Leniency recommended for teen

Ian Bruce Cowen, 17, is nearing a sentencing for second-degree murder, and a psychologist has recommended that the teen not be imprisoned. The prosecution, which had accused Cowen of plotting with three others to kill a Westland man, disagrees.

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A Westland teen convicted of seconddegree murder in a killing behind Adams Junior High School shouldn't be incarcerated, a psychologist testified Wednesday.

Ian Bruce Cowen, 17, should be placed on probation and allowed to go home to his parents, Dr. Terence Campbell testified in Detroit Recorder's Court.

"Ian Cowen is not an inherently dangerous individual," Campbell said, based on an evaluation he made of Cowen.

Campbell's statements came as Judge Denise Page Hood heard testimony to determine whether she should sentence Cowen, a former John Glenn High School student, as a juvenile or an adult. The hearing is expected to continue Monday.

A Recorder's Court jury convicted Cowen on June 9 of second degree murder in the Nov. 15 shooting death of 19year-old Everett Earl Bowen Jr. of Westland. He could be sentenced to up to life in prison.

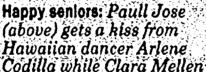

The jury also found Cowen guilty of conspiracy to assault, a one-year felony.

Police arrested Cowen and three other Westland teens amid charges they conspired to kill Bowen in revenge for an earlier dispute in which Bowen stab. bed Cowen's legs several times with a screwdriver. Bowen died about 10:30 p.m. Nov. 15 after being shot in the face and back.

Two of the defendants, Jermaine Stevenson and Jerome Omar Ingram, both 18, haven't yet been scheduled for trial on charges of first-degree murder and ----conspiracy to murder. Court testimony

Task force targets violence in schools

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Concern about violence in Wayne-Westland schools has prompted administration officials to form a new task force to study the problem and recommend ways of curbing it.

"We want to offer the safest environment possible for our students," Superintendent Larry Thomas said.

The study has been sparked by a new report that cites scores of assaults and violations involving weapons, drugs and

The report cites incidents involving guns, knives, razor blades and other weapons. However, some of the more serious incidents occurred outside of school buildings - sometimes at night. Despite the alarming report, school officials have stressed that violent incidents are isolated and that schools

"There's not a lot of mayhem going on," said school board member Francis "Bud" Winter, a retired Wayne Memorial High School principal.

Thomas has formed a task force to include police officials in Westland, Wayne and Inkster, school administrators and parents. The group of 12 to 15 will study violence at all grade levels and issue recommendations for keeping schools safe.

"If there is a problem, we're going to deal with it," Thomas said.

The superintendent will ask the task force to expedite its work so that school officials can implement a plan when classes resume this fall.

"Our hope is to put sontething in place before school starts," Thomas said. "We're not sure at this point what that something will be."

The report citing serious incidents was prepared by former Deputy Superintendent Thomas Svitkovich before he

City council extends service bureau's contract

By LEONARD POGER BDITOR

The Westland City Council agreed Monday to fix an Insurance liability problem and retain the Municipal Service Bureau to operate the municipal Sports Arena and golf course.

In an informal meeting, the council said it would extend the bureau's contract with the city for another two months, to Sept. 30, to allow its board of directors. time to look into the insurance issue.

Mayor Robert Thomas, who wants to abolish the MSB and put the arena and golf course under direct city control, waan't at Monday's council session. Council president Charles Pickering said that the mayor, through his executive assistant, asked that the meeting be postponed because he (Thomas) would be out of town and unable to attend.

But Pickering declined to postpone the meeting, saying Monday night that the council should discuss the insurance problem.

The bureau was formed by the city administration to allow it to provide municipal services at a lower cost. The savings were gained by hiring non-union employees who were paid less than full-time city. workers and received fewer fringe benefits.

But the insurance liability problem which prompted Monday's council sesison was brought up by Michael Gorman, city finance director, and Eric Smith, attorney for the firm of Cummins and McClorey which represents the city on liability matters.

There are two civil suits pending against the city and MSB based on the actions of Sports Arena employees. A third sult was settled out of court.

Smith said the problem is that since the bureau is organized as a private, non-profit organization it doesn't have the same governmental immunity protection in liability suits as city employees and officials. The city is insured through the Michigan Municipal Risk Management Authority, a group of municipalities which self-insures clients.

Gorman feels the insurance premiums could soar if the legal protection of governmental immunity can't be used to defend the MSB in civil suits.

During the discussion Monday, Richard Honaker, MSB board member, told the council that one carrier refused to insure the bureau. When insurance was eventually obtained, the premium doubled from $16,000 to $32,000 a year.

Later, he said that the arena could be insured for a premium of just over $9,354 by a company which specializes in covering non-profit organizations such as MSB, the environmental consulting firm sis back, (but) the board and I feel to re-evaluate their findings and to it is essential for (the public) to be complete any additional testing necessary," Thomas said.

A report should be available for review within two weeks, he said.

"In the interim, please remember there is no surface safety hazard anywhere on the Stottlemyer school site." he said.

Thomas expects to make a complete presentation to the board in two weeks.

He drew applause from citizens attending Monday's meeting for announcing that the soil clump had been found.

"We could have waited two more weeks until we have the final analyinformed every step of the way,' Thomas said.

The Stottlemyer finding comes on the heels of a contamination scare at Cooper Elementary School, which is in the Westland portion of the Livonia school district. That school was built on a landfill.

Livonia district officials were criticized by residents who didn't believe they had been adequately informed.

"I don't want another Livonia," Thomas said after Monday's meeting. "I want to keep this on top of the table."

has implicated Stevenson in firing the shots. The youngest defendant, 16-yearold Gregory Hister, escaped a murder conviction during a bench trial before Judge Hood, who convicted him of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder, and conspiracy to assault.

Hister has been sentenced to juvenile incarceration until age . 21, though he could be released at age 19 for good behavior.

In Cowen's case Wednesday, psychologist Campbell testified that Cowen's behavior has improved through the treatment he receives at the Wayne County Youth Home,

Bowen's slaying."

"He is a significantly more mature and reflective individual who now weighs the consequences of his behavior, rather than acting on impulse," Campbell said, under questioning from Cowen's defense attorney, James Howarth.

. Howarth has repeatedly said Cowen didn't know that the two older defendants had brought a gun to Adams school. Campbell's testimony echoed Howarth's claims.

"(Cowen) indicated to me that he did not know that anyone had a weapon," Campbell said.

But proseculing altorney Robert Hood raised questions about Campbell's evaluation of Cowen, saying it was based entitely on interviews with Cowen and his parents.

Hood also raised concerns that Campbell didn't consider that Cowen had been in trouble before Bowen's death. Cowen had been twice suspended from school for fighting and using profane language, and he had been placed on probation by juvenile authorities for fights at local malls, Hood said.

In a fight at Westland Center, Cowen knocked down an opponent, straddled him and pounded his head on the mall floor, Hood's remarks indicated. Hood also described a fight at Livonla's Wonder. land Mall in which he said Cowen knocked down an opponent and "kicked him in the head."

But Campbell stood by his recommendation that Cowen be placed on probation and sent home. When asked if his decision was influenced by the $1,500 he received for evaluating Cowen, he denied it.

Attorneys are expected to call other experts to the stand as early as Monday. Prosecutor Hood will . try.to discount Campbell's statements.

But Smith was skeptical about the relatively low premium and whether the insurer would cover buildings not owned by the bureau.

Reflecting the council's mood of retaining the bureau, Pickering concluded that the current contract extension with the MSB would be extended another two months, allowing time for the bureau's board and city attorney Angela Plakas to look into the insurance issue.

The council president cited that the bureau is efficient, well-managed and is cost-effective - a comment which prompted MSB board member Sam Corrado to say that it's about time someone said something positive about the bureau.

Pickering added that the arena is der the police department.

now operating without its annual city subsidy. Over the years, the golf course has typically taken in more money than its expenses.

Corrado went on to say that the arena has been recognized as one of the best in the region with patrons coming from as far away as Cleveland.

A year ago, Mayor Thomas said he wanted the city administration to have specific controls over the operation of the arena and golf course, owned by the city, and put it under the parks and recreation department.

The bureau also operates the school crossing guard program, which the mayor wants placed un-

The most serious incident stemmed from a 10:30 p.m. Nov. 15 shooting behind Adams Junior High School that resulted in four Westland teens being arrested on murder charges. Three attended John Glenn High School.

For the 1990-91 school year and the first semester of 1991-92, the combined number of assaults at the two high schools and four junior highs totaled 135. There were 59 weapons violations, 49 drug offenses and 48 alcohol offenses.

Some weapons violations, however, stemmed from weapons that were merely found on school grounds. For example, a sawed-off shotgun was found in front of the Cherry Hill Alternative Education Center, on Avondale between Middlebelt and Inkster Road in Inkster, in 1990-91.

Wayne Memorial High School reported the most assaults: 32 during the period; John Glenn High School reported 23. Among the junior highs, Stevenson had the most assaults, with 23.

Svitkovich also included incidents that occurred outside of school but involved John Glenn students. Among those:

• An injury-related shooting in December 1990 in the John Glenn parking lot, following a basketball game.

 A bus stop shooting near Titus Elementary in early 1991 that resulted in a John Glenn student being arrested for assault with intent to commit murder.

• Two fights at the Burger King on Wayne Road that involved many students.

 Three students arrested in two car theft incidents.

Some incidents merely occurred on school grounds but didn't involve students. At Adams school, for example, a 1990-91 incident involved "carloads of outsiders" fight. ing in the parking lot. But Adams students were not involved.

Perot backers continue battle

By LEONARD POGER STAFF WRITER

Three dozen suburban supporters of Ross Perot want to continue the fight to make elected officials more responsive to the voters, but voted nearly 2-1 not to pressure Perot to resume his presidential campaign.

The supporters, who came from Grosse Pointe and Ypsilanti Township, met at Westland's Central City Park Wednesday night to discuss what they should do following Perot's withdrawal from his undeclared candidacy.

The backers agreed that it's important to carry on the battle to make elected officials more accountable and responsive than to just campaign for Perot.

Leading the meeting was Robert Harrington, 28, of Romulus, who is the coordinator for the seven southeast Michigan counties for the campaign. Perot supporters filed petitions two weeks ago to put his name on the Michigan ballot for the Nov. 3 presidential election.

"The purpose of tonight's meeting is to keep supporters together and make changes" in the political system, Harrington said.

Among those attending was John Lauve, a Grosse Pointe resident who sought the Republican nomination for governor two years ago. Beaten by John Engler, who later edged out Gov. James Blanchard, Lauve reflected the spirit of the Perot supporters' when he pointed to his wrist watch and asked "what. time is it?" Before anyone could reply, he responded loudly:

"It's time for a change." But the position isn't shared by all Perot supporters. Kathleen Bower, a Livonia resident who coordinated the Perot petition campaign in western Wayne County suburbs this spring, said she is "encouraging" her volunteers to consider supporting the Democratic ticket of Bill Clinton and Al Gore.

Werner (who served as Perot's Michigan petition coordinator) and we're going to back Clinton-Gore," Bower said.

She noted that she was consider-House.

At the Westland Central City Park meeting of Perot workers, Harrington said many backers were upset and are "still disgruntled" about Perot's withdrawal but urged others to "put that behind us and move forward."

The people at the meeting agreed to organize a national party, hold a national convention and to continue Perot's battle to change the political system.

Harrington said the state group is looking into the legal aspects of holding a Michigan convention and whether it should organize as a third political party or a political action committee.

"I am hoping for a permanent organization for years to come," Harrington said.

Some at the session noted that "I'm going to meet with Judy while Perot personally urged his backers to focus on the upcoming U.S. House and Senate races, he has no supporters campaigning for those seats.

Several supporters were upset ing supporting Clinton earlier in that Gov. Engler was allowed to atthe year before Perot said he would tend a Michigan meeting of Perot consider running for the White campaign coordinators held Friday night, July 17.

Schools mull tightening up leave policy

BY DARHELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A move to tighten the personal leave policy for Wayne-Westland school employees appears to be gaining momentum.

Board members Monday indicated they will soon schedule a special session to discuss a clampdown on employees who seek extended job leaves so they can maintain seniority here while working in other districts.

"I really do believe that we need to get our philosophy together quickly so we can let (employees) know what direction we're going in," board member Vickl Welty said during a meeting Monday.

The district had 2,594 employees at last count, according to the personnel office.

Board member Richard LeBlanc pointed out the need for a special session soon.

On Monday, the board voted 5-1 to approve several employee leaves. Most board members indicated they won't balk at the leaves until employees have been fairly warned of changing policles.

But board member Laurel Raisanen cast the lone dissenting vote against the leaves, saying she opposed second-year leaves for some employees who worked in Wayne-Westland for less than a year.

"I don't feel that is appropriate," she said, adding later, "I still see a lot of people being protected for working less than a year in our district."

She said employees should either work here or resign. "I'd like to have them make that choice," Raisanen said.

School officials have indicated they would continue to grant leaves for employees who receive special, opportunities, such as teaching in a foreign country.

In other personnel matters Monday, the board voted to recall eight employees, ranging from vocitech teachers to a school psychologist to a foreign language teacher.

At least one of the employees had been laid off since 1979, and school officials doubted that some of the employees would return to their jobs. If not, the district will look elsewhere.

Personnel officials have said the latest round of recalls leaves only several employees who were laid off and not yet recalled.

1. What is your experience practicing in the court for which you are running?

My practice involves the discovery process and the litigation of cases in a number of jurisdictions. I have been involved in the trial and/ or discovery process of hundreds of circuit court cases or cases pending in comparable jurisdictions. As a member of my firm's professional liability section, I have specialized in the trial of complex architect, engineer and construction cases. I have litigated 12 or more plaintiff's cases. 1. What is your experience practicing in the court for which you are running?

I have participated in at least 18 trials since being assigned to the forfeiture section (civil practice) in the prosecutor's office. I'am familiar with the rules of evidence and the Michigan Court Rules. I have participated in at least 70 jury trials in Recorder's Court (felony cases) and Wayne County Circuit Court, and probably twice that many as bench trials.

2. What is the most significant case you ever tried? (Significant in terms of learned the most, made the most money, established case law, changed lives - use any criteria you wish).

The case that most sticks out in my mind involved James Waibel as the drunken driver of a car that overtook a vehicle being driven by a 16-year-old girl who had just dropped off her girlfriend and was returning home. Waibel's car smashed into the car being driven by Lisa Lincoln. This case personified the effects of substance abuse on the innocents of society. Lisa's parents were devastated by what happened, but they were patient and understanding enough to watch the justice system take its course, resulting in Waibel's conviction and sentence to a maximum sentence of 10-15 years.

3. Do you consider yourself a strict constructionist or a judicial activist? Please explain.

Neither. I believe that many of our judges lack intellectual maturity and believe that they are entitled to rule by judicial fiat. I would give the constitution and statutes reasonable construction-sometimes it may require a strict construction, other times it may require adding to, or deleting a requirement from a statute. I believe that our appellate courts are far too eager to strike down or engraft new requirements onto many statutes dealing with criminal procedure and criminal law.

2. What is the most significant case you ever tried? (Significant on the questions presented. Judges in terms of learned the most, made the most money, established case law, changed lives - use any criteria you wish).

All litigations involve issues and determinations which are of great urgency and concern to the litigants. If the question was more limited i.e; which case involved the most money. I would attempt an answer, but no one case is more "significant" than any other in my view

3. Do you consider yourself a strict constructionist or a judicial activist? Please explain.

I dislike labels. I believe that a circuit court judge must apply the law as it is written and as established by precedent. Judicial legislation, especially at the circuit court level, is destablilizing and in my opinion encourages litigation. Certainty in the law and its application is of great importance.

I currently work in circuit court as an assistant prosecuting attorney. I have tried many felony cases as well as civil cases in circuit court. I was chief of the drug forfeiture unit where we took away houses, boats, cars, trailers and things of value from drug dealers and put the proceeds back into drug law enforcement. I worked as both a circuit court law clerk and a recorders court law clerk. I was also a real estate law instructor.

