Teen charged in friend's death

A teenager will be prosecuted in the shooting death of a longtime friend three months ago. Danny Haas faces two charges in the tragedy.

By DARRELL CLEM

A 15-year-old boy faces criminal charges in the shooting death of 15-year-old Robert MacMain, a Westland boy who died April 11 after he was shot in the face with a .50-caliber black-powder rifle.

Danny Haas, a longtime friend and former neighbor of MacMain, faces trial on a charge of intentionally alming a firearm without malice, which is a form of manslaughter, said Tom Doetsch, a juvenile prosecutor handling the case.

Haas also faces a felony firearms charge. He will be tried as a juvenile and could be placed in juvenile facilities until age 19 if convicted, Doetsch

The prosecutor did not immediately know when Haas is to be tried. The boy is in his parents' custody, pend-

MacMain was shot to death at his home on Easter Sunday after Haas picked up a rifle that MacMain and his father, Bill MacMain, built together, police have said. The boys hadn't argued, but had been playing around when MacMain was shot in the face about 12:30 p.m. in the 8200 block of Fremont, near Middlebelt and Ann Arbor Trail, police said.

MacMain was a freshman at Livonia Franklin High School, which serves the northeast section of Westland, at the time of his death. He had been talking on the telephone and was resting on his brother's bed when his visiting friend came in the door, police said.

"They were goofing off," Detective Sgt. Russell Nowaczck told the Observer.

Seconds later, a shot rang through the house, and Robert's 19-year-old brother, William, ran into the bed-

Schools chief: Administrative costs down

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Wayne-Westland school district administrative costs have dropped $300,000 in two years, despite public claims to the contrary, Superintendent Larry Thomas said Monday.

Wayne-Westland ranks 33rd among 34 districts in Wayne County in administrative costs, he said.

His comments came in the wake of public criticism he has received for an administrative reorganization. Some residents have criticized Thomas for beefing up his cabinet amid a budget crisis that has devastated many student programs

Thomas conceded that he has expanded his cabinet from five members to eight, but noted that there are now fewer people in lower administrative positions such as department directors.

Five positions amounting to $300,000 have been cut from the 1991-92 level, leaving fewer administrators overall in jobs ranging from assistant principal to the cabinet, Thomas said.

At Monday night's school board meeting, Thomas indicated that ranking 33rd in the county in administrative costs shouldn't necessarily be seen as commendable. Some school programs may not receive the attention they need, he said.

"I'm not sure that's something we should really be that proud of," he said

Some residents have previously questioned the county rankings, suggesting that the statistics may be dis-

But Thomas said the district will remain near the bottom in rankings and save $300,000 even after several vacant administrative posts are filled, ranging from assistant principal to executive director of elementary education.

Among those positions are two elementary principal jobs that have been saved from the budget cuts. School officials had planned to save money by having four elementary schools share two principals.

But concerns about leaving students and employees unsupervised have prompted officials to back down.

Elliott and Fischer elementary schools had been scheduled to share a principal, as had Taft-Galloway and Vandenberg, but that plan has been

Livonia board earmarks tax hike request for sports

By Marie Chestney Staff Writer

The average Westland homeowner in the Livonia school district will pay an extra $40 a year in property taxes if voters on Aug. 30 approve Livonia Public Schools' first-ever earmarked millage.

On that day, residents will be asked to approve a one-mill, three-year property tax hike that will restore high and middle school athletics and extracurricular activities. These programs have been chopped from next year's school budget.

The tax impact is based on a home valued at $80,000 with a state equalized valuation of $40,000. One mill is $1 per $1,000 SEV.

The Wayne County Election

Scheduling Committee approved the school board's informal request to hold the special election in six weeks. Committee members waived a rule which prohibits an election from taking place within 30 days of a regularly scheduled election, in this case, the Sept. 14 primary election.

By a 6-1 vote, the school board is expected to officially call for the special election next Monday.

In committee meetings, trustee Joe Laura has opposed the election, saying it should be postponed until later in the year, when the district knows for sure which state aid bill is passed by the Michigan Legislature and the amount of financial losses, if any, the district faces in the coming months.

On June 24, by a 2-3 vote and with two trustees absent, the trustees couldn't muster enough votes to put a 2-mill tax increase on the Aug. 2 ballot. Opposing the election at that time were Laura, Ken Timmons and Richard McKnight.

Moving north

Marilyn Zeigler, Westland Center's assistant general manager, is leaving this week to assume the same duties Monday at the larger Northland Center, Southfield. Zeigler joined the Westland Center staff in 1980 as a security guard, moving up through the ranks to operations manager in 1989 and her current position last year. She will continue to be project manager for the Fairlane Meadows atrip mail in Dearborn.

New graduates

Six Westland seniors received their degrees last month from Oakland Community College. They are: Lesli Bailey, Beth Bejma, Leo Evans, Suzan Foy, Joseph Mosquera and Margaret Sanchez. At Kalamazoo College, Jeffrey Horne, son of Christine Horne of Westland and Richard Horne of Plymouth recently received his bachelor's degree. Horne, who majored in business and business administration, attended Franklin High School before entering Kalamazoo College. For his senior year individualized project, he did research on the appeal of mutual funds to investors during the 1990s. He also studied in Spain as part of the achool's foreign study program. Earmarking wise?

Monday's debate by the trustees centered on whether the district should specify on the ballot how the one mill, expected to generate about $2.9 million, should be spent.

The trustees said the tax request had a better chance of passing if it was earmarked for specific programs and couldn't be spent on salaries or benefits.

But trustee Pat Tancill argued that the district should have flexibility in how the money will be

"What happens if the state comes in and decimates every-thing?" she asked. "Does that mean we'll have sports, but have to eliminate the sixth hour?"

Other trustees argued that one way to get around today's distrustful voter is to spell out specifically how the extra millage will be spent.

'We must tell the people we will fully fund athletics and activities and if we get raided, athletics and activities take precedent and must stay, legally," said trustee Sue Clulow. "If we get raided and have to go back to five hours, we can always come back with another designated millage to restore the sixth hour."

How the money will be spent should be specified so that future boards can't spend it elsewhere, said board president James Watters.

Tancill's view - more flexibili-- would prevail if the district didn't have to deal with the present "nobody-trusts-nobody" situation, said trustee Richard McKnight.

Timmons earlier had opposed asking residents for more money until school employees made wage or benefit concessions.

Making the millage a designated one helped him change his mind, he said.

"The LEA (teachers' union) won't do anything until a millage fails," Timmons said.

The fact that the board isn't unanimous in its quest for more tax money may keep it from passing, he said.

In fact, in the earlier June 21 millage vote, McKnight voted against holding the Aug. 2 election because the board was not unanimous.

On Tuesday, McKnight said he backed this second miliage request because the board "is more unified" than it was in the earlier 3-2 vote. "My fondest wish is that we could Laura otherwise." Has opposition

Laura gave these reasons for opposing the millage:

The district doesn't really know its exact financial situation until the state passes this fiscal year's school aid bill. Passage might not come until September. The district has not yet received concessions from its employees.

Even if the millage is passed, the district can't say for sure whether, under the "Robin Hood" concept, the money will stay in Livonia.

"We should wait until we have all the pieces of the puzzle," Laura said. "Without all the pieces, the chances of this passing are minimal."

room to find the wounded 15year-old bleeding.

William MacMain called 911. but Robert was dead when rescue personnel arrived. Police have said there were no drugs or alcohol involved.

The slain boy was known to be proud of his ROTC uniform, and he often polished the buttons on it. He wanted to join the U.S. Air Force after high school, and he had dreamed of eventually becoming a state police officer, his father said.

He had earned A's and B's at school and had a lot of friends, his father said. He also liked to work on cars.

The boy knew about guns because his father, a former police officer in Minnesota, used to take him hunting. But safety was always stressed, the father told the Observer in April.

The black-powder rifle that father and son made together was usually unloaded, and the father had voiced initial shock that it was loaded.

But Robert McMain had been frightened by a former neighbor who, according to Bill Mac-Main, had threatened to kill him. After his son's death, Bill McMain also found a large knife under his pillow, one under his bed and a set of tire irons nearby.

District cooperation steps praised

Seeking to ease tense relations between his administration and school employee unions, Wayne-Westland Superintendent Larry Thomas has announced measures to foster a more cooperative spirit in a district scarred by political Extending a conciliatory hand, Thomas has invited the presidents of the district's seven employee unions to meet monthly with the superintendent's toplevel cabinet members to discuss issues.

Thomas has repeatedly dismissed the rumors and, at one point, accused his critics of trying to derail his superintendency. He also has indicated that some problems stemmed from employee fear and uncertainty about new leadership in the 16,500-student

The principals' union became so fearful of the alleged "hit list" that it demanded a copy and filed a complaint with the Michigan Employment Relations Commission. A ruling is still pending in

By including union leaders in cabinet meetings, Thomas has sent a signal that he wants a cooperative spirit among employee groups and his administration during the second year of his three-year contract.

Some unions, particularly the WWEA, have come under fire in recent years for receiving salary increases that some district residents and school board members considered exorbitant. Teachers this year are receiving a 5 percent pay raise despite a $14-million budget shortfall that has devastated many school programs.

On Monday, district resident Patrick Collins voiced deep concerns about a recent newspaper article noting that Reece's salary is paid by the district even though, as WWEA president, Reece is on an extended leave from his teaching duties.

"That's absurd," Collins said. But teachers have had their allies, too. Some residents and board members have noted that comparable salaries must be paid to attract and retain top-notch educators

Man charged in sex assault on impaired woman

By DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A Westland man has been charged with sexually molesting a mentally impaired female relative, police said.

Sterling "Steve" Reimann, 50, faces three charges of third-degree criminal sexual conduct. He is accused of sexually molested the 45-year-old woman in May and June, Westland police Sgt. Laura Moore said Tuesday.

The mildiy impaired woman had been living with Reimann, his wife and their son at their Westland residence, Moore sald. To protect the woman, Moore did not want to reveal Reimann's specific relation to the woman or the street where the alleged incidents occurred.

Two of the charges stem from allegations of oral sex, and one stems from an allegation of intercourse, Moore said. The woman has since left Reimann's home.

Westland police were told of the alleged incidents after the woman reported them to a government agency worker that she knew, Moore said. The woman knew the worker through a class or counseling session that she attended, Moore sald.

Reimann was arrested and charged Tuesday after he voluntarily turned himself in at the police department. He was arraigned on the charges Tuesday before 18th District Judge Gail McKnight, Moore said.

A plea of not guilty was entered for Reimann, and he was released from custody on a $10,000 personal bond. McKnight has ordered him to have no contact with the woman he is accused of molest-

Reimann has been scheduled for a preliminary examination July 23 to determine if he should stand trial on the charges, Moore said. He could face a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison if convicted.

State program challenges teens, showcases Madonna

Some 100 high school students are trading two weeks of summer vacation for an early college expe-

The students, including five from the Observer area, are participating in the Michigan State Board of Education Summer Institute for the Arts and Sciences at Madonna University.

All students applied

Local teens are Philip Szornyi of Westland, Kiran Chaudhri of Livonia, Kathleen Sullivan of Plymouth, Robert McClain of Canton Township and Larry Rouse of Garden City.

The Madonna location is one of 10 being offered throughout the state. Some 800 students statewide, ages 15-17, are participating in institutes. More than 1,200 applied to the program. Other locations include Michigan Technological University, Northern Michigan University, Lake Superior State University, Delta College, Alma College, Western Michigan University, Olivet College, Eastern Michigan University and Adrian College.

The theme of this year's institute, the first one to be held at Madonna, is "Changing Worlds/ Changing Selves: The Arts and Sciences Guide Us From the Past to Future." Courses offered include printmaking, video, architecture, film study, sign language, Japanese, genetics, ecology, sociology/anthropology and political science.

Future approach

The institute takes a futuristic approach, identifying trends and forecasting what the future will be like over the next 100 years.

Students have selected a main study program called an "intensive" which meets for 21/2 hours each weekday. Other exploratory courses in classical music, storytelling, art, music, leadership and science are available for another two hours each day. Also included in the two-week program are peer group sessions, field trips, sports and free time.

A state grant pays for the majority of expenses. Students, who are housed in the Madonna residence hall, had to pay $200 for the two-week session.

Students arrived Sunday and the local teens agreed that so far it's been an interesting and challenging experience. The local contingent said the challenge and variety of classes and a chance to meet other teenagers from across the state are major benefits of the program.

The local students said if they weren't studying they'd be "working," "sitting home" "playing tennis" or "volunteering."

Philip Szornyi of Westland John Glenn High School selected "Great Lakes Water Anaylsis" for intensive study. He says "it's great and we've got a great teacher." In addition to classroom

Squeezed by suit, Engler turns over accident data

By Tim Richard Staff Writer

State Sen. William Faust has pried out some of the Accident Fund facts he was seeking from Gov. John Engler's administration.

The Labor Department gave Faust, D-Westland, access to a list of the Accident Fund's 34,000 policy holders shortly before Faust's suit was to be heard July 7 in Ingham Circuit Court. Faust sued under the state Freedom of Information Act.

Their decision to give us the List on the eve of the court hearing eads me to believe that they knew we were right all along, said Faust, "and that they would be ordered to give us the list by

"I am glad they decided to share with legislators the information that has apparently already been given to potential bidders for the fund.'

Faust still is suing Insurance Commissioner David Dykhouse under FOIA for access to an accounting firm's analysis of Accident Fund assets. A hearing on that suit is scheduled for July 21.

A Senate Democratic aide said Faust is paying for the suits himself. If successful, Faust could ask that the administration pay his

Take The Next Step At Wayne State University.

If you are ready to take that next step toward earning your four-year degree, we are ready for you.

