City forecasts storm of appeals

Hundreds of Westland homeowners - angered by new property assessments that jumped nearly 13 percent - are expected to appeal the increases to the city's Board of Review.

cent this year, the actual property tax bills are to be increased 4.7 percent. But the city is expecting another increase — in the number of assessment appeals to the Board of Review.

Residential assessment notices are expected to be mailed in two weeks, and Westland assessor Karen Hardin expects as many as 2,000 homeowners to seek relief during appeals that will be heard in March.

Despite the assessment increases, residential tax bills are expected to increase only 4.7 percent because of Headlee Amendment-mandated rollbacks in tax rates, Hardin has predicted.

The widely expected storm of protest against assessment increases has prompted city officials to take steps that they hope will reduce taxpayer anger and frustration:

At a cost of $3,750, the city council has doubled its Board of Review by hiring a second three-member panel to hear appeals.

To avoid long taxpayer lines at the assessor's office, the city will sched ule appointments for appeals. Residents seeking relief should call 467-3161 after they receive their assess? ment notices.

Mail-in appeals also will be accepted by the Board of Review and should be sent to the Westland Assessor's Office at 36601 Ford Road in Westland.

Appeals that numbered 994 last year are expected to double this year. Westland's residential assessment

Man arrested in early morning Meijer holdup

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A gun-wielding man robbed the Westland Meijer store early Saturday, but a suspect was nabbed a halfhour later in Livonia when police spotted the alleged getaway car.

Armed with a .25-caliber semiautomatic handgun, the robber walked up to a 23-year-old female cashier, pointed the weapon at her, demanded money and fled with $374, Westland police said.

No shots were fired during the 4:52 a.m. incident that occurred at the Meijer store at Warren Road and Newburgh.

The robber fled in a silver four-door Pontiac 6000 that matched the description of a car that Livonia police stopped 30 minutes later on the Jeffries Freeway, leading to an arrest.

The defendant, Gary Michael Crill, 27, of Westland, has been arraigned on armed robbery and felony firearms charges, Westland Detective Sgt. Marc Stobbe said. Crill remained in the county jail this week on a $100,000 bond.

He has been scheduled for a preliminary examination next Thursday in Westland's 18th District Court. The hearing will determine if he should stand trial on the charges.

If convicted, Crill could face a maximum sentence of life in prison for armed robbery. He would face a mandatory two-year term if found guilty on the felony firearms charge.

Another Westland man riding in the car with the suspect is not expected to be charged. The 31-year-old passenger apparently didn't know that the robbery was planned, police said.

Following the holdup, Westland police alerted authorities in neighboring cities, prompting Livonia officers to stop a suspected getaway car on the Jeffries Freeway at Middlebelt, police reports said.

Livonia police saw money and a handgun in the car, but left the potential evidence undisturbed and turned the suspect and passenger over to Westland police.

In a subsequent investigation, Stobbe found $374 and a .25-caliber handgun hidden in the car, police reports said. That led to the suspect's arrest, police said.

14-year-old in stolen Trans Am eludes police

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A 14-year-old Inkster boy driving a stolen Pontiac Trans Am led Westland police on a five-mile high-speed chase before he abandoned the car in the city's south end and fled on foot, police said.

The teen, who had already been listed as a missing juvenile before the Sunday morning incident, was still being sought by Westland police on Tuesday, Detective Sgt. Marc Stobbe said.

Three other Inkster males accused in the car theft had been apprehended, released from police custody and turned over to the Detroit Recorder's 🗰 The incident began at 4:27 a.m. Sunday when a 32-year-old Westland woman reported that her 1987 Trans Am had just been stolen.

Court diversion program. Two of them are 17 years old; one is 18.

In essence, the three older teens will be placed on probation, but they could still be prosecuted if they violate any rules placed on them by the court.

The 14-year-old has been identified as the primary defendant in the incident because he is accused of driving the stolen car.

The incident began at 4:27 a.m. Sunday when a 32-year-old Westland woman reported that her 1987 Trans Am had just been stolen from her Yale. Street apartment complex parking lot.

According to police reports, the 14-year-old and the 18-year-old rode in the Trans Am and were being followed by the 17-year-olds in a 1977 Mercury Cougar that belonged to one defendant's mother.

Mayor, council feud over firing authority

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A new Westland city program aimed at helping troubled youth has become the latest political football kicked around by the Westland City Council and Mayor Robert Thomas.

Both sides support the new program that provides volunteer mentors to help youngsters age 7 to, 16 overcome behavior problems. Known as Youth Assistance, it also provides parenting classes and other services to strengthen ties between the youths and their families.

Despite its appeal, the program touched off a heated discussion Monday when Thomas and the council disagreed on whether the mayor's office should retain the sole authority over Youth Assistance administrator Ronaele Bowman.

Although Bowman has won support from both sides, Thomas and the council argued Monday over which branch of government should have the final say in firing Bowman - if such a decision ever looms.

Thomas contended his administration should have unilateral power to fire Bowman, and he sternly told the council, "I don't intend to relinquish it."

In a 5-1 vote, the council agreed that Bowman should report to the administration. But the council also decided that Bowman -

-should she ever be fired by Thomas — could appeal the mayor's decision directly to the council.

Councilman Kenneth Mehl cast the lone dissenting vote, saying he had serious reservations about some of the language in Bowman's contract.

Even though he voted against the plan, Mehl agreed with other council members that the council should be allowed to hear an appeal from Bowman - should one become necessary.

Mehl disagreed with Thomas that the council would be interfering in administrative decisions.

I'm not going to give it to you your way. That's all," Mehl told the mayor. At one point, Thomas indicated that the youth assistance post had become needlessly political.

"I didn't want to turn this into a (political) football, and that's exactly where it's going now," he said.

Politics aside, the council and administration have agreed that the Youth Assistance Program could provide a much-needed service. Council member Sandra Cicirelli, among the most vocal supporters, said Monday the program could keep troubled youngsters from ruining their lives.'

Training sessions for mentor volunteers in the Youth Assistance Program are scheduled for next week. Anyone interested may call 467-7904.

1 gas station hit twice in string of robberies

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A lone bandit who implied he had a gun robbed a Westland Mobil station early Saturday, mark-ing the third armed robbery at Westland gas stations since Jan. 11.

Two of the holdups, including the latest, occurred at the Mobil station at Merriman and Cherry Hill — the only two robberies that owner Jim Rice said have occurred in his 10 years there.

The other robbery occurred three miles away at another Mobil station at the Wayne-Palmer intersection.

Rice raised concerns that publicity about the holdups may have contributed to the latest incident, which occurred at 1:55 a.m. Saturday

"I've been here for 10 years, and I've never had a holdup," Rice said. "All of a sudden I have had two. It seems awfully odd that I would have two holdups so close together.'

Rice, in a telephone call Tuesday to the Observer, said he feared that publicity could encourage more holdups. "I don't want somebody to get shot," he said.

He added, however, that security measures have been implemented in an attempt to protect employees. The cashier is protected by bulletproof glass, he said.

In the latest incident, a white male suspect walked into the Merriman-Cherry Hill station, demanded money from a female cashier and threatened to use an apparent wooden-handle handgun protruding from his jacket pocket, Westland police reports said.

The bandit, who fled southbound on Merriman on foot, escaped with about $35, Rice said. The cashier told police the man threatened to kill her unless she followed his orders.

Westland police searched the surrounding neighborhood but found no suspects. Westland Detective Sgt. Donald Haigh said he's "not sure" whether the latest incident may be linked to two earlier Mobil robberies that police believe may have been committed by the same white male suspect.

The string of holdups began at 11:20 p.m. Jan. 11, when a bandit who implied he had a gun in his jacket pocket escaped from the Merriman-Cherry Hill station with a sum of cash that Rice estimated at little more than $100.

The second robbery stemmed from a 9:30 p.m. Jan. 20 incident in which a bandit also implied he had a gun in his coat pocket. The suspect escaped from the Wayne-Palmer station with about $500, police reports said.

The suspect in the first two robberies was described as a white male, about 6 feet tall, 200 pounds, 30 to 35 years old, with a mustache and blond hair that recedes in the front.

The suspect in the latest holdup was described as a white male, about 5-feet-9, with a medium build, a mustache and a partial beard. He wore a dark blue hooded sweat shirt and blue jeans, police reports said.

Although the robberies remain under investigation, Rice said it didn't appear that the two holdups at his station were committed by the same suspect, based on descriptions from the attendants.

increases of 12.95 percent come on ... the heels of a one-year statewide freeze.

Commercial assessments increased 10 percent and industrial assessmentsøby 4.8 percent, Hardin said.

Hardin, anticipating a public backlash over residential increases, sought and received approval Monday from the Westland City Council to establish a second Board of Review.

The measure required the council to declare an emergency and adopt a new ordinance doubling the Board of Review from three members to six. The council approved the change unanimously.

Hardin is warning taxpayers that they can seek an appeal only if they can document that their houses are overassessed or if they have a "very low income" and face severe economic hardships.

She also noted that the Board of Review can only change assessments — and not tax rates.

To help taxpayers plan their appeals, Hardin announced the schedule of board sessions.

The board will meet on March 2, 11, 16 and 18 from 1 to 4 p.m. and 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. It also will meet on March 3, 8, 10 and 17 from 9:30 a.m. until noon and from 1:30 p.m. until 4 p.m.

Jeff Elkins' friends have dismissed rumors that they are upset with the 21-year-old Westland man who disappeared for 30 days while they searched frantically for him.

"We are not discouraged because we spent so much time and resources only to find out that Jeff left on his own," friend Paul Husack said in a public statement Monday, "We should rejoice and be glad that he is alive,"

Elkins fled Michigan Dec. 23 in his 1984 Ford EXP hatchback and remained missing until he telephoned home on Jan. 22 to tell his family he had disappeared because he needed to sort out some personal problems.

He drove 2,000 miles and ended up at his step-grandparents home in Snohomish, Wash., near Seattle, where his father said he apparently ran out of money. He is expected to return to Michigan, possibly late this week, his father, Garry, said Tuesday.

Wayne Memorial teen captures state honors

By LEONARD POGER EDITOR

For the fifth time in 20 years, the Wayne-Westland scholarship program winner has captured state honors and the right to advance to the national program.

Terri Clark, Wayne Memorial High School senior, was crowned the Michigan Young Woman of the Year Saturday in the program held in Marshall, Mich. (The scholarship program was known for many years as the Junior Miss program before it was renamed several years ago.).

Terri, 17-year-old daughter of Garv and Marlene Clark of Inkster, admitted that she was surprised when her name was announced at Saturday's program and started to cry.

'All the girls were talented and beautiful," Clark said.

After hearing her name announced as the Michigan program winner, Clark recalled that "I couldn't hear anything,

Livonia schools face huge cuts under plan

BY MARIE CHESTNEY STAFF WRITER

The Livonia school district stands to lose $50 million over the next three years if Gov. John Engler's latest plan to cut property taxes is approved by the state Legislature.

That prediction was given by Superintendent Joseph Marinelli Monday to the Livonia Board of Education, which serves the northern section of Westland.

"I don't know how we'd survive such a drastic reduction," Mari-nelli said. "We'll fight this with every ounce of strength we have." Educators who last year helped defeat two tax-cut proposals on the November ballot are now mobilizing to derail Engler's 20-percent, phased-in, property tax cut plan before it picks up steam and is adopted by lawmakers. Engler's plan would cut local property taxes for school operations by 10 percent immediately and 20 percent over three years. His plan would freeze property tax assessments in 1994 and limit subsequent annual assessment increases to inflation.

Marinelli estimated Engler's plan would cost the district $6.9 current budget is about $100 million.

Out-of-formula districts such as Livonia would not be reim-bursed by the state for money lost.

"I don't quarrel with the idea of providing tax relief," Marinelli said. "But we need full state reimbursement. We can support nothing else. Each school district must be held harmless in the effort to provide property tax relief.

"We must not accept property tax relief without full state reimbursement, where every school district is made whole. We're not against property tax relief, but school districts must be reimbursed.

Marinelli was expected to testify against Engler's plan Wednes-day before the Senate Finance. Committee, where the plan now sits.

With a Senate controlled by Republicans and an evenly divided House, Marinelli sees the plan on a fast track to getting passed.

"The governor wants it passed before momentum against it starts. It's extremely important to stop this train from moving down the track.

Engler's plan, if passed, would leave districts with two options: reduce programs 10-20 percent, or ask voters to raise millage to make up for the millions lost.

(W)3A

A cut of this magnitude - $50 million — is an extremely serious situation," said trustee Pat Sari. Last year was the third year of budget cuts. We cut into children's programs, raised class set and started pay to play. If this cut passes, the only people hurting will be our children. If we don't educate them, the problems we see today will be 100 fold."

The proposal would over three years reduce state equalized valuation upon which property taxes are based from the current 50 percent to 40 percent of the market value of a home or business.

Marinelli said he had a "hard time understanding the governor's logic" in proposing a tax break but not compensating dis. tricts for money lostr

"This seems like a back door way of reducing funding even more for education. The state is now providing only 36 percent of the funding for education.

If Michigan doesn't provide a quality education for its students then economic development will stall in the state, he said.

School budgeting has become almost an impossible task, he added.

The board of education must adopt a new budget by June 30.

Tonguish tradition Indian chief's legend lives on in old document

BY KEVIN BROWN-STAFF WRITER

Lost for several years, a document detailing activities of Indian chief Tonquish and pioneer days in western Wayne County has been rediscovered.

"Uncle" Chuck Guideau, a longtime Boy Scout leader and Indian enthusiast, was recently going through boxes of material he's collected on Indians, when he found the four-page document.

"A lot of people ask about how they got the name 'Tonquish' (for the creek)," he said, adding the document offers an explanation.

Titled "The Story of Ton-guish," by Melvin Osband — he spells the chief's name with a "g" instead of a "q" — the docu-ment was part of the Michigan Pioneer Collections in 1885. But the writer said the account is based on his memories of times in Wayne County from 1815 to 1820.

After the peace of 1814, Osband begins, "The Pottawattomie Indians were disaffected and troublesome.

"Whether from any specific grievance or from their natural habits of lawlessness, they frequently committed little deprecations on the sparse settlers along the river Rouge.'

"They manifested no desire to engage in open hostilities, but were indifferent to the rights of the whites, where they conflicted with their own wants or caprices," Osband continued.

"Tonguish was their chief and also their leader in these acts of lawlessness. In his relations with the whites he was arrogant and imperious.'

From 'The Story of Tonguish' by Melvin Osband

the day when the women were home but the men were absent.

Sometimes, they were surprised when the man turned out to be home after all.

Osband recalled the time Tonquish and his band visited the house of Alanson Thomas, who lived in a log house on the north side of the Rouge River, "about two miles below there the village of Dearborn now stands.

"He was one day fixing up some shelves in his house for his wife's convenience when he heard the voice of a man behind him," Osband wrote. It was Chief Tonquish, ordering Thomas' wife to hand him something.

Next, the chief "met the brawny fist of Thomas, which landed him senseless the other side of the room.

"He then went to him (Tonguish), took him by the hair, raised his head up and kicked him under each ear, and then threw him out the back door down the hill," while Tonquish's band looked on

Three deaths

It was in 1819 when a chain of events began which led Tonquish to the Plymouth area, and to his death.

It started when Tonquish and his band stole bread from ahouse on the Rouge near Detroit when the family was absent.

The man of the house, just coming home, tried to wrestle some of the bread from an Indian when Tonquish's son shot and killed the man. The Indians fled west.

'The pursuing party first sighted the Indians near where the Indian trail crossed the town line between Nankin and Livonia, a little west of the mill pond of the present Nankin mills, Osband wrote.

The Indians then "turned to the left and crossed the stream since known as Tonguish creek, and passed out of sight over the opposite bank," Osband continued.

Soon, the Indians were captured but for Tonquish's son, who ran. Major Macomb who led the party faimed his gun at him to shoot him, but the chief stopped him and said he would call him back."

"Then in Indian language, he shouted to him to run. When he had reached such a distance as the chief thought him beyond the range of the gun, he turned to Macomb and said, 'Damn him! He no come back, shoot him."

The major shot, and Tonguish's son fell.

Tonquish drew his knife and lunged at Macomb, and James Bucklin used his empty gun as a club "to keep the chief off until-Macomb could load," the chief ran, and was shot and killed.

Tax-cut plan goes to Senate

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Gov. John Engler's 20-percent school property tax cut plan is on its way to the full state Senate after getting a key vote from Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham.

Suburban school districts that are out-of-formula bitterly op-posed Senate Bill 146, which the Senate Finance Committee recommended to the Senate Wednesday on a 3-2 party-line vote.

"I have commitments from the leadership," said. Bouchard, whose yes vote drew gasps from an audience packed with school officials and parents from out-offormula districts.

Bouchard said Engler's office and Sen. Dan DeGrow, chair of he Senate Appropriations subcommittee on school aid, promised to: Address the loss of school revenue due to the property tax cuts. Avoid cutting school aid in a forthcoming executive order. Engler had reportedly eyed cutting school aid 5 to 6 percent as a means of closing a $400 million state budget gap. Retain state funding of local schools' retirement systems for at least two fiscal years. DeGrow has wanted to cut retirement payments for out-of-formula districts to reduce the funding gap between rich and poor districts. Bouchard said the item is worth "hundreds of millions" to schools.

"So we've got some movement," Bouchard told the audience. In aninterview, he described himself as "mortar between two bricks" ---Republican leaders eager to move the bill and his school districts back home.

Voting yes were Republicans Bouchard, chair Joanne Emmons of Big Rapids and Doug Carl of Utica. Voting no were Democrats Debbie Stabenow of Lansing and Virgil Smith of Detroit.

