing and helping our entire community grow."

'If that's not the way they do business in Ann Arbor - well, maybe some people should go back to Ann Arbor and leave our ballclub to us," he added in pointed reference to the Washtenaw Countybased Monaghan.

AFTER HIS speech, McNamara said he had no immediate preference between the announced bid by Lansing businessman Joel Ferguson and the unconfirmed but widely speculated bid by Edsel Ford, son of the late Henry Ford II.

In another, perhaps more eyeopening post-address statement, McNamara said there would be "no more pussyfooting around Coleman Young" when it comes to redeveloping the city.

McNamara announced plans for a four-step program to revitalize decaying neighborhoods.

The program, called Toolbox, brings together developers, architects and bankers to guide new development. It also establishes a non-profit housing corporation, a loan and computer bank program for small and minority businesses, and a proposed community bank. McNamara said community growth and redevelopment will be his administration's top goal for

Suburban transit service faces shutdown in March

By Wayne Peal staff writer

For the folks at the Westland park-and-ride, the Schoolcraft Road bus stop and dozens of other SMART pickup points, the news looks bad.

Major suburban transit service is expected to shut down next month. There is little hope for a last-minute rescue, either, despite several options.

"There's no question in my mind the major lines will shut down," said deputy Wayne County executive Michael Duggan, a member of the SMART board of directors.

The financially plagued Suburban Mobility Authority for Regional Transportation seeks merger with the Detroit Department of Transportation and - possibly - a suburban transportation tax, to keep its buses rolling.

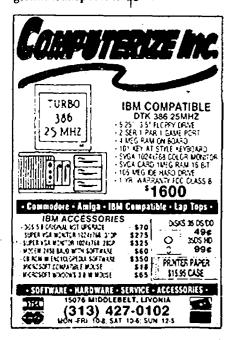

"We feel there's growing support for our plans," SMART chairman Matt Wirgau said.

But SMART officials admit talks with Detroit haven't been friendly and a transit tax vote would most probably have to wait until 1993 at the earliest.

That means SMART's major trunk line routes - the routes that each day take thousands of western Wayne and Oakland County residents to downtown jobs - would be abandoned.

IT ISN'T as if SMART lacks other options.

Recent audits indicate the SMART employee pension fund is overfunded by some $10 million - a sign, some say, of just how battly managed regional transportation has been.

n Daily 9:30 - 6, Thors, & Fri (i) 9, Sal. (i) 15:30

"Our auditors tell us that we have $10 million more than we need to fund everyone's retirement if everybody retired right now," said Wir-gau, a SMART director since 1990. SMART's financial problems are caused by declining state and federal revenue — including state gas tax money — and dwindling ridership, Wirgau said.

The Troy resident is spearheading the effort to save the suburban bus service, in addition to maintaining his management position with an area investment firm.

Though it would take approval from the state Legislature, tapping the pension fund would more than cancel SMART's announced $6.7 million deficit.

The original $7.7 million deficit projection has been revised to exclude depreciation on SMART buses, Wirgau said.

Further revenue could come from changes in SMART's vehicle liability and worker's compensation reserves. "We're talking with the Michigan Department of Transportation about the vehicle liability and worker's compensation funds," Wirgau said. But SMART officials have thus far avoided short term solutions in favor of a long term approach. Metro Detroit is virtually alone among major metropolitan areas in having separate city/suburban transit systems and in lacking a transportation tax.

Despite resistance from Detroit and potential resistance from area voters, SMART is sticking to its strategy of merger and dedicated revenue.

SMART officials are saying little for the record about the nature of their negotiations with Detroit.

"I AM disappointed we aren't further along," is how Wirgau put it.

Privately, officials are worrled Detroit Mayor Coleman Young would just as soon seen SMART fold to secure a greater share of shrinking state and federal revenue for the city's own financially troubled sys-

It's a sign of the relations between the two that SMART won't shut down completely, forfeiting all state lines are halted,

Specialized dial-a-ride services will continue no matter what, Wir-

Detroit officials, however, say they likely wouldn't gain the additional state and federal money even if it were available.

"I'm not sure the other members of SMART would let us have it," mayoral spokesman Robert Berg said, noting outside revenue is split 65/35 between SMART and DDOT under a 1987 agreement.

A unified transit system would be viable, Berg said, but only if suburbanites were willing to pay for it.

"Without a revenue source, we'd be subsidizing suburban riders," he Detroit primarily finances DDOT through its general operating budget. SMART is financed through state and federal grants and, to a lesser degree, rider fares.

While SMART seeks a future with DDOT, other area transportation agencies seek to assure a future apart from SMART.

Nankin Transit, serving an estimated 8,000 people a month in Can-leaders, however, have been mostly ton, Garden City, Inkster, Wayne and silent. Westland, seeks to be financed independently.

"WE'RE TRYING to amend state law so that we can get money directly from the Michigan Department of tax vote probably wouldn't occur. Transportation," director Charles Hunter said.

Redford has just begun reaping the benefits of a .125-mill township and federal money, even if the main tax for seniors citizen transporta-

"(Loss of SMART lines) wouldn't mean much because we'don't transfer too many people to the trunk routes," Redford community development director Sidney Blitz said.

SMART's problems aren't new. A decade ago, the Southeast Michigan Transportation Authority -SMART's predecessor - began cutting services in the face of a projected $4.2 million deficit. Total suburban fransportation services have been cut by an estimated 40 percent, with commuter rail service abandoned entirely.

Ridership, once more than 12 million under SEMTA, has dwindled to 35,000 while the SMART operating budget has risen to $52 million.

"For that kind of money you can buy everyone a pretty good used car," Duggan said. "We badly need reorganization to get our finances in order.'

Support is growing for SMART's own survival plan, at least among riders who have bombarded area newspapers with letters of support.

Area elected officials and business

SMART has no taxing authority of its own and officials have yet to call for suburban communities to raise taxes on their own.

Wirgau, though, said a regional Voters would most likely decide the issue community-by-community. Still, their message is clear.

"If people want mass transit in the future, they're going to have to come ... up with a way to pay for it now," ... Wirgau said.

MEA seeks 5 percent increase in state aid to public schools

Michigan's largest teachers union called on the state to increase school aid 5 percent.

"If the state does not recognize its responsibility, school districts will be facing dramatic reductions in staff and programs," said Julius Maddox, president of the Michigan Education Association.

"Schools may also be forced to seek increases in millages on a massive, statewide scale at a time when many school districts have already reached the 50-mill limit. The time to act is now.

"A 5-percent Increase is essential not just in the K-12 education budget, but the higher education budget as well. Without it, community colleges may turn to raising millages and tultion, and universities will have to raise tuition

"Our school districts are poised on the brink of financial disaster. and the Legislature and governor seem unable to advance a workable solution," Maddox told more than 1,000 of the association's 120,000 members at a statewide conference last weekend.

MEA ALSO called on the Legis-'lature to provide $25 per student : to fully implement Public Act 25

. The law requires districts to provide a broad curriculum, develop and implement improvement plans at the school building level, move toward building-by-building local accreditation, and provide all residents of the district with an annual report on the district's performance.

Maddox criticized Gov. John Engler's plan to shift all categorical aid into the general school aid fund.

"The state cannot shift major funding commitments such as special education, social security, retirement and transportation from categorical aid into the general state aid budget and make it appear as though more money is being directed toward education. Instead the state should eliminate the ever-growing list of grants to district that are nothing more than state mandates," he said.

"THE STATE must stop micromanaging schools and allow districts greater local control of state education dollars, Schools of choice, university schools and the state-endorsed diploma program are good examples of micro-management.

"At the same time, Michigan cannot afford to tear down its best schools by taking two bites out of out-of-formula school districts. Currently the state forces these districts to comply with tax-based sharing as well as recaptures revenues to put into the state education

MEA estimated that recapture costs affected school districts more than $60 million annually.

Ficano says 'politics' behind deputies' safety complaints

By Wayne Peal staff writer

There is a growing rift between Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano and the county deputies union.

But while union leaders call it at dispute over officer safety, Ficano said it has more to do with 1992 being an election year.

Union leaders say they're upset Ficano seeks to fill a staff vacancy instead of securing safety equipment for jail deputies.

The sheriff seeks to fill the vacant $65,000-a-year chief of staff position. Deputies, however, say the sheriff should instead secure walkie talkles for deputies at the old county jail in Estimated price tag for the safety equipment: $60,000, according to Don Cox, president of Wayne County Sheriff's Local 502.

eritt's Local 502.
"It's the choice between making an appointment as a politician or a decision as a law enforcement officer," Cox said. "And the sheriff is a politician."

It's politics all right, Ficano sald, adding the dispute has more to do with the 1992 sheriff's election than. anything else.

"This is just election year politics," Ficano said. Equipment has already been ordered, said Ficano, who added the radios were expected this month. .

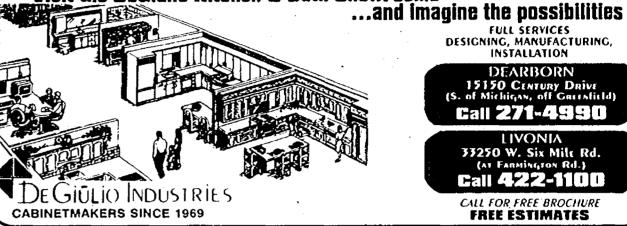

The chief of staff's position, the sheriff said, is his to fill.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara earlier vetoed funds for the sheriff's chief of staff. But county commissioners overrode McNamara's veto.

Ficano has yet to name a new chief of staff. Dale Jurcisin, Ficano's previous chief of staff and a Livonia councilman, is now a member of. McNamara's staff.

Under the county budget, the sheriff has the right to appoint a chief of staff, undersheriff and press secretary. All three positions would be filled with appointment of a new chief of staff.

High hopes: Slow start can't hold woman back

By Leonard Poger

editor

Annette Hedges doesn't have any sympathy for those who can't find a job or upgrade their employment trict woman said: "It's out there if you want it. People should get off their duff and quit erying." She emphatically supports stands taken by of Gov. John Engler. Hedges, 32, said she knows what it's like to be working in low-wage jobs with few skills.

"I struggled to get by and others can too," said Hedges.

The woman also revealed last week that she was hired as the new State-Wayne Theatre manager in downtown Wayne from a field of 37 applicants. The theater was privately owned for many years before it was closed.

The city of Wayne last year bought the theater, hired a management company and specialized in popular family films.

In recalling her early years, Hedges said she dropped out of junfor high school in the eighth grade people

The Wayne-Westland school dis- because "I wanted to be cool, I wanted to be a 'wannabe' and do what I wanted to do - I knew everything." As a teenager she worked at several waitressing jobs.

But she had another problem which led to her dropping out of school.

HEDGES COULDN'T read because of a dyslexia problem which wasn't diagnosed until nearly five years ago when she tried to take a Schoolcraft College entrance exam.

Dyslexia has been described for years by educators as a medical condition unrelated to intelligence in which persons see some letters in reverse order, such as reading "saw"

Attending the Detroit Public Schools before she dropped out, Hedges said:

"I thought I was stupid and didn't tell my teachers. With my pride, I let

Despite her lack of reading abilities, Hedges managed to get around written materials by having someone read them to her or merely translating the pictures on them.

For example, she got around an application into the Army Reserves in 1980 by observing a pattern of the written questions. She entered the reserves and stayed for 14 years before having her daughter, Mary

Hedges has a vivid memory of the day in June 1990, when she decided to do more than just a community college class and do more to complete her formal education and reenter the work world.

"One day, my daughter had only a cookie to eat all day," Hedges recalled. "There was nothing else to eat and she was too proud to ask for help.

"I then promised my daughter that 'you'll eat enough' and I decided to complete my education so that she'll always have enough to eat." "That's been my motivation"

After Hedges learned of her dyslexia she was referred to an adult education reading program in the Plymouth-Canton School District, where she lived at the time.

SHE WAS tested by school personnel and the dyslexia condition was confirmed as the problem behind her reading difficulties.

"The best way to get beyond dyslexia is to read. If I don't understand it (the passage) at first, then repeat it," Hedges was told.

During a swimming class taken to help her recover from a job-related back injury, a woman mentioned English playwright and poet William Shakespeare. Hedges had never heard of him.

She then went to the Schoolcraft' College library to obtain a Shakespeare biography.

But she had problems because she didn't know how to read library catalogue cards or dictionaries. Hedges had trouble finding the books on Shakespeare.

At the time, she had never read a book, Hedges admitted.

Another problem she encountered was that she failed to read an "exit" sign over a door and went through the wrong door. She also couldn't tell a sentence from a paragraph. But those problems didn't discourage her from enrolling at Schoolcraft. In fact, she signed up for a creative writing class.

"If William Shakespeare can do it, I can too," Hedges said.

Despite her slow start in the English language, the woman received an A in the class.

HEDGES HAS come a long way since taking her first reading courses five years ago.

Besides taking office information systems classes at Schoolcraft, she later enrolled at Dorsey Business. Schools in Wayne to become an executive secretary in the near future. She plans to graduate the Dorsey school next month.

During her training, she has completed courses in shorthand, dictation, typing, word processing and accounting.

Not short of ambition and professional hopes, Hedges said her next goal is to become a robotics engineer in 10 years.

Hedges doesn't gripe about supporting a family on a modest income, which consists of a Social Security disability payment following her former husband being unable to work after contacting Agent Orange while serving in the military during the Vietnam War.

There is a little money, "just to get by," generated by odd jobs.

Annette Hedges makes a comeback

In lieu of income. Hedges exchanges volunteer services, such as setting up a computerized data base for St. Mary Catholic Church and doing work for the Salvation Army's social service center in Westland.

Parents question busing at schools-of-choice hearing

By Marie Chestney staff writer

Whatever schools-of-choice plan is crafted by the Livonia school district, it must be applied fairly and equally to all students, school officials told about 35 residents who attended a public hearing last week on the state-mandated program.

The district, like all Michigan districts, has until April 15 to adopt a schools-of-choice program that will go into effect in September. The district includes the northern section of Westland. Transportation was a major topic at the hearing, with parents wanting to know if students now being transported by parents to a school outside their neighborhood will be bused starting in September.

UNDER SCHOOLS of choice, local parents will be able to send their children to any school - elementary, middle or high - in the district if room is available, with the district providing the transportation.

Up to now parents who have sent children to another school provided their own transportation.

"We can't choose to transport some kids unless we extend this to all," said Ken Watson, director of secondary education. "The state doesn't tell you what to do, only to apply it fairly."

At the public hearing, residents posed questions to the 21 members of a committee who will now set the rules for the district's plan.

The committee next meets at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 25, at the former Perrinville School, on Ann Arbor Trail at Farmington Road, Westland.

Another resident asked who will pay transportation costs for transfer students.

"Residents," Watson said. "The state may give us funds and then take money out of another area. They just move money around. But we don't expect relief."

Whether transportation costs lead to an increase in taxes. Watson said, depends on what plan the committee puts together.

THE STATE mandate for schools of choice comes on the heels of other state economic moves that could prove to be financially disastrous to the district, said Geraldine Joyner, a former Livonia school board mem-

"Add the freeze on property tax assessments, plus local districts having the responsibility for Social Security and pension dollars, coupled with the district's responsibility to provide many dollars to train the multitude of individuals to implement the 21st Century technology, and schools of choice - caution has to be the word,"

"There is no pot of gold at the end of the rainbow for (the district) . . . There is no rainbow out there waiting to be found.

"Transportation for schools of choice could well break the bank."

The district now pays to transport students attending magnet programs. Kent Gage, director of elementary education, said about 200 elementary students are now going to schools other than their neighborhood school. Watson said about 150 middle and high school students are transfer students.

OTHER PARENTS asked the committee to come up with an across-the-board definition of the phrase, "if room is available."

"Does it mean the maximum capacity of a school?" asked Gerald Percheta, "Who determines this? Is it the same for all schools?"

If the intent of schools of choice is to make schools competitive, and thus better, another parent asked how parents can determine if one school is better than anoth-

This can be done through state test scores, school annual reports and sessions with school counselors, Watson said.

Most transfers, he added, are made not to attend a better school but for other reasons, such as to be near friends, family problems or to attend a magnet pro-

Program will help foreign students pursue degrees

Madonna University has instituted a five-year degree program incorporating English as a Second Language (ESL) courses that many international students need to pursue an academic career in the United States.