One criminal sexual conduct case that I tried approximately three years ago still remains significant to me. After the defendant was convicted for committing a very brutal rape, the jurors wrote a letter to the victim praising her for coming forward to recount the dreadful event to perfect strangers in court. Because of their compassion and interest in the case, they came back a month lator for the sentence.

In People vs. Mitchell, Martin and Hobson, a criminal case (murder), I learned a great deal about judicial temperament and how to conduct a trial with attorneys whose lawyering styles clashed.

In a civil case in district court (remanded) I learned a lot about libel and slander and assessing case value.

3. Do you consider yourself a strict constructionist or a judiciai activist? Please explain.

I believe there is some of the strict constructionist and the judicial activist in me which I hope is what the people are looking for in a judge. I have been a trial attorney for 12 years at all levels of Michigan Courts and U.S. District Courts. As Special Assistant Attomey General I have tried countless cases in circuit courts in lower Michigan. Wayne County, Lapeer, Oakland, Ingham, Washtenaw, Lenawee to name a few. My entire career has been as a litigator of cases.

2. What is the most significant case you ever tried? (Significant in terms of learned the most, made the most money; established case law, changed lives - use any criteria you wish).

One of the most significant cases I have had was Morrell v. Providence Hospital. The case was tried in District Court, appealed to Circuit Court, Court of Appeals and the Michigan Supreme Court. It was a complicated insurance issue which could have cost consumers extremely high increases in premiums as well as increased risks for the insurance industry. The case gathered attention across the nation. Many amicus briefs were filed. The Supreme Court ruled as I had argued and the jurisprudence of the state was significantly developed in insurance law.

3. Do you consider yourself a strict constructionist or a judicial activist? Please explain.

As a member of the circuit bench I would have to be a strict constructionist. The circuit court is the trial level court. Judges of the circuit are obligated to follow the case law and interpretations of the Michigan Court of Appeals and Michigan and U.S. Supreme Courts. If a case comes before me as one of absolute first impression, my obligation is to give a reasonable interpretation of the law and protect the rights and equities of the parties.

While I have prosecuted drug dealers and murderers and put them in prison forever, and received substantial verdicts for clients, the most gratifying case was a public service, wherein an indigent mother and her three children were protected from wrongful eviction from their home into the street through judicial process.

3. Do you consider yourself a strict constructionist or a judicial activist? Please explain.

Realist. The function of the court is to apply, not create, law. Law may be legitimately modified by cases, but no judge has the right to usurp granted constitutional authority and substitute his or her judgment for legal reasoning, thereby demeaning the judicial process and debasing the office of judge.

1. What is your experience practicing in the court for which you are running?

I have argued appeals from the district courts, and administrative agencies, divorces, quit of title to real estate, wrongful death suit, felony criminal matters, breach of contract, and other civil law suits. Representation has included preparing brief, presenting oral arguments, and trials.

2. What is the most significant case you ever tried? (Significant in terms of learned the most, made the most money, established case law, changed lives - use any criteria you wish).

I believe the most significant case in my career was the case I decided not to try. As a partner of the law firm of Reld & Thomas, I was a tenant in the now defunct Book Cadillac Hotel Office Complex: After about one year of occupancy, the building's owner filed bankruptcy and demanded that all tenants vacate the building with less than 10 days notice.

Representing the law firm, I obtained a temporary injunction against the eviction from the Wayne County Circuit Court. The question of the legality of the eviction addressing the rights of tenants under the state landlord tenant law as related to the rights of the landlord under the bankruptcy law was to be. tried in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Michigan.

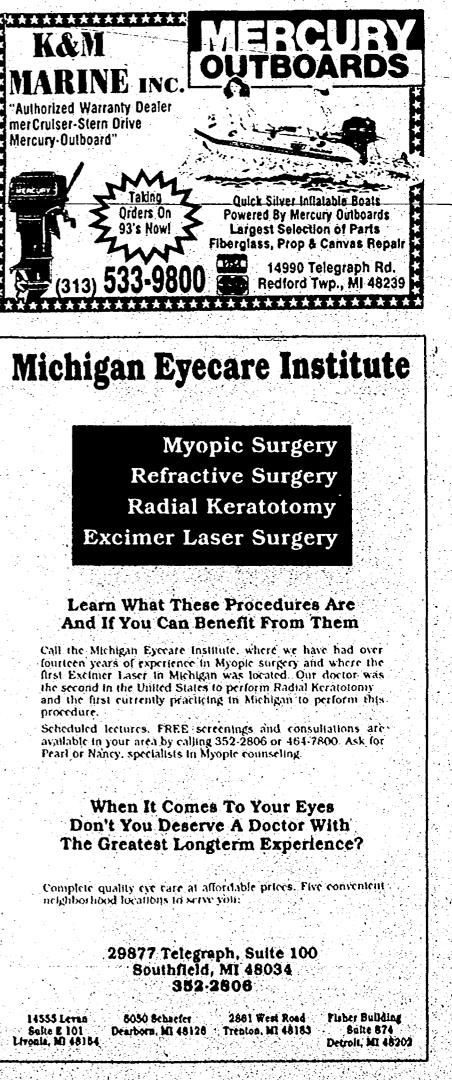

In the early 1980's several Michigan cities were experimenting with local rent control laws. The economy in southeastern Michigan was only beginning to make a recovery. Investors were taking a new interest in building condominiums. Concerned that the balance of landlord tenant rights inherent in the Michigan Summary Proceedings Act and local tent increase control ordinances may become null under the bankruptcy law I elected not pursue a the legal issue.

3. Do you consider yourself a strict constructionist or a judicial activist? Please explain.

It is the role of the judiciary to interpret, not create the law. Only by strict construction of the codified law does the judiciary remain within the realm of power granted to it by the citizenry. The balance of power created by the trilateral division of governmental functions is only preserved by the recognition and adherence to the principal of separation of powers. It is the duty of the judiciary to interpret and apply the law in a manner which will provide for a fair, reasonable, and legally permissible result.

pledging to try to find ways to keep the program alive or implement a similar one.

Thomas said he wants students who live in the Inkster portion of the Wayne-Westland district to have the same opportunities as pupils in other communities.

On Monday, he said he plans to meet with Inkster officials to try to find a solution.

The local DARE program will be entering its third year this fall, Westland Police Chief Michael Frayer said.

Although he retires Friday as police chief, Frayer implored local government officials to keep DARE alive.

"Don't let it falter, I beg of you," he said, in his final public address as police chief.

School board member Laurel Raisanen praised DARE for helping to combat the use of marijuana, cocaine, LSD and other drugs.

"I believe DARE will work, but it will take time," she said. "It took time to get our nation in the mess it's in, and it will take time to get it out."

McNamara is named 'MVP'

Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara has been named winner of the coveted "most valuable public official award" (MVPO) for 1992 by City & State, a national business newspaper for state and local officials which is published by Crain Communications.

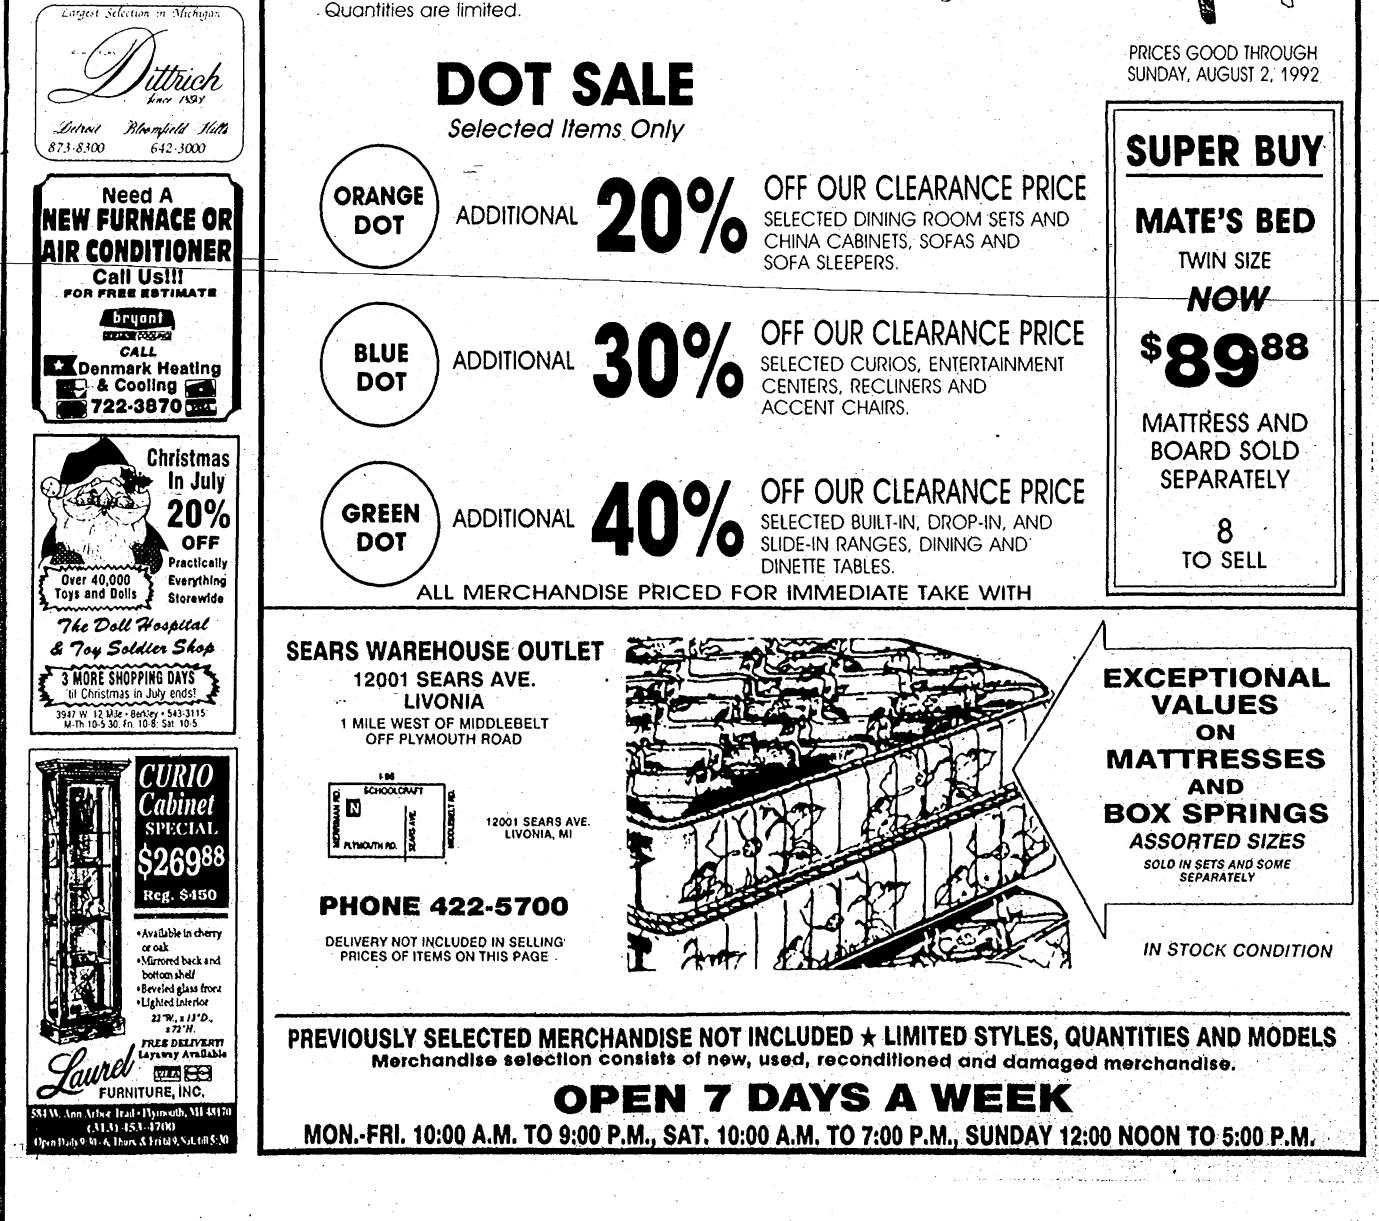

Each year, City & State selects six public officials, all at different levels of government, for the award. McNamara was chosen out of a list of 127 candidates who were submitted by other government officials and City & State staffers, said Editor Ellen Shubart, who chaired the selection committee.

According to Shubart; McNamara was selected as MVPO among government managers at the county level for his initiatives in economic development and the revitalization of Wayne County. Among his accomplishments:

• Upgrading of Wayne County's bond rating from junk bond to investment grade level.

• Creating a Department of Jobs & Economic Development to help improve the county's business climate.

• Passing five straight balanced budgets (including some modest surpluses) and a steadily increasing bond rating.

GOP primary Cabrera best House choice

estland voters in the new 18th state House of Representatives district will have a chance in Tuesday's primary election to nominate a Republican from a field of two candidates with similar views on the major issues.

14A(W)

The two are Steve Cabrera and Richard Delonis. The winner of Tuesday's GOP primary will advance to the Nov. 3 general election ballot and face veteran legislator Justine Barns, a Democrat who has represented the district for 10 years and is unopposed in her party's prima-

While Cabrera and Delonis have nearly identical views on abortion (they are both pro-life) and the need to expand the economy to create more jobs, Carbrera seems to be more specific and energetic about issues that are important to local voters.

Cabrera, 33, who works in Michigan National Bank's sales and real estate finance division, is on target in making education his top priority. Although he supports increased spending, he has demanded more accountability for both students and teachers to improve standards and raise academic test scores of public school students.

The Observer agrees with Cabrera that the so-called "Robin Hood" approach to school finance — the policy of taking money from wealthier school districts and giving it to poorer Cabrera would be the most effective opponent for the Democratic incumbent.

ones - is not working. It merely forces wealthy districts to raise local property tax rates and doesn't really help the poorer districts who are supposed to be benefit.

Cabrera supports Gov. John Engler's plan to cut the portion of taxes for schools by 30 percent and limit annual increases to 3 percent or the rate of inflation to help suburban homeowners whose tax bills have soared in recent years.

He also supports efforts to create more incentives for business and industry-to improve Michigan's economy. With the Willow Bun assembly plant scheduled to close next year, workers can use all the help they can get in ex-* panding the state's economy and create job opportunities.

Based on interviews and his past record, Cabrera appears to be a self-starter and a hard worker. If nominated Tuesday, he should be a viable challenge to Rep. Barns in the upcoming general election.

(The district includes most of Westland and three precincts in the northeast corner of Canton Township.)

Rep. Geake merits nomination

n the race for the Republican nomination in the new 13th Congressional District, state Sen. R. Robert Geake and University of Michigan professor Ray Tanter are two obvious standouts in a crowded field of six.

The district includes Garden City, Westland, part of Livonia, Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton Township. The winner of the Republican primary will face incumbent U.S. Rep. William D. Ford, a Democrat, who is unopposed in his party's primary.

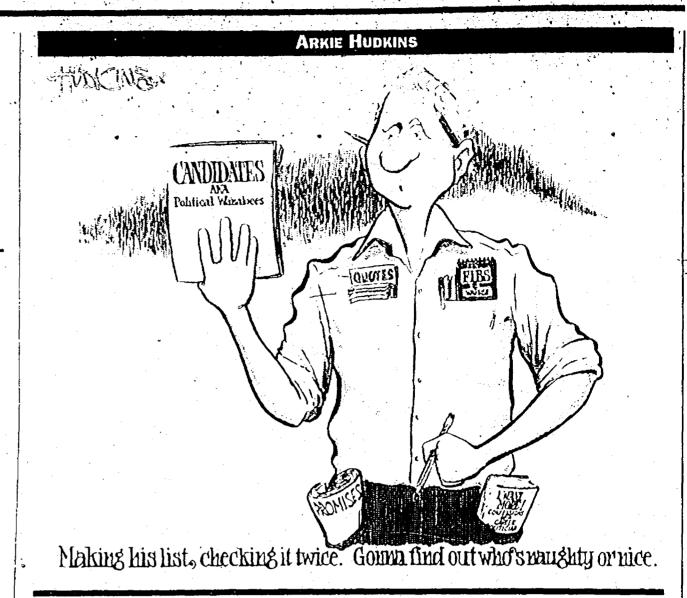

Tanter, a professor of political science at U-

Geake, a conservative Republican from Northville Township is known for being a lowkey, solid worker. He's been a good committee chair and has a superb attendance record in the state Legislature.

