Teachers expected to OK raises

The Wayne-Westland school administration is optimistic that the teachers' union will ratify a tentative settlement. The proposed salary raises are 3-percent this year and 5-percent next year.

BY DARRELL CLEM

Wayne-Westland school officials predicted Tuesday that teachers will vote overwhelmingly to ratify a contract giving them a 3-percent salary increase. this year and a 5-percent raise next

Teachers will vote by secret ballot Monday at schools throughout the district, deciding on a tentative contract that - if ratified - is expected to be approved that same night by the school board.

The 999-member teachers' union, the Wayne-Westland Education Association, received copies of the proposed settlement this week. Teachers met Wednesday afternoon at Wayne Memorial High School's Stockmeyer Auditorium to discuss the pact.

"We made a good offer, and I think the teachers realize that this is a fair offer," said Bill Taylor, the school board's chief negotiator and the district's assistant superintendent for employee services.

School board members learned details of the tentative contract during a closed session Monday night. Some members had already indicated they won't support the pay raises, but the agreement is expected to be approved by a majority of the seven member board.

On Tuesday, school officials released details of the settlement that has erased fears of a potential strike. But WWEA president William Recce said he didn't want to comment at length until he presents the proposed contract to teachers. The 3-percent raise this year and 5. percent raise next year come on top of a 2-percent raise that teachers already to receive this semester. The 2-percent in-

Fire pact includes pay hike

By DARRELL CLEM

Westland firefighters will receive a 16-percent wage increase over four years while working fewer hours, an arbitrator has ruled.

The average work week for the 70member Westland Firefighters Association Local 1279 will decline 10 percent under the ruling, which reduces the average work week from 56 hours to 50.4 hours by July.

Union president Ken Grabowski said Tuesday he's "pleased" that the ruling by arbitrator George Brannick favored the firefighters' union. But the ruling disappointed city officials, who haven't ruled out a court appeal of the decision.

Firefighters have been working without a contract for more than 21/2 years. They will receive retroactive pay for the new contract, which will expire June 30,

The firefighters will receive a 41/2-percent wage increase for each of the first two years of the contract, a 4-percent raise for the third year, and a 3-percent raise for the final year.

Mayor Robert Thomas said Tuesday he doesn't yet know what the raises will cost the city, but he said extra money had been budgeted to cover the retroac-Moreover, Thomas said he's not as concerned about the wage increases as the reduced work week, which could prompt some fire station closings unless more firefighters are hired.

Keeping all four stations open has been a longtime goal of Thomas, but firefighters have contended that they have been overworked.

Grabowski stressed that firefighters had made some concessions -- such as losing two vacation days - in hopes of getting their work week reduced. The firefighters work in 24-hour shifts, he said, but they work an average of 56 hours a week.

Under Brannick's ruling, firefighters would see their work week gradually reduced to 50.4 hours by next July.

Mayor Thomas said the city will have to consider hiring more firefighters in order to keep the four stations open. Already, some stations don't have the capability to respond simultaneously with fire engines and ambulances.

"It's either that thire more employces) or shut some of the stations down,

The city council is expected soon to discuss a potential court appeal, although city officials said no decision has been made,

City, county spar over plans for Nankin Mills renovation

BYDARRELL CLEM

County parks officials have accused the Westland City Council of stalling the proposed renovation and expansion of the Nankin Mills Nature Center.

The dispute emerged Monday as the council rejected what they called incomplete site plans for doubling the size of the nature center at Ann Arbor Trail east of Farmington Road.

County parks director Hurley Coleman told the council that its decision could cause concern among members of a private support group, the Friends of Nankin Mills, that wants to get the project rolling. Mayor Robert Thomas pledged to work with county officials this week to iron out the differences, in hopes the site plan will be approved by early next month.

Councilman Kenneth Mehl said county officials have failed to address all the concerns of the city's fire and building departments. Moreover, architectural drawings for the nature center haven't been completed, he said.

Mehl indicated that approving the incomplete site plans on Monday would amount to giving preferential treatment to the county - a move that he said wouldn't be fair to other developers.

Council member Thomas Brown disagreed and said, "I think to delay it further would be unconscionable."

Brown stressed that the Nankin Mills expansion offers a unique opportunity for the city and county to work side by side on a project that both support.

"There aren't any of us riding the" caboose. We're riding the passenger Main," Brown said.

The existing 8,700-square-feet Nankin Mills historical complex would be renovated and expanded by 9,100 feet, making it a better nature center for city and county residents, including students who could learn there. The project, which will top the $1 million mark, received grant money.

"We want this project to go because we believe it's going to benefit this city and its residents," Dan Navarre, the county's deputy parks director, told the council Monday.

But Mehl said the county should have to comply with necessary codes - like any other developer. And he denied implications from county officials that the council is stalling the project.

The Southeastern Michigan Blood Services Region of the American Red Cross said the area desperately needs donors. Everytime someone donates blood it's processed into three components, red blood cells, plasma and platelets, which allows hospitals to give patients the needed component.

Schools: Bus system to stay

By Marie Chestney Staff Writer

The Livonia school district's new busing transfer system may be fine tuned, but no major changes will be made this year to meet the concerns of St. Michael Catholic School par-

"Other (district) private schools are used to this transfer system." Livonia Board of Education president Pat Sari told about a dozen St. Michael School's parents Monday who voiced their concerns to board members.

The district includes the northern section of Westland with many Westland parents sending their children to St. Michael School, on Hubbard south of Plymouth Road.

"There could be small changes, there may be a better way of doing this. But you have to resign yourself -- there's going to be a transfer system. There's simply no more money to be had."

The board approved the new busing policy last spring as part of an $103 million hudget for 1992-93.

Under the plan, all academically gifted program and private school students ride their neighborhood hus to a transfer point at Frost Middle School, on Stark north of Schoolcraft. Then, they transfer to a hus going to their own school.

Safety concerns - for both the students who are bused and for

Frost students who walk or ridetheir bikes through the buses' parking lot - dominated Monday's

"There's a danger for Frost kids who cross the parking lot on bikes."

Additionally, the parents said they are concerned about incoming buses that might hit students standing in the parking lot waiting to get onto their transfer bus.

The parents also said they are concerned about:

Middle school pay-to-play strikes out

By MARIE CHESTNEY STAFF WRITER

Paying for middle school sports died a quick death in the Livonia school district, which serves the northern section of Westland.

Middle schoolers no longer will have to pay $100 to play sports, but they will have a reduced list of sports from which to chose.

The turnabout came Monday when the Livonia Board of Education rescinded its earlier decision to launch a "pay-to-participate" program in it middle schools. A similar plan for the three high schools, with its $140 fce, remains in place.

Lack of participation led to the quick demise of the fee. Students this fall, rebelling against the fee, stayed away in droves as schools tried to field teams for such sports as touch football and cross country.

Rather than let the entire middle school sport program collapse, school officials decided to fund half of the program to "keep the program alive," said Superintendent Joseph Marinelli.

"This recommendation has a downside in that others may not understand that its implementation does not require a commitment of extra dollars," Marinelli, said. "They may interpret that as 'backing off on the part of the board and the administration. Actually, this may be the only way to ensure that students benefit from the funds that have been earmarked by the board for this purpose."

Students can now participate in the following sports without charge: girls softball, boys wrestling, boys basketball, girls volleyball, boys and girls track and field.

The following sports have been eliminated: boys and girls cross country, touch football, and girls basketball.

School officials briefly debated whether to let the program limp along to see whether participation picked up later this year, or whether to drop it and fund a limited number of middle school sports. They had about one week to reach a deci-

Woman takes to TV in attempt to free son

By Diane Gale STAFF WRITER

Linda Fannon, the Westland mother fighting to free her son from the clutches of Michigan's lifer law, continues to take her case to the airwaves.

Fannon planned to leave yesterday for a taping of the "Maury Povich" show, which will add to a number of television appearances she's made on behalf of her son.

Expert says 'C' benefits property owners

BY TIM RICHARD

Michigan property owners would see the value of their assets rise under the "Cut and Cap" Proposal C on the Nov. 3 ballot, says economist Patrick Anderson.

Anderson's study puts the value increase at $19 billion by 1997, the year the tax cut in Proposal C would take full effect.

"This would be over $2,000 for every Michigan resident in real, spendable wealth - a further stimulus to the Michigan economy," said Anderson.

The phenomenon is called tax capitalization. "Whenever the cost of holding an asset declines, its value increases, since the owner now will be required to pay less each year," he said.

Proposal C'would cut school property taxes 30 percent over five years, requiring the state treasury to reimburse school districts for the lost revenue, It also would cap assessment increases at 3 percent or the rate of consumer price inflation, whichever is less.

Anderson is an assistant vice president at Alexander . Hamilton Life Insurance Co. in Farmington-Hills. He also is a senior policy advisor for the Mackinac Center, which published his study. Mackinac Center is a conservative, Midland-based think tank which op-· poses taxes and favors privatization of governmental services.

Local impact

For a house with a current market value of $100,000 and assessed at half of that value, a homeowner might expect to see the value rise $4,400 to $7,400 by 1997 -- over and. above any normal increase due to inflation, Anderson said.

Here are his calculations for some area communities showing market valuation followed by 1997 tax bill lower-tax communities would see

• Farmington Hills, $5,557,

• Livonia, $5,559, 8742.

• Northville, $5,195, $690. Westland, $7,400, $1,002.

"Investors in commercial properties; such as apartment and office buildings, routinely capitalize the expense and revenue streams predicted for a property when estimating its market value," Anderson says in an appendix.

For example, if an apartment building returns rents of $12,000 a month and has expenses of $10,000, its income stream is $2,000 a month or $24,000 a year. If the market value is 10 times annual income, the building is worth $24,000 times 10 or $240,000.

This explains why high-tax-rate communities such as Oak Park and Westland would see valuation increases in the $7,400 range while smaller valuation increases.

Other effects

Total benefit to property owners by 1997 will be a net $2 billion by most estimates, including Ander-

Giving consumers and businesses more to spend would stimulate the economy generally, resulting in higher sales tax, income tax and single business tax revenue, Anderson said. But he did not make estimates of how much revenue this; stimulation would produce.

Engler contends the state could reimburse local school districts their lost revenue by dedicating half the historical 5 percent a year growth in state revenue. He sees no need for a state tax increase.

Others are skeptical, saying some increase in state taxes would be necessary to pay for the property

Recreation bills expected to pass

By TIM RICHARD

A package of state Senate passed bills to turn idle railroad corridors. into recreational trails ran into a bit of trouble-in-the House of Representatives.

The bills ignore completely the property rights of adjacent property. owners," Eaton County farmer Fred Miller told the House Conservation Committee Tuesday.

"The title histories can be extremely complex. There are clauses that say the title reverts to the previous owners or their heirs" when the land is no longer used as a railroad.

"Thirty-five percent of the original grants-(to railroads) were easements. The state would not get clear title. How the Senate passed SB 834 and 835 without challenge is a mystery," said the owner of Thornapple Farms.

The bills are sponsored by Sens. Robert Geake, R-Northville, and James Barcia; D-Bay City, Both are running for Congress, and passage of their bipartisan package is likely...

The Conservation Communitiee approved Geake's bill without trou- farmer Miller argued. ble but gave 11 to 5 approval to Bar-

Supporting the Barcia bill was Rep. Jan Bolan, R-Farmington Hills. "These turn out to be very popular once they're in place and managed well," she said.

Opposing it was Rep. James Kosteva, D. Canton. He fought unsuccessfully to remove a subsection that he said could give later trouble.

The subsection says that state preservation of the right of way "shall not be treated . . . as an abandonment, discontinuance or cessation of the use of the right of way for railroad purposes." If upheld by the courts, that section -would mean the rail beds aren't really abandoned and couldn't revert to the original owners' heirs, as Kosteva called the idea essentially a fiction.

Geake predicted, correctly, the bills would make it through the House committee and is confident of full House passage before the

"The package creates no new trails. Rather, it provides standards that ensure local input in the creation and operation of trails in Michigan," the western Wayne County senator said.

Geake said the Barcia bill is essential to the package because it, contains the tools for Department of Natural Resources to secure title to the land.

The bills set criteria for trailway designation, set criteria for permitted usos, and allow DNR to contract with local trailway management councils to operate them.

hile in Türkiye, Suzanne Hagopian hand-picked a special shipment of turkish rugs. Along with our buyers. she met with local villagers in the remote areas where rug weaving is an antorm that remains pure to its origins, dating back several thousand years.

Turkish rugs are the least influenced by western trends. Often, the artist is still the weaver. making these rugs some of the most artistic being woven in the world. Yet, their colorful geometric designs blend nicely with traditional or contemporary furnishings, keeping them in high demand with today's interior designers

We chose the best of these rugs and brought them from to you.

The Crate and Barrel shopping bag.

In the next few months, you should be seeing quite a few of these as more and more people discover our newest store at The Somerset Collection.

And what we think they'll be finding is not so much a store, as an attitude about shopping itself in the 1990's. You see, after 29 years of creating design specialty stores from coast to coast, we think we've learned a few things about you, and about your home.

We think you're looking for value above all. And at no other store in the country will you find such superb merchandise at such affordable prices. Prices made possible by our great volume, our years of experience, and our global network of buying agents.

We think you're looking for selection. And whether that

We think you're looking for selection. And whether that means a soup tureen for fall, a patio table for spring, or an extensive choice of dinnerware patterns for June brides, no other design specialty store can give you the depth of fresh new merchandise, season after season, that you'll find at Crate and Barrel.

We think you're looking for uniqueness. And from handblown luster vases to hand painted ceramic bowls, from professional quality cookware for yourself to a myriad of gift possibilities for others, over half of the merchandise that we sell at Crate and Barrel has been developed exclusively for us.

We think you're looking for a shopping experience, not just a shopping trip. That's why our stores are designed with the kind of visual and architectural flair that not only wins awards, but brings shoppers back again and again.

And we think you're looking for service. At a time when most retail staffs are being cut drastically, we still believe in the customer's right to attention, courtesy, information, and even a genuine smile.

So the next time you spot one of these bags on the street, just remember—it's probably coming from where you've been headed for quite some time.

Bush to ride rails to Plymouth

President George Bush is coming back to the western neighborhood of 15 to 20 minutes." Wayne County suburbs Saturday afternoon for the second time in a month. He will arrive by train in Plymouth's Old Village. Free tickets for local residents are available.

By KEVIN BROWN

President George Bush is coming back to western Wayne County Saturday for his second campaign stop within a month.

He is scheduled to arrive in Plymouth by train.

"We're going to have the arrival of the train somewhere around 7 or 7:15 p.m.," said Peter Gaillard, a White House press officer.

The train - the mahogany paneled "Baltimore" - is scheduled to stop at the railroad tracks at Starkweather justeast of the Station 885 Restaurant.

"There will be a stage - he will not be speaking from the car but from a separate stage we will build," Gaillard

Plans call for street barriers to be erected to limit access. Then, "We're looking to open up the gates to the public around 5 o'clock. There will be one. entrance into the area," Gaillard said, on Starkweather south of Liberty.

Those wanting to hear Bush's address - "it might be somewhere in the Gaillard sald - can seek parking at the Plymouth Cultural Center or Central Middle School.

"There is somewhat limited parking downtown," he said.

"There will be entertainment which we're working on currently," Gaillard said Tuesday. "Some high school bands, it's sort of fluid right now."

In a previous stop at a Canton Township park within the past month, the Garden City pompon squad performed for the president.

Plans call for the president to arrive at dusk. "We're looking to the the dark a little bit to our advantage, there will be a torch lit arrival," Gaillard said.

"There will probably be some bleachers, we want to make sure everybody has a good view." he said.

As for politicians joining Bush on the platform, "It's safe to say the governor will be with him, beyond that we have ven't gotten information," Gaillard add-

On Tuesday, a Rush spokeswoman at the White House declined to say why Bush was coming to Plymouth, adding his visit hadn't been officially announced.

The president and his wife are scheduled to stay Saturday night at the Marriott Hotel in Livonia.

The public must have tickets to get into the event. The free tickets are available at Plymouth City Hall, on Main near Penniman; Station 885 restaurant, and the Mayflower Hotel, on Ann Arbor Trail at Main.

Dems rap Quayle at 'Murphy Brown' party

By Kevin Brown Staff Writer

The announcement Monday that George Bush was coming to western Wayne County this Saturday didn't send area Democrats into hiding.

About 30 Democrats in this largely Republican enclave got a few digs in at during a "Murphy Brown" party.

"Murphy Brown," of course, is the name of a popular TV show and its main character, played by Candice Ber-

Quayle last spring criticized the show as typifying some things that are wrong with America, as Murphy Brown chose. to have a baby and raise her son without a father

His comments drew attacks from those supporting single mothers, claiming that Quayle was insensitive.

Anyway, the first "Murphy Brown" episode of the fall season - touted as a come back at Quayle - seemed a good occasion for a party, said political activ-Vice President Dan Quayle on Monday, sist and former Democratic Wayne County commissioner Bill Joyner. 🧖 😁

> He and Dennis Shrewsbury, a Democratic political activist, organized the gathering, held in the back room of the Box Bar in downtown Plymouth, not far from the Old Village business district where President Bush will visit Satur-

They sent letters to about 1,000 registered Democrats in western Wayne Clubs," "George Bush get Relected, County.

'We thought it would be fun to have a Murphy Brown equal-time party, Joyner said. "Family values defined by government is a non-issue. We thought we'd have fun with it."

Becky Tavarozzi ate a hamburger as the throng awaited the start of the show. "I think there should be a show of strength that there are Democrats in this area," she said.

Quayle, said Lynn Smelser, "just made a fool of himself."

Placed around the room were several signs hand-written by local high school government students. Among them were "Quayle Start Packing Your Golf Dan Quayle Spelt This," and "The George Bush Farewell Tour."

Facing one of the two TVs set on tables as showtime approached was Evelyn Devlin. "Now he's compromising, sending the baby a gift."

She was referring to Quayle sending Murphy Brown's "baby" a stuffed elephant.