Individuals with a Test of English, as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) score of 450-539 and Test of Written English (TWE) score of 3 may now be granted conditional admission to the university. Based on these scores and institutional evaluation, students will then be placed in beginning, intermediate or advanced levels of ESL courses.

"Our program is geared toward helping foreign students at all levels. of English proficiency," said Monika Mullins, director of ESL at Madonna. "We are currently working with students from several foreign countries and will continue to expand as Madonna gets more and more involved in overseas recruiting. We also encourage international students from the local community to consider our program.'

Many ESL courses can be taken concurrently with academic courses in the students' program of study. Classes at the highest (400) level may apply toward the baccalaureate degree requirements (up to 9 ESL credit hours may count toward the student's elective area). Grades in all ESL courses are included in the compilation of the student's grade point average.

Students with TOEFL scores of 540 and above and TWE scores of 4 may be admitted to Madonna without English as a Second Language requirements, although they may elect to take courses to sharpen their. skills. The university also provides a number of support services for students in academic and non-academic areas. These include the Center for Personalized Study, Educational Support Service, the Office of Multicultural Affairs, the Office of Student Life and the Center For International Studies.

Engler defends mental health plan

By Tim Richard staff writer

Michigan will continue to shift mental health dollars from big institutions to community health programs in Gov. John Engler's 1993 budget. "The day of the big institution is past," the governor said in a recent interview.

His mental health proposal for the year starting Oct. 1 is $959 million - up $49 million. Community boards would get $141 million more for a total of $465 million under his proposal. "Again, this is not a policy that was decided by my administration but was one we found half-done."

Engler said. "We were trying to be all things to everyone without the money. It has become a major jobs issue, obviously, with the employees at state institutions. But we're trying to do this, as we did with education, from the interest of the person needing care." His mental health chief, Jim Haveman, said he would cut administrative costs $1.2 million to put more money into direct care.

The speed with which Engler and Haveman have shifted from institutions to community-based care has drawn more criticism than anything except perhaps his general assistance welfare cuts.

Here are the questions and an-

Q. Any plans to close Northville State Hospital?

. A. No. Q. What about Clinton Valley Center in Pontiac?

A. Ah (pause), the real challenge right now is to see Oakland and Macomb counties decide what type of mental health providers they're going to be. Macomb is moving along; Oakland is the remaining county where they're not (pause) in the same status as other counties.

We have a commitment to trying to help people who are developmentally disabled or people with mental illness either remain in the community or return to the community as quickly as they can after treatment.

Community-based models, I think, are in the interest of the person needing care and the interest of the family. The day of big state institutions is really past.

Q. Raiph Slovenko, professor of 'law and psychiatry at Wayne State ... University, calls community mental health "a dismal failure" and says the fallacy is that there's "a 'community' where the patients could return" and that "treatment is undefined." Comment?.

A. I think Mr. Slovenko is also one of the advocates of the current mental health code, which makes involuntary commitment of an individual virtually impossible. So the same person that is required by law to be put on the street is the person we're trying to provide networks to deal with.

Nobody's come forward to advocate a change in the mental health code like the old days where someone could be picked up and put in an institution for months and

Absent that change, the state is incapable of holding them. This, is the problem that has perplexed law enforcement agencies for some time. What do you do if you find someone on the street having. an episode? Where do you go? The fact is they can't be held. They receive overnight treatment' and decide they don't wish to stay.

I think the mental health code might be changed. We might have a different approach; some of the advocates on the legal side have to be held accountable in part to address the solution. I don't think community or institutional care can make a difference to the person he's citing because neither can

Exclusivity

Break down walls that divide

HE LIVONIA Board of Education, which represents the northern section of Westland, is having a committee review the controversial varsity jacket issue - a dispute which really could have been decided without further study.

At issue is whether all high school students can purchase and wear varsity jackets and adorn those jackets with achievement letters. The answer should be an emphatic YES.

Normally, there would be no debate, but this issue is heavily clouded by tradition which is blinding normally reasonable people.

AT TWO OF our high schools, Churchill, which serves the northwest corner of Westland, and Stevenson, the building policy is that only athletes can wear varsity jackets, with varsity let-ters sewn on, in school. Non-athletic achievers may not wear varsity jackets with letters in school.

This is bad enough but to make matters worse, non-athletic students are discouraged from buying varsity jackets.

Those students spirited enough to buy a school jacket are asked not to sew on achievement letters. Those spirited enough to buy school jackets and proud enough to sew on achievement letters may wear the jacket outside the building, but not in school. In other words, students, if they insist, may possess school spirit and be proud of academic achievement but only outside of the school building. What nonsense!

Any student who belongs to a school organization which offers achievement letters should be able to wear varsity jackets with letters in or out of school. Students should be encouraged to be proud of their achievements.

At Stevenson last year and Churchill this year. music students have asked for a change and were turned down. So in these two cases, a deliberate policy decision was made to maintain the jock club mentality.

GIVEN THAT the Livonia school district puts such great emphasis on building self-esteem, it is almost incomprehensible how two high school administrations can stubbornly defend a practice which does nothing to build the self-esteem of large numbers of student achievers.

Students should be able to display their pride in academic achievement inside the building as well as outside of school.

In fact, to allow only athletes to wear achievement letters on school jackets tells others they are less important and has a negative impact on self-esteem. It also negates the achievements of many talented and skilled students who aren't athletes.

The notion that varsity jackets with letters should be worn only by athletes is a tradition imbedded in the 1950s. But if other traditions can be changed, surely we can rid our schools of this archaic practice.

Nearby districts allow band members and other student achievers to wear varsity jackets. At band competitions many students can be seen wearing their school's varsity jackets with band letters and medals. Livonia stands almost alone. We can take no pride in being unique in this area.

But maybe our high school principals don't realize how "unique" their schools are. While principals are often seen Friday nights at high school football games, we wonder how many times they have spent a Saturday morning at a band competition. Maybe they need to attend a band competition to see with their own eyes the practices of other districts. Principal attendance at an event also is an indication of importance and recognition that builds self-esteem.

The school board needs to put an end to this type of discrimination. The wrong messages being sent are obvious. In this era of goal-based curriculum and stratetic planning, it makes no sense for high schools to remain as local fiefdoms free to drift at the whims of three separate administrative staffs.

Let's not just say self-esteem is important; let's make it important.

In the matter of suburban potholes.....

Bipartisan cry to cut tax grows deafening

THAT STRANGE sound you have been hearing in the background for the past few weeks is nothing more than the spring rustle of the seasonal

Often seen at the very beginning of spring in election years, Panders cluster together in noisy flocks, usually in search of juicy clumps of voters. Their cry - loud, shrill and persistent - is the key to identification: "Cut Taxes! Cut Taxes!"

Of course, politicians have been pandering to voters ever since elections were invented. But when our Wall Street geniuses, ably assisted by the Reagan Administration, elevated personal greed into America's Top Value during the decade of the 1980s, the bipartisan squawk to cut taxes at all costs has become deafen-

IT'S NO surprise, therefore, to see Michigan versions of this instinct to lready solidly on the ballot for this fall.

The Democratic proposal exempts the first $30,000 in residential property value from school property taxation. As the candidates already are reminding us, this helps "ordinary folks in the middle class." It also would cost $750 million, to be paid for by an equal increase in business

Given the immediate recession and the longer term fear that the very basis of Michigan's economy is already solidly on the ballot for this fall.

It's no surprise to see

Michigan versions of this instinct to pander

in severe trouble, does it make any sense to saddle employers with yet another tax increase? I think not.

The Republican idea, cleverly dubbed "Cut and Cap" by Gov. John Engler, would cut all local school operating taxes by 30 percent and cap future assessment increases at or below the inflation rate.

This proposal will require more than $2 billion in reimbursement to local schools. This money must come from somewhere. Candidates in-

• State Police law enforcement and freeway patrols. Funds for state universities and local community colleges, resulting in sharp increases for tuition and

• Environmental protection. parks and other recreation resources.

 What's left of the mental health system.

The plan sounds like a political version of the old "bait and switch." They get you in the door by promising something worthwhile, but Philip what's really for sale is quite differ-

IN MY OPINION, both Democratic and Republican plans should be defeated this November. That done, however, the stubborn facts of the matter are these: Michigan ranks in the top 10 percent of the country in terms of property taxes. And of the $8 billion spent on public K-12 education in Michigan, $5.5 billion came from property taxes.

The evidence is clear. We in Michigan rely entirely too much on the property tax to pay for education.

And Michigan ranks in the bottom 40 percent of states in terms of total burden of other taxes combined, including sales and income tax.

That suggests the best strategy now — as it has been for the past 20 years before the seasonal Panders swooped in — is selectively to shift from over-reliance on the property tax toward increases in other, underutilized taxes.

Fuel tax

Metro area needs better roads

ICHIGAN ROADS once were the envy of visitors — well-planned, well-built and well-maintained.

And although our public transportation has lagged behind other major metropolitan areas, it existed.

No more. Although our road system still goes to all the right places, and even includes the great, still-new I-696 freeway, our older roads are crumbling, from block-long subdivision streets to cross-town mile roads.

And suburban Detroit will become the nation's largest metro area without a regional public transportation system at the end of next month unless a $7.7 million shortfall is made up.

Not only 35,000 commuters who depend on the SMART suburban bus system, but area motorists, too, would benefit from the funds that an increase in the state fuel tax could provide. It's a hike that could revitalize chewed up roads and keep buses running.

But Gov. John Engler has a double standard when it comes to defending what he will and won't do. He doesn't mind cutting funds to assist poor people during hard times - to balance the budget. But as for raising the fuel tax to improve our roads and keep public transportation afloat, he calls into play the economy: ". . . with so many Michigan families already struggling to make ends meet - now is not the time.'

Pothole patching becomes a problem for motorists when there is more patchwork than roadway.

NOW IS EXACTLY the time.

Prices at the pump are low. The state's infrastructure is crumbling. And people without cars who are skilled or lucky enough to still have a job must have a way to get to work.

Roads are the responsibility of local municipalities, counties or the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Your life and the life of your car are at risk when you travel a crumbling road.

Neighborhood motorists do everything they can to avoid two-block-long Appleridge Trail in an otherwise well-endowed West Bloomfield subdivision. The 25-year-old road jiggles the underpinnings out of your car and has been the scene of walkers falling on the uneven pavement where the patchwork meets what is left of the

Affecting many more people, Plymouth Road through western Wayne County has been in need of major repair for the last 10-15 years — yet has received just minor patchwork. Local cities and villages are working around the elimination of federal revenue sharing, voluntary and required millage rollbacks and this year's assessment freeze.

LOCAL ROAD AGENCIES receive transportation funds at the same level as in 1989. Our cars are more fuel-efficient, so revenue drops even as traffic increases.

The Oakland County Road Commission reports 428 more miles of road than in 1984 when the last fuel tax hike was implemented. They are trying to maintain them with the same number of employees and trucks.

Although new federal money will be available for new construction, there must be a 20 percent local match. It is doubtful that Wayne and Oakland counties are going to have those kinds of matching funds.

People, even in a down economy, recognize real needs and are willing to pay for them. A statewide fuel tax hike is tolerable because it targets those who use the roads regardless of where they live. It is tolerable because riding on cared for roads decreases the wear and tear on cars. It is tolerable because even those who drive know how difficult getting around is for those who don't.

Political problems cited

To the editor:

In a recent Observer editorial dealing with the "unnecessary political squabble" between Westland Mayor Robert Thomas and Council President Pro-Tem Kenneth Mehl, you ask that both deal with the real problems facing our city and return to their own backyards.

It is possible that it has escaped the Observer, as so much seems to escape the Observer, that in both cases these men are playing in their own backyards. As elected officials, they have a responsibility to question one another, continuously.

The Observer seems to have the time to deal with petty issues, such as a failed introduction, but has no time to report on the erosion of over a $2.5 million budget surplus that our mayor has exhausted in his first two years in office. I consider this a newsworthy topic considering this represents monles spent over and above the taxes collected during those two years.

The Observer also has failed to do an in-depth story on the upcoming negotiations between Westland firefighters and the city that informed sources say will cost near $1 million to settle. The fact that the Thomas administration has dragged its feet on this issue will make it much more costly than it needed to be; but this also has found no copy in your paper.

Our mayor campaigned on a platform that would eliminate the cronyism in Westland City Hall. Yet this same man, now mayor, has placed his own cronies in every position that became available in these past two years.

Volunteers who have served this city under four mayoral administrations have been told they would not be reappointed to commissions that they helped build from the ground up. He has even gone as far as having the locks on the buildings, that these volunteers have met in for years, changed, making it necessary for the mayor to be asked personally for permission to gather.

In the opening minutes of the last council meeting Mayor Thomas was lambasted by several council people including our new Council President Charles Pickering for failing to attend a special Saturday meeting with a developer - a meeting that he was instrumental in organizing. Still, nothing was said about that in the Observer. The time has come for the Observer to ask why (Councilman) Mr. (Ken) Mehl is in disagreement with the administration frequently. It's time for the Observer to ask why several council people find themselves in disagreement with the mayor, frequently,

You have reported on the smoke long enough. Start reporting on the fire. On Jan. 16 a story appeared on the first and second pages on the Observer. It took seven columns for you to run a story that was headlined

"It's Snow Fun Digging Out Of The Worst Storm Since '78" - Seven columns! This is certainly gripping

I shall never forget the pride on our mayor's face so aptly reported in the Detroit Free Press, who ran a front page quarter page photograph of him standing in front of his "new perk," the tollet in the mayor's office. I wonder if anyone else found that an embarrassment as I did?

I think that in the last two years, much, the over $2 million budget surplus he was left with, the relationship the mayors office once had with council (many past mayors), the relationship the mayor's office once had with the Chamber of Commerce and the relationship the mayor's office once enjoyed with countless volunteer groups within our city, has gone right down that toilet.

If the Observer would get its head out of the "Political Cracker Barrel," you refer to as being the source of your information, maybe all of Westland's citizens would get the word. You could fill a good newspaper with what you fail to report.

Editor's note: The Observer has reported on the budget surplus on its Nov. 21, 1991, and Jan. 13, 1992, editions. The Saturday morning session referred to by Mr. Cox was the lead story on the Jan. 9 front page. The snow storm story he cited ran over four columns, not seven.

The last one-third takes the hit: Department of Natural Resources, which does environmental permitting as well as parks. Agriculture. which keeps the gasoline pumps honest. Commerce, which does financial regulation. Labor, in charge of workplace safety. State Police. Attorney General. Courts. Prisons.

Courts and prisons won't be cut much. The real squeeze is on all "other."

Engler rarely talks in detail about it. He uses abstractions like "downsizing" and "reducing the intervention and cost of government."

Phil Power, chairman of this company, suspects Engler has a Reaganesque hidden agenda about hacking that portion of state government. I worry about it, too, particularly since Engler has a "cut and cap" property tax plan that, if passed, will quickly bite $1 billion out of the general fund.

SO I PUT the question to Engler directly, starting with financial institutions.

Richard

"Well, we probably have one of the better Financial Institutions Bureau in the country," Engler sald. "It's in the hands of a civil servant today who is acting commissioner, and he doesn't want the job full time. But frankly I haven't seen anybody come along who I think can do a better job . . "We had fewer problems in Michigan than almost any state in the

Q. "If regulation is cut back, will that continue? I have a whole string of questions."

Engler: "It depends. I don't think we're doing enough in the Insurance Bureau. That's probably on your list. (It was.) We've inherited some very unpleasant situations when we took office. Mr. (David) Dykehouse has moved very promptly to deal with those. That's protection for the consumer. But if we don't do our job, it's going to be very costly to the con-

Q. "THE LIQUOR Control Commission says it lost inspectors. LCC says it has only 47 inspectors for 83 counties. Does that bother you?"

Engler: "It does, especially when their staff is 500. Everybody's out in the warehouses moving cases around, arranging for them to be shipped and running the stores.

"That's precisely my point. There's an inherent conflict. On one hand, we're running a business and trying to get the liquor out the door. On the other hand, we're regulating so that it isn't sold to minors, so we don't sell drinks to someone who's intoxicated so they don't go out and drive. We could accelerate the hearings when someone's charged with a

"I am not comfortable with the way it's run at present . . . I'd like to have them focus on regulation."

Q. "IF THAT whole regulatory section of the budget is squeezed, at some point do we run into the dangerthere'll be too little regulation?"