A conscientious and hardworking lawmaker. Geake is interested in solutions, not political grandstanding.

Although we disagree with Geake on several issues — including his stand on abortion -- he is a man of principle and on balance the best read a recent letter about (city senior resources director) Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek. It is finally nice to hear something nice about her. Thank you (letter writer) Laura Heim. I've known Sylvia for seven years and she and the center were the best things that ever happened to me. I was new in Michigan at the time. She works very hard for the seniors. It broke my heart to read all those untruths.

The city council twisted facts, especially on the seniors' travel bus situation. There are several exceptions on the council and they will get my vote.

Sylvia can never be replaced, as Laura said. She is the best friend the seniors ever had.

It is now obvious that the AIDS virus has infiltrated every sector of humanity from infants to the aged, male and female, mainly through blood transfusions and even marital sexual relations. Today, everyone is a possible candidate for this dreaded disease, and we clearly need an answer or solution to this killer disease soon. Denying support to research and eradication of AIDS is tantamount to self-destruction.

Anthony Brehler, Livonia

oters have a solid field of candidates from which to select three judges to the Wayne County Circuit Court (the 3rd judicial circuit).

The candidates are intelligent, well-prepared and with few exceptions, capable of tackling the role of circuit court judge.

In this race we recommend Denise Page Hood, Jeanne Stempien and Robert Ziolkowski. Voters should also pay attention to John W. Callahan.

Page Hood and Ziolkowski are clearly outstanding in this race. Both currently serve in Recorders Court. Both get high marks for efficiency, judicial temperament and fairness from their peers in the legal community.

In addition to their hectic professional schedules both remain active in community organizations.

Stempien, an attorney in private practice and a former school teacher, is chairwoman of the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees. Her 12 years of experience litigating a variety of cases. has prepared her for the complex cases of the circuit court bench. Her quiet, thoughtful demeanor will be an asset to the bench. Stemvien works hard, is fair and will serve capably if elected.

Callahan, a former Livonian, has some 20 years of experience as a litigator. He is bright. articulate and thoughtful. We were impressed by the depth and breadth of his background. His experience and candor make him a refreshing candidate in such a crowded field. He'll call them as he sees them - no floundering, no timidity about making decisions.

We urge voters to take the time and examine the nonpartisan section of Tuesday's ballot.

QUESTION: How will Ross Perot's decision to drop out of the presidential race affect the outcome? It will probably help (Bill) Clinton.

was distracted, so I missed the turn onto I-94 from the Jeffries. We were on the way to dinner in Grosse Pointe, so I said to my wife, "Let's carry on and go out on Jefferson Avenue."

I hadn't driven out Jefferson in a long time. Superficially, the wide avenue was unchanged. ("It's still bumpy; why can't they ever pave it properly?" I thought to myself.)

But the persistent deterioration was obvious The old Cadillac dealership was vacant, signs flapping in the dirty windows. The graceful brick lines of Little Harry's restaurant had come down, replaced by a barren excuse for a park.

There was the same old sense of squalor and decay in the rundown apartment buildings and shops. Bank buildings had been converted to social service agencies. And the streets were effectively deserted, even at 6 p.m. on a nice Saturday evening.

It wasn't all bad. Chrysler's new Jefferson Avenue plant, what I could see of it, looked new and efficient. And the entry to Belle Isle had been spruced up.

Which is why the new study caught my eye.

A survey of 59 center cities (including Detroit) and their suburbs between 1979 and 1987 showed that suburbanites fare better economically where central cities are financially strong. Indeed, some Detroit suburbs have been overtaken by other suburbs around thriving central cities.

"Today, suburbs continue to profit from vibrant cities and are hurt by declining ones." says study director Hank Savitch of the University of Louisville. "The mark of a healthy suburb is not self-sufficiency, but interaction with a prosperous urban core. Hope for the suburbs lies in developing ties with central cities."

The hig piece of statistical evidence was that metro areas which had the biggest suburban income gains were those where central city incomes improved or remained solid.

PHILIP POWER

For example, income in the Baltimore suburbs surpassed Detroit's from 1979-87, while the Baltimore urban core moved from sixth worst -- behind Detroit -- to ahead. The Boston area showed a similar pattern.

The data are interesting, if not entirely compelling.

They may indicate coincidence, for example, rather than direct cause linking suburban prosperity with that of the urban core. During this same period, the auto industry in southeastern Michigan has taken a terrible pounding. Our suburban economic decline may well have come more directly from the troubles of our leadingindustry than from lack of links with downtown Detroit.

But the connection is undeniable. Just ask, for example, the personnel office of any largecorporation trying to recruit people to live in this area. Universally, recruits are repelled at the idea of living in the Detroit area.

Which is why the political situation in Detroit is so tragic. Coleman Young may have been an able and energetic mayor once. But he is not any longer. And the longer the passivity and torpor of the city continues, the deeper the decay cuts into the fabric of the city, and the more irreversible comes the decline.

POINTS OF VIEW

Real convention action is behind the scenes

ne down, one national convention to go. One more week — Aug. 17-20 — of political coverage before TV news can get back to America's real business: crime and sports.

Why does the custom of holding week-long conventions hang on there like a bad smell or the Electoral College? It has been 24 years since a convention really decided anything. That was Hubert Humphrey's '68 Democratic convention in Chicago. Since then:

 The presidential nominee has been known weeks or months in advance.

 No. 1 picks his running mate, whom delegates tamely ratify. Not since 1956 has there been an open battle (Kefauver over Kennedy and Gore Sr.).

• There may be debates over party platforms, which no one reads five minutes later.

Under my government, national convention delegates wouldn't fly to a big city for five days. The work of a national convention can be done in three hours.

Delegates would go one Saturday to their state capital where they would have an electronic voting system. The platform would have been distributed a week in advance and, with amendments, could be linished in an hour.

Nominating and acceptance speeches would be viewed on closed-circuit television Delegates would have a better view than they had in Madison Square Garden or the Astrodome, where many are a football field away. Security? You wouldn't need tons of cops on overtime. Floor demonstrations? No one has been impressed by them since the 1940 Wendell Willkie joke.

Mine is a minority view, however, because conventions — particularly the Democratic - have taken on a new meaning. They are a place where interest groups can get together and "network," in pop-psych parlance.

The metro dailies and TV networks haven't quite figured it out yet. They still concentrate on the convention ocratic women's caucus. Attendees convinced each other that this is "the year of the woman." They raised funds for "Emily's List." (Emily stands for "early money is like yeast" — it raises. dough for women candidates.)

There's a potent group called AIPAC - American Israel Public Affairs Committee. Jewish activists communicate by newsletter, the press and telephone for four years. Here they meet in person. AIPAC has ties in both parties, Indeed, HUD Secretary Jack Kemp once described himself as "a de facto member of AIPAC."

A smaller group but increasing in significance is the Arab community.

In the 1988 Democratic convention, the Jesse Jackson fans virtually disap neared throughout the day to attend their own caucuses.

Organized labor has its events. Only 16 percent of the American work force bargains collectively through a union, but the Michlgan Democratic delegation was 50 percent union officials, You could see National Education Association shirts in most state delegations in New York City. Ditto with AFSCME, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. There's a friendly argument about which had the biggest bloc of votes.

In the Grand Old Party, geographical designations still hold. A Republican is a Michigan Republican or a South Carolina Republican or a Mountain State Republican. Among Democrats, you're a member of the teachers. caucus, the black caucus, the labor . caucus - a specific ethnic or economic group.

So those who criticize the national convention process are missing something.

But permit me one footnote: Why is it that Democrats, the party of po' folk and the downtrodden, convene in New York, where hotels are $200 a night and fax messages cost $8 a page, while Republicans, the party of the country club set, meet in Houston for $70 a night and faxes cost $12 a page?

Spiritual reserve can bring in the gold in Barcelona envision two true rebel prototypes: a. the uncompromising idealist who is literally ready to die for freedom and universally beneficial change, and b. the dauntless individualist who celebrates life in resiliently innovative ways

World-class track athletes are always in the "b" category (and sometimes in the "a" as well.) These uncommon creatures characteristically command a reserve of spiritual energy to fight off any unanticipated challenge - a spiritual reserve being far more visceral than a physical one even in physical contests. The real rebel's mind can force the body to do what it ordinarily couldn't.

As long as I live, I'll never forget the night immediately after the United States track team's exhausting flight from America to Europe in 1957. On that muggy Fourth of July evening in Milan, we faced the Italian team, which wasn't supposed to have a sprinter capable of dashing 400 meters in 47 seconds. I was one of the two tired Americans assigned to face the two top Italians in the grueling 400.

The Italian champion, Giovanni Scavo, was particularly supercharged because his 50,000 countrymen in the stadium were rythmically chanting "Sca-vo! Sca-vo!" in one thunderous voice as we crouched in the starting blocks. To the consternation of our coaches, he and his equally charged-up teammate both blazed past the 300meter mark in under 34 seconds, leading me and my U.S. teammate by nearly 10 yards in a race that would be over in about 12 more seconds - and they didn't appear to be tiring.

Drawing desperately on a scemingly non-existent physical reserve, I finally caught them in the home stretch and barely fought them off all the way to the finish line, winning narrowly despite them running the 47 they were "incapable" of, Even though I had sprawled to the track in my dive through the tape, it was my sweet turn now to hear the heady chants of "Telee-ford! Tel-ee-ford!" as I regained my feet. (The crowd thought my name contained three syllables, because it had been printed "Teleford" in the meet program.)

While I rallied up a reserve, which I hadn't sensed was there, it was my spiritual reserve that enabled me to somehow summon those faint fumes of physical fuel to fling myself across the finish line first. That spiritual reserve was fed by the fear of disgracing my red, white and blue uniform by finishing behind the colors of another country. In the stretch I had been at the red-hazy threshold of uncounscious. ness and almost literally "running on empty." (A tragic postscript to that story was the promising Scavo's death in a car crash six months later.)

If you're watching the Olympics, you'll see a reserve like this summoned frequently, but to fully comprehend its price, you need to have paid it sometime yourself.

If transplanted Detroiter Quincy Watts pays that price on Aug. 5, he'll win the 400 in Barcelona. He'll also run on our 1,600-meter relay team that If you're watching the Olympics, you'll see a reserve like this summoned frequently, but to fully comprehend its price, you need to have paid it sometime yourself.

will break the world record on Aug. 8. (I began to make these two predictions in my July 16 column, which was inadvertently shortened - and which a Troy and a Westland reader called to ask me about.) Remember you read it first in the Observer & Eccentric.

Carnes scholarship

Kit Mastroberto, an All-State hockey player from Livonia Stevenson High, is one of two recipients of the Neil James Carnes Memorial Scholarship Award.

Mastroberto joins Rochester's Matt Fleury (Birmingham Brother Rice High) as winners of the $1,000 scholarship, given in memory of Neil Carnes, a Plymouth resident and Montreal Canadiens' draft pick who died three years ago in a motorcyle accident. (July 30, 1989). The scholarship fund was established by Carnes' parents, Neil and Lois, of Livonia.

The award goes annually to former members of the Michigan National Hockey League. (Mastroberto played for the national champion Little Caesars Midget Major squad).

Both Mastroberto and Fleury plan to attend the University of Michigan this fall.

Mastroberto carried a 4.26 grade-point average (summa cum laude) at Stevenson. This past season he was a member of the Spartans' hockey team, which captured the Suburban Prep Hockey League crown and reached the Class A regional hockey finals, losing 2-1 to eventual state champion Brother Rice.

Past winners of the award included Mike Stone (Michigan) and Tim Litchard (Notre Dame), 1990; and Plymouth's Tom Yockey (Central Michigan), 1991.

UD-Mercy signs DiBasio

Laura DiBasio, a Class A regional champ (No. 3 singles) from Livonia Stevenson High, is one of four student-sthletes to sign national letters of intent for 1992-93 season with the University of Detroit-Mercy tennis souad.

DiBasio, who reached the second round of the state tournament before losing to eventual winner Eve Halderson of Kalamazoo Loy Norrix, joins U-D recruits Karren Jeppesen (Bay City Central), Hillary Hart (Wyandotte Roosevelt) and Nadine Nemes (Farmington Hills Mercy).

DiBasio was also runner up last fall in the Western Lakes Activities Association meet.

One of the metro area's biggest road races was held Saturday in Livonia, part of the triple crown. Over 1,000 runners competed in the Roadrunner Classic. Kevin Hanson was the men's overall winner, while Ann Boyd took the women's division.

BY M.B. DILLON STAFF WRITER

More than 1,100 runners, walkers and wheelers turned out for the ninth annual Roadrunner Classic Saturday in Livonia, sponsored by the Redford Roadrunners.

The evening event, which started and finished at Veterans Park (Livonia Family Y), featured the classic junior; a one-mile race; the main event - a flat, fast, certified 8-kilometer race (just shy of five miles); along with a spirited post-race party, awards and colorful Tshirts.

Kevin Hanson of Shelby Township had no trouble outdistancing the field. on a warm, humid night in 24:40. Ann Boyd of Ann Arbor did the same in the women's race (27:49), one minute ahead of runnerup Kim Bruce of Dearborn.

Hanson and the men's field ran with the unsolicited help of a rabbit, which paced them the first three miles.

Hanson knew the un-registered runner planned to drop out, but it probably threw off the other runners.

Hanson was delighted with his time. After he finished, he realized his brother Keith had won the 1984 Classic in a time of 24:42.

"That's a bonus," Hanson said with a laugh. "Otherwise he would have told me I was second."

Mile winners

Winner of the men's mile run was Keith Scalzo, 31, of Allen Park. He ran a personal best in 5:13. The first female to break the tape was Jennifer Bryl, 14, of Ann Arbor in 7:12. For Bryl, it was a family affair. Her mom, Jane Ketchin, won the 40-44 age division in 34:41. Her dad, John Bryl, placed ninth in the 45.49 division in 31:51. Her sister Emily, 8, ran the Classic Junior in 10:54.

Roadrunner 8K event a classic

Top finishers in the junior classic mile turned in some impressive times.

First to finish was Robert Block, 12, of Livonia in 5:46. On his tail were runner-up Harold Clayton, 9, of Monroe in 5:46.5, and third-place Trent Jones of Plymouth, 12, in 6:12.

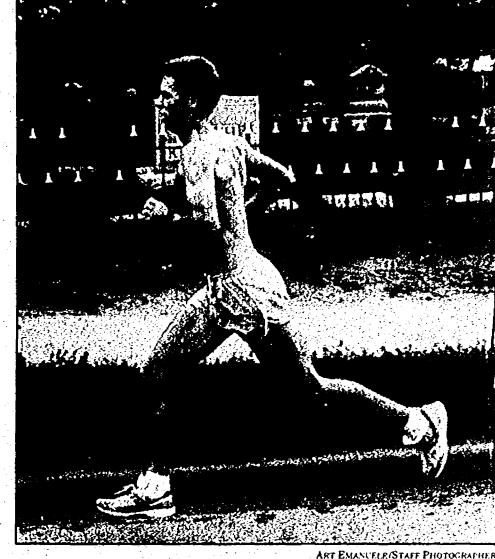

Jessica Welch, 11, of Monroe defended her classic junior title, leading the females in 5:58. Erin Longhurst, 9, of Livonia took second in 6:41. Julie Zalewski, 12, of Trenton finished third in 7:20.