Another party-line vote rejected Stabenow's amendment to require the state to reimburse lost school revenue.

If enacted, the bill will cut 1993 assessments for school taxes from 50 percent of market value to 45 percent; to 42.5 percent in 1994: and to 40 percent in 1995. Assessment increases thereafter would be held to the rate of consumer price inflation.

The Senate Fiscal Agency staff estimated local revenue losses at $460 million (or 8.2 percent) in '93, then $971 million (16.2 percent) and $1.3 billion (21 percent) in the next two years.

School superintendents said they would take brutal hits.

Livonia's Joseph Marinelli said it would chop $6.9 million the first year and $26 million the third year out of a current $100 million budget and called the plan "drastic . . . unconscion-able."

Garden City put its first-year loss at $1.6 million; Northville, $2.4 million; Plymouth-Canton, $7.2 million; Redford Union, $1.3 million; and Wayne-Westland, $5.6 million.

MADD director Michelle Kubicz, whose husband Steve was killed by a drunken driver at the age of 29. "You can show them there's a way to live through this."

Part of the process now includes symbolism in the form of quilts honoring the memory of life snuffed out prematurely.

George Landes, son of Lee and Sue Landes of Livonia, has one of 23 patches on the new Wayne County MADD quilt.

George Landes, a Ford engineer, was killed at the age of 26 in 1981. His quilt square was created by his friend, Paul Zimmerman of Southfield, who photographed special items in George's life and printed them on cloth.

"I think it's a very effective thing to do," said Lee Landes, founder of MADD in Michigan and Wayne County. "It gives (families of victims) a way of expressing their feelings in a tangible way.

George Landes' square contains a potpourri of artifacts that define his life, including his Stevenson High School and University of Michigan diplomas and his junior high school clarinet.

Also included is a University of Michigan sports logo that father Lee Landes acquired at the university's store.

He told the sales clerk what he wanted and why he wanted it. "She said, 'I've got just the thing for you,' with a tear in her eye, and she gave it to me."

The MADD quilt was created by Carole Salisbury-Ravicchio, who teaches quilting in Livonia and Redford Union schools' adult education programs. Her brotherin-law Leonard died of pneumonia in 1982, 10 years after becoming a brain-damaged quadraplegic at the hands of a drunken driver.

Salisbury-Ravicchio collected patches commemorating drunken-driving victims from families and friends, sewing them onto the quilt with intense emotion born of honoring the following area peo-ple: Craig Allard of Westland, Amy Alexander of Westland and Erica Henley, who attended St. Agatha High School in Redford. Allard's square was created by his mother, Darlene Hodges. Allard and classmate John Shea, seniors at Franklin High School, were struck and killed by a drunk driver in Florida.

Henley's quilt square was created by Nancy Long, a friend of MADD members. Henley was a sophomore at St. Agatha High School in Redford Township at the time of her death.

Alexander's quilt square was created by Linda and Sue Alexander, Amy's mother and aunt.

Support agency for disabled moves headquarters to Wayne

Wayne Community Living Services, Inc., will move this week from offices in Northville to the MetroPlace Center, in Wayne.

Wayne Community Living Services is a non-profit agency that serves more than 1,400 people'with developmental disabilities living in Wayne County. The Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board contracts with WCLS to find housing and support services for people with cerebral palsy, epilepsy, autism, mental retardation and other conditions.

Wayne officials are pleased with the WCLS decision to locate in MetroPlace since several businesses have moved out of the city in recent years.

Representatives of WCLS announced the move Wednesday at a news conference in Wayne.

Assessors get ready for protests, questions

BY BARBARA WILSON STAFF WRITER

Residential property assessment notices - expected by month's end - will anger most homeowners and the explanations. will leave many more confused.

Understanding the property tax system in Michigan requires more than a simple background in public finance.

The Headlee Amendment; the rate of inflation, projected figures by Wayne County, millages and assessments all add to the maze of information that is property taxes.

As legislators in Lansing continue to decipher the system and argue over solutions, local assessors, are bracing for the onslaught of questions once notices аге received.

"It's kind of two-sided." said Livonia assessor Judie Nagy. "Everyone wants the value of their property to increase, but at the same time that means their taxes are going to go up. We expect a lot of calls when the notices go out.'

Freeze lifted.

Property assessments throughout Michigan soared this year, partly as a result of the assessment freeze last year. Rather than considering only one year of market value increases, appraisers need to consider two years.

'The freeze helped residents last year, but it is really adding to the confusion this year," said Ron Showalter, Garden City clerk/ treasurer.

County officials maintain that residents are fortunate because the Headlee Amendment limits the increase in taxes.

"They get two years of assessment increases, but tax increases are held to a single year's rate of inflation," said Deputy Wayne County Executive Michael Duggan. "People are up in arms because of the assessment increases, but they are not being told that their taxes are not being increased that much.

The property assessment listed on notices reflects 50 percent of the market value of the property and is the figure on which taxes are based. For example, a home with a market value of $100,000 is assessed at $50,000, and property taxes are based on $50,000.

Market study

Assessments are determined by appraisers who study sales figures in their community over a 24month period - the last three quarters of 1990, all of 1991 and the first quarter of 1992.

Assessments are usually broken down by subdivision or neighborhood. Next-door neighbors will probably experience the same increase in assessment.

"We are fortunate that we can break areas down fairly small," said Nagy. "I'don't have to do a blanket increase. Our assessment increases vary from 0 to 15 percent in the city.'

The average assessment increase in Livonia is 12 percent. While assessments reflect the value of property, they do not directly relate to tax increases in -the community.

Tax increases follow

Residents of Garden City, for example, are expected to experience the greatest assessment increases in western Wayne County with an average of 15.5 percent, according to county figures. The tax increase for 1993, however, is expected to be only 5.4 percent.

The 5.4-percent tax increase in Garden City is based on current projections by the Wayne County Equalization Department. It does not include any additional mil-lages approved by voters.

The issue of tax increases is complicated even further by the Headlee Amendment which was See ASSESSORS, 8A

Do your homework if you plan to appeal property assessment

Never before have area assessors and township officials anticipated such a deluge of questions and appeals regarding property tax assessments.

"Headlee envisioned that everybody's assessments would change at the same rate,' McEachran said. "It did not take into consideration various classes of property."

Commercial and industrial property has not increased in value because of overbuilding and the recession.

In the city of Northville, for example, residential property was assessed, on average 14.7 percent above 1991 figures. Industrial and commercial property assessments remained the same. Because of that disparity, the residential taxpayer in Northville can expect an 8.8-percent increase in property taxes for 1993, while commercial and industrial property owners can expect a 5.5-percent cut in their taxes.

Schools plan questioned by union

The Michigan Education Association's plan to consolidate 560 public school districts into 14 is taking its bumps from a rival union and an economic think tank.

"I question, for example, the practicality of administering the entire Upper Peninsula as a single school district," said Hugh Jarvis, president of the Michigan Federation of Teachers and School Related Personnel. "I think most parents would feel that such a leap distances them from decisions affecting their children.

'For more than a decade, MFT has supported consolidating smaller school districts to provide administrative services. However, to go from over 500 to 14 is a significant leap."

Larence Reed, president of the Mackinac Center for Public Policy, a Midland-based think tank, said, "Can anyone imaginea concerned parent from Ironwood who wants his or her voice to be heard about a school board matter driving all the way to Sault Ste, Marie for a meeting? The two Upper Peninsula cities are about 300 miles apart.

'We are not opposed to consolidation per se, because sometimes it makes sense, especially in a truly competitive market. But under current circumstances, a mandated shift of this magnitude simply serves those well-connected and well-heeled interests who wish to exert influence over schools on behalf of their own agendas," Reed said.

Both criticized MEA's propos al to allow the 14 surviving dis tricts to levy a supplemental in-come tax after capping property taxes at 30 mills.

MFT's Jarvis said the 25,000member union supports a statewide cap on school operating millage with money made up elsewhere. "I would point out as well, that if one offers local income taxes without equalization, the inequities of our current school finance system could be made worse." Jarvis said.

Engler's tax cut

To help offset the loss of funds, MOFDA is supporting an increase in the state sales tax of one percent, or one cent, raising it from four to five percent. Changing the sales tax would require voter approval.

'One of MOFDA's criteria for school finance reform is to name the source of funds,' Mateer said.

Added Julius Maddox, president of the Michigan Education Association, the union which bargains for virtually all area school districts:

The governor's continued focus on property tax relief without replacement dollars for Michigan's schools appears to be an even worse version of Proposal C an idea voters handily rejected in November.

'While the governor claims to have increased spending for education, he has actually shifted greater financial responsibility to local school districts, and the state's share has diminished."

No matter; the good news is February is the shortest month of the year, and we can thank politics in Roman times for that. The ancient Roman calendar originally began with the month of March and ended with February: It was an imperfect calendar and, over the course of many centuries, was no longer in synchronization with the seasons. Calendar reform was badly needed.

The calendar would have been much easier to deal with if the year was exactly 360 days long. There could be 12 months, each having 30 days. Unfortunately the earth takes 365.26 days to complete its orbit and those extra 5.26 days complicate matters.

It was Julius Caesar who brought the calendar back into step with the seasons. He decreed that the months would alternate in length, having either 31 or 30 days. March, the traditional first month of the year, was given 31 days. April followed with 30 days, May had 31 and so on. By the time February, the last month of the year, rolled around there needed to be only 29 days to add up to 365. February would have its full 30 days only once every four years to allow for leap year.

Being very pleased with the results. Julius Caesar modestly named one of the months "July to honor himself. His successor was his nephew Augustus, who felt that he was entitled to have a month named for him as well, hence August.

But because August followed a month of 31 days, it had only 30 days of its own. That was completely unacceptable! Augustus

That left February with only 28 days (29 on leap years). At least that gets us one day closer to spring! We, in the northern hemisphere, should be grateful this short month falls in winter and not in summer. The people south of the equator have reason to cry; they are not so fortunate!

Because February is so short, the moon will go through only three of its four phases. There was a first quarter moon shortly before the start of the month (on Jan. 30), and there will be another immediately after (on the first day of March), but there will be no first quarter phase in February! (Had this been a leap-year, the first quarter moon on March 1 would have ended up on Feb. 29.)

phases, the moon will make a full circuit of the sky this month.

On the evening of the 4th the moon, Mars and Castor form a large equilateral triangle. That brilliant "star" in the west southwest after sunset on the 5th will be Venus. Thirty-six degrees below Venus, a mere two. degrees above the horizon, is Mercury. Mercury will be very well, placed for observing later this month.

Full Moon will be at 6:55 p.m. on Feb. 6. Native American Indians gave various names to the February full moon, such as Snow Moon, Wolf Moon and Hunger Moon. For people living off the land, the name Hunger Moon is especially appropriate.

The bright star to the lower left of the Hunger Moon is Regulus (REG you lus), the "heart" of Leo the lion. If you could see the .

the sky, you would find the Hunger Moon uncomfortably close to the mouth of the lion.

Worry not, the moon escapes being devoured; on the following night it will be found six degrees below Regulus (hopefully).

t may be too cold to think of summer activities, but it's not too early to start sharpening boating skills. A class in boating skills and seamanship will be held for 12 weeks starting Monday, Feb. 15, said William Baumgartner of Garden City. The class is excellent for beginner boaters and "old salts" who want to brush up their skills.

Baumgartner said that youngsters between 12 and 15 can also enroll to get a boating safety certificate.

The classes will cover boating safety, navigation rules, boat handling, weather forecasting and pi-loting. They will be held at Monday nights in the VFW Post 147 Hall, 27555 Grantland, Livonia. The hall is north of Plymouth Road and west of Inkster Road.

Interested persons may contact Leonard Chapiewski of the Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 12-15 at 533-0579.

Workers needed

orkers are needed by the Senior Alliance organization to provide outdoor home chores for elderly persons. Local seniors need good workers to help with snow shoveling chores during the winter months.

The Senior Alliance Referral Program links seniors with workers can do outdoor chores, said Amy Parrent, Senior Alliance spokeswoman. Workers, who are asked to charge seniors no more than $6 per hour, must provide at least two work references. Workers who meet the Senior Alliance requirements, will be placed on its referral list. One a senior hires a worker, the senior then arranges a work schedule and pays the worker. Interested persons may call 722-2830.

Speeding drivers hurt 2 workers fixing water line

The city closed a half-mile stretch of Merriman after two public services department workers were injured in separate incidents involving speeding drivers. The closing was ordered to protect the workers repairing a water line break.

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Two Westland city workers repairing a massive water main leak on Merriman Road were injured Sunday night in separate incidents caused by speeding drivers, police said.

The incidents prompted public services director Carl Clark to close a half-mile stretch of Merriman, between Cherry Hill and Avondale, for 18 hours until DPS crews finished their work Monday evening.

"I'm obligated to the employees to make sure they don't have to worry about being run over while they're on the job," Clark said.

The first incident occurred shortly after 10 p.m. when a 1978 Ford Thunderbird, northbound on Merriman, ignored flashing warning signs and slammed into the side of a one-ton DPS truck, according to DPS and police officials.

The car then careened over a curb, hit a tree, flipped over twice and came to a stop in a row of residential shrubs, Clark said.

The driver and a passenger then fled on foot, police said. The driver of the DPS truck was only "shaken up," but a DPS passenger who complained of head and neck injuries was treated and released at St. Mary Hospital, Livonia, Clark said.

The worker returned to work Tuesday, he said.

The collision was followed two hours later by another incident inwhich a speeding motorist nearly. struck a DPS worker, said officer Steven Frazer of the Westland Police Department's traffic bureau.

The driver then swerved toward a flashing warning sign and knocked it over, causing it to burst into flames, Frazer said. The driver didn't stop.

The DPS worker, who had been setting up a barricade when he was nearly hit, jumped from the path of the oncoming car and injured his knee, which Clark said was swollen " to the size of a football.'

The worker was treated and released at a Westland medical clinic, Clark said.

Following the second incident, Clark decided to close the half-mile stretch of Merriman until DPS crews finished their work at 6 p.m. Monday.

On Tuesday, both incidents remained under investigation by Westland police, officer Frazer said.

He had made preliminary attempts to contact the motorists, based on information he received about license plates and vehicle descriptions.

No arrests had been made and no citations issued, he said

THERE IS NO CHARGE

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER Republicans in the state Legislature placed a bill curbing unemployment compensation costs on a fast track for passage this month.

"Railroad!" shouted Democratic Sen. George Z. Hart of Dearborn as Republicans on the Senate Labor Committee Tuesday gave 3 to 2 approval to an employer-backed bill.

"I don't think we're taking marching orders," replied chairman David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield. "I introduced this same bill eight years ago when I was a freshman.'

Supporting the bill were Republicans Honigman, Robert Geake of Northville and sponsor Joanne Emmons of Big Rapids. Opposed were Democrats Hart and John Cherry of Clio.

GOP Senate leaders want to pass the bill this week, Honigman said. That would allow prompt action by the divided House, whose committees in Feburary are chaired by Republicans.

Otherwise, said Honigman, the bill might be delayed until April, the next month the GOP is in charge of House committees.

Firms go South

Construction workers from the AFL-CIO's Building Trades Council packed the Farnum Building auditorium to fight the measure, Senate Bill 2.

John M. Packer, Novi consultant who challenges unemployment benefit claims for businesses, endorsed the bill, saying Michigan's high costs are driving companies south.

Toledo is a great place. South Bend is a great place," Packer said, citing clients who had moved out. "Sea Ray Boats went from Oakland County to Tennessee. "Every section of the (unemployment) act is unfavorable to employers except one," Packer said, declining to name the section.

off workers would have to wait one week before being eligible for benefits, as in 39 other states. Michigan removed the waiting week in the mid-1970s.

■ Wage ratio cut. The wage replacement ratio would be cut to 65 percent instead of 70 percent of after-tax earnings.

■ Benefit "indexing" out. The Legislature would have to vote changes in benefits rather than sindexing them to economic statis-

Qualifying amount up. Claimants would have to have earned 30 times the state minimum wage (versus the current 20 times) to be eligible for benefits.

sumers pump their jobless benefits back into the economy. Cutting benefits and employers' taxes, he said, would drain more out of the economy than it would put back in.

"You espoused a very novel theory that taxation creates jobs,' Sen. Honigman replied.

Honigman viewed unemployment compensation charges as a tax on payrolls that impedes job creation.

"A lot of Republicans, would want to repeal unemployment compensation," said McHugh. Honigman denied it.

Jobs lost

Questioned by sponsor Emmons, most labor spokesmen said their unions' memberships had declined in the last decade.

John LaVallee, representing Iron Workers Local 783 in Marquette, said his membership is down from 400 five years ago to 320 currently, and unemployment is currently about 80 percent in the Upper Peninsula.

Tim Nichols, of the AFL-CIO Building Trades Council, said membership is down 15,000 from five years ago to 100,000 current-currently. "That's what I'm getting at," said Emmons. High benefits are "nice if you have a job. Is it not helpful to try to compete?"

'We've heard the words 'shared sacrifice'," said Tim Hughes of the state AFL-CIO. "I don't see it in here. You're punishing the victim.

Republicans, led by Gov. John Engler, contend Michigan must compete against other states for jobs in a global economy by holding down business costs.

Labor spokesman almost never use the word "compete." They say $2 an hour Mexican workers are draining jobs south of the border, getting no benefits and having their environment polluted by costconsciours corporations.

Pay freeze Mayor uses the right symbol ayor Robert Thomas, hoping to be reelected to a second four-year term in the fall, earned extra brownie points last week for continuing to reject a proposed pay raise.

In the financial realities of life, the mayor's decision last week doesn't amount to anything.