Last year approximately 5,000 students transferred to WSU from some 500 community colleges and four-year schools across the country. Some of the reasons students come to Wayne State:

- Strength of our academic programs — international reputation

SENATE

Economic Plan squeaks through: By a vote of 50-49, the Senate approved the mechanics of a plan by President Clinton and Democratic leaders in Congress to use massive tax hikes.

spending slow-downs and entitlement curbs to lower budget deficits over the next five. Vice President Al Gore's tie-breaking vote sent the fiscal overhaul (S 1134) to conference with the House.

This bill and related measures would slow national debt growth by $500 billion but allow red ink to expand by $1 trillion, to more than $5 trillion by fiscal 1998. The bill restrains Medicare spending by $60 billion and sets the stage for more than $150 billion in additional savings from lower debt service and discretionary spending curbs Congress is to put on individual appropriations bills.

The bill increases the federal gasoline tax from 14.1 cents to 18.4 cents per gallon and hikes taxes on Social Security payments to singles eaming more than $32,000 and couples above $40,000. It raises income tax rates for singles above $115,000

A yes vote was to pass the bill. Michigan Sens. Carl Levin, D, voted yes and Donald Riegie, D, voted yes.

Gas tax increase OK'd: By a vote of 50 for and 48 against. the Senate preserved the 4.3 cents-per-gallon increase in the federal tax on gasoline and diesel fuel, designed to raise $22.7 billion over five years. The vote during debate on S 1134 (above) tabled an amendment against the tax

"There would be more people from Oakland County here," Patterson claimed, "but all my friends are in church, Ed."

Retorted McNamara, "They probably need it more than my friends."

Commenting on the program, broadcast at 12:30 p.m. Sunday, Patterson noted that there were a few delays at the July 8 taping. "We had three false starts because Ed couldn't get his lines right."

Said McNamara, "I had the privilege of cutting

After pointing out every family member in attendance, McNamara went on to say, "I introduced my wife of 45 years as Lucille Martin last week. The memory goes second."

Introducing a black man, McNamara put his arm around the guy and said, "I've got a lot of explaining to do about my cousin here."

The party, paid for by Patterson's officeholder expense fund, attracted about 200 fans, but most of them rooted for McNamara, a resident of nearby

awmakers OK 'informed consent' abortion law

By Tim Richard Staff Writer

Both pro life and pro choice sides lost ground as the Michigan Legislature this week wrapped up the "informed consent" abortion law and sent it to Gov. John Engler's desk.

The law won't take effect until about April 1, 1994, because neither chamber could muster a twothirds majority to give it immedi-

"Right to Life was forced to compromise," Sen. Lana Pollack. D.Ann Arbor, a bitter foe of the bill, said Tuesday as the Senate concurred in House amendments. Pollack referred to a provision requiring a woman seeking an abortion to look only at drawings of fetuses rather than color photographs, as originally proposed.

Pollack also noted that House support for restrictions on abortion had shrunk from 72 votes in the Medicaid funding arguments of the mid 1980s to 62 votes on the latest bill.

But Pollack lost ground, too. Her efforts at softening the hill used to get nine to 12 votes. Tuesday she could muster only three votes as she tried vainly to re-

First Step wins United Way grant

The United Way for Southeastern Michigan recently awarded grants totalling $450,000 to 14 area agencies, including First Step of Westland and the Poverty and Social Reform Institute of Farmington Hills.

First Step, an agency that aids victims of domestic violence, received a $45,000 grant. The Povorty and Social Reform Institute got a $15,000 grant. The funds are the result of the success of the 1992 Torch Drive, which raised $57.8 million in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. More than 170 funding quests were received by the United Way totalling $9.5 million. move a sentence saying abortion had bad psychological effects on women.

How Senate voted

The final Senate vote was 25 to 5 with eight members absent.

Area members voting yes: Republicans Michael Bouchard of Birmingham, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, Robert Geake of Northville, David Honigman of West Bloomfield, and Democrat George Z. Hart of Dearborn.

Missing the vote were Democrats William Faust of Westland and Jack Faxon of Farmington Hills.

After Pollack labelled the law

"insulting and intrusive" and accused male senators of being "concerned only about controlling and punishing women," sponsor Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, replied:

'We had much testimony that women weren't appropriately informed (by abortion clinics). Ninety percent who had had abortions said they didn't know the doctor's name. This bill reflects directly the testimony.

"This will not stop abortion," said Welborn, "but it's a step in the right direction of giving women a right to know.

Replying more directly to Pollack, Sen. Joanne Emmons, R-Big Rapids, blamed "irresponsible men" for "harrassing" pregnant women into obtaining abortions. The informed consent bill requires a 24-hour waiting period and the presenting of much information to a woman seeking an abortion. It's the Step 3 in Right to Life's

Millage bid

Board must seek other options

he Livonia Public Schools, which serves the northern section of Westland, is joining the list of school districts with serious money problems. Until two years ago, there was a distinct caste system in Michigan schools.

The low-valuation districts, such as the Inksters, Wayne-Westlands and Garden Cities of Michigan, were dependent on state support to balance their budgets. High valuation districts, such as the Livonias, Southfields and Birminghams, didn't qualify for state enrollment subsidies. But they collected all of the property tax revenues generated by new developments.

Based on several major state policy changes. started under Gov. James Blanchard and continued by successor John Engler, monies were taken from the rich districts and redistributed to poor districts. It was commonly called the "Robin Hood" approach to school financing.

Generally, the poor districts were happy, but the rich districts screamed bloody murder. The governor and state Legislature, however, were happy because they didn't have to raise the state income tax rate or ask voters for a state sales tax increase.

But now the chickens are coming home to

With no resolution to the school financing problem, homeowners in all districts are upset.

The latest example surfaced last week when the Livonia school board whacked nearly $9 million from the new fiscal year's budget and virtually wiped out its entire surplus, which reached nearly $10 million several years ago.

At the same time, the board tentatively set Monday, Aug. 30, for a millage rate increase election date.

The tax rate request, which the board is expected to make final Monday, would be 1 mill over three years, which would raise about $2.9 million per year. It would be the first earmarked-millage proposal in the district's history. If approved, it would maintain sports, extracurricular activities and the secondary schools' sixth hour.

What makes the upcoming millage vote unusual is that the board and administration haven't pursued other options - such as asking employee unions to give up all or part of a scheduled pay raise. Neighboring districts, such as Garden City, have gone that route and gained voters' approval of a tax rate increase last month. That followed two unsuccessful tax votes last year.

Livonia school board members must realize something that's been a political reality for a long time - most homeowners don't have children in school and aren't losing sleep over the dropping of sports or other non-academic pro-

Most residents merely want to control their property taxes and let the public officials worry how to maintain public services with little or no new revenues.

Homeowners have sacrified financially for many years. Now it's time for others, like those who are paid with public tax dollars, to do the ith the recent attack on Iraq, President Clinton, following in the footsteps of his predecessors, has now committed his first criminal act as president of the United States, that is, the use our country's military force to implement foreign policy.

To claim that the attack on Iraq was in retaliation for an attempted assassination of George Bush is nothing but a lame excuse and is neither acceptable nor credible.

The murder of Henry Liu, a courageous San Francisco journalist, and outspoken critic of the Chiang Kai-shek regime, occurred in 1984. This is now the third administration to indifferently refuse to bring the assassins of Liu to justice in an American court.

Perhaps if Saddam Hussein were to practice child prostitution, and purchase women and children as slaves from Taiwan gangsters, he too could be given a slap on the wrist and sent to bed without his ice cream. Iraq could also be given favored nation status and allowed to smuggle crack-cocaine into this country with diplomatic immunity the same as Taiwan, I'm sorry, Mr. Clinton, but your lame excuse just doesn't wash.

The proper procedure for a police action, Mr. Clinton, is to get yourself a court order, then, go in and make an arrest. George Bush got a court order which he traded our jobs for. So far, however, no arrests have been made.

In the last election the American people did not vote for Clinton, they voted against George Bush and repudiated every thing the Bush administration stood for. Now we discover all we got for our vote is more of the same old thing. No jobs, no work, no sovereignty, but plenty of guns and ammunition.

That's right, Bill, drop bombs on them. Kill their wives and kids. That will teach them.

As Faust and friends headed for circuit court July 7, Engler's Labor Department decided to cough up one of Faust's requests — access to a list of policyholders. Earlier, the administration had stonewalled with the patently ridiculous alibi that the desired records were part of a computer database and didn't exist in written form. Michigan's FOI Act, much superior to the comparable federal law, makes computer records part of the public record.

Faust et al. will be back in court July 21, this time for a financial report on the Accident Fund's book value in the clutches of the Commerce Department. Commerce used the absurd excuse that "there is a serious question as to whether individual senators or the Senate itself may, in connection with legislative responsibilities, invoke the provisions of the Freedom of FOIA is usable by "all persons." It's fashionable to despise legislators, but even the most hard-boiled cynic would concede senators are "persons." Certainly Engler, as a former legislator, should agree that senators are persons.

By requiring senators to go to court to enforce the public records law, Engler has stooped to the level of Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, who had to be sued by the Wayne County prosecutor for a legitimate FOIA request. Republican leaders should advise the highly partisan Engler it is politically hazardous to use Young's failed Sure, Faust would continue to oppose sale of the Accident Fund, even if Engler's people had been smart enough to open the books. We see no reason, however, for the governor to fuel partisan flames by hiding public records. As Faust noted, prospective buyers of the Accident Fund's business will examine the records. They are public records. FOIA is written in plain English.

It absolutely amazes me the salaries and fringe benefits that Livonia Public School employees have. For instance, how many of you taxpayers know that elementary school principals make $78,000-plus or that the majority of employees enjoy a 50-cent co-pay on prescriptons, 10 percent co-pay for doctor visits, contribute nothing towards their premiums and also have no deductibles to meet each year. How many of you enjoy this kind of policy?

Personally. I feel these benefits are ludicrous for this day and time. We have all had to cut back. And the teachers, are they really so concerned how all the cuts will affect my children?

According to the June 24 Observer, Pat Sari indicated that a grievance had been filed because of talk of raising the prescription co-pay. Show me some concessions starting at the head office on down, then ask me to help vote in a millage.

So as the teachers enjoy their summer vacation in their expensive summer homes up north, I urge them to reflect on why they became a teacher in the first place — to help children or to have incredible fringe benefits and retirement plans. Since 85 to 90 percent of the school budget goes to salaries and benefits I think it is only fair that you take some cuts also.

All my life I've heard that Livonia Public Schools is one of the best districts in the state. Will someone please show me how we got that ranking or is this perhaps referring to one of the best paying districts in the state. Show me!

Finding out a politician's stands on issues doesn't have to be dull.

Take a cue from the new Brooks and Ed show at 12:30 p.m. Sundays on WDIV-TV before you organize your next Meet the Candidates forum.

Or from the Ed and Brooks show. The names of the two politicos rotate each week — equal billing, you know.

It has hosts who aren't afraid to smile (ever seen a candidates night moderator?); it includes a guest; and it includes questions from the audience that don't have to be reviewed by a LWV member.

Part of the charm of this half-hour with the Wayne and Oakland County executives, which debuted Sunday, is the undercurrent of good humor.

Example: Ed McNamara asked L. Brooks Patterson to say who he'd like to see as the new mayor of Detroit. "I don't know how appropriate that would be," Patterson said. "It would be the kiss of death," McNamara said matter-

Another facet is that McNamara, a moderate Democrat, and Patterson, a conservative Republican, show that it's possible to agree to disagree.

On the topic of this day - the economy - their divergent stands are apparent. "Detroit's future is tied to Oakland County," Patterson said.

"I disagree," McNamara said. "Oakland County's a 'have' community at the moment. But Detroit is the identifying name. If Detroit has a terrible image, Oakland County has a terrible im-

Audience applause — without a cue card. (And there is an audience, unlike some candidates nights.)

Patterson countered that Oakland County is the engine.

JUDITH DONER BERNE

"The engine should take a bigger load," McNamara returned.

Asked whether Oakland County should help foot the bill through a tax for the Detroit Zoo, Belle Isle and the Detroit Institute of Arts — Patterson said no way.

And in answer to a question from the audience about urban sprawl, Patterson said, "I don't call it sprawl, I call it development.

calling Mike Ilitch "a saint for the ty" — meaning Detroit. The show is divided into quadrants: patter between the two; a guest to help discuss the topic of the day: Ed and Brooks commenting on some newsy items, entitled "short takes"; and a question-and-answer session with the studio audience.

It runs along pretty quickly, too quickly perhaps for Detroit News columnist Jon Pepper, the week's guest. Pepper suggested in a subsequent column that Patterson had cut into his time.

I think it was more that not enough time was allotted for the guest segment. If they're going to bother to have a guest, then let's have another couple of minutes to hear more from him or

Still, having the region's two main power brokers (now that Coleman Young is definitely on his way out) sit down together and discuss the issues that haunt metro Detroit may provide solutions to revive it.

Back to the League of Women Voters. You perform an important voter service. But you need to change the way you perform it.

You can reach a lot more people if you present Meet the Candidates forums in a livelier way. Maybe you should book Brooks and Ed (getting both parties is non-partisan, right?) as moderators right now.

ouldn't it be refreshing if, just once, the TV weather person turned to the chirpy anchorette and said, "Hell, blondy, I haven't the slightest idea what the weather will be like tomorrow.'

Sonny Eliot had the right idea. When he was a TV weatherman, he spent most of his allotted air time yacking around until he only had a few seconds left for the actual forecast, which he quickly pushed off the pier. Then he signed off.

Eliot, when he was on television. knew forecasting the weather was an inexact science. He gave you his best guess wrapped in baloney so you'd still like him, even if he guessed wrong.

That was then. Today, forecasting the weather, as we all know, has evolved into an exact science delivered by professionals who rarely, if ever, err. Does this sound familiar?

Seniority system hampers Congressional operations

"Under these rules, each member has just five minutes to question a witness. Then the chairman can cross-examine as long as he wants. When the chairman is finished — if any time remains — the other subcommittee members can vie for it, according to seniority.'

hat was how, in 1972, a young Republican congressman from Michigan named Don Riegle described the seniority system in Washington. It wasn't just that the old guys were committee chairs; they also set the agendas, dominated hearings and generally shafted young and minority party members. All a secretary of state had to do was stall five minutes, and young whippersnappers like Riegle couldn't quiz him for another year.