Behind the speedsters was an entrant who finished the 8K in a little less than two hours, bringing tears to the eyes of spectators who lined the finishing stretch. When wheeler Donna Cruz, 29, of Farmington Hills crossed the finish line, propelling herself backwards, she did so to a thunderous applause.

The tenacious Cruz took a little longer than she'd planned to finish the race - her chair had just been adjusted and the seat kept slipping forward, according to her uncle and coach, John Cruz of Plymouth.

Women's battle

Another exciting finish involved the second- and third-place battle in the women's 8K, as Dearborn residents Bruce and Carol Poenisch.

Leader of pack: Kevin Hanson of Shelby Township ran away from the field Saturday to become the overall winner in the 8K Roadrunners Classic.

Bruce and Poenisch ran the first mile with Boyd, the eventual winner.

Boyd, however, pulled away, leaving friends Bruce and Poenisch to battle for second.

Poenisch trailed Bruce, but caught her at the four-mile mark. "We were shoulder to shoulder," Bruce said. "It was just a matter of who, wanted it more.

Caesars loses driver's seat

By STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

The people at Little Caesars can't own everything in town.

Mike Ilitch owns the Red Wings and this week struck a deal to buy the Tigers, but the Livonia Little Caesars baseball team has let Delwal take over the driver's seat in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoffs.

Left-hander Derek Wirebaugh pitched a seven-hitter and Tom Kretschmer hit his second home run in as many nights as Delwal blanked Caesars 9.0 in a secondround game Wednesday at Livonia's Ford Field.

The loss dropped defending champ Caesars into the loser's bracket, where it will meet Walter's at 5:30 p.m. tonight at Ford Field. Walter's stayed alive in the doubleelimination playoffs with a 10-5 win Wednesday over Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury at Ford Field.

Caesars coach John Moraltis isn't too concerned.

"We've got two starters (Andy Margolick and Brandon Endicott) left," he said. "I've come back and won in the loser's bracket. But these guys (Delwal) have a good team.

Delwal finished the regular season 1/4 point behind champion Caesars. The Parmington-based team will play at 8 p.m. tonight against the winner of the Caesars-Walter's game, and a win would send Delwal to next week's All-American Amateur Baseball Association championship in Johnstown, Pa.

COLLEGIATE

If Delwal loses tonight, the LCBL championship will be decided at 5:30 p.m. Friday at Ford Field.

Pitching has been the key for Delwal, which owns a 2.26 earned run average. Mark Temple (North Farmington) will get the call tonight.

"I remember last year losing games 15-14 and I said, 'We're at least going to be pitching deep," Delwal coach Bob Peterson said.

Kretschmer gave Wirebaugh a 3-0 lead in the first with a three-run homer, his eighth of the year. Delwal scored three more runs off losing pitcher Mark VanAmede in the fourth, highlighted by a run-scoring double by Jason Valente and tworun single by Billy Hardy.

Wirebaugh, who lost an earlier decision to Caesars, didn't need anymore help and he twice pitched out of jams this time. Caesars loaded the bases with one out in the third on a single and two walks but Wirehaugh struck Jerry Shippey and got Aaron Mach to ground out to end the threat.

Dave Roman and RJ Taylor had consecutive singles in the fourth, but Wirebaugh retired the next two batters.

"Derek has improved quite a bit, he's added a slider, has great control and mixes his pitches well, Delwal pitching coach Bruce Gerish said. "The key is he's mentally tough and he prevents big innings.' In Wednesday's first game, Walter's ace pitcher Mike Coleman walked nine, hit a batter and allowed seven hits but had enough to eliminate Hines Park 10-5.

Walter's played without No. 2 pitcher and outfielder Dave Wood, who will miss the rest of the playoffs, "unless there's a two-week rain delay," coach Mike Keller said.

Walter's trailed 5.4 after 31/2 innings before scoring five runs in the bottom of the fourth off Hines Park starter Chris Newton for a 9-5 lead. Newton, who pitches for the University of Michigan, walked seven batters in three innings and fell to 2-2. Joe Brusseau (Borgess and Madonna) and Kevin Young (Farmington) each delivered two-run singles in the fourth, with Young's hit being the one that knocked Newton out of the game.

Keith Bozyk (Plymouth and Redford Catholic Central) allowed two hits, one walk and one run the rest of the way and left Hines Park coach Dave Carroll wondering why he left Newton in so long.

"When a kid is struggling and the umpire is not giving the strike zone it's sometimes best to take him out (earlier)," Carroll sald,

Ed Gundry (Plymouth Salem) led Hines Park with three hits in four at-bats, including a two-run double In the third that fied the score 2.2.

Caesars seizes league crown

A sweep of its two-game weekend series with the Tecumseh Green Giants, enabled Little Caesars to clinch first place in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball Leagues

On Friday, Caeşars edged Tecumseh 5.4 thanks to a solid pitching performance by Mark VanAmeyde, who went the distance and fanned eight.

Caesars (21-9) was paced offensively by Jerry Shippe and Aaron Mach, who collected two hits apiece.

On Saturday, Caesars routed Tecumseh 8-0 in a make-up game. from earlier in the season.

Brandon Endicott was the winning pitcher, going the first five innings and striking out five. John Spoyler went the final two'innings and recorded the save.

Caesars got all it needed offensively in the second inning when Mike Glacomontonio slammed a three-run homer.

Mach homer saves victory

*Dave Roman and Aaron Mach led Livonia Little Caesars to a 5-2 win over Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury in Tuesday's Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoff opener at Ford Field.

Roman (Livonia Franklin) pitched nine innings for the first time ever and earned the win with a seven-hitter, no walks and 11 strikeouts. Mach's three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning broke a 2-2 tie and sent Hines Park reliever Jeff Paluk (Plymouth Salem) home as the losing pitcher.

It was only the second homer of the year for Mach, who ended the regular season as the LCBL's second-best hitter with a .388 average.

"You weren't in a batter's slump, you were in a home run slump," Caesars coach John Moraitis said to Mach afterward.

Paluk relieved starter Scott . Tom Kretschmer had a three-run Rodgers (Salem) with one out in the eighth after Caesars' J.R. Tavlor stroked a double off the fence to score Jerry Shippe (Westland Glenn) for a 2-2 tie.

Rodgers, who allowed seven hits, also surrendered an unearned run in the first.

Joe Weidenbach and Keith Bozyk had RBI singles for Hines Park. T.C. Raptis (Madonna), who doubled in the sixth, and Tom Davey (Plymouth Salem), who tripled off the fence in the seventh, scored the Hines Park runs.

Delwal pastes Walter's

Delwal erased a 3-2 deficit with six runs in the seventh inning to defeat Walter's 8-3 in another LCBL first-round playoff game Tuesday at Ford Field.

homer and Noah Bremen stroked a two-run double in the seventh off Walter's losing pitcher Steve Ross, who relieved starter Louie McKaig after five innings. Kretschmer's homer was his league-leading seventh and he was tied after Tuesday night with Bremen for the team lead with 25 RBI.

Jason Valente was 3-for-4 with two runs scored for Walter's and Mike Schwartzenberger added a pair of doubles.

Dave Wood and Jeff Pendell (Livonia Churchill) had RBI singles for Walter's.

The winning pitcher was Todd[•] Boike, who improved to 5-1 with a complete-game effort. McKaig was lifted with the score tied 2-2 after five innings so Ross suffered the loss for Walter's.

Livonia-West wins Reese district

Livonia finally has a sandlot to become one of four Michigan baseball team this summer it can brag about.

A 12-and-under Pee Wee Reese Major team, known as Livonia-West, captured the National Amateur Baseball Federation's Macomb District title last weekend by winning four of five games.

Livonia-West (24-5 overall), coached by Bill Rabe and Tim Kerr, will meet Walbridge, Ohio in an eight-team NABF regional tourney beginning today in Oregon, Ohio (near Toledo):

The winner advances to the NABF Pee Wee Reese World Series, Aug. 6-9 in Jonesboro, Ark.

In district play, Livonia-West bounced back from a 12-8 thirdround loss to the Washington Twins (double-elimination format) teams to advance into the four-state regional. (The other qualifiers include the Rochester Rams, Michigan Merchants of Woodhaven and Battle Creek).

Garden City's Colin Wikinson, one of three pick-up players by Livonia-West for the district, capped a five-run seventh-inning rally with a bases-loaded two-run single to beat the Troy Braves in the championship final, 7-5.

Vince Marsico and Matt Gabrielli delivered clutch hits to start the comeback.

Roy Rabe, in relief of starter Andy Morche, earned his third pitching win of the tourney.

seven innings, not yielding a walk, in an 8-4 triumph. Livonia-West opened the tourney with a 4-3 victory over the Lansing All-Stars as Justin Kerr's extrabase hit keyed the victory. (Rabe got the win).

Rabe (four innings) and J.J. Alberta (three) then combined to hurl the Livonians past the Lake Orion Dragons in the second round, 6-1.

Rounding out the Livonia-West squad, which finished third during the regular season in the 19-team division of Little Caesars Amateur Baseball Federation: Bill Bauer, Matt Hennessey, Jay Laura, Jon Marlin, Jason Marczec, Joe Mizzl, Morche, however, enabled Livo- Brad Tracy, Brent Wojtyniak, Mike nia-West to reach the tournament Carney (Garden City) and Nick De-

Prep stars meet for final time

By Steve Kowalski Staff Writer

One of the finest individual performances at a Michigan High School Football Coaches Association All-Star Game came in 1983 from a guy who looked like he didn't belong.

"I remember (Farmington Hills Harrison quarterback) Ken Kish," whom everyone said wasn't a great ballplayer, didn't look like a quarterback, doesn't run fast," said Don-Lessner, executive director of the MHSFCA. "John Herrington (Harrison's coach) said 'Wait until game time.' And here the kid comes out and throws for (about) 275 yards, three touchdowns. You never know what a kid can do until he puts on the pads."

Kish, who went on to star at Albion College, led the East to a 24-10 win. And that's part of the beauty of the 12th annual MHSFCA All-Star Game, scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Michigan State University's Spartan Stadium. Tickets cost $6 each.

This game never draws as many fans as it should, but for the 88 players selected to play it's a final chance to show what they can do as a high school football player. It will be the only chance for some players who were overlooked by bigger colleges in the recruiting process to prove they belong on the same field with a high school All-Americans like Sterling Heights Stevenson tight end Pete Chryplewicz, headed to Notre Dame. Chryplewicz is playing for the East team, which is looking to win for the seventh time against the West in the series.

Moshimer coaching East

One guy who has nothing to prove but has been selected to coach the East All-Stars is Plymouth Salem coach Tom Moshimer. Moshimer has coached football since 1959 when he took over a struggling program at Dundee, and he also is past president of the MHSFCA.

Lessner, who coaches a successful Riverview High School program, knows Moshimer well.

"We started coaching together when Tom was starting at Dundee, I was starting at Monroe Catholic Central," Lessner recalled. "He took a team at Dundee that won only two or three games in three years and then won 35 straight games. He's very organized, has good rapport with the players and a sound knowledge of the game of football."

As an active member and past president of the MHSFCA, Moshimer has attended each All-Star game and usually spends the week in the dorms at MSU. So lodging at MSU is nothing new to Moshimer, although coaching will be the team to have a good time and to win the game.

Because he was the highest vote getter among the coaches selected for the All-Star Game, Moshimer was able to choose one of his assistants at Salem, Jim Jarvey, as an assistant coach with the East.

Moshimer also is renewing ties with East assistant coach Ernie Hoffman, who played for Moshimer at Dundee and now coaches there.

"He played for me in '65 and '66, was a tough little kid," Moshimer said, remembering Hoffman as a player. "He was about a 155-pound. running back. He's gained a little weight -- like we all did."

Granger playing for cousin ton Hills Harrison flanker Roy Granger.

Granger made his uniform number request later than some of his teammates so he'll be wearing No. 22 instead of the familiar No. 2 he wore at Harrison. Granger wanted to wear either No. 2 or No. 1, the latter number in honor of his cousin, Stanford Blue, who was shot to death last year. Blue played high school football at Detroit Henry Ford and taught Granger a lot about the game.

Granger will attend Michigan State this fall, but because of academic reasons won't be eligible to play football until 1993.

"I went to see Stanford's grave this morning (Saturday)," Granger said Saturday. "I dedicated my whole senior year to him and this is my last game as a high school player and that's why I want to score a touchdown real bad. I know a lot of the guys on the West. They're all out to get me."

A dominating performance enabled the Michigan Blazers to post an easier-than-expected 4-0 victory over the Birmingham Cobras II in the opening round of the Great, Lakes Men's Soccer League First Division playoffs, Sunday at Henry Ford Community College.

The Blazers will face the Redford Marauders, the league's No. 1 team during the regular season and a 2-1 victor last Sunday over the Dearborn Internationals. That semifinal will be at 6 p.m. Sunday at Bicentennial Park in Livonia.

The other First Division semifinal matches the Ann Arbor Hattricks, 4-2 overtime winners over Livonia Paragon, against Flint Bud Light, which beat Livonia Venom 4-0. That semifinal will be at 3 p.m. Sunday at Bicentennial. The championship game will be at 4 p.m.

Livonia Ladywood High track and cross country coach Joe Peruski has been elevated to the school's athletic director's post.

The 28-year-old Peruski replaces Kim Linenger, who left after four years to take a job as director of the Catholic Youth Organization of Detroit.

"It's a nice position to step up into," Peruski said, "because Kim left behind a top-notch, A-1 program.'

"Right now I'm learning and getting to know the new administration, and I've been meeting with the coaches," Peruski said. "I also plan to meet with the Blazer Club

Peruski is a 1983 graduate of Dearborn Edsel Ford High where he ran cross country and track. He also played basketball.

He attended Henry Ford Community College before graduating from Eastern Michigan University.

Tennis, anyone? David Schwartz, owner of the Tennis Co. in Southfield, has parlayed an idea and a love of the game into a multi-million dollar business.

Specialty tennis shop ahead of its time

Service and selection are David Schwartz's aces in luring repeat customers to his tennis store:

BY GERALD FRAWLEY AFF WRITER

His was a super specialty store when super specialty stores weren't cool. Wander through a mall and try to avoid stores that sell umpteen zillion products, all of the same ilk.

They've got stores that sell only socks. Stores that sell videos and movie-related items. They've got computer software stores. Just about anything a consumer would want to buy can be found in the super specialty, which is why the stores are one of the fastest growing retail segments in the 1990s. When David Schwartz started the Tennis Co. in 1977, that just wasn't the case. If you wanted tennis equipment 15 years ago, you went to a department store or one of the few general sports stores. An avid player and tennis fan,

Schwartz thought there had to be a better way

Today, after 15 years in business and five incarnations, The Tennis Co. "better way" has become a business success story. In 1991, the Tennis Co. registered 32.5 million in sales. Earlier this month, the store moved to new quarters

- with 8,500 square feet of merchandise and demonstration areas on Southfield Road near 13 Mile.

The super specialty

has the driving force behind super specialty stores.

In recent years, selection has taken on an even greater role. "They have become destination stores." People will travel from great distances to shop at them

"It (the number of new stores) is clearly a rapidly growing segment of the retail market, although the (percentage of sales) is still relatively small," he said.

Tennis, anyone?

the tennis department. All they had were socks for $3.49. "That was a fair amount of money in those days."

While there, he also checked into getting his tennis racket restrung. "They said it would take three or four days."

For an avid player, being without a racket for several days is unacceptable, he said. "I thought it was a service that should be provided."

A year later, he set up shop in a 750square-foot building in Oak Park that was once a house.

"When we started, we kind of broke price," he said. "If they sold a racket for $29.99, we sold it for $19.99. Schwartz said it became more and more apparent that service was the crit-

Comerica lists branch closings

Southfield will be the hardest hit suburban community in terms of bank branches closed after the completion of the Comerica Bank and Manufacturers Bank merger.