Engler: "We're not close to that" today. But certainly, conceptually, that's a concern. You don't want to reduce staff to where they can't carry out their responsibilities.

'What you want to do is encourage staff to become more interested in quality management. In other words, what can I do with my time that pays the most important dividend? How can I improve through use of modern information technology?

"We spend far too much time issuing a license and not enough checking up on the licensee after the fact. Some of it is administrative slowness in responding to new technology. We're encouraging employees to come to us with new ideas.

"A bright light in 1991 was the Civil Rights Department, which reduced staff slightly, the budget was smaller, but it resolved more cases because it changed the processes by which they made decisions.'

He cited a backlog in workers comp cases that has been wiped out, and a snafu in cosmetology licens-

In short, Engler thinks we're not close to danger in cutting the regulatory area. I say we're close.

And if his property tax cut passes or if the state loses another big lawsuit look for a state tax hike - a permanent one.

Don't mess with the press in court

Tom

IF YOU WANT to see how our Constitution works, don't look in the courtroom of Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Vera Massey Jones. You'll come away disappointed and maybe a little scared.

It was in Massey Jones' court last week that the legal process went haywire, having been short-circuited deliberately by this heretofore respected judge. Massey Jones is presiding over the trial of Detroiter Cassandra Rutherford, who is charged with assault in the beating of Joanne Was of Farmington Hills during the Freedom Festival fireworks display in June

Of course, most people know that this trial is more than an event where a judgment of a simple assault case will be made. Similiar cases are being heard in courtrooms across metropolitan Detroit without much attention being paid by the public.

But because of the principals in the Rutherford trial - or, more significantly, where they live and the different shade of their skins - this trial has drawn press attention on a large scale, and the public is reading and watching.

THE TRIAL is the stuff of which sensational journalism is made. It shapes up as a crumbling, lawless city versus the comparatively affluent and safe suburbs.

And with the addition of defense attorney Cornelius Pitts to this bubbling brew, it is unfortunately turning into an ugly black-versus-white issue with all the makings of a real racial monster.

Enter Judge Massey Jones, who claims she just wants to maintain courtroom decorum and ensure a fair trial for Cassandra Rutherford. In so doing, though, the good judge has effectively slammed the door on an open court, while trampling on some very basic Constitutional

Massey Jones, wielding a judge's iron fist, decreed Feb. 13 that reporters may not take notes in her courtroom. Note-taking would be too

Baer disruptive, she said. Most of the reporters left. She also ordered a deputy to confiscate the notes of another reporter whose only transgression apparently was looking at the jurors.

On and on the harassment went: She barred a radio reporter from audio taping from a cable TV monitor, had a deputy escort a newspaper's attorney from the courtroom when he attempted to speak and in general made life difficult for the journalists who attempted to cover the trial.

MASSEY JONES did wrong and the Michigan Court of Appeals would seem to back us on that statement. We're happy to note that the Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that note-taking must be allowed during room and read the U.S. Constitution, especially the part that guarantees a free press. It wouldn't hurt her to check out the Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable search and seizure.

Massey Jones has no business hatching plots that result in closing the peoples' courtroom to the peoples' representatives - the men and women of the press.

We're disappointed, though, that Massey Jones' ban on still photogra-

No, in our opinion, it isn't the journalists who need to be controlled in Massey Jones' courtroom. But defense attorney Cornelius Pitts, who impresses us as a bully in expensive suits, needs to be cut down a notch or

'A' as in AIDS is era's new scarlet letter

MODERN TECHNOLOGY makes going to the dentist these days much less painful. And fluoride treatment makes the chance of having an actual cavity more re-

So why was I still so nervous when I went to the dentist one afternoon earlier this week?

Because even though my Bloomfield Township dentist is a woman - as is the hygenist . . . and even though they wear rubber gloves

. . and even though I'm sure they change the little plastic cover on the saliva sucker and sterilize their instruments, still I worry about that cunning, sadistic HIV slipping into my body in some way and causing AIDS.

And there's reason enough for all of us to worry.

AIDS is no longer something out there that infects only males, homosexuals or intravenous drug AIDS is attacking your neighbors and mine.

LAST WEEK, we learned that Mary Fisher, daughter of Farmington Hills billionaire-philanthropist Max Fisher and his wife, Marjorle, tested HIV-positive. Mary Fisher grew up down the street from my family. She graduated from Kingswood School, now Kingswood Cranbrook, in Bloomfield Hills. She went to the University of Michigan.

Now an artist living in Boca Raton, Fla., she retains her suburban Detroit ties. Last May she had a one-person show of handmade paper at the Linda Hayman Gallery in Farmington Hills.

Fisher says she contracted the virus from her former husband, who at one time was an intravenous drug user. He, tóo, has tested HIV-positive. Luckily, the couple's son has apparently not been infectdent Lisa Shoemaker, who contracted the virus from her Florida, yes, dentist.

The same day Fisher made her situation public, vowing to work to defeat it and the stigma which surrounds people who have it, our Birmingham paper's lead story was about Bloomfield Township resi- pers.

Shoemaker's situation began in 1988 when she lived in Florida and had her dental work done by David Acer. Acer is the dentist who didn't tell anyone he had AIDS until shortly before his death. Shoemaker, back in Michigan, didn't see the notice he published in a local newspaper saying he was infected and urging his patients to seek test-

Shoemaker had already had an AIDS test, as a result of literature she had received from the government. When she tested positive, she thought it was as a result of relations with a former boyfriend. But he tested negative. It took a while to connect her infection with the dentist.

LIKE THE OTHER scourges of our time, alcoholism, drug abuse and cancer, few of us will escape from this life without the knowledge that a friend or family member has AIDS.

So we must learn all we can and make sure that this information is part of the new ABC's. Gone are the days when A stood for APPLE. It is now A for AIDS and AL-COHOLISM. B for BIRTH CON-TROL. C for COCAINE. D for DRUGS . . .

They are every bit as important to our children as the old ones. We may have to rewrite the "letter people's" script to get that point

Program helps prepare teachers for special students

Madonna University now offers a master of arts in teaching degree with a specialty in learning disabili-

The program, which leads to state endorsement in either elementary or secondary learning disabilities, also satisfies the 18-hour state continuing education requirement for newly certified teachers. It is geared toward helping teachers develop adwith students who experience signif-; icant learning problems and is designed for teachers who may or may not hold an undergraduate degree in though the endorsement is in a spesome other area of special education.

In Michigan, many children with special learning needs are integrated with children in regular classrooms. and teachers often require additional. preparation to work effectively with both populations.

"We developed courses that are very progressive in their approach vanced instructional skills to use to preparing teachers for present and future school-age populations," sald Judy Dunham, assistant professor of learning disabilities. "Alcific field of special education, the program prepares teachers to work with children who have all different kinds of learning problems.'

Teachers will study the field of learning disabilities from its inception to present-day practices and also learn about characteristics of children with learning disabilities.

They will also gain knowledge on how to evaluate and instruct children with mild to moderate learning problems. Courses within the degree cover a broad spectrum. Of special interest is one-on-one consultation and collaboration and a class on curriculum leadership.

"Based on the movement to educate all students in the regular classroom, both regular and special education teachers must demonstrate greater leadership skills, both instructionally and collaboratively," sald Dunham.

And while special education has traditionally followed more of a medical model in training teachers, Madonna's program ranks the importance of understanding the field of education and where special education fits in as equally important to gaining clinical skills.

"The label 'fearning disabled' is an umbrella term for a variety of academic, social/behavioral, neurological and language-related problems," Dunham said. "Teachers coming out of this program will be qualified to teach these children and will understand effective instructional strategies and how to use them in the classroom."

The program is structured for teachers to complete the course requirements on a part-time basis, and endorsement can be earned prior to finishing the degree. Teachers also will benefit from smaller class sizes and have the opportunity to take courses in late afternoon, evenings or weekends.

For, more information, contact Dunham at 591-5186 or graduate studles at 591-5049.

CC to honor Judge Ryan

U.S. Appeals Court Judge James Ryan will be honored with the Father Canning F. Harrison Outstanding Alumnus Award at Detroit Catholic Central High School's annual dinner on Thursday, March 26 in the Embassy Sultes Hotel on Seven Mile near I-275 in the Victor Corporate Park in Livonia. .

For reservations, contact the CC Alumni Office at 534-0550.

Ryan, is a 1950 graduate of CC. His sons, James and Daniel also graduated from the school which is on Breakfast Drive in Redford Township.

A Redford resident, Ryan was appointed by President Ronald Reagan to the federal appeals bench in 1985.

Ryan's judicial career began in 1963 as a justice of the peace for Redford Township. Three years later he became a circuit court judge. In 1975 he was appointed to the Michigan Supreme Court.

While on the state supreme court, Ryan established the Michigan Judicial Institute, the Continuing Judicial Education arm of the Michigan judiciary and served as its supervising justice. He also was the supervising justice for Wayne County Court Reorganization.

Prior to his judicial career, Ryan practiced law with Waldron, Brennan & Maher and with Ryan and Burress. He served on active duty in the U.S. Navy and presently holds the rank of captain in the naval reserve, serving as a military judge.

Ryan has been an adjunct professor at Thomas M. Cooley Law School and the University of Detroit Law School. He has served since 1970 as a member of the faculty of the National Judicial College and the American Academy of Judicial Education.

He has served as state director of community activities for the Knights of Columbus.

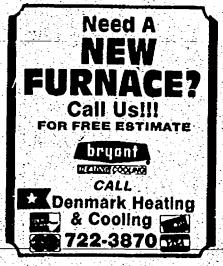

Ryan and his wife, Mary Elizabeth, are the parents of four grown children.

Pats gain invite to WLAA dance

By Brad Emons staff writer

Livonia Franklin earned itself an invitation to the party.

The Patriots secured a spot in the eight-team Western Lakes Activities Association playoffs with a 58-48 boys basketball win-Tuesday over city rival Stevenson.

Franklin is now 9-6 overall and 5-5 in the WLAA. The Patriots are the seventh seed heading into Friday's final conference matchup against top seed Plymouth Canton. (The first round of the WLAA playoffs begin Friday, Feb. 28.)

"One of our goals was to make the playoffs and be city champs, but we have other goals as well," Franklin coach Rod Hanna said. "We still have Canton to contend with on Friday. We still have to play hard and smart."

The host Patriots figured out a way to beat Stevenson after trailing by six at intermission (29-28). And to make matters worse, top scorer Keith Roberts was limited to only a single point.

But the 5-foot-9 senior pointguard, who found himself hemmed in by a box-and-one and diamond-andone defense, went on to score 17 second-half points, including 9-of-10 seven points and never were threatened.

by less than nine points in the second from the free throw line, finishing with a game-high 18 to help secure

"WE STILL HAVE quality players who can step forward and produce," Hanna said. "We changed our offensive attack in the second half and the kids came through."

Franklin outscored Stevenson 22-8, in the third quarter to take a 45-37 advantage.

Roberts' three-point play with 2:38 left in the period tied it at 37-all and Clemente Herrera came off the bench to nail a three-pointer to put the Patriots ahead for keeps, 40-37.

"It was a team effort," Hanna said. "A lot of kids contributed."

Jeff Hunt, a senior guard, came off the bench to added 15 points, while junior center Jason Facione contributed 12. Joe Jarvis, a senior forward, chipped in with eight points, six coming in the second half.

"Lately Facione has been playing better," the Franklin coach said. "One of the keys to his game is that he has to dominate inside defensive-

'He has the physical ability, but mentally he must do it."

Stevenson went cold from the field in the second half, shooting only 26.9 percent (7-of-26).

"WE HAD opportunities that we let get away," Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre said. "We had shots that didn't fall inside.

It was just another meet for Livonia Stevenson's Bryan Morrison, but the senior demonstrated he ranks among the state's best freestylers.

He figured in three firsts Saturday and was part of a second-place relay squad in the annual Michigan Interscholastic Swim Coaches Invitational at Eastern Michigan University. Representatives from 50 schools participated in the meet.

The 6-foot-3 Morrison swept the 200- and 500-yard freestyles with times of 1:44.44 and 4:46.61, respec-

Leading off with a 48.43 split, Morrison also teamed up with junior Gordy Gatewood, senior Aaron Rieder and junior Mike Gravina to win the 400 freestyle relay.

"It's a meet you go to every year, it's more fun than anything else," said Morrison, who carries a 3.3 grade-point average while entertaining offers from Wisconsin, Michigan and Dartmouth.

Morrison currently rates third in Class A in the 200 freestyle and fifth in the 500 freestyle. His best clockings occurred earlier this year in Indianapolis where he went 1:43.8 in the 200 free and 4:42.0 in the 500

"BRYAN IS a real worker, he's quiet, but leads by example," Stevenson coach Doug Buckler said. "We move him around in the freestyle events, but he can do them all."

Not bad for a guy who took up swimming only six years ago after having his fill of baseball and bas-yardage of several other performers at the MISCA meet.

"I've been training harder this year," said Morrison, who finished eighth in the 500 free and ninth in the 200 free at last year's state meet. "It started with weights and I've been doing more yardage."

Rieder added a third in the 200 individual medley and a seventh in the 100 backstroke, while Gatewood took a fourth in the 100 butterfly and fifth in the 200 IM.

Goecke finished second (1:00.33) behind Redford Catholic Central's Randy Teeters in the 100 breaststroke.

TEETERS joined forces with senior John Brogan, senior Devon Fekete and junior Chris Meck to win the 200 medley relay (1:29.96), edging Stevenson's foursome of Morrison, Gatewood, Goecke and Greg Priede (1:30.03).

CC also captured the 200 medley relay as sophomores James Leslie and Steve Reinke teamed up with Teeters and Brogan for a clocking of 1:39.6.

Leslie also added a second in the 100 backstroke and a fifth in the 200 freestyle.

Borgess' Respert fights back in wake of serious knee injury

CHAWN RESPERT is affectionately dubbed "Rusty" by his Michigan State basketball teammates.

"I don't know how it all evolved." MSU teammate Matt Steigenga said. "It may come from that little kid in one of those Chevy Chase 'Vacation' movies. I'm not sure how it got start-

Rusty is never the central figure in the cast, but always present and accounted for.

So it's not surprising that the redshirt freshman from Redford Bishop Borgess High was the first player to come to the defense of teammate Mark Montgomery, the senior pointguard, who was unceremonlously_ knocked down by University of Michigan's surly 6-foot-10 freshman center Juwan Howard on Saturday.

The game was over at that point, but Howard could not resist an extracurricular shove during the waning seconds of MSU's 70-59 win.

Brad Emons

"I told Juwan it was unnecessary and that he went about it the wrong way," said the 6-foot-3 Respert, who was assessed a technical and was showered with debris by the Crisler Arena crowd. "I know the guys on both teams really wanted to win, and they (Michigan) were frustrated."

RESPERT, despite playing 'v

three minutes three nights earlier against Wisconsin (attack of the flu virus), turned in another workman-

He finished with 15 points, 11 coming in the first half when MSU was struggling to get things going offen-

"We shot only 30 percent in the first half and were only down six," he said. "I was surprised we were that close after we shot so horrendously.

"But our game plan was to take their athleticism away. We felt we had the better basketball players and they had the better athletes. We wanted to make them play more of a half-court game."____

Respert's game is predicated on brains instead of brawn.

"While the other players try and impress at the summer camps he attended, Shawn would always give the ball away and set screens, he always played within himself," Borgess High coach Mike Fusco said. He never tried to do too much. He constantly moves without the ball and tries to make the others better.

"He's just so smart. He'd always read an opposing player's and team's weakness and work it into his own little system. But he always accepted my coaching and fit into our system. He never tried to do too much."

WINNING is obviously the bottom ine with Respert.

"The last time (an 89-79 overtime loss to U-M in East Lansing) I had a decent scoring night (26 points), but when you're not winning it doesn't mean as much," Respert said. "The team is always first, that's my attitude. You're with a team and playing within an organization."

Respert, however, is not adverse to protecting his turf, as evidenced by the chest-to-chest confrontation with Howard.

"I'm one of the guys from the city, too, just like Jalen (Rose) and (Chris)

Teeters a winner at meet

By Brad Emons staff writer

It was just another meet for Livonia Stevenson's Bryan Morrison, but the senior demonstrated he ranks among the state's best freestylers.