Two decades later, Americans have sent 25 percent new members to the U.S. House of Representatives. Have things changed? "To a great extent, nothing has changed," said Joe Knollenberg, a freshman Republican from the 11th Congressional District, which includes the suburbs of Oakland and Wayne counties. "The committee structure is such that, if you're a freshman, you go to the end of the line.

On the Small Business and Urban Affairs Committee, he has been a tad luckier than young Riegle, asking Henry Cisneros, Housing and Urban Development secretary, two questions in six months. "Many times I'm passed over," said Knollenberg, "or the bell rings and we have to run and vote."

Shucks, reporters have better luck than that. Knollenberg, 59, is serving in his first governmental elective office. With redistricting, he replaced two veteran congressmen: Bill Broomfield, of Royal Oak, Blrmingham and Lake Orion, 36 years, and Carl Pursell of Plymouth, 14 years.

Even the seating arrangement works against newcomers in both parties who want reform. Senior members of both parties are in the center. New members sit on the ends.

To get ahead, Riegle said in 1972, "play the game and be one of the boys . . . Avoid major controversy, get yourself re-elected time after time and accumulate power slowly.

Knollenberg can't play the game. Michigan voters, with more rage than intelligence, last year imposed a three-term limit on both state lawmakers and the congressional delegation. Texas and Massachusetts can re-elect their stalwarts forever. Michigan's team will have to get out in six years. Will that hurt Knollenberg's effectiveness?

TIM RICHARD

■ To get ahead, Don Riegie said in 1972, 'play the game and be one of the boys . . . Avoid major controversy, get yourself re-elected time after time and accumulate power slowly.'

"Absolutely. It creates an unfairness. We feel it in the freshman class," he said. Jim Herrington, host of the Channel 7 "Spotlight" program where this conversation took place, believes a lawsuit challenging the Michigan constitutional amendment is inevitable. Knollenberg supports a proposed U.S. constitutional amendment by Bill McCollum, R-Fla., to have uniform term limitation — say, six terms. It also would limit the terms of committee chairs.

Knollenberg said it's a "hot item across the country," with 81 percent support in the 11th District and 70 to 75 percent support in the nation. "The American people want it. If the American people want something, eventually they're going to get it."

So all Congress has to do is vote for the McCollum amendment and expect enough state legislatures to follow suit - right?

Wrong. The McCollum amendment "is buried in committee, covered," said Knollenberg. He has signed a discharge petition to force it out of the House Judiciary Committee for a floor vote, but that requires 218 signatures, half the House membership.

In other words, you can't even debate reform unless the old guys say yes.

Tim Richard's office phone is (313) 349-1700, but he suggests you write to your congressman at House Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Darnell feeling heat

Steve Darnell's sport is boxing but he uses baseball terminology to describe how he feels about his next fight.

Darnell, a Westland resident, is scheduled to meet Charles Brewer in a 10-round professional middleweight fight at 9 p.m. Tuesday in Philadelphia (live on USA Cable).

Darnell has lost his last two fights by nineround TKO's and said he's retiring for good if he fails to beat Brewer, who is 22-2 as a pro and ranked 11th in the International Boxing Federa-

"Three strikes and you're out," said Darnell, a 29-year-old with a 26-4-2 professional record. "I've never lost three fights in a row so it's do or die. My back's against the wall. I feel big-time pressure. Big time.

Darnell first retired from the ring in May, 1988, after losing a United States Boxing Association title fight to Lindell Holmes. Darnell, a Redford Bishop Borgess graduate who grew up in Garden City and Livonia, is 1-2-1 since starting a comeback in 1992.

Darnell defends his comeback record because he said he's met ranked fighters and been fighting at several weight classes. Darnell was fighting as a super middleweight when he lost in February to former USBA champion Antoine Byrd and as a light heavyweight last month when he lost to South African Gary Ballard.

"I can beat 'bums' all day and pad my record to 50-0 but the bottom line is I want to battle the best in the world and see if I can hang with them," Darnell said. "I'm hungry and I'll fight anyone in the world and give them my all.

Darnell will not have Bradd Lally in his corner as trainer and manager after a disagreement. Darnell said. Lally arranged Darnell's previous two fights but Darnell did the negotiating on his own this time after being contacted by a promoter, he

"Bradd's an excellent cornerman but it was mutual," Darnell said. "The bottom line is he thought I went over his head to get the fight and I didn't do anything of the sort. (Promoter) Lindy Lindell called me, offered the fight and I took it.

Nobody dominated. Which indicates a few things. First. the outsiders competing in the 14th annual Ford Wolverine Soccer Tournament, held Saturday through Monday at Livonia's Schoolcraft College, were formidable.

And second, the Observer area remains imposing in soccer terms.

But squads from Detroit's suburbs won nearly everything else. Clubs from Pennsylvania, Illinois and Windsor, Ontario, also took part.

Observerland-based teams won six of the 15 divisions and finished second in six others. State clubs located in Troy, Dearborn, Fraser, Sterling Heights and Sault Ste. Marie also collected titles. Only one other out-ofstate team earned a first-place finish: the Windsor FC Nationals, which defeated Troy's Burners '83 1-0 in the under-10 boys recreation division.

No fewer than three of the championships were decided by overtime shootouts. The Michigan Wolves won the under-11 boys' title 1-0 over the Plymouth Kicks; Mike White got the clinching penalty kick to complete the Wolves' five-game win streak, during which they outscored their opponents 19-1.

Ohio's Dynamo edged Vardar III 2in the under-15 boys' final on the last penalty kick. And in the girls' under-19 title match, the Livonia Youth Soccer Club Strikers edged LYSC United (Livonia) 4-3 on penal-Danielle Frazier (Wayne) went 3-for-3 in the Magic's first game, a 10-0 win over North Farmington West Bloomfield, and Cassie Entsminger was 3-4 in the next game, a 4-3 victory over Finesse.

Scott Kapla improved to 6-0 as a pitcher with a five hitter in the victory over Wendy's. Kapla, who has a league-best 1.47 earned run average, had five strikeouts and walked two.

Hines Park had 12 hits, including two each from Ed Gundry, Brian Burns, Tom Davey and Andrew Margelik. Gundry drove in three runs and scored a pair, Burns had two RBI and Davey, Tracy Ewald and Margolik had one RBI each.

Ewald's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning of the second game sent Jason Riggs home and forced the 1-1 tie. Gundry again was the hitting star with three hits in four at-bats and Riggs also went 3-for-4. Kapla, Gundry, Riggs and Scott Niemiec added one RBI each.

Hines Park starter Davey struck out 10 but got into trouble with eight walks before getting two innings of scoreless relief from teammate Jeff Paluk.

Hines Park pitcher Steve Ross stayed undefeated in six decisions with a 5-0 shutout over Westland last week. Ross scattered five hits, walked none and struck out

Brian Burns and Heath Fowler each went 2-3 at the plate. Burns had an RBI single in the sixth to score Davey, who had doubled.

Caesars keeps pace

Little Caesars swept a doubleheader on Sunday from Walter's. 4-1 and 6-5, at Ford Field.

Lawrence Scheffer hit a two-run double and two-run homer in the first game to lift Caesars. Mark Van Ameyde was the winning pitcher to make his record 6-2. Van Ameyde scattered five hits, walked three and fanned four in going the distance.

Walter's scored its lone run after consecutive singles by Mike Brusseau, Jim Solak and Chuck Coleman.

Caesars jumped out to a 6-1 lead in the nightcap before reliever Dave Roman had to come in with two outs in the seventh to end a Walter's rally. Walter's sent nine batters to the plate and scored four runs in the seventh before Roman struck out Mike Thomas to end the game. Mark D'Antonio was the winning pitcher in 6% innings.

Reed Herskovitz led Caesars with three hits and Matt Patterson contributed two. Jerry Shippe, who missed several games with a knee injury, made a memorable return to the lineup despite going 0-for-4 as a designated hitter.

Shippe laid down a sacrifice bunt in the second inning and the throw to first base sailed down the right field line. The error scored Mark Rutherford and Randy Gierczak and Shippe ended up rambling into third base and falling end over end, cracking up teammates and coach John Moraitis, who wishes he had brought his video camera.

Caesars beat Tecumseh 4-3 Friday in a game that was called after five innings because of bad weather at Ford Field. Jesse Gerwatowski moved to 4-0 as a pitcher with a four hitter over five innings.

Sense of fun fuels 'Phantom of the Op'ry'

The Tedd E. Productions presentation of "Phantom of the Op'ry is fun and frolicsome family entertainment. Twenty-two talented youthful performers tell the story of a beleagured opera house in Skunkcreek, Nev.

By Anne Lehmann Special Writer

Theater under the stars is a wonderful notion. Summer, when the days are long and lazy and everyone is ripe to sit outdoors and be entertained, is the ideal time for such fare.

Outdoor theater also presents major challenges. Unreliable weather, acoustics and staging can become problems if conditions are not ideal.

In the case of "Phantom of the Op'ry" presented by the Jewish Community Center with Tedd E. Productions (subsidiary company of Nancy Gurwin Productions), technical problems got in the way of what was otherwise fun and frolicsome family entertainment.

Twenty-two cast members, most of whom are well below voting age, take to the grassy slopes of the Maple-Drake Jewish Community Center in song and dance to tell the story of the beleagured opera house in Skunkcreek, Nev.

The opera house is for sale due to poor ticket receipts. The town's acerbic opera critic, Silky Acidtongue, has been relentless in faultfinding. In addition, word of unexpected visits by an elusive phantom has frightened even the most committed theatergoers away.

The opera house is sold to someone whose artistic ideals seem somewhat compromised and havoc ensues. Still, a town called Skunkcreek where

The plot of this 45-minute play takes a backseat to the good spirit and sense of fun which fuels, not only the play, but the performers as well.

Entertaining moments in 'Godspell'

"Godspell" does offer entertaining moments, but there is nothing striking about the production as a whole to separate it from other local theater.

Director Paul Hopper finds an element of calmness in his rendition of 'Godspell." This interpretation, not without some interesting innovations, dissipates some of the original excitement of the story which chronicles the life of Jesus set in the present.

Lee-Perry Belleau as Jesus personifies this calmness. It sometimes works well; but rather than inspiring years of worship.

his followers as a gifted teacher and teller of parables, Belleau's performance seems more like moralizing not a tactic which

Set in a theater, "Godspell" uses a variety of colorful ladders, barrels, boards and sawhorses to change scenes. As each parable is told, a backdrop of ensemble actors mime, puppeteer, dance, or act out the lesson being learned.

Some of these moments are very funny and entertaining, especially during the prodigal son parable when a horse is brought to life by a sawhorse, a mop for a tail and a puppet for the head.

Definite highlights of the show include Ivory McKay's solid rendition of "All Good Gifts," Greg Phillip Viscomi's "Prepare Ye The Way of the Lord," and Meril Amdursky singing "Learn Your Lessons Well." Amdursky is a definite asset to the ensemble work as well.

Other musical numbers in the show need a jolt as they are just under the grasp of the power or finesse needed to captivate the audience also needs a boost with something other than the ensemble doing large figure eights and skipping. Although Shapero's use of space is to be lauded, repetition creeps in too often.

Musical director Dan Roth does well with the voices available to him, and provides an appealing and creative musical backdrop with the use of synthesizer and a band comprised of guitar and percussion in keeping. with the 1960s rock musical style.

The local Stage Door Productions presentation of "Godspell" at the Birmingham Theatre is not without salvage. Some key moments provide entertainment, but much is balanced by: too little rehearsal time to perfect performances and teamwork for an effective ensemble.

Fate pairs homeless boy, killer whale in 'Free Willy'

"Free Willy," a heartwarming family drama starring Jason James Richter, Lori Petty and Michael Madsen, tells of a troubled boy's touching friendship with an orca whale named Willy who is the star attraction at the local adventure park.

When the boy learns of the unfortunate plans the park has for his friend, however, he carries out a plan of his own, racing against time to return Willy to his natural habitat.

Willy and Jesse have a lot in common. Willy, a 22-foot-long, 7,000-pound orca whale, the sea's most indomitable predator, is alienated, angry, aggressively antisocial, but searching for family and home.

Jesse, 12, is also homeless. abandoned, tough, uncooperative, unwilling to bend.

Captured and separated from his family pod in the wild and confined in an inadequate-sized tank in the faded Northwest Adventure Park, Willy is sullen and determined not to perform the tricks expected of him.

Forfeited by his mother to a succession of caretakers, Jesse is living on the streets, a prime candidate for a hopeless future.

When he's snagged by the cops on a midnight graffiti raid on the adventure park, Jesse faces a choice — stay with a new set of foster parents, and work off his guilt by cleaning up the graffiti at Northwest Adventure — or go to juvenile jail. Neither prospect thrills Jesse, but he opts for what he considers the lesser evil.

What Jesse doesn't expect is to make friends with animal trainer Rae Lindley (Lori Petty) and handyman Randolph Johnson (August Schellenberg) and especially with Willy.

A bond of mutual trust and affection slowly develops between Jesse and Willy.

Directed by Simon Wincer and produced by Jennie Lew Tugend and Lauren Shuler-Donner, "Free Willy" is a Warner Bros. Produc-

The killer whale was Keiko, a seven-year resident of the park's aquatic theater, known for his gentleness and natural affection for children. Keiko's grace, beauty and power made him the perfect candidate to portray Willy.

A working witness to the events was experienced American Humane Association observer Netta Banks, who was constantly on the set.

"I've never seen more care lavished on an animal than what I saw with this company," she said. "The trainers were concerned, not only with Keiko's physical wellbeing, but his mental state as well. He's been one happy orca."

"Free Willy" opens Friday, July 16, at these suburban movie theaters: AMC Southfield City, Showcase Auburn Hills, Showcase Sterling Heights, AMC Laurel Park, GCC Novi Town Center, Showcase Dearborn, AMC Abbey, AMC Americana West, GCC Canton, Showcase Pontiac, Showcase Westland, Star Rochester Hills, United Artists West River.