Six Southfield branches will be closed; 10 branches will remain open.

A total of 55 Michigan branches will be consolidated over the next 11/2 years.

Area closings include:

• Farmington/Farmington Hills: Manufacturers at Grand River-Halsted. Six branches remain.

• Livonia: Manufacaturers at Ann Arbor Road-Ann Arbor Trail and Plymouth-Merriman and Comerica at Six Mile-Newburgh. Six branches remain.

• Birmingham: Comerica at Woodward-Oakland. Three branches remain.

 Bloomfield Township/West Bloomfield: Manufacturers at Adams-Square Lake and 14 Mile-Farmington and Comerica at Woodward-Square Lake. There will be 10 branches remaining after consolidation.

Rochester Hills: Manufacturers at Avon-Rochester Five branches remain.

• Canton Township: Manufacturers at Joy Road-Morton Taylor. Two branches remain.

• Southfield: Manufacturers at Evergreen-Jeanette, Northland Point, Southfield-13 Mile, 2000 Town Center; Comerica at 10 Mile-Telegraph, 12 Mile-Evergreen.

• Troy: Comerica, John R-Wattles. Seven branches remain.

 Westland: Manufacturers, Wayne-Warren. Five branches remain.

Customers of one bank may not conduct business at an office of the other until the bank merger is complete, probably Oct a Comerica said it will spend more than $5 million on renovations to 30 branches. Renovations will include expanding the number of drive-up and teller windows, adding automated teller machines, increasing the amount of parking space available and providing easier access for physically handicapped customers.

Branches will not be consolidated until the renovations are complete and the selected branch can accommodate its new customers. The selected branch will be staffed by employees from each of the combining branches. All branch employees have been assured they have positions, the bank said.

Most of the consolidations will occur in 1993, and customers will receive at least 90 days advance notification.

Rick Valade, retail consulting partner with Arthur Andersen, said the super specialty store is a concept that has evolved from one of the earliest types of retailing - the department store. The concept goes back to the early 1900s, he said. Then, there were general stores in rural areas and department stores in the urban centers.

"Ever since then, people have been picking out departments and making them into whole stores."

For the most part, Valade said, price

Tennis was in its heyday the year Schwartz decided to start the Tennis Co., but it wasn't the enticement of big money that spurred the idea for the store.

"I was heading home from work and I was going to play tennis - you know, dressed in a business suit and all and I had brought my stuff, but I forgot the socks."

So he stopped at one of the sports retailers of the day and found his way to

Trade show slated for manufacturers

If it works for service businesses, why not a trade fair for manufacturers?

That's what John H. White, executive director of the Livonia Chamber of Commerce, has cooked up for companies as large as auto manufacturers to small job shops in southeastern Michigan.

"In this community, we have an industrial corridor second to none. There's probably some 1,500 husinesses there," White said. "We have this great asset. I've been looking at how do we serve that part of our community.'

Where previous business expos sponsored by the chamber welcomed walk-in visitors and featured firms providing financial, computer, printing and health-care services, the trade fair would be geared strictly to manufacturers, their staffs and purchasing professionals.

The one day fair tentatively has been scheduled for October in Livonia. Exhibitors would be charged $500-$750. Many companies, including Ford and GM, have committed, White said.

"If I get 100 booths, I would be very delighted. This whole thing is going to be a huge networking opportunity," he said.

Dennis Dresser, president of Gel Inc. in Livonia, has met with White to set up the exposition.

"The big benefit I see for us is it's really focused around purchasing," he said. "It just opens for us the possibility for more activity. With the way things are in the auto industry, there may be other opportunities we may have never looked at.'

Gel, founded in 1976, makes gear assemblies, turn tilts and signals and plastic components.

"If it promotes opportunities for purchasing or on the supply side, we'll be glad to participate," Dresser said.

Manufacturers from throughout southeastern Michigan contacted through chambers of commerce in Observer & Eccentric communities will be invited to take part, White said.

"The overall goal for the whole project is to provide a vehicle for business to buy better, buy more economically, by becoming aware of businesses right here they could be buying from," White said.

"A rep on the road can make at maximum probably four calls a day," he said. "At the expo, we're looking at attendance of 2,000 to 3,000.1

Brenda Zimmerman is spokeswoman for the Construction Association of Michigan, which has sponsored an annual trade show.

"Exhibitors can make a lot of money on those trade floors," she said. "A lot of exhibitors offer discounts, specials, to drum up even more business.

"Like any sort of business, it depends on supply and demand," Zimmerman said. "Good attendance is the key. Quality of attendees is critical, too. A show lives and dies by how well it's promoted."

"We were going after the hardcore tennis players," Schwartz said. Just the other day, Schwartz said he arranged for someone to be at the store at 7 a.m. in the morning to receive a racket and restring it in time for the customer's trip.

"Sometimes you have to do things like that." The store's reputation for service has resulted in a strong following.

Destination store

He said his customers travel from all over the metro area --- and sometimes from out-state areas - because of the service and selection.

Another device that has proven successful for the Tennis Co. is an innovation borrowed from the membership warehouse clubs called the Tennis Club.

The membership only club entitles participants to discounts on merchandise and service. "For example, for a $170 warm-up, we sell bership costs $55, but Schwartz knows his clientele.

"My tennis customer goes through three string jobs a year, three pairs of shoes and who knows how many clothes."

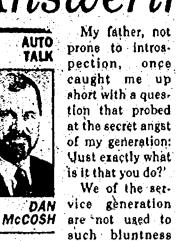

While a membership doesn't hinder customers, it does do something for him -- it encourages them to return. The return customer is essential to a retail business - es, pecially when that enterprise caters to a shrinking population.

"The specialty store services a" very select group," he said. When he started, there were probably 100 stores serving a tennis-playing population of about 100,000.

Now, there are probably 80,000 tennis players in the metro area, but even fewer stores.

The smaller number of players doesn't bother him because each surviving store has done better as competitors have gone out of business.

Even now, with the ever-growing competition as more sports retailers enter the market, Schwartz said he is unconcerned. "When tennis takes off - and it seems to be doing that for past two years - we'll be in a good position because we have a larger percentage to start from."

> Hollywood is working on a TV series about an auto writer.

No kidding. Written by Gary Markowitz, and starring Pierce Brosnan, 'Running Wilde' supposedly is a vivid portrayal of a hardcharging guy who races cars, chases women and writes about it all. Inthe company of television fare where the hottest show is about a Detroit home-improvement show host, this just might sell.

Much as I resemble the suave Mr. Brosnan, I confess that 'Running Wilde' is not about me. In fact. most of the writers who illuminate the automotive scene today would best be portrayed by Michael Pollard. In this relatively small and cloistered field, it poses an interesting question whether anyone in real life has the stuff of a series hero.

Frankly, the only auto writer I

Today she' works out of a combination packing crate and office stuffed into her garage in Santa Fe, N.M., where she churns out artful, carefully crafted pieces that bring the automotive scene to life - as long as you keep her off the subject of antilock brakes.

As far as I can piece her autobiography together, she was covering auto racing for the New York Herald Tribune in the early 1960s when the only logical thing to do seemed to be to buy a Ferrari GTO, ship it. to Europe and drive against the likes of Phil Hill and Carroll Shelby. 'I'd finish a race, pull out my Underwood and put it on a pile of tires, and yell out 'Who won?',' she recalls.

It was the golden age of sports car racing, with the fastest sports cars in the world, flat-out on open roads, careening across a Europe just pulling itself out of the ravages of war.

As a writer, she managed to bring it all to life, capturing the ambience as well as the machinery, while driving well enough to race at LeMans and in the Mille Miglis before that race was shut down.

Eventually, she sold the Ferrari, then founded a community newspaper in Vermont, and later launched the predecessor to Autoweek magazine.

Today there is, of course, The Book she is working on - but it's only about other people racing, not herself. One is tempted to crib her story and do a TV series, but who in the world could play the part?

W's T-shirts benefit work of 7 hospices

SUE MASON, EDITOR

THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1992

953-2131

When it comes to celebrating a birthday, W magazine is doing it with style and in a unique way.

The fashion magazine turned 20 years old this year. Created from its "mother publication," Women's Wear Daily, it has been "taking the fashions from the runways in Paris to people all over the world" for two decades. And that might explain why its birthday celebration has a worldwide bent and its birthday present is going to seven AIDS hospice servíces.

Six of the top designers - Giorgio Armani, Karl Lagerfeld, Donna Karan Isaac Mizrahi, Calvin Klein and Jean Paul Gaultier --- didn't say no when approached by the magazine to design commemorative T-shirts. They are being sold through selective retailers, including Jacobson stores in Livonia, Birmingham, Rochester, Grosse Pointe, Ann Arbor and Dearborn, at $20 each.

"We've lost a lot of very famous designers to AIDS and we decided we wanted to give something back to the community and the people who have supported us with this spectacular T-shirt promotion," said Stephanie George, publisher of W magazine at a kick-off tea at Jaconson's Birmingham store July 21.

Money garnered from the sale of the T-shirts will go to the AIDS program of the Hospice of Southeastern Michigan in Southfield, City of Angels Hospice in Hollywood, Calif., Centro Teresa Gabrieli in Milan, Italy, AIDS Resource Center's Bailey House in New York City, Hospital Necker in Paris, France, and Shanti Project in San Francisco, Calif.

Hospice of Southeastern Michigan is the third largest hospice in the United States. It recently opened a 15-bed AIDS unit in Detroit with the help of a $100,000 grant and furnished with the help of the K mart Corp.

HSEM president and chief executive officer Carolyn Fitzpatrick Cassin hopes the T-shirt sales will provide enough money to open a second unit on Detroit's eastside.

"We found the most pressing need in the last few vears was in the care of AIDS patients," she said. "We did it in the home for four years before opening our, AIDS unit in Detroit. The 15 beds were filled in the first two months and now we have a waiting list."

Women find spot as top 'Docs'

It has been a long time in coming, but women physicians are leaving their mark on the once male-dominated profession. Women are stepping into administrative positions and taking on specialties that had been seen as men only areas.

Her early mentor, Sister Mary Bonavits left Ladywood for St. Mary Hospital when Pawlak was a senior.

"She went back to school and became the head of nuclear medicine at St. Mary's," she said. "We've become best of friends."

Despite an early several other physicians at the Michigan Institute for Neurologic Disorders in Farmington Hills.

Pawlak is resident trainer for neurology at the hospital, moderator for a lecture series and a member of the board of governors for the American College of Neurology. She also has been instru mental in hospital fundraising drives.

Presently, 5 percent of HSEM's patients have ÁIDS.

Cassin is excited about the T-shirt promotion and agency's "new partnership" with Jacobson's, lauding the retailer for its "commitment to the community and its willingness to take a leadership role" in forwarding the work of hospices.

She also had praise for W magazine.

"I'm very impressed that the publishers of W magazine realize the importance of hospice care for people with AIDS." she said. "The number of people with AIDS is increasing every year, so there will be an even greater need for hospice services.

"We are very grateful to W and to Jacobson's for their help in supporting AIDS hospice care."

George would like to raise $2 million for the hosnice programs and, if the enthusiasm at the by invitation only tea is any indication, she will have little trouble selling the necessary 500,000 T-shirts. Cassin estimates that local sales of 50,000 of the shirts will he enough to open a second AIDS hospice unit.

The 100 percent cotton T-shirts come in one size. They will be available only through Aug. 15 at Jacobson stores or by mail by calling 1-800-222-WMAG. There's an additional charge for shipping and handling.

With U.S. Surgeon General Antonia Novello at the helm, women physicians are finally starting to make inroads in the predominantly male world of medicine.

"We're making a small dent," said Dr. Lillian Gonzalez-Pardo, president of the American Women's Medical Association. A clinical professor of pediatrics and neurology at the University of Kansas Medical Center, Gonzalez-Pardo is midway through her year-long term of office.

"Out of 127 medical schools in the country, there is only one woman dean designate - Dr. Nancy Gary of the University of Uniform Services Science Center in Washington, D.C."

Although women doctors comprise only 17 percent of the total physician pool nationwide, they are entering medical schools in greater numbers than ever before. "Enrollment was 5 percent in 1960," Gonzalez-Pardo said. "By 1990, it was up to 35 percent. As you move into residency and practice, it gets tougher. There is still a long way to equality.

(Female doctors) are still entering predominantly women's specialties ---pediatrics, internal medicine and psychiatry. But the number of women in obstetrics/gynecology and surgery is in-.creasing.

According to Gonzalez-Pardo, an important key is the role of early elementary education, getting girls interested in mathematics and science and encouraging them early."

Teacher's influence

Such was the case with Dr. Anne Pawlak, a neurologist and the first woman to serve as chief of staff at Garden City Osteopathic Hospital. Pawlak credits a science teacher at Livonia's Ladywood High School with helping shape her career choice.

"She was very pro woman, very into helping women achieve their goals," Pawlak said.

Science fair competition became a passion at St. Lawrence Elementary School in Detroit and continued at Ladywood, with Pawlak racking up prizes galore.

Pawlak was equally charged about theater. The 1973 Ladywood graduate performed with the Dearborn Civic Theatre and Windsor Light Opera. She also studied and taught dance for many years - an interest she keeps alive today.

"My parents thought I was headed for Broadway," she said. "They believed in giving me a broad spectrum. And they wanted me to have something academic to stand on my own."

Two males - an instructor at Mercy College, and Pawlak's family physician, also an osteopath at Garden City Hospital -- helped solidify her career choice.

"Michigan State was one of the first (medical) schools to really start bringing women in," said Pawlak, who graduated there in 1979. "I was also accepted at U of M; but I wanted to be (an osteopath). I knew people in the profession and I liked their philosophy - the wholistic approach to the patient."

As chief of staff, Pawlak acts as liaison between hospital staff and administration. She is also in partnership with her husband, David Simpson, D.O., and Accepted nicely

"I've been accepted nicely here," she said.

A couple of years ago she addressed the all female graduates of her alma mater, Ladywood.

"I think an important message to young women is that you can be successful and have a good family life, too," Pawlak said. "My son and hus band are the most important things in my life. When I come home, we're a family unit. There is nothing wrong with staying home with young children but there is also nothing wrong with working.

"Recently I told some young female physicians at MSU that in September my son and I are taking a tap dancing class together," she said. "They thought that was kind of bizarre. But I don't think you have to be one of the boys or lose your femininity to have a career.

Woolgathers Guild clicks with knitting enthusiasts

BY JULIE BROWN STAFF WRITER

It wouldn't be at all inappropriate to call members of this group close-knit.

Monthly meetings of the Woolgatherers Knitting Guild offer opportunities for both friendship and learning. The group, which has approximately 35 members, is for knitters of all ages and experience levels.

"We were looking for a way to communicate and educate and share with other knitters," said Jeanine Lawe of Plymouth, who, with Marge Lewandowski and Mildred Fluhart, founded the guild several years ago. It was chartered in September 1990, and had begun meeting that previous spring.

Meetings are 6:30 p.m. the third Thursday of each month, year-round, at the Salvation Army, 9451 S. Main, south of Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth Township. (For information, call 420-4022.)

During a recent meeting, members worked on a variety of individual projects, the gentle clickety-clack of knitting needles mingling with the sounds of conversation.

Items knitters create include hats, mittens, afghans, shawls, sweaters and baby things. The time needed to complete a project varies, depending on the knitter's skill and the item's complexity.

'We were looking for a way to communicate and educate and share with other knitters."

> Jeanine Lowe of Plymouth

Knitting may be thought of as an activity for older women, but the group's membership reveals that isn't always the case, Lowe, who's "under 40," did some knitting as a girl but didn't find it to her liking.

"I hated knitting as a child. It was too slow, too slow-moving," said Lowe, who's done needlepoint for years and had a yarn shop in Plymouth during the 1980s.

Lowe, who's been knitting for about 12 years now, is pleased to see the age mix in the Woolgatherers Knitting Guild. The group includes some spinners, who create their own yarn for projects, and some weavers.