He figured in three firsts Saturday and was part of a second-place relay squad in the annual Michigan Interscholastic Swim Coaches Invitational at Eastern Michigan University. Representatives from 50 schools participated in the meet.

The 6-foot-3 Morrison swept the 200- and 500-. yard freestyles with times of 1:44.44 and 4:46.61, respectively.

Leading off with a 48.43 split, Morrison also teamed up with junior Gordy Gatewood, senior Aaron Rieder and junior Mike Gravina to win the 400 freestyle relay.

"It's a meet you go to every year, it's more fun than anything else," said Morrison, who carries a 3.3 grade-point average while entertaining offers from Wisconsin, Michigan and Dartmouth.

Morrison currently rates third in Class A in the swimming

200 freestyle and fifth in the 500 freestyle. His best clockings occurred earlier this year in Indianapolis where he went 1:43.8 in the 200 free and 4:42.0 in the 500 free.

"BRYAN IS a real worker, he's quiet, but leads by example," Stevenson coach Doug Buckler said. We move him around in the freestyle events, but he can do them all."

Not bad for a guy who took up swimming only six years ago after having his fill of baseball and basketball.

"I've been training harder this year," said Morrison, who finished eighth in the 500 free and ninth in the 200 free at last year's state meet. "It started with weights and I've been doing more yard-

The Spartans also got a lot of yardage of several other performers at the MISCA meet.

Rieder added a third in the 200 individual medley and a seventh in the 100 backstroke, while Gatewood took a fourth in the 100 butterfly and fifth in the 200 IM.

Goecke finished second (1:00.33) behind Redford Catholic Central's Randy Teeters in the 100 breaststroke.

TEETERS joined forces with senior John Brogan, senior Devon Fekete and junior Chris Meck to win the 200 medley relay (1:29.98), edging Stevenson's foursome of Morrison, Gatewood, Goecke and Greg Priede (1:30.03).

CC also captured the 200 medley relay as sophomores James Leslie and Steve Reinke teamed up with Teeters and Brogan for a clocking of 1:39.6. Leslie also added a second in the 100 backstroke and a fifth in the 200 freestyle.

Both Stevenson and CC are ranked among the top 10 teams in Class A.

St. Clement preys on Aggies

Redford St. Agatha became Centerline St. Clement's latest victim in Monday's Catholic League C-D Division volleyball playoffs.

St. Clement, in search of its fifth straight C-D playoff title, beat host St. Agatha, 15-7, 15-13, in the semifinal round. The Aggles, who won the A-West regular-season race, reached the semifinal with a 15-10, 15-9 win earlier in the evening over Grosse Pointe Star of the Sea.

"St. Clement is just one heck of a team," St. Agatha coach Bob Sowden said. "It's the best team we've faced, not weak in any position. This is the first time for my girls in the playoffs and in the first game (against St. Clement) they were so nervous I didn't think they'd ever get a serve over the net."

Junior outside hitter Laura Williams and senior setter Chaleen Marnon, each selected to the A-West and C-D Division first teams, led the Aggies. Williams had 14 kills and Marnon had 11 sets to Junior setter Amy Winn had eight set assists, while junior Shawn Weinberger, an A-West firstteam selection, played good defense, according to Sowden.

St. Agatha, 11-3 overall, is idle until March 7 when the Class C district begins. Sowden, who is trying to schedule non-league matches until that date, believes the Aggies have a chance of winning the district.

"If we play well, we stand as good a chance as anyone in our district," Sowden said.

REDFORD THURSTON won a Tri-River League match Monday and on Saturday the Eagles placed second in the 10-team Woodhaven In-

The Eagles moved to 20-6 overall and 12-0 in the Tri-River with a 15-5, 15-7 win Monday over host Taylor Truman. Sandy Musialowski and Daune Koester each had six service aces, while the Eagles also got fine play from sophomore outside hitters Christine Allen and Kristy Dennis, each called up from the junior varsity.

In Saturday's invitational, Thurston placed first in pool play with wins over Taylor Kennedy (15-10, 15-5), Wyandotte Roosevelt (15-4, 15-1), Riverview (15-10, 15-1) and Monroe Jefferson (15-12, 15-10). The Eagles then defeated Woodhaven, 13-15, 15-6, 15-12, in the semifinal before losing to Lincoln Park, 15-13, 6-15, 9-15, in the final.

Leading the way for the Eagles was Koester, who finished with 35 kills, 13 aces and five solo blocks. Patty Haney had 29 kills and six aces, while Jenn McEwen had 15 kills, six solo blocks and six aces and Jean Herron recorded 12 kills and 12 solo blocks.

Musialowski had 15 aces and Adrienne McDonald recorded seven kills.

Respert turning heads

"But some people have a tendency to take it personally and that's what happened at the end. In tight situations guys have a tendency to overreact, but the main thing is to have fun."

· MSU's leading scorer was somewhat of an unknown quantity coming out of Borgess.

During his senior year, Respert was a contender for Mr. Basketball, but a knee injury (ligament damage), suffered in a Catholic League semifinal playoff game, cut his season short by a month.

MSU TEAMMATE Anthony Miller went on to win the award, with Marc White of Battle Creek Central runner-up.

Respert finished a distant fourth. He was an early signee with the Spartans, inking a national letterof-intent in November of '89.

"He signed before anybody knew how good he was," said Fusco, who has produced several Division I players including Lewis Scott (Eastern Michigan), Joe Gregory (Bowling Green), Parish Hickman (MSU), Dwayne Kelley (U-D Mercy's top scorer) and DaJuan Smith (Eastern Kentucky).

MSU assistant Tom Izzo liked what he saw in Respert, who also drew interest from Detroit, Rice and Tulsa.

"Ben Braun (EMU's coach) was interested, but he wasn't quite sure," Fusco said. "We had no star system here. As good a player as he was, he's not what everyone was looking for.'

Fusco began to see positive signs during Respert's sophomore season when he began getting meaningful minutes in the Catholic League playoffs. He started coming into his own during the eight-game state tournament run by the Spartans, who reached the state Class B championship final, only to lose to Steigenga and Grand Rapids South Christian, 69-66.

"I KNEW HE'D be a very good player as a freshman," Fusco said. "But I didn't know he'd be as good as he is now. Both Joe Gregory and Lewis Scott were great individual players, but it was not fair to compare Shawn to those two at that stage."

Respert sat out his first year at MSU, rehabilitating his knee and practicing full-time.

He began this season with a cumbersome brace, but wears only a sleeve now.

"He lifted weights when he was here, but the re-hab time he spent since the injury has made him so much stronger," Fusco sald.

Brad Emons

Respert appears wirey on the outside, but underneath he is sturdy as Teflon.

"I've adjusted without the brace, and I've had no problems since," he

The adjustment to Big Ten basketball was made easier for Respert after spending a year practicing against the likes of Steve Smith (now with the NBA's Miami Heat). "The five freshman at Michigan are very good, but I feel I have more experience," Respert said. I've been surprised I've stepped up to the various situations, but I still have a long way to go."

RESPERT tries to pattern himself after Kendall Gill (Charlotte Hornets) and the Pistons' Joe Du-

'If you break them down they both play smart ball," Respert said. "Dumars rarely forces a shot. He's smart."

But Respert, MSU's leading scorer through 21 games, is beginning to feel like a marked man.

'There's not as many worries and expectations in high school," he said. "You just play the game in high school, but here there is a lot of pressure, good and bad. But overall I've had a great start to my collegiate career, and I'm getting the recognition I've worked hard

The victory over Michigan was made even more meaningful by the fact that his grandfather, Ben Byse, and his brother Mike, a senior player at Borgess, were both in the stands to see the game.

"He (Byse) has been a catalyst to my success," Respert said. "I always enjoy him coming to the game and seeing me play.

In the euphoric MSU locker room afterward, head coach Jud Heathcote could not resist some good-natured kidding as Respert headed to the shower.

"There goes Shawn the star," Heathcote bellowed, studying the stat sheet. "Shawn, do you think you'll ever shoot 50 percent again?"

ON THIS NIGHT Respert made an uncharacteristic 5-of-14 shots from the floor.

Dwindling hopes

Poor shooting wrecks Ocelots' chances

The euphoria from three-consecutive Eastern Conference victories - two coming at the expense of the first; and second-place teams 'evaporated in one frustrating, dismal defeat for Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team.

The Ocelots had beaten Alpena CC, St. Clair CC and Henry Ford CC and were making a run at the state tournament until Wednesday evening. Their game against Delta CC had major playoff implications, and when it was over SC's pathetic shooting had enabled the Pioneers to post a 70-53 win at SC, allowing them to solidify their post-season

Not that SC's hopes have completely disintegrated. Oakland CC, another hopeful fighting for the final playoff spots, beat Henry Ford CC Wednesday night 85-75. OCC is now 7-8 in the conference; Delta concluded its season at 7-9. SC is 6-9, with a game at Macomb CC at 7:30 p.m. Satur-

An Ocelot win over Macomb, combined with an OCC loss at Mott CC Saturday, would leave three teams tied at 7-9. Six teams qualify for the playoffs, with the top two getting byes. Henry Ford has already captured the top spot; Alpena CC, Highland Park CC and Macomb are also assured of berths.

Mott, OCC, Delta and SC will fill the final two positions.

THE STATE tournament begins Monday.

"This was an important one for us," said SC coach Dave Bogataj of the Delta loss. "If we'd won, it would have put us in the driver's seat (for the playoffs)."

But the Ocelots couldn't hit their target. After scoring the game's first four points, they fell behind 14-4 and never caught up. They trailed 34-24 explained it. And just as suddenly, a 17-point defiat the half and never got closer than 10 afterward. The reason: Not a single player made half his shots. Only Jarvis Murray reached double-figures in scoring (15 points), and he was 6-of-18 from the floor. Scott Meredith and Gamal Ahmed had eight points apiece on a combined 8-of-25 shooting.

For the game, SC made 22-of-72 from the field (30 percent).

Murray did have 12 rebounds, and Meredith grabbed 11. "We rebounded well," said Bogataj. We just didn't score. Puppies, from point-blank our shots just didn't go in. It was simple as "It was a terrible shooting night."

Delta, 14-14 overall, got 21 points from John Tyler, 17 from Melvin Young and 16 from John

SC slipped to 13-16 overall. The Ocelots must win at Macomb Saturday or forget their playoff hopes. They lost to the Monarchs at SC 85-81 Dec.

ON SATURDAY, the first 25 minutes of the game shaped up just the way one might have expected when the conference leader - Henry Ford CC - hosted a team dwelling in the bottom third of the standings - SC.

But then something happened. "All of a sudden, we started putting the ball in," was how Bogataj cit was history and SC had an 86-82 victory.

Surprising? Maybe it shouldn't be. SC has made ... a habit of beating the best. The Ocelots now own wins over first-place Henry Ford CC and secondplace Highland Park CC and Alpena CC (both 8-6).

SATURDAY'S OUTCOME was decided at the free-throw line, the Ocelots made theirs, while Henry Ford was off. SC'converted 32-of-38 from the line to 18-of-81 for the Hawks, with Meredith draining 15-of-16. He finished with 24 points and 11 rebounds.

Murray had 23 points and 12 boards, and Tony Rumple scored 13.

Henry Ford led 44-36 at the half and pushed that to 17 five minutes into the second.

. The Ocelot comeback started modestly; with 12 minutes left, they still trailed by 12. So Bogataj put them into a man-to-man, half-court press defense with instructions to work and rebound or take a seat on the bench.

They worked. With 1:40 left, the Ocelots tied the score, but the Hawks got the lead right back. Rumple followed by sinking a triple to put SC in front, and Henry Ford never recaptured the lead.

After a defensive stop, the Ocelots got a pair of free throws from Murray and, as Bogataj said, "From then on, it was ours to give away." SC built its lead up to seven at the line and, after Heath Myers banked in a triple to cut it to four with :21 left, Rumple drained two more free throws to ice

The effectiveness of their defense was apparent. The Hawks' leading scorer, Chad Simulay, was limited to five points. "We did the job on

SC women end losing skid

The streak is history.

And only one thing could have made Jack Grenan and everyone associated with Schoolcraft College's women's basketball team happier if it had just ended earlier. Eight games earlier.

But there's no use griping about that now. At least SC was able to reverse a most annoying trend: running out of gas down the stretch. The Lady Ocelots did just the opposite, stretching an eight-point lead to 14 in their 67-53 victory over Henry Ford CC Saturday at SC.

"We wanted to play smarter during the last part of the game," said Grenan, whose team improved to 13-14 overall, 3-10 in the Eastern Conference. Guilty of costly mistakes in the final minutes of several games during their eight-game losing skid, the Lady Ocelots this time had just five second-half turnovers.

"It was nice to see us play smart," said Grenan.

STILL, THE win did not come easily. SC led at the half, but by just 28-27. And three key Ocelots were in foul trouble: Jen Audet (four), Sis Guth and Nicole Dapprich (three

All three played smart enough to stay in the game in the second half. The Ocelots also got a boost from the bench. Laurie Murphy made her first start in place of Dana Hudson, who sat out the first half after showing up late for a practice. Murphy made

10 points and grabbing eight re-

Hudson got into the game in the second half and played with a vengeance — she finished with 12 points and seven rebounds.

Donna Galli continued to pour in the points (she leads the conference in scoring), getting 25. She also grabbed eight boards. But the rebounding wizard in this game was Guth, who was playing with an injured shoulder. It may have affected her scoring — she had eight points — but little else was hampered. Guth grabbed the most of the opportunity, scoring 21 rebounds, made six steals and blocked three shots.

> Henry Ford CC (also 3-10 in the conference) got 23 points from Shannon Anderson and 16 from Clarissa Jones. Lynn Koziara, who riddled the Ocelots for 25 points in the teams' first meeting, was limited to six this.

SC still has a chance to make the state playoffs, but it will depend on what happens when the rest of the conference teams conclude their schedules Saturday.

Sweetheart concert: Symphony plans romance

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

YOU enjoy the romantic music of Tchaikovsky and Prokofiev, the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra presents an evening just for you.

A sweetheart concert programmed by the PSO with Russell Reed conducting features two compositions inspired by Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," and a Copland clarinet concerto 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 21, at Plymouth Salem High School Auditorium, 46181 Joy Road, Canton.

ANN ARBOR clarinetist, John Mohler, a member of the Plymouth Symphony since 1962, is guest soloist for Aaron Copland's "Concerto For Clarinet And String Orchestra.'

"The music is so delightful, a mix of the romantic and a concerto, Copland wrote for Benny Goodman," said Linda Alvarado, publicity chair for the Plymouth Symphony Society.

.Over the years Shakespeare's play, a tragedy about two star-crossed lovers, prompted composers to write more than 10 operas and many symphonic works, songs and ballets, among them Leonard Bernstein's, "West Side Story."

The orchestra begins the evening with modern Russian composer, Serge Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet Suite No. 2."

"The Prokofiev, critics acclaimed this one of the best ballets," Alvarado said.

Prokofiev composed the ballet scores, two orchestral suites and a piano version in 1935, however, it was through his orchestral suites that the three act ballet became as classic as Tchaikovsky's, "The Nutcracker," "Swan Lake," and "The Sleeping Beauty."

COPLAND'S CLARINET concerto featuring Mohler brings hot jazz elements in the second selection, center stage Goodman commissioned Copland to create the concerto for him in 1948.

"Because he (Benny Goodman) was so good, he could play anything, and Copland made him play it," said John Mohler who is chairman of the Wind and Percussion Instruments Department at the University of Michigan School of Music in Ann Composed in two-movement form and connected by a cadenza for the clarinetist, the work is demanding on the soloist.

"The opening is a very slow introduction, and very lyrical. Then it goes into a cadenza where the clarinetist plays all but three of the next nine pages. It's a very demanding opening section,"

Mohler said. Copland's use of fast hot jazz elements in the second movement opened the way for American composers incorporating jazz into symphonic music, the last half of the 20th century.

"It's extremely rhythmical," Mohler said. "It's very exciting and it's a very popular concerto for that reason?

Mohler studied with Philadelphia orchestra clarinetist, Ralph McLane at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Later studies with William Stubbins and William Revelli at the University of Michigan earned him recognition as the first recipient of the Doctor of Musical Arts degree in Wind Instrument Performance.

"It became increasingly necessary for schools to hire in the direction of the performer," Mohler said. "Up until this time there were doctorate degrees in music history and music theory but not music performance.