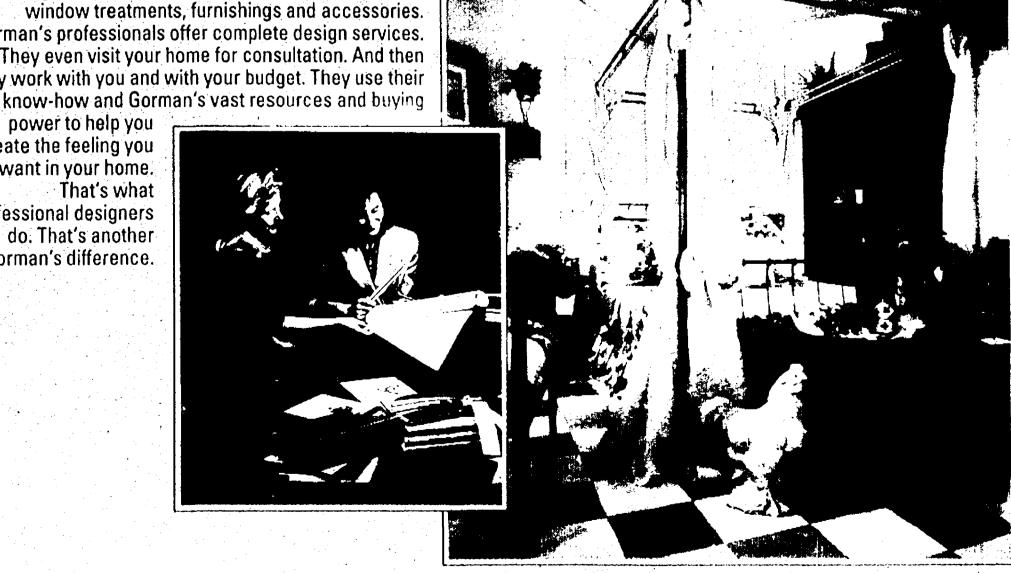

"What options did she have?" Devlin asked. "She could have had an abortion. Or she could have remarried her ex-husband and had an unhappy life."

Bobbie Krzywozycki of Ann Arbor, who is a Bill Clinton campaign worker, offered this assessment of Quayle: "He's a fascist pig."

Race walker takes it one step at time to marathon

BY M.B. DILLON STAFF WRITER

After being hospitalized for yet another heart attack about eight years ago, doctors told Ed Andrysiak he was close to death and should move to a convalescent home. At 70, he was overweight and out of shape.

Andrysiak wasn't so sure about that medical advice. "I was taking more pills, but they never did any good," the Plymouth Township resident said.

Andrysiak's daughter, Judith Rudzewicz, also doubted the doctors' wisdom, and insisted that her dad move in with her family in Colony Parms.

Andrysiak, a widower, sgreed in a New York minute.

Recuperating was a struggle. Climbing stairs was too taxing, so . Andrysiak had to sleep in the dining room.

By exercising, he began slimming his 5 foot-11, 212 pound frame "I went from a 44 waist to a 34 waist."

Progress came a step at a time. "When I started, I would walk with a cane across the street and sitdown on the curb. Then I'd walk drysink entered the 1990 Free Press back," recalled Andrysiak, who established the "Holy Strollers," a club of 50 walkers at St. John Neumann's Catholic Church in Canton.

Retired from Detroit's Murray Corp. and Ford Motor Co. where he worked as a general foreman and senior analyst for 42 years, Andrysiak worked his way up to walking two houses down and back, Eyen that was risky. "I had to take my pulse and find my heart rate" doctor's orders, he said.

After three months, Andrysiak, a baseball and softball player much of his life, was walking a quarter mile. A few years later, one of Andrysiak's 18 grandchildren, a marathon runner, talked him into trying the 26.2 mile distance.

Andrysiak entered his first marathon, the Free Press International Marathon, in 1989. "My intention was to go 13 miles. When I came to the 13-mile point, I was fresh. I thought, 'Let's see how far I can go," said the great-grandfather

To his amazement, he finished, racewalking in a time of six hours and 37 minutes.

This year's race is special, not only because he's in shape to racewalk even faster, but because he hopes to set a personal fund-raising record as well.

The tanned, lean Andrysiak in 1991 raised $350 for the Multiple Sclerosis Society, beneficiary of the Pree Press marathon. He did it with the inspiration of a parishioner from St. John Neumann recently diagnosed with the incurable nerve

"This year, I'm going for broke," says Andrysiak. "My six children, who are scattered all over the U.S., are raising pledges for me.

Salary feud

Faculty union shows smarts

ayne-Westland school district teachers get an A-plus grade in political science following a tentative salary schedule agreement reached Friday by bargainers representing the board of education and the faculty union.

While the union has yet to ratify the agreement, the tentative settlement is based on the board's latest offer of 3 and 5 percent over the next two years, not counting an earlier-agreed on 2 percent raise for the first semester.

Certainly, many residents will feel the raises offered by the board were too generous to start with. But in the political realities of collective bargaining, the board had to get the union leadership in touch with the real world. The union had been pushing for an 8-percent pay hike for one year.

Westland Observer

36251 SCHOOLGRAFT, LIVONIA, MI 48150

Assuming the union ratifies the agreement. the smart thing observed in the dispute is that the teachers' bargaining team may be focusing on the crucial millage renewal election next-

Local voters have already taken out their rage and frustration on teachers' salaries and property taxes by defeating board members who supported the previous salary raises and pushing for the recall of others.

Wayne-Westland teachers hopefully will ratify the tentative agreement next week. At the same time, the board of education and administration will have to work harder to find the money to pay for the raises without raising the millage rate again.

Cable complaint has no merit

special study committee, looking into whether there should be more controls over the cable-TV system's public access programming, learned an important lesson at its first meeting last week.

A resident whose complaint to the city council a month ago prompted the city council to form the committee attended the panel's meeting, as did five or six others, including a Presbyterian pastor.

The specific complaint had little to do with sex or pornography. It dealt with an "offensive" scene which showed the figure of Christ wearing a gas mask while being crucified.

At the committee meeting, even the clergyman didn't have an objection to that short segment of the tape, part of a longer program dealing with heavy metal bands.

The committee, being polite and professional, will continue its study.

The bottom line is that there are controls which keep sexually-offensive materials off the access channel. More controls aren't needed. -

But in any case, if you are offended by what you're watching, our advice is simple and direct - use your remote control to change channels or turn off the set, or cancel your cable-TV subscription to make sure the message is received.

But don't interfere with other viewers' rights to watch what they want in the privacy of their homes or apartments.

Keep city on statistical team

t really doesn't matter how you finagle statistics or where you draw a line on some map. This is still Detroit, the metropolitan

It's metro Detroit from the pricey abodes of Oakland Township to the modest bungalows of Garden City. That big - and sometimes bad city to the south or east of our suburbs is truly part of our social and economic psyche. It always has been.

So we're very much against this suggestion by the federal Office of Management and Budget that affluent Oakland County may want to divorce itself - statistically speaking - from problem-plagued Detroit and Wayne County.

Because so many people live and work in Oakland, the county qualifies to form its own primary metropolitan statistical area (PMSA), which is one way the government describes an ourban area. The county, one of the wealthiest in the nation, could secede from metro Detroit, so to speak.

Well, the notion is ridiculous. We hope officials on both sides of Eight Mile and Telegraph roads put the suggestion where it belongs; in the trash can marked "bad ideas."

Oakland can no more divorce itself from Detroit than one of its residents can divorce himself from a festering sore on his leg. The thing is to get the sore healed so that the entire body

Yes, many suburban cynics will tell that Oakland and western Wayne communities are already legally separated, if not divorced, from

That may be reality for them but not for those who can see Detroit as a jewel ready to be plucked from the bottom of the river.

There are other reasons to pitch the idea of a separate PMSA for Oakland. Advocates say that a separate metro Oakland will look better to developers. Well, we respond that Oakland has looked good - too good, perhaps - to developers over the last 15 or 20 years. Oakland County needs a reprieve from the bulldozers and architects and clogged highways, while Detroit hadly needs commercial and residential development. Finally, if Oakland splits from Detroit, the resulting PMSAs will rank something like 16th and 17th, respectively, in the nation in population. The current metro Detroit area, which includes seven counties, ranks fifth with 4.4 million people. That's lots more clout.

No, we're better off with Detroit, problems and all, on our statistical team.

Needs health plan

am writing this letter on behalf of one of society's overlooked problems - medical care for the uninsured. I, too, overlooked this growing problem, until I lost my medical insurance. A short time ago I had full benefits - medical and dental included at my place of employment. For the past five years I've worked my way off of Social Services. I felt very inclependent because I was supporting myself and my children. Then the company I work for merged with another and I lost my benefit package as of August 31, 1992, unless I choose to pay full cost for medical care.

Not a bad choice, but I only make $10,000 a year and can't afford monthly premiums, while trying to support my family and unfortunately, I could not pay the expensive medical costs. After coming to the conclusion that I could not pay this, I went to apply for Medicaid, and was told that I grossed too much monthly to receive

Like I've said before I've worked for the past five years improving my self each and every year, so I did not have to go back receiving aid, but recently I've begun to wonder if Aid To Dependent Children (ADC) offers better medical benefits than the cost of going to work and without as much hassle.

Dems must target suburbs

ichigan, like the rest of America, is becoming suburbanized. This fundamental change in demography, symbolized so aptly here in Chrysler Corp,'s move from urban Highland Park to suburban Auburn Hills, will drive politics for at least 25 years to come.

To demonstrate, just compare the elections of 1960 and 1988.

Detroit cast 22 percent of the total Michigan vote in 1960. The Detroit vote was 71 percent Democratic, so John F. Kennedy took a 312,000vote lead out of Detroit. The Detroit suburbs also gave Kennedy an 84,000-vote; and Michigan went for JFK.

But by 1988, Detroit vote's had plummeted to just 8 percent of the total in Michigan. Even though Michael Dukakis got an 85 percent margin from Detroit voters and a 217,000 lead coming out of Detroit, it couldn't stand up in the suburbs. Now accounting for fully one-third of Michigan's total vote, suburbanites voted 60 percent for George Bush, their 320,000 lead wiping out the Democrats' margin from Detroit.

Another fact to show how important the Michigan suburbs have become: Bush's total margin in Michigan (290,000) was far greater than his total vote in Detroit (44,000). In other words, George Bush could have won Michigan without getting a single vote in Detroit.

From 1948 to 1960, Democratic presidential candidates opened their campaigns at Labor Day parades in Detroit. In 1992, Bush came to Canton Township.

So how do the Democrats get around the growing size and increasing anti-tax Republicanism of the suburbs? The answer is they must learn to understand and target suburban voters.

This isn't easy, especially when Democrats have to retain the votes from the inner cities to win, while Republicans can afford to virtually ignore them. Worse, Democrats have to figure out how to sell their vision of an activist government to a suburban constituency that is largely anti-tax because it is made up predominantly of property owners.

One important lesson Democrats should have learned by now is this: There's the biggest possible difference between government programs that take everybody's tax money and spend it on a minority and those that spend taxes to help out everybody.

It's the difference between social welfare programs and public works. Some examples:

PHILIP POWER

• The New Deal was not a social welfare program. It was a public works program created to benefit everybody in the face of the Great Depression, a natural disaster that affected ev erybody. Its popularity created the modern Democratic Party.

• The War on Poverty was a social welfare program. Focused on the poor and disposessed, and erected just prior to the Great Inflation, it was deeply unpopular. The political backlash created the modern Republican Party.

• Even though involving the often wasteful and inefficient expenditure of colossal sums, Social Security and Medicare are so popular as to be untouchable. They are entitlements, benefitting everybody. Any party that proposes big changes in these programs had better watch.

A current example of this insight can be found in the suddenly popular field of job train-

Traditionally, politicians have looked on job training as targeted toward minorities! the illiterate, the out of work, the displaced, the unskilled. And as long as job training was conceived as a social welfare program created to benefit the few, it remained unappreciated, unpopular, unfunded.

But the notion is now being recast. Job training is needed for everybody - kids leaving school to enter the work force and all workers now on the job -- because we are in international competition with better skilled economies. All of a sudden job training has become a human investment, a perfectly appropriate and politically popular object of government.

(Next week: two choices.)

Bridal business saga unearths broken promises

B usinesses do go under.
Suppliers, employees and customers get hurt.

But somehow the ongoing saga of the disappointments the owners of a chain of bridal salons have wrought on hundreds of brides to be and their families unleashes a particular anger.

It's estimated that about 5,000 women from all over the metro area, at what is supposed to be one of the happiest times of their lives, may have been duped by Gary and Donna Gottschling, owners of six bridal shops centered in Birmingham.

Sara Kominars of Bloomfield Township was married Sunday in a gown she had to order directly from the manufacturer after Boulevard Bridal broke several delivery dates. Her deposit was on a credit card, which the company appears to be willing to take off her bill. But several of her bridesmaids' deposits were by cash or check.

Kimberley Darling of Livonia was "strung along" until three days before her Aug. 15 wedding after ordering a dress from Today's Bride last January. Panicky, she called Jacobson's, which was able to get the same wedding gown shipped overnight to them and altered before she exchanged yows.

Tyesday morning, an unidentified woman was seen filling out a report at the Birmingham Police Department against the Sue Gordon Salon, probably the most upscale of all the Gottschlings' operations. She had nut.

Gottschlings' operations. She had put a substantial deposit down on a $6,000 wedding dress, eight bridesmaid dresses as well as silk flowers and petticoats — in an effort at one-stop bridal shopping.

Birmingham has, without a lot of fanfare, been somewhat of a bridal capital — with five major bridal salons.

Jacobson's and Alvins offer complete bridal services, and continue to come to the rescue of a number of the brides left stranded by Gottschling operations.

I remember several years back, while shopping for a daughter's wedding, being surprised that the other three, each with a different name but privy to much of the same merchandise, were owned by the same people.

True, each had its own aura. If you happened on a Saturday to enter Boulevard Bridal, a long, low, warehouse-like building on Hunter, you generally had to take a number. Dozens of brides to be floated in and out of dozens of dressing rooms and back into the heavily mirrored main sales area to pick out dresses, fully view their choices and be fitted.

Today's Bride had a more personal atmosphere. Housed in a small, two-story building on Birmingham's hypass, it was a step up in sales and service.

Sue Gordon, surrounded by galleries and boutiques, in Birmingham's North Woodward "culture gulch," was the quintessence of bridal salons. Appointments were encouraged.

But today, it doesn't matter. Regardless of price, size of the order, or the atmosphere and service rendered, deposits were taken for dresses the Gottschlings allegedly knew would not be shipped by the manufacturer because of unpaid debts.

Managers were also directed to sell dresses off the displays as new, according to an investigation by the Oakland County prosecutor.

Now, several thousand brides later, the prosecutor, Detroit's Office of Consumer Affairs and the Birmingham Police Department are closing in. A temporary restraining order has been is sued preventing the owners from taking money for dresses not in stock.

And as of Tuesday morning, more than 50 reports had been filed with Birmingham police by women willing to testify against the owners.

The Gottschlings were due in the prosecutor's office Wednesday, business records in hand, to answer questions under oath.

Through it all, the Gottschlings have been lying low. A statement was released that they are in negotiations to sell the bridal shops "because of adverse publicity." Recently, they apparently worked out an agreement to have dresses shipped from the manufacturer directly to brides who have weddings in the next 30 days.

Businesses do go under. Suppliers, employees, customers do get hurt. But rules exist for bankruptcies and closing businesses which don't seem to have been followed here. Somehow you hope these operators will be held fully accountable for their debts as well as the worries they've caused.

Wetlands bill in trouble again

Once again a wetlands protection bill is in trouble in the Michigan Legislature.

'We've been awamped with packets of information," said House Conservation Committee chair Tom Alley, D-West Branch.

"There will be no vote prior to the election," Alley announced Tuesday as he adjourned his panel's meeting -15 minutes late - without taking up Senate Bill 522, "In the House, we're afreid the issues will be politicized."

close shp Oct. 8 until after the elec-

To a room crowded with people waiting to testify, Alley said, "I'm sorry we don't have time to hear you. You've had an impact."

The bill first was almed at stripping local cities and townships of their power to regulate filling in of wetlands, Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, rewrote it to give the state power to regulate wetlands larger than five acres and local unita control over smaller ones Identical timetables and paperwork requirements would be set up.

In addition, Honigman wrote The Legislature is scheduled to Senate Bill 807 setting up regulatory criteria for local ordinances.

Honigman last winter won agreement from almost all the affected parties - builders, local units and environmentalists. The Senate passed the bills overhwhelmingly

March 25. But lately the coalition has split apart. The Michigan Association of Home Builders accused the Michigan United Conservation Clubs of repudiating the deal.

The bone of contention is "density credits" - a plan to let builders use smaller lot sizes in exchange for protecting wetlands.

Wetlands ordinances are used by many Oakland and Livingston counties communities.

Primo's Pizza first

Primo's Pizza, a member of the Livonia and Plymouth modified softball leagues, won an open tournament last weekend in Mason, defeating Lansing Snafu in the final, 9-5.

Pitcher Brian Murphy (Plymouth) posted a record of 4-1 for Primo's, which also scored victories over Bedson Electric of Livonia, 9-2; Delton McCormick, 9-8; and Plymouth Trading Post, 6-4. (Snafu handed Primo's a 9-4 opening game loss.)

Manager Rick Williamson (Garden City), an outfielder/designated hitter, led Primo's in hitting with a .555 average. Third baseman Dave Feeny and second baseman Kevin Liedel, both of Livonia, batted .500 and .475, respectively. Liedel also had three triples and a double.

Other members of Primo's include shortstop Tony Richardson of Farmington, who hit .667 during the final two games; Doug Fulton, Kevin Collins and Rob Sudz, all of Livonia; Bob Borth, Westland; Mike Rice, Garden City; Bob Debenedet, Plymouth; and Dave Wolfe, Milford.

Primo's also finished 13th with a 3.2 record at the National Invitational 10-man modified tournament over Labor Day weekend in Meadville, Pa.

Stevenson squeaks by Chargers

Livonia soccer rivals Stevenson and Churchill got reacquainted Wednesday, with the visiting Spartans coming out on top, 2-1. Upstart Franklin, meanwhile, toppled Northville by the same count.