"We're trying to get more beginners." In some cases, people may be apprehensive about coming to a meeting where there are experienced knitters.

"That's not what we want at all. We want to encourage and motivate," said Lowe, a dental hygienist in Plymouth.

She'll become a grandmother later this summer, so knowing how to knit means she can create baby items, Rumptz finds knitting relaxing.

"It is for me." During football season, her husband watches games and she's able to keep busy with various projects,

- "They'll say Oh, I'm not that good.' We don't want to discourage new knitters."

Taking a lesson or two at a local yarn shop's a help to a beginner, Lowe said. Because the guild meets just once a month, a brand-new knitter would probably benefit from getting some basic instruction.

Knitting Guild members believe in getting involved in the community. They've donated money to the Plymouth Historical Society and made lap robes and legwarmers for residents of the West Trail Nursing Home in Plymouth. Members try to pick one or two groups each year to help, Lowé said.

Ruth Kamienecki was 16 when a career counselor at Livonia Bentley High School told-her that girls don't become doctors.

"Dummy me, 4 listened to him," said Kamlenecki, who shifted gears to physical therapy. "I got morried and had children before I went to medical school."

Today Kamienecki is the first female chief of staff at Botsford Osteopathic Hospital, acting as liaison between staff and administration. She is midway through the one-year term.

When she's not presiding over a myriad of committee meetings, she's busy establishing the solo family practice she launched earlier this year. With a degree in business administration, her husband acts as office manager.

Because of her busy six-day-a-week schedule, she jokes that this arrangement ensures that she sees him occasionally. Their two sons, 22 and 16, are headed toward careers in business computers and engineering respectively.

"Things are beginning to change for women in medicine," Kamienecki said. "Certain specialties which are. more male oriented like orthopedic surgery that uses drills, saws and acrews, are starting to open up,

"Botsford hired its first female resident in orthopedic surgery recently. Another is being hired."

A resident of Northville, Kamlenecki also presides over graduating residents and interns."

A 1985 graduate of Michigan State University medical school, Kamienecki estimates that 25 percent of her class was female.

'It's been fine at Botsford; I know everyone," she said. "I was a student here in 1983. I've been on staff since 1986. There have been no problems at all, they bend over backward to be accommodating."

diploma. Probably, you have already learned the job market is extremely limited for those who do not possess one. You may want to begin by going back to high school and talking with a counselor. Ask about taking aptitude tests to find." the career for which you are most suited.

You are a bright young man and can readily earn a diploma, if you want it badly enough. Also consider talking to a religious adviser. You to gain.

I so want to encourage you to become interested in reading and studying on your own. A whole new world will be opened to you! Selfhelp books are an excellent place to begin for someone like yourself who is trying to mature and grow. I highly recommend "The Road Less Traveled" by M. Scott Peck, M.D.

The teen years are often very difficult ones! I can also see that life has not always been a bowl of cherries for you. It may well be that the early home environment was not attuned to your special needs. You perceive some deprivation from this period of life and need love and understanding.

One of the first areas to command my attention in your handwriting is the unusual left margin which continues to increase in size as it travels down the entire page. Although I have never seen one like this and none of my reference books show anything comparable, I offer these have nothing to lose and everything thoughts based on the remainder of your handwriting.

> At the present time, you are unhappy and discouraged. Black clouds often gather around you. Seeminly, you are hurrying to escape certain past experiences which plague you, but have been unable to successfully do this as yet. It is important to realize that one's past has great influence on the personality. Time and effort are needed to make desired changes.

is very necessary if you are to mature and reach your potential.

To aid in your quest for self-help I will attempt to point out the areas which are most in need of attention and leave the decisions to you. A noticeable lack of self-discipline can be found throughout this handwriting. Often you are inclined to follow the line of least resistance. You may want to begin by analyzing the reasons for your lack of discipline and search for ways to develop more. Consider that success in almost any field of endeavor depends on self-discipline.

Your handwriting also reveals a lack of consistency in setting and accomplishing goals. You are able to work in a precise manner when you choose to do so, so why not start out working for practical goals which you feel you can reach. Then move on to more challenging ones as your confidence level increases. It is a well known fact that success begets success. And a positive attitude is a great asset.

Patience is not one of your strong points. Much of the annoyance I see here appears to be directed at yourself. Try not to continually blame and condemn yourself for past mistakes. Acknowledge them, but leave them in the past. Try to be more tolerant of yourself as well as others

There is a marked difference between your signature and the text of your writing. This suggests a definite difference between your public and private manner. Seeminly, you are becoming more aware of the impression you make on others and want to put your best foot forward.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist at 38251 Schoolcralt, Livonia 48150. Bidding easier to learn than 'play'

I wrote once before about the great French master Jose Le Dentus' sage reply when asked "Which is more difficult to learn, bidding or play?"

"Unquestionably, the 'play of the cards,' " he answered. "If you really wanted to take the trouble, you could become an above-average bidder in 15 days, but to become a good card player might take 15 years."

His position is universally subscribed to, yet it is a wonder that among the world's finest, most of the problems become one because of the bidding. In the major tournaments today, where the standard of performance is exceptional, the play is responsible for at best only 25 percent of the swings. This is because the play by the masters is close to perfection but not so in their bidding:

Today's astonishing hand was played many years ago in a famous European tournament. Less than a dozen declarers arrived in the 12-trick heart slam off the ace, king of spades. Each bid the hand as shown, which you can see didn't employ some of the sophisticated gadgets of modern times. Most declarers received the same lead, but only Karl Schneider of Austria, Jean Besse of Switzerland and Terrence Reese of Britain, three of the world's foremost champions, succeeded. This was especially astonishing for their playing techniques contrasted dramatically.

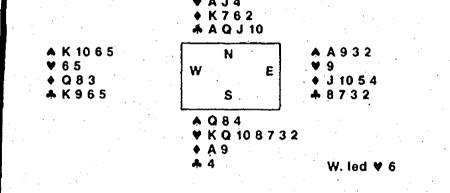

When he played the heart ten, the defense was finished. West had to keep the club king so pitched a diamond, and dummy's club queen became useless. East had to keep the spade ace and was therefore squeezed in diamonds too, allowing dummy's diamond king, seven to win the last two tricks

The great Besse relied on no sleight of hand to perform his wizardry. He treated it as a double dummy problem with a hoped-for ending, and this is how he did it. He won the heart ace and played the diamond ace, king. Ruffed a diamond and entered dummy with the heart jack to ruff the last diamond. Then he ran all of his trumps to reach this four card ending.

ΔΑΟ.

Some hands are difficult to play. Today's is a monster that none of our champions foresaw until the dummy came into play. The lead suggested to each that West didn't have the A, K of spades and maybe not even the ace. The heart six therefore looked natural and offered a chance.

Here's how Reese handled the hand employing a magnum of deception. He won the heart ace in the dummy and didn't play another as he didn't want either opponent to signal spades if out of trumps. At trick 2, he played the club ace and the queen for a ruffing finesse pitching his diamond nine, which was won by the king. After due consideration, West fell into the trap and returned a diamond and our famous Britisher had seven hearts, three clubs and two diamonds.

Schneider pulled an even bigger bluff. After winning the heart ace, he played duminy's spade jack and let it ride to the king. To perform a squeeze, he had to lose a trick early. This west defender was hoodwinked, too, and continued hearts. Now Karl won in his hand and took the club finesse successfully. Next the club ace, club ten ruff, the diamond ace, and ran his trumps to reach this beautiful three-card ending.

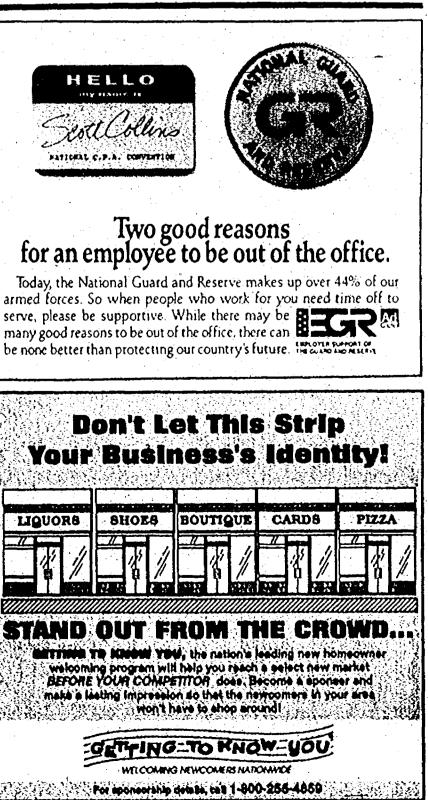

N w E S AQ84 Now a club to the queen and the spade jack. The defenders were helpless. If East won, the ace he's end-played in spades. If he ducks and West's king won, he's end-played in clubs.

Any questions? Yes, I truly agree the game is amazing!

is very necessary if you are to mature and reach your potential.

To aid in your quest for self-help I will attempt to point out the areas which are most in need of attention and leave the decisions to you. A noticeable lack of self-discipline can be found throughout this handwriting. Often you are inclined to follow the line of least resistance. You may want to begin by analyzing the reasons for your lack of discipline and search for ways to develop ruore. Consider that success in almost any field of endeavor depends on self-discipline.

Your handwriting also reveals a lack of consistency in setting and accomplishing goals. You are able to work in a precise manner when you choose to do so, so why not start out working for practical goals which you feel you can reach. Then move on to more challenging ones as your confidence level increases. It is a well known fact that success begets success. And a positive attitude is a great asset.

Patience is not one of your strong points. Much of the annoyance I see here appears to be directed at yourself. Try not to continually blame and condemn yourself for past mistakes. Acknowledge them, but leave them in the past. Try to be more tolerant of yourself as well as othets

3C:

You need people, but also need time alone. When dealing with others are you aware of a tendency to be a bit stubborn, often defending your viewpoints strongly. Also a need to dominate others does not add to your popularity. Seemingly as yet, you have not reached a plateau of confidence in relationships with other people.

There is a marked difference between your signature and the text of your writing. This suggests a definite difference between your public and private manner, Seeminly, you are becoming more aware of the impression you make on others and want to put your best foot forward.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist at 38251 Schoolcralt, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are all helpful. And objective feedback is always welcome.

Bidding easier to learn than 'play'

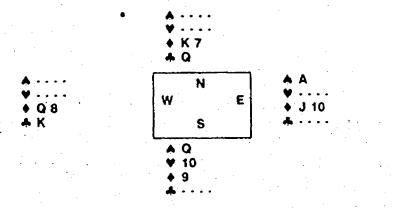

I wrote once before about the great French master Jose Le Dentus' sage reply when asked "Which is more difficult to learn, bidding or play?"

"Unquestionably, the 'play of the cards," " he answered. "If you really wanted to take the trouble, you could become an above-average bidder in 15 days, but to become a good card player might take 15 years.'

His position is universally subscribed to, yet it is a wonder that among the world's finest, most of the problems become one because of the bidding. In the major tournaments today, where the standard of performance is exceptional, the play is responsible for at best only 25 percent of the swings. This is because the play by the masters is close to perfection but not so in their bidding.

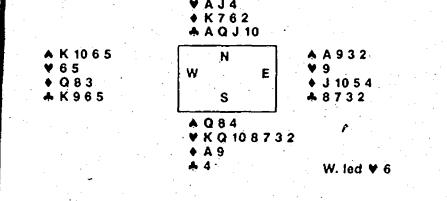

Today's astonishing hand was played many years ago in a famous European tournament. Less than a dozen declarers arrived in the 12-trick heart slam off the ace, king of spades. Each bid the hand as shown, which you can see didn't employ some of the sophisticated gadgets of modern times. Most declarers received the same lead, but only Karl Schneider of Austria. Jean Besse of Switzerland and Terrence Reese of Britain, three of the world's foremost champions, succeeded. This was especially astonishing for their playing techniques contrasted dramatically.

When he played the heart ten, the defense was finished. West had to keep the club king so pitched a diamond, and dummy's club queen became useless. East had to keep the spade ace and was therefore squeezed in diamonds too, allowing dummy's diamond king, seven to win the last two tricks.

The great Besse relied on no sleight of hand to perform his wizardry. He treated it as a double dummy problem with a hoped for ending, and this is how he did it. He won the heart ace and played the diamond ace, king. Ruffed a diamond and entered dummy with the heart jack to ruff the last diamond. Then he ran all of his trumps to reach this four card ending.

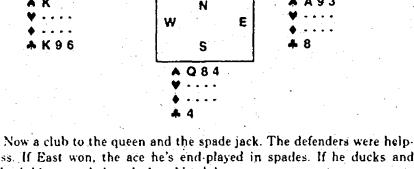

Some hands are difficult to play. Today's is a monster that none of our champions foresaw until the dummy came into play. The lead suggested to each that West didn't have the A, K of spades and maybe not even the ace. The heart six therefore looked natural and offered a chance.

Here's how Reese handled the hand employing a magnum of deception. He won the heart ace in the dummy and didn't play another as he didn't want either opponent to signal spades if out of trumps. At trick 2, he played the club ace and the queen for a ruffing finesse pitching his diamond nine, which was won by the king. After due consideration, West fell into the trap and returned a diamond and our famous Britisher had seven hearts, three clubs and two diamonds.

Schneider pulled an even bigger bluff. After winning the heart ace, he played dummy's spade jack and let it ride to the king. To perform a squeeze, he had to lose a trick early. This west defender was hoodwinked, too, and continued hearts. Now Karl won in his hand and took the club finesse successfully. Next the club ace, club ten ruff, the diamond ace, and ran his trumps to reach this beautiful three-card ending.

less. If East won, the ace he's end-played in spades. If he ducks and West's king won, he's end-played in clubs. Any questions? Yes, I truly agree the game is amazing!

Church has its own (Rev.) Strength

By JULIE BROWN STAFF WRITER

The circumstances that brought the Rev. Daniel Strength to Canton Calvary Assembly of God weren't 'the best. Even so, he's glad to be where he is.

Strength became the congregation's new pastor in March. His predecessor, the Rev. Paul Speer, had died of cancer late last year. Speer's wife died just a few months after her husband did, also of cancer.

"So that certainly was not encouraging to this congregation," Strength said. "A very difficult time, the interim."

Before coming to Canton, Strength and his wife were doing supply ministry, in which they were called to fill in at vacant pastorates. He was also teaching at a Bible institute in Detroit.

"We were not really seeking another church." He has experience in "pioneering" churches, going into communities where people want an Assembly of God congregation, starting with Bible studies and prayer meetings, and establishing a church.

Strength, 42, has pioncered churches in Marine City, Algonac and Washington, Mich., and served as a pastor in Rochester Hills and Warren.

Strength, who was raised in Warren and on Detroit's east side, has been commuting from Richmond, Mich., to Canton. He and his family are moving into a home in Westland, and he's looking forward to giving up the long-distance daily drive.

He's been in the ministry for 20 years. Strength studied for several years at the Zion Bible Institute in Barrington, R.L., and then attended Central Bible College in Springfield, Mo., earning a bachelor's degree.

Heeding the call

"I have a call from the Lord to preach the gospel," said Strength, who doesn't consider the ministry just a vocation that he chose. "I enjoy preaching, I enjoy ministry."

He completed a master's degree in biblical literature at Trinity Theological Seminary in Indiana. He'd planned to attend this summer's graduation ceremonies, but the family's move to Westland made that impractical.

ship. The family enjoys camping and spending time together.

Strength's congregation has about 80 families, and he's hoping to attract more members. "It's growing it's been growing weekly, in fact." A recent tent crusade was held at the church, "which seems to be new for the people here, perhaps for the area." church is to be an international church."

The church has been holding Spanish language services on Saturdays, and Strength would like to reach out to other ethnic groups. There are also practical matters to tend to, including remodeling of the church and parking lot. than their east-side counte.yarts are. He hasn't had much trouble finding his way around Canton and the surrounding area.