Mohler joined the faculty at the University of Michigan in 1962, the same year he rejoined the Plymouth Symphony after a two year hiatus.

He also taught at Interlochen National Music Camp, Drake University, Brevard Music Center.

and Cumberland Forest Music Camp. . Mohler performed as guest soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Toledo Concert Band and as a recitalist at Ohio State University, Toledo University, Temple University, Macomb County Community College, University of North Carolina and International Clarinet Society conferences: He is past president of the Society.

Mohler is clarinetist with the University of Michigan Reed Trio formed 11/2 years ago, which performs for music students at local schools such as Plymouth Salem High.

"John Mohler is an outstanding clarinetist," said Alvarado.

CONCLUDING THE program is Peter Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet Overture-Fantasy.' Tchaikovsky wrote the overture-fantasy, an independent concert piece, after French soprano Desiree Artot broke their engagement to marry a Spanish baritone.

The dramatic work ranges in content from sweeping, ascending and descending violin runs to agitation that builds tension and momentum until a dirge for the dead lovers, and chorale end the romantic era piece.

The music is outstanding. It will be refreshing to sit back and listen," Alvarado said.

PSO concert tickets for reserved seating are $11 ($10, seniors/college students and $5, K-12 students) at Beitner Jewelry, 904 W. Ann Arbor Trail and Evola Music Center, 215 Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth; Gitfiddler, 302 E. Main and Bookstall on the Main, 116 E. Main in Northville; and Dearborn Music Co., 42679 Ford Road in Canton. Tickets are also available at the box office 30 minutes before the performance.

Clarinetist John Mohler, a member of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra since 1962, will be guest soloist for Aaron Copland's "Concerto for Clarinet and String Orchestra'' when the symphony performs on Feb.

Strong acting, well timed humor in 'Sunshine Boys'

Performances of the Birmingham Theatre production of "The Sunshine Boys" continue through March 15. For ticket information call the box office at 644-3533 The Birmingham Theatre is at 211 S. Woodward in Birmingham.

Veering away from a fare of lightweight repertoire, the Birmingham Theatre has mounted a funny comedy with genuine depth and tender meaning.

Witty lines carry the show. This production of Neil Simon's hit "The Sunshine Boys" has the right combination of strong acting, well timed humor, and non-egotistic stage direction by George Rondo that lets the audience enjoy the play.

THIS 20-YEAR-OLD play, written long before Simon had captured any Tonys or other awards, is not about vaudeville or show business in New York City, although the story features a fictitious comedy team, Lewis and Clark, a name we suspect has been stolen from the explorers.

This is a kindly look at Americans growing older in a society that tries to revere them but the approaching senility makes benign their useful-

Heartbreaking? No. Allen Swift is funny as Willie Clark, a cantankerous old actor who delights in bugging people, being difficult to his own demise. Unhappy, he lives the broken dreams of his past, unwilling to give up the decadence into which those dreams have faded. On stage the entire 21/2 hours, Swift makes us like his Clark with all of his disagreeableness.

LIKE THE final scene in Dicken's "Great Expectations", Clark's nephew Ben Silverman, Ken Land, tries to break into Clark's faltering world. Every Wednesday he arrives with a copy of "Variety" and low sodium soups at the dirty one room "suite" where his uncle has lived for decades. A detailed set design by James Morgan captures the unrenovated look of New York's old hotels. This week, Ben has a golden opportunity for his Uncle Willie to appear on a Flip Wilson TV special if only he will agree to do the "Doctor will see you now" sketch with his partner of 43 years.

Ken Land's performance never descends to that of a saccharin pushover. Land is a Ben who realizes his uncle's condition and tries to help him. A talent agent himself, he really admires his crusty old Uncle Willie, who made six appearances on the Ed Sullivan show.

Through Clark's embittered opinion we gain a colored view of a seemingly uncaring partner Al Lewis, Michael Marcus. As the story unfolds, his kindness is more apparent than Clark will admit.

With Marcus portrays a sympathetic Lewis, suffering from a number of illnesses but readily admitting to his loneliness. He is willing to accept the CBS offer and a chance to regain the lost friendship of his partner. Costumer Patricia Adshead dresses him in a gentlemanly suit and top coat, Clark in old pajamas.

ON THE TV set, the pair do part of the vaudeville routine that made them famous, but Al Lewis squeezes his "t's", spitting in Willie's face and the old animosities surface.

Unlike the way the "The Gin Game" deals with old age friendships, this is a more hopeful look at the golden years.

Even robots can't escape auto company budget ax

A small plant near Saginaw, Mich., making driveshafts and transmission gears is on the lengthy list of GM's planned plant closings. It would have been just another nutsand-bolts casualty of the painful contraction GM is undergoing these days after the double whammy of declining market share and a deep recession, save for one oddity - this particular plant employs no people.

Well, not exactly nobody, But the Vanguard plant, dubbed 'the factory of the future' by the high-tech optimists that proposed it a decade or so ago, was designed to run more or less by itself, untended save for a couple of technicians with their feet up on their desks, with a corresponding savings on the electric bill, since you could switch the lights off on the shop floor and the robots wouldn't know the difference.

Actually, it took about 85 techniclaus to operate the place, and they never quite got to the point where they could do it in the dark. Nonetheless, it wasn't exactly a mad rush out of the parking lot at quitting time.

Robots, as everybody knows, were the employee of choice for most of the world's automakers, having developed a reputation of being hardworking, never complaining, and never asking for better health insurance. American robots are illiterate, of course, but then again, so are Japanese robots. Neither one has a problem with working hard on Monday.

auto talk Dan McCosh pink-slipping the ultimate work force? The "factory of the future" at Saginaw was all set to keep grinding out Saturn driveshafts and gears forever, with nary a thought of a pension, funded or otherwise.

Part of the problem, as it turned out, was all that automatic machinery made only a few specific parts.

HOW, THEN, could GM consider One was a driveshaft also made in other GM plants, where they still burped after lunch. The robots also made parts for Korean cars, which was where GM was making the Pontiac LeMans, having confused Korea with Japan, figuring nobody would notice the difference.

They really didn't need all that many Saturn driveshafts, and aside from the litter in the lunchroom, the manned plants were about as efficient. The Korean car company likewise turned out to be not such a hot idea, and GM decided to sell the whole place off, which meant there was no longer any need for those Korean transmission gears.

Now came the rub. While robots worked cheap, they cost a lot to buy. In fact, one robot starts out costingabout five years pay for the average auto worker, even when you leave the lights turned off. That means you only break even after five years which is when the human tends to get expensive because of things like babies, which drive health insurance through the roof, and are unheard of for robots, so far. Later, when the human-type worker is thinking of retiring and collecting a pension, the robot has a real edge.

The kicker, of course, is when nobody buys the stuff the robot is mak; ... ing. Being a robot, it keeps grinding them out, with or without customers, and the robot's owner keeps staring at that big payment book. Here is 🕄 where you could just send a humantype, worker home, and he could write letters to the President about, how to get the economy going again."

But none of this stuff was on anybody's mind in 1982 when the "factory of the future" was being planned to work with the lights out. New ... things are tough all over, and even the robots aren't safe anymore.

Insurance, savings deserve attention their debts are all carried at a relatively high interest rate. Their mortgage is at 10 percent, and all of their other loans charge a higher interest than that. Their only interest deduction is their mortgage loan.

The couple is considering refinancing their mortgage but are hesitant because of the possibility of a move in five years. Paul asks, "Does it make sense to refinance given the up-front costs?"

Given the current interest rates, they would likely recoup their costs within the next three to four years with current interest rates. In fact, by consolidating their other debts and borrowing additional money on the home mortgage to pay off their debts, they can substantially reduce the interest costs of those debts. The new interest rate would be lower, and the interest paid would be fully deductible, resulting in reduced in-

But if they roll these other loans into their mortgage, we would suggest that they take out a 15-year loan or else pay down a new 30-year mortgage loan more rapidly by making additional principal payments each month. Their total debt payments will still be substantially reduced. It will result in an ability to both increase their savings in their retirement plan and still have enough cash flow to buy items that are a high priority.

If Paul and Joan are serious about a move to a new home in five years or less, they might even consider an adjustable rate mortgage because current rates on these mortgages are even lower than on fixed rate mortgages. But if they might stay in their current home longer, a fixed rate would likely be the better choice.

The lack of wills or estate plan is troubling. But Paul said, "I am in the process of reading "Write Your Own Will," and I hope to write my own soon," While it is good for a consumer to have knowledge of the concerns to be reviewed when preparing an estate plan or will, we do not believe it is usually a good idea to write your. own will.

graphic wills, which are wills written by a person and signed by that person. Unfortunatley, tax and probate law can become complicated, and there is a strong likelihood that a will that is self-drafted will not take into consideration all of the concerns and possible pitfalls.

The goals of estate planning ought to be to simplify the process for family members who are still alive and minimize both state and federal taxes and probate costs. Some concerns that should be addressed in estate planning include:

• Appointment of guardians for minor children.

 Distribution of assets to surviving spouse and children.

• Protection of assets and distribution provisions of minor children. • Federal estate tax and Michigan inheritance tax consequences. • Probate avoidance techniques. These goals are more likely to be addressed and accomplished by working with an experienced profes-

Although $140,000 might initially sound like a lot of money to provide for a survivor, it represents less than four years of income. The survivor would have to consider a significantly reduced standard of living. In addition, money for the education of children might not be available.

Until their assets increase significantly, we would suggest that they each purchase an additional $250,000 term policy. As they are both healthy non-smokers, the total cost of such coverage for both policies should be $50-$70 monthly, which is a small price to pay for the peace of

Broker finds success working his life's plan

By Doug Funke staff writer

Plan your life, work your plan and financial success will follow.

That's the philosophy of Roy C. Belknap, a stockbroker/financial consultant for some 34 years and a recent inductee into Research Magazine Broker Hall of Fame.

The Bloomfield Township resident, who winters in Florida and spends most of the summer in Petoskey, was among the first group of seven brokers from around the country so honored by the publication geared to investment advisers.

"When I started in the business, I didn't think I really knew what a great business it was," Belknap said. "I didn't think I was a good salesman. It worked out very well.

"In our business, people recognize people who are working hard for them. You have to have knowledge. You have to work at it. You go through an apprenticeship and build clientele."

Today, Belknap spends most of his time managing portfolios for a core group of about 60 clients with assets of some $11 million. "What we wanted to do is manage peoples' money for a fee, not a commission," he said.

BELKNAP'S FIRM, Shearson Lehman Brothers, provides him with computer equipment and a toll-free telephone number so clients can reach him wherever he happens to be. He loves the set-up.

"It's a lifestyle that takes me away from the hustle and bustle of minutiae," Belknap said. "My job is to get ideas and talk to people. When you're in Detroit, the phone rings off the hook with problems. Now, people can call the (Southfield) office and my staff can deal with that stuff."

Beautiful surroundings don't dis-

A wise man once said, "Judge each day not by the harvest but by the seeds you plant."
This month's family, the O'Tooles of Farmington Hills, are interested in planting the seeds of good financial planning to multiply their short and long-term harvest.

Paul O Toole, 45, is an electronics technician; his wife Joan is a public schools elementary teacher. They each earn about $38,000 per year. They have a 3-year-old son and plan to have a second child within the next two years. Their long-term goals include simplifying their finan-cial lives, planning for their chil-dren's college education and preparing for their own comfortable retire-

Their near-term goals include purchasing a new automobile within the next six months and moving to a larger home in about five years.

The O'Tooles have a number of financial strengths to help them along the way, including two steady in-comes, ownership of their home, good auto, homeowners and medical insurance and a college savings established for their son through a Michigan Education Trust invest-

THE OTOOLES also have some financial weaknesses that they should be concerned about. First, they have little regular savings or investment. And their debt interest rates are high. Currently they have no wills or estate plan, and life ining on a monthly basis, and the simplest way to do this is payroll deduction plans available through their employers. Joan is interested in reducing taxes. She asks, "Does a tax-sheltered annuity available to educators further reduce taxes? If so, how does it work?"

The tax-sheltered annulty (TSA) does reduce taxes and is an excellent way to build retirement savings. Salary that is deferred under a TSA is not subject to current income taxation but is taxed only when withdrawn later.

In addition, the deferred funds are invested and the annual earnings in such funds build up tax deferred until withdrawn. Thus, more money can be saved on a pre-tax basis, and the funds can grow faster through compounding of larger amounts that haven't been subject to current tax.

AN EXAMPLE OF the power of such tax-deferred earnings is illustrated by the amount Joan accumulated through a TIAA savings plan while working as a college instructor for eight years. A percentage of her income was automatically put away for her retirement, and it is now by far the O'Tooles' single largest asset.

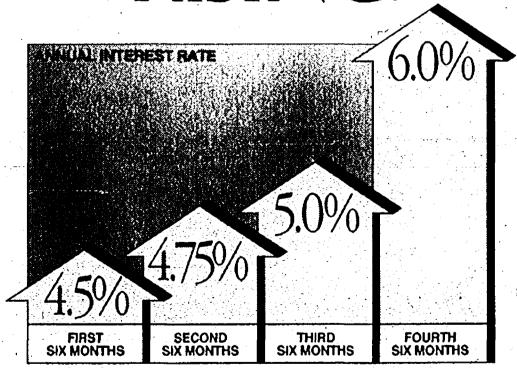

Paul can save in a similar manner through his 401(k) plan at work. We suggest the O'Tooles begin their retirement savings by allocating 4-5 percent of their income to these plans, and gradually raise that amount toward a target of 10 per-

Another reason to try to increase savings is to provide a nest egg in case of emergencies or unexpected events. And if Joan decides not to return to work immediately after the birth of a second child, savings will be available to help during that interim period.

In reviewing the O'Tooles' ex-penses, we find that the debt payments are not overwhelming, but

Culinary art meets comedy on cable TV

By Julie Brown staff writer

HILI JOE AND CHEF CURTIS certainly respect good food, but they don't fit into the mold of the snobby chef at an elite restaurant where entrees are priced at $100 not including the tip.

The men are the hosts and stars of "Microwave Today: The Cooking Show of Tomorrow," which is taped at the Omnicom Cablevision studio in Canton.

We really have a good time doing this," said Chef Curtis, also known as Curtis Rellinger, 34, of Westland. They first appeared on another Omnicom show a few years ago and things took off from there.

"We tried it on a pilot basis, and we've been at it for about three years now," he said.

They don't wear their chef hats and aprons all the time. Rellinger is a service engineer for Mitsubishi Electronics in Plymouth. He and his wife, Lynn, have two children ages 2 and 4 and another on the way.

CHILI JOE is Joe Wnuk, a 43year-old Westland resident who works in the Automotive Products Division of United Technologies in Dearborn. He and his wife, Gail, have four children ranging in age from 6 to 17,

You might expect he and Rellinger would do all the cooking for. their families, but in fact each one shares those duties with his wife.

Working in engineering and doing a TV cooking show might seem like an unusual combination, but Wnuk and Rellinger enloy it. They got their start about 12 years ago when they entered a chili cookoff in Saline.

"We started going every year to these cookoffs," Wnuk said. They won trophies for their chili as they traveled around the United States and Canada. They're the official chili team for WLLZ-FM radio, and cook big pots of chili for promotional events.

"Microwave Today" got its start because they wanted to teach people how to use a microwave oven. In many cases, owners only use their microwaves to heat things up, Rellinger said, and he and Wnuk wanted to encourage them to expand their horizons a bit.

The show's educational, but certainly not dull or preachy.

"It's so unusual," Wnuk said. "It's something you can really sit down and watch. We always put in the little goofy kind of odd things.

"I think people want to see fun things again on television." These can be tough times, Wnuk said, and viewers enjoy something that isn't full of doom and gloom.

FOR EACH show, the two try to come up with a theme. They work in jokes, comedy and references to current events and trends in food.

"That's what makes us successful so far," Wnuk said.

They come up with ideas for the show throughout the week, in some cases while they're driving to the studio to do the taping. Some of "Microwave Today" is scripted, but it has its spontaneous moments.

"If something fits in, it stays in," Wnuk said.

If something's too disastrous, however, the tape can be edited. One time, they created a peanut butter dip. As each took a bite, they realized the recipe hadn't worked too well.

"It set up like mortar in our mouths," Rellinger said. "We couldn't talk."