The proposed raise of about $2,000 this year and $3,000 next year (if he is re-elected) would have hardly caused any tax revolt in a budget of nearly $30 million. The money also is less than what some city employees receive in one year's overtime.

On a personal level, Mayor Thomas won't really hurt that much from skipping the raise. This year's raise of $2.000 would amount to an after-tax income of $1,200, or $23 a week. That's no big deal for someone making over $68,300 a year.

On a percentage level, the raises approved last week by the city's Local Officers' Compensation Commission were minimal. The commission set the raises for the mayor and city council members at 3 percent this year and 4 percent next year.

Since the same commission froze those officials' salaries in 1991, the percentages of increases total 7 percent over a four-year period, or 1.75 percent a year, about half the rate of inflation and far less than what city employees have been getting over the same period. Numbers aside, the important part of the mayor's refusal of the raises was smart politics. In a typical Westland political campaign, symbols are sometimes more important than the details of a specific issue. If Thomas accepted the pay raise, he would be immediately made the center of criticism for breaking his 1989 campaign promise to reject any pay hikes.

Mayor Thomas defused a potential political campaign issue by refusing to accept a recommended salary increase.

By refusing the extra money, he looks good to voters who are upset with members of Congress and state legislators who receive pay hikes which many feel are undeserved in light of the economic times.

At the same time, Thomas gives the impression that he is "holding the line" on city spending, although $2,000 to $3,000 a year isn't worth losing sleep.

The bottom line is that the mayor easily defused a potential campaign issue.

His opponents in the upcoming election will certainly have criticism for Thomas' policies or actions, but at least the silly pay raise issue won't be one of them.

Pay hike anger is justified axpayers are justifiably angered over the arrogance demonstrated by state legislators who gorged themselves on a big helping at the public trough recently when they maneuvered a five-percent pay increase.

Not unlike the bewilderment expressed by inside-the-beltway Washingtonians over the outcry against disgraced attorney general nominee Zoe Baird for flagrantly breaking the law, many in this state's ruling elite are just as surprised at the public distress over what insiders see as a meager increase.

This open display of gluttony is nothing short of shoving the public's nose in the residue of the feast.

Some legislators are particularly fond these days of telling the public how everyone is going to have to sacrifice in order to get the state financial house back in order.

"We're going to make everyone suffer," bragged State Rep. Lynn Bankes at a recent early morning breakfast. Although voting against the increase, Bankes, like many legislators, is anything but contrite or embarrassed over the raise.

In truth, many legislators who voted against the raise privately believe it is deserved. But the system is rigged so that only a minority have to inport it for the raise to take effect In short, those in secured districts can take the risk while others can parade about their district, shrugging their shoulders and proclaiming innocence. Added security is in taking the vote at the beginning of a legislative session in the hope angry voters will forget by the next election.

Many legislators who voted against the raise privately believe it is deserved.

Our state legislators, like many political leaders in this country today, don't understand the American public's perception of those who are supposed to lead in action as well as in word.

Certainly, nobody begrudges the next guy a five-percent raise - during the good times. But few Michigan taxpayers can even remember the days of a five-percent increase.

Thousands are unable to remember the last time they received a paycheck, let alone a raise. For more than a decade, Michigan taxpayers have suffered at the hands of a recession made only worse by inept leadership in both the private and public sectors.

While other states have suffered the ups and downs of the economic cycle, Michigan has sustained an above-average unemployment rate and a lethargic marketplace which sees little hope of improvement.

Many have become hardened to the high numbers which exemplify the exhausted Michigan marketplace.

I found Jeff Counts' point of view in the Jan. 28 issue very interesting, but believe I have identified a flaw in your major premise. As I understand your rationale, forest lands plus natural predators equal balance of nature. The concept has merit. Your application is suspect.

Let's accept your statement: "Dogs are nothing flore than a natural replacement for wolves, foxes and coyotes who once roamed the landscape feeding on birds and animals." When predators multiply to the degree a species outstrips its prey, starvation restores equilibrium. sounded like something his predecessor, James Blanchard, might have produced.

With Republicans and Democrats sharing power in the House and the GOP firmly in control of the Senate, Gov. Engler even has a chance of getting some of his ideas enacted.

That's both a promise and a threat, because in his speech Engler reiterated his intention to cut property taxes, unveiling a proposal to cut real estate assessments on which school taxes are based by 20 percent over three years.

Most experts think this plan, if adopted, would cost around $1 billion in state revenue. This comes on top of this year's budget deficit ($400 million-plus) and next year's estimated deficit ($1 billion).

Considering the reductions already made in state services over the past two years, it's reasonable to ask: Where will the added cuts come from? The most likely answer is from "out of formula" school districts, including many served by this newspaper, which receive no state aid to make up for local tax losses.

According to Rick Simonson, lobbyist for the Oakland County Intermediate School District, if assessments were cut from 50 percent to 45 percent of market value in the first year and " allowing for inflation, some representative revenue losses would be:

- Birmingham $5 million.
- Farmington $5.9 million.
- Rochester $4.9 million.
- Troy $5.7 million.

Walled Lake $4.7 million. ■ West Bloomfield $2.5 million.

For these districts, already suffering from the "Robin Hood Bill" which diverted revenue increases to poorer districts, such losses could be back-breaking.

Gov. Engler's economic strategy could turn out to be biting the hand that feeds him, as much of his political base rests in precisely the affluent suburbs he proposes to go after. "Talk PHILIP POWER about damaging your own constituency." said William Ballenger, a former GOP state senator and editor of Inside Michigan Politics. "I don't like it," said Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield. "It hurts our school districts and doesn't do much for property taxpayers either."

'That was Phase I,'' said Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, whose district includes Rochester. "Phase II is maybe one cent of the sales tax.'

Plainly, Gov. Engler has some elegant balancing to do between cutting property taxes, alienating his core constituencies and trying to blame somebody else for increasing the sales tax to balance the state's budget.

The facts of the matter, moreover, endorse this approach. No longer a wealthy state, Michigan cannot afford property taxes 30 percent higher than the national average. But in the aggregate, Michigan's total tax burden is about average, so a shift from property tax to sales tax might make economic sense.

Now let's see how the governor and new ungridlocked Legislature manage the politics.

POINTS OF VIEW

Double standard exists for some macho 'warriors'

he Feminist is really steamed this time. I can tell. Otherwise she wouldn't have been calling the White House the other night. Or Don Riegle. Or Carl Levin. Or Bill Ford. In Washington, no less. Couldn't settle for a local call. Oh, no.

Anyway, what's got her agitated is all the flap over Bill Clinton's attempt to keep his campaign promise to lift the ban over gays enlisting in the military. It's not Clinton she's upset with, mind you. It's the reaction from the macho/ bozo/bubba crowd that's got her going.

"I don't want to share a shower with some gay guy who's gonna tell me I've got a nice ass," Bubba Number 1 tells the talk radio host.

"And I don't want to sleep in the same barracks with these guys" Bozo Number 2 adds.

'I don't want some guy comin' on to me in the Enlisted Men's Club," says Macho Number 3.

Boy does that get The Feminist upset. "What about some straight guy coming on to a woman? What about some macho jerk telling her she has a nice ass and then wondering why she gets upset about it? What's the difference?"

The difference, of course, is that when Mr. Macho comes on to a 'broad" or a "chick" or some other descriptive term that can't be published in this newspaper, he figures that's "normal." She shouldn't make a big deal out of it. Guys are like that.

But if a gay male comes on to a straight "warrior," ooh, that's different. The "warrior" feels threatened. His masculinity is challenged. If a gay male hits on him, it might be because he's given out a signal — a signal that he could, God forbid, be gay himself.

The fact is these "warriors" are scared out of their pants — or they're afraid they will be. And they just can't take it. These are the same antediluvian machismos who didn't get it when Anita Hill was accusing Clarence Thomas of sexual harassment. Most of them, of course, didn't believe her anyway. But those who conceded that she might be telling the truth figured it was no big deal. Learn to live with it, baby. Get a life.

The fascinating thing about this whole brouhaha is that all of the outrage is coming from macho males. I haven't heard any women complaining or any men bringing up the point that lifting the ban on gays in the military applies to gay women as well as gay men.

The straight women don't seem to be incensed about sharing a barracks, or even a shower, with gay women. At least they're not screaming about it. And as far as harassment goes, it's the gay men who are getting the crap beat out of them by the straights. Any bozo who thinks a gay is going to come on to him in a shower occupied by 20 other machos had better think again. Or maybe just think. Who are the victims here anyway?

A couple of years ago when some military women attending the convention of the Tailhook Association were forced to run a "gauntlet" in which they were fondled and sometimes disrobed, there was no great public outcry. Women's groups were incensed and the Navy promised an investigation, but the bubbas were curiously silent.

And in Birmingham recently when the schools introduced a sex education curriculum that dealt, in small part, with homosexuality, a vocal group of protesters were outraged. They didn't want their kids being taught that stuff in school.

All of the uproar that's been sweeping the country for the past 10 days is proof to me why that kind of "stuff" should be taught. If there were a little less ignorance and a little more tolerance, this whole "issue" wouldn't even exist.

Need for worker training remains despite politics ill Clinton won the election. Dan Quayle won the tax war.

The issue was one of Phil Power's favorites: upgrading the skills of our existing workforce. Employers can pay high wages only if workers are skilled and have high productivity

Power, chairman of the board of this newspaper, served on a policy analysis group called the National Center on Education and the Economy. There he rubbed shoulders with two former secretaries of labor, Bill Brock (Reagan) and Ray Marshall (Carter), UAW chief Owen Bieber and other big names from industry, education and labor.

"We propose a system whereby all employers will invest at least 1 percent of their payroll for the education and training of their workers," they said. Those who didn't do training could pay the state 1 percent to do it for them.

In Germany, companies pay 3.5 percent of payroll; in Sweden, 2.5 percent; in Japan, 1 percent.

"I think I'm the only candidate who has endorsed it," said Gov. Clinton in March 1992, just a few days before the Michigan primary.

Many U.S. companies spend that now, Clinton told me, "but in Ameri-can it's all skewed. We spend 70 percent on the top 10 percent in each corporation. Our European and Japanese competitors, who have higher rates of growth than we do now, spend more up and down the line, and they try to put more decision making on the frontline workers.

"I would give incentives to business to spend it. And then if they don't, I would ask them to pay into this skills development program," said candidate

In June 1991, I posed the same question to Vice President Quayle after he toured a plant in Detroit.

"Bill Brock and I have talked long and hard about this idea of his, Quayle said. "Brock, as you know, is a former secretary of labor, trade (negotiator), former national party chairman, former senator from Tennessee real doer in the area of training and education.

'The problem is the funding of it the payroll tax hike. I can't quite buy onto the funding aspect.'

Not only did Bush and Quayle not buy into the funding mechanism, but Bush battered Clinton in the campaign for advocating $150 billion in tax increases

Clinton won the White House. But that was the last anyone heard of requiring corporations to upgrade worker skills.

I asked U.S. Rep. Sander Levin, D-Southfield, about it at last month's Oakland County convention. Levin said the training idea was still alive. but Clinton had dropped the tax idea.

That was Quayle's position! The guy liberals love to ridicule had called the shot correctly.

So the plan was the first casualty of Clinton's presidency. It died faster than the middle class tax cut. It's deader than Zoe Baird as attorney general. It expired faster than the need to rejuvenate a nicely recovering economy, and faster than Clinton's effort to make homosexuality militarily acceptable as well as politically correct.

But as Clinton and Quayle agreed, the need for a more skilled workforce continues. Even before I met Phil Power nearly three decades ago, I believed in employee training — a half-day, a day, two days, every year, relearning what you knew, correcting what you thought you knew, picking up a new idea here and there. It breaks up the workplace routine and lets workers know the boss cares about helping evervone's performance.

Power will keep battering away in his column at the subject of preparing kids for the workplace and upgrading the present workforce's skills. My job will be to track progress, if any, in Lansing.

Bush and Quayle may have gone way, but the worker training issue hasn't been solved, by Clinton or anyone else.

Teaching style replicates one of previous methods

QUESTION: My seventh grade son, a straight-A student, is in a class where all they use is Cooperative Learning. The teacher believes children learn best in groups, together, sharing. But my son is bored. He ends up as a teacher assistant every day, helping those who don't study. Is that what Cooperative Learning is all about?

ANSWER: The supposed original gurus of Cooperative Learning, David and Roger Johnson, have backed off because of parental concerns such as you have. They now say, "Don't always group the entire class together. Break out the brighter ones for more in-depth challenges.

So really they offer nothing more than any quality teacher has been doing for years, but have made mega bucks on it across the country.

The Johnsons came along with a supposedly new idea and too many curriculum people went hook, line and sinker. I used cooperative learning as one of my instructional delivery systems, not the only delivery system.

This supposedly new idea was used by teachers in the 1910 Little Red Brick House with K-12 students sitting in front of them. Older students helped the younger ones just as older brothers and sisters help their younger siblings.

If your son is being used as a teacher aide/ tutor and not being challenged, you should discuss this with the teacher who may not be aware of how bored the brighter students in the class are becoming.

Please don't back off out of fear you will get your child in trouble. Ninety-nine percent of teachers are open to parental concerns.

QUESTION: How extensive is HIV education in schools? At which grade levels do the programs focus most? Is it controversial all over the country?

ANSWER: Your question is a reflection of how little importance we place on health education, our most basic, essential need.

Health education is taught in about 70 percent of our elementary classrooms nationwide and drops to 10 percent in high school classrooms. Why? First off, elementary teachers after all their screening - always seem to find the time to work in topics that are for the benefit of children.

And although most citizens agree health education is crucial for high school students, very few schools offer it in their curriculum. Why?

High school teachers in all the other course areas, math, science, foreign language, etc., won't give up any of their course sequences to make room for health. They need the kids for their sections.

Most principals and central office personnel can't push it because of pressure for graduation requirement courses. So here we have health as a national priority and can't find room for it in the high school curriculum.

The irony of all this is that the closer an adolescent moves toward becoming sexually active, the less HIV education is available.

How-controversial is health education? It, of course, is controversial in direct proportion to whether condom use, self-esteem, value-oriented programs are taught, programs some people believe are best taught at home — a topic for another time.

Constitutional convention unlikely, lawmaker says

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

State Sen. Mat Dunaskiss doubts that a U.S. Constitutional Convention, if called, would run amok by rewriting America's 205year-old basic law

Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, is co-sponsor of a legislative request that Congress call a Con-Con to draft a federal balanced budget. amendment. 'But he told a news conference Tuesday no convention is likely.

-"I don't believe they (Congress) would ever call, a convention. They'd write the amendment themselves," he said. Reason: Delegates to a ConCon would be elected from con-gressional districts. In the process, they would set up campaign organizations to rival incumbent congressmen and challenge them.

"Can you see Bob Carr (8th District congressman from East Lansing) allowing that? Can you see Dale Kildee (9th District congressman from Flint) allowing such-a rival?" Dunaskiss asked rhetorically, referring to two Democratic congressmen representing parts of Oakland County.

Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn, joined Dunaskiss, Senate majority leader Dick Posthumus, R-Alto, and prime sponsor Gil Di-Nello, R-Macomb County, to give Senate Joint Resolution E a bipartisan flavor.

What lawmakers hope to do is make Michigan the 30th state (with 34 needed) to try a tactic that never has been used. Under Article V of the Constitution, twothirds of the states (34) may apply to Congress to call a convention.

Mat Dunaskiss State senator gress would feel the heat from the public about the $4 trillion federal debt and $350 billion current are unfounded," said DiNello, chair of the Senate State Affairs Committee handling the resolution, because:

SJR E would limit the convention to drafting an amendment saying "the total of all federal appropriations made by the Congress for any fiscal year may not exceed the total of all estimated federal revenues for that fiscal year." The lone exception allowing a deficit: "a national emergensenators spoke, the rightwing Conservative Caucus was gearing up to denounce SJR E.

"There is no certainty that the convention deliberations might not be expanded to encompass other topics," said chairman Howard Phillips, of Virginia, in remarks prepared for delivery on the State Capitol steps.

Phillips said it was "unlikely the forces limited government, Biblical values and limited intent" could withstand the onslaught from "the radical Left (which) has virtually unchallenged dominance over the nation's media."

Wayne suffers 'Long' evening

Marlos Long tallied 30 points to lead the Ypsilanti Braves to an upset 73-69 basketball victory over previously unbeaten Wayne Memorial.

BY NEAL ZIPSER STAFF WRITER

A team that needed to learn to win met a team that hadn't learned to lose Tuesday. The result? Undefeated - no more. Thanks to a long-range shooting exhibition by "little" Marlos Long, Ypsilanti took out its frustration in handing host Wayne Memorial its first loss of the boys basketball season, 73-69.

Long, a 5-foot-11 senior guard, made 12-of-15 shots from the floor, including four three-pointers, en route to scoring a game-high 30 points

The loss will more than likely drop the Zebras out of the state rankings. Meanwhile, for the Braves, the win was just what the doctor ordered after a five-game losing streak.

'We play a pretty tough schedule," said Ypsilanti coach Bob Rowley. '(The losing streak) started with a loss in three overtimes followed by another overtime loss. We lost our last game by a tip-in at the buzzer. In all the games but one, we had the lead late in the game and then lost it.

We didn't know how to win. Tonight, we ran the clock well late in the game and made the free throws when we had to. Five losses in a row is a long haul, but then you see five of our losses to teams in the top 20 in the state.'

INSIDE:

Wayne, which was ranked as high as No. 9 in Class A by one poll (Detroit Free Press), dropped its first game of the season minus guard Dontez Prewitt, who is out the remainder of the season (academically ineligible)

"We've been playing game-bybe undefeated forever," Wayne coach Chuck Henry said.