BY BRAD EMONS

Surprisingly, perennial state boys: soccer powers Stevenson and Churchill are pretty much out of the running for this year's Western Lakes Activities Association championship.

But that doesn't mean the rivalry is any less fierce.

Stevenson, the defending state Class A champs, upped its overall record to 5. 1-3 with a hard-fought 2-1 victory Wednesday over the host Chargers (4-2-

The Spartans scored a pair of quick goals only 11/2 minutes apart in the opening half, and then held off a strong Churchill comeback during the final 40 minutes of action. .

Nick Deren opened the scoring with 15:45 left in the first half on an assist from freshman Steve Williford.

The Spartans' Jeff Thomas then made it 2.0 with 14:23 to go on a beautiful cross from Andrew Foley.

But Stevenson seemed to sag just before the half ended, particularly after junior forward Mike Jablonski went down with a neck injury.

"He's the fastest man on our team and it made it difficult to go forward," said Stevenson third-year coach Walt Barrett, who is now 1-1-3 against Churchill. "It was not sit-back strategy. Churchill saw what was going on and they took advantage. It was difficult to rest anyone with him (Jablonski) out."

Churchill's junior striker Pete Owens cut the deficit to 2-1 with a goal during the 59th minute of play.

The Chargers, led by sophomore midfielder Charlie Roberts, kept up the pressure, but couldn't score the equalizer against Stevenson goalkeeper Mo Lanspeary.

Churchill missed on three golden chances, including a shot by Vincent DeMassa that rang off the post with 10 minutes remaining. (The Chargers also had a goal disallowed.)

"We played with no heart and played too mechanically in the first half," Churchill coach Mark Mason said. "There was no emotion or desire to win the game. But at halftime our goalie Kal Kaliszewski made some statements on how important the game was to the upperclassmen. Sometimes the game is won by emotion more than it is on

The Chargers' tandem of Justin Monson and Brian O'Beirne did better job marking Stevenson's dangerous duo of Adam Pichler and Thomas in the second half, but the damage had already been done.

"It was lackadaisical marking which led to the two quick goals," Mason said. "We chose to sit back and play de-

Stevenson, meanwhile, did a good job marking Churchill's top scorer, Vince Troiani. The senior striker had only one shot on goal.

"The best part was how this young group dug down deep and kept the ball out of the net," Barrett said.

Franklin moves closer

proved to be the game-winner.

Livonia Franklin (8-2-1) moved a step closer to clinching its first-ever WLAA-Western Division title with a 2-1 win Wednesday at Northville (6-5-1). Guillermo Cazares' unassisted goal off a corner kick with 15:21 remaining

Franklin won despite being outshot,

'We didn't play real well, but it was a win." Franklin coach Frantz, Lamarre said. "For us to play poorly and still able to win says a lot about our team."

Buelow, the 5-foot-5 Kulick and stopper David Binkiewicz were all outstanding in victory, according to Lamarre.

O&E champion

Livonian Kobane wins handily

By Steve Kowalski Staff Writer

Everyone expected Dean-Kobane to make a strong push for the O&E Golf Classic championship, even though he was pulling his own cart on the Whispering Willows Golf Course.

A guy of Kobane's caliber usually is accompanied by a caddy, but he decided to go it alone and still won his first O&E championship by nine strokes over secondplace Doug Cumming, the defending champion from Farmington Hills. Kobane, a 1987 Livonia Churchill graduate who placed second in this summer's Michigan Amateur at Oakland Hills, had a two-day total of 138 (2-under par).

Ken Johnson, assistant golf professional at Whispering Willows, said he "got a kick out of" watching Kobane pull his own cart. Kobane could have driven a golf cart or brought along a caddy.

"For as much talent that he has, you'd think he'd be one of these prima donna, snotty kids, but he's out there playing for the championship, pulling a pull cart just like any other 'porch climber or trunk slammer.' "Johnson said. "He's a great guy."

Another '87 Churchill graduate, Kurt Goetzke, golfed in Kobane's foursome. After shooting a 1-over par 71 on Saturday, Goetzke finished 22nd with a two day total of 159. Goetzke has caddied before for Kobane and would like to remain in that capacity should Kobane make the PGA Tour.

"I was happy to shoot a 71 (Saturday) and get a chance to play with Dean," Goetzke said. "I knew he was going to win. If he makes a million (dollars some day) and I'm still his caddy, I'll take my 16 percent."

Canton's Bob Dates won the first flight (77-80/157).

Kohane was expected to be challenged by Pat Stayer, the only other golfer in the field with a zero handicap, but Stayer withdrew after shooting a 76 on Satur-

He took home a $275 gift certificate for winning. A total of $2,800 in gift certificates were won by golfers in the four flights, said Gary Whitener, Golf Professional at Whispering Willows.

"I just came out and did the best I could," said Kobane. "The greens were in excellent shape. Some of the pins were in challenging places and you really had to think about your shots."

This was Kobane's first appearance in an O&E Golf Classic since 1985 when he took second in the championship flight. Kobane used to work part-time at Whispering Willows.

"Dean used to be one of my rug rats when he was 55 pounds lighter and 12 inches shorter." Whitener said.

Kobane said he's thinking about turning professional but hasn't made up his mind. He has been golfing since age 10 when his father got him started.

"My dad got me into a lot of sports and that's one of them," Kobane said. "For some reason, I got attached to golf - it presented a challenge.

"I'm contemplating pros (tour) - I don't know when it's going to. happen. If you play well, you're going to make a check. That's all there is to it." Richard Quiton, a veteran O&E golfer who graduated from Livonia Stevenson, got the only eagle over the weekend with a three on the par-5 No. 1 hole Sunday. Quiton finished fourth in the championship flight (77-74/151), one stroke behind third-place lan Harris (77-73/150).

Golfing in Quiton's foursome was Kirk Osler, a 1982 Bentley graduate who finished ninth (78-76/154). Osler said the course was in great shape despite heavy rain

"If you couldn't make a putt this weekend you might as well give up the game," said Oslet, who attended a wedding the night before and would have preferred a later Sunday morning tee time. "It's tough working on three hours of sleep."

Kohane's two day total of 138 tied the O&E record, set by threetime champion John Van Vleck, of Farmington Hills. Van Vicek said he chose not to play this year because he was spending the weekend with his children.

Fight ruins Classic

By C.J. RISAK STAFF WRITER

In the first eight years of the Marciott Soccer Classic, host-team Oakland University had been frustrated. Despite their nationally-renowned record, the Pioneers had never been able to win their own tournament.

On Sunday, they were a goal away from gaining that first tournament title. Instead, they suffered their worst defeat ever.

Trailing Grand Canyon University 3-2 with 20:44 remaining, three OU players - Will Bothe, Lamarr Peters and Mali Walton - battled for position in the Grand Canyon goal area with keeper George Okallo and two defenders. Okallo reached up and grabbed the free kick taken by OU's John Gentile (from Livonia Churchill) and was jostled as he did. Officials called a foul against the Pioneers.

Grand Canyon defender Peter Orona, upset by the rough treatment against his keeper, charged into Walton. In a matter of seconds, all hell broke loose, with Walton getting attacked by three Grand Canyon players and Peters knocking one of them, Chris Fusselman, senseless.

Benches cleared as havor reigned. It took officials 10 minutes to get players sorted out and returned to their proper places; red cards were initially issued to four Pioneers and one player from Grand Canyon (that was later altered to three from OU and two from Grand Canyon).

At that point, referee Richard Heron called the game. Since less than 70 minutes had been played (44 seconds less, to be precise) the minimum for a match to be official - the game was declared no

"The way these feeling are, there's no way I can restart this game," said Heron. "That's my gut feeling.

He added that in "10 years of referceing, this is the first time this has ever happened to me."

Indeed, it had rarely happened to OU. In 1983, the Pioneers had a game at Indiana Institute of Technology called when irate fans SOCCER stormed onto the field.

But that wasn't the players' fault. This was.

"Both teams lost their composure," said OU coach Gary Parsons afterwards. Grand Canyon coach Peter Duah' did not argue the officials' call: "We didn't come here to fight, we came here to play."

.Frustration certainly could have fueled the Pioneers' tempers. They trailed 2.0 at halstime - Grand Canyon got goals from Matt Makovic at 3:37 and from Danny Yogerst at 25:59 - and then, after trimming the deficit to 2-1 on a header by Peters after a restart from Gentile 7:28 into the second half, gave a goal back 18 seconds later on a break by Kobie Washington.

"We made some horrible defensive mistakes," said Parsons. "All three were horrible goals.'

The Pioneers kept battling, however, and Walton headed in a perfectly placed pass from Gentile at 57:26. In the next eight minutes, Bothe had two good chances to tie it, but missed both.

As it turned out, none of it counted anyway.

After officials viewed the videotape - PASS had been taping the game and was planning to show it Oct. 6 - officials altered their disqualifications. OU's Derek Williford (Livonia Stevenson), Dominic Scicluna (Redford Catholic Central) and Peters, and Grand Can. yon's Orona and Fusselman, were issued red cards. All must sit out their team's next scheduled match (for OU, that was Wednesday against Spring Arbor).

On Saturday, OU struck twice in the first half and added two more goals in the second to whip Cal State San Bernardino 4-1. The outcome was never really in doubt; the Pioneers led 3.0 before allowing a race in NJCAA Region 12 men's soccer after all.

Andrew Wagstaff opened the scoring with an unassisted goal at 21:21; Gentile made it 2-0, also unassisted, at 42:32.

True, it's always been that way. The winner was always decided by the outcome of two games (and, quite often, three - counting the playoff) between Schoolcraft College and Macomb Community College.

SC won the opening round eight days ago, 2.0. But on Saturday, the Monarchs suffered another hlow - they lost 2.0 to visiting Cuyahoga CC.

Which means the Ocelots have a two-game bulge on their perennial rival. That could change, however; SC visits undefeated Cuyahoga Saturday.

Last Saturday, the Ocelots were having problems at Columbus (Ohio) CC, the region's newest member. Despite controlling play, the game was scoreless at half; SC's Matt Lividini and Dominic Vella each headed shots off the crossbar, and Wayne Worosz knocked one off the post.

"We totally dominated," said coach Van Dimitriou. "The only thing we didn't do was finish."

SC changed that in the second half, popping in five unanswered goals to collect a 5.0 triumph. The win lifted the Ocelots' record to 5-

0 overall and to 3.0 in the region; they have not allowed a goal since their season opening match against Calvin College. "I've got to give them credit," said Dimitriou of Columbus. "For, a first year team, they gave us quite a game."

Problem was, that game was concentrated on defense. SC had a 37-2 edge in shots and, as Dimîtriou put-it, "it was only a matter of time."

Vella made up for his earlier crossbar miss by getting control of the ball out of a scramble and tucking it into the corner 15 minutes into the second half, putting SC up 1.0. Five minutes later, Brian Hauman - subbing for Lividini, who's recovering from a pulled hamstring muscle - took a through ball from Andy Cosenza and put it into the left corner for a 2.0 SC lead.

The goals came fast and furious after that. Worosz avenged his earlier miss, too, converting a cross from Tim Lampi with 22 minutes left. However, Worosz did put his first shot off the post again before gaining control of the rebound and scoring.

Jeff Cardinal got his first goal of .. the season with 15 minutes left on. a cross from Hauman, and Craig Hauswirth closed out the scoring with his first of the season five minutes later. Adam Carriere assisted.

Matt Stabile played the first 55 minutes in goal before giving way to Terry Metzger.

M SC WOMEN'S SOCCER

Seven games into the season, it's quite clear any success enjoyed by the Lady Ocelots this season will be well-earned.

Coach Nick O'Shea isn't cashing it in now - not at all. Even after losing twice in St. Louis last weekend, O'Shea was pleased with his team's progress.

The Lady Ocelots never led in either of their matches, losing 3-0 to Meramec CC Saturday and 3-1 to Brevard CC Sunday. The defeats left them at 1-5-1 for the season.

Dee Lorenz scored SC's only goal of the weekend, but it came after Brevard had built a 3-0 lead.

"Tactically, the girls are doing nice things," said O'Shea. "They're playing well together. Technically and physically, they're not as good as other teams 2nd-half rally boosts Ocelots to win right now. We just don't have a strong, fast team."

> In a month, SC has a return trip planned to St. Louis for two more matches. O'Shea plans on working his team on fundamentals until then.

> "We're improving," he said. "But we need to be working on skills at a faster pace. I'm not discouraged with their effort or their willingness to learn. It's just that they're so far behind in skills."

Keeper Kim Owczarzak, sweeper Amy Krajewski and stopper Becky Raymor have all been impressive, O'Shea said. while midfielders Kara Kramer and Kelly Greaves have been consistent and defender Tiffany Graves has improved.

Still, it probably won't show up in the results this weekend. SC hosts second-ranked Meratnec and Farmingdale and Florissant Valley, tied for sixth in the NJCAA ratings.

Staying unbeaten in Region 12 play proved no problem for SC Tuesday at Oakland Community College. The Lady Ocelots disposed of the Lady Raiders 15.5, 15.0, 15.3.

Stevenson trims RU, 49-45

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

For most of the second half Tuesday night, Redford Union guard Jamie Zalek kept an eye on Livonia Stevenson point guard Mo Drabicki.

But Zalek, who held Drabicki to four second-half points, didn't pay enough attention to the Spartans' best player with less than 20 seconds left.

With RU trailing 48-45 and Zalek bringing the ball up-court, Drabicki stole the ball and regained possession for Stevenson, RU committed an intentional foul with seven seconds left and Jill Vantiem split a pair of free throws for a 49-45 nonleague victory.

Drabicki had several steals but none more important than the last.

"She (Zalek) was looking up court to who she was going to pass to and wasn't paying attention to dribbling," said Drabicki, who finished with 14 points. "She wasn't watching me, so I stole it."

BASKETBALL

The win-kept-Stevenson-undefeated at 5.0 entering tonight's Western Lakes Activities Association opener at Farmington Hills. Harrison.

Stevenson enjoyed a 44-31 lead after three quarters but Panthers' guard Jenny Markham made three 3-point shots in the fourth quarter. to rally RU.

Markham, who had a game-high 20 points and (five 3-pointers), made consecutive 3 point shots midway through the fourth quarter to pull RU to within 48-44...

A free throw by RU senior Wendy Malecki made the score 48-45 before Stevenson held on in the final Senior guard Lori Shingledecker scored nine of her team-high 15 points after halftime to spark the close game because we need to be prepared for our league, but not that close," Henry said. "He (RU coach Marty Lowney) has a nice was obvious when she (Markham) made a three in the first quarter 11 rebounds. that she was an outside shooter. So it wasn't like she caught us by surprise at the end."

Lowney praised the three-point shooting of Markham but said Zalek's defense on Drabicki also played a role in RU's comeback. The Panthers trailed 28-19 at halftime after hitting only 2-of-16 field goals and committing 12 turnovers, The Panthers managed to stay in the game by hitting 13-of-18 free throws in the first half.

RU went to a full-court press in the second half with Zalek paying special attention to Drabicki.

"We went to a total denial on her (Drabicki) and Jamie did a good job," Lowney said. "We hustle and get some good steals, then turn "I was hoping for some type of around and give the ball right back to them. Their press works for them and when our press gets going, it works for us."

Malecki, RU's leading scorer, was club and we knew that coming in. It held to eight points on 2:0f-15 shooting but she led the team with > Wendy forced a couple of shots. that didn't go but she makes other things happen when she's on the floor," Lowney said.

Stevenson went with a smaller lineup with 5-11 senior Patty Diamond still sidelined by a broken thumb and 5-10 senior Jen Turbiak playing sparingly because of "banged up fingers," according to Henry.

Vantiem made her first varsity start and responded with five points and eight rebounds. RU held a 27-24 rebounding advantage.

"I didn't plan on playing Jill as much but she handled herself so well I didn't substitute for her that much," Henry said.

: Tough battle: It was virtually a defensive standoff Saturday when Livonia Franklin beat Farmington Harrison in overtime, 3-0. Jason Facione (right) chases Harrison quarterback Jeff Cislo (with : ball) on this play.

Patriots strong in trenches

BY DAN O'MEARA and BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITERS

Was that Kojak's cousin, or maybe Joe Paterno with a brushcut, in the Livonia Franklin locker room last Saturday?

. No, it was football coach Armand Vigna, who resembled one of his Hald-headed linemen (minus the hig and burly) after his players sheared his locks, too, following their upset of Farmington Hills Harrison in overtime, 3.0.

"I think I made some rash promises," Vigna said. "I must have foolishly said 'If we beat Harrison, I'll shave my head. The kids never brought it up until Thursday, and the coaches confirmed I said it."

Vigna might have to get a lateseason trim if Franklin achieves the second of two preseason goals. In addition to beating Harrison, the Patriots set their sights on the Class A playoffs.

"We think we have potential," Vigna said. "I think we proved it today on defense, but we still have to prove it on offense. We're in a good position, but we have still four (division games) to go."

The win over Harrison, which ended Harrison's 15 game winning streak, puts Franklin (1-0, 3-0) a leg ap on the other Western Division teams. Preseason favorite Walled Lake Western (1.0, 3.0) plays Saturday at Harrison.

The Patriots showed the ability to play a first-rate defensive game, holding Harrison scoreless and giving up 133 yards in total offense, but they were equally as ineffective on offense. "I think our defense won the kame for us," said quarterback Dave Little, who kicked a 20-yard field goal in overtime. "They gave ps the shutout and the opportunity for me to win the game."

Franklin defensive coordinator Jim Karoub said his players, origihally unsure of their ability to stop Harrison, were full of confidence by the end of the week.

"At first, they said 'I don't know if this (defense) is going to work, coach.' I said 'You guys believe in it; you're tough enough to do it.' "By Friday they had it down; we Redford Union at Edsel Ford, 3:30 p.m.: Judging by the records, it looks as if RU should be an obvious favorite at 1-0 in the Northwest Suburban League and 2-1 overall. Liv. Franklin at Liv. Churchill: The Patriots can't afford a letdown against winless Churchill (0-1, 0-3) after beating perennial WLAA power Hamson. With big games down the road, they don't want to the along the way. Franklin has won three games despite sconng only 32 points. but the Chargers will find it difficult moving the ball against a solid defense that has allowed just 13. PICK: The Patriots rack up their fourth win.