Things quickly got worse. The chefs couldn't breathe, although they were able to cough their way out of the crisis, and Omnicom staffers didn't have to call 911.

The two are hard-pressed to name their all-time favorite reclpes, although such favorites as Root Beer Pie, Mississippi Burning BBQ Sauce and Woodstock Apple Pie (made with Boone's Farm apple wine) come to mind. Some of the recipes wouldn't exactly be a dietitian's delight.

RELLINGER AND Wnuk try to provide a variety of recipes, but don't worry too much about nutritional fanatics. Those same people have been known to take their kids to fast-food restaurants when they're pressed for time, Wnuk said.

"People still have a choice." Neither has much formal training in culinary arts. As a teenager, Rellinger worked as a cook at a steakhouse in Livonia. He was the oldest of five children and started to cook when he was about 12 or so.

Rellinger's usually the straight man on the show who provides the technical information. Wnuk tends to be more outrageous.

During one show, Wnuk ate a heaping spoonful of horseradish right from the jar. Another time, he drank five quarts of prune juice.

One show featured an appearance by Mr. Potato Head who provided plenty of snide comments. Chili Joe and Chef Curtis eventually had to put the spunky spud in the microwave to slience him. They didn't get any complaints from the toy manufacturer or from trate potato rights activists. "We had no protesters, nobody showing up with signs," Rellinger

They tape a new show every week or two. "We've got almost 100 shows now," Wnuk said. The chefs have tested more than 400 recipes on "Microwave Today."

The show is taped at Omnicom's Canton studio and shown to Omnicom subscribers. It's also shown on local access on Continental Cablevision in Westland and other neigh-

Doctor scopes out cause of chronic sinus disease

By Sue Mason staff writer

Dr. Warren Brandes is a realist. He is, he says, the end of the road for most of his patients. He is the last physician who can help them with a problem endemic to southeast Michi-sometimes a sore throat due to postnasal drip. You even know the common name for it - "sinuses."

What you don't know is that new technology has opened the door to a more focused, less radical treatment of sinus disease, changes that have prompted Brandes to open the Michigan Sinus Institute in Farmington

"It used to be a shot-in-the-dark treatment of sinus disease, but with this new technology, we can focus on and address the causes," he said. "With this we're now able to treat people whose doctors would say they had nothing wrong because they couldn't see anything. They'd have to live with the pain and now they don't,"

The technology is the endoscope, the use of a 2.7-millimeter scope to view the interior of the osteomeatal complex, a small chamber between the eyes and nose through which the sinuses drain.

The fiberoptic scope was developed in Austria during the 1970s, but has only been used for the diagnosis and treatment of sinus disease in the United States during the last 3-4

BRANDES IS not the only physician in the metropolitan area to use the endscope in treatment of sinus disease, however, his sinus institute is the first of its kind in the state.

The osteomeatal complex measures 1-2 millimeters in diameter and can be easily blocked by polyps, swollen tissue or infection. By passing the scope through the nostril and into the chamber, physicians can "see" and determine the cause of the sinus disease.

It also can be used as part of the treatment, providing doctors with a way of seeing in area that was only accessible by "opening up the head." Brandes said.

"We can see what we're doing and we can see what areas are diseased," he explained. "We can be more sur-

Writer is cautious young woman

My girlfriend asked me to write you to see what you might think about my personality. I'm 33 years old and write with my right hand. Looking forward to your findings.

One of the first things I see in this handwriting is extremely large spaces between words and lines. My heart goes out to this writer because I feel certain she did not receive the amount of love and acceptance she needed in the formative period."

This is a cautious young woman. Objectivity has been developed at the expense of spontaneity. Possibly, she is more at ease with things that she can control than with people who are often unpredictable.

When she feels lonely or needs time to think through problems, she retreats to an ivory tower to look inward. All of this suggests that trust the precepts and mores taught to her by the mother figure. It is also quite possible she has been under the influence of a strong-willed personality. This has been counter productive to her creative development.

When learning new information, she processes it methodically and carefully. Once in possession of it, she retains it very well. I wonder if she is aware of the manual skill her handwriting suggests?

There is some optimism here and another sign suggesting she is willing to accept a little more responsibility. I see this as a positive force which should help to increase her

New tool 'cures' an old problem

IN DIAGNOSING the problem, Brandes focuses on the areas that can't be seen with the naked eye. By using the endoscope, X-rays and CAT scans of the sinuses, he is able to pinpoint problems and formulate treatment.

The treatment can involve medications and can sometimes be as easy as taking the patient off cigarettes: About 80 percent of his patients do well with medicinal therapy. They usually are on the medication 1-2 months.

But if the symptoms re-appear and are debilitating, surgery may be required. Enter the endoscope.

"Sinus surgery was blind surgi-cal procedure until the endoscope and CAT scan," Brandes said. "We knew the osteomeatal complex was there, but we were never actually able to see it unless you literally opened up the head. In a sense, with the scope, we have rediscovered the importance of it in chronic sinus disease.'

Working in small places is a specialty of Brandes, who specializes in eye, nose and throat and facial plastic surgery. His main interest has been in the "more delicate and intimate surgeries." He built his reputation on ear surgery and was one of the first physicians in the Detroit area to do cochlear im-

That interest, he said, was rebuilding ships in bottles.

BRANDES RECEIVED his bachelor's degree from the University of Houston and his medical degree, from the Kansas City College of Osteopathic Medicine and Surgery. He completed his residency in otolaryngology and maxillo-facial plastic surgery at Botsford General Hospital, where he has been on staff for 13 years.

He currently is in private practice at E.N.T. Surgical Associates, based in the Botsford Professional Building North, adjacent to the hospital. The Michigan Sinus Institute, of which he is founder and medical director, is also based.

The surgery is usually outpatient · and there is usually no pain associated with it. The most common side effect is stuffiness brought on by swelling in the treated area.

"Usually, my patients don't fill the prescriptions for pain pills that give them," he said. And generally, within a week of the surgery, they are usually feeling better, he added.

"This technology has made treatment of sinus disease easier for the patient and the physician," Brandes said. "It's also made itpossible to use the word cure."

THEY'VE HAD a variety of guests on the show. One of the most well-known was Fred Willard, who was Jorry Hubbard, Martin Mull's TV sidekick on "Fernwood Tonight" and "America Tonight." Willard came to the Detroit area to be on the show as part of his "Access America" program. A segment featuring Chili Joe and Chef Curtis was then shown on the national Ha!/Comedy Central cable channel.

Women guests have also appeared on "Microwave Today," including a descendant of Jack Daniels who traveled north from Tennessee to demonstrate bourbon recipes.

chili recipes along with recipes for side dishes such as cornbread.

"I always try to come up with these little marketing ideas," Wnuk said. They've created and distributed prototypes of a lunchbox featuring their picture. Chill Joe has bothose at his Westland home. That water has just the right rubberized flavor, although it might not appeal to yuppies more partial to Perrier.

VIEWER RESPONSE to the show has been positive. Wnuk and Rellinger sometimes go to Eastern Market in Detroit to shop and are often recognized.

In 1991, "Microwave Today" received the Philo T. Farnsworth Award from the National Federation of Local Cable Programmers, taking first place in the entertaintled water straight from the garden ment/comedy category for the Midwestern region. The two drove to Owensboro, Ky., fast October to attend the awards ceremony.

Their ultimate goal is to appear on NBC's "The Tonight Show" and on a national cable channel. For now, they're having fun.

We enjoy doing it. Hopefully, we'll be able to continue doing it for a few years," Rellinger said.

Keeping their religion

Saturday services can often be a blessing for busy worshipers

By Julie Brown staff writer

USINESSES OFTEN borrow good ideas from competitors. In the non-profit realm of religious institutions, it's not unheard of for one church to borrow another's idea.

That's the case with some Protestant congregations that offer a late afternoon or early evening service Saturdays. Catholic parishes have had late Saturday Masses for years and found those have been well-

St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton has a 5:30 p.m. Saturday service. That was started about a year ago to attempt to meet the needs of worshipers who work on Sundays, said the Rev. David Woodby, assistant pastor.

'So there was a need there. That was really the motivating reason be-

About 40 to 60 people attend the Saturday service. Those who work Sundays find it helpful, as do those with out-of-town family activities planned for Sunday.

"It's more of a mix," said Woodby, a Canton resident. "We have all ages, singles and retired people, families. It varies from week to week as well."

ST. MICHAEL Lutheran continues Sunday.'

to hold three Sunday services. The church has three full-time pastors and one part-time pastor, which helps in scheduling a Saturday service. The pastors take turns handling the Saturday duties.

Worshipers appreciate having the Saturday option.

"They really do," Woodby said. "I haven't had any negative reactions at all. People have been very grateful for that service."

The turnout on Saturday has consistently been good, he said, so it's likely the service will continue. Protestant churches offering a late Saturday service are in the minority, although Woodby and his colleagues have heard from a few leaders at other churches who'd like to follow their example.

"So it seems to be a growing thing," he said. The Saturday service at St. Michael Lutheran tends to be less formal than Sunday morning services.

A 5 p.m. Saturday service has been offered for some time now at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Livonia. That service was in place when the Rev. Robert Clapp, rector at St. Andrew's Episcopal, arrived about three years ago.

"It's working quite well for us," said Clapp, a Livonia resident. "Sometimes, people can't make it on

CHANGES IN family life mean that many are busier than ever, and the Saturday option is a help. The Saturday service at St. Andrew's Episcopal isn't necessarily more casual than others, and it includes a full sermon and Holy Eucharist included other than for special occa-

Attendance at the Saturday service has increased in the past year to year and a half, Clapp said.

"It's not quite as well-attended as our early Sunday service." Saturday attendance ranges from 15 to 50. He's heard positive comments from worshipers, including one woman who wasn't initially sold on the idea of Saturday worship.

"She thought it was a terrible idea" (communion). Music generally isn't * to start with. Now she's one of the regulars."

Weddings and other functions are scheduled around the Saturday service. Clapp is the only full-time pastor at the church, although he works with a deacon and a retired priest who assist with various duties.

St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton is among Protestant congregations that offer a regular Saturday worship service.

"It's extremely helpful to share portant thing is to have a Sabbath the load," Clapp said. "We all have our different strengths and we try to build on those."

A Saturday service isn't offered at Faith Community Moravian Church in Canton, but the Rev. William Myers, the pastor, doesn't have a problem with Saturday worship.

AT A WISCONSIN congregation where he previously served, a Thursday evening service was held. Myers is the only pastor at Faith Community Moravian Church, so it would be a bit difficult to add a weekly Saturday service.

Scheduling and staffing aren't really the problems, Myers said. His primary concern is getting enough people together so that music of the worship service wouldn't suffer.

"Music is the big one." Other aspects of worship could suffer as well. and Myers wouldn't want to hold a Saturday service that looked as if it belonged in someone's living room.

Myers recalled the answer Jesus gave to the strictly religious people of his time who asked about observance of the Sabbath (Mark 2:27). Jesus replied "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath."

"Christians of course always use Sunday because that's the day of the Resurrection," said Myers, a Canton problem with that," said Clapp of St. resident. He believes the most im-

If his congregation grows, it's likely a second Sunday service would be added to the current 10:30 a.m. schedule. That's more likely than adding an alternate day and time would be, he said,

He and members of his church haven't borrowed the Saturday service idea, but that doesn't mean they have nothing in common with their Catholic friends and neighbors,

Worshipers from Faith Community Church and Resurrection Catholic Church in Canton will hold a combined Ash Wednesday service the evening of March 4. Myers and the Rev. Richard Perfetto, pastor of Resurrection Church, will partici-

That's not the only thing the two congregations have in common. Resurrection, which doesn't yet have its own building, holds morning Masses Tuesdays and Fridays at Faith Community Church.

Do the Protestant clergymen worry that their Catholic counterparts will be upset about the borrowing of the Saturday service idea?

"I don't think they would have any Andrew's Episcopal Church.

Ignoring problems: It's no solution

In the ongoing dialogue with some of the leaders in Japan, we need to affirm that Americans, by and large, work hard. However, the emphasis is misplaced. We work hard producing. Often, we do not work hard evaluating.

Speaking for most of the institutions of which I am acquainted, we are too busy to evaluate. This is a major failure. In this regard, we have things to learn from the Japanese system. As much as we know about it, the Japanese manufacturers work hard at evaluation. Furthermore, the emphasis of this evaluation is from the bottom up.

How do we evaluate our society? Long ago, I heard that the best way to evaluate a society is by looking system, the prison system and the mental hospitals. This is evaluation from the bottom up.

Some would add that we should look at our health care system in this country. This is fine. There is a subtle difference in using this aspect of life for an evaluation of a society. Many of the people who are facing difficulty with adequate health care at this time have some political power.

Freedom is at stake when we fail to evaluate and address education, mental institutions and prisons. We can only go so far in ignoring these issues and still remain a land of the free and a land of the compassionate.

I hope that religious people will recognize that these are religious issues. I hope that we realize that the attempt to ignore such difficult problems in our society is simply deception. It is as though we are all dedicated to playing a huge game. The game is "If we don't talk about it, we won't have to deal with it.".

It is like an elephant in the living room. Don't anyone mention it. We will just have to do our best to ignore it even though this will demand all our resources, our freedom and possibly even our religion.

Let us evaluate our society. Let us begin doing this from the bottom up. This is what this nation was meant to be: for the people.

Church, school reach milestone

By Louise Okrutsky staff writer

St. Paul's Lutheran Church and school are celebrating 100 years of worship and education in Farmington Hills.

Unlike congregations that joined the exodus from the city to the suburbs in the last few decades. St. Paul's began in Farmington Hills.

"It should be noted this church and school have been in the same location for 100 years," said the Rev. Ralph Unger, pastor since 1978.

For many, the anniversary celebration will be a homecoming. Once a month through May, special church services will be addressed by St. Paul's former pastors and others.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church will observe its second centennial celebration with a worship service 11 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 23, with the Rev. Wayne Berkesch of St. Michael's Lutheran Church in Fort Wayne, Ind. Berkesch attended St. Paul's day school as a child and returned as its principal and organist.

FORMER ORGANISTS return to play St. Paul's pipe organ before each special service. After services, members can reminisce during a buffet dinner with teachers who worked in the school. Movies of the church and school groundbreaking and dedication, narrated by former pastor Walter Rutkowsky, will be

Rutkowsky, who led the congregation for 28 years, is scheduled to speak during an after-service dinner

The church began in May 1892 when 23 men organized the German Evangelical Lutheran St. Paul's Church of Clarenceville, Township Farmington. That summer, a 24-by-30 foot church was built on the edge of the woods. Many people, a choir and band arrived on a train from Detroit to celebrate the church's dedication on Aug. 21, 1892.

From the beginning, the church operated a school. "There is the fact that it always had a Christian day school," Unger said. "It has been the main thrust in our work as a church."

Classes met first in private homes, then in the middle aisle of the church. In January 1897, at their annual meeting, church members resolved to build a small school and asked_every_member_to_donate_a_ tree for lumber. The school was used until a larger one-room facility was built in 1909.

IT WAS THAT building in which Florine Woodcock of Farmington learned reading, writing and religion. A lifelong member of the congregation, she was baptized, confirmed and married in the old church. Her grandfather, Frederick Garchow, helped found the church. Her father, Elmer Garchow, was a member. Her. son, Joel, now 33, briefly attended St. Paul's school. Gentle humor colors her memories of the church and school in the "There was one teacher and one room. Everybody knew everybody else. When you went to church on Sunday, it was like old home week,"

In 1937 when she graduated from the eighth grade, the class consisted: of herself and a cousin. It may have been a small school, but a few childhood traditions were observed. Its

Aided by the several seventh and eighth grade boys, the teacher righted the tipped outhouse and provide unscheduled entertainment for the rest of the school. More than 50 years later, the one-room school is but a memory. In the early 1950s, a larger school was built. Over the years, several additions have been added, but the needs and questions of childhood remain relatively unchanged.

"You'd think there would be changes, but they're still asking the basic questions. 'Where did we come from? Why are we here? What can our parents do to help us?" "he said.

In addition, the church helps support Lutheran High School West in Westland which 21 of its graduates

Just as the school has grown, so has the congregation. In the 1940s, Pastor Ewald Steumpfig led a small congregation in the old church.