After falling behind 4-2, the Braves led for the entire game until the Zebras knotted the score at 58-all on a turn-around 35-foot heave by senior Ron McClelland. The shot hit nothing but net to end the third quarter.

Ypsilanti began the fourth period on an 11-2 run and then went into a stall, forcing the Zebras to begin fouling. The strategy proved effective as Wayne was able to narrow the marginto 71-69 with 50 seconds to go on a layup by Andre Graves.

The Braves' Devin James then missed the front-end of a one-andone opportunity, but Wayne could not control the rebound. Keith Grant then nailed his third and fourth free throws during the final minute of action to seal the victory.

"We got the miss we needed but couldn't secure the rebound," Henry said. "Then we fouled, and they made their next shots.'

Wayne fell to 12-1 overall, but remains atop the Wolverine A League with a 9-0 mark. Ypsilanti is a deceptive 5-7 overall and 0-3 in the tough South Central Conference.

Overlooked Wayne's Calhoun settles on Lakers

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Grand Valley football coach Brian Kelly received an unexpected phone call last week from Wayne Memorial coach Chuck Howton.

Howton was shopping around his tailback Bruce Calhoun and Kelly couldn't wait to see the prospect in person.

"Kelly said he'd love to have early and Bruce made the mistake of putting his visits off."

Calhoun said Kelly told him there's a good chance of playing next fall at Grand Valley.

'He said he didn't even think about talking to me, that I'd be going Division I, so it's a great plus for me to go there." Calhoun said. "He's given me the opportunity and I'm going to go fo

Bruce Calhoun.' Howton said.

So Calhoun, Wayne's second all-time leading rusher, made a recruiting visit late last week and decided to sign a national letter of intent to attend Grand Valley. Calhoun was one of several Observerland players who signed letters Wednesday, the first day of the signing period. See chart.

Kelly was surprised to hear from Howton because, like several Division II coaches in the state, he thought Calhoun would end up at a Division I program.

Calhoun made an official visit to Western Michigan in early January but never received a scholarship offer from the Broncos. He also scheduled visits to Bowling Green and Toledo but each visit was canceled by the coaching staffs at both schools.

"Three days before my visit to Bowling Green the recruiter called and told me they already signed two running backs and that's all they were going to sign." Calhoun said. "I was going to go to Toledo the next week but they called and said the same thing."

Calhoun said he doesn't regret the way he was treated, he only wishes he scheduled earlier visits.

Howton said Grand Valley "got a steal," in Calhoun, a 6-foot-1, 195-pounder who runs a 4.6 40yard dash time. Calhoun also carries a 3.8 grade point average and scored a 20 on his ACT test.

"I've had other people sign Di-vision I who didn't have his talent," Howton said. "He's such a hard-working person, I was appalled he was not getting a bigger rush from Division I schools. (Division I schools) are trying to hook up the best players they can

Grand Valley also signed a pair of former Observerland players who have played the last two years at Grand Rapids Junior College: quarterback Eric Stover (Westland John Glenn) and tight end Ryan Johnson (Plymouth Salem).

Another top running back from Observerland, North Farmington's Todd Anderson, will attend either Yale or Princeton.

Two first-team Observer players signed with Division I schools: Jason Facione, a linebacker from Livonia Franklin who committed early to Central Michigan and Joe Suhajda, a lineman from Redford Catholic Central who is headed to the Air Force Academy.

Suhajda made a visit to West Point and said he turned down. several offers to visit schools in the Big Ten.

West Point was more beautiful and attractive but I didn't like the climate," Suhajda said. "I like the discipline and being in a controlled environment (of a military academy)."

CC linebacker Joe Herman, another first-team choice, said he wasn't signing a letter Wednesday but is headed to the University of Toledo. Herman said Toledo coaches promised him some scholarship aid but how much was not yet determined.

Another CC player, lineman Aaron Babicz, didn't draw much 🖀 interest from Division I schools despite being named Dream Team by one state-wide newspaper. Babicz, a 6-2, 245-pound lineman, signed with Hillsdale.

"No one wanted to take a chance on someone my height, but I have no doubts I could have played Division I," Babicz said.

Stevenson star selects Madonna

BY BRAD EMONS and C.J. RISAK

Playing close to home for a team that's a contender for a national title was pivotal in Julie Martin's thinking. Which is why the Livonia Stevenson volleyball standout decided to spurn offers from NCAA Division I schools like Florida State, Illinois State, Western Michigan, Ohio Uni-versity and Toledo to accept a scholarship from Madonna University, an NAIA team.

"It's one of the biggest steals of the year," said Stevenson coach Lee Cagle, who also coaches Martin in the AAU Crusader Volleyball Club at Madonna. "She's almost unstoppable because she hits the ball so hard inside of 10 feet, and she's almost always 11/2-to-2 feet above the net.

"Her blocking at this time is incredible. This year she's also serving well and playing back row. She's become more than a one-dimensional player. She should be considered for allstate first team."

The 6-1 Martin, together with Patty Diamond, has led Stevenson to a 24-4 record. Martin has over 300 kills this season, with a .430 kill percentage.

Still, volleyball wasn't the only factor in her decision. "It's a real good school," Martin said, then added, "I know they have a good volleyball team. I know the coach (Jerry Abraham) and I know the (Madonna players) real well '

Martin's signing should help offset some notable losses to graduation for Madonna. Gone are all-district selections Elena Oparka (also a third-team NAIA All-American) and Tonia Smith, both outside hitters. Also gone is outside hitter Melissa Mars.

The biggest loss, however, could be Dana Finley, Madonna's two-time NAIA District 23 most valuable player who's also been an All-American twice. Finley, a middle hitter, is considering switching schools because her husband, who's in the military, has been stationed near Washington, D.C.

If Finley returns, Madonna could be ranked in the NAIA's pre-season top 10.

Abraham could not be happier with Martin's decision. "She's a major, major recruit," he said. "She's very similar to Dana (Finley), an impact-type player. She has that kind of potential, to come in and help right away.

'As far as pure hitting and net play, she's one of the best in the state. She's a smart player who's improved dramatically the last three years. And she's developed as an all-around player.

After referring to Martin as a dominant player, Abraham said, "In my opinion, she's the top middle hitter in the state."

Now she's coming to a program that has improved every year since Abraham started it five years ago, its only drawback coming at tournament time. Madonna has never qualified for the NAIA Tournament.

If Abraham can pick up a couple more notable recruits - and Martin's signing should only aid that effort - that last goal should be realized.

SC men cagers slip; women end streak

Well, there was no one coming to Schoolcraft College's defense.

Certainly none of the Ocelots did Saturday at Oakland CC. The Raiders went ahead by a bunch early and just kept pouring it on, burying SC 116-76 in men's basketball. "We played absolutely no defense," said SC coach Dave Bogataj, whose team slipped to 5-16 overall, 1-9 in the Eastern Conference. "They just outscrapped us, anywhere and everywhere. When you're out there, you've got to play defense.

"It just wasn't pretty."

Unless, of course, you're an OCC fan. The Raiders stayed alive in the Eastern Conference race with the win, improving their conference record to 8-3 (12-9 overall).

OCC's Balance keyed onslaught, which resulted in a 60-39 halftime lead. Seven Raiders reached double-figures in scoring, led by Willie Payne's 20 points (and 13 rebounds). Ray Moreland and Bill Knight had 15 points apiece, Craig Martin and Bill Thurston netted 14 each. Troy Coleman scored F1 and Mark Galbraith had 10. Knight added 10 rebounds, and Randy Hicks finished with nine points and nine boards. Point guard Kevin Woodmore did a commendable job quarterbacking the OCC attack, dishing-out-10 assists. He also had five steals.

For SC, Mohammed Abdrabboh scored 21 points, LaMonte Fondren totaled 19, Steve Whitlow had 18 and Vince Turner got 10. No one had more than five rebounds for the Ocelots, who were outboarded 49-31.

Another key factor for OCC was its lack of turnovers, according to coach Lynn Reed. "We only had 13," he said. "That's our best for the year. And we had excellent teamwork, with 28 assists. I thought we passed the ball well, and we rebounded well."

in their past 12 games. SC slipped to 5-16 overall, 1-9 in the conference.

The Lady Ocelots overcame a size disadvantage and ended a fourgame losing streak Saturday, beating visiting Oakland CC 67-59. The win improved SC's record to 2-8 in the Eastern Conference, 10-11 overall. OCC is 3-7 in the conference.

The homecourt advantage certainly helped SC, which had been on the road for all four of the consecutive losses. But it took a team effort for the Lady Ocelots to pull out the win

"This was a team victory," sald Lady Ocelot coach Jack Grenan. "When you have seven players, everybody has to contribute or you're in deep trouble. The kids are proud of themselves, and rightly so."

For nearly half the game, SC did not even have seven players. Alisa Wechter, the Lady Ocelots' 5-10 freshman center, got two quick fouls early in the second half and fouled out with 18 minutes left. That forced Grenan to switch his leading scorer, Dana Hudson, to center.

His forwards were 5-6 Angie Cerne and 5-4 Michelle Ernst. OCC, which trailed 37-30 at the half, fought back to within one with nine minutes left. But that's as close as it got.

SC quickly reassumed control, stretching its lead back to six. Still, the Lady Ocelots were never able to pull away. A Jody Dorr three-pointer with 45 seconds left trimmed SC's lead to five, but the Lady Ocelots answered by making three free throws to pull away.

Kennedy scoring big after leave of absence much.

BY C.J. RISAK

Jennifer Kennedy's final year of collegiate basketball will be an abbreviated one.

Too bad for Albion College. Not so bad for everyone else in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Kennedy has been tearing the league apart since returning from an internship with the U.S. Information Agency in Washington, D.C. The 5-6 senior point guard from Redford (Livonia Ladywood HS) leads the MIAA in scoring, averaging 18.5 points a game. She's also averaging nearly six rebounds and over four assists per game

All this after missing the entire pre-season and the first six games

"I played at Catholic University," Kennedy explained. "I tried to stay in shape as best I could." Which was beneficial for the Britons, who struggled without her. Albion was 1-5 before Kennedy returned in mid-December; since then, the Britons are 6-5.

"It was kind of one of those while interning. Obviously, the Catch-22 things," said Kennedy's time off didn't hurt her game __coach, Sally Konkle, of Kennedy's Catch-22 things," said Kennedy's internship. "As a coach. I missed having the MVP of the league in the lineup, but she's here for an education.

most? "Her scoring ability," an-swered Konkle, then added, "But we missed her leadership the Playoffs long shot for Madonna basketball team

A week ago, the season still seemed full of promise for Madonna University's women's basketball team.

After Tuesday, hopes had suddenly become very slim.

The Lady Crusaders lost a pair of NAIA District 23 games in a four-day span, losses that could cost them a berth in the fourteam playoffs. Saturday at Aquimas College, Madonna battled but couldn't overtake the Saints in absorbing a 66-60 loss.

That evened the Crusaders' district record at 4-4 - a setback, to be sure, but they were still in the playoff hunt. Until Tuesday.

A trip to Concordia College proved disastrous. The Cardinals were winless in eight previous MADONNA district games, but they rolled to a 22-point first-half lead and hung on, defeating Madonna 71-64.

"The girls just did not come out prepared," said Madonna coach Bill Potter, whose team is now 10-14 overall (4-5 in the district). "We stunk, actually.

"That probably cost us a playoff berth."

To regain what they've lost in the two road defeats, Madonna may have to pull off a major upset, like tonight when the Crusaders host district-leader Spring Arbor at 7 p.m.

There were few bright spots for Madonna at Concordia. One was

-1

Stephanie Niebauer, who scored 27 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. No other Crusader reached double figures in scoring: Mary Bieniewicz had nine points and Dana Sevcech scored six, with 10 assists.

Beth Connon's 21 points led Concordia (5-17 overall); Kim Miller had 15.

Madonna missed 16 layups, shot a dismal 36 percent from the floor (24-of-66), and committed 23 turnovers, according to Potter. The Cards were 31-of-72 from the field (43 percent) and had 17 turnovers

Still, Madonna had a chance late in the game. With five minutes left, the Crusaders were within 56-52 — but they followed that with a miss and a turnover.

Niebauer's 21 points was best for Madonna. April Blanton and Stephanie Crelley chipped in with eight apiece, while Sevcech had four points and 10 assists.

The effort against Aquinas was better, but the result was the same. The Crusaders had a chance, trailing by two in the closing minutes. But they missed two layups, two free throws and committed a costly turnover on Madonna now trails the second-place Saints by three games in the loss column. University of Michigan-Dearborn and Tri-State University are also in the playoff picture.

Livonia trio signs with U-D Mercy

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

The University of Detroit Mercy men's soccer program has scored a hat trick in the recruiting wars.

The Titans have received verbal commitments from three All-Observer players, including goalie Kal Kaliszewski of Livonia Churchill, who was recently named to the Parade Magazine All-America squad.

Kaliszewski will join Vardar club teammates Jeff Thomas and Adam Pichler, both of Livonia Stevenson, next fall at U-D Mercy.

"All three of us got together, we all kind of talked about it,' said Thomas. "We're all pretty good friends and have played on a lot of teams together.

The U-D Mercy program appears to be on the rise under second-year coach Morris Lupenec.

The U-D coach, who is not allowed to comment on the players signings (because of NCAA rules) until the national letterof-intents are finalized this week, has to be pleased with his latest coup.

The home-and-home series concluded Wednesday with action at Ark Sterling in Sterling Heights.

There were plenty of high games at both sites, with the west-side seniors a bit higher than the east siders. The west claimed the championship 78,627 pins to 76,709.

The west-side seniors had several more "all star" bowlers in their ranks such as Jarv Woehike, Alvar Freden, Art Kuzniar, Al Thompson and many other great bowlers.

The oldest competitor was Karl Schmuck at 82. He carried a 184 average, followed by 81-year old Bert Morisette, averaging 174.

The event was a success and will likely be repeated next year.

One more note on the seniors - they are forming a classic league for bowlers 55 and older to compete on Wednesdays at Mayflower Lanes to begin next fall. Interested parties should contact Mayflower Lanes for details. They say records are made to be broken. Mitch Jabczenski recently shot a 300 game at Drakeshire Lanes in Farmington Hills.

This was his 24th perfect game, eclipsing the old state record of 23 held by who else - himself.

Mike Barber, a 9-year-old bowler from Westland, was practicing for his Saturday youth league when he faced a snake-eyes 7-10 split. He made the unusual shot.

His mother, Tina, an all-star bowler, just happened to be watching or else she wouldn't have believed it herself.

Mike bowls in the prep division of the Saturday Youth League at Country Lanes.

Paluk scores 30 as CC zaps U-D

The Redford Catholic Central basketball team pulled off a major upset Tuesday night in the Catholic-League's Central Division, beating previously undefeated University of Detroit-Jesuit 57-54 at home.

The win moves CC to 4-3 in the Central Division, 6-7 overall. U-D fell to 6-1 in the Central, 9-2 over-Senior forward Brian Paluk led CC with a game-high 30 points, including eight-of-11 free throws. Junior guard Andy Kummer added 10 points.

CC led 17-8 after one quarter and by as many as 10 or 12 points most of the way. The Shamrocks' lead was 27-21 at halftime before U-D pulled closer after three quarters, 39-36.

Damien Love led U-D with 22 points, including four three-point shots. Julian Bonner added 12 points and Dwight Kaigler scored 10.

I JOHN GLENN 77, FRANKLIN 49: Senior center Ken Taylor and senior guard Aaron Scheffer each scored 16 po ints Tues day, leading Westland John Glenn to its 10th straight victory at Livonia Franklin in a Western Lakes Activities Association game.

The Rockets led 35-20 at intermission and broke it open with a 26-10 scoring spurt in the third quarter. John Miller contributed 13 points for the victorious Rockets, now 10-1 overall and 6-0 in the WLAA.

Junior guard Paul Krushka led Franklin (3-8, 0-6) with 10 points. Jun-ior forward Mark Baluk added nine.

EFARMINGTON 62. CHURCHILL 60:

Senior Drew Jurcisin celebrated his 18th birthday Tuesday by scoring a team-high 21 points, including six three-pointers, but the visiting Falcons spoiled the party by pulling out the WLAA win.

Scott Menser paced Farmington (6-6, 3-3) with 18 points, while Stanley Lewis chipped in with 15.

Jason Baranowski added 16 points and eight assists for the Chargers, who fell to 1-10 overall and 0-6 in the WLAA. Darrell Wiacek also chipped in with 15 points

Churchill's Jim Hawkins (six points) couldn't convert the equalizer for the Chargers after Lewis missed the second of a one-and-one free throw attempt.

W.L. WESTERN 59, STEVENSON 45: On Tuesday, host Walled Lake Western pulled away with a 25-17 surge in the final quarter to subdue visiting Livonia Stevenson in a WLAA encounter. Seniors Ryan Bolton and Brent Mackowiak each scored 14 points for the victorious Warriors, now 5-7 overall and 2-3 in the WLAA.

Matt Engott chipped in with 13. Three Stevenson players tallied eight points apiece - Steve Harrison, Mark

Harry and Jim Townsend The loss drops to the Spartans to 4-7 overall and 1-5 in the WLAA.

CLARENCEVILLE 75, LUTHERAN N'WEST 72: Four Livonia Clarenceville players scored in double figures Tues-day night, and the Trojans rallied from a 44-30 halftime deficit to defeat visiting Rochester Lutheran Northwest.