'Line of Fire' — intelligent, well-paced, suspenseful

With "In the Line of Fire," Clint Eastwood sharpens the image that has served him so well for the past three decades.

His Frank Horrigan, the Se-Service cret agent trying to prevent a presidential assassination, still has problems with authority and comes off as a bit of a loner. He's also warmer, funnier and a lot more human.

And thanks to German director Wolfgang Petersen, he's got an incredibly exciting feature to star in. This intelligent, well-paced suspense thriller may be Hollywood's best entry of the summer.

Most Americans remember ev were on t ne dav John F. Kennedy was shot. Horrigan can't forget.

The young Secret Service agent, a favorite of JFK's, was trotting right next to the presidential limousine when the first shot rang out. Instead of throwing himself into the line of fire and taking that fatal second bullet, he stood by in disbelief.

Thirty years later, a madman named Leary (John Malkovich) plots to assassinate the current president while engaging in a game of cat-and-mouse with the veteran agent.

The premise isn't too far removed from the Oscar-winning 'Unforgiven" as the old timer with a shady past must prove himself once again or die trying. Something tells me that this is the brand of Eastwood we'll be seeing for quite some time.

REVIEW

If Malkovich doesn't relish playing the bad guy, then he's putting on quite an act. He taunts the agent on the phone while looking at film of Dallas, with Clint's face (in the lean younger days of "Paint Your Wagon" and 'Coogan's Bluff'') edited into the infamous footage.

Director Petersen, who made his first international splash with 'Das Boot" in 1981, is the perfect choice for this material. While Eastwood's own directorial style creates wonderful mood and tension, he's a stiff when it comes to rousing action scenes.

Here Horrigan dangles from a rooftop, his fate in the hands of the cocky Leary. He has the opportunity to shoot the bad guy.

even though it means falling to his death. Leary, placing Horrigan's gun muzzle in his mouth, bets that he won't do it.

Petersen is a master at mixing psychological and physical action. He plays up on Horrigan's missed opportunities and builds to a satisfying conclusion.

Where Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger gave us action scenes in search of a plot this summer, "In the Line of Fire" delivers an intelligent and believable premise. Writer Jeff Maguire transcends the usual mad-dog-on-the-loose material with sharp dialogue.

Again amazing is the handling of Eastwood. Both he and James Bond are finding it necessary to revise the Hugh Hefner-era sensibilities toward women that make their old movies so painful to

The love affair with a female Secret Service agent (Rene Russo) can be bothersome here too. She's inserted into the story (Horrigan would call it "window dressing") as a powerful woman but still she sinks for his macho line.

No one expects the former Dirty Harry to become a sensitive New Age guy, but he does give us an honest portrait of himself as action hero. The likable, hot-headed, jazz-loving, still sexist Horrigan is as close to the real actor as we've seen yet on screen.

"In the Line of Fire" is showing at these suburban movie theaters: AMC Americana West, AMC Laurel Park, Quo Vadis, Star Rochester, AMC Southfield City, AMC Wonderland, United Artists West River, GCC Novi Town Center,

Initially driv-

Jazz is an elegant and accurate art form, and it is usually represented by elegant and accurate artists. The musicians carrying forward this genre, particularly those performers who have played their entire lives, often without great acclaim, have made the beauty and ingenuity of Detroit jazz quite clear.

The festival will run like this on Thursday, July 29, Friday, July 30, and Saturday, July 31, venues throughout Birmingham will host different acts in and around the downtown area. Com-Behensive festival passes are just 20; patron passes, which include a champagne afterglow fete at the Machus Sly Fox, are $50.

Tickets, and a schedule of performances, can be obtained by calling 433-FEST. Festival passes are also being sold at — the Com-Munity House in Birmingham, 380 South Bates Street, the Birmingham/Bloomfield Chamber of ommerce office, 240 Martin, Birmingham, all participating re taurants, or any Ticketmaster outlet.

Veteran saxophonist/composer Paul Vornhagen will be performing 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday, July 30, at the Bates Street Cafe at the Community House during the Jazzfest in support of "Variations," his new independently released CD. Vornhagen has played with such well-known artists as Freddy Hubbard, Sherman Mitchell and Abby Lincoln. Vornhagen has also conducted and arranged horn sections for the Four Tops and the Temptations. "Variations," features composi-tions by legendary jazz figures like Wayne Shorter, Charlie Parker and Duke Ellington.

'The best thing about a jazz festival is the exposure," Vornhagen said. "With the Vornhagen said. Jazzfest, you're getting exposed to the right kind of crowd. It's an educated crowd that comes to hear jazz. So you feel like you're playing for your peers. That's the beauty of a jazz festival. Sometimes you play places and get blank looks from the audience. You get a great response from a festival crowd."

Those scheduled to appear at this inaugural Jazzfest are a widely divergent group - some, such as Charles and Gwen Scales, are nearly pop artists. Others, such as Mr. B or Bugs Beddow are largely informed by the blues. Even timehonored forms such as big band and bebop are well represented.

"Jazz should evolve into a variety of styles," said Gwen Scales, who, with her husband Charles, is one of Detroit's most popular attractions. "It should incorporate other forms — when people think of jazz, it depends on what type of music they like."

Johnny Trudell, a fine trumpet player and innovative band leader, is a familiar name to many area music fans. Trudell is considered Jazzfest's principal headliner, buoying the three-day festival with three sets at the Community House 7:30 p.m., 8:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Friday, July 30. Trudell, who played on many hits in Motown's golden era, will perform with Ursula Walker and her keyboardist/husband Buddy

"Johnny Trudell is a great foundation of any event," said Dawn Rassel, Jazzfest chairman. "Then you look at a guy like Mr. B. Here's a guy who's virtually carrying one an entire genre boogie woogie piano — and has become one of the best at it in the country." 'Looking at the scene as a whole, jazz is in a good state of affairs right now," Sheila Landis, a bluesy singer fronting her own quintet, said. "I was very excited to be part of this event - especially in Birmingham. I think there's enough of an interest and a financial base to make this an annual event. The exposure is tremendous - you're brand new to a much wider audience."

Presented by the Community House in conjunction with the Birmingham Restaurant Collection — Jazzfest '93 promises to be a joyously inclusive indoor/outdoor event.

Sponsors include Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co., Ameritech, WJZZ-FM, Machus Sly Fox, and The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. Corporate supporters include — AAA, Gail and Rice, Handelman Charitable Foundation, Kelly Services, Merrill Lynch, Selectcare, and Time Inc. Proceeds go to fund the varied projects coordinated by the Community House.

School ensembles, such as the Metropolitan Jazz Orchestra and the Henry Ford Big Band, will also be a large part of the The Metropolitan Jazz Orchestri was founded in the mid 1980s by a group of Northville High alum-

Other more baroque performers - guitarist Ron English, saxo-phonist George Benson, vocalist Onita Sanders — will bring their styles to intimate settings like Machus 160 and Phoenicia.

The other sites are largely popular Birmingham meeting places or night spots - Shain Park, City Hall Square, Albans, Machus Sly Fox, the Midtown Cafe, 220 Mes rill Street and Norman's Eaton Street Station are just a few of the participating venues.

"There are a lot of jazz artists out there that would say we are not 'jazz,' 'Scales said.

"There's a wealth of talent in this area," Vornhagen said. Stewart Francke, a musician and free lance writer has a special interest in modern music.

Most of us have experienced an awkward phase. Maybe we had braces or acne, felt we were too fat, thin, tall or short or even tried to scrub the freckles off our noses with lemon juice. And, no matter how old we get, some of us still can't accept ourselves.

Hans Christian Andersen's timeless tale "The Ugly Duck-ling," attempts to release us from all that. The "beauty is only skin deep" theme is universally appealing to the young, middle-aged and senior sets — although Septamber Productions' performance, The Adventures of the Ugly Duckling," which opened July 11 at the Trinity House Theatre in Livonia, aims its message more at children.

Barrera, who adapted the story and is the play's narrator. "Ours is more about discovering self worth. It's more of an episodic story. The events are metaphors for self-searching."

And the dashes of humor which this production stirs into its storytelling help to keep the children's attention (the performance is only 45 minutes long) from

REVIEW

In fact this theatrical and musical retelling's humor is reminicient of actress Shelly Duvall's "Faerie Tale Theatre" productions which have been shown frequently on the "Showtime" cable television channel.

The story begins as Mother Duck (Theresa Weiss, Barrera's co-producer) waits patiently for three duck eggs to hatch. The first two ducklings (Tim Campos and Aaron Stubleski) are cute fluffy fowl but conniving and stupid respectively - and selfish - kind of like the wicked stepsisters in "Cinerella." "Got anything to eat?" are their first words.

When their brother hatches (Sam Perry, a Chicago actor who should delight youngsters with his sensitive, flexible face) they're floored to find he's a different color and tall and funny-looking. He doesn't resemble a duck at all.

Mom, of course, see's "The beauty inside" (The title of one of the show's five musical numbers) even though her third-born has a face only a mother could love.
But she's affected too. She's put on a guilt trip by a snooty hlgh-society hen (Dawn Cooper) who reminds her of "the status - she's got to fit into the quo" farm's established societal norms. "No room for misfits," she

And The Ugly Duckling, after encounters with cows who moo him away, failures with games like "Duck, Duck, Goose," because nobody can decide what he (the ultimate sting because everyone knows that little girls have kind hearts) - learns to doubt

He's tricked by his self-centered brothers into leaving the farm and embarks on a series of adventures which connect him other animals who are as mixedup and insecure as he is. And, in teaching them that it's OK to be yourself, he teaches himself.

What he finally discovers, of course, by the story's end is that he has become a beautiful graceful swan - which according to definition in Barrera's terms; is indeed a metaphor for coming to terms with ourselves and our own unique beauty. We can belong and what we learn is that we do belong — to the whole human

The background scenery, accomplished with four simple but exquisite paintings by Barrera, depicting the change of seasons at the farm and the light synthesizer music which accompanies several delightful original songs, make the whole experience a must for parents and children to share to-

There's even a part where the audience members become participants and have to "bark like a dog" to scare a cat who tries to menace The Ugly Duckling - the same technique used in "Peter Pan" where the audience must clap to save Tinkerbell from poisoning and death.

Although Michael Franks has stretched the limits of traditional jazz music, he never broke away from his soulful roots. With a breathy tenor. Franks conveys a jazz feel with his trademark offbeat lyrics sparked by clever rhymes. Most of Franks' songs are seed was planted when he read about a similar operation in Oklahoma.

"I corresponded with him and added gifts and a computer (for horse blood stock reports, analysis of jockey and trainer performances)," Mike said.

"I've been a horse fan a long time. You can't buy this stuff unless you go mail order. I found that a lot of people like me didn't want to mail money in and wait seven weeks," he said.

So Mike, a part-time sales representative, started shopping for a location.

'It had to be within a mile of the track, off the expressway with good parking," he said, eventually settling in a shopping center at Intster and Schoolcraft.

The Corbetts figure they were carefully monitored for illegal gambling activities by undercover law enforcement officers when they first opened.

"People were in to place bets and I always sent them across the street," Mike said.

While Phyllis most enjoys the camaraderie of the people, Mike sees potential for future growth.

"One reason we opened this place is very shortly, maybe within five years, we'll be able to turn on the TV and be able to bet on that race on TV," he said. "I see participation of the public in horse racing growing at a dramatic rate as technology increases down the road."

And that's where information will become more valuable, he said. Mike's also looking into the possibility of franchising his business concept to cities near other tracks.

All bets are off

But don't look for the Corbetts to become an outlet for off-track betting if it becomes legal in Michigan.

Those things require millions of dollars in capital for computers, windows," he said.

"It's a micro-market. On average, one million people go to the track across the street. My goal is to get every one of those people here, but I'd be satisfied with 5 percent. Those are serious handicappers.'

"Even if we had off-track betting, we probably wouldn't have it because we're too close to the track," she said.

Word-of-mouth endorsements and ads in the DRC program initially draw most customers to The Tout. The business also has been written up in regional racing publications, drawing a few people from hundreds of miles away to check it out, Mike said.

When the racing fan walks in here, they leave everything else at the door," he said. "When they come in here, they talk about one thing: horses.

"We want people to come in, sit down and talk," Phyllis said. "I enjoy myself. We're recreational players strictly. Handicapping is more fun than betting.'

The business is at a break-even point now, she said. "What I would like for is when we retire, it will give us a nice income and keep us occupied."

But recent published reports about declining business at Ladbroke DRC have Phyllis concerned. "It's been kind of shaky this year. We're basically worried how it's going to go," she said.

And what if the track were to close?

"I don't know if we could make it," Phyllis said.

A hot tip for horse race fans

■ Besides a hot cup a coffee and good conversation, The Tout store in Livonia offers some insight and horse sense on the goings on at local and national horse racing venues.

By Doug Funke Staff Writer

Not every business aspires to millions of dollars in sales and large growth spikes.

Mike and Phyllis Corbett, owners of The Tout, a thoroughbred racing information center near Ladbroke DRC in Livonia, are a contrast to the big and booming.

They're a mom-and-pop operation that's on pace this year to ring gross sales of $100,000, Mike said. Their basic product is information including the Racing Form, track programs, tip sheets, books and videos.

But there's more. The couple sells art work, souvenir plates and mugs, racing trading cards, post cards, Tshirts, caps and stopwatches.

The Corbetts tapped into their savings for about $15,000 to set up shop in a 600-square-foot storefront in March of 1992.

Low overhead - they're the only 'staff' - contributes to financial suc-

"I'm just here to have fun," Phyllis said. "We get lawyers, accountants, CPAs, business owners, stockbrokers, truck drivers, factory workers. There's no pressure. They can do or buy anything they want.

Two unrelated circumstances prompted Mike to open The Tout.