Liv. Stevenson at Wald. Glenn: The Rockets (1-0 takes Division, 3-0) are unbeaten but Stevenson will be their toughest test yet. No one doubts Glenn is one of the best Class AA teams around. but its first three opponents are 1-8. The Spartans (0-1, 0-3) have played three good teams and an average of five plus points has been the difference each time. PICK: Don't expect the Rockets to fizzle on the launching pad.

Northville at Ply. Canton: The Mustangs (1.0, 2.1) have won two straight and recovered from an opening-week bashing by state ranked South Lyon. The Chiefs (0-1, 0-3) have had difficult opponents the last two weeks and need a win to make them forget that loss to Monroe. which used its last-second win as a springboard to a 3.0 record. PICK: The Mustangs stay in contention.

Farmington at W.L. Central: After opening with a murderous schedule that had them playing teams with a combined 8-1 mark, the Falcons (0-1, 0-3) have a legitimate shot at posting a victory. Central (0-1, 2-1) has lost two straight since beating Milford, PICK: The Vikings rate Woodhaven at Garden City: The Courais (2-1) had one of their best starts in years and would have been 3.0 if not for a one point, overtime loss to Romulus. Woodhaven, the defending NSL-co-champion with Redford Union, defeated Edsel Ford 25-21 in its league debut last week but is 1-2 overall. PICK: The Cougars keep building momentum.

Red. Thurston at Taylor Kennedy: Thurston (1.1 Tri-River League, 2-1) gained some confidence by beating 1991 playoff qualifier Crestwood last week, but the Eagles need another win here to show they are among the top TRL teams. Kennedy ([-1, 1-2) was trounced by Wyandotte (50-19) and lost to Melyindale (19-8) before beating Taylor Truman (37-24). PICKS: Emons casts a vote for Kennedy, while O'Meara stumps for Thurston.

Wayne Memorial at Wyandotte: The host Bears (1-1 Wolverine A, 2-1) are the defending conference champs but slipped early by losing 30-6 to Lincoln Park. Wayne (1-1, 1-2) started with tough opponents but gave up 27 points to lowly Trenton tast week. PICK: The Bears maul the Zetras.

SATURDAY'S GAMES (all times 1 p.m. unless noted)

Ply. Salem at N. Farmington: The Raiders (1-0, 2-1) have won two straight, though they struggled in the mud against Stevenson last week. Senior tailback Todd Anderson set a school record with 273 yards on 30 carries. Salem (1-0\2-1) has sandwiched a pair of wins around a loss to Harrison and showed a potentialfense last week. The Rocks also remember last year when North scored in the last minute, denying Salem the Lakes... title and a shot at the WLAA crown. PICK: Anderson's running and a strong defense make North a winner.

W.L. Western at Farm. Harrison: For one of the few times in WLAA history, the Western Division will have a championship race. Since the league was organized in 1982; Harrison is the only team to win the division. That's 10 straight titles. The Hanks (0-1, 2-1), who have never lost a WLAA game to Western, can be the spoiler and also get back in contention by giving the Warriors (1-0, 3-0) their first loss. Besides, when was the last time. Harrison lost two games in a row? plck: The Hawks rebound.

Bishop Borgess at O.L. St. Mary's: The Eaglets are flying high while the Spartans are struggling. St. Mary's is 3.0 ranked No. 5 in Class CC, with a victory over Country Day to its credit. Borgess is 0-3 heading into this Catholic League In-Sectional opener after losing to three outstate teams. PICK: OLSM keeps rolling.

Lutheran West at Luth. Westland: Lutheran West is 3.0, though the games seems to keep getting for the Leopards, who edged Cranbrook 8:6 last week. The Warnors of Lutheran High in Westland are coming off a 25-0 loss to Clarenceville, which lost 20-14 to Lutheran West. PICK: The Leopards stay unbeaten.

Clarenceville at B.H. Cranbrook: Clarencevitle got its first win last week and hopes to keep a good thing going. This one could go either way. Both teams are 1-2 and appear evenly matched. Both lost to Lutheran West, defeated another Lutheran school - the Cranes beat Lutheran Northwest 38-12 - and lost their openers to quality foes (Center Line St. Clement and Yale). PICK: Cranbrook claims the victory.

Redford CC vs. Warren DeLaSalle, 7:30 p.m. at Roseville Mem. Fleid: This was to be a matchup between state rated Class AA teams until DelaSalle (2-1) was upset 140 by Lake Onon last week. Though the contest has lost some of its luster, it's sure to be a good, hard-fought game. While the Catholic League schedule begins this week, the No. 3 Shamrocks (3.0) can already lay claim to the Toledo city championship. CC has beaten St. John and St. Francis, supposedly the top teams in that Ohio town. PICK: The Shamrocks grind out another win:

St. Agatha vs. A.A. Gab. Richard. 7:30 p.m. at RU's Kraft Field: Both teams bring 2-1 records into this Catholic C Section debut. The Aggies are defending champs, but the fighting Insh supposedly are much improved after a 3:6 finish. Fellowing a 6-0 loss Thurston, Agatha has won its fast two. Richard started with wins over a pair of Class D teams - Webbervi'e (47-28) and Whitmore Lake (50-0) but lost a shootout 42-35 with Dundee (3.0) last week. Dundee is rated No. 3 in Class CC. The Insh have a potent running attack led by senior Carl Pickett (6.4, 193). Senior quarterback Jon Priestap is a former CC player. PICK: O'Meara' tikes the Irish. Emons sides with the Ag-

Goodard gets 100th win

John Goddard had mixed emotions about getting his 100th career win Saturday night:

St. Agatha's 16-9 victory at home over Berrie's (Ontario) gave Goddard his milestone, which was good news. But it came at the expense of Berrie's coach Pete Donaldson, who happens to be Goddard's old roommate from Northwood Institute.

"I told him every time we get together he's always going to know who I got my 100th win against," Goddard joked. "He said, "I'll never live this one down. But it's exciting because my son John is a senior on the team and that makes it extra special."

For one quarter it looked like St. Agatha would struggle. The Aggies trailed 9-0 after a 40-yard field goal and a 24-yard touchdown run off a

The Aggies closed to within 9-2 at halftime after Cajuan Davis blocked a Berrie punt and the punter fell on the ball in the end zone for a two-point safety.

St. Agatha added two second-half TDs. The Aggies took the opening drive of the second half and marched 80 yards for a score.

Mike Tymczak capped the drive with a 2-yard run. Tymczak also had a 45-yard gain on the drive and quarterback Paul Parsell connected with Goddard on a 12-yard pass to bring the ball to the two. Liam Shivers' extra point was good to tie the score 9.9.

Shamrocks win 3rd

Redford Catholic Central continued, its dominance over northern; Ohio with a 20-14 victory over Toledo St. Francis Saturday at Toledo's Glass Bowl.

CC crushed Toledo St. John's 36-0 in its season opener.

CC (3.0) opened the scoring less than two minutes into the game when senior linebacker Joe Herman intercepted a St. Francis pass and returned it 11 yards for a touchdown. Adam Borcherdt's extra point made it 7-0.

St. Francis' next drive stalled at: the CC 11 when strong safety Jeff-LaChapelle picked off another pass. But St. Francis scored on a 10-play drive to pull to within 7.6 at halftime. A 7-yard touchdown reception by Damian Ogrodowski on a fourthdown play capped the drive but the point-after was missed.

Two plays after CC recovered a St. Francis fumble on a punt, Preddie Taylor scampered into the end zone from four yards out. The extra point made it 14-6 with 3:40 left in the third quarter.

CC took a 20-6 lead in the fourth quarter when Chris Barbara connected with Marcus McCauley on a 39-yard scoring pass. Barbara completed 6 of 13 passes for 79 yards.

St. Francis (2-1) scored the game's final points on a one-yard quarterback sneak.

CC outgained St. Francis in total yardage, 228-182. Jason Krueger rushed 13 times for 67 yards, while Taylor gained 58 yards on 15 car-

'Veronica's Room' a fine performance

BY KRIS SPENCER

Performances of the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Veronica's Room" continue through Oct. 3 at the Water Tower Theatre on the campus of Northville Regional Hospital. For ticket information call 349-7110.

"'Veronica's Room' belongs in the category of unnecessary plays," wrote critic John Simon when Ira Levin's thriller premiered on Broadway in 1973. Simon wasn't alone in his assessment. The show folded after 75 performances.

Nearly 20 years later, we find this "unnecessary play" opening the Plymouth Theatre Guild's 46th season. Considering the balance of the Guild's 1992 season including such favorites as "Matchmaker," "Fiddler on the Roof," and "Noises Of 'one must wonder why the group would open with a potential dud.

· Taking a seat on opening night, I must admit I felt suspicious of what would follow. Then, in the true thriller fashion, I witnessed that all-important twist: it was a fine performance of a truly worthwhile play.

"Veronica's Room" is a fierce examination of incest and the disfunctional family. Perhaps we weren't ready for it in 1973, but in this age of tabloid television and shock talk shows the play proves rather timely.

As the play begins, we witness a peculiar, yet seemingly innocent situation. An amiable elderly couple coerces an open-minded young woman and her male acquaintance into following them home. It seems the young woman resembles another young woman who has since died from tuberculosis, Veronica was her

The couple tell the young woman of Veronica's psychologically-unbalanced sibling Sissy. Apparently a good deal of Sissy's problem revolves around her delusion that Veronica is alive and angry at her.

While showing the young woman a picture of Veronica, they convince her that she is the answer to Sissy's problem, all she has to do is dress; up as Veronica and reassure Sissy that she holds no animosity. With some hesitation the young woman agrees. But once she's prepare to act out of goodwill, she finds herself a prisoner in Veronica's room and in the dead girl's identity.

The evil to evolve in the play's second act involves the elderly couple and young woman's male acquaintances masquerading as Veronica's bitter, abusive parents and the well-paid family physician. What ensues is a mind game of truly twisted proportions, culminating in guilt trips, psychological breakdowns and murder.

In "Veronica's Room," playwright Levin ("Rosemary's Baby," "Stepford Wives") paints a disturbing, if not extreme portrait of the horrors of incest. Yet, despite its extremes, the show succeeds where most of our current pop culture fails on this grim subject: it conveys with precision the living hell of incest victims, without the schmaltz of made-for-TV movies, nor the gaudy

In October they'll be celebrating their 33rd wedding anniversary. The Kaplantzes live in Livonla. Steve Kaplantzes said he learned how to cook while working at his uncle's restaurant in Detroit. Before opening Grecian Tower, he opetated a coney island and barbecue carryout restaurant.

"This restaurant was dad's dream, and people love it. Everything is homemade," said Emmanuel Kaplantzes who helps his parents at the restaurant as he has since he was a child. His sister older Sophia, a dental hygienist and mother of two, and brother Ted, an engineer, have also worked at the family's restaurant.

Dinosaur tactics? With employers becoming more aggressive about hiring replacement workers, strikes such as this one staged earlier this year against Kroger may become a tactic of the past.

Unions look beyond job walkouts

Caution is the byword when it comes to striking. So unions are using other tactics to help press their demands.

By Doug Funke

While statistics don't indicate a trend toward fewer strikes, the sentiment nowadays is to think long and hard before hitting the bricks.

The threatened and actual hiring of permanent replacement workers - allowed by federal law despite concerted efforts by upionists to repeal the measure - prompt labor leaders to look at alternatives to walkouts.

Luther Jackson, treasurer of the Newspaper Guild of Detroit. That union represents some editors and reporters at this newspaper and editorial employees at the News, Free Press and Adams. 1990 through September of 1991, and 13. America without a strike. Work stop-Publications...

"A strike first of all is a weapon of last resort," said Doug Fraser, former

UAW president and currently a labor studies professor at Wayne State University. "It shouldn't be used unless it can be used effectively."

"It's just that we have to do a careful evaluation and use them (strikes) only where they're effective," said Bob Knox, president of Teamsters Local 1038 and a Westland resident. "Now, in not many places can they be used effective.

Three strikes occurred in private-sec-"We have more weapons now," said tor companies in Michigan from October 1986 through September 1987, according to the bureau of employment relations, state department of labor. Thirteen were reported from October from last October until now.

> But whatever the numbers say, union leaders sound cautious now. The strategy of choice seems to be stay on the job, have been able to do a lot of things tocontinue to draw pay and use guerrilla tactics rather than direct confrontation through a strike to win contract demands.

Stay on the job

"Our concern relative to going on strike is, number one, we didn't want our members to be without paychecks." said George Manoogian, president of Utility Workers Union of America Local 223 and a Birmingham resident.

"Things have changed," said Jim Hodge, director of labor relations at Michigan Bell and a Lathrup Village resident. "Unions are deeply concerned with replacement workers."

Bell negotiated a contract this year with the Communications Workers of pages had occurred during the three previous negotiations.

"Our unions have recognized that we gether," Hodge said. "That carried overinto our bargaining process.

"Unions have to come to realize that." strikes can be detrimental," he added. "We're highly automated. We can generally carry on by bringing our management people to work."

So unions have developed other strate:

Those include work to rule which means following the contract to the letter. A variation of that is called malicious obedience. Do no more than what a supervisor directs.

Embarrassment tactics

Then there are corporate campaigns designed to embarrass top management into yielding. That could range from informational campaigns for stockholders and boards of directors to picketing out? side an executive's home.

Push to strike sometimes comes to shove

The last major strike by workers in the private sector here involved the United Food and Commercial Workers Union against Kroger.

Some 7,000 clerks, cashiers and stockpeople struck the food retailer for 10 weeks this spring and summer before reaching a collective bargaining agree-

"It had been an awfully long time since our members had received an president of Local 876. "The members felt over the last 12 years that they had bent over backwards taking concessions on work rules . . . to help companies become profitable. "This time around, I think members felt that the company just wasn't paying attention," he said. "The (bargaining) committee felt that the company was pushing us against the wall.

."The demands Kroger was putting on we wanted, but we stopped a lot of hourly (pay) increase," said Ron Brown, the members were just so devastating . . . they couldn't handle it. It more or less became apparent to the committee that they were going for the jugular," Brown said.

> The union was more concerned about job security, work classifications and benefits than wages, Brown main-

"Naturally, we didn't get everything things the company would have put into effect," he said. "It was as effective as a strike can be,'

Brown said he was surprised that the strike lasted as long as it did.

"The way we shut them down and with support from the community, it should have been settled in the first week," he said. "They took a hard position. They must have had deep pock-

Dinosaur tactics? With employers becoming more aggressive about hiring replacement workers, strikes such as this one staged earlier this year against Kroger may become a tactic of the past.

Unions look beyond job walkouts

Caution is the byword when it comes to striking. So unions are using other tactics to help press their demands.

By Doug Funker

While statistics don't indicate a trend toward fewer strikes, the sentiment nowadays is to think long and hard before hitting the bricks.

The threatened and actual hiring of permanent replacement workers - allowed by federal law despite concerted sure - prompt labor leaders to look at ly." alternatives to walkouts.

Luther Jackson, treasurer of the Newsat the News, Free Press and Adams Publications.

"A strike first of all is a weapon of last resort," said Doug Fraser, former leaders sound cautious now. The strate-

UAW president and currently a labor studies professor at Wayne State University. "It shouldn't be used unless it can be used effectively."

"It's just that we have to do a careful evaluation and use them (strikes) only where they're effective," said Bob Knox, president of Teamsters Local 1038 and a Westland resident. "Now, in not efforts by unionists to repeal the mea- many places can they be used effective-

That union rep- cording to the bureau of employment resents some editors and reporters at relations, state department of labor. this newspaper and editorial employees. Thirteen were reported from October 1990 through September of 1991, and 13 from last October until now.

But whatever the numbers say, union

gy of choice seems to be stay on the job, continue to draw pay and use guerrilla tactics rather than direct confrontation through a strike to win contract demands,

Stay on the job

"Our concern relative to going on strike is, number one, we didn't want our members to be without paychecks,' said George Manoogian, president of Utility Workers Union of America Local 223 and a Birmingham resident.

"Things have changed," said Jim Hodge, director of labor relations at Michigan Bell and a Lathrup Village resident. "Unions are deeply concerned with replacement workers.'

Bell negotiated a contract this year with the Communications Workers of America without a strike. Work stoppages had occurred during the three previous negotiations.

"Our unions have recognized that we have been able to do a lot of things together," Hodge said. "That carried overinto our bargaining process.

"Unions have to come to realize that strikes can be detrimental," he added. "We're highly automated. We can generally carry on by bringing our manage. ment people to work."

So unions have developed other strat-

Those include work to rule which means following the contract to the letter. A variation of that is called malicious obedience. Do no more than what a supervisor directs.

Embarrassment tactics

Then there are corporate campaigns designed to embarrass top management into yielding. That could range from in formational campaigns for stockholdera and boards of directors to picketing outside an executive's home.

"We have a corporate campaign' A strike first of all going on now," said Manoogian, who represents power plant operators, cable splicers, substation operators and meter readers at Edison. We're exerting pressure on top management to let them know we're not happy. We're trying to force them back to the (bargaining) table." How? -

"Home picketing," Manoogian said. 'Let's face it, that's an embarrassing situation to be put into: Neighbors get upset."

The union also has petitioned to intervene as an interested party in rate hearings before the state Public Service Commission.

Edison recently imposed changes in benefits and working conditions this summer after declaring an impasse in bargaining.

Knox and the Teamsters have waged a similar battle since a half dozen beer distributors imposed wages and conditions in the spring

"Every time we find any function individual distributors are involved in, we get out there," he said, "In one case it was the wedding of an owner's son. We held a mock wedding outside the church.

"We went to a class reunion for one of the employers . . . (and) is a weapon of last resort. It shouldn't be used unless it can be used effectively.'

> Doug Fraser former UAW president and current WSU labor studies professor demonstrated in neighborhoods," Knox said.

The union also has gone out of its way to monitor expiration dates of beer shelf life, he added.

Effective or not?