The Trojans are 7-4 overall, 4-2 in the Metro Conference. Northwest fell to 3-3 in the Metro, 6-5 overall. Junior, guard Mark Skrelja led Clarenceville with 28 points and 10 re-bounds. Junior forward John Kalaj scored 16 points, junior forward Mark Kalaj had 14 and junior center Mario Ivezai added 12

The Trojans outscored Northwest 21-15 in the third quarter to trail 59-51 af-ter three periods. Clarenceville clinched the victory after outscoring Northwest 24-13 in the fourth quarter and guard Brice Lee also played a key role with a couple of steals.

Northwest enjoyed its big edge in the first balf thanks to making seven-ofnine shots from three-point range.

"We had played them over the summer and play them every year we knew what type of team they had," Henry said.

The Braves didn't resemble their record as they out-rebounded Wayne 29-22 and shot an incredible 75 percent from the floor (30-for-40). The bombardment was orchestrated by Long, whose lack of height has kept away college recruiters despite a 25-point per game scoring average.

'He's as good as shooter as there is in the state," Rowley said. "But if you're not 6-foot-2, then who knows. He's a 42 percent shooter from three-point range and hit seven against Flint Northwestern. The key for us tonight was that we got some great play out of the supporting cast.'

Long was all smiles throughout the game, while insisting he wasn't showboating.

"I just love the game, even when were losing," he said. "I was never worried we would lose. Basically, I feel we should have won all the games we lost."

Grant tallied 14 points for Ypsilanti while Chaz Robinson contributed 12 points and nine rebounds.

Wayne was led by Graves' 21 points. Guards Billy, Romej and Antonio Dodd added 13 and 11 points, respectively.

The Braves only missed one shot in the first quarter but Wayne was able to stay within four (19-15) at the end of the quarter thanks to a pair of threepointers by Graves.

A 12-point second quarter by Long gave the Braves a 37-28 halftime advantage. Wayne was able to rally in the third quarter as Romej and Dodd combined for 12 points.

But there was no Ypsilanti fold in the fourth quarter, much to the Rowley's relief.

"Yes, I thought about it," he said. "But I had more confidence in the team tonight. We were playing with more smarts.

Marlo Thomas stars in profound comedy

Performances of "Six Degrees of Separation," at the George Burns Theatre continue through Feb. 14. For ticket information, call (800) 589-8000 or Ticketmaster, 645-6666.

A young black man cleverly invades the lifestyles of the rich by assuming the guise of Sidney Poitier's son. It doesn't sound like material for a comedy, but Marlo Thomas, who is starring in John Guare's "Six De-grees of Separation," with John Cunningham, assures me it is.

You're laughing the first 40 minutes, and getting clicks about life," said Thomas. "There are many surprises. You don't know what's going to happen.'

Thomas plays Ouisa, and Cunningham is her husband Flan, an art dealer. The show, playing at the George Burns Theatre for the Performing Arts in Livonia through Feb. 14, is set in New York.

'She's a woman who thinks she has a perfect life, yet she and her children have no relationship. They are a couple who haven't taken their emotional temperature in years," said Thomas. 'They are great anecdoters — people who feel tragic when something happens, then it's a joke the next day. They distance themselves from pain."

Paul (Ntare Mwine), who attends their daughter's school, comes into their lives, and changes them forever. He brings imagination and spirit.

it's because you remember, hearing about a charming well-dressed teenager who told people he was Sidney Poitier's just-mugged son. He talked his way into the homes of prominent Manhattan residents and stole from them. One of the people was Guare's friend.

If the story sounds familiar, maybe

But the story isn't about him, it's about trust, faith, relationships, race, and the connections between them. The play scrutinizes such serious social situations as white liberal guilt, the gulf between generations, alienation and the need to belong, loveless family relationships, upscale greed, the power of education, and celebritymania. There are 17 people in the cast.

"John Guare is a brilliant writer," said Thomas. "This play is a plea — let's respect life, let's be aware of how we're separated from each other, and realize it's not important.

One of Ouisa's lines in the play is "I read somewhere that everybody on this planet is separated by only six people. Six degrees of separation. Between us and everyone on this plan-

It's possible that someone in the audience at the George Burns Theatre has a connection to Thomas. The daughter of the late Danny Thomas, Marlo was born in Detroit at Grace Hospital. Her sister-in-law lives in the Detroit area.

"My early childhood memories are about my father working, and now I'm coming home to work. I've never done theater here. It's an emotional homecoming," said Thomas.

There's also a connection to George Burns, he's a family friend, who encouraged Marlo Thomas to pursue her acting career.

'When I was thinking about becoming an actress, George Burns said show business is the greatest life in the world. But my father thought I would be huit if I didn't make it," she said. "After he saw me working on stage in London he knew I would be OK:

In "Six Degrees of Separation," Thomas said the audience will have a good time, look at themselves and their relationships, and have something to think about.

"I really love theater," she said. "I get a chance to stand on stage and tell a whole story from beginning to end. It's a thrill to hear the audience laugh.'

BY KRIS SPENCER SPECIAL WRITER

When you have a tough act to follow, do something entirely different. Such an adage describes the Plymouth Symphony Society's latest presentation. Following its great success with "The Nutcracker," the group opted for a smaller, more intimate chamber concert Jan: 29 at the Plymouth-Canton Little Theatre.

The program focused on individual and small group performances, including members of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestera, and winners of the Youth Artist Competition, a yearly event sponsored by the symphony society.

The concert was marvelous in its variety of musical styles ranging from Bach and Beethoven to Scott Joplin and Swiss folk melodies, and in its variety of instrumentation. There were the sweet sounds of the piccolo, the fluttering of harp strings, and even the raspy belch of the alphorn.

Nicole Berry (piano), Dan Ander-son (violin) and Wendy Stuart (cello), played Beethoven's "Trio in E-Flat, Op. 1 No. 1." Considering the piece's somber mood, it seemed an unlikely choice for an opener. Nevertheless, the group played splendidly.

Next came Susan Bozell, youth competition first-place winner, with a rendition of Hue's "Fanaisie." A flutist for six years, and senior at Plymouth Salem High School, Bozell tacked the piece's Debussy-esque ambience without a hitch.

Then in a program full of twists came the biggest surprise. Jeffrey Ash took the stage with his 11-foot, pipeshaped alphorn. 'Accompanied by a travelogue-style slide show, Ash played Swiss folk melodies of stoic charm. Despite a few sour notes, the performance added considerably to the concert's diversity.

Ash was followed by another surprise, trombonists Michael Rumbell, Charlcen Wilson, Matthew Tropman, and Jeffery Parker, (tuba) played Scott Joplin's "The Entertain-After hearing the tune on one-'er.' too-many music boxes, it was fairly refreshing to hear this seemingly authentic vaudevillian rendition.

Deborah Rebeck Ash (flute), Amy Kuras (cello) and Ruth Myers (harp) brought Faure's "Pavanne" to life, endowing it with a sense of profound longing.

PSO principal cellist Derek Snyder played Bach's "Suite No. 5 in C Minor." He injected the piece with life, and gave it an emotional quality that I can only describe as timeless.

Second place youth competition winner Shizuo Kuwahara played Jeanine Reces' "Chanson et Passepied' on alto sax with piano accompaniment. The Novi High School senior thrilled the audience with his truly cutting-edge sound. He has the potential to be another Charlie Parker. and I expect to hear more from him.

The program closed on a whimsical note with Michele Groff Kelly (piccolo), Annette Sievert Mechling (piccolo), Sue Pockington (flute), Deborah Rebeck Ash (alto flute), and Amy Kuras (cello) with Smetena's "Dance of the Comedians," from "The Bartered Bride." The performance lived up to its lighthearted origins.

Delightfully inept cast funny in 'Play On!'

ington Players Barn and have a CARLEY hearty chuckle at your own expense "Play On!" a farce by Rick Abbot, should amuse audiences from all walks of life, but will be especially funny to those of us who trod the boards for fun (and no profit).

Mr. Abbot must have extensive theater experience. His script abounds with those little details which all groups seem to share, whether it's the goofy set builder, those messy little impromptu romances, or the almost universal addiction to coffee.

As our story opens, an unnamed amateur theater troupe is struggling through rehearsals of an absolutely dreadful murder mystery by a local playwright. In typically stingy community theater fashion, the group has chosen this dog in order to avoid paying rovalties.

Director Geraldine Dunbar (Cynthia Tupper) is exasperated by a host of familiar headaches including forgotten lines, intracast squabbles and technical glitches. Compounding her misery is nitwitted playwright Phyllis Montague, played by Paula Myers. This would-be Agatha Christie, continues to re-write her abominable script right up until opening night. By Act 2 Ms. Dunbar and her cast have managed to stumble their way through dress rehearsal, which only serves to convince them that they cannot possibly be ready to open the following evening.

Act 3, opening night, proves them right in excruciatingly fun-ny fashion. Lines go astray, props disappear, zippers fly open, and the murderer arrives for the performance stinking drunk. Hearty congratulations go to real-life director Phil Hadley, who choreographs this disaster with great skill, thus achieving maximum hilarity.

Kudos also to a fine cast. In fact it is hard to single anyone in particular out for praise. I'll start, though, with Margaret Gilkes because she reminds me of so many stage managers I have known. Myers is also quite good as the irritating Ms. Montague.

-The "cast within the cast, to speak, is delightfully inept. It takes a lot of talent to act this badly. Especially noteworthy are the awful British accents.

Yes, friends, go and enjoy "Play On!" But be forewarned. It may seem just a little too familiar. Mark S. Carley is active in local community theater, both onstage and behind the scenes. He is a member of the Birmingham Village Players and Ridgedale Players in Troy.

For Little People and Earthbeat, a wholesale distribution network and a division that develops education materials for schools and libraries.

The Music For Little People label produces musical and audio recordings for children and Earthbeat features world music for adults and children.

Kathy Jo Lucky-Proctor, the Music For Little People family entertainment consultant coordinator, said the company beganusing independent consultants in September after a year-long pilot program involving 10 independent consultants.

"The feeling was that we had pretty much saturated the catalog market — we'd gotten as far as we could with it," Lucky-Proctor said. At the same time, it seemed obvious to that there was still a market for the life-affirming product that Music For Little People has to offer, she said. "(But) some people just aren't catalog people." It was thought a more personal marketing approach might be successful.

Since September, Lucky-Proctor said Music For Little People has gained more than 90 consultants and expects to add another 300 by the end of this year.

Customer base tapped

"Most of them are loyal customers who have been purchasing our products for years," she said. She added it makes a lot of sense that these people would be a likely conduit for getting the materials into the hands of people with similar interests.

"We do screen our people," she said. "It's not give us $20 and you can sell our stuff."

Most have music backgrounds or have experience working with children. The family entertainment consultant program is still evolving. "They (the consultants) are really creating the program."

Abrams said she offers the products through home listening parties in the evenings as well as at fairs and educational events. "It allows people to see what we have to offer and listen to the selection."

Products are still offered as mail order items, but many people prefer to test products first.

"Some of these things can be bought (through other channels)," she said. Some toy stores and bookstores, for example, may carry selected items, but none carries such an extensive collection.

"I think what we offer is very special — particularly the music instruments," she said.

'Expected' $20 billion write off bodes ill for future of industry

I had just fin-AUTO ished attempting TALK to balance my checkbook when I read in the Street Wall Journal that GM had taken a onetime write off of some $20 billion "as expected," which is the kind DAN MCCOSH of language most other papers reerve for the obituary page.

What was expected is that a new federal accounting rule would make GM and the rest of the Big Three come up with a figure approximating what it was going to have to pay for health care for future retirees. I don't know how many people expected it would be $20 billion.

That's more than twice what GM earned in the past decade, which was supposed to be the most profitable decade in history, according to Roger Smith, who was running the company at the time. It's also adds up to about $30,000 for every current employee.

I suppose I shouldn't have been too surprised, since the last time I brought up the subject of GM health care benefits for retirees, I got a call from a guy in Livonia who was irate that GM was considering cutting some of his benefits. He had worked for more than 10 years at GM, he said, and had taken early retirement with the understanding he would be taken care of for the rest of his life which ought to be at least another 20 years or so.

This conversation got me to thinking that if health insurance keeps rising at the rate it has in the past 10 years, by the next decade, a GM retiree's insurance is going to cost more than his salary when he was working.

To pay for this, GM has to become profitable, and GM's new management is feverishly cutting costs to pursue this end by retiring more people earlier, which of course means that there are more retirees, retired longer, which will then cost more in benefits. Pretty soon I was starting to think like Ross Perot, picturing the last guy still working at GM opening the mail and looking at this bill for $20 billion.

Or, for, that matter, thinking like President Clinton, who quite accurately specified the cost of health cars as sufficient to bury us all in the not-so-distant future is something isn't done to control costs.

It's pretty easy these days to get buried in apocalyptic numbers. Everything from the national debt to the projected rise in property assessments ends in disaster if it is projected far enough. Still, the $20 billion write off taken by GM, 'as expected,' ought to be a bigenough shock to make anyone understand that this isn't going to go on like this for very much longer.

Labor from NEXT PAGE

"Previously, people could graduate from school and stay with one company until retirement. Today, a new employee will have 10 different jobs. Skills will constantly need to change."

On the state level, Schall called Michigan a leader in recognizing and dealing with the issue.

"In Gov. Engler's state of the state message, he announced the creation of a Michigan jobs team. There are 60 different jobs programs at the federal level. They need to be streamlined. Governor Engler is making this a priority."

Schall says General Motors' layoff of 74,000 workers will have a ripple effect — taking in auto suppliers and other businesses like restaurants located near plants — which will translate to 200,000 jobs lost in the state.

Schall claims it's easier than most people think to get funds for job training for dislocated workers. When Livonia's GM plant closes, dislocating 2,000 workers, application could be made for federal dollars from the Department of Labor to retrain those workers, he said.

"In the year 2020 in Michigan, there will continue to be a viable auto industry, but it won't be big enough to employ all the workers in Michigan."

Many area suburbs receive federal training funds through the Job Training Partnership Act, created by Congress in 1981.

"One plan we were hoping to accomplish was giving $3,000 training vouchers to middle-aged workers. We were purposely going to break with history and define it very broadly," said Schall. "There are so many more potentially dislocated workers. The economy does change that much."

Schall, the son of Thomas and Rita Schall of Livonia, attended St. Michael's elementary school and Bishop Borgess High before obtaining a degree with honors from the University of Michigan in political science. He also received a master of public policy degree from Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government in 1984. He was selected as the Harry Truman Scholar for the state of Michigan in 1980.

Schall was selected as a presidential management intern in 1984. Other political assignments include budget examiner in the White House Office of Management and Budget from 1984 to 1987. From 1987 to January 1989, he was legislative director to then U.S. Rep. Connie Mack, R-Florida.

Schall, 32, says it's premature at this point to predict what course his fast track career will take now.

"Several people have asked me to run for Congress in 1994 in the 13th (U.S. Rep. William) Ford district," he said. "I'm thinking about it."

A mother dissatisfied with choices at traditional toy stores has taken a position with a nontraditional children's product outlet, helping to expand the company beyond its catalog business.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY STAFF WRITER

Kids, especially small ones, can be difficult to buy for.

Sure, there are Dr. Seuss books, Playschool toys, Sesame Street items and a few other trusted names parents have come to rely on, but how far can that get you? One birthday and two holidays?

Maybe. In a world where toys are based on Saturday morning cartoon shows and vice versa, where can a parent find wholesome, honest things to entertain their children?

That's what Ann G. Abrams of Bloomfield Hills wondered, and several years ago she discovered a small company out of California called Music For Little People that promised just that.

"I have two children of my own. and it's difficult to find things for them," she said. She added that while the usual merchandise found in traditional retail outlets have their place, she doesn't believe they are the end all for children.

She was impressed when she was first introduced to the Music For Little People line through a catalog.

sizable advertising budgets and buy in large volumes, they can afford to lower frame prices to rockbottom levels in hopes of attracting price-conscious consumers.

An independent like Wilson finds it difficult to compete against such marketing efforts. But if there were a way frame prices could be dropped without resorting to cutbacks in service, an independent optometrist would have the best of both worlds - low prices and steady revenues.

So taking a page from warehouse outlets, Wilson began lowering frame prices via a buyer's club. For an individual membership fee of $25 per year, a customer can select among frames which are on average 50 percent below retail prices.

The amount of advertising by the chains is staggering, while at the same time you're left to wonprescriptions for lenses in hand, the only advice they need is on frames.

"On average, our doctors spend between five and 10 minutes with customers in need of an exam,' said the spokesperson, who asked not to be named. "We feel that is enough time for people to get the right prescriptions."

Wilson has found a groundswell of support for his buyer's club. Up and running since October, the club already has more than 100 members. To promote the club, Wilson, a 1988 graduate of the College of Optometry at Ferris State University, has advertised, printed flyers and modified his display units.

Families of three or more can join the club for an annual fee of $65. Like individual memberships, there is no limit on the number of frames purchased in a given year within a family.

"What we're trying to do is break the mold that everything has to be on sale," said Wilson.

Of the 1,000-plus frames available at Eyes & Optics, Wilson said designer frames account for between 60 and 70 percent of total units sold. The 1,200-square-foot office, located near the corner of 14 Mile and Haggerty, has two employees.

One of the most popular frames of late, said Wilson, is a pair once known as granny glasses, where lenses are small circles set in wire frames so thin they all but disappear. The look has recently shown up on the fashion runways of Paris and Milan."

'The designer frames really became big in the 1980s, and they've just grown from there," said Wilson. "However, there is a move away from big, plastic glasses, and now people want designs which are smaller, more elegant.

1993 offers challenges for males

Men in child care.

Men teaching in kindergarten classes. Men assisting with weekly play groups. Fathers helping with home work.

1993 is now here and with its arrival comes new challenges for males in our society. Children need men more than ever to take a pro-active role in . their lives. We as a society must seek ways to help men become more comfortable and competent, as they assist in the development of our children.