He had difficulty obtaining specialty books and memorabilia relating to horse racing and handicapping. The

"All that we truly own is what we have given away

This month's financial profile centers around a couple who are reviewing lifetime gifting strategies to family members.

Jack and Marie Simon, both in their mid 70s, have a established a significant estate. Last year Jack sold his successful small business for about $2.5 million. With other assets of $700,000 and no debt, their estate totals about $3.2 million.

They realize that there is no possibility that they will need this much during their lifetime. They have three children in their mid-to-late 40s and seven grandchildren. They would like to see their family enjoy some of their inheritance before they pass

Also, they are in the 50 percent estate tax bracket (estate taxes would be payable by them only upon the second death). Thus, Uncle Sam takes $50 for each $100 increase in their estate. A gifting program will help them limit any increases in their taxable estate and allow them to pass more to their heirs.

One of the most basic and important gift tax strategies is to make gifts that take advantage of the "annual exclusion" amount. Gift tax rules permit any donor to give up to $10,000 (in cash, property or combination of the two) to as many people it wants.

· If Jack gave each of the three phildren $10,000 in cash and then give them Christmas and birthday presents worth $1,000 each, such child would have received gifts in excess of the $10,000 limit. As a result, Jack has made a taxable gift of $1,000 each.

Estate planners recommend donors make regular cash gifts of $9,000 to $9,500. That way donors can continue to make regular special occasion gifts without worrying about tax implications.

Another rule: The recipient of the gift does not have to be related in any way to the donor. So if the Simons had 300 close friends, they could give each of them $10,000 tax free.

Also, Jack and Marie could join together to give gifts totaling $200,000 a year to each of the three children and/or seven grandchildren. And if they could persuade them to invest rather than apend the gifts, they could get eight percent return and after 10 years the donor will have transferred wealth worth almost $2.9 million without any negative estate or gift tax hassles.

The $10,000 exclusion is a good deal for the Simons, but they have to be consistent. If they miss a year, they won't be able to make it up in the future. Use it or lose it.

If the gift exceeds the limits or does not qualify for either of the foregoing exclusions, then you have made a taxable gift. Taxable gifts, in effect, use up some or all tion applicable to gift/estate tax-

If taxable gifts over one's lifetime exceed the annual exclusions plus $600,000, then the donor must file a gift tax return and write a check to the IRS for the taxes. It may be best to use the entire $600,000 exclusion as early as possible by making a gift of appreciating property. This removes any future appreciation from the estate of the donor.

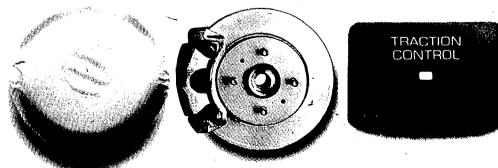

Not everyone should make annual gifts; for many people there are compelling reasons not to. Potential donors who need everything they have to maintain their lifestyles (which includes most of us) are not very good potential candidates.

Neither are those who will not have a taxable estate. However, those like the Simons with excess assets and a taxable estate are prime candidates to consider implementing a disciplined, systematic give giving program.

Pledge shares parents' love for kids

Parenting is probably the most important yet time-consuming, responsible job a person could ever have. It's a full-time job; better yet it's a career . . . an adventure.

Qualifications for parenting are broad. However, among the many important qualifications a true parent is able to feel in depth, as well as express unconditional love for a child. Parenting in itself is so significant, and as unique as the children who are beneficiaries of a variety of parenting styles.

Parenting is a three-fold contract renewed at the end of each stage for a lifetime. Stage one: Early nurturing and pampering, 0-5 years; Stage two: Guidance and redirection, 6-17 years; Stage 3: Trust and window period where a still caring and hopeful parent must let their eagles soar - watching from a distance, looking for signals that reflect their good parenting.

For parents who go through plenty of joyful periods, hearty laughter and sometimes many tearful days and nights of parenting, pledge commitment to your children.

. I will always love and respect my child for who he/she is and not for who I want him/her to

2. I will promote good self-esteem in my child and encourage to be the very best they can be. 3. I will trust my child and recognize him/her as a capable thinking individual. 4. I will listen, learn and respond. 5. I will set limits and help my child find security in the knowledge of what is expected of him/her. 6. I will be a safety net for my child when he/she is not yet capable of recognizing danger.

7. I will not burden my child with adult problems, or push him/her into a situation that they're not emotionally or physically equipped to deal

8. I will try to be there for my child, and be the person they can count on.

9. I will be a friend, but most of all I will be a 'good parent.' (I understand the difference.)

10. I will create a home environment that shows love, patientce, respect and unity. 11. I will - and you will know it, feel it . . . love you, unconditionally forever and a lifetime my would associate with Farmington Hills. Farming there today is probably more along the lines of a back-yard garden. But be that as it may, there's a cannery in the Oakland County community.

Its machinery sits silent at present, waiting for the arrival later this summer of peaches that will be cleaned and canned with syrup and as jam under the Deseret label.

You won't find that label in grocery stores. It's exclusive, but don't confuse it with gourmet. The brand includes everything from granola, noodles and macaroni and cheese to tuna fish, beef stew, beef chunks, flour and rolled oats.

The shelves it can be found on are in a warehouse beside the cannery. This place on Enterprise Court is part of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The church believes in helping needy people help themselves by providing the necessities for those in need. The cannery and ware-house, called the Bishop's Storehouse, are part of a coordinated system of church farms, canneries, storehouses, thrift stores, social service and employment programs for

It isn't a dole; members perform work — cleaning and repairing goods for the thrift stores, processing food, even polishing church pews — in exchange for the help. It is a "workfare" form of welfare that preserves and provides self-esteem.

Part of that system is reaching out beyond members to those in

"We're part of the community and said Nils Johannson, agent stake representative. "We've been con-cerned about taking care of our own, but we're large enough now to take care of the community."

The church has made the cannery available to community groups willing to can food for food banks and soup kitchens, good news for representatives of some of Detroit's more visible programs — Gleaner's Community Food Bank, the Capuchin Soup Kitchen and Salvation Army.

"Any non-profit group can use the facility free of charge," said cannery manager Dale Duhl. "They pay for the cans and boxes; we have a manager on duty, supervisors trained at Purdue University as U.S.D.A. (U.S. Department of Agriculture) inspectors, and a mini lab to check every

The cannery was built in 1983 and opened in 1984. The machinery is used and Duhl admits he is "al-ways searching the country" for more. Some used equipment sits near a door. It will replace a temperamental labeling machine that can handle up to 600 cans an hour-. . when it works, said Chris there is a volunteer. Volunteers, like Turner, are church members who give of their time to help the community. When the peaches arrive from the church farm in St. Catherines, Ontario, you'll find company CEOs working next to janitors processing the crops.

Diane Costlow is a firm believer in what she does, so much so that she does it for free. So does the cadre of people who work with her. Their mo-

"What we're about is not popular or politically correct," said Costlow, the center's director. "But I think we're helping women, helping them see the positives at a negative time in their lives.'

In the battleground of Roe vs. Wade, the center is on the pro-life side. It makes no bones about what it is about. One need only look in the Yellow Pages where its address and phone number can be found under abortion alternative organizations.

Before I begin my analysis, I want to thank our writer for her nice letter and encouraging comments.

This neat; legible and heavy pressured handwriting was written by a woman with a steel-like inner strength and energy. It is difficult for me to believe that she is 68 years old. Regardless of calendar years, I believe she will always remain young and active.

Our writer is basically a traditional person. Her home represents security to her. It is probably tastefully decorated, tidy and comfortable. She strives for beauty and system in all things.

A conscientious, rather serious woman comes through the nuances of her handwriting. Passion, accuracy and thoroughness others perceive her and can be counted on to put forth her best efforts, whether working or play-

This woman has a strong will and subconscious need to achieve. There is also an immense store of determination here. Many of her goals involve challenge on her part. Occasionally her initial elan may waver, but her ambition and hard work do not allow her to give up. She is not a quitter!

Our writer is a proud woman. Her optimism views a cup that is half full, not half empty. Despite her accomplishments and popularity, occasionally there may be an under-layer of anxiety about her self-worth.

Experiences are feit deeply. She remembers a kindness and will reciprocate with beneficence. She also remembers unkind acts or hurts. Unfortunately it seems difficult for her to forgive and forget them.

There is a private part to her personality which belongs to her only. She harbors special thoughts and feelings that she does not share with anyone. She can keep the secrets of others, but don't expect her to share hers.

In her interpersonal relationships, she is caring, persuasive and sometimes quite charming. She is also loyal to those she finds deserving.

She appears to be a little selective of friends and projects. Although social with many, those with whom she has much in common probably receive preference.

And while it offers information on abortion, it in no way offers abortions. AAA Crisis Pregnancy Center is there to let women know "there is an alternative to abortion that everyone can live with," Costlow said.

"We don't ever try to deceive although we've been attacked for trying to be an abortion clinic," Costlow said. "We're not a medical clinic, we're not trying to. We give them more than a price; we give them a choice."

Founded by Marie Gonzalez of Garden City in direct response to the 1973 Supreme Court ruling, it took six years to get it up and running, first in Garden City, than in Redford and eventually in Livonia.

The center is one of 15 forming a coalition in the tri-county area that get together to talk about the things they have in common. In Wayne County there are two centers east of Detroit; AAA is the only such center west of the I-75 freeway. As a result, its clients come from as close as Livonia, Garden City, Westland, Redford and Plymouth and as far away as Wixom, South Lyon and Ypsilan-

Word of mouth

Word of mouth seems the way most women find out about the center.

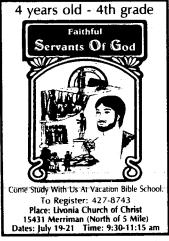

The center has had a slow start. In the 1980s, its clients numbered less than 200 a year. But in the 1990s, the number has jumped by leaps and bounds — 552 in 1990, 1,001 in 1991 and 1,448 in 1992. Based on the contacts made during the first three months of 1993, Costlow estimates the center will, in one way or another, help some 1,600 women this year.

"They say good things take time," Costlow said. "Personally, I think more women are in crisis pregnancies now because of the emphasis on safe sex and because girls are experimenting at a much younger age."

The center's services are free of charge. It provides free pregnancy tests and counseling for the women and as needed for their husbands, boyfriends or families. The staff also can help arrange for shepherding homes for women who need some place to stay during their pregnancies and financial and/or legal assistance, and help in establishing residency.

Its layette room provides women with maternity clothes, formula, cribs, walkers, infant and toddler clothing, diapers and toiletries

"People come by with whole boxes of clothes," Costlow said.

Let's talk: Judy Moore is one of a cadre of volunteers who counsel women in crisis who come to the AAA Crisis Pregnancy Center in Livonia.

"Churches hold baby showers for us and the Kiwanis Club Division 4 recently gave us 10 new cribs. There's a constant turnover. What comes in this month goes out this month."

While the center's bent is prolife, the counselors do show by way of videotapes and tell their clients what abortion is and what they can expect. Graphic? Yes, in that they want the women "to know exactly what's being aborted, so they can make an informed decision," Costlow said.

"I think it's a misnomer that "I think it's a misnomer that these (abortion) clinics say they're for choice," she said. "If a clinic were to give women all the choices, where's the profit? When they come into the crisis center, we have nothing to gain; we're not here to take their money."

Since it charges no fees, the center counts on donations from individuals and churches and fund-raisers to pay its bills. Volunteers — "birth mothers, adoptive mothers, single parents, women who have had abortions and women who care"— staff the center. The only paid position is that of part-time office manager/receptionist Karol Montgomery.

"I don't want to be paid," Costlow said. "What I do is out of gratefulness (for her two adopted daughters ages 9 and 11) for two women who chose life for their babies. My husband and I are blessed and happy and I hope some day to meet those mothers and thank them."

Adoption option

Adoption is one of the options the center offers. It works with Bethany, Touch of Hope and Catholic Social Services, although Costlow estimates that about 6 percent of the women put their babies up for adoption.

One of the criticisms leveled at the center and other groups like it is that they encourage the women to have their children, but the volunteers believe that "once the baby is there, you must deal with it positively."

"We can't say how many women change their minds, but we don't know they were all informed," Costlow said. "One-third, maybe two-thirds change their mind when they're presented with some real help. I think it takes a lot of courage to choose life."

For those who choose abortion and have difficulty dealing with it, the center is able to place them in post-abortion counseling and support groups. One such group includes a woman in her 70s who had had an illegal abortion.

"For some of these girls, they lose the baby and the boyfriend," Costlow said. "Abortion isn't something you can do and then just forget. If abortion is such a good choice, why is it women won't say they've had one? If it's so positive, why is it so hushhush?"

Costlow has a few dreams for the center. She would like to add a hotline to handle the phone calls that come after hours— "I've been in here on a Sunday and the phone is ringing off the hook," Costlow said. She also would like to enlarge the center to add room for support groups. "One of the criticisms leveled at us is that we encourage all these women to have these babies," Costlow said. "Yes, but we believe that once the baby is there, you should deal with it positively. We have had hundreds of women send us notes and flowers for helping them see the positives at a negative time."

The AAA Crisis Pregnancy Center is at 27582 Schoolcraft, Livonia. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call 425-8060.

The world is filled with men and women who glory in their own wealth, intelligence, and power. But the Bible teaches that God delights in those who glory in knowing and understanding Htm: (Jer. 9:23-44). The God of the Bible wants men and women to glory in northing else but Himself alone. Is this your greatest desire? Do you rejoice first and forcemost in your knowledge and understanding of God? Our church glories in God!

The church has made the cannery available to community groups willing to can food for food banks and soup kitchens, good news for representatives of some of Detroit's more visible programs Gleaner's Community Food Bank, the Capuchin Soup Kitchen and Salvation Army,

'Any non-profit group can use the facility free of charge," said cannery manager Dale Duhl. "They pay for the cans and boxes; we have a manager on duty, supervisors trained at Purdue University as U.S.D.A. (U.S. Department of Agriculture) inspectors. and a mini lab to check every batch."