Some academics like Lizabeth Barkley, chairwoman of the department of management and market. ing at Oakland University, wonder what personalizing the negotiations adds to the overall process.

"That doesn't lead to that better relationship," she said.

The unions ask - what other choices do we have?

Then there are boycotts.

Newspaper Guild employees in the Adams unit (Macomb Daily and Daily Tribune) have coordinated an advertising and circulation boycott while staying on the job.

"Our people are still working, collecting a salary, but they can take action that's very effective in getting a company's attention," Jackson said. "I think companies get nervous when they see you the employees, you the union, teaching out to people."

Guerrilla tactics generally take longer to prompt action than strikes, labor leaders concede. But they press on while working the political process to make the hiring of permanent replacements illegal during a strike.

That practice has been available since 1935, but rarely used until President Reagan fired striking air traffic controllers.

"Prior to 1980-81, when Reagan fired PATCO workers, you never heard of it or it wasn't publicized," Manoogian said. "Companies were hesitant to use it. When the president invoked it, he gave companies the go-ahead.

"We've got to have that striker replacement law revoked," he said.

"If I were in a union with the new climate and atmosphere, I'd be worried about calling a strike," Barclay said, "If you're willing to go on strike, there's certain risks associated with doing it. In the current climate, there is no guarantce or implied guarantee of coming back."

Sort of, but it also was the result of a pattern of real estate taxes, subsidies, and policies that encouraged it, giving the inside players each a share of the pie.

Chrysler's decision to move its headquarters from Highland Parkto Auburn Hills was driven partly by its huge appetite for land, but also by the realization that the state was offering huge real estate tax subsidies to do so - not to mention current and federal money pouring in for everything from corporate depreciation allowances to an intelligent vehicle highway system in

Cool weather right for fall color show

Cool weather may have dampened plans of Michiganians who thrive on summer, but fall color buffs should enjoy a spectacular viewing season, according to AAA Michigan.

"People are already getting excited because of reports that Upper Peninsula trees were changing color in early August," said AAA Michigan member services director Peter Erickson.

Weather conditions determine fall color. Bright sunny days and cool nights produce a good show. Daylight length is also significant. Shorter days cause leaves to stop producing chlorophyll and lose their green color.

Michigan's rainy summer helped growing conditions, which means that tree leaves will be bigger and healthier when they turn to autumn shades.

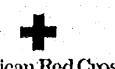

Late September marks the peak in the remaining northern third of the Lower Penisula, early-to-mid October in mid-Michigan and midto late October in southern lower Michigan.

Fall color is particularly impressive around lake areas because the nearby water keeps the soil constantly moist. The peak time for viewing is generally a week or so later near lakes than in forested areas.

Free copies of the routes are available to the public at all fullservice branches statewide.

Nankin Mills benefit to showcase artwork

or Westland artist Paul Maceri, Nankin Mills stirs warm memories of taking his four kids to the interpretive nature nook there during the '50s and '60s.

"Visiting with the animals - that was a treat," said Maceri, now a spirited 70.

For 30 years, Maceri drove by the Civil War-era gristmill on his way to Ford Motor Co.'s Automotive Assembly Division in Dearborn. He retired in 1980 as a welding engineer.

"Nankin Mills has always been a great scenic spot - a favorite of mine, "Maceri said. "As an artist, its beauty caught my eye. I just love that building."

By Nankin Lake at Ann Arbor Trail and Farmington Road, the mill today houses Wayne County's park offices.

Built in 1863 by Samuel Hardenbergh, Nankin Mills, once a stop on the Underground Railroad, is one of Westland's treasured reminders of early Nankin Township.

: A village factory

From 1920 to 1947, the mill was one of Henry Ford's country plants, part of a grand plan to improve working conditions along the Rouge, Huron, Raisin and other small rivers. Ol' Henry had visited Nankin Mills as a child and later became a passionate historian. To oversee restoration, he brought in . Edward Cutler, chief architect for Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

During the Ford era, the mill's turbine generator produced enough energy to not only make auto parts but also power nearby homes. Nankin Mills produced energy through water power and fossil fuel methods patterned after the prototype powerplant at Fairlane, Ford's Dearborn mansion.

Wayne County acquired the mill from Ford Motor Co. in 1948.

From 1957 to 1979, naturalist Mary Ellsworth delighted the young and young at heart with interpretive displays, Indian arrowheads, live creatures and cuddly care for animals sick or injured. Budget woes then shut the door. The mill fell into disrepair until the Friends formed in 1987.

In 1991, the county unveiled $1.5 million in restoration and expansion plans. Expansion will double the size of the three-story mill and make it accessible to the disabled by 1994. That'll allow for a return of the nature nook and the opening of a multimedia community room.

A $750,000 state DNR grant will complement state, county and private funding already received. Exterior improvements in Aude new paint, new windows, new roofing and restored lettering.

Say yes to Nankin Mills

Given his fondness for the mill, Maceri didn't hesitate to say yes when Denise Mehelich. Friends of Nankin Mills acting president, asked him to show his artwork at the fourth annual wine and cheese benefit reception 5.8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 8.

He will show 11 woodcarvings, seven oils and one watercolor - all realistic pieces.

Woodcarvings will include a warhorse, a grizzly, three Santas, Sancho from. "Man of La Mancha" and five ducks, including two pintale mates. Paintings will spotlight seascapes, landscapes and an eagle landing on a lake backdropped by mountains.

"People need to have some different things to look at when visiting the mill," Mehelich said, "and I find it a very nice place to showcase art."

Christmas and note cards, sporting Berkley artist Constance Powell's pen and ink drawing of the mill and printed by students at Ford Vocational Technical Center in Westland, will be sold at the benefit.

The Friends will wear styles from the late 1800s. thanks to vice president Kathy Myers, a seamstress. Her grandfather, Floyd Bassett, owned the mill when Ford bought it.

Reception tickets are $20 per person. Call Nankin Mills, 261-1990, or Westland City Hall, 467-3169.

The receptions, co-hosted by the Friends and Wayne County, have raised about $2,800. Proceeds go toward restoring the mill and original Ford cra machinery to 1930s vintage.

The fund-raiser marks Maceri's third one-person show and first since the Visual Arts Association of Livonia exhibited his work about five years ago.

Last year, Maceri donated his large 1975 oil on stretched canvas of Nankin Mills to Wayne County. The bright autumn scene hangs inside the mill. .

The painting shows the mill facing Hines Drive, the side he saw driving to and from work, instead of the more common Ann Aftor Trail view.

Mehelich, a Westland resident since 1960, is ecstatic about the prospect of again making Nankin Mills an ideal field trip for school and scout groups.

"It's a very dear site to all of us in the Friends." she said. "When it was going in disrepair and looking so miserable, it troubled us deeply. It long has been a real friend to us."

Fabulous '50s: A''50s diner is the focal point of the Anderson homelin Plymouth. Carole Anderson found vintage Coca-Cola advertising, 'a menu board, a nut machine and dozens of other authentic items to fill the room.

Vintage furniture works with modern

What's old is new again . . . Retro-furnishings, and their vintage appearance, not only blend well with today's look but also stir feelings of a kinder, gentler time. Here, three suburban families share their fondness for home furnishings with roots in the past.

By Janice Tigar-Kramer Special Writer or Craig and Renee Harries of Bloomfield Township, furnishing their 1949 ranch-style house with vintage furniture from 1930 to 1950 is a shared pastime.

Marion and Jerry Steka of Livonia have furnished their house from the same era and even built a game room with a restored jukebox, a '40s phone booth and '50s Pepsi clock:

A jukebox rocks the home of John and Carole Anderson of Plymouth, who've turned a basement room into a '50s diner.

Why the renewed interest in vintage, or retro, furnishings from the '30s to the '50s? Simple: furniture from a modern movement that began about 50 years ago stirs warm feelings of a kinder, gentler time, says Lawrence Storm, manager of Game Room Gallery, a showroom at the Troybased Michigan Design Center that sells restored Pepsi memorabilia from the '50s.

But don't underestimate the value of retro-furniture, "which can only go up in value," says storm.

Craig Harries, 30, likes the way the old pieces easily blend with new modern. Rence Harries, 30, loves living with a look she has admired for years in the movies.

Wood floors, off-white walls and an open floor plan are a perfect background for the couple's high end art deco and '50s pieces they've found at auctions and resale stores in Plym outh, Royal Oak and Detroit.

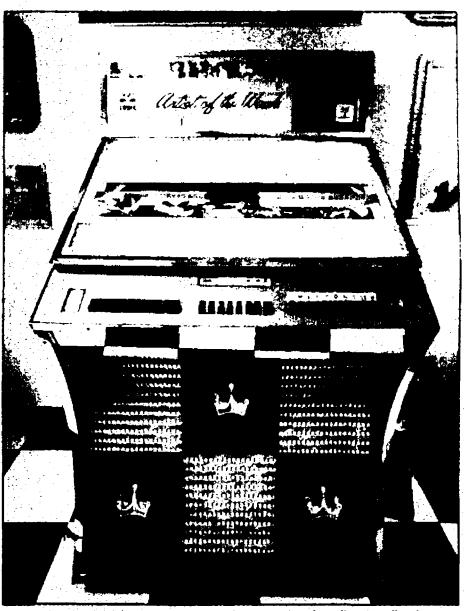

The living/dining room is sparsely furnished with a pair of '30s bar chairs that Craig found at the Plymouth Antique Mall for just $360. The '30s burled walnut gentleman's chest and heartwood walnut wardrobe found in California are now used for a china cabinet and bookcase. A contemporary sofa is the only piece bought new. Craig's designer/mother donated a '50s teak game table with matching vinyl-covered chairs that looks as good as today's contemporary.

A few years ago, the couple hought some quirky '50s pieces - colorful Fiberglass chairs, free-form blonde tables and lamps dwarfed by oversized shades. Rence has since passed on those finds to her sister, "who's more into that modern, Jetson's look."

"Finding good furniture from the 1950s is difficult," said Renec, Wayne State University corporate development manager. "It's a period a lot of

Looking for a new way to energize that tired old suit? Plymouth artist Sharon Bida has the solution: neckties for women handsculpted from lightweight clay.

The Livonia Arts Commission hosts a display of Bida's abstract clay neckties, necklaces and earrings as well as cast silver rings through Sept. 28 in two circular showcases on the second floor of the Livonia Civic Center Library,

"I had a plain gray corporate suit that I was tired of and wanted to dress up," Bida said in an interview at the library. "They can be worn as a pin or necklace and come with a brass necklace piece."

Sculptured clay neckties by Bida take on the form of nature looking like an abstract philodendron leaf. "It's all done by hand," Bida said. "I don't use molds. Everything, I do is free form, I like twisting the clay and manipulating it: I just love creating something."

humanities programs at the senior high level. These grants had totaled an average of $8,000 a

"We hope to reinstate the grants in January if we get fund-raisers going in the fall," said Kathy Savitskie, PCAC executive director.1

Laurel Park Place to host fine art fest

By Linda Ann Chomin=

Florals, landscapes and still life will take center stage as Laurel Park Place presents the second Livonia Artists Club fine art exhibit and sale Saturday Sunday, Sept.

The mall is at Six Mile and Newburgh, Livonia.

Fourteen of the club's 44 memhers will exhibit more than 75 watercolor, oil, acrylic, and mixed media works.

"We have some great art and artists in the show. The show helps to support the local talents," said Livonia artist Marge Masek, show co-chairwoman with Audrey Harkins. "We'll have a wide range of styles and subjects, including landscapes, florals, still life and drawings.'

As an added attraction, club members will create new works of art before shopper's eyes. Eileen Bibby of Livonia will demonstrate watercolor techniques 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26. Al Weber of Livonia will demonstrate watercolor techniques 2:30-5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 27.

"The show is fine arts only," said Farmington Hills artist Lorraine Whitacre, club president. "I hope they come and enjoy the show and be entertained by the artists - see what type of work area artists are

Laurel Park Place supports the arts by consistently spotlighting local fine arts organizations like the Livonia Symphony Orchestra, Livonia Civić Ballet and Livonia Artists

"It will be a little bit larger show than last year. It gives them an opportunity to showcase their work, said Michael Buescher, mall marketing director. "We want people to become aware of the talent here in the community."

Buescher first learned of the group last year...

"I visited the show in April after reading a story about the club in the Observer, I'was very impressed with the quality of work and asked if they'd like to exhibit at Laurel Park Place."

Prices for artwork exhibited at the fall show will range from $60 to

Organized in 1960, the Livonia Artists Club's mission is "to stimulate and encourage creative ability and individual talent in the area of visual art."

"The club enables us to learn about art in the community. We learn from the demonstrations that artists give in all kinds of media. A lot of the club members also belong to VAAL (Visual Arts Association of Livonia) and the Farmington Artists Club," Masek said.

"It's nice to get together with other artists and share ideas."

Masek will offer watercolors and monotypes; Whitacre, floral watercolors. Other exhibiting artists along with Weber, Whitacre, Bibby, and Masek will include Mary Mull, Audrey Harkins, Yvette Goldberg, Evelyn Henry, Howard Dombrowski, Pat Quiery, Shirley Ceaser, Edna Arp, Ruth Ann Platt and Sister Mary Hickey.

Livonia Artists Club meets at 7:30 p.m. the third Monday of the month September to May at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Sarah's Attic founder visiting

Artist Sarah Schultz, whose Michigan-made Sarah's Attic collectibles can be found in Livonia, will visit the 1/2 Off Card Shop in Madison Heights Thursday, Sept.

She'll appear 6.9 p.m. at the store, 32011 John R, south of 14 Mile, in Madison Place Shopping Center, Bring along favorite Sarah's Attic pieces to autograph at no charge.

Schultz - known for little red hearts delicately placed on feet, cheeks, belts, pants and shirts of children, adults and animals - will debut 58 new Sarah's Attic pieces for fall.

Every 10 minutes, she'll also help give away 18 figurines from the fall line, each valued up to $70 each. Limited-edition "Love One Another" figurines also will be given

The trademark red heart on every figurine symbolizes love, respect and dignity for children and adults of all races. Schultz's gang of figurines has grown to 1,000 since she founded the company in her Chesaning dining room in 1983.

Her Black Heritage Collection is nationally acclaimed for its tribute to African American history and Ernst and Young nominated Schultz as Michigan's 1992 Entrepreneur of the Year, co-sponsored by Inc. magazine. She's a finalist for national Entrepreneur of

Built-in shelves in a spare bedroom hold a prized collection of wood radios from 1935 through 1950. Renee learned to fix them as manager of her college radio station. She loves the workmanship and the gold faces on the old Emersons.

The kitchen is done mostly with 350s finds. A red and white porcelain table and red vinyl-covered chairs are from Senate Resale in Detroit. A tabletop jukebox and an old toaster, also bought secondhand, embellishes the playful look. Renee found the whimsical red and white ad for French chocolate at Gallery Four in West Bloomfield.

Craig, a UNISYS engineer, is on the lookout for almost any piece designed by a '50s architect like Eliel Saarinen or Charles Eames - at the right price, of course.

The '40s nut machine still works and Carole uses the old menu board to announce birthdays and graduations.

One of Carole's favorite finds is the 10-cent electric Coke machine she bought in Indiana for just $20. "It's worth at least $800," she said, triumphantly.

Carole also has a pristine collection of colorful Hall dishes. John, in finance at Ford, likes vintage Ford ads and other memorabilia from the automaker.

Functional: Sharon Bida creates clay neckties and necklaces along with cast silver rings in a studio inside her Plymouth Township home. The Egyptian-like necklace (left) features handcrafted clay beads and coins.

Setting down the torch, Bida began casting in aluminum, producing sculptures with steel and iron inclusions at the Wayne State foundry. Still unhappy for lack of what she considers controlling the medium, Bida realized that throughout the years, she had continued to sculpt from

The clay neckties evolved four years ago when Sharon Bida decided to sculpt clay jewelry into functional art. "I find it very relaxing to work with the clay," she said.

Bida works from a studio in the home she designed and built with her husband in Plymouth Township. The preplanned space is outfitted with two kilns for firing the clay pieces and a machine for casting the abstract silver rings.

Bida's husband, a GM engineer, assists her with the technical aspects of the neckties. "He uses calipers to find the center of the piece so it hangs right," she Egyptian-like necklaces created from clay with clay beads by Bida are also sculptural in nature. "I start out with a coin shape and then build the design. As far as the lewelry, I'm basically self-taught," Bida said.

Bida's history in the art field begins 25 years ago with pen and ink drawings she sketched with an Art Nouveau flair. Even then, she said, she had a strong sense of design.

Bida studied at Wayne State University, Center for Creative Studies and Eastern Michigan University. She has exhibited in Detroit at the Michigan Gallery, Detroit Artists Market and Galvez Gallery, Penniman Showcase of Arts and Crafts in Plymouth and Paint Creek Center for the Arts in Rochester.

Bida continues to tender drawings in pen and ink. Last January, they were spotlighted in a one person show presented by the Livonia Arts Commission and Dorothy Wilshaw at Livonia City Hall. Bida continues her art studies with life drawing classes at the Michigan Gallery.

Early in her career, Bida worked as an independent artist's agent representing over twodozen artists working in watercolor, oil, acrylic, pottery, jewelry and a variety of other media. At one time, she represented artists Sue Rothamel of Chelsea and Saundra Weed of Westland.

Show hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday, 1-5 p.m.

Study mortgage options as much as interest rates

tates lure you blindly into the housing market. Potential first-time home buyers are urged to evaluate mortgage options carefully by the Michigan Association of CPAs, based in Farmington Hills.

In shopping for a mortgage, CPAS recommend that you compare the amount being financed, the period of the loan, the interest rate. and the size of your monthly payments. As a general rule, it is best to limit your monthly costs of housinsurance, and real estate taxes, to about 30 percent of your monthly salary.

Don't let lower real estate interest points required by each mortgage lender. Points represent a fee charged by the lender at the time you secure your mortgage commitment, Each point is equivalent to 1 percent of the mortgage amount. Points are generally tax-deductible in the year paid, But if you refinance a mortgage, the points must be deducted equally over the life of the loan.