Children of all ages are the benefactors when they experience positive involvement of both males and females in their daily lives. For too long men have been in the background developmentally as it relates to interacting with children. Because of the changes the family has undergone in the past it is now important that roles for men. women, fathers, mothers and other concerned adults be redefined.

In the past roles of males and females were easily identified. Dad was the bread winner while Mom kept the house and raised the children. This we called the traditional family. With Mom at home and her being accessable to the children made it very easy for Dad to be a distant parent Distant parenting was the norm across the nation-but now with more women in the work force. than ever in the history of our country, with single parent households and males that are raising children alone for many reasons, it is imperative that both males as well as females understand the developmental needs of children.

Men must be empowered to assist children in their many stages of development. Children have little understanding as to whether men or women should cook, change diapers, clean house, prepare snacks or give cough medicine. All children know is that they have needs and these needs must be satisfied.

Men are finding this new role of nurturing children to be unchartered waters. Some men have referred to this role of primary caregiver as "going where no man has gone before." A male friendly environment needs to exist, if our children are to experience the sense of safety and confidence when in the care of men.

Men have proven they can be excellent caregivers, when equipped with the proper tools and knowledge. The role of male caregiver in our society is not a new role, but we are finding more men placed in the position of primary caregiver due to divorce, death, drug abuse, incarceration, employ-

Remember those confusing grammar rules like the apostrophe? Looks like where it may have come from explains why it's easily misunderstood.

BY JAMES RADEBAUGH STAFF WRITER

It took awhile, but after 12 years of public education I mastered the apostrophe.

That's that little thing that stands in when part of a word is lopped off and shoved up against another word, as in could've, should've and didn't.

Or, when it's followed by an s, it can show possession. If I were to say John car, you'd look at me funny. If I said John's car, you wouldn't.

The tricky one, of course, is its versus it's. Since the 's shows possession, it should be it's handle, rong. It's handle being a possessive pronoun like his, hers or theirs, doesn't need an apostrophe. It's, on the other hand, is one of those words created when two words are shoved together. It means it is But anyone reading this already knows that, right? Right?

The chip off the grammar block

sives. Does the apostrophe stand in for a long-forgotten word or part of a word that once denoted possession? And what about the s? No one I've asked has been able to tell me.

I've also wondered whether . . excuse me, do I hear someone snickering? Hey, I know most of you don't care a wit about the 's, but we use it countless times a day and I can't help wondering where it came from. It's not so trivial compared with some of things some people wonder about. While typing this, I've been listening to my coworkers speculate about the authenticity of Dolly Parton's breasts and whether Princess Di can openly take a lover (I hear they are and I hope she library, where a harried woman at the reference desk tried to be helpful.

"I don't know where to look it up, it's such an unusual bit of information," she said.

I tried the Encyclopedia Americana, which says the apostrophe, along with the exclamation point and quotation marks, came into use with the proliferation of printing in the 17th and 18th centuries. But it didn't address the possessive.

Unsatisfied, I called Madonna University, hoping someone on the English faculty could help. "Oh, that is a good one," a woman in the public relations office said. She'd have someone get back to me, she said.

Bailey, a Birmingham resident, said that since apostrophes often stand in for omitted words or letters, it's commonly supposed that that's what the apostrophe in the possessive is doing. Dabblers in etymology like to think that Shakespeare's book is a contraction of something like Shakespeare his book, Bailey explained.

"That's entirely wrong, please understand," he added.

Though he makes no claims to being an expert on the ancient history of the language, Bailey said that forming possessives with an S sound goes way back in spoken English. Modern German, English's cousin, also forms possessives with the S sound.

Use of the apostrophe to set off the S in written English simply became conventional in the 18th century, Baily said. So, the "Encyment, unemployment family emergency, ect.

Support of these males in primary caregiver positions is the responsibility of us all. A well-prepared male approaches the responsibility of caring for children with confidence. It is important that males in the role of primary caregiver are aware of support services available in their communities.

One of the many new exciting opportunities for men to get involved in the lives of children is in the field of child care. The Learning Tree Day Care Center of Livonia is one of many pioneers, hiring male caregivers to work with young children. Men at the Learning Tree express a sense of satisfaction working with the early childhood program. The children at the Learning Tree seem to be very please to have both male and female teachers at the center.

There are more men being hired in child care, Head Start programs, elementary schools and community-based organizations than we have experienced in the past. This movement to include men in the lives of our children must continue. The more opportunities males have to work with young children, the greater their experience will be, thus creating a balanced environment for children to develop.

There are many ways men can get actively and positively involved with on behalf of children. First, let children know know you care; talk with them and listen to their concerns. Build their selfesteem by sharing every day tasks like reading with them. Use positive discipline and teach nonviolent conflict resolutions. Help them to express their feelings and encourage your groups, block clubs, unions, churches, fraternities and service clubs to sponsor activities for children and youth.

The 4C Wayne County Men and Children Campaign can assist groups with getting men in their communities more involved in the lives of children. For more information, call 782-7224.

And men, your positive involvement is vital to the healthy growth and development of children. Men and children need you!

Well, whatever, I'm not picky, But I have been wondering lately why we use the 's to form posses-

But as I was saying, I've also wondered whether the 's is unique to English. The only other language I know anything about is French, and the French don't use an 's to form possessives. They say the car of John, only they say it in French. With eight hours of company time to kill. I decided to see what I could find out.

My search began at the Livonia

Did I detect a note of sarcasm? Anyway, nobody called back.

So, I tried the University of Michigan and hit pay dirt. The PR office put me in touch with Richard W. Bailey, an English professor and author of "Images of English," a book that examines people's attitudes toward the language over time.

'Ah," he said, sounding scholarly. "I can answer this.'

clopedia Americana" was right as far as it went.

Why the ancient predecessors of German and English formed possessives with an S sound is the ultimate question, I guess, but it can wait for another day.

So, if you've read this far, congratulate yourself. You've learned more than you would have wondering about Dolly's bosom.

Parents find that hugs beat slugs

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

No one can discount the stories of child abuse. On any given day, you can find such a horror story in the newspaper. People shake their heads in disbelief, wondering how parents can do such awful things to their children and what can be done to stop it.

Sandra Murphy has an answer - a relatively new program for parents being offered through the Out Wayne County Council on Child Abuse and Neglect which teaches parents how to "Be a Hugger, Not a Slugger."

With a small cadre of volunteers and financial support from Target Stores, Murphy's program focuses on the alternatives to managing a child without hitting, slapping or shaking.

"We've found that by far parents don't want to hit their children. But they don't know what to do," Murphy said. "Through this program they are offered constructive ways of handling such situations.

"Be a Hugger" utilizes a video presentation and discussions to address problems every parent faces. The video includes four vignettes of common situations that take the group to the point where the parent becomes physical. The tape is stopped and the parents with the help of a trainer like Dorothy Murphy talk about the situation and come up with solutions.

Sharing feelings

What the parents discover during the discussions is that other parents are "experiencing the same things, the same feelings." Dorothy Murphy said.

"Most parents want to do the best for their children, but none go to school to be good parents, she added. "Parents don't think of spanking as an assualt, but it is very assaultive. We look for alternatives to spanking and there are alternatives.

Using a variety of information, including a "Be a Hugger, Not a Slugger" kit she got at a national convention on child abuse and neglect, Sandra Murphy came up with the local program, then applied for a Target grant: The re-tailer gave $5,000 last year and bumped it up to $6,500 this year.

A part of the first grant was to train the presenters but demand for the program was such (14 programs, 250 parents between February and June) that the training had to wait. Now, she has five people to help with "Be a Hugger.

'I've been with this for five years and I've learned that support for parents is very fragmented and there's not enough resources for parents to become better parents," Murphy said. "If we continue spending money to treat families or support families who already are abusive, families at the other end who are really struggling will get nothing to support them.

The Target funding helps cover the cost of copying the videos and materials like the Parent Survival Kit that includes tips on how to stop such things as report card reflex, winning ways with children when eating out and 12 alterna tives to lashing out at children. There's also a small packet of Hershey kisses and a note pad, promoting the "Be a Hugger' theme.

The video vignettes cover such daily occurrences as a crying infant, the toddler who decides to explore the cupboard under the kitchen sink while dad is reading the newspaper and a daughter who won't clean her room.

Richness of group

What parents discover is that they have a lot to share with group members.

"The sharing that goes on between the parents is the richness of the group," Murphy said. "Parents need to hear that they're not the-only ones facing this issue. Such discussions help to diffuse the situation while giving them something to think about.

Murphy and her volunteers have presented the program before Head Start parents and at PTAs gatherings in communities as close at Westland, Redford, Livonia and Plymouth and as distant as Hamtramck and Gibraltar. "We ask the parents to do an "bay" leave." evaluation before they leave,' Murphy said. "We ask them how we can improve and for the most part, they say that they need more of it. When you put people together in this program, you can't believe the tremendous amount of sharing that goes on.

"Be a Hugger" program The goes hand-in-hand with the purpose of the Out Wayne County Council on Child Abuse and Neglect. It is to identify parent needs and then develop programs to meet those needs, Murphy said.

'My observation is that the family has become more isolated from the extended family and neighbors," said Murphy. "They have become disconnected and the people are not around that once were readily available.

"We have to start realizing that families need help, that we don't have a microchip that makes us instant parents. Even the whole idea of getting help as a parent is

His job is as varied as the sports

BY JULIE BROWN STAFF WRITER

Variety is the primary appeal of Tom Willette's job. "It's something different all the time," said Willette, assistant

On the job: Tom Willette, a Plymouth native, is assistant director of Plymouth Parks and recreation director for the City of Plymouth. The changing sports seasons mean that his job changes throughout the year, with basketball and coed volleyball the current sports.

"It's just something different all the time. I'm not just tied to the desk. I think that's the best part.

Willette's been on the job for a little more than nine years, and had worked part time for Plymouth Parks and Recreation for about four years before that. He did everything from shovel snow to work on the summer parks program to care for the softball and soccer fields.

These days, his work includes scheduling employees for the building, including rink guards and scorekeepers for the sports leagues. Willette, 35, also runs the arts and crafts shows at the Plymouth Cultural Center, along with all the adult sports programs.

"I enjoy what I'm doing and I enjoy the people I work with. I plan on staying here. I don't know where else I'd go. Right now, I'm very happy here

He earned a bachelor's degree in history and education from North Carolina State University and a master's degree in recreation administration from Wayne State University. Willette's a Plymouth native, and his parents, Robert and M.J. Willette, still live in the city.

"Since the fourth grade, I went to the Plymouth schools, graduated from Plymouth Salem. I like it here. I've always liked Plymouth. It's nice coming back here and working.

He'd coached baseball and been a substitute teacher at Centennial Educational Park, and had enjoyed that. The job with Plymouth Parks and Recreation opened up, so Willette took advantage of that opportunity.

He enjoys working with Carol Donnelly, senior citizens coordinator, and other staffers. Willette's sister-in-law, Tonya Wil-. lette, is the secretary in the parks and recreation office at the Plym-outh Cultural Center.

"We get a few complaints, like every business does." He enjoys meeting different peopleson the job, and the sports aspect of it.

Softball's probably his favorite sport. Willette played baseball in high school and in college. He pitched on the 1975 Salem team that won the state championship.

"I'm more of a softball, football, basketball person," he said. He isn't as much of a soccer fan, although he notes that soccer is tremendously popular with youths, and provides an excellent opportunity for kids to participate in team sports.

"They can still participate in a team sport and feel like they're contributing.

"There's tons of kids in it. It's very popular not only in Plymouth but in the other communities too." The parks and recreation program now serves as a feeder program for the high schools

Christ's message takes on a multi-media look

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Films and plays like "The Last Temptation of Christ" and "Jesus Christ Superstar" stirred controversy among the religious community. But the interactive play "Jesus Was His Name" headed for The Palace of Auburn Hills in May has captured the faith of. area religious members.

'My impression was very positive." said Richard Buckenmeyer, pastoral associate of St. Agatha's Catholic Church in Redford. "I really believe that the multi-media presentation has the potential of being very effective in communicating the message of Jesus in renewing one's faith." The Rev. Kent Hajduk of St. Michael's Catholic Church in Southfield agreed.

"From what we were shown, it's going to be based on the four gos-pels and it's not going to be like 'Jesus Christ Superstar,' " said Hajduk who along with Buckenmeyer attended a recent presentation at The Palace. "I was very impressed from what we saw and what we were told.'

'Jesus Was His Name" combines live theater and 70mm film on an 80-foot screen and a live 58member cast to tell the story of Jesus, according to the Gospels of the New Testament. Actors on the stage interact with events occurring simultaneously behind them projected on the screen.

It depicts 34 episodes from the Gospels including The Sermon on the Mount, The Miracle of the Loaves and Fishes, The Court of Herod, John the Baptist in the desert, Gethsemane and the Crucifixion. The words of the script are those of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

Buckenmeyer said this way of storytelling will appeal to all re"It's very sensitive to the ecumenical movement; it's one way for us to try to work together as Christians," he said. "Jesus Was His Name" was conceived and directed by Robert Hossein, the original creator of "Les Miserables" in Paris. The production is underscored by the fervor of Hossein's religious faith and by his determination to use the most advanced and creative technology available. That technology includes the use of a soundtrack instead of live spoken words. Three narrators with atmospheric music will be used instead.

"They're (the actors) are going to (appear to) come right out of the screen; it's going to be a very unique experience," Hajduk said.

Performances for "Jesus Was His Name" are scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, May 18-20, 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 21, 3 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday, May 22, and 3 and 7 p.m. Sunday, May 23. What is needed is a deeper understanding of what America asks of us.

And there are vital concerns in American life where we should build bridges, where our joint efforts can make a major contribution and where common action. can change the present and shape the future.

One such area is that of family life. We are faced with a disintegrating family, a high divorce rate, a decline of standards of sexual morality, an attenuation of parent-child relations.

The family has been the place where ethics and responsibility have been communicated from one generation to another. We should recognize that we face now a major crisis in the character of our civilization. The challenge to all religions, races and creeds is to restore the quality of family life.

There are many other areas where we should be building bridges, among them the problems of the aged, health care, the drug problem and the recession that has wreaked havoc in the lives of so many Americans and has brought them to the brink of frustration, want, need and despair.

human speech and thought.

Prejudice, intolerance, racial and group hatred are tragic walls which people build around themselves. Our age has unfortunately witnessed the erection of many such forbidding walls — walls that divide and separate the peoples of this earth. The poet Robert Frost said it well: "Something there is that doesn't love a wall. Before I build a wall, I'd ask to know what I was walling in or walling out, and to whom I was like to give offense.'

The fomenters of group antagonism are still active in the world today. Even in our own country. Wherever there is unhappiness. discontent or unrest, these racial and religious bigots swarm out of their dark holes, creep over the land, and sow the pernicious seeds of suspicion and hate.

Sometimes even good and respectable citizens build walls around themselves, which are effective blocks to mutual understanding and good will.

They build walls of social exclusiveness and snobbery. In the sight of God, there are no first families, no aristocrats, no distinctions of rank — only children of the earth whose brief careers may be made bright by the cultivation of the heart and mind, who may find a measure of happiness in life by helping one another in goodness and love. This, in the eyes of heaven, is to earn distinction and honor

Our shared heritage of faith urges men and women to be the builders of bridges rather than of walls. Life abounds in tragic chasms and gulfs which separate us, in deep rivers of sorrow and pain. We must learn to build bridges across them and these are more difficult to build than walls

When thousands of workers are laid off in our state, words are inadequate to describe the catastrophic impact this has on the lives of their families and the true human cost of the recession. While the new administration and Congress seek solutions for our economic problems, life must go on for those who are concerned about their daily bread and keeping a roof over their heads.

We must be builders of bridges rather than of walls. Charity, compassion, sympathy, magnanimity are such bridges. So is friendship, tolerance and brotherhood. "Love thy neighbor as thyself" is the noblest and most enduring of all bridges ever devised. With malice towards none, with charity for all" is another bridge which an immortal American built across a river of blood in the Civil War.

A recent cartoon depicts animals standing in a long line waiting to board Noah's Ark. The legend reads, "It looks very crowded. Let's catch the next boat." There is no next boat. We would do well to heed the admonition of an ancient sage. 'You are not obliged to complete the work, but neither are you free to desist from it."

Traditions" Sunday, Feb. 28. The program is free with muse and chloride which are used in many bodily functions. Each time a nerve sends a message in the salt used to keep our roads cleared of snow more than they needed to leave. Animals that eat only plant material - herbivores - need to supplement their diet with salt. They do not get salt in the concentrations that they need from mals that eat other animals, get a sufficient supply of salt from their prey. Many, people are familiar with farmers - providing their cattle with a mineral, or salt lick. Some people that enjoy watching deer will put a salt lick out to attract them. If these animals are not getting enough salt in their diet they will sup-just plants. Carnivores, or aniplement it by feeding at a concentrated source.

A handful of small songbirds also have a curious appetite for salt. Crossbills and siskens can be seen a long the roadside pecking salt. Scientists have even baited a trap with pure salt and were successful in capturing these birds.

Migratory birds that spend much of their time near the water have another situation regarding salt. Instead of not enough, they have too much. Water birds like cormorants, ducks. swans, pelicans and shorebirds that breed in freshwater areas, winter in saltwater areas along the oceans. Though waterbirds ingest saltwater regularly, they do not die from its high concentration. There is a gland in the skull between their eye and bill which secretes the excess salt from their blood. A highly concentrated solution of salt is then excreted from the nostrils. This filtering system maintains the proper level of salt in their blood even after drinking the concentrated ocean salt water.