The cannery was built in 1983 and opened in 1984. The machinery is used and Duhl admits he is "always searching the country" for more. Some used equipment sits near a door. It will replace a temperamental labeling machine that can handle up to 600 cans an hour . . . when it works, said Chris Turner of Ortonville, the volunteer distribution manager.

Duhl is the only paid cannery employee. Everyone else who works there is a volunteer. Volunteers, like Turner, are church members who give of their time to help the community. When the peaches arrive from the church farm in St. Catherines, Ontario, you'll find company CEOs working next to janitors processing the crops.

The church has 70 canneries nationwide and each is assigned certain tasks. At the Farmington Hills facility, work revolves around the peaches and cattle. Last year volunteers produced 1,820 cases of beef, 1,900 cases of chili, 2,100 cases of peaches and 100 cases of peach jam.

There are also 102 storehouses throughout the country and a fleet of 45 semi-trailers that move food between them and the main storehouse in Salt Lake City.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has roughly 30.000 members throughout Michigan; church leaders estimate that 5-7 percent receive assistance at any given time. Food orders are tailored to meet the needs of individual families. The storehouse delivers up to $500,000 in food a year to church members

Most food stuffs, cleaning and dairy products and meats carry the Deseret label, produced as part of the more than 1,000 church welfare projects of the same name. Deseret is a biblical word, meaning honey bee or beehive. A symbol of industry, references to it can be found in founder Joseph Smith's "The Book of Mormon."

Like the cannery, the 8,000-tree vice president at Alexander Hamilton Insurance Co. and head of the Farmington Hills Ward, and Dick Thordersen of Livonia, LDS regional representative. stressed that the goal is to move food through the cannery to existing distribution facilities.

orchard is tended to by volunteers. So is the church's sugar beet farm and cattle ranch west of Saginaw. Church members "don't just believe in tithing with money, they believe in tithing with their time," Johannson said.

And it is that time, that volunteer manpower, that the church is offering to the community as a whole. It is the "first real reachout" in Michigan, according to Richard Thorderson, regional representative.

"The church has been inwardly directed for so long because it has been small; we've used the church's resources to care for our own people," the Livonia resident "We teach them to be independent and self-reliant and we had to get to where we were able to help ourselves."

And help the church does. In cooperation with the Red Cross, all church buildings are available for disaster relief and humanitarian services and members lend a hand where needed as it recently was in south Florida.

"The biggest things we have to offer to the community is manpower . . . people," Johannson said. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints estimates its members donate up to 427,000 hours of work a year, reflecting early church teachings that mem-"care for their families, the needy and disasters in the Lord's

The Lord's way includes sending 7.6 million pounds of clothing to Africa last year and rebuilding the church's dry milk plant at a cost of $3 million to meet the increased demand in Third World

The Lord's way also means an experimental project involving the church, Michigan State Industries and the Food Bank Council of Michigan. The council has provided tomato seeds that are being cultivated on three acres of land at the State Prison in Jackson. Gleaner's will truck the produce to the cannery where church members will do the canning.

The finished product will be shipped to food banks across the state with freight charges being handled by the Michigan Restaurant Association's 7 Percent Solu-

Feat a mission of self-discovery

"Never doubt MORAL that a small οf thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world. Indeed it is the only thing that ever has. Margaret Meade. These words were posted on a REV. KATE cabinet door in the cafeteria at the old East Catholic High School. They summed up a remarkable week for more than 150 high schoolers, college students and adults who called this place "home" from June 26 to July 2. It was a week to help make a change, a different for Detroit. They were part of a dream come true for the organizing youth ministers who had envisioned a huge summer work camp in a major metropolitcan city. That dream became a reality last week.

Young people and adults divided up into work teams each day. They headed off to 14 different work sites like Focus:Hope, Core City Neighborhood, Barnabus Project, Ravendale Community and various churches with community outreach programs. They scraped and painted homes, transformed vacant lots into parking lots and playgrounds, rebullt outside porch steps for senior citizens, poured concrete for a wheelchair ramp, and constructed a pantry for a shelter for women. They worked side by side with members and friends of various church communities. They got to know personally many of the unsung heroes and heroines right here in Detroit who are already making a positive impact on the quality of life and opportunity for people in the inner city.

Buildings were not only transformed. We were. Pre-conceived Mission Mania the "Headliners ideas about people who live in the of the Week." city, people of other races, people of other walks of life tumbled down as rapidly as the old paint chips fell from the homes being scraped. Genuine bridges of respect and friendship were built. Several young people worked side by side with a former prisoner who has now dedicated his life to helping the young people who live near Tiger Stadium. They heard what it was like to grow up in the streets of Detroit. How hard it is to get a job. How easy and dangerous it is to get into the drug scene. How hopeless life can be for many young people. Our own high schoolers saw how many priviledges they have which they take for granted. Like safe streets. The freedom to go where you want to in your neighborhood. Access to iobs. Good education. Doors open for college and job training. Food to eat. Friends and family staying alive. Garbage picked up and police responding to emergency calls. Our kids learned a lot about themselves, their values and the quality of life they generally assume is the norm for many others. They also learned a lot about community and the marvelous transformation that lappens when people work together for a common cause. They found that positive actions do make an incredible difference. Something contagious happens. Many people pitch in to help. Mercury Paints donated exterior paint. More than 500 people from the Presbytery of Detroit provided sack lunches. cookies and prepared sack lunches, cookies and prepared meals. Some even arrived at the school at 4:30 a.m. to cook breakfast. Churches opened their hearts and doors for worship and welcome. Mort Crim from WDIV, Channel 4 did a feature about the hard work the high schoolers did and named the kids of Motor City

They discovered how the power of love becomes a catalyst for some amazing things to happen. Neighborhood kids joined the teams and worked on neighbors' houses as well. Community members fixed barbecues. Love and laughter and addresses of newly found friends were exchanged throughout the week.

At one site, one of the black children, went up to a work team of mainly white people. He asked, "Are you rich? My mama says that you are rich." The team leader smiled and replied, "Yes, we are rich. All of us - you and me are all rich. We're rich in love.'

We kept discovering that transforming power of love. One day I noticed that the old high school we stayed at was named for St. Anthony. I asked the principal of East Catholic High School what St. Anthony stood for. She said, "He's the patron saint of lost things. People pray to him to find something they've been missing." And I realized how much good we found in the inner city during those incredible days. We discovered that there are many people and places who are significantly reach out to others.

Perhaps Margaret Meade would have smiled if she had seen all that was happening across the city of Detroit. We all discovered how many small groups of thoughtful, committed citizens are changing their world for the better. And we got to participate in some of that. And we were changed too.

After the severe winters of 1976-77 and 1977-78, wren populations were dramatically reduced. It has taken about 15 years for their population to once again become substantial. We too have a carolina wren in our yard this spring. I first noticed it back by the wood pile, where it may be nesting. Later I saw it on our feeder, and shortly thereafter, I heard its loud "tea-kettle," "tea-kettle" song. Our yard was the center of its territory, since it was seen singing all around our house.

After following the sound to the bird, we could easily see the prominent white line above the eye, the buffy underparts and the typical cocked tail. If we have more mild winters, as we have been having for the past several years, more people will be seeing carolina wrens, at least until the next severe winters.

CREATIVE ENCOUNTERS

Regional arts center: It's still sensible goal

tunning as it was, it had to be done. Plymouth Community Arts Council had no choice but to scrap plans to convert Wilcox Mill, one of Henry Ford's old water-driven country plants, into a regional arts center.

The move proved the nonprofit council could step back from the thrill of renovating a historic mill and objectively weigh spiraling costs in its quest for a new operational base for arts-oriented educational and community outreach programs.

Not about to sulk, PCAC's volunteer facility committee already is forging ahead to find a lesscostly site for a multi-use center for the arts.

Financial hurdles plagued the Wilcox Mill project despite Wayne County agreeing to lease the concrete-block, 4,200-square-foot building to the arts council for $1 a year.

The arts council works from cramped quarters on the second floor of a historic building across from Kellogg Park in downtown Plymouth.

It tried to consolidate operations by injecting new life into the drab old mill, now a county parks maintenance garage. "We dealt with obstacles as they came up, but they just kept coming," said PCAC executive director Christine Ilas.

Funding detour

In 1991, the facility committee kicked off "Celebrate the Arts," a drive to raise the $765,000 it thought was needed to renovate Wilcox Mill. Exterior renovation of Nankin Mills, another old Ford country plant in Westland, buoyed their hopes.

But preliminary site tests revealed need for more reconstructive work on the 70-year-old Wilcox Mill, hiking the original price tag by at least 20 percent. Also, the county didn't land a hopedfor state grant to improve the grounds.

With Wilcox Lake across the road and the Rouge flowing beneath it, the planned arts center, poised on a crest in a historic site, would've made the Wilcox Road-Hines Drive crossroads an engaging eastern gateway to Plymouth.

The mill is magical — itself so arty with all the windows. And the view overlooking the lake is magnificent," said PCAC's Dianne Quinn.

The arts council raised $100,000, including $50,000 from the Ford Foundation. In May, the council sent donors a letter asking if their contributions could be kept while a search for another site resumed. "If a facility is not secured within three years," the letter stated, "your donation will be returned with interest."

Artistic haven

Limited classes now are taught in the arts coun-

The council envisions a haven for art buffs of all ages, skills and interests. The center would contain offices, classrooms, studios, an art exhibit gallery, a pottery studio and an art rental gallery.

The fare might include chamber concerts and major exhibitions like Michigan Art '92, a PCAC all-media fine arts competition now on hiatus, and Very Special Arts Michigan, a festival of artwork by physically and mentally disabled students.

With the plethora of art galleries and boosters in western Wayne County, a regional art center serving up classes year-round in clay, pottery, glassworking, figure drawing and other media would be a winner.

PCAC's operating budget is $100,000. Revenue comes from fund-raisers, memberships, local government and a small state grant. Community sponsorships pay for such performance events as Music in the Park as well the Isbister student visual art awards and in-school teacher project assistance grants. Our strategy is to look at every program we do and find an individual source of support rather than try to create one big operating budget and allocate money program by program," says Ilas. "Hopefully, this will ensure longevity of our pro-

She hopes to match businesses with related programs (like Curious Child and Pathways for Learning hosting Music in the Park's Kids Take Note event June 22). The desired upshot: good publicity for businesses and steady income for programs. A regional arts center also would be a boon for the many independent art clubs across Observerland. It would give them a rallying point and a collective impact.

From my perspective, it's important for the facility committee to regroup quickly and move beyond the disappointment of Wilcox Mill. It's Important to stay upbeat and not lose momentum.

I especially liked Quinn's assessment: "A new building now doesn't have to be where we stay forever. We need to get on our feet on the ground and become a real strong organization. We need to take small steps, not giant steps. Stability is key. We need to be more secure about what we're doing.'

nspired by history, legend and a passion for painting, romanticism bursts like a flaming arfrom the canvases of Scott David Mapes to create a window to the imagination.

Art lovers can view the paintings Mapes refers to as stylized realism based on fractal geometry on Satur-day and Sunday, July 17-18, at the 13th annual Art in the Park in Plymouth.

A Navajo Indian once told me to stay for as much of your life in front of a canvas and you'll be as happy as you can be," said Mapes at an interview in his parents' Westland

"I'm real passionate about my work and I'm patient. My paintings are very detailed, very structured. They take a long time. The most elaborate are the most time consuming."

Mapes has traveled extensively in the last three years, crisscrossing the country in search of wilderness and history for his paintings. He has exhibited work in nearly every state. Last year alone, his odometer clocked 16,000 miles.

Mapes leads the nomadic lifestyle with his dog, Bone, by his side. He bought Bone two years ago as a puppy for $35 from a family down on their luck in Arkansas. A modernday adventurer, Mapes and Bone have hiked the Rocky Mountains and Grand Canyon and swam in the Atlantic and Pacific, Gulf of Mexico and all of the Great Lakes except

One of the first stops he makes in a new town is at the used bookstore where he buys books on subjects ranging from art to history, biographies of Van Gogh and Ben Franklin as well as Homer's Odyssey.

"I spend a lot of time traveling and reading and talking to historians. I expand on what I see, I can add dimension or subtract from it,"

City of Gold: Scott David Mapes relays an old Pima Indian legend in "The Guardians" (right). The oil on canvas uses a well-balanced composition, combined with a sharp use of line and a palette of Southwest colors, to create a striking painting.

M'A Navajo Indian once told me to stay for as much of your life in front of a canvas and yeu'll be as happy as you can be."

Scott David Mapes

Basically a self-taught artist except for a few art classes taken as a student at Livonia Franklin High School, Mapes sees his painting as "experimenting with geometry and trying to balance it classically." He bases them on repeated geometric shapes and strives to show "the past, present and future all in the same work.

"The Guardians," a large-scale oil on canvas, features a Pima Indian legend in Arizona. Similar to the Noah story found in the Old Testament, the Pimas believe God destroyed all vegetation and life when the Indians took advantage of it and replaced it with rock in the form of

Native American jewelry, rugs in spotlight

By Linda Ann Chomin Special Writer

Native West gallery hosts its annual American Indian jewelry and Navajo rug show with special appearances by leading authorities on the Southwest arts Friday through Sunday, July 16-18, at the gallery, 863 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

Internationally known trader, Edmond "Bing" Crosby of Albuquerque, N.M., and Navajo weaving dealer Tom Wheeler of Hogback Trading Post, just west of Farmington, N.M., will answer questions about their wares as well as relay American Indian legend and beliefs.

Crosby brings jewelry to the show;

rugs.
"A surprise treat for the show is Tom has sent along ahead of his visit a lot of traditional alabaster carvsaid Becky Dodson, Native West co-owner with husband Doug.

The three-dimensional stone sculpture was created by Navajo artist Brian Begay, who has been chiseling the likenesses of eagles and Indian chiefs for the last three years.

"Brian Begay is a self-taught sculptor whose work is traditional and cultural in nature. He recently won the Intertribal Ceremonial show in Gallup, N.M.," Dodson said.