Here's a glossary of mortgage

• Fixed-rate mortgages. With a ing, including mortgage payments, fixed-rate mortgage, the interest rate and your monthly principal payments are constant for the life of the loan. Typically these loans are Also consider the number of for a period of 15 to 30 years and you always have the choice of refinancing the mortgage if interest rates drop significantly.

A .30-year mortgage will enable you to make the lowest monthly payments. But the longer the life of the loan, the more you will pay in interest charges, and the longer it will take you to build equity in your home.

Both 20- and 15-year mortgages are being promoted more widely these days. When compared to a 30year loan, these mortgages offer home buyers an opportunity to save thousands of dollars in interest.

Biweekly mortgage are similar to other standard fixed-rate mortgages; except that the lender requires a payment every two weeks. When you pay your mortgage biweekly, you make the equivalent of extra month's payments each year, thereby reducing the life of your mortgage.

 Adjustable rate mortgages. If you are buying a home with the thought of moving within five years, you may want to consider an ARM because they offer interest rates and monthly payments that are initially. lower than fixed-rate mortgages. But these rates and payments fluctuate according to charges in a predetermined index, commonly the interest rate of U.S. Treasury securities.

Each lender carries different provisions for adjustable-rate mortgages, such as caps on interest rates. Also, look for an ARM that allows you to pay a fee to convert it to a fixed rate loan.

• Other options: Balloon mortages offer interest rates lower than those for a standard fixed rate mortgate. They enable you to make monthly payments at a fixed rate of a specific period of time, usually three to seven years. At the end of that period, you must pay the balance of the mortgage, which will usually be substantial.

Graduated payment mortgates enable buyers to make lower monthly payments for the first fewyears of the loan and higher payments later, when the buyer, presumably has a larger income. Although payments gradually increase, the interest rate on the mortgage remains fixed. In the initial years, the largest proportion of each payment is applied toward the interest, rather than the principal, making this type of loan more expensive than other conventional loans.

A shared equity mortgage may also be appropriate for those on a tight budget. In this arrangement, you can essentially share ownership of a mortgage with another investor, including the owner of the property, a family member or the lender.

Whether or not the member is a director, he is potentially creating a hazard to his health and the health of others. Obviously, there are local and state laws regarding this conduct. If it cannot be resolved internally, the association should consider notifying the local authorities.

If, in fact, the member of the board is legitimately an alcoholic. he needs immediate attention for his illness. Perhaps the board can approach hint and ask him to gethelp as soon as possible.

It may be appropriate for him to resign from the board of directors under these circumstances as it may be imposing liability on him and potentially the other directors, if he is in a constant state of intoxication. It is, of course, a delicate subject and you may wish to consult with legal counsel for the association as to the best means of dealing with the particular director involved.

Luxury buyers seek more than status

Luxury home buyers take cocooning to a new level with top-of-the-line everything. Likely to be the last home they buy, luxury owners are more interested in the house fitting their lifestyle than in resale value.

Third of four parts

BY GERALD FRAWLEY

Luxury home buyers have moved beyond needs when it comes to a motive for buying a house; now we're in the realm of dreams.

James Bonadco, president of Bonadeo Builders in Plymouth, said luxury buyers want all the features of the move up buyer, plus all amenities they can afford, but that's really not what they're buying.

"What's motivating them is not needs, but wants," he said.

"They have always wanted their dream home, but for one reason other they could never have it."

Bonadco said he has had luxury buyers come into his office carrying tattered, yellowed house plans that they've had for 20 years and ask him if he can build their dream home.

Dan MacLeish, president of MacLeish Custom Building Inc. in Troy, said defining a luxury home is not quite as simple as defining a first-time, moveup, or even a step-up house.

Builders and researchers often say $400,000 and 4,000 square feet is a luxury home, but such statements are mis-

"The difference between the upper end of the move-up market and the luxury market can best be described as the difference between the two buyers MocLeish said.

'A move-up buyer walks into a house and the first thing he wants to know is how many square feet; the luxury buyer wants to know what he gets with the square feet," he said.

What the luxury buyer gets is as varied as the luxury buyer, he said, but there are some similarities among the home designs.

Almost without fail, luxury buyers demand first-floor master bedroom/ bath suites. Frequently that means the ability to close off a "wing" of the home. That "wing" will include the master, bedroom/bathroom suite, and often a sitting room or library. They also often have their own heating and cooling sys-

"The only time they have to come out is to cat.

Nothing is mandatory in a luxury home, but some of the more commonplace amenities include front and rear staircases, two-story living rooms and foyers, and extra storage, preferably in the vein of walk-in closets.

"Some of our walk-in closets are almost as big as bedrooms."

And even though most of these buyers have grown children, they demand extra bedrooms so they can bring their family back for overnight visits.

Howard Satovsky, vice president of the Howard Stanley Co. in West Bloomfield, said the luxury buyer is an even more sophisticated consumer than the move-up buyer.

"When they come in, they come in with lists," he said. After living in several homes, luxury home buyers know exactly what they

"This is generally the last home they plan to live in. Therefore, they are less concerned with resale value than the move-up buyer," he said.

"When they look for a builder, they want a combination of flexibility coupled with accountability," he

Luxury homes are far more complex to build and require more teamwork, he said. Buyers enlist the aid of architects, builders, interior designers and site planners, and all work together to achieve the end product.

But when it comes time to build, he said he's found the luxury buyer is more trusting of the builder and rarely, if ever, at the site.

"Most people say they would never build a house with out being there on the site every day," he said. "(The luxury buyer) did his homework on the builder and knows who the good builders are and who the bad builders are.'

"Luxury buyers are also willing to pay for quality and craftsmanship," he said. They want top-ofthe line appliances - from stove tops to furnaces - and know which ones are the best because they do the research.

Jeffrey Cohen, president of Cohen-Shawn and Rosenthall in Bingham Farms, said luxury home buyers run the gamut from the successful young professional to the retired business executive, but on average they are older professionals whose children have finished school or are about to.

Often times, they own their own business.

The reasons for buying diverge

"Obviously, there are people who do it just because it's the thing to

Like a fine car, a luxury home is a status symbol, he said, and there are always people who will buy a large home because they think it's expected of them once they reach a certain station in life.

But status isn't the main reason people buy luxury homes, he said.

"As time moves on, homes are evolving and following the one-stop shopping concept. People like to buy everything they want in one mall; people want to do everything they want to do in their home," he

People with the means to buy a luxury home can do this. If the owners are into exercise, they add a fitness room or a squash or half basketball court. If they like movies, they add a media room or minihome theater.

"Some of it is keeping up with the Jonses, but it's really, 'I've got the money to spend and the desire to do (things), but no time to go out." he said.

Sociologists call it "cocooning," non-academics call them stay-athome folks, he said. "They're even entertaining at home.'

In the past, these people would have entertained out-of-town clients in fancy restaurants or entertainment hot spots. Then they would put them up in a nice hotel.

Today, these luxury homeowners entertain guests in their home, cook elaborate dinners in gourmet kitchens complete with pizza oven, deep fryers, and put them up for the night in elegant guest rooms.

"Luxury homes are really a result of lifestyle choices," he said.

Bonadeo, of Bonadeo Builders in Plymouth, said luxury homes come in a variety of architectural styles. It's difficult to pigeonhole the luxury buyer because so much of the home is based on personal taste.

That being said, most luxury homes in southeastern Michigan would fit into the traditional category with only a few contemporary homes. In recent months, he added, there has been a big push for Early American and Georgian style architecture among luxury home buyers.

"You go into any architect's office and that's what you'll see - it's all they're working on."

If you plan a partial shutdown of your home, you'll be providing enough heat to keep the water lines from freezing, so you won't need to drain your fresh water piping. ## Housing permits surpass'91 pace

By Doug Funke.

Single family housing permits in the Detroit-Ann Arbor metro area increased nearly 27 percent during the first six months of this year compared to last.

Permits were issued for 6,810 units through June, according to based research publication of Loinas Mortgage USA, a national servicer of residential mortgages.

The survey area included Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw, Monroe, Livingston, Lapeer and St. Clair counties.

Single family residential permit activity nationally increased 24 percent, 141/2 percent in the Midwest.

"The only thing that strikes me about the local situation compared to the national is we're doing pretty darn good," said Brian Bragg, U.S. Housing Markets editor.

"Given the employment situation" here and white collar layoffs in the last year or two, I think the numbers (of permits issued) have held up pretty good. It's not great, but not a disaster by any means," Bragg Builders of single-family houses nationally are enjoying their busiest year since 1989, U.S. Housing Markets reported. But the recovery is one dimensional.

"The multi-family side of housing (apartments and attached condominiums) shows no inclination to bounce back," said Michael E. Patrick, president of Lomas Mortgage

"Last year was the worst in more than 30 years for apartment builders and this year looks even weak-

Declining interest rates and modest resale prices provided incentive for the move up market in Detroit-Ann Arbor, U.S. Housing Markets reported.

"Rents soft, landlords increasing services to keen existing tenants, offering rebates for stated occupancy periods. Concessions escalating. Older units suffering more as tenants demand modern amenities," the report concluded.

U.S. Housing Markets singled out Bernard Glieberman for boldly going ahead with a 400-unit singlefamily development in Ypsilanti Township near the soon-to-beclosed GM Willow Run plant.

Glieberman, president of Crosswinds Communities of West Bloomfield and president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, maintains that analysts are overreacting to one plant closing.

"What they're not looking at is between 1980 and 1990, 33,000 jobs were created in Washtenaw County," Glieberman said. "There is enough of a market, especially in'

Detroit-Ann Arbor ranked 10th among metro markets in terms of single-family building permits pulled through June, U.S. Housing Markets indicated.

But several Midwestern areas scored higher than Detroit-Ann Arbor in terms of a hotness index new housing units permitted per 1,000 population during the past four quarters - developed by U.S. Housing Markets.

Columbus, Ohio, with 3,713 single-family residential permits issued through the first six months, had an index of 7.1 per 1,000.

One should be Helen Vincent reminded how these exhibits reflect differences between the schools: CCS is an undergraduate school while Cranbrook is dedicated solely to graduate education in fine arts and de-

"Most graduate schools of art and design emphasis the conceptual. Most undergraduates schools emphasize practical skills and education in various media," said Dr. Josephine Kelsey, CEO and presi-

"Our graduates embody a working synthesis of the practical with the conceptual, making them ready to be productive professionals or to move on to top graduate programs,

In viewing CCS student work, it becomes evident the concepts drive: ing the industrial design department, headed by William House, complement the practical skills required of the students.

In his furniture studio class, students analyze key characteristics of various historical periods, then interpret them in scale and full-size furniture mockups. Commercial trends often are dovetailed into these designs, reflecting, in part, House's own professionalism. Many of these pieces are so up-to-date.

they warrant an annual showing at Zeising Associates in the Michigan Design Center, Troy.

Perhaps the most unusual piece, outstanding for its combination of daring style and subtle woodworking technique, is Robert Steele's "Tete-a-tete" dining table. The 42year-old Steele, former hairdresser turned designer, seeks to "infuse" his designs with the undulations of the human form." This quality is more apparent in some pieces than in others, but overall his work fits in with one of the aspects of the post-modern style, which plays with unexpected combinations of shapes and retro themes.

For individuality that owes more to sculpture than a furniture style. Fairuz Jane Arabo, one of the few young women in House's classes. has created a coffee table using a wood stacking technique. Proud of her Assyrian and Chaldean heritage, she has included an Arabic religious saying in the brass disc connecting the two sections of the table. Could it be that future home furnishings design will incorporate deeper symbolism?

Coming from the ceramics department, headed by Tom Phardel, are a number of experimental furniture designs using ceramic glazes with steel and other materials. Thirty-something Kaiser Suidan demonstrates some of the possibilities in an accent table suitable for indoor and outdoor use.

Meanwhile, John Gargano, who calls himself a ceramic object maker, creates large ceramic shapes that hang from the ceiling and jut from the wall. Not only do these pieces "personalize the home," as Phardel says, it's a sure bet they could redefine what we mean by "decorative accessories."

Undoubtedly, the most wildly inventive clock design you'll ever see is designed by Paul Clark. His source of inspiration is more Star Wars than home furnishings as we commonly know it. It certainly redefines our concept of "clock, giving us a far-reaching glimpse into the home furnishings future. Kelsey's statement about how the practical and conceptual define the key difference between undergraduate and graduate design schools especially applies to Cranbrook's recent change in design approach or philosophy.

Guided by Roy Slade, art acade. my president, the change takes the high road of design semantics. In an essay on Cranbrook design, Slade notes, "... It's no accident that a design movement at Cranbrook. should break away from Modernism as couched in the International Style or Bauhaus tenets." He goes on to explain: "Design semantics infuses meaning into the . . . plethora of objects and graphics that have become mundane and boring."

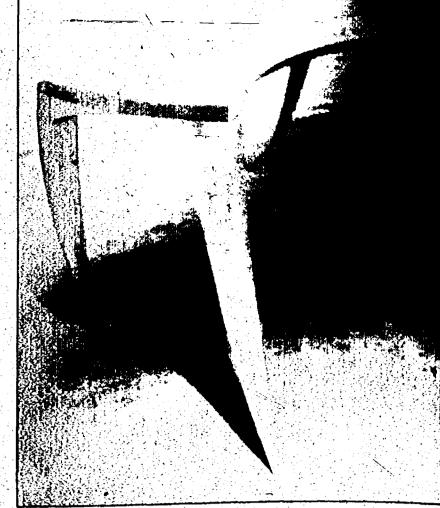

Design semantics itself emerged out of a school of linguistics and semantics (which analyzes words and symbols for their meaning). Once you get past the theoretical intricacies and the radical politics, design semantics forces students to look within themselves, to "deconstruct" all conventional, or bourgeois, meaning - which also means seeing everything through the prism of language. Only then are students free to create a new vision.

Nearly all of the 61 graduate student works selected by Roy Slade for exhibition reflect this new design philosophy. Of the 25 students from the design, ceramics and fiber departments, only four or five students showed pieces that resembled objects sufficiently identifiable as furnishings.

Even then, these few were offered as vehicles for a personal vision. The remainder contributed art pieces, or installations, also exploring personal metaphors and symbols as well as personal and social predica-

The weaving department head, Gerhardt Knodel, summarized the approach by saying, "Once the students have engaged in this critical dialogue, they're expected to return to the larger world as better artists and designers, all for being in touch with themselves . . . perhaps for having Cranbrook as an antidote to this lare

A table with attitude: Robert Steele, an industrial design program graduate at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit, designed this "Tete-a-tete" dining table; chairs aren't shown. The rock maple table is six feet long, 24 inches wide and 30 inches tall.

Shimmy and shake: That's what you do when you sit on the chairs drawn up to the table with a circular insert filled with sand. The steel, glass and leather installation is by Robert Rabinovitz, a graduate in the design department at Cranbrook Academy of Art. Bloomfield Hills. It's titled. t first glance; it appears like any luxe house of the '90s. Owners John and Gwen Williamson are taking. the move into their new home in stride because it's the most recent move of many, including a Far East stint John did for Ford Motor Co.'s International Division.

Everything is being readied to make way for the furniture and the Williamsons' collection of Oriental art and accessories gathered from their travels in the Far East.

Both the furniture, whose wood finishes have all been lightened, and the extensive collection have already been pared with the help of Linda Bruce, a Farmington Hills shop owner and interior designer who has had a longtime association with the Williamsons. Each design decision accommodates the enchanting view of the small lake and natural habitat the new house overlooks.

Once you move down the grand staircase to a spacious room below, also with the same view, you sense something else is different.

"We wanted to start off with a new approach to our personal environment we've never quite had before," says John, with a sweening gesture toward an audio and video system built into the wall. "Actually, the space was designed to fit the system.'

"It's more than just technologically advanced equipment. This Elan home electronic network makes it possible to express our appreciation of the significant intangibles in our lives: hi-tech sound. We were exposed to this while living in the small

Modern design appeals to ever-growing audience

BY HELEN DIANE VINCENT SPECIAL WRITER

odern design has come a long way since emerging from the European political hotbed of the 1880s. And no wonder. The original thrust of modernism was based on a belief in progressive change toward a Utoplan future relieved of most historic influences.

The movement, long dominated by an uncompromising elite of talented architects, textile and furniture designers, eventually gave way to the needs of an international marketplace with its competitive manufacturers, retailers and a new breed of interior and product designers.

Together they served, and continue to serve, a fast-growing segment with an assortment of styles created over the years: Classic Modern, Art Deco, Scandinavian, International, Classic Contemporary and Contemporary, a catch-all word for a range of cutting edge designs.

Foremost among local retailers with a niche exclusively in modern furnishings is Bernie Moray, president of Gorman's Gallery of Fine Furniture in Southfield. He has served as president and is now CEO of the National Home Furnishings Association.

Moray and his staff are sought by a number of furniture manufacturers before their lines are brought to market. This close relationship extends to top-gun designers who make guest appearances at Gorman's, providing a first-hand contact with customers and their interior design needs.

At different times throughout the year, you might run across John Masceroni of Swaim, Vladimir Kagan of Directional, Milo Baughman of Thayer Coggin, H. Fillmore Harty of Preview and J. Beam Wade of Brueton Industries.

Baughman's "Free Style" (see cover photograph) for Thayer Coggin picks up on the strongest trend in all home furnishings: softening of shapes and extended use of color. Although modern will always be synonymous with black, white, and neutrals, his featuring of a wider palette of color opens up interior design to greater individuality and an atmosphere of warmth and contentment.

. Baughman admits he likes "working both ends of the modern spectrum." He has done it by incorporating hints of the 1950s retro with the individualistic Art Furniture influence.

Pioneer modernists

While the softer looks gains momentum, J. Beam Wade of Brueton withstands the temptation by advancing the rigorous design principles of pioneer modernists. Except he has gone one step farther hy blending the requirements of furniture with sculpture, focusing on structure and the strength of materials. It's the variety of materials in many colors and finishes that allows for an almost custom look with Brueton furniture.