"People seem to trust in themselves more than they do in God. To me, there is not the God-consciousness there needs to be."

He's busy settling into his duties at Canton Calvary, but finds time

Canton Calvary has a mix of ages, children, senior citizens and everything in between. The area the church draws from has people from many countries, and Strength hopes to reach out to them.

"We have quite a melting pot of nationalities and that thrills me, because I believe that's the way heaven's going to be. Really, our goal is people. Our vision for this

Warm welcome

"This church is different than any church I have pastored in terms of friendliness. Very relaxed. I'm enjoying this church. It's really been a blessing."

He's found the pace in Canton is faster than what he's accustomed to. "People seem to have more financially, economically."

Strength has noticed west-siders are more likely to run red lights to teach one night a week at the Teen Challenge Bible Institute in Detroit. That institute's involved in drug/alcohol rehabilitation, and Strength teaches program graduates who want to become counselors. Most are in their early to mid-20s.

He brings with him to Canton a simple message, revealing where Strength gets his strength: "That Jesus is the answer, that he saves, that he heals, that he baptizes in the holy spirit. And he's coming back."

Writings keep Chritian Scientists united

The message was clear for those attending the recent 97th annual meeting of members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist. The writings of church founder Mary Baker Eddy truly unite church members throughout the world.

New President of the Mother Church Nathan Talbot stressed that Eddy is as much a leader of the church today as she was in the early days through her writings, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

"There are issues that would try to divide us," he said. "But let's think first for a moment about these things that unite us. Let's keep some perspective. There's no doubt in my heart that those issues which hold us together are far greater — vastly greater — than those issues that would try to tear us apart."

Among the topics at the meeting was the church's expansion into cable television. Al Carnesciali, manager of the Christian Scientist Publishing Society pointed out that when considering the tremendous change experienced in the world, "it's well to ask ourselves if technology has forced us to move ahead of our ability or if Mrs. Eddy's discovery of Christian Science has so opened human consciousness as to reveal the great possibilities that technology presents."

"Efforts at expansion and the opposition they raise are not at all unlike the opposition encountered in Mrs. Eddy's time," he said. "New ideas stir up thought and often result in opposition and resistance. Yet, only with the development of new ideas can mankind forge ahead."

Picking up on that theme was Richard Bergenheim, editor-in-chief of church periodicals, who told members the "key to our spiritual growth is the demonstration of unselfed love."

"I raise this point because the unselfish affections, the yearnings, the deep yearning, to bring forth the evidence of God's eternal goodness and of man as His likeness, lies at the heart of our publishing and broadcasting efforts," he said.

Even though church membership had declined in previous years, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, has seen an increase in the number of applications for new members coming from 56 countries. The largest number come from the United States, followed by Africa, Europe and South America.

The Readers for the church also were announced at the annual meeting. Serving as First Reader is Howard Johnson of La Jolla, Calif., who entered a full-time practice of spiritual healing in 1972 and became a teacher of Christian Science in 1982.

Second Reader is Margaret Rogers of Larkspur, Calif. She trained and served as a Christian Science nurse before entering the full-time healing practice. She became a teacher of Christian Science in 1991.

Graduates recognized: Bethel Baptist Church in Garden City recently honored its high school graduates, including (from left) Kathleen Barber, 17, of Garden City; Lisa Hutchinson, 17, of Redford; and Brian Smith, 17, of Garden City. All three will attend Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C.

Wood carvers to show fruits from their craft ood carvings in countless shapes and sizes are coming to Livonia. The Livonia Wood Carvers Club, in cooperation with the Livonia Parks and Recreation Department, will host the 17th annual Livonia Wood Lyndon at Farmington Road. The free show will feature 137 wood carvers from Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Alabama, Tennessee, Florida, West Virginia and Ontario.

Carving Show Aug. 1-2 in Eddie Edgar Sports Arena,

The fare will include decoys, birds, wildlife, miniatures, bears, horses, carousel animals, human figures, whittled pieces, marquetry and both relief and chip carving. Club members will donate prizes for the hourly drawings,

The club's biggest event of the year, the show offers 46 categories and 184 awards.

'It's judged competition for ribbons but it's also an opportunity for camaraderie and idea sharing,' says Livonia resident Ron Morin, a club director and instructor. "It's just a nice bunch of people who enjoy the company of others who do the same thing that they do.

"In addition to all the displays," he said, "we'll have some commercial tables selling wood-carving tools and supplies."

Some carvers also will demonstrate their craft and have pieces for sale.

Carvers encourage visitors to touch and handle carvings. "It's an opportunity to talk one-on-one, at no cost, with us and get answers you can understand. We give advice for nothing," says Redford Township resident Bob Brooks, club president.

Howell Nature Center's informational booth, run by animal lovers Pam and Jim Krausman of Brighton, will include liv but now healthy.

Wood carvings, and a whole lot fun for the family, are on tap for the Livonia Wood Carvers Club show this weekend as more than 130 carvers from across the country converge on Eddie Edgar Arena in Livonia.

An unassuming start

The club got its start 20 years ago when a few carvers attended a weekly meeting of seniors in Livonia. Today, the club boasts 275 carvers from across Observerland and beyond.

Compassionate as well as creative, members each year donate cash to the Livonia Senior Citizens Program and small wood toys to needy inner-city kids.

Morin, now on the club's board of directors, got involved in 1982. "A friend of mine sold me a pocket knife and gave me a little cut-out of a little animal," he said. "It just blossomed from that point,"

Now, he's also into sculpting. "I've done two fullsized ducks as well as a portrait bust."

A toolmaker who retired from Ford Motor Co. in 1985, Morin has personally designed and crafted many of his carving tools.

In 1990, Morin took Best of Show in Marysville for an abstract piece he carved from walnut. A robin he carved is on permanent display in the Michigan Room of the Livonia Civic Center Library.

His signature work: the miniature carved shoes he passes out.

Morin's motivation is simple: "the satisfaction of being able to create something that's well received.

"I put a lot of time and effort into my work and share my carvings as family gifts," he said. "I'm not into selling."

A chance beginning

Brooks got hooked on carving 11 years ago when his television broke.

"I started to play around with woodworking - a carved cagle I'd seen in a woodworking magazine. To enhance the eagle and make it more realistic, the writer sald to wood-burn it. Which I did, and it came out pretty nice.

"I soon forgot about my TV set and went into carving heavy.'

He started out at arts and crafts shows but now exhibits exclusively at carving shows.

Brooks retired two years ago from Kelsey-Hayes, where he worked in printing and office services. "When you ait down and carve or wood-burn, you forget the whole darned world around you. You are your own boss. It's a great way to relax and enjoy life."

Ducks are a standard for wood carvers but Brooks hopes to specialize in songbirds and dogs: "Songbirds are smaller than ducks so are easily displayed anywhere in the house. And people often relate a carving of a dog to their own family pet."

Morin relishes the friendships he has built at Liovnia Wood Carvers Club sessions, Evening sessions are at 7 p.m. Tuesdays in the Livonia Senior Citizen Center, Five Mile and Farmington Road. Morning sessions are at 9 a.m. Thursdays.

Says Morin: "All the smiles and camaraderie, it's a real thrill watching so many people making something - doing something they enjoy."

f you're looking for a fun time and a learning adventure for the whole family this weekend, consider the Livonia Wood Carvers Club's annual wood carving show.

Carousel horses, ducks, songbirds, grizzly bears, figures, florals and landscapes handcarved from wood will dazzle visitors to the 17th annual Livonia Wood Carving Show, sponsored by the Livonia Parks and Recreation Department, Saturday-Sunday, Aug. 1-2, in Eddie Edgar Sports Arena, 33841 Lyndon at Farmington Road, Livonia.

Wood carvings, whittled artworks, marguetry (decorative inlaid work), reliefs, chip carvings and miniatures by 137 exhibitors from eight states will put a smile on everyone's face.

"It's an opportunity to see friends and neighbors doing something artistic, to see wood sculpture, to see someone taking a dead piece of wood and putting life into it," said Bob Brooks, Livonia Wood Carvers Club president. "I was asked once what will we see there. You'll see anything from mice to moose.

As an added attraction, chainsaw carver Al Heron of Windsor will carve logs into eagles, other birds and animals, said Ron Morin, Livonia Wood Carvers Club publicist.

Carvers will compete for ribbons in 46 categories, including Best of Show and runner-up Best of Show. The Orson Smith and George Latimer Awards, named after club founders, will honor the best whittled object and best-relief carving.

Theme of this year's show is caricature carving. Two Livonia Wood Carvers Club tables, manned by Roy Sipes of Westland, will exhibit clowns, cowboys and cowgirls.

Pam and Jim Krausman of the Howell Nature Center will visit the show again this year, bringing along live birds, "Pam's going to be there with either birds of prey or owls. They're close enough for you to get up close to them," Brooks said.

Fiber artists create quilts as artwork

By LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

Contemporary art guilts, like paint. ings, express visions and viewpoints. Quite unlike any other media, they exude a warmth while challenging the viewer to think or simply enjoy a landscape.

Livonia Arts Commission presents "New Traditions in Quilt Making," an exhibit of 30 quilts by Paradigm, a group of six contemporary, award-winning quilt artists, through Aug. 15 in the art gallery at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Nancy Meyer of Plymouth, Karen Kratz-Miller of Cincinnati (formerly of Farmington) and Mary York Gentry of Ypsilanti, together with Sue Holdaway-Heys, Sue Nickels and Isolde SarneckideVries of Ann Arbor, delight gallery visitors with bright colors, bold patterns and statements on quilts ranging in size from 11/4-by-2 feet to 11-by-12 feet:

Handpainted wild horses, panthers and animals by the score come alive in cottons of every kind alongside satin versions of Detroit's Renaissance Center.

"The gallery is resounding with color.

There are all different sizes of quilts. We hung a lot of pieces from the ceiling," sald Jack Olds, Livonia Arts Commission chairman.

Meyer, a self-taught fiber artist and president of the Needlework and Textile Guild of Michigan, said quilting has hooked her into working an average of 6-18 hours a day, designing and creating quilts.

"There'll be world class carvers like David Bennett of Pennsylvania who carves seascapes on an easel and Wayne Holsopple from Ohio. He carved a soldier; you'd swear it would move. You want to know how he does it, he'll sit there and tell you how to do it.'

Livonia carver Pat Lea has been creating miniatures eight years. A member of the club's board of directors. Lea teaches general carving at club meetings on Tuesdays and Thursdays. "It keeps me busy. I've always worked with my hands. I like to work with wood," Lea said. "I love the people and I love the carvers.'

At a recent club meeting, Paul Maceri worked at sculpting a grizzly bear. This is his first wood carver show. He'll exhibit ducks and figures and demonstrate carving as well.

"I'm just a creative person. I'm a painter, a musician, and since 1980, a wood carver," Maceri said. "I had a bypass and carving helps to keep me busy."

Maceri, who worked 30 years as an engineer for Ford Motor Co., plays first clarinet with the Novi Concert Band. Earlier this year, he donated an oil painting of Nankin Mills to Wayne County for display in the historic Westland mill.

"I'm trying to get the grizzly's angry teeth. Then I'll start putting in the fur lines," Maceri said.

One of the founding fathers of the club, Bill Lovell of Southfield has carved ducks from 125 different wood. including Tropical Walnut, Black Limba, Alaska Yellow Cedar, Tulip wood, Ceylon Satinwood, King wood, and cherry from his back yard, "There are over 100,000 kinds of woods in the world. I enjoy meeting people and talking to people who are interested in the different woods," Lo. vell said.

Lovell and his wife, Florence, are show regulars, selling wood blanks or starters in a basic duck shape to people who like to carve or simply would like to learn. "Quite a few people are starting collections now in the different woods," he said.

Lovell sat carving ducks during a recent Thursday morning club meeting. He took a chunk out of the tropical walnut with his whittling knife to demonstrate the ease of carving a softer wood. Then he picked up a duck he was carving from Ceylon Satinwood.

""You can see how hard the Ceylon Satin wood is. I really have to hack the wood," Lovell said.

Chrysler retiree Conrad Schwab of Livonia works in marquetry. For 32 years, he has used the ancient art to create landscapes and custom jewelry boxes by laying in wood.

"Marquetry is a very old art form that goes back to the Egyptian tombs. It's over 3,000 years old. It was kept alive in the dark ages in the monasteries," Schwab said.

Show hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free. Door prizes, carved by the Livonia Wood Carvers Club, will be given away hourly.

A drawing at 4:30 p.m. Sunday will be held for five carvings each worth $100. Tickets are $1.

Ancient art form: Conrad Schwab creates custom jewelry boxes by laying in the wood using a decorative technique called marguetry.

Ruddy duck: Wood carver Olga Bender is a newcomer when it comes to burning in the feathers on a varved duck.

I guess you might say I have a passion for quilting," Meyer said. "Quilting for me is a means of selfexpression, of saying something. It pulls me in. It's engrossing."

; Meyer, a mother of four, lived in Japan, Belgium and France for 16 years because of her husband's job. In 1983, hony-sick and living in Tokyo, she struggled to learn quilting after buying traditional Japanese fab-

""When I was in Japan, these beautiful blue and white fabrics spoke to me and I was hooked," Meyer -snid. "My grandmother was a quilter. Quilting was a connection to my grandmother and family, to tradition, and it was a connection to America while I was away from home."

Meyer studied quilting at the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association, Center for Creative Studies in Detroit and Oakland Community College. She works in a home studio on a cotton-covered, 8-by-20-foot wall.

"I spend a lot of time working with my designs," Meyer said. "I start with an idea but that's just a springboard.

In June, "Take Time to Smell the Flowers," a brightly colored, machine- and hand-quilted textile by Meyer, won the Juror's Choice Award at the 12th annual Congregational Church of Birmingham art show, "Celebrate Life 1992." The juror was Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum curator Greg M. Wittkopp.

Traditionally, quilts are handpieced. Meyer uses a sewing machine to piece guilts because of arthritis in her hands. Meyer pieced together African prints to create "It's a Jungle Out There," a fun-loving work featuring peeking panthers and Rousseau-like leaves that add a jungle effect.

"It was a lot of fun. I spend a lot of time working with color but also feeling. Subconsciously, quilting helps me work through any problems or dilemmas. I find messages coming subconsciously through my quilting. During the Russian coup, I found myself working on a quilt I later named, 'Dark Shadows on' Red Square.' "

Notable quilts in the show include "Tiger Paws" by Kratz-Miller. An eye-pleasing parade of elephants, tigers and cows encircle the quilt's border. Kratz-Miller studied at Rhode Island School of Design.

'Karen was the one originally invited to do the show. but because she was in the middle of packing, she graciously asked the rest of us to show with her," Meyer said.

"Unbridled." by Holdsway-Heys. focuses on a pair of handpainted gray horses, running wild and free. Holdaway-Heys is pursuing a master of fine arts degree in textile/fiber art at the University of Michigan.

York-Gentry's art quilts make political and social commentaries on the world. "Population" speaks of the starving millions using a table-setting format. "Quilt" is a collage of jolting images: a mushroom cloud, witches being burned at the stake, Hitler and the Ku Klux Klan. York Gentry illustrates a land of honey, animals and flowers, a safe haven in the quilt's center, providing contrast to the violence.

Sarnecki-deVries dazzles viewers with design and night-sky color in the quilt, "Cosmos: In Honor of Hercules Who Still Looks Spiffy After All These Years." "Instamatic Ponies" is a whimsical look at a child riding a carousel. There are 23 carousel horses in this Diece.