"I used to stand behind him during Sunday service," Woodcock said. From her vantage point, she could tell who was absent. "Then I used to send the church bulletin to the people who weren't there." Today, Unger and assistant pastor Carl Mehl minister to 700 church members. "They say that one minister can serve 350 members," Unger said. "We're looking for growth in the future." St. Paul's could have been larger if its congregation hadn't split in the early 1970s. Differences in interpreting doctrine led to the formation of a daughter church, Spirit of Christ in Unger remembers the warm reception he received upon his arrival in 1978. For his 21st anniversary in the ministry, the congregation sent him on a trip to the Holy Land. Woodcock was visiting relatives in Mississippi in November 1978 when the rest of the congregation welcomed Unger. After her husband suffered a heart attack during the visit, she called the church to ask the congregation to remember him in their prayers. Unger called her minutes after she hung up.

"He didn't know me from Adam. He wouldn't be able to pick me out in a crowd, but he called and asked if I needed help or money to get home," she said. She didn't need help but is still touched by his call.

Tree sparrows winter in Michigan

When we think of bird migration, we typically associate their movement to a warm and sunny climate, Robins cannot get worms from the frozen ground, so they move south where worms and other food are more available.

Insect-eating birds must move south in order to find food too.

Indeed this is the typical movement of birds during fall migration. But there are some birds that think southeast Michigan is warm. One of Michigan's regular and most common winter visitors is the American tree sparrow.

During warmer months, it nests: along the southern shore of Hudson Bay in Ontario.

My wife and I were fortunate enough to find an egg of an American tree sparrow when we were counting birds in that area. Seldom do you see a single tree sparrow, often they are found in groups of 20 to 30. Most of the wintering tree sparrows are concentrated in the great plain. In Iowa their concentration may be as high as 10 birds per square mile.

About $7,000 was raised for the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra and Plymouth Cultural Center at the Plymouth Symphony League's Winter Antique Show Jan. 24-25. The seventh annual show featured 25 Michigan exhibiters.

"I think it went real well,"said Sharon Tidwell, league president. "We had a good turnout."

Last year's winter show raised $5,625. Profits are split between the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra and the Plymouth Cultural Center.

"We were really pleased with the success and were the dealers. This year, we moved the winter show to the last weekend in January and I think we're going to make it our permanent show time," said Plymouth Townshp Judy Lore, event co-chairwoman.

The league's fall and winter antique shows and biennial home tour represent the three top fundraisers for the symphony, which has an $85,000 operating budget.

Tidbits about the Civil War-era Nankin Mills at Ann Arbor Trail and Farmington Road in Westland — in the 1920s, '30s and '40s one of Henry Ford I's village factorles and now a joint restoration effort of the Friends of Nankin Mills and the Wayne County Parks Division:

- Ford believed music created a good work atmosphere so he had live music played for his plant workers, many of whom came from nearby farms during the slack season.

- In the early days, Ann Arbor Trail was so badly rutted, all materials needed and parts made were shipped by horse and wagon.

- Farmington Road, which now dead-ends at Ann Arbor Trail, used to go on to Warren Road. Remnants of the Rouge River bridge near Warren Road can still be seen.

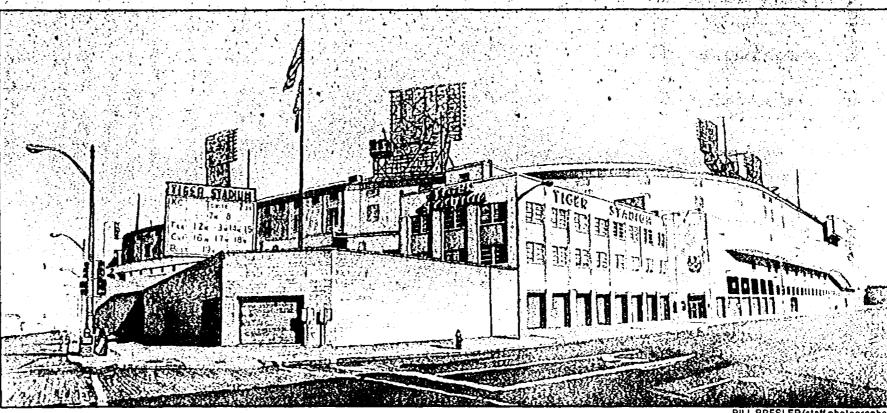

- The millsite once served as a hiding place for slaves traveling the underground railroad.

Watercolorist captures People's Choice Award

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

Watercolorist Mark Revers won favor with visitors enjoying Michigan Art '92, a statewide fine arts exhibition held by the Plymouth Community Arts Council Jan. 15-20 at Saxton's Showroom in downtown Plymouth.

"Michigan and Trumbull," a watercolor portrait by Revers of Tiger Stadium, was voted the People's Choice Award winner.

Mary Stephenson, former assistant curator of 20th century art at the Detroit Institute of Arts and coordinator of the DIA's Michigan Artists Program, jurored the competition. In the tradition of photorealism, Revers captures the architectural splendor of Tiger Stadium in the qui-

"I had to do a lot of drawing, going out to the stadium at 5:30 a.m., Revers said in an interview at his Plymouth home.

Using a subtle palette of blue accented with red and yellow, his portraval of this time-honored stately structure tells a tale about generations of ballplayers and fans who

'It's almost like an obsession. I just always did it. I drew a lot as a kid.'

"Sometimes I paint things I like to preserve," Revers said. "The ones that I love doing are the easiest to have gone before.

THE-STADIUM'S strength of line and sensuous flowing curves illustrate the welcoming but stoic grand dame in all her regal magnificence.

"It was a challenge," Revers said.
"I wondered what I'd taken on. The drawing took the longest. It's almost the hardest part."

His dedication to depicting scenes of architecture and action persevered. Three months later, former Briggs Stadium became reality with his work on paper.

Revers feels the art of watercolor painting and drawing is necessary to maintaining his upbeat attitude. "It's almost like an obsession. I just always did it," Revers said. "I drew a lot as a kid.'

- Mark Revers

Revers favors watercolor because he likes to build up color. "I like colors. Because of the layers, you can get a lot of colors."

As an artist, Revers is basically self-taught except for a few classes he took while working toward a degree at Iowa State University. While there, he created a portrait of former Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton. Payton later commissioned Revers to create three football action paintings.

Artistry salutes Black History Month

☐ See Exhibitions, 5D

By M.B. Dillon staff writer

7 ITH HELP from Bishop Moses Anderson, Livonia's Madonna University is commemorating Black History Month in a memorable and polgnant way.

Auxiliary bishop for more than 60 parishes in the Detroit archdiocese's northwest area and pastor of the Church of the Precious Blood, Anderson has loaned 50 works of artists Frank Hayden and John Scott for a special exhibit.

The sculptures and paintings from Anderson's personal collection will be displayed in the Madonna library art gallery, at I-96 and Levan, through Feb. 29.

Anderson was present to open the Taste and See Exhibit of African-American Art at a program and reception attended by more than 70 students, faculty and friends Feb. 6. In a brief address, he spoke of his friendship with Scott and Hayden and the reasons why he treasures and appreciates their pieces.

Powerfully evoking the themes of religion and African-American culture, the exhibit is open 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. No guided tours are planned, but leaflets are available listing the names of all 50 pieces in the show.

SISTER NANCY Marie, head of Student Life at Madonna, said, "You can really have meditations as you look at each piece."

And somber ones at that, although humor, levity and the joys of music and athletics also reveal themselves in the works of Hayden and Scott, black artists once on staff together at Xavier University in Louislana.

Marlene Miller, a post-graduate pre-med student from Lathrup Village, said, "I really looked at some pieces in particular. In 'The Bomb' (a sculpture by Hayden), you can see people in a mushroom cloud. It really dramatizes the end of life on earth."

Miller also is partial to Hayden's "The Family" and "Marriage." Both are large, polished pieces gracefully

Historic Plymouth mill on target to house arts center

DESPITE THE lagging economy and state arts funding cuts, a determined team of arts boosters is on course to convert Henry Ford I's old Plymouth plant across from Wilcox Lake into a regional arts center.

Six months into its "Celebrate the Arts" campaign, the Plymouth Community Arts Council (PCAC) has raised $150,000, or 20 percent of its $765,000 fund-raising goal.

Converting the concrete-block, two-story building into the Wilcox Mill Arts Center would make it much more of a community resource than its current use as a county. parks maintenance garage.

And a community resource is precisely how Ford envisioned it when he opened the full in 1923.

"We'll see an arts center there we're adamant about that," says Kathie Savitskie, PCAC executive director. "We've got a building, we've got programs, we're structured to raise funds. We just have to work hard to do it."

"There's a real need for this kind of place," said Karen Berrie, PCAC president. "We shouldn't have to travel to Ann Arbor or Birmingham to find classes in clay, pottery, sculpture and figure drawing."

A MASTER innovator, Ford offered farmers jobs at branch plants within their towns "to ensure the values and experiences of the rural way of life." Ford fiddlers even served up country tunes at community square dances.

Between 1918 and 1944, 20 such branch plants sprang up in the Rouge, Huron and Raisin river valleys to offer industrial work during the slack season for farmers. The design of these waterpower plants, many adaptive restorations of 19th-century grist mills, reflected Ford's love for nature, history and technology,

Bob Sklar

The Plymouth plant, sturdy but drab, was named to the state historic register in 1989. An optimistic timeline calls for the Wilcox Mill Arts Center to open by 1993.

The nonprofit arts council leases the mill from the county at $1 a year for 20 years. The county is seeking grant money to help improve the mill grounds and surrounding park

Raising money is still the top priority, "It's a tough road to hoe," Sayliskle sald. "There's no doubting Fund-raising is in high gear among individuals, corporations and businesses. And grants continue to be sought. Ford Motor Co. has contributed $50,000 toward the mill's restoration.

PCAC ENVISIONS an arts center for art buffs of most ages, skills and interests. The center will consolidate PCAC programs under one roof. It'll contain offices, classrooms, studios, an exhibit gallery and a rental/consignment shop.

Wayne County acquired the mill site from the Ford estate in 1948, It'll continue to own the property and maintain the grounds.

Savitskie linked the PCAC's revival of its Michigan arts showcase this winter to the Wilcox Mill restoration effort. As she told me last December;

"A couple years ago, we knew we needed new facilities and we came into an opportunity to move into the have a place where artists can mill. Now we've come into an opportunity to not only get ourselves in the mill, but also build something much bigger; to still be the Plymouth Community Arts Council and to do programs we love but also work with other groups to do much more."

For example, Wilcox Mill Arts Center might become home to frequent statewide and local art exhibitions.

"One thing we've always had in mind," Savitskie added, "is to do something more with the handicapped population. That's why we've made access to the mill so import-

She envisions Wilcox Mill hosting a Very Special Arts Michigan festival of artwork produced by physically and mentally disabled students.

BERRIE SEES "a real advantage. to all communities in the area to gather and have shows. There are a number of arts clubs in the area and each one is operating independently. You really don't have much impact that way. You're stronger as a community of artists."

Meanwhile, Wayne County continues to upgrade recreational facilities surrounding the mill and lake. Plans include paddleboats, boardwalks, water fountains and a music pavi-

With Wilcox Lake across the road and the mighty Rouge flowing beneath it, the planned arts center, polsed on a crest in a renovated historic site, should turn the Wilcox' Road-Hines Drive crossroads into an upbeat eastern gateway to Plym-

Panning could strike photo gold

Most of us are used to seeing action shots where the subject is "frozen" at the peak of the action, And, of course, there's nothing wrong with depicting subjects in this way. But if we could intentionally blurthe subject or the background to produce a feeling of motion, imagine the exciting results!

After all, being creative as a photographer means that there may be times you'll want to transcend the face value of your subject and instead bring out its true essence.

You can do this with action shots using a technique called panning. In short, panning means following the .. action through the viewfinder of your camera and then shooting at a slower shutter speed than that required to stop the action.

HERE'S HOW it's done.

Prefocus on a spot in front of you where you'll want to make your final exposure. Stand firmly with the upper part of your body twisted in the direction from which the action will Follow the subject with your camera as soon as it's visible in the vlewfinder, much like a marksman will follow a moving target.

When it reaches your preselected spot, gently squeeze the shutter release and continue following the subject through the camera as a sert of 'lollow-through."

Keep in mind that your movement before, during and after the release of the shutter should be one continuous, smooth motion.

Consider use of a tripod when panning to help get a smooth, uninterrupted movement, especially with a slower shutter speed.

WHAT SHUTTER speed should you use? A good rule to apply is to select a speed two increments slower than that required to freeze the action.

For example, to take a pan shot of a speeding race car, use 1/125 second (normally you would use 1/500 second). To give a feeling of motion to a moving bicycle, try 1/30 second; a walking individual, 1/15 second.

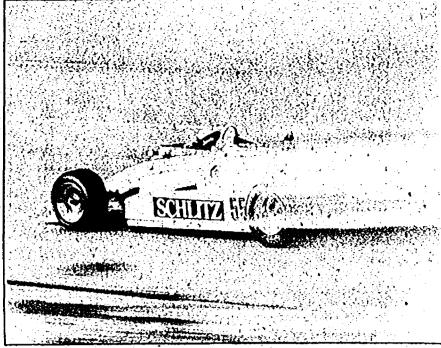

Remember that the slower the shutter speed, the more blur will appear in the finished picture.

Practice makes perfect. Before releasing the shutter, try following the action several times in order to get the rhythm of the motion. If you do, chances are you'll be rewarded with that special pan shot of which you can be truly proud.

There has been a soft spot in Madonna hearts for Hayden and Scott since 1987, when the artists visited the campus to conduct workshops

The work of the late Frank Hayden, from the collection of Bishop Moses Anderson, is on display at Madonna University.

"We became very good friends through Bishop Anderson," said Sister Nancy, adding that Anderson helped Scott and Hayden get their works to raise money for minority scholarships, Sister Nancy said.

"Cactus Collar or Crown" is a painting by Scott that "captures the spirit of the black person in America," she said, "The cactus was used as a collar for slaves, Scott took it to another dimension, making it look like the crown of thorns worn by Christ."

Scott's "The Boxing Lesson," which pictures a young boy learning to use his fists, and "B.B. King," which dramatically captures the musical giant and his precious "Lucille," are crowd pleasers as well.

One of the exhibit's most moving works is Hayden's "A Eulogy for South Africa." Standing atop the smooth, wooden shape of the African continent are figures holding a carving of South Africa above their heads. Figures standing atop South Africa are carrying tiny wooden

"It amazes me how they capture the tragedy of what people are enduring there," said Sister Nancy of the artists. "They're able to skillfully comment in their art the ongoing struggle of the people to liberate that nation."

Balancing the heaviness of "A Eulogy for South Africa" is "The Sauna," an engaging sculpture featuring two seated figures in a two-story steam bath.

ROY LOUIS of Detroit, a library assistant at Madonna, is a blg fan of the Taste and See exhibit: "As an African American, I think seeing works by other African-American artists is a terrific opportunity because we haven't been showcased very much in venues like this.

"It's a great opportunity for people," Louis added. "This encompasses part of the African-American culture and the way we look at 'things."

The show also impressed Jerry Charbonneau of Lathrup Village, who teaches social welfare at Madonna. His favorite painting is "Cutting Room Floor," in which Scott has "stitched" Africa to the bottom of the United States.

"I know that I have been shaped in the Western civilization and have a particular view of the world. One of the things that bothers me is that that view carries with it a great deal of white superiority, which has manifested itself in some of the things done by Europeans in this country, such as segregation," he said.

"I try, as much as I can, to be aware of my own roots. This helps me become more aware that African-Americans have other roots. We need to keep that in mind, especially in Livonia, a predominantly white community. This exhibit helps people do that."

Music tryouts slated set in Detroit-for musicians interested in attending the 1992 summer season of the Boston University Tanglewood Institute and the Boston University School of Mu-

The auditions will take place 2-7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28, at the Institute of Music and Dance, 200 E. Kirby.

To make an appointment, call Jennifer Hedberg at 313-651-7591 after 6 p.m. For more information, including application and scholarship material, write to Boston University Tan-glewood Institute, 855 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, Mass. 02215, or call 617-353-3386.

Students unable to audition in person may send audition tapes. Deadline for taped auditions is March 16, 1992.

Through its School of Music and Tanglewood Institute, Boston University provides musicians of high school and college age professional musical training yearround.