Also Stanley Jay Friedman's "Angular" bold new seating group for Brueton provides a completely original style for the modern individualist. The combination of sharp geometry and soft radiused shapes exudes a new attitude. It's a bet you'll be seeing a lot more of these proportions in future modern de-

The metropolitan area boasts two other retail operations that also concentrate on modern furniture:

MODERN DESIGN and how it has shaped home furnishing patterns within the Observer & Eccentric area dominates the thrust of this annual fall supplement.

The supplement, together with today's Creative Living section of the newspaper, spotlights folks on the cutting edge of invigorating design, including designers and retailers, and families whose homes showcase contemporary trends. Stories include:

- Puturistic furniture designs courtesy of the creativity of Center for Creative Studies students - Page 2.
- An overview of contemporary retail trendsetters Page 3. Sleek and shapely kitchen and bath designs - Page 4:
- Making even the garage look snazzy Page 6.

About the cover: The Free Style Collection is freely influenced by both ands of the design spectrum: retro and art furniture. Milo Baughman designed the collection for Thayer Coggin. Particulars: five-piece sectional covered in periwinkle blue Allure, 100-percent washable polyester auede cloth, upholstery comes in 40 colors, approximately $9,450. The upholstered chair and ottoman, approximately $2,200, is covered in a 100-percent cotton print. Also available to the trade at the Designer Group in the Michigan Design Center, Troy.

Sherwood Studios in West Bloomfield and Hillside Contemporary Furniture with two stores, one in Bloomfield Hills and the other in West Bloomfield.

Hillside has featured color in its advertising long before it was popular to do so. Sherwood Studios can be credited with sophisticated interior designs for clients also braving colors where one might expect the typical whites and neutrals.

Not until you step inside the Arkitektura/In-Situ showroom in Birmingham, and meet Andrew Fisher, president, will you get a more complete view of modern design - past, present, and future - and the mind-set required to carry it off.

Representing the modern pioneers, Arkitektura displays Frank Lloyd Wright's and Eliel Saarinen's pieces.

For the hottest, newest designs, Fisher makes available the Frank Geary Collection, made of slender bentwood laminate stripes. The KnollStudio bankrolled his project, which had as its source of inspiration an orange crate. Nonetheless, it won the 1992 Contemporary Furniture Award in New York City.

As far as a future modern classic is concerned, Fisher reserves this accolade for the French designer. Philip Stark, and his Royalton line, made for the renovation of the Royalton Hotel in New York. "Future generations will see his work the same way we now see Charles Eames or Harry Bertoia."

Dine on clear glass

Coming back to a more familiar scene and local talent, Larry Eppers, assistant store manager at Jacobson's in Birmingham, points out an elegant dining table made of optically clear glass. It's part of a line manufactured by Andrew Pearson Design, a Troy company, and is designed by Hal Brownfield, the company founder and president.

The table's many cut and polished facets creates an impression of large-scale jewelry and demonstrates yet another aspect of modern design - the inherent quality of materials is potentially a source

Eppers is quite intrigued with state of the art developments in glass, which has such an important part to play in modern design.

This time, he points to the German import, Plenum, a wall system that employs technically advanced glass techniques involving fusion and curves. These subtleties are part of an overall trend in wall systems originating in Europe. The very American company, Ello, is doing similar things with its new Concord line, also juxtaposing wood with glass using curved facades.

The ultimate tribute to the modern movement, generating as it does technical proficiency and style explorations, is its capacity to help the consumer express the way they want to live.

Scott-Shuptrine's president, Gary VanElslander, and his youthful management team, understand this very well. As the recently opened Troy store amply demonstrates, Scott-Shuptrine is assuming an ever larger share of the local furnishings market.

It's doing it by catering to the still more demanding consumer with a range of home furnishing products grouped into six lifestyle collections for ease of selection. Of these six, one is decidedly modern in many of its guises, from authentic reproduction Stickley Mission Oak furniture by L. & J.G. Stickley to Ello, Premium and Thayer Coggin, among others, that make a contemporary star ....

Functional sculpture: J. Beam Wade designed the Maidda console for Brueton Industries. Indirect lighting is housed in the top of the console, which is inset with sandblasted peach, gray, bronze or clear glass. The console measures 20 inches wide, 30 inches high and 60, 72 or 84 inches in length. Priced approximately $9,500, depending on grade of materials and finishes. At Gorman's Gallery of Fine Furniture, Southfield; Sherwood Studios, West Bloomfield; and to the trade at Billi Born Ltd., Michigan

Aside from the lifestyle groupings, Scott-Shuptrine is putting a greater emphasis on lamps and accessories, reflecting increased consumer interest in these items.

Modern ideas spread

Design Center, Troy.

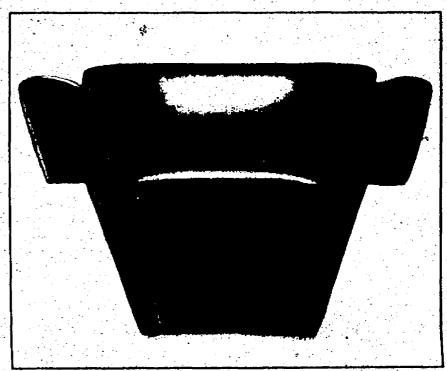

Though known primarily for traditional and transitional furniture, Classic Interiors in Livonia has gotten into the modern swing with Lane's Grove Park Collection, a scaled down Mission Oak style initiated by the arts and crafts movement, which inspired Stickley in the first place.

No story on modern home furnishings trends would be complete. without a nod to the large department and chain stores. Their role has always been providing an assortment of products and wielding a lot of purchasing power because of their size.

When you add to this the pizzaz of well-executed room displays, whatever style is featured is bound to make a positive impression on the consumer.

Recently, J.L. Hudson, under the direction of Donna Stevens, who heads up all of Hudson's 40 designers, decided to send a strong message about contemporary. The results were urbane - a mix of Baker's Phister classic modern furniture with post-modern Rynone pieces in lacquer and leather set on bordered rugs and accented with JAB, Stroheim & Romann metallictouched fabrics. Greens and corals were used throughout. Stevens admitd she'd "like to see more color used in contemporary settings."

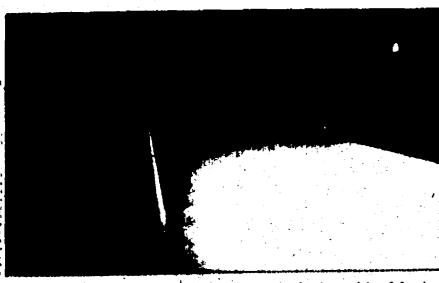

Taking all of these retailers together, then adding the number-one retailer in Michigan, Art Van, with its slick contemporary Natuzzi leathers, and J.C. Penney and Sears, whose trade-up assortments always include contemporary, you then know that modern furnishings, in one form or another, are here to

Both John and Gwen agreed it was difficult to pinpoint exactly which features, including other conveniences of this state-of-the-art system, they found most

Gwen, who made no claims for technological knowhow, marveled at the five shelves of equipment on either side of the 52-inch TV screen, all neatly protected by black glass doors.

These 10 boxes are the control center for mulitple functions such as modulating the high-definition sound from the nine speakers, giving us theater-quality sound from our television or laser disc/music/recorder," John said. "We're delighted it is also set up to include other functions, such as housewide audio, video, telephone paging and surveillance monitoring of any part of the house."

"Our television, by the way, is a rear-projection type from the Dutch company, Philips NV. It allows for a flat screen as well as delivering superior picture quality. Thomas Yesowich, president of Vitex, which installed this system, assures us that the HDTV (high defintion) coming into the market will be compatible with our TV."

Both John and Gwen agreed on the advantages of the CD disc, interactive capacity of their TV — "especially for our son, who enjoys tours through the Smithsonian in Washington as well as playing video games."

By using a photo CD, they liked putting all family and travel photographs on the discs so they could be played on television, even being able to use the zooming device for close-ups. "A clear advantage," Gwen said, "was getting rid of the clutter of old photo albums."

The Elan system, available in three levels of complexity, gets rid of a lot of wiring normally associated with such a variety of equipment and functions, by digital electronic coding at the point of origin, then decoding at the receiving end.

And no wonder. The newest offering of contemporary cabinets comes from Pininfarina of Italy, the same company that has designed Ferraris and Alfa Romeos.

The Pininfarina designed cabinets, made by Snaidero of Italy, are about as custom as cabinets come. Snaidero will make a cabinet, or a whole section of storage, to fit any niche in the house and even give you a choice of six colors.

The cabinets are made either of laminate or a wood veneer over sturdy beech and oak fiber board. Tall units with curved fronts are a Pininfarina trademark. These units are made of a patented structural foam and finished with a glossy lacquer.

The large, curved cabinets make excellent corner storage and give even small kitchens anappy architectural interest. Arched moldings and convex-shaped doors can be placed over the cooking surface or sink to balance the room and give some dimension and shape to the most ordinary kitchens.

"The look is very functional and architectural," says Sherry Huntzinger, kitchen and bath designer for EuroStyle, Ltd. of Bloomfield Hills, the Michigan dealer for Snaidero. "People don't want to re-do their kitchens every 10 years or so. These cabinets have a timeless

Though the lacquered finish looks as fragile as glass, the surfaces are tough and built for family use, promises Michael Martin, design consultant for EuroStyle, Ltd., formerly in the Michigan Design Center, Troy.

To accent the snazzy Pininfarina cabinets and similar ones by Sniadero, customers are using more than one type of countertop in the kitchen. Smooth tiles and Mexican or Pewabic tiles often are mixed with granite tops or hard surfaces like Corian.

Other new looks for the kitchen include open shelves, glass doors and all-white cabinets with a corner storage unit in a contrasting color like red, gray or turquoise.

rugs to the decorator trade. Here you will find "Art Deco," made up of a dynamic combination of motifs a client may arrange to his or her liking. It is, in effect, a concept offered by the futurist Alvin Toffler, in which the client and the designer are in partnership creating a design. Stark also offers rugs made in Israel, more in the post-modern vain, but also open to custom adaptation.

The most ancient of home furnishings products — glazed floor tiles, usually identified with Spain and Mediterranean countries gets a modern systems treatment by the German Korzilius company through its Contempi line. The combination of shapes allow you to create interesting patterns to suit your individual taste. Virginia Tile carries this and other lines that take modern concepts seriously.

For unsurpassed glitz and glamour, make sure you go to the Stroheim and Romann showroom to see the JAB Byzanz line. Donna Steven's and the J.L. Hudson designers selectively uso the JAB line in-store settings and for clients. The technically superb and complex pattern uses Byzantine motifs but casts them in a modern way, adding metallic yarn to enhance a powerfully opulent statement. When you leave Stroheim and proceed toward the Design Resources showroom, you should become aware of the wide range of effects modern design offers: from glitz to granite, and the granite in this case is at the Design Resource showroom. The rough hewn sides of the travertine marble table shown are contrasted by the smooth top. It's a table and a rugged landscape, all in one.

At another extreme in texture, gaining in popularity, are the proliferation of acrylic and glass tables. Of the many items available, The Design Group's dining table, designed by Frank Hill for Bagatelle Glass, stands out because of the unconventional handling of glass; the designer works with rough-chipped and polished surfaces contrasting with each other.

Reaching for still another realm of material and light is the Telos curtain system of sliding panels. again at Tennant Associates. Gloria Colton of Gorman's Gallery of Fine, Furniture uses a lot of this line with. great effectiveness in her interior design projects. Some of the options in this line offer leafy tree patterns that beautifully filter light.

Let kids co-design their rooms

Moving from Monopoly to a computer game to a dance workout with a friend might be one daughter's idea of fun. Your son, on the other hand, watches "Fresh Prince of Bel Air," assembles model cars and relaxes with his stereo headphones when his homework is done.

More and more often, these adanarios take place not in the kitchen or family room, but in the kids' rooms.

"The bedroom is a youngster's militi-activity room for the '90s." says Bloomfield Township interior designer Terry Ellis, owner of Room Service and an allied member the American Society of Interior De-

"And they should be co-designer," she said, "because this is their liging space. They can have very definite color preferences and prioritles to how space can be used."

With all the design buzzwords one might consider, space is critical, says Ed Wormsbacher, owner of Baby and Kids Bedrooms in Novi and Rochester Hills.

"Builders often don't consider lifestyles when planning bedrooms. For instance, even in smaller homes, walk in closets are frequently installed in children's or second bedrooms. Heat ducts, electrical wiring, windows and doors can all present obstacles."

Taking precise measurements of your son's or daughter's room will ayoid overbuying or improper buying, Ellis and Wormsbacher agree. If starting a new room or redesigning an older one daunts you, Ellis has some basic advice: "Think first what the room has to do, then

If whimsical furniture isn't the route you want to take, you can use imaginative murals or a motif like a wooden picket fence to house a stuffed animal collection for a small child to launch a theme room.

Royal Oak artist Julie Albanese painted a Wizard of Oz mural to go in a local child's bedroom. Another client's youngster received a custom wall scene of Babar, Celeste and their family.

Albanese also specializes in textural painting, restoration and trompe l'oeil - "fool the eye" designs that offer an alternative to wallpaper or murals.

Ellis reminds homeowners to keep in mind growing patterns: "If you use pieces with castors and handles, you can change an arrangement easily. Wallipaper bordera and paint colors are other quick-change options."

Kids of the '90s identify with action heroes and storybook characters like generations before them. But never before has the choice in bedding so widely complemented those trends.

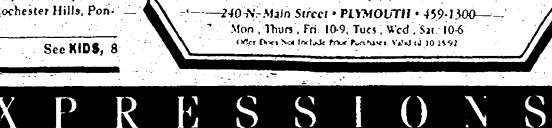

Juanita Wansac, domestics supervisor at Target in Livonia, says bedding items from recent movie hits like "101 Dalmations," "Little Mermaid," "Batman" and "Beauty and the Beast" are hugh sellers. Likewise, the pattern "Save a Place," depicting wildlife and aimed at introducing children to conservation.

Wansac says old standards like Mickey and Minnie still sell well and Sesame Street for toddlers continues to be popular. "Most of the theme bedding offers sheet sets and comforters. Some also have blankets and matching curtains."

Traci Fors, buyer for Baby and Kids Bedrooms, says bold geometric patterns and crisp stripes seem to attract older children.

Duvets, she says, are a modern alternative for bed covers. "The duvet is great because it eliminates the need for a blanket, top sheet and comforter," she said.

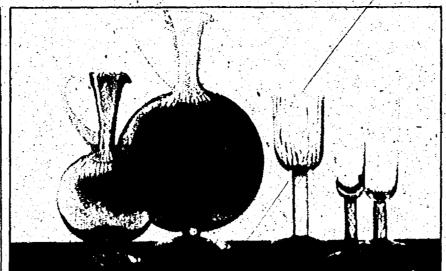

Bedding items with automotive motifs like "Going Places" and "Traffic Jam" are top sellers.

All of the above designs complement the "Space Saver" line of contemporary children's furniture pieces manufactured by Berg Imports. The beds are perfectly suited for sharing rooms, with a sibling or overnight guest. The top is a loft bed accessed by a ladder and the bottom bed is on wheels. On the reverse side of the Space Saver unit is a desk holding up a hutch until. There also is a piece with a fourshelf bookcase and six drawer chest.

Moment to remember: Laura Pietron of Canton reads a story to her daughters, Rachel and Arielle. Pietron decided to stay home full time after her children were born.

Moms cherish special moments

By Diane Hanson STAFF WRITER

> "Bonbon queens, unite!" shouted Laura Pietron with one fist raised and a big smile on her face. The full-time, athome mother of Rachel, 31/2, and Arielle, 2, smiled at the thought of having time to watch soap operas and eat bonbons.

The Canton mother admitted "I don't even know what they are!" Kathy Scott, also of Canton, laughed at that stereotypical vision. "That's all it is is a vision. She (the at-home mom) is also organizing, doing errands, and being involved in school activities. Her time is not her own.

"There is not one mother that I know. working or otherwise, that eats bonbons and watches soaps," said Scott, mother of Bryen, 13, and Julie, 9, "That's an unfair assessment. And I don't know where those moms were. I've never seen one in my entire life. I don't know whose interpretation that was. Maybe that was a male perspective."

Being a stay-at-home mother was a joint decision for both Laura and Greg Pietron as well as Kathy and Marty. Scott. Both husbands are employed with the Ford Motor Co. and support their wives' decisions to stay home.

For Kathy Scott, the decision was made two years after the birth of her first child. She'd been the administrative assistant to the district manager of H.J. Heinz Co.

"I enjoyed my job tremendously," she said. "I enjoyed the interaction with other people. I enjoyed the business world and the challenges it represents. It was fulfilling.'

Scott read a lot about motherhood before Bryen was born but discovered that reading about it and living it were two different things. Bryen was born and "turned my world upside down."

Tough to juggle:

Some mothers choose to stay home full time with their young children, while others remain in the paid workforce. Both agree they want what's best for their children, and have mixed feelings about their deci-

She returned to work, Scott's mother was caring for Bryen, but Kathy would still call home often. "It got to the point I was almost dreading my job. I felt like I wasn't 100 percent there, I wasn't 100 percent at home and I was really torn. Finally, what did it for me was Bryen's little face pressed on the windowpane of the door wall, crying 'Don't go, Mom, don't go,' every time I backed out of the driveway to leave.

"You can't do it all. I had to do one thing 100 percent. It took me a long time to learn that, but I finally got my priorities straight and realized the kids were the priority."

After leaving work to be at home full time, she audited classes with Marty and helped with his research papers. Scott discovered she "had a lot of guilt" before and after leaving her job.

It took her about a year and a half to get over the "vacationitis" feeling. As Bryen entered school and Julie was born, she found more and more things. Important job business, worked for the 19th District Court from 1982 until a few weeks before the birth of her first daughter in February 1989.

Even before her pregnancy, she knew she wanted to be at home full time with her children. Pietron has concerns about babysitters. "I can provide more for my kids than a sitter could. I wouldn't trust them after all the things that have been going on."

One reason Pietron wanted to be at home was "because my mom always worked. Sure, there was my grandmother, but it didn't fill the emptiness. My mom wasn't able to go to the school functions. I want to be the homeroom mother baking the cookies, going on field trips. Through the kids, I'm living the stuff I missed out on.'