Something as common as salt, that we often take for granted, is necessary for all forms of life. If an animal does not have enough of it then it must seek it out the best way it can. Antlers shed by deer are rarely found in the forest, de-spite the thousands of deer in the state, because the multitude of rodents, like mice, need to eat them for the minerals they provide.

Project's mission: to promote the arts he arts help make a community whole Recognizing that, Supervisor Tom Yack is moving quickly to appoint Canton's first arts council, dubbed Project Arts. It'll fill a void reated by dissolution of the Canton Community Foundation's arts council in 1991.

Canton is one of southeast Michigan's fastestgrowing townships. But the rise in community volunteerism hasn't kept pace with the crush of de-velopment over the past two decades.

"Unlike in more-established communities like Plymouth, Livonia and Ann Arbor, we don't yet have a volunteer infrastructure of communitybased organizations in place providing the extras that make a community a community," Yack said. He sees township government stimulating volunteer initiatives like arts programming, then backing away and letting the people involved advance their opportunities. We've made a commitment to do that.

As a signal of that commitment, township trustees budgeted $5,000 "to begin the process of creating a group to initiate and encourage cultural activities in Canton," Yack said. "That may not be a lot of money but it does show a level of interest and commitment among every township board member," he added. "It demonstrates each one in their own way is dedicated to the arts.'

Yack soon plans to solicit residents with a background in or appreciation of the arts to serve on Project Arts.

Kim Scherschligt, Canton resource development director, is drafting a set of bylaws so the volunteer board can plunge right into its first charge planning cultural events to supplement recre ational programs at the new outdoor amphitheater in Heritage Park.

Community center in works

The board also will begin developing arts-oriented programs for a future community center near the amphitheater. The $13-million multipurpose center will offer banquet, meeting, exercise, senior citizen, dance, leisure, and arts and crafts facilities. It's on course to open in 1995.

"I must admit I wanted an arts group in place well in advance of having this new cultural resource so it could assist in planning and program-ming arts activities," Yack said. "There's a number of objectives we'd like to accomplish other than typical recreation and banquet goals.

For example, Project Arts might decide that a dinner theater, fine art gallery, art rental gallery or hall of fame should be integrated into the center's design plans. Or it might assist in expanding the fledgling Canton Liberty Fest Fine Art Festival. develop joint programming with the Plymouth Community Arts Council or lay the groundwork for a poet, artist or philosopher in residence.

"It'll takes a while for a group like this to understand its role and develop itself to take on the kinds of responsibilities, from a programming standpoint, that we'd like it to assume," Yack said

"Besides," he added, "the more people we involve in arts programming, the more people will get excited. And that's a plus for everybody.'

Foundation earns plaudits

Yack had high praise for the Canton Community Foundation's arts council, which operated from 1989 to 1991. "It made a valiant attempt to stimulate interest in Canton toward the arts. In fact, it sponsored the first commission of a piece of artwork in Canton in a long, long time.

"We support the supervisor's efforts completely," said Foundaton executive director Bill Joyner.

The arts council was perhaps best known within the arts world for commissioning nationally renowned Canton sculptor Joe DeLauro to create 'The Storyteller'' for the Canton Public Library. The 26-inch-high sculpture is dedicated to the spirit and vision of Native Americans.

In 1990-91, the Foundation ticketed $10,000 for the arts. That year included an exhibition of De-Lauro's work as well as the unveiling of "The Storyteller.'

That same year, the arts council sent 300 elementary students to a University of Michigan touring opera production, hosted a 50-piece art show for 30 artists at township hall, sponsored a play-a-thon so two Canton piano teachers could showcase their students' skills and helped Canton songwriter Larry Kneeshaw promote his tribute to Desert Storm, "Desert Strength."

It also donated $600 to the Plymouth Community Arts Council for a series of color postcards of Canton scenes by Canton photographer Sondra Farmer. The cards typically are used to promote activities in Canton.

As Joyner aptly put it: "The arts transcend generations. They should play an integral role in everyone's life. Appreciation of the arts defines quality of life. A society that turns its back on the arts turns its back on itself."

SILVER SCREEN SUCCESS

Livonia fine artist and sculptor David Messing was elated to see much of his scenic art in the Danny DeVito flick, "Hoffa," starring Jack Nicholson as the fiery Detroit labor leader.

"I was surprised how much stuff I worked on was in the movie," said Messing, who teamed up with Aaron Dytyniak of Wayne about a year and a half ago to pursue a new career in scenic art.

Much of what they did in "Hoffa" involved making objects look older so they reflect a desired time period.

ARTISTIC WOMEN

The third exhibit of Wayne County-based "Women of Artistry" runs through Feb. 28 in the showcases on the first floor of the Livonia Civic Center Library, Five Mile and Farmington Road. Artists Susan Argiroff of Livonia, Sharon Lee Dillenbeck of Plymouth, Julie Giordano of Northville, Carol Lynn McCreedy of Westland and Norma McQueen of Garden City are taking part. They're showcasing watercolors, acrylics, oils, charcoals and marbling 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Dillenbeck, who operates D&M Art Gallery in Plymouth, founded the group in 1991 to spotlight investment-quality artwork by local women artists.

Art Beat

Messing headed a crew of artists that helped create two key sets; the U.S. Senate chamber in the Detroit Public Library and the Hoffa residence in Indian village, both 1930s vintage. Their scenic art also provided the backdrop for the produce terminal shown in the movie.

"Fortunately, the sets we did looked great. 1 was real proud of them.

"They didn't zero in on what I did, of course, but it was fun to see our designs just the same. A lot of film winds up on the cutting room floor.'

are presented here. Massara dazzles the viewer with her artistic integrity and energy.

"I hope they get the feeling I try to convey — the motion, space, wind. I want them to feel, not just Massara said in an intersee," view at the gallery. "It's just not the usage of a technique. I want feelings

Fascinated by texture, Massara works in layers to build color and surface on an unprimed canvas. A rickety fence rambles through the picture plane till it reaches a large old tree in "Dunes Edge." The acrylic diptych, with its windswept and wayward look, sends a chill up the spine.

"I work in layers. I felt that was the only way I could get that wild look on the dunes," Massara said. "It's push, pull: the light, the dark, the warm, the cool.'

Artist Audrey DiMarco of West Bloomfield helped Massara hang the show.

"I think what identifies Lena's paintings is the dark background and pulling all this out in light," DiMarco said, pointing to the branches in the recent pastel, "Dusk's Glow

"It's what ties all of her paintings together.'

All through the wide range of media here, Massara's palette shines in shades of violet, blue, and rose

"I think I have favorite colors I relate to. I reach in for the same color combinations — the pastels - over and over," Massara said.

Growth lies at the heart of Massara's art. She renders her latest work in pastels on experimental surfaces. Like most of Massara's art, three pastel landscapes on sandboard mix a variety of media over a base of watercolor.

"I want to see how far I can expand. I'm also using the dry pigment. I find that using dry pigment gives them added intensity, gives it that added depth," the versatile artist said. "I'm still into the acrylic on paper, though." "Floating Away," an acrylic on watercolor paper, lifts the viewer. up, up and away. Massara's spatial organization is key to achieving the floating effect.

"They had the dinghies lined up and I wanted to break them up, give them their own environment," she said.

Assemblage in the show uses found objects retrieved from computer boards and jet airplanes.

Massara has been painting for more than 25 years, 16 of them seriously.

In 1990, the Farmington Area Arts Commission honored her with their artist-in-residence award. She has exhibited her work at Lawrence Street Gallery in Pontiac, Paint Creek Center for the Arts in Rochester, Scarab Club in Detroit, Edee Joppich's Bay Street Gallery in Northport, Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association and at the Bald Head Island Invitational in North Carolina.

"I'm very impressed with the quality of the work," said Livonia arts commissioner Jack Olds. 'It's a very versatile exhibit. I think the public will enjoy seeing the many different faces of the artist."

Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. The library is at Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Capturing the fancy of unsung terrier heroes

Ever heard of BOOM Finnigan, the BREAK terrier first saint? He graced the earth from around 8-13 A.D. and was, apparently, "a remarkably kind beast." How about Ugly Jo Hawkins? From 1928 VICTORIA to 1939, he DIAZ played the guitar in the style of Chuck Berry. Obvi-. ously a Scotch terrier ahead of his time, nobody appreciated his music in those backward days.

Or maybe you remember the infamous canine Bo Jenkin (alias The Forger). Born in 1978, his life of crime quickly spun out of control and, in 1981, he grew a little too smart for his own good and signed his own death warrant.

If none of this rings a bell, you may want to check out a "A Scot Gallery Eccentric: Wry Tales of a Little-Known Realm," recently out from Troy-based Momentum Books. In it. Lathrup Village artist-writer Tom Roy will acquaint you with the above canine luminaries, plus 34 other unsung terrier "heroes."

You may not know exactly what to make of any of it, but chances are, you'll have a great time browsing through the off-the-wall Gallery, anyhow.

Roy, who also draws the zany, single-frame comic, "The Pitts," for the Detroit Free Press, can't quite say why he chose to put together this odd little history featuring Scotch terriers and their mythical realm. No, he's never owned a "Scottie," and he's only just "a smidgen Scotch" himself. About the closest he can come to any explanation for what he calls "The Dogs" is that he always has had a soft spot in his heart "for all things British."

But "A Scot Gallery Eccentric" is not really something you explain, anyway. It's something you experience.

A Detroit-area native, Roy attended the Center for Creative Studies after graduation from Redford Union High School in the late '60s. Following a stint as a freelance illustrator, he owned his own television graphics company for awhile, returned to free lancing, and now, in addition to his off-hours "cartooning," works at a TV graphics firm in Southfield.

'The Pitts" debuted in the Free Press last March. It was an outgrowth of numerous sketchbooks he had put together over the years in his at-home basement studio in Lathrup Village.

"Gallery" also was conceived via the sketchbooks.

"I had 10 or 11 sketchbooks that contained all these tiny, short stories, along with the sketches," says Roy.

When Bill Haney, publisher at Momentum, got a look at the books, he quickly expressed special interest in publishing "The Dogs." After some reworking of the already existing pen-and-ink sketches, plus an addition of two or three new canine characters, 'A Scot Gallery Eccentric" was born.

A few of Roy's terrific terriers and their stories were inspired by "real people," he admits. Most notable of these is probably Fergus McThomson, born in 1945 and still very much alive. An ar-dent jazz fan "born in a rock 'n' roll world," he wrote "the definitive fiction that drove the final nail in the coffin of popular cultural trends. He is modeled on Roy's editor, Tom Ferguson. In the future, we may see other shaggy dog story-pictures from Tom Roy, Or we might see a series on Sherlock Holmes and a comically gluttonous Watson instead. Or the misadventures of a hapless farmer and his strange herd of radioactive cattle. Or something called "Some of My Best Friends Are French.'

For now, though, we can smile at the definitely eccentric "Gallery," Some of the advance publicity for these dogs' tales called them "a breed apart."

That they are. Take a look.

Last words: In honor of Black History Month, Detroit folkloristmusician Naim Abdur Rauf will perform African stories and songs at Borders Book Shop in Novi at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 6. The program is especially for children 4-9. It and will include African musical instruments, dance, and African storytelling techniques. Register in person or call 347-0780.

Michigan historian William Anderson will autograph copies and read from his most recent work, "Laura Ingalls Wilder: A Biography" at Borders Novi at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 27. The program will be of special interest to readers ages 8-12. Preregistration is required.

Winners Symphony crowns top young artists

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

Winners of the Livonia Symphony Orchestra's 15th annual Young Artist Competition took home more than cash prizes Jan. 16-17.

Audition experience, increased self-confidence and the opportunity to perform as guest soloists with the orchestra made participating in the event invaluable.

"That's what the competi-tion is all about — the chance to gain experience in an audition type of setting," said LSO music director/conductor Francesco DiBlasi, one of three judges.

Two first prizes of $1,000 and two second prizes of $500 were awarded in vocal and instrumental categories. The winners were:

first, tenor 🗖 Vocalist 🛛 — Curtis Peters of Redford Township, 27; second, soprano Jennifer Fitch of Ann Arbor, ■ Instrumentalist — first, trombonist Aaron La Vere of Ann Arbor, 24; second, pianist Anthony Bonamici of Livonia, Judges for the 1993 competition beside DiBlasi were LSO concertmistress Julia Kurtyka of Detroit and Madonna University music department chairman John Redmon of Howell.

Participants were judged on technique, musicianship and overall stature as a potential performing artist.

Bonamici and Peters will be guest soloists with the orchestra Feb. 6. Bonamici performing the first movement of Beethoven's "Concerto No. 3.' Peters sings selections by Mendelssohn, Verdi, and Gilbert & Sullivan.

Curtis Peters: First-place vocalist.

Jennifer Fitch: Runnerup vocalist.

Aaron La Vere: First-place instrumentalist.

Anthony Bonamici: Runnerup instrumentalist.

All works, including the student paintings, come from juried shows in which the art presents an image of the world moving from war and violence to peace and justice, says Bristah.

Franchise clashes with personal goals | Environmental

First in a series. Why would a real estate company leave the folds company join? This week, we take a look at Fortune Properties in West Bloomfield, formerly Century 21 Northwestern, as it sets out on its own. Next week, we'll take a look at Century 21 Gold House in Canton, which recently became affiliated with the national real estate firm.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY STAFF WRITER

It was a fruitful relationship; each giving the other the support needed.

Now it's over.

Century 21 Northwestern in West Bloomfield is no more. It is ending its eight-year affiliation with Century 21 and picking up a new moniker — Fortune Properties Realtors.

Ronald Berman, broker/owner of Fortune Properties Realtors, said while the relationship was a successful one, market pressures and personal goals compelled him to start anew.

"I admit that it's very unusuhe said. Affiliated offices al." rarely leave Century 21.

The office, founded in 1984, was one of the most profitable in the state with 35 agents and $35 million in sales in 1992.

As Fortune Properties Realtors,

II 'We chose the name Fortune Properties beof a national group? Why would a Cause we feit it portrayed the attitude, confidence and lifestyle necessary to do business in our market area.'

Ronald Berman

Berman projects sales of $50 million with 50 agents in 1993. Despite the success he enjoyed as a Çentury 21 affiliate, Berman said it was time to move on. "In one respect, it was a question of being stifled personally," he said. To the average person on the street, Berman said, one Century 21 is as good as another. "No one differentiates you from others.'

"If we have a superior idea or come up with a unique marketing idea, they all get the benefit of what I can do," he said.

It is not that there aren't pluses to being associated with the group, he said, but there is also a lot of spare baggage that goes along with being part of a group.

There's also the significance of the Century 21's image. Even though each office is independently owned and operated, they share Century 21's image.

That isn't necessarily bad "if you come from out of town and you're looking for a new house, you turn to the Yellow Pages and what do you see? Century 21."

With its national image comes familiarity, he said. The image also carries an assurance of com-. petency and staff training so people can feel comfortable with the fact that in the average situation, the real estate office will get the job done, correctly and efficiently. In Berman's case, the key words are "average house" and

'average situation.' "The market we serve (West Bloomfield and its area) is not like the average market," he said.

Century 21 Northwestern was consistently among the highest in average sales prices for homes (of Century 21 affiliates). "We were still substantially lower than our competitors."

Century 21 has made a name for itself by being all things to most people, but people who live in the communities he serves aren't all people.

"These are people who have a very sophisticated transaction, and they don't think Century 21 can handle it.

More bluntly, people with houses costing from several hundred thousand to several million dollars — rightly or wrongly — don't feel Century 21 is the Realtor for them, he said.

brought in clients that would have rarely come into his office before.

lost many of the high-end listings to_other_offices. he_said. "We chose the name Fortune Properties because we felt it portrayed the attitude, confidence and lifestyle necessary to do business in our market area."

Since the name change, Berman said he has invested significantly in developing better ways to serve clients and in presentation materials.

The changeover to Fortune Properties Realtors has already produced results. "I've attracted a lot of agents that I wouldn't have otherwise.'

These are people who probably wouldn't have considered working at a Century 21 office, not because there's anything inherently wrong with Century 21, but because of the client base Century 21 attracts — predominantly middle and upper middle class.

"There is a big opportunity in West Bloomfield and we're here to seize it," he said. "Now, there's no reason why we can't do it."

> Depending on the violations. that have been created by your builder, I would immediately determine if they, in fact, constitute a breach not only of the building contract but of the condominium documents. If so, you may have recourse against the builder under your building contract, perhaps including a basis against the builder for not closing. You should consult with an experienced attorney in regard to your various remedies as well as potential liability you may have incurred because of your builder as it relates to the condominium association or other co-owners in the condominium project.

Energy efficient homes

Builder Gary Sabo will conduct a presentation on building affordable energy efficient homes from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Feb. 13, at Oakland Community College's Auburn Hills campus. Sponsored by OCC's Environmental Systems Technology Program, and ENACT, an environmental student association, the program will cover designing, building and financing super-insulated houses. Topics include energy efficient construction techniques, 0 percent down payment options, air quality control, affordable solar energy applications and owner/builder opportunities.

Sabo is president of Future Homes and Parade of Homes-Oakland County. He is past president of the Home Builders Association of Genesee County. He is a four-time recipient of the national "Design for Better Living" award from the American Wood Council.

For more information, call 340-6701. The campus is located at 2900 Featherstone, two miles east of the Pontiac Silverdome.

Additional pride: This historic Birmingham house was made more livable by the additon of a kitchen and laundry room on the east end of the house. The other addition was added to the back of the house and and includes the master bedroom. The sloping grade allowed for a garage beneath the addition.