The School of Music combines the intensity of conservatory training with the resources of a liberal arts education. The Tanglewood Institute offers summer music programs for gifted high school and college age musicians at Tanglewood, the internationally renowned summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The School of Music offers a full range of flexible programs for career-oriented musiclans on both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Degrees are awarded in perform-ance, history, literature, theory and composition and music education.

Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., is composed of four programs specifi-cally for high school studenis - instrumental, vocal, plano and composition.

FHA refinancing advantageous to some, not all

By Doug Funke staff writer

Some borrowers with mortgages backed by the Federal Housing Administration may not have enough equity in their houses to refinance to lower rates with conventional lend-

Other FHA mortgage holders may have a poor credit history. Perhaps there's recent employment instability. Qualifying for a conventional refinancing with that baggage could be problematic.

Does that mean people with higher-than-current-market-rate FHA mortgages are stuck? Absolutely not.

But amonthly mortgage insurance premium of .005 percent, instituted on The approval process can take as FHA mortgages last summer, will add $21 to the payment.

The net savings then becomes $52 monthly. Is it worth it - considering closing costs of some $1,975? That's a personal judgment call depending on several factors including projected length of residency there.

"Anyone with equity greater than 10 percent, because of (required FHA) mortgage insurance figures, would be better off going conventional financing," said Jack Schwartz, account executive with Comerica. Mortgage.

"But people with some rough credit times or job hopping, that's a good option to refinance under the FHA streamline program. No questions are asked about income, employment or assets," Schwartz said.

William Booth, chief of mortgage credit for the Detroit FHA office, advises consumers to shop around for mortgage rates and fees for original loans and refinancings. "We no longer control interest rates and costs of any kind," he said.

Frequent board turnover results in low loyalty factor

I have been the CPA for our condominium association for approximately 10 years. The board of directors is made up of a number of elderly people who are extraordinarily cheap and do not wish to spend any money for the betterment of the condominium. They have been approached by a CPA who has done work at other condominium associations and who charges less than me. How do I tell the board that they are making a mistake in considering another CPA when I have a unique understanding of the historical development of the condominium project?

The loyalty factor in condominium associations is not great, particularly when the composition of the board changes on a frequent basis. A professional often finds that he or she must continuously sell themselves to the board to assure their continued involvement, particularly in the face of continuing competition. I would recommend that you meet with the board and present it with the facts concerning the cost of your services so that there is no misunderstanding on its part.

In fact, it may be cheaper to retain you because of your presumed increased efficiency and knowledge of the condominium project even though your hourly rate may be greater than the other CPA and also because you may be more efficient and may bill differently than the other CPA. For example, if you bill in 10ths of an hour and the other CPA bills in quarter hours, you may be cheaper and a better investment for the association.

I have just purchased a home and am wondering what kind of tax savings there are when you buy a house.

The first tax savings is a homeowner deduction you can take for points paid to the mortgage lender. Generally, points are considered prepaid interest and are fully deductible providing that the house you are buying is your principal residence and the points are in line with what is normally paid on similar loans in your area. If your closing costs require you to reimburse the seller for real estate taxes he or she has paid in advance, you may deduct the amount as if you paid the bills directly.

Other closing costs are not generally deductible but are added to the purchase price you arrive at as your home's basis, the official cost of your sell your home. See your tax adviser include appraisal fees, attorney fees, recording and title examination fees, surveys, title search, title insurance and utility connection charges.

Obviously, while you own your home, you can take a deduction for the interest paid on your mortgage loan as well as state and local property taxes you pay each year. While you may not deduct what you pay for repairs or for improvements, your costs for improvements can be added to your home's basis. This increases the tax value of your home and should not be construed as leand will reduce your profit when you gal opinion.

house for tax purposes. These costs for details on your specific situation.

Construction industry ready for recovery

By Doug Funke staff writer

More than a third of 381 general building contractors and subcontractors who responded to a recent suranticipate that their profits will decrease this year.

Forty-nine of the 137 who predict a decrease expect that the bite will be more than 10 percent.

Additionally, 219 of the 381 contractors and subcontractors responding to the survey reported a decrease in work volume for the last six months of 1991. More than half reported a decline of more than 20 percent.

Forty-five percent of the contractors and subcontractors reported that their cash flow situation is worse than a year ago, 32 percent better, the balance about the same.

Only 56 percent of the contractors and subcontractors who responded said they would choose to make their living in the construction industry if they were starting out today.

The survey was conducted for the Construction Association of Michigan in December by the consulting firm of Deloitte & Touche. Results were released last week during CAM's annual trade show.

"The survey indicates to me that we are at the bottom of the recession or slump. The recovery hasn't startvey by their state trade association ed yet, but when it comes, we are in a very good position."

DeMattia managed to find several positives in the report.

"The outlook for layoffs is zero for the next six months," he said. "Some 57 percent expect their workforce to remain the same, 16 percent plan to add and 17 percent to cut. This indicates they are down to the bare bones. The fat has been removed."

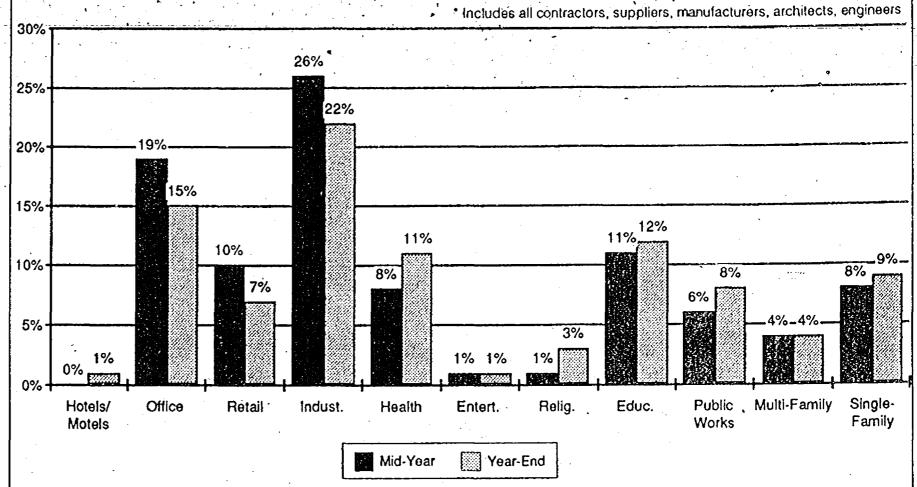

That being the case, it won't take much to stoke a fire in the building business, DeMattia said.

"If Congress passes a housing credit or the state a gas tax, you'll see a lot of interest by a lot of people," DeMattia said. "Pressure groups are proliferating all over for that." It is expected that increasing the gas tax would spur highway construction jobs.

"Office and industrial (construction) are down," said John Fovenesi, director of the construction services group for Deloitte & Touche. "Infrastructure is due to go up. How much depends on Congressional interest out there."

DeMATTIA SAID he was encour-"AT FIRST blush the picture is aged that a lhird of all survey

Improvisation: a handyman's friend in time of need

AP- The difference between found five out of 13 from one box someone who's really handy around the home and shop and one who is not lies in knowing how to solve minor problems quickly and effective-

Here are some tips that can help you out of a tight spot:

• Need to bore a hole in wood for which you do not have the correct diameter spade bit? You can easily make one from the next larger size bit. Adjust the tool rest on a bench grinder to maintain the same angle as the edge of the bit. Carefully align marking tapes on the bit to guide the grinding. Grind slowly, taking a little off each side and taking care not to overheat the bit and drawing the temper from the steel. When it gets hot to the touch, dip it in water to cool it. Bore trial holes in scrap wood to check progress and get a perfect fit.

• When nailing from the side opposite a finished surface, don't pick nails directly out of the box.

All too often, over- and undersized nails will be mixed in with those of proper size even in a brand new box. An oversize nail could break through the good surface. Spread a few nails on your workbench and then select the good ones from among them. Wrong sizes, uncut points and other defects will show up. In a random sampling, we were oversize or defective.

• Drawing a straight line parallel to the edge of a board without having the pencil slip becomes simple if you file a tiny nick in the blade edge of your combination square. File the V-notch in the center of the blade end just deep enough to keep the pencil point from slipping as you move the square along the board. When marking, hold the pencil at an angle with the point leaning towards the square. Keep it steady because changing the angle will cause the line to waver.

• Spreading glue can be messy

Plastic applicators designed to apply auto body filler make it easy and neat. They spread wood glue over wide areas quickly. The feathered edge lays on glue smoothly. What's more, cleanup is literally a snap. Let the glue dry on the applicator and then flex it to pop off the hardened glue. Auto stores sell these applicators in sets of three for about $2.

• When sharpening the teeth of a hand or circular saw blade, smoke them with a candle.

Pass the flame quickly along the edge of the blade so the smoke blackens the teeth. Do not pause in any one place to avoid overheating and possibly drawing the temper from the steel. As you file each tooth, the contrast between shiny and smoked steel shows your prog-

• Boring a hole exactly where you want it in a piece of wood requires a lot of blowing to keep chips from obscuring your guide marks.

Save your breath and make a fan to blow them away when using either a hand or power drill. A 4-inch strip of 2-inch-wide masking tape folded over so it sticks to itself with the drill bit in the center does the job. Locate the fan on the drill bit so it clears the work surface by about 14-inch at maximum hole depth.

• If you have to mark very soft wood like clear pine, cedar or redwood, you can avoid having to sand out places where pencil marks crushed the surface fibers by using soft chalk instead.

Then, a damp cloth removes the marks for final finishing and there are no dents in the soft surface to show through the paint or stain.

• You can turn a bench-type jigsaw into a power sander by screwing a hanger bolt into one end of a sanding block and mounting it in the lower chuck of the saw. This easy-tomake attachment consists of a block of soft wood measuring 4x1 4x3 inches with the woodscrew threads of the hanger bolt screwed into the center of the end grain. Bore a hole in the block so that the 44x2-inch hanger bolt won't split the block. Then, using rubber cement, glue coarse abrasive paper to one side and fine to the other. Or, use adhesive-backed paper like 3M's Press'n Sand.

Clamp the protruding machine screw threads of the hanger bolt into the lower chuck of the saw. Different shaped blocks can be made to smooth specific workpieces. Turning on the saw will move the sanding block rapidly up and down to smooth the edges of a workpiece held on the saw table.

• You can prevent hammer dimples, often called Owl's Eyes, when nailing on soft wood by making a protective shield from one-sixteenthinch thick plastic laminate. Cut the spoon-shaped shield so it has a 6inch-long by %-inch-wide handle with a 11/2-inch-diameter ::bowl" on the end. Bore a 1/8-inch hole in the center of this round "bowl" of the

and then place the shield over the head of the nail. Hold the shield flat against the surface of the wood with your fingers out of the way of the hammer. Drive the nail in until it's flush with the surface of the laminate shield. then remove the shield and drive the projecting nailhead flush with or below the surface with a nailset.

• To make one wide board by edge-gluing two narrow ones, the mating edges must be perfectly true. Dressed lumber rarely has edges accurate enough for joining. But by using a portable circular saw, you can make the edges fit precisely.

Clamp both boards with their edges slightly butted together to the top of a pair of sawhorses. Clamp a metal straightedge as a guide so the saw kerf falls exactly on the joint between the two boards. Make the cut.

If the edges still do not match precisely, adjust the boards in their clamps and make a second or third cut to close the gap. The result will be two straight and true mating edges that will produce a virtually invisible joint.

• Mounting a piano-type hinge on the edge of a piece of plywood can be tricky because the drill bit for the mounting screw holes can easily be deflected by a glue joint or a tough knot. Solve this problem by nailing a 11/2-inch thick pine reinforcement strip to the edge of the plywood. Punch the center marks and bore the holes through the strip. It will support the drill bit and keep it straight. Remove the guide strip before installing the hinge. This technique also works for installing hinges on other delicate surfaces where a slip might mar the finish.

GRAND OPENING

Single-family housing leads building gains

By Doug'Funke staff writer

Single-family residential permits pulled by builders in southeastern Michigan during the fourth quarter of 1991 were up substantially from the October-December period of Those permits in the Detroit-Ann Arbor market jumped from 1,941 to 2,583 during comparative quarters, an increase of 33 percent.

The figures were reported by U.S. Housing Markets, a research publication of Lomas Mortgage USA. The newsletter is published in Livonia.

The upsurge in single-family permits here in the fourth quarter was reflected everywhere around the country, the newsletter reported. On average, permits were up 20.6 percent in the Northeast, 19.5 percent in the West, 18.6 percent in the South and 20.2 percent in the Midwest.

But before getting too excited about those numbers, warned Brian Bragg, editor of U.S Housing Markets, recall that building activity cooled substantially in the late 1990s as war loomed in the Middle East.

Actually, the Detroit-Ann Arbor market showed a net 2 percent decrease in single-family permits for all of 1991, falling to 11,862 from 12,113, according to the survey.

AN ENCOURAGING sign to Braggg - activity here picked up during the third quarter as well as the fourth.

"You've got to remember, espe-. cially in December in the fourth quarter of 1990, there was a lot of saber rattling going on, war talk," Bragg said. "That seared just about everybody - home buyers, builders, lenders. Numbers in the fourth quarter (of 1990) weren't really strong.

"On the other hand, an upturn in single-family housing began in the third quarter of '91. It was partly a function of low inventory. And the credit crunch kept builders from building nationwide. Inventory got down to record lows.'

Other factors also contributed to the rebound.

"I guess the fear of recession, the worst of it, seems to be over. In Detroit we've seen a lot of white collar losses and blue collar losses. The extent of bad news is probably known now," Bragg said.

"Plus mortgage rates have come down considerably since last summer. Then there has been a pick-up in buying and interest in new homes. Mortgage rates are down to where you're getting entry buyers in. That primes the pump," he said.

ONLY IN CHICAGO, 3,449 permits, and Minneapolis-St. Paul, 2,683, among Midwestern cities surveyed did builders pull more singlefamily permits during the fourth quarter of 1991 than in Detroit.

Those two metro areas were the only ones in the Midwest to outdistance Detroit in number of singlefamily permits issued for the entire year, too.

But four metro areas in the Midwest - Kansas City, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Columbus and Cincinnati recorded more single-family permits in 1991 than they did in 1990.

Additionally, more communities in the Midwest finished ahead of Detroit-Ann Arbor in a housing hotness index devised by U.S. Housing Markets. That index measures permits issued during the last four quarters per 1,000 population and includes multi-family construction like condominiums and apartments.

The Midwest hotness index was 3.7 per 1,000; the U.S. index 3.8. Detroit-Ann Arbor weighed in at 3.3: Columbus, 6.0; Indianapolis, 5.8; Minneapolis-St. Paul, 5.4; Cincinnati, 5.3; Kansas City, 4.6; Milwaukee-Racine, 4.2; St. Louis, 3.3; Cleveland, 2.9; and Chicago, 2.8.

Pack well to survive the move

AP — Whether a person is moving across the country or just across town, all belongings need to be packed carefully to ensure safe arrival at the new home. Building Magazine offers the following advice on preserving valuable items — and the mover's sanity:

• Schedule a "packing day" for the mover, usually one to days before the moving van arrives. Be present when the goods are packed and picked up.

• Check over the inventory of all household goods before they are packed. Have valuable items listed separately on the inventory. Discuss the inventory with the mover; an agreement should be made before it is signed.

• The inventory record is one of the most important shipping docuand sign it after all the goods have been received and inspected.

• When planning to ship a refrigerator or freezer, remove all the food, defrost and thoroughly dry the appliance to prevent mildew and other unneccessary damage.

• When electing to self-pack to save money, ask the moving company if it has packing materials for sale. Keep in mind that professional movers will not usually accept liability for breakage of items that homeowners pack themselves.

• Pack the contents of each room in separate boxes and label on the outside of each box the room they should be placed in at the new house. Use unprinted newspaper for wrapping to avoid soiling possessions.

• Begin early. Time is an ally.

Allow four weeks to pack. ments. Refer to it at the destination

• Start with the things that are used less frequently, like out-of-season clothes, special-occasion place settings, knicknacks, or old records.

 If the move will take more than a day, pack for the moving days early, so as not to end up searching through packed boxes for things that are needed.

• Find free corrugated cartons at grocery stores. Buy boxes, or rent furniture pads and furniture and mattress covers from a truck-rental dealer.

• Pack lightly. Friends who are helping will be grateful if each box weighs less than 30 pounds.