Scott also wanted to be involved in church, school and community activities. "It always seems like there is the unending details to do. But isn't that life? And the more involved you are in life, the busier you are."

Busy as she is, she would occasionally feel like a non-viable person when talking with others.

"What they would say is 'What kind of work do you do?" When she explained, the reply would be "Oh, isn't that nice?"

"All of a sudden, I wasn't as interesting as I was two minutes ago. I was still aware. I still read. I could converse intelligently, but my opinion didn't count anymore. And it angers you because you realize there is still an intellect here and it's a viable one. But it doesn't -seem.to be tapped."

Scott feels at-home moms aren't recognized for the tremendous responsible ity that raising children entails.

"This is a human being you're raising. There is a lot more than meets the eye. It isn't just changing dispers. It isn't just making meals. This is a developing person you have here that you're responsible for. A lot of what they're going to carry with them depends on what you do when they're young."

Both Pietron and Scott occasionally consider going back to work, but admit that it's usually on days when the kids are fighting. While both are content with their decisions, they have definite opinions about their at-work counter-

Pietron believes that sometimes people confuse luxuries with necessities. She recently talked with a working mother who had three daughters in private schools. With the two oldest in . high school, the mother felt it necessary to buy a third car for them to get to school.

"To me, a necessity is where you don't have enough money to put food on the table or clothing on your kids," Pietron said. "To send kids to a private school, that's a luxury. To get another car is a luxury, Ballet classes and stuff. that's a luxury, that's not a necessity."

Scott believes that people have their own sense of priorities. "If they can work outside the home, and in a lot of cases it's a necessity, I couldn't fault anybody else for working, I'm sure they love their children just as much as I love mine. But for them, working works. If they feel their family can handle it, and they make that choice, I say 'More power to them.'"

Moms juggle demands of job, family

Dr. Pamela Geppert of Livonia doesn't really have a choice whether to stay home with 21/2-year-old Adam or not. Geppert is a single parent and part owner of The Family Practice Center in Livonia.

When Geppert was married in 1983, she and her husband didn't plan on having children. "I thought iny career would be too demanding. I wouldn't have the time to devote to a child the way I felt that they needed to be raised."

She later changed her mind. She had physician friends who "netually brought the baby to work and the baby would sleep in their office. I thought this would be the perfect set-up."

Two and a half weeks after Adam was born, Geppert returned to work with a nanny she had hired to care for the baby in the office. By the time Adam was four weeks old, the nanny was caring for him in Geppert's

"I don't think it affected the bonding with him. It really missed out. I would not recommend that treturning to work so soon)." -

Organization matters

Being well-organized is the key to keeping things running smoothly, she's found. Geppert does her housework and errands on Saturday when her former husband takes Adam for the day. She spends Sundays with Adam at the park or doing something special.

"You really don't feel like you have much time for yourself," sho said.

Carolyn Dzielo, full-time kindergarten teacher in the Willow Run school district, feels the same way. "I often feel I'm leaving for work and things are left undone," said the Plymouth Township mother of Benjamin, 6, Robin, 11, and Carrie, 12. For the first time, this year she has hired a cleaning person.

Dzinlo, who has been with Willow Run since 1977, went back to work full time six weeks after Carrie was born. Her husband, Robert, a lawyer in Rochester-

There were several factors that drew Dzialo back into the workforce. "I have always appreciated the independence my own income has given me." She was devoted to teaching and wanted to contribute to the family's financial base.

In 1982, with two little ones at home. Działo took a year off and then went back to teaching part time. When Benjamin was born, she waited six months before returning to work. She started teaching full time again last year.

Roseann Moran, a speech/language pathologist for the Early Childhood Development Center in Ypsilanti, "never really thought of being a stay-at-home mom. I always thought I would work. I really didn't think I was cut out to be a full-time mom."

Her husband, Doug, works as a librarian for an Yusilanti middle school. The Canton mother of Patrick,

Kids and work can make life tough

Those words can be seen emblazoned on stationery, calendars and giant buttons. But the fact remains that there is a keen distinction in our society between moms who stay at home full time and those who are. employed in pursuits that take them away from home and family.

In 1960, only 19 percent of women with children under age 6 were in the labor force. The 1970s was a decade of female liberation and solidarity. Women celebrated their freedom and independence by moving into the workforce in record numbers, and they postponed having children. By the late 1970s,

Memorial service and picnic provide families new start

BY JULIE BROWN STAFF WRITER

Picnics aren't usually the most solemn of occasions, and one held Sunday, Sept. 20, at Plymouth Township Park was no exception.

The late afternoon picnic followed the annual Arbor Hospice/ Personalized Nursing Service memorial service. This is the seventh year for the get-together, and about 150 people participated.

Cathy Clough, director of bereavement services, and Marcia Kenely, begeavement coordinator. were among those who worked on the service.

"Cathy and I have both been through this and found there was a great need to get people together," said Kenely, a Plymouth Township resident who coordinated this year's service. Both women were widowed and have remarried.

· Family members of hospice patients participated, as did members. of Arbor Hospice groups and others from the community, said Clough, a Plymouth resident.

"Oh, I just think it's a great time for people to gather together," she said. "It's kind of a new beginning." For some people, it's a time of letting go and moving on."

There were some tears at the service. "It's healing tears," Clough said.

The memorial service included music and poetry. The names of loved ones were read aloud.

The Rev. Thom Burbridge, a minister who works with Arbor Hospice, spoke during the memorial service, discussing how he coped with the deaths of family members. Many hospice volunteers helped with the service, which wasn't limited to adults.

"This is for the children too,"

Bobbie Willis of Plymouth Lindquist said.

Township was among the participants. "To celebrate," she said of her reason for attending. "I wouldn't miss it for the world. I think it's a milestone for all of us."

Her late husband, who had cancer and died in 1988, was cared for by Arbor Hospice, and she's grateful for the help her family received. The Willises were married for 43 years; she has two grown children, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

She didn't go through the hospice grief seminar, and wishes she had. "By my not going to the grief session, I lost a lot. I advocate that so much to everybody. It's a must, it's absolutely a must.

The support of others who've experienced such a loss is essential, she said. "They become a family, the little group.'

Willis will always remember and love her late husband. Throughout life, she's closed different chapters and moved on:

"It just allowed us to grow in strength and in courage and in faith." She's looking forward to a new chapter of life. "And I'm aiming to live it."

Arbor Hospice has always been committed to caring for people with life-threatening illnesses, said Mary Lindquist, a registered nurse and hospice executive director. Cathy Clough's first husband was among the first people Lindquist cared for, and she knew more needed to be done for families.

Arbor Hospice (677-0500) now offers a variety of support groups for the widowed, children dealing with grief and others. The annual memorial service is another way to find strength and support, she said.

"It's wonderful. It's wonderful to stay connected and support their through the whole grief process,"

Edward and Virginia Millson

For Edward and Virginia Millson, 50 years of marriage was observed in a special way - with a tea dance in the spirit of the 1940s at the Botsford Inn in Farmington Hills.

Friends and family gathered to share in the occasion. Even the little porcelain bride and groom from their original wedding cake made another appearance. On The Millsons exchanged wedding vows on Sept. 5, 1942, at her parents' home on Mendota Street in Detroit. She is the former Virginia Evelyn Arm-

The couple met in December 1937, when she accepted a ride home from an acquaintance after a hanging of the greens party. The acquaintance had to pick up her cousin Edward, better known as Bud, who worked as a soda jerk/cigar clerk at Ligget's Drugstore.

They became engaged on Christmas Day in 1941 and wed in September after Bud enlisted in the U.S. Coast Guard.

In the 50 years they have been married, the Millsons have moved six times, including one to rural Morley, Michigan to run a chicken farm. They eventually settled in Livonia where they lived for more than 20 years and raised their children - Carole Ann, Edward Robert and Suzanne Marie. They also have three grandchildren - Anna and Douglas Steding and Samuel Barton, all California.

For 26 years, he was president of Millson/Chard Accounting and Tax Service, while she was active in numerous volunteer endeavors, including tutoring in the Inkster schools for six years and selling Defense stamps.

The Millsons have lived in West Bloomfield for 15 years but still maintain their 30-year tie to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Livonia where they have served as deacon, elder and Sunday school

Denis and Mary MacDonald

A recent dinner in Windsor, Outario, hosted by their children and spouses, hoped Denis of Mary MacDonald of Livonia mark their 45th wedding anniversary.

The MacDonalds exchanged vows on June 21, 1917, at Whitefield Methodist Church in Detroit. She is the former Mary Fortester.

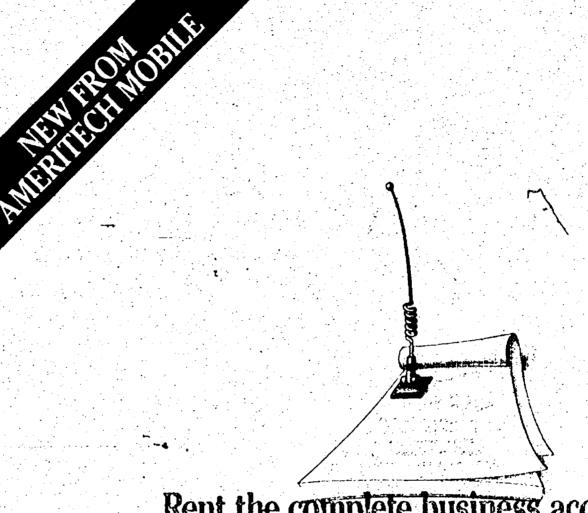

The MacDonalds have lived in Livonia for 25 years. Their family includes Denis M. who's stationed in Jacksonville, Fla., with the U.S. Navy, Alison McNutt and husband Bob of Carrboro, N.C., Sheila Ricketts and husband Rick of Puyallup, Wash, Laurie Campos and husband Randy of Novi, Bruce of Marfa, Texas, Mary Kovach and husband Jim of Troy and Carol Krist and husband Rob of Livonia. They also have 10 grandchildren.

He is a retirce of the Ford Motor Co., where he worked as a traffic analyat for 45 years. He is a member of the American Legion and the Mich-Igan Traffic Association.

The MacDonalds also are membera of Ward Presbyterian Church.

Remembering: The Rev. Thom Burbridge, a minister who works with Arbor Hospice, was among those who spoke during the memorial service at Plymouth Township Park.

He presents gospel messages with dash of science

BY JULIE BROWN STAFF WRITER

Dean Ortner knows the worlds of science and faith aren't mutually exclusive.

We're showing that you do not have to leave your brains on the laboratory shelf to be a Christian," said Ortner, 45, a former research scientist.

He'd served on the faculty of North Dakota State University, where he was involved in bionucleonics research. These days, Ortner, who's from the Los Angeles suburb of Whittier, travels around the United States and other countries to present Sermons From Science demonstrations.

That brought him to Plymouth recently for a series of demonstrations at the Salvation Army. His visit was sponsored by the Plymouth Community Church Coop-

The Sermons From Science series is an outreach of the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. He's been presenting the non-denominational demonstrations for nearly 20 years, and uses principles of science to present the gospel message.

"It's a matter of trying to challenge that person," Ortner said. In some cases, people have been turned off by the overzealous approach of Christians.

"So they're not even inclined to investigate it." Ortner tries to get people beyond that "to the person it's all about who would be the Lord, of course,'

During one Plymouth presentation, Ortner demonstrated the Barkhausen effect, realized when a magnetic field's energy can be stored in a piece of steel. A permanent magnet was used to store a pulse of energy in a steel rod; a coil of wire was then used to detect that energy.

Ortner went on to explain how tape recorders work by use of that same scientific principle. That evening's program, presented Saturday, Sept. 12, dealt with recording devices and how they work. He emphasized accountability to a creator who would have recording devices humans couldn't even dream of but that make them responsible for their actions.

Keeping the faith

"I'm not a theologian by any means." A scientist by training, Ortner doesn't have any trouble seeing the links between science and faith.

All the faith that scientists in various fields have - such as faith in instruments used to record data or in certain scientific principles - points to the existence of a creator, he said.

"We just accept them as they are and work with them. They really are not mutually exclusive concepts, the two fields."

He's presented programs all over the world, concentrating primarily in the United States and Canada. The logistical problems involved in transporting and using large amounts of equipment make overseas demonstrations more difficult.

"You make do," said Ortner, who's presented programs on military bases and other overseas locations. He's had a number of requests from scientists in northern India.

"We've had requests to come to northern Africa as well. And, of course, people want us to go to Russia." There's great interest in science in those countries, but practical considerations make such travel difficult.

Reaching the young

Sermons From Science demonstrations have been presented during a number of World's Fairs and at the 1972 and 1976 Summer Olympics. Ortner's travels take him to schools and other locations, and he's found children and teens enjoy the presentations.

"We've been received well by the younger folks because of the fun demonstrations we have." He often hears from teachers and parents who "are amazed that children will sit still enthralled with what's going on. They actually sit and will listen and learn something."

He and his wife, Terry, have three children ranging in age from 10 to 20. He's not sure if any will become scientists. "I'm not going to push them in any direction. We'll see what their gifts are."

Ortner's been to the Detroit area several times, and enjoyed his Plymouth trip. "Oh, it was delightful," he said of the visit, which occurred during the Plymouth Fall Festival.

"People were interested in what was happening. They were very friendly. It was good to see there was a real interest in what was happening. We made a lot of friends and enjoyed working with such fine people."

Several area churches - Lake Pointe Bible Chapel, First Baptist Church of Plymouth, the Salvation Army and Calvary Baptist Church of Canton - were involved in arranging Ortner's visit. Organizers were pleased

Ortner presents the gospel in an entertaining way, using modern science as a vehicle, White said. "There are a lot of folks who think science and religion are not

"There's a lot of people who for one reason or another will not come to church to hear the gospel presented," said the Rev. Paul White, senior pastor at First Baptist. "We wanted to provide a way that would reach

We saw moral choices for the welfare of the whole community get exercised as people found their jobs for cooking and cleaning and smooth operation.

Most importantly we saw them at er - with care, concern and appre- tion, law and politics today. ciation mixed in at times with judg ment, misunderstandings, and invisible barriers.

I observed that none of us comes at this subject in the same way. We have our own understandings based on our own readings, experiences and values. Each person carries their own unique wisdom that we can learn from when we carefully listen. We may not agree. But we

Jam's Davison-Hunter recently wrote his findings about the conflicts that arise from our pluralistic approaches. His book, "Culture Wars: The Stuggle to Define America" helps to make some sense of the work as people related to one anoth- battles over the family, art, educa-

> He points out that cultural conflicts are rooted in different systems of moral understanding. These run deep. They are the basic commitments and beliefs that provide our sources of identity, purpose and togetherness for the people who live by them.

> He causes us to consider, "What is our basic world view? What is the source of our moral authority? Is it the commitment to an external, definable and transcendent authority? Or, is it the tendency to resymbolize historic faiths according to the prevailing assumptions of contemporary life?"

So many complex questions. But during that weekend in the woods within this microcosm of community, I rediscovered an amazingly simple truth. I found that in spite of our personal differences, there is that universal force that keeps calling forth our healthiest choices for each unique individual - and which keeps actively connecting us together for mutual well-being -The Law of Love.

For 25 years, Truscott has been a world-class player

THE BRIDGE CROWD

BOYD

I have never had the pleasure of playing with Dotothy Hayden Truscott, but it is a whlm I dearly cling Dorothy's luster (26th ranked world grand master) is so universal that few would quibble that she has been the leading world class woman player for more than 25 years. Coupled with this eminence is her magnificent wit, arithmetical reckoning and playing probity. She is ever so popular because of her charm, magnificent partnership consideration and gifted poise. All these characteristics bloom in her many successful manuscripts on bidding/play and adventuresome table experiences.

Two of her many famous hands came from play with her favorite partner, the immortal B.J. Becker. Every bridge columnist has written about the one she and B.J. played in the 1963 International Team Trials, in which they reached six clubs thru a bidding mix-up with three small hearts in each hand.

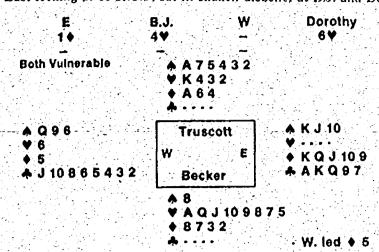

The defense failed to lead the sult and Becker found a prize-winning line of play to win 12 tricks. It was an epic adventure in bridge history. The other, today's hand, is one of those difficulties that becomes simple when you see it, but an agonizing quest for 12 tricks that pains you in your search for the proper play.

There are many others from her gallery of great exhibits, but this one particularly will test your best intellectual stress. Dorothy's prologue is wonderful, so let her pen set the stage.

'It seems a midwestern motorist was lost on one of the country roads of southern Minnesota, so he stopped and asked a farmer for direction. After some thought and scratching his head for a while, the farmer came up with this marvelous but puzzling reply, 'Well you can't get there from here,' And that is how today's hand gained its name,

East looking at 19 H.C.P, sat in shaken disbelief at B.J. and Dorothy's action when the bidding returned to him. His illustrious opponents must be crazy, he thought. Conceivably a seven save in the minors might be right, but in the presence of experts, his timid nature convinced him to lay in wait as such an imprudent call as theirs would naturally have to crash.

Dummy's diamond ace won the obvious singleton lead. B.J. immediately realized there was a communication problem. Setting up dummy's spade suit for diamond discards was his only hope, but how could he get there from here as often as he had to with the cards as they are? He could win the spade ace, ruff a spade and re-enter dummy with. the trump king to ruff a third spade, but then what? The dummy was empty of entries so he couldn't get to the good spades from his side, or could he? By now my readers can obviously see how B.J. did it.

At trick four after ruffing the spade to his hand, he let West win his trump five with her six! West Is now end played at this early stage. A spade play by West would be ruffed by declarer, setting the suit, and the trump king would still be the much-needed entry to run spades. If West instead led a club, dummy ruffs and declarer pitches a diamond. Now the third spade ruff and the trump king is the extra entry to dummy's set-up spade suit.

As the farmer said, 'You can't get there from here,' but B.J. did!

Woody Boyd teaches local bridge classes and is a life master. He lives in Bloomfield Township.