Since 1981. Wheeler has held the position as the world's largest supplier of Navajo handwoven rugs. He frequently lectures at the Denver Museum of Natural History and Gilcrease Museum of Western Art in Tulsa on the important contribution American Indian art has made to our country's history.

From shearing the sheep to washing the wool, gathering plants like lupine, liatris, sunflower, snake weed and a variety of berries for dye, spinning then weaving the wool, the Navajo art consumes untold months of labor.

"For example, we've bought Christmas lights to hang outside township buildings and flower pots to put along business districts.

Ann Arbor Art Fairs next week

By Linda Ann Chomin Special Writer

The Ann Arbor Art Fairs, one of the top 10 fine art and contemporary craft shows in the country, will fill the streets of Ann Arbor with art, entertainment, food and fun for the entire family July 21-

Art fair hours are 9 a.m., to 9 p.m. Wednesday-Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

This year, the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair jury waded through more than 1,500 artists applications.

Selected as Michigan's Best Summer Festival by readers of AAA's Michigan Living magazine, the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair offers ongoing art demonstrations thoughout the fair.

Navajo rugs range from $150 to $4,500.

"There is no piece of art more authentically western or more uniquely American than a Navajo rug," Wheeler said.

Crosby, with more than 35 years of trading experience, is a wealth of information on American Indian culture.

The colorful trader will bring the largest inventory of jewelry to Michigan to date, including an exclusive line of 14K gold and silver Navajo jewelry. Crosby offers an extensive stock of traditional Navajo, Hopi, Zuni and Santo Domingo Indian silver, stone and shell jewelry.

For many, American Indian tribe jewelry was a symbol of wealth and status. They have worn pieces of shell and turquoise for hundreds of years. However, it wasn't until the last 100 years that metal and silversmithing became a part of their jewelry.

The Zuni learned the art of working silver from the Navajo around 1870. Zuni Indians are known for the lapidary skills required for channel inlay and cluster or needlepoint styles.

Hopi Indians are known for their overlay technique where a design is cut from one silver sheet then soldered to another. The Navajo corner the art of silver working by fashioning leaves, feathers and stampwork to serve as settings for turquoise and other stones. The Santo Domingo Indians create exquisite heishi (he-she) jewel-

Ann Arbor's the backdrop for highly textured drama

VICTORIA

"Sister Water," by Nancy Willard (255 pp., $21, Knopf).

Nancy Willard, an essayist, poet, children's author, novelist and Ann Arbor native, has chosen her birthplace as the setting for this intriguing little novel.

Marked by nooks, crannies, waterways, circuitous streets and pathways, the landscape seems an especially apt choice for this meandering tale that emphasizes how intertwined are the mysterious and the mundane.

The contemporary backdrop of this highly textured drama often seems nearly as important as its players.

Area readers especially will appreciate the chance to visit real-life bits of Ann Arbor through Willard's poetic prose. The Wolverine Den, University Hospital, Fuller Park and the Huron River itself figure importantly here.

Another treat: dropping in on a number of strictly fictional spots Willard has created, especially the Buddha Uproar Cafe on Liberty Street.

Into her setting Willard brings a memorable melting pot of quirky characters.

Begin with Jessie, who came to Ann-Arbor long ago to attend the University of Michigan. Not long after, she met and eventually married Henry Woolman, proprietor of Woolman Scientific Supply Co., located on the banks of the Huron.

Though the supply compnay looked to Jessie rather ordinary on the outside, she found it a very unusual place on the inside. Through it runs an underground stream and, in the stream, swim "ghostly versions of bluegills and perch.'

Now, nearly 60 years later, Henry is gone and Jessie, befuddled with age, is struggling to hold on to what is left of her life. What is left is the old building that still houses the stream, the crumbling house in which she has lived for years, and her family.

Even as she struggles, death seems to become more and more a part of her daily life. Her friends die, she becomes ill, her son-in-law is killed in a car accident. Even the occasional old man who asks her out can't be counted on to stay alive long enough to make the date. (Willard's dry humor goes far toward making this story the success that it is.)

As Jessie struggles, her two daughters, Martha and Ellen, and her grandson, Stevie, wrestle with their own demons, all of which involve change and transition: two main themes of this story.

One of the problems they face is a developer named Harvey Mack, who is determined to acquire what's left of the supply company, so that he can destroy it and build (whate else?) a shiny new shopping mall on the spot. He also is, by the way, determined to acquire Jessie's widowed daughter, Ellen. One of the more telling scenes in the story occurs when she and son, Stevie, go to dinner at Mack's palatial but grim home and find Mack trying to deal with "a perfect invasion of toads in the kitchen."

Enter Sam Theopolis, an ex-veterinarian of sorts, and a star waiter at the Buddha Uproar, who lands a job as Jessie's live-in caretaker.

A native of Jessie's hometown, Drowning Bear, Wis., (linkages and similarities occur throughout "Sister Water" and are an integral part of this story), Sam believes his past experience in loving and caring for fourlegged animals qualifies him for the job. And, as it happens, he's exactly

Sam, however, comes with his own troubled past and a set of problems of his own, which are soon magnified and complicated by the discovery of a young woman's body floating in a nearby pond.

"Sister Water" is a story about many things: time, change, loss, pain, aging, love, living, dying, death, where we came from, where we're going . . . All weighty matters indeed. But there is nothing heavy or ponderous about this book. And essentially what keeps it flying is Willard's lyricism and her splendid way with words:

"By late afternoon the clouds over Ann Arbor shimmered a pale yellow, darkening quickly like bruised fruit. The air held its breath; parking lots all over the city glistened as if they vere melting."

Anyone who knows Ann Arbor will recognize that scene. Somehow, Willard lends it an edge of magic though, settles in to tell this moving story.

Artist shows new painting

A Plymouth Township artist kicks off a one-person show with oil painting demonstrations Saturday-Sunday, July 17-18, at Creative Framing & Fabric Accents, 853 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

Andrea DeZell spotlights use of oil techniques on canvas and paper 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. The demonstrations are in conjunction with the 13th annual Art in the Park in downtown Plym-

DeZell's 35-piece exhibition continues through July 31. The centerpiece is a three- by four-foot oil on canvas entitled "The Resurrection." The commissioned painting focuses on an arisen Christ coming down a path strewn with flowers from the tomb.

DeZell also is well known around Observerland for her contemporary oils on paper, which exude a combination of abstraction and realism.

Her abstract realism leans toward florals and fruits. "But I'll paint virtually anything. I do a lot of commission pieces; portraits, landscapes, home settings, still life," said DeZell, a member of the 3 Cities and Farmington artists clubs.

Regular show hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday-Friday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Arts and crafts to surround Kellogg Park

By Linda Ann Chomin Special Writer

From oil to acrylic and pastel paintings, the 13th annual Art in the Park will showcase 350 artists and crafters Saturday-Sunday, July 17-18, on the streets surrounding Kellogg Park in downtown Plymouth.

From 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., exhibitors from as far away as Guatemala to as close as Plymouth as well as New York, Colorado, Florida, New Mexico, Arizona, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Georgia, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, New Jersey, Virginia and Wisconsin promise something for everyone. Art in the Park is Michigan's second biggest art fair to Ann Arbor.

'The city of Plymouth will soon roll out its welcome mat for hundreds of artists/and for the many thousands of people who visit our community from near and far.' said Dianne Quinn, founder, producer and director of Art in the

Among the more unusual visitors will be Saginaw artist John Galbo, who will show an art form

he describes as impressionistic photography.

Galbo has developed a technique in which he uses photography and an antique mirrored reflection to achieve impressionistic paint-like images. He uses live models but employs no airbrush for his finished prints. His work often is mistaken for watercolors

His handmade prints are limited edition and signed but because a photographing process is involved, his art pieces sell for $45 for a 10- by 14-inch print to $545 for a 36- by 48-inch framed and matted image. Prints can be purchased singularly, matted and signed, or ordered in a washed maple frame. "I'm very enthused about the show's popularity," Quinn said. "We've attracted some very talented people from all over the United States.'

Artists and crafters will display not only paintings but photography, pottery, basketry, fiber, floral and folk art, jewelry, calligraphy, garden art topiary, toys, wood, wearable art and stained, leaded and blownglass.

"It's one of the largest shows. We have a lot of really nice interesting work, Quinn said.

Hands-on art activities, continuous live musical entertainment and plenty of food made this show the winner of Michigan Living Treasure Awards, Gems of The Great Lakes "Best Art Fair' cate-

"Plymouth's Art in the Park should be a very pleasant happening for people of all interests and ages,' Quinn said.

"For the first time this year, Ann Arbor Trail and Union Street won't be open creating a nice layout for the show.

Visitors to the fair can rest their tired feet and refresh themselves in the shade of trees in Kellogg Park. Fresh pastries and buttered popcorn are only two of the many food items that will be

Families, art, entertainment and food paint the essence of Art in the Park. "I thought we had a beautiful setting here in Plymouth for art, Quinn said. "We started out with 30 artists in Kellogg Park, now we have 350 not only in the park but lining the sidewalks surrounding it.

Entertainment Schedule

- July 17-18, continuous music by Bakra Bata, an eight-piece steel drum and percussion band from Seattle, Wash.
- July 17, noon to 1 p.m., Lunar Octet, a latin jazz band plays its own highly original and eclectic music. An unusual combination of instruments combined with talented and imaginative musicians make this group a big hit.
- July 17-18 (two shows daily), Chautauqua Express, entertaining and educational American music. Audience participation makes this group a sensational experience for all ages.
- July 18 (afternoon), Hip Squeak Puppet Theater, lifesized puppet production from Toledo. A contemporary-classic theater exnerience. Children will be spellbound.
- July 17, Canticles for the Bride, a local folk duet featuring Jennifer Stone and Julie Evans.

the Superstition Mountains.

The Guardians, or Pima Indians, were then instructed "to let no disgrace fall upon the land. The greater the morality you have.' God said. 'the more it will rain and the river will flow.' Mapes said.

Mapes compartmentalizes the painting, telling the story in two dimensions.

"It's two paintings in one. The mauve, yellow and desert colors are formed in rectangles and represent one dimension, the desert. The greens and blues are the other dimension, the City of Gold buried beneath the mountains," Mapes said.

The Indian on the right painted on the rock in hieroglyphics the legacy of how to get through (to the City of Gold)."

Mapes hopes his paintings enlighten and raise the spirits of the viewer and never offend - and beyond that tell a story, whether it's a legend like "The Guardians" or Biblical like the Israelites "Crossing the Red Sea."

"There's a certain spiritual quality of life. That's what my art is all about," Mapes said.

'I hope people think the paintings are optimistic and understand them and then be uplifted. Life is very constructive and creative. We all create one way or another. When you discover or create something new, you feel good

The pallete for his paintings is chosen with "soothingness" in mind. He uses earth tones and southwest sand colors as well as the mauves and strawberries tostreak the sky as night descends.

"At sunrise and sunset, the colors change a lot. In the day, the natural color of the rock is red but changes with the light," Mapes said. "In the day, sand will look tan, then give a hue of purple or green at sunset. It's because of the sky.'

"The Crystal Reader," a work in progress, focuses on the Battle at Little Big Horn. In a sketchbook, he has initially worked out the concept for his largest painting to date.

My ideas are too complex to paint. I have to draw it first," he "I want to paint what's known to have actually happened and what I think happened at Custer's Last Stand.'

Unlike earlier paintings, "The Crystal Reader" strives to add curves. Planes and straight lines forming geometric shapes have dominated his work until now. Using a five-foot wooden step ladder as an easel, Mapes will continue painting the work daring Art in the Park.

Mapes paints and exhibits at nearly 40 shows a year. After Plymouth, his next stops are Chicago, Topeka and Albuquerque.

"I love to paint. I physically like standing and painting," Mapes said. "Festivals are a great forum for taking my work to the people. I hope people come out to the show, enjoy the festivities and have some fun.

Mapes began painting in 1975 and exhibiting in 1987. This is the first time he will exhibit at Art in the Park in Plymouth.

Art camp builds creative skills, boosts confidence

By Linda Ann Chomin Special Writer

D & M Art Studio in Plymouth offers a way of turning those long free hours for kids out on summer break into a creative learning ex-

For the third year in a row, D & M, this year in cooperation with the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department, will present a summer of fun with weeklong art

For three hours, the children can immerse themselves into creative activity, experimenting with various art media under professional instructors and having said Sharon Dillenbeck, camp director and owner of D & M Art Studio.

'It's a creative atmosphere. Our theme this year is, 'Everything Under the Sea.' On the first day, each child receives their own masonite drawing board and sketchbook.

The camps are structured for three age groups: preschool, ages 3-6; student, 6-10; and teens, 10-16. This year, the camps move from D & M to the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer.

Dillenbeck, along with instructors Janie Tucci, Sandy Banks and Maria Schram, will lead the children in exploring a variety of art media, including drawing, painting, clay, paper mache, pastel and colored pencil.

We're offering more fine arts this year- less craft, more drawing and painting skills," Dillenbeck said.

Day one begins with budding artists creating designs on their boards in acrylic. Then it's on to making paper sculpture of fun fish, like the sea horse and octopus. Learning to make paper from materials recycled from around the house, and cartooning, end the first day.

Day two, provides instruction on how to draw and the actual rendering of still life as well as more handmade paper plus weav-

Some of the children don't like to paint, Dillenbeck says, so day three introduces colored pencil, scratchboard and collage minia-

Day four finds the young artists designing an imaginary fish, then making a fish kite. Chalk and oil pastels introduces them to the world of landscape and, of course, seascape.

The last day of camp, Dillenbeck holds a workshop in her specialty, watercolor. She teaches techniques like wet on wet, dry brush, and experimental water-

After the last camp the week of Aug. 16, the annual art exhibition showcases the talents of the young artists, with each entering two masterpieces. Last year, 170 artworks were displayed. This year, Dillenbeck hopes to show

"I researched this and found out this is Michigan's largest children's art show. This is an exhibition, not a competition. They all receive an award, ribbon or certificate," Dillenbeck said.