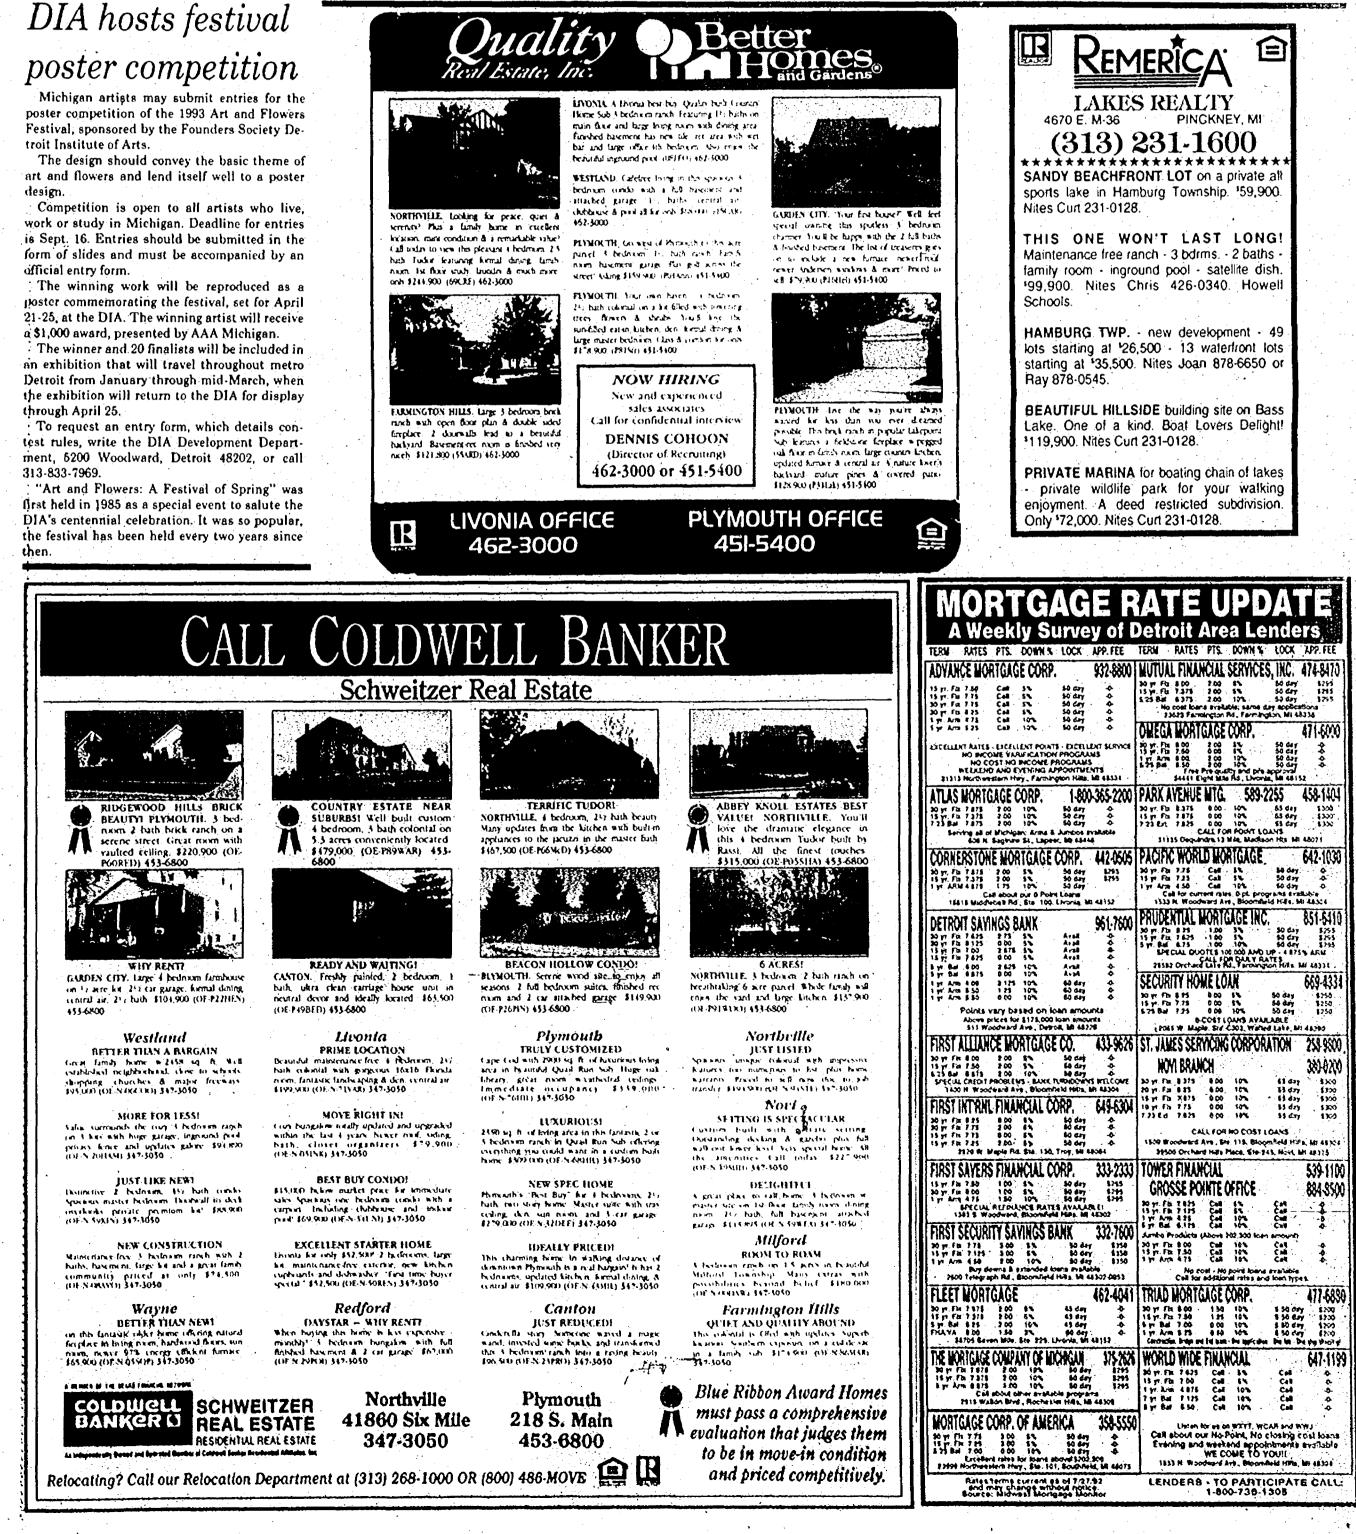

A native Dutch woman, Sarnecki-deVries, earned a bachelor of fine arts degree from Eastern Michigan University.

Show hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday.

Ask pointed questions during apartment search

It pays to follow 'the asterisk's, tually was a 13-month-lease with a read the small print and ask ques-· for maximent rentals. •

What you think you see isn't necresparily what you get.

Just ask Ronald Ulmer, a Farmington Hills executive, who seen will end an unhappy relationship with an apartment complex in Washtenaw County.

"Unter discovered that a "special" offering two months of free rent ac-

The first thing I would do most definitely is get everything in write ing. If you put in in writing, then 1. have (g case for) breach of contract. If it's not-written down, they don't have to do it.

"I would probably knock on a couple of doors and ask (tenants) if they've had a good experience," Ulmer readily admits that his Ulmer said, "I would ask the apartment complex for a reference of clients. If they couldn't, I would definitely take my business someplace nothing in this world is free," he said. "If it says free," I'd take extra time to investigate to make sure there is no extra cost, hidden cost."

Rental specials can change at a moment's notice, said Lucille Calvert, assistant manager of Waynewood Apartments in Westland. "It's like a blue light special at K mart. The special price may not be there tomorrow.

Board's veto of audit may prove to be shortsighted management companies and 1 strongly believe that an audit should be made, but the board voted against my proposal because it thought the cost would be prohibitive. We do not have cration: Getting Started and Staythe funds in our capital reserve, and we are not interested in having any condominium members conduct the audit. I am concerned about how our finances are being handled. Am I right in requesting an audit?.

- The association is required under the condominium statute and the condominium bylaws to conduct a yearly audit, although it need not he certified. A copy of the financial statement must be provided to the members of the association. In addition, it is generally recommended that various audits be conducted by associations periodically, particularly those that have recently taken. over control of the association.

In my book, "Condominium Oping on the Right Track," the four audits I believe are necessary are discussed. They include the legal audit, the operational audit, the physical audit and the financial audit. I would suggest that your board is clearly pennywise and pound toolish, and it should be reminded of its legal liability in conducting itself in such a short-sighted manner. Perhaps you should retain legal counsel to advise the board as towhat its liability is if it continues. on its present course of action.

Since joining TMP in 1991, she has worked on the Rochester library, elementary schools in Livonia and Pinckney, and two Henry Ford medical centers.

Business is up

Campbell/Manix of Southfield has received contracts to design and build commercial buildings and make interior renovations in two others.

The projects are: a 40,000-square-foot headquarters and fabricating plant for Cadillac Looseleaf Products in Troy; four Detroit Edison projects: design and construction of a 66,000-square-foot service center in Cass City, a 60,000-square-foot service center addition in Van Buren Township, an interior renovation project at the corporate headquarters in Detroit, and the renovation of the utility's customer communications center in Southfield; and a 63,000square-foot office and engineering building for Ford Motor Land development Co. in Dearborn.

To the top: A three-story atrium with escalators dominates the Neiman Marcus interior.

opens in Troy next week.

The name near the top of the building is written in longhand - Neiman Marcus - a trademark associated with quality merchandising since 1907. Part of the Sommerset Collection on Big Beaver Road in Troy, the recently completed Neiman Marcus store is a 150,000-square-foot, three-story volumetric structure that has an identity of its own, yet echoes the lines and the same colored brick of the adjoining retail enclosure.

Designed by Diedrich Associates of Atlanta, Ga., the building, with its architectural detail, is analogous to a giftbox that will be presented to and opened by the public on Aug. 7.

The exterior brick walls, on three levels, are an interplay of positive and negative elements with projecting halfround columns and recessed wall planes. Two entrances are defined by porticos - classical accents of circular, free-standing columns supporting coffer-like ceilings of square sunken panels overhead. The porticoes are capped with skylights of different shapes that further strengthen their identity.

Linear horizontal details of glazed tile and precast concrete add visual interest to the expansive wall surface of the building. They are an integral part of the exterior, adding to the character of the building. But it's really the duality of those two classic names in longhand, like Mercedes Benz or Alfa Romeo, that entices any potential consumer to visually savor and then enter.

The reality of retail merchandising is strengthened with sound architectural packaging compounded by a recognizable name that is prominently displayed.

with fine architectural materials: French limestone floors; walls lined with Italian marble, black granite, ir- 2 idescent silk; and woods of mahogany and American cherry. And why not? Af-ter all, this is Neiman Marcus, the icon of high fashion.

A three-story atrium connects these three levels with escalators that is topped by a clerestory running the full length of the third level and providing natural light for the interior. This clerestory conforms to a similar one defining the axis in the adjoining stores. Recessed lighting is abundant throughout the store that can only serve to enhance your choice of merchandise. When was the last time you weren't sure about color? Not here.

The overall environment of the store. while spacious, also has a warm feeling with the individual departments having a domestic intimacy. This is brought about with the use of decorative artifacts, some of which were bought from boutiques in London and Paris, Adding further to the feeling of domesticity is a permanent art collection.

Residential building prospers

Residential building permits issued through the first five months of this year increased by 35 percent in Oakland County and 34 percent in Wayne County from the comparable January-May period in 1991. 🤛

Permits were pulled for 2,122 units - houses. condominiums and apartments - in Oakland compared to 1,668 last year. Figures for Wayne were 1,012 and 761 units, respectively.

The numbers were compiled by the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, a regional information-gathering, planning agency.

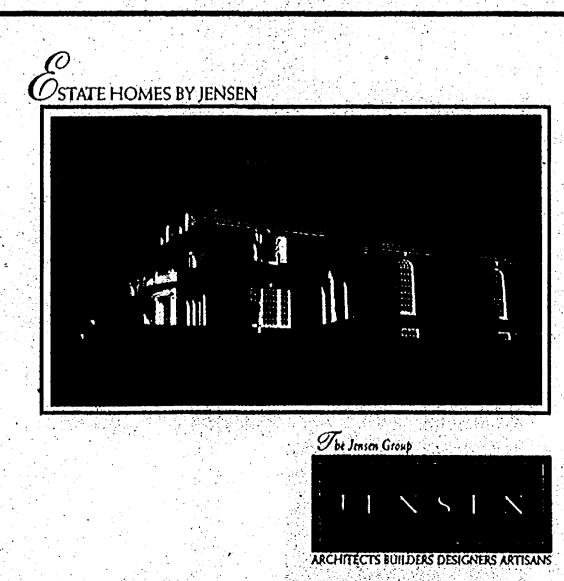

Only Bloomfield Township showed an increase this May compared to last - 28 units from 14.

Bernard Glieberman, president of Crosswinds of West Bloomfield and president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, attributed the sharp five-month increase to favorable mortgage rates,

"I think what's happened is in January and December interest rates came down, a flurry of buyers came in and you had a lot of building activity," he said. "You had a lot of people buy earlier this year than normal."

Glieberman said his company had its best December over last year which carried over to the atart of 1992.

"I think the attitude of the buyer is good," he said. "They probably realize that if they have a job now they will (continue to) have a job: 1 think the economy has bottomed ont.

"The housing economy is strong because there's plenty of people out there still working who can afford to buy a house," Glieberman said.

Fred Capaldi Jr., a Rochester Hills builder and first vice president for BASM, also attributed the increase in residential permits to low interest rates.

"It seems to me we always have a Capaldi also offered an explanation as to why permits slipped a bit in May.

"When I talk to some competltors, they tell me they see some softening. One problem they see is they have presold some houses with the expectation that Mr. and Mrs. Purchaser could sell their homes.

Capaldi said his new housing starts so far this year 'are on par with last, while his remodeling business has increased.

Weather has little impact on building permits pulled, Capaldi and Glieberman agreed.

Rochester Hills was the only Observer & Eccentric growth community that experienced a decline during the five-month period. At that, it was slight, slipping to 142 units from 152.

Troy exactly matched its fivemonth 1991 total with 147 units.

Wayne communities showing gains included Canton, 229 units from 118; Livonia, 238 from 220; and Plymouth Township, 48 from Livonia and Canton placed onetwo by a substantial margin in number of units permitted in the county.

Oakland communities showing gains included Farmington Hills, 178 units from 82; West Bloomfield, 120 from 77; and Bloomfield Township, 66 from 38, Novi, with 344 units permitted, led the way in Oakland.

While the year-to-date figures showed substantial gains, most communities issued permits for fewer residential units this May than last.

Canton, for instance slipped to 30 from 45, Rochester Hills to 37 from 53 and Farmington Hills to 18 from Work studies and photo sketches of cars from the design staffs at Ford, Chrysler and General Motors are on view in the men's clothing fitting area. On the second level, there is work by local artists such as the Cranbrook 50th Anniversary Portfolio of 12 prints by Cranbrook students that are displayed along with two paintings by Michigan artist Valeria Parks. Black-and-white photography by Michgian photographer Dirk Bakker line the walls of the 60-seat, third-floor restaurant.

Custom sofas can start at $15,000, or about $6,000 if the frame has been drawn up to an existing Baron design.

Paul Urhan, one of two sons now operating the business, offers these tips when looking for a quality piece of upholstered furniture. His standards are very high.

• Check the table of contents. The best ingredients for stuffing on backs, arms and seats - are horsehair, or horsehair and polyester blended.

"Fonin is not good except when in combination with down in the cushions," Urban says.

• Squeeze the back and arms. They should feel a little crunchy and spring back easily, not quickly. Foam, for instance, pops right back into shape.

• Lift the skirt. Is it stapled or sewn? Sewn is preferable. Peel back the cambric (the black fabric on the bottom of a piece) to see if staples were used to attach fabric to the frame. Tacks are preferred. Sometimes, manufacturers will hand-tack the cambric to cover the staples, or use gimp, a decorative tape, on decorative frames to cover the staples.

• On a good piece, the front edge underneath the cushion will give a little bit, as opposed to