Integrity preserved in more livable homes

During lackluster economic times, builders often turn their attention away from new construction and toward remodeling. But the secret of successful remodeling is to leave the house looking much as it did before the contractor arrived at the site.

from a wide range of office space available for rock-bottom rents. New housing construction is struggling my, one of the industries to feel the thanks to uncertain employment, weak income gains and falling consumer confidence.

> As new construction becomes more costly, prospective buyers are considering other alternatives. They are looking at more affordable, older houses in established neighborhoods that have the amenities of in-town living.

The two million-plus houses started each year of the 1970s are now 20 years old and ready for a facelift. Add to this the houses built in previous decades. Some of the these houses have the added problem of small rooms that satisfied an earlier lifestyle. Today's domestic dweller has a penchant for space that can be satisfied by building additions on to older houses.

More livable

Two houses in Birmingham are a visual testament to the feasibility of making an older house more livable with additions. What is particularly unique about these two houses is that they represent two centuries — one of the late 19th, the other the middle of the 20th.

One is in downtown Birmingham. It is a simple, frame structure with gable ends built in 1898. The other is Georgian-style colonial in Bloomfield Village built in the 1960s. Both have new additions that complement the original structure. Thanks to the care in maintaining the integrity of automates appliances in home

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Smart House, which uses special wiring to automate household appliances and fixtures, has been hailed as technology of the future.

Intelli/Systems, a fledgling Plymouth firm, provides many of the same services today with computer-programmed system controllers that communicate with adaptive "intelligent" switches over traditional 110 and 220 amp electrical lines.

And all at a much lower price than Smart House, say Larry Oliver and Nancy Austin, a husband-wife team that owns Intelli/Systems.

'We're not changing house wiring. We're adding functionality," he said. "We're putting a high frequency on house wire and switches that can decode and understand."

Oliver, 'a development engineer at Unisys, is in charge of the technical end of Intelli/Systems, a business sideline for now.

Austin, a former real estate saleswoman, is in charge of marketing and public relations.

'Nobody has to have the house rewired," she said. "That's the good thing about it. You can retrofit new or old.

"We hope to be automating a builder's model," Austin added. "The builder will benefit by making a model more attractive and you (customer) will benefit because there will be a keener interest in how it works."

Controllers programmed to specific automated functions are plugged into electric outlets to bring the system on-line. Controllers can be activited by remote control, telephone lines or 'intelligent" electrical switches.

Oliver and Austin have spent upwards of $5.000 to automate their house for demonstration purposes. That includes controllers, transceivers, switches and remote controls.

Their system can program a furnace thermostat attachment, dishwasher, home entertainment equipment and all lights to kick on and off at specific times. Appliances like vacuum cleaners and hair dryers can be programmed to shut off when the phone or doorbell rings.

"When guests leave, I push one button and light the front porch, the back porch and light their way through the living room," Austin said. "It's programmed so in five minutes; the outdoor lights go off by themselves.

"I have a button at my bedside that can turn on every light in the house,' she said of a security feature.

the owners were spared the comments, "I see you've put a new addition on your house," which immediately says that the addition doesn't fit.

The owners of the Birmingham house fell in love with its domestic charm and simplicity, but they needed more room. They enlisted Birmingham architect Victor Saroki to design an addition that almost doubled the living space. The house has an east-west orientation with additions added to each end. A flat roof, one-story addition containing a kitchen and laundry room was put on the east end of the house. This low-profile approach made the addition.compatible with the neighborhood.

The west side of the house has a gable end that overlooks a natural sloping site. The other addition was added to the back of the house and repeats the same gable motif as the original without obstructing it. This addition includes the master bedroom. The sloping grade allowed for a garage beneath the addition, which can be entered on the side.

Compatibility

Because the house is designated as a historic structure, great care was taken to make the additions compatible. Particular attention was given to the decorative wood brackets in the gable of the primary structure that was' duplicated for the gable of the west side addition. These additions can be viewed as kindred spirits on the outside that provide all the modern amenities on the inside.

The Bloomfield Village house is a gracious two-story brick Georgian-style colonial. It presented a problem to the new owners who needed additional space.

The matter was resolved by adding 1,100 square feet to the origi-nal 3,100. While expanding the space on the interior, the exterior of the house has an added profile. The additions were built by Herbert Conlan, a custom home builder, and designed by Gerald Carter of Custom Home Designs. Here the builder has dovetailed new construction that successfully makes it a visual extension of the original structure.

This house has a north-south axis with the central entrance facing east. The additions were placed on the south and west sides of the house. As with some older houses; the bedrooms were too small. A four-foot brick wall extension was placed on the south end of the second floor to expand the bedroom there.

Brick quoining, which is a corner detail, is repeated in the addition, making it compatible with the original detail on the house. A master bedroom was added to the south end of the house, which also repeats the brick quoining on the exterior corners. The shallow hip roof over the master bedroom visually extends the roof of the living room when viewed from the east.

A conservatory, with windows on three sides, was added to a family room on the west side, or back, of the house. The windows open out onto the yard, taking advantage of the view and western exposure. The gable end of the conservatory repeats the gable over the den with an added bay window, and part of the original bedroom or enlarged master. When viewed from the west side, it's almost impossible to tell where the original house ends and the two added wings begin.

Living space boosted: This Bloomfield Village house, a two-story brick Georgian-style colonial, received an addition of 1,100 square feet to the original 3,100. The central entrance faces east (top). The additions were placed on the south and west sides of the house (bottom). A four-foot brick wall extension was placed on the south end of the second floor to expand the bedroom there. A master bedroom was added to the south end of the house, and a conservatory, with windows on three sides, was added to a family room on the west side, or back, of the house.

Reduce noise, stress levels by decorating

(AP) — Garbage truck or lawn mower, a neighbor's TV or your kids' stereo, the hum of an airconditioner or clothes dryer. It's a noisy world. But if you feather your nest just so, you can live in relative tranquility.

The goal is to stop the offending sound as close to the source as possible, says designer Nina Hughes.

If the noise is coming from the next room, the goal is to contain. it, she says. When the din is outdoors, then windows, doors and exterior walls are the main points of defense.

Hughes sometimes builds a room within a room by erecting walls an inch or so from existing walls. It's the air space between the walls, rather than the new wall, that creates the sound barrier. It works to keep sound in as well as to keep sound out, so she recommends it for musicians who must practice many hours.

To cut down on outdoor noises, consider storm windows and sound-absorbing draperies. The more layers you use, the more the incoming sound will be muffled, says Richard Harary, owner of Richard's Interior Design in Greenwich, Conn.

He suggests extending decoraand roman shades. The linings, available to home sewers and in custom window treatments, include a synthetic material by flannel interlining, about $9 a yard.

If window dressing isn't enough, consider upholstering the wall. Usually, Hughes says, a layer of Dacron or cotton batting goes next to the wall with a face fabric stretched over it and tacked to wood furring strips. The fabric should be woven loosely enough to allow sound waves to get through. The batting keeps them from bouncing back into the room.

While far from cheap, fabriccovered walls are competitive in cost with traditional wallcover. ings in medium and better grades, Harary says. The treatment is also decorative. Harary finds it's particularly effective both visualand accoustically for the wall behind the bed.

If even the littlest noise seems to reverberate in your living tioners in or near the room. Minimize noise with sound-absorbing materials such as carpet and area rugs and fabric window coverings. If that's not enough, Hughes says, consider upholster-ing walls, building a buffer wall or repainting ceiling and walls with textured paint filled with tiny particles that trap sound. A suspended ceiling of acoustical tile is another option, though the look is more suited to utility area than living areas.

Wood paneling might deaden outside sounds if you leave air space or add insulation between the paneling and the wall, Sam Botero, a New York designer, says.

But Botero is a firm believer in carpet. In one apartment, Botero cut down the noise from a child's room by carpeting the floor, a wall and a platform which held the bed.

For a teenage drummer's room, he carpeted the floor and put the drums on a carpeted platform. The platform cut down the vibrations traveling along the floorboards to other rooms. He also added a dropped acoustical tile ceiling as a courtesy to upstairs neighbors.

Control noise or it controls you Kenneth Roy, an acoustics researcher at Armstrong World Industries in Lancaster, Pa.

'But your body receives it, and there's a stress reaction," he says. So other remedies are in order.

How much noise is too much depends on what you are doing, whether you like the sound and the noise level to which you're accustomed. A noise unnoticeable in the middle of the afternoon will be annoying in the middle of the night.

Noise is measured on a decibel

(AP) — You can learn to tune the absence of sound, to about noise out of your mind, says Dr. 120 db equal to a 747 jet taking off. Most people are comfortable up to about 65 decibels, with quiet registered at 40 decibels. To sleep, 30 or below is considered within the comfort zone. In the home, major sources of unwanted noise are appliances, television, sound system, shouting and rowdy play. To ideally deal with the first, replace older dishwashers, refrigerators and clothes washers. Newer appli-ances have an acoustical barrier such as a sound absorbing material built in. Buy a white noise (db) scale which goes from zero, or machine or use a small fan near the bed or desk to mask sounds from other rooms, such as television or conversation.

Most sound comes into the house through windows and gaps in doors. Weatherstripping is a first step. Give it a try with masking tape. If the noise level goes down, install weatherstripping and a plastic or rubber strip that fits between the bottom of the door and the door sill. Weatherstrip windows.

More expensive remedies include replacing hollowcore doors with solid doors and single-pane windows with double-pane glass or storm windows.

Fabric softeners: Drapes on the window and carpeting on a hardwood floor help muffle the sounds that invade this bedroom.

luxury touches

A large workshop, separate from the garage, is included in the floorplan of the Legacy 2, a compact single-level home with a country style front porch.

Economical to build, this home is well suited to the needs of first-time buyers, singles or empty nesters. And it can be adapted for wheelchair adaptability.

Family living areas are at the front, bed-coms at the back. Valuted ceilings give a sense of spaciousness to the living room, entryway and dining room. The living room also has a door that opens to a small deck. The house has three bathrooms.

Counter space in the kitchen is augmented by a work island with built-in range and oven. Other features include a walk-in pantry, broom closet and built-in dishwasher. Sink and dishwasher are nestled into a bay window that faces the street.

For a study plan of the Legacy 2 (332-131), send $7.50 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Ore., including the plan name and number.

Austin also programs her dishwasher to operate while she's sleeping, bedroom lights and a clock radio to flick on in the early morning hours for a gentle wakeup, and lights in the family room to dim for specific moods.

Their $5,000 expenditure for the entire package wouldn't even cover special wiring in a Smart House.

But Smart House can integrate an entire home, not just bits and pieces, said Donald Pratt, a Troy builder who holds rights to that technology for this area.

Austin and Oliver would first meet prospective clients in their houses to determine interest and needs, then invite them to their Plymouth home for a demonstration.

Prospects include people who want to upgrade their existing houses, and purchasers of new houses who want to automate without the Smart House expense.

Oliver will program controllers to specific requirements and install "intelligent" switches needed to relay commands. Heavyduty modifications like more wiring and outlets would involve a subcontractor.

"When a customer orders, we want about 50 percent as a downpayment," he said. "When we go out to install, set it up and every thing is satisfactory, we ask for an additional 40 percent. We leave 10 percent out there.

"We want the customer to use it two weeks or a month. They might want, something different. The final payment depends on what additions they want. We expect customers to change their mind on how they want to operate. Everyone's lifestyle is different.'

hank Queen Victoria for the traditional white wedding dress. She wore white for her wedding in 1840 and began a trend that continues to this day.

Express

Other returning trends include body-conscious satin gowns of the '30s and tailored dresses of the '40s, Copley News Service reports. Within this backdrop, the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers today unveils Expressions of Love, our annual winter bridal fashion supplement.

We serve up a trendy look at fashion styles that promises to help make tying the knot memorable.

On the Cover: A vision of enchanted beauty on her most memorable day. The classic A-line silhouette gown by the house of Bianchi is the essence of what bridal dreams are made of. Decorative beading accents the garden of Alencon lace bodice. Scallops open the front and back neckline and jeweled bowed cap sleeves. The full skirt and train in polished taffeta echo the soft romance of the rites of spring with a delicate lace garland border. At Pollak's Bridal, West Bloomfield. Rites of spring: A tribute to spring in radiant white. Open ballerina decolletage in scrolls and florals of Venice lace and shoulder-baring short sleeves are embellished with the same enduring beauty. Falling leaves and flowers of bead work move through the bodice. A splendor of polished taffeta and the generous bustle bow that captures the chapel train after the ceremony will make for an unforgettable exit as well. At Alvin's Bride, Birmingham.

When dreams comes true: Follow your heart in elegant style. A graceful sheer bodice and sleeves embellished with pearls and beaded leaf applique illustrates a rhapsody of love. The full, beaded, princessbride organza skirt is lavished with bugle beads and pearls. At Lina's Bridal, Plymouth.

How do I select thee: Let me count the ways

Doubt thou the stars are fire; Doubt that the sun doth move; Doubt truth to be a liar; But never doubt I love.

— William Shakespeare

The ring's on your finger, the date is set and you have just returned home toting three spring bridal fashion magazines that weigh 40 pounds each. (You're off to a great start). The pages are filled with bridal splendor ranging from short and chic to Renaissance drama hauling 20-foot cathedral trains. If Shakespeare could just take that "doubt" out of coloring the right brid

"doubt" out of selecting the right bridal gown . . . shopping would not be such sweet sorrow. Bridal gowns are like potato chips —

Bridal gowns are like potato chips how can you have just one? They solved that problem in Japan. Brides traditionally don three wedding ensembles on the day they take their wedding vows. But unless you're serving sushi, there should be only one wedding gown in your bridal dreams.

After contacting local bridal experts, it was determined there are four important "W" factors to consider when selecting your bridal attire. Look at your waist, wallet, wedding plans and what's hot before making your wedding gown decision.

Waist

Janice Hayes, Jacobson's public relations director, suggests "anything goes for bridal...it's whatever a bride envisions herself wearing.

"What's most important is that the gown feel comfortable and be easy to move and dance in. It should not be too low cut, too tight or too much off the shoulder," Hayes said.

Hayes suggested paying close attention to figure type. To ensure a beautiful silhouette, buy a dress that's fully lined. "If a girl's short-waisted . . . elongate the waist with a drop-waist gown. If top heavy, focus details on the skirt."

The bottom line: enhance your best qualities and disguise problem areas. Ask a bridal selon consultant to make suggestions for your particular body type.

"Once you determine the neckline and waistline, the rest will fall into place," says Jeanine Brown, co-owner of Every Bride and Mother, Birmingham.

Another body tip: select a dramatic neckline to draw the eye upward and away from the hips. And don't forget proper undergarments and shoes to enhance your best features and camouflage figure flaws. A Cinderella fairy tale: Right, Tales of love and romance reveal magical enchantment in a Vera Wang off-the-shoulder gown with silk satin bodice accented with rosettes and tulle. The dramatic full fairy tale tulle skirt is a vision of timeless beauty. At Hudson's Northland, Southfield.

"Don't buy a dress for the name," says Nanci Hyman of Lina's Bridal Salon in Plymouth. "Look for a quality-made gown in fine fabrics."

"Stay within your budget and take in photos from magazines (and local newspapers)," says Brown at Every Bride and Mother. "This will help the bridal salon find the look you want at a price you can afford."

Wedding plans

Are you planning a formal daytime, formal evening, semiformal or informal affair? Your gown should match the time and location of your day. Don't forget to consider your personality type: romantic, classic, sophisticated, avant garde? Wedding size, location and previous marriages are all determining factors when selecting the style of your bridal attire.

What's hot

"Our brides are opting for simpler, elegant gowns with less bead work and more detail," says Laura Rubin, director at Alvin's Bridal in Birmingam.

Looks to watch for, she says, are portrait collars, tulle, sheaths, silk shantung and longer veils with lace and subtle beading.

"Off the shoulder, lots of A-lines, simpler lines and Juliet caps are what young brides are asking for at Lina's Bridal," Hyman says. "Some trends are even reminiscent of the '60s with modified umpire waistlines."

"Overall trends...less is more," says Hayes of Jacobson's. "A little beading, a little lace, off the shoulder, brocades are popular and what's really new is short with long over-skirts. It's the best of both worlds and can be worn for other occasions."

Reflections of individual style and the myriad of stylish gowns available will give the '90s bride multioptions when making that final decision of her expression of love. Remember W-4 (waist, wallet, wedding plans and what's hot).

Doubt thou the stars are fire; Doubt that the road doth wind Doubt truth to be a liar; But never doubt the perfect gown you will find.

Imagine the fantasy: Express your fantasy in a silk-faced satin mini with detachable. floor-length tulle skirt. The minisheath of Venice lace is adorned with pearls and rhinestones and off-theshoulder satin rosette bow sleeves. The Ron Lo-Vece gown displays a removable full tulle skirt with Venice lace and is trimmed with a satin rosette bow at waist. At Jacobson's.

Your Taste is Impeccable... Ours is Unforgettable!

Traditionally, Wedding Cakes have been nice to look at but nothing special to eat. Our Wedding Cakes put an end to that!

Tantalize your guests with flavors such as chocolate mousse, strawberry, kahlua, lemon, chocolate chambord torte, or one of our many cheesecake flavors.

Our Wedding Cakes are made from the finest chocolates, butter, fresh fruits and creams. To enhance the subtle flavors, we frost your selections with lightly sweetened fresh whipping cream.

We extend an invitation to the bride and groom to make an appointment for a private wedding consultation and complimentary sample tasting.

Traditions of royalty: Stepping over the threshold of love in the romantic traditional design of Alfred Angelo. Elaborate full Juliet sleeves taper to the wrist while the fitted bodice floats into the full magestic pale pink brocade skirt with fluid chapel train. A vision her Romeo will never forget.