The exhibition will take place 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 22, in the Plymouth Cultural Center.

A graduate of the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, Dillenbeck is an art instructor at Our Lady of Victory in Northville and for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Adult Education, Canton Parks and Recreation, Plymouth Parks and Recreation and D & M Art

Her teaching philosophy and main objective "is to supply masses of art materials in a lively and creative atmosphere, to show the techniques of the medium and to step back and let the child cre-

The weeklong art camps range in price from $55 to $95. They include a drawing board, sketchbook, T-shirt and all materials. To register, call D & M Art Studio at 453-3710 or drop by the studio at 710 N. Mill, in Plymouth, from noon to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Friday or Saturday.

celebrates its 26th anniversary with 235 artists lining North University, Liberty, Maynard and William. Sponsored by the State Street Area Association, which is comprised of members from area businesses, the fair's nine-person jury screens artists for fresh and innovative approaches. On the corner of State Street and William, the State Street Area Art Fair hosts the Ann Arbor Fiber Arts Guild booth.

Now in its 23rd year, the Summer Art Fair sponsored by the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans takes pride in being the largest of the three fairs: more than 540 artists display their wares on Main, Liberty and State Streets. The fair also hosts the Imagination Station, where families create works of art for free. The station is at the U.S. Post Office

Plaza on Liberty Street. New this year: the three art fairs will begin an audience recycling program. So when you see the special waste containers for cans, cardboard and newsprint, do your part by placing trash in the appropriate containers. The recycling program is being initiated with the help of the city of Ann Arbor, Mr. Rubbish, Ann Arbor Observer and Coke.

The Ann Arbor Transportation Authority (AATA) once again offers shuttle and trolley service 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday-Friday and 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday. Art fair visitors are encouraged to park free at Briarwood Mall, off I-94 on State Street, or Pioneer High School, Main at Stadium. Shuttle bus fare is $2 for adults (round trip). Children 7 and younger ride free. The Art Fair Trolley operates between the three fairs, charging 50 cents per passenger, or free with a shuttle ticket. For AATA route information, call 996-0400.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Realtors see solid increase in used home sales

Realtors. normally an optimistic lot, see good things ahead for the rest of this year as far as used home sales go.

Three of four brokers who responded to a recent survey of the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors forecast a voluine sales increase between 5 and 10 percent.

WWOCAR members sold 14,227 houses in 1992.

Some 5,229 sales were recorded through May of this year. June, July and August typically are strong sales months

About 70 responded to the recent survey.

Continuation of relatively modest mortgage interest rates, currently near 20-year lows, was the strongest reason given for the expected market rise

This outweighed the next three listed factors, an improving economy, good choice of homes and more first-time buyers, by about a three-to-one margin.

More than 70 percent of the survey respondents expect that listings, the lifeblood of a real estate market, will also increase by 5 to 10 percent over 1992 levels. Last year, 33,474 listings were charted with some houses listing more than once.

Nineteen percent of the responding brokers expect listings to remain the same, 10 percent anticipate a decrease.

The median price paid for homes, with half selling for more and half less, in the WWOCAR of broker, respondents as ending the year 5 to 8 percent higher than the $87,500 posted in 1992.

The median sales price as of the end of May this year was

About two thirds of respondents anticipate that mortgage rates will climb before year end. However, some 30 percent believe that rates will remain near current levels and more than five percent expect a further decline.

"The survey also noted some possible scenarios that could put a damper on the market," said William Deacon, WWOCAR pres-

"Most seen as negative factors in priority of mention were coneconomy, tax increases, higher unemployment, a shortage of first-time buyers as a market base and a declinein listings.

"Overall, the positives were most prevalent, so we remain extremely confident that this will be one of the better recent years for home buyers and sellers," Deacon "Conditions are expected to stay highly favorable over the next several months and we anticipate a lot of early movement to head off continuing price increases or growth in the mortgage interest rate.

WWOCAR, the state's largest board, has a coverage area of 1,600 square miles including Farmington Hills, Farmington, part of township of Plymouth, Canton, Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Redford.

Try 10-year fixed

If you are looking for ways to reduce interest costs and build equity on your home at the same time, some mortgage lenders are suggesting alternatives to the traditional 30-year fixed mortgage; namely, a 10-year fixed rate.

"We expect 10-year mortgages to become more popular, particularly during this period of low interest rates," said William R. Yaw, Jr., senior vice president for Troy-based Standard Federal Bank. "Ten-year loans can provide a major interest saving op- $691, $1,135 on the 10-year loan.

Here an example of how it can work: On a $100,000, 30-year fixed mortgage, a homeowner will play $148.639 in interest over the life of the loan based on an interest rate of 7.375 percent (7.68 percent APR). With a 10-year fixed, the homeowner will pay only $36,258 on the same $100,000 loan based on an interest rate of 6.50 percent (7.153 APR) - a difference of $112,381.

On top of that, the homeowner will have built $100,000 in equity in just 10 years.

Clearly, though, the 10-year loan is not for everyone. Here's why: The monthly payment on the 30-year loan would have been

Back to the stone age?

■ No one is recommending a return to the cave, but with the instability of the lumber industry and the technological advances in the concrete industry, complete concrete homes are looking better and better.

By Chris McCosky Staff Writer

Dick Manning had been in the concrete business for 30 years and pouring concrete walls for 20 when he heard about this new system for building homes out of concrete. Complete homes, not just basements and drivereys driveways.

"I looked at it for a year," said Manning, who owns the Portland Concrete Supply Co. and High Energy Walls near Lansing. "I figured, no way can this work. No way."

Still, the concept intrigued him. Miracle houses. Environmentally sound, energy efficient houses. Houses that are easier and cost less to build than conventional wood-frame houses. Air-tight houses that stay cool in the summer and warm in the winter. Houses like the 4,707-square-foot one in Omaha, Neb., that cost an average of just $29.58 per month to heat and cool for a full year, and is so quiet you could barely hear a party of 10 people carrying on in an adjacent room.

So Manning looked closer. He went to a seminar in Indiana and inspected some of these concrete homes. He went out to Omaha and saw one of the first test homes. He was struck not only by the efficiency of the homes, but by their beauty. You think concrete homes and you think caves. A return to the stone age.

But what Manning saw was architectural and aesthetic beauty, all stone: You wouldn't guess this beautiful home is made out of concrete, would you? But it is. Techniques. in concrete masonry and precast concrete panels are allowing builders to construct homes that are up to 70 percent more energy efficient than wood-builthomes.

sorts of colors, shapes and designs, concrete that looked like brick and stone and wood, something the experts were calling, "concrete homescaping."

"It was scary," Manning said.
"This is the best thing I've seen in 30 years. Really. Everything they say about it is true."

Nobody's building them

Yet, Manning is one of a very few who are building these concrete homes in Michigan.

"Nobody around here is building them," said Nancy Rosen, spokeswoman for the Builders' Association of Southeastern Michigan.

In fact, you are likely to get a very strong negative reaction to the concept from area builders and architects. "I think it's very reactionary," said Keith Logsdon, architect with CBI Design in Birmingham. "I'm not sure we really want a return to the stone age. I mean, there is a reason we evolved from that point."

Said Robert Bryce of West Bleomfield-based Bryce and Palazzola Associates: "I just don't see it, from two

Lumber prices fall but industry frets over Clinton's plan

By Doug Funke Staff Writer

The spotted owl apparently wasn't the only cause for soaring lumber prices here earlier this year.

Builders now say that the economy, market factors, speculation and greed also played parts.

Back in March, when the Builders Association called for a lobbying effort for relief from timber harvesting restrictions, environmental activists generally and the owl specifically came in for all the blame for higher prices.

But since then, lumber prices, which the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan had maintained added $4,500 to the price of a 2,000-square-foot house between October and March, have eased considerably.

And the lower prices have held since President Bill Clinton recently announced a restrictive timber harvesting policy on federal lands, a plan which one BASM official termed "totally unacceptable."

A national index of lumber prices including framing pieces and plywood had fallen by July 6 to the same level as last August, said Robert R. Jones, a West Bloomfield builder who tracks prices for BASM.

The price index has dropped by a third since February, Jones said.

"I think it's a combination of things — I've always felt that way," he said.

"I'm not sure the market situation would have existed if the environmental situation didn't," Jones said. "It's one thing to say, 'save a tree.' But it gives another impact to say, 'save a living ani-

"Second, when this whole thing came about, the court decisions were sustained, the government cut back, the perception of the market was that there's going to be a shortage. If people perceive there's not enough supply, demand increases, price goes up.

"Add the third ingredient:
We're in a profit motivated society," Jones said. "I suspect (lumber) companies saw if they were getting demand, they could sell their product at a tidy profit."

Demand, however, eased off due in part to a slow economy, Jones said. Some dealers refused to buy at higher prices and suppliers, who had filled up regional reload centers, gradually reduced prices.

Fred Capaldi, a Rochester Hills builder and BASM president, said he's noticed that the price of lumber has fallen by more than 50 percent since the association called for relief and a federal timber summit in mid March.

"I think mostly there was such a supply of lumber in the market-place, they had to sell. When supply exceeds demand, naturally the price will come down," Capaldi said.

"The market thing is real. The environmental thing is real," he said. "I think one is feeding off the other."

BASM definitely isn't happy with Clinton's plan to limit timber harvests on federal lands in the Pacific Northwest to 1.2 billion board feet annually over the next 10 years.

Some 4.4 billion feet had been cut annually during the 1980s.

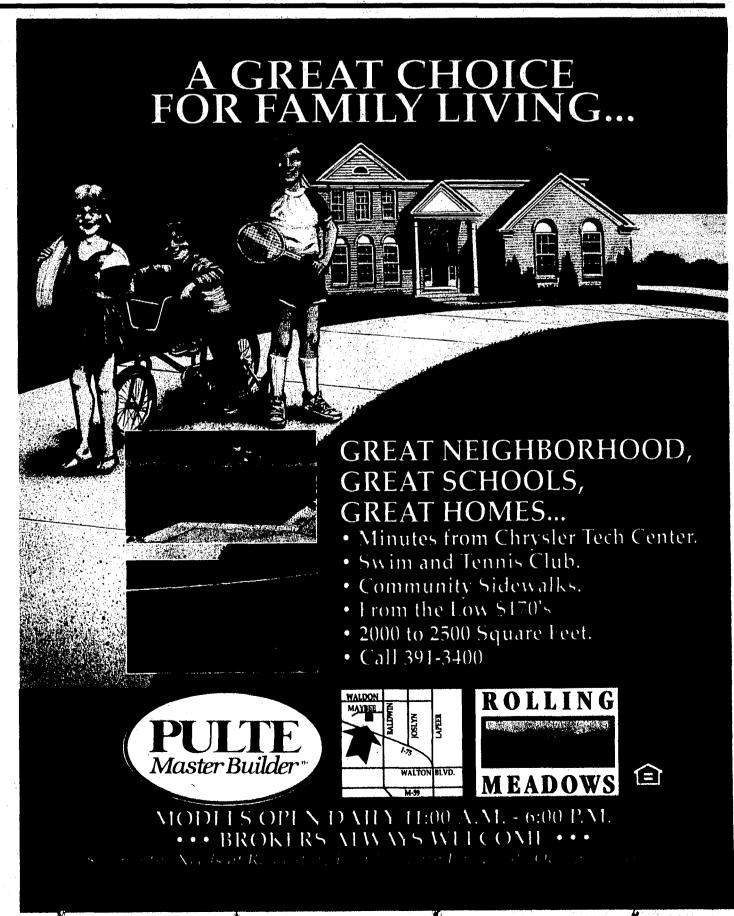

"The forest plan announced by the president is a far cry from a balanced solution he called for in April," said Irvin H. Yackness, BASM executive vice president.

"Builders, like any other citizen, care about nature, natural resources. We also care about housing people. We care about jobs.

"Allowing a timber harvest of only 1.2 billion feet annually will cost tens of thousands of jobs, it will force lumber prices up and cause problems with the nation's economic recovery," Yackness

Yackness suspects that BASM and the national home building industry will attempt to move the timber battle from the courts and executive branch to Congress.

"I think the only hope left for home buyers and workers involved in lumber is to have Congress develop a plan of its own," angles: One, I don't see it from an energy, thermal resistance point of view and I don't see the economics of it. You just take a basement concrete wall: that is very expensive, like $50 per foot. A regular stud wall probably costs a third of that.

Builders questioned concrete's lack of flexibility ("You can forget about remodeling or moving electrical outlets and plumbing," said one. "And how about hanging a picture?") and its durability.

"Concrete always cracks," Bryce said. "I've never seen one that didn't no matter how you reinforce it, no matter how perfectly you prepare it.'

And, hey, don't even bother to talk to the lumbermen about it.

'They talk about saving energy. Well, the energy used to produce and install concrete is three times more than what is used to make wood and it's not renewable. Wood is our only renewable resource. It re-grows itself," said Ron Salvatore, president of the Michigan Lumber and Building Materials Association. "And, all things considered, wood costs less. There is a reason that most builders believe that wood is absolutely the best building material on this planet.'

Educating Mr. Builder

There is another reason builders believe that wood is good, according to proponents of concrete homes: Builders aren't sufficiently educated about the other materials available to them. Builders are the first to admit that they are very loyal to tried and true meth-

'I can remember a while back, about 12 to 14 years ago, when we were introduced to roof trusses. said Fred Capaldi, president of the Builders' Association of Southeast Michigan. "Roof carpenters all said, 'I'm not going to use that thing. It's no good.' But the builders had to be educated. They had to be shown that we had a product that was superior and that would allow us to do things faster and better.

"Today, if you ask roof carpenters to build one the old-fashioned way, without a truss, most wouldn't know hoŵ to do it.'

Capaldi believes the same education process has to occur before concrete houses become as popular here as they are in the south and west.

"The time is ready for this product," he said. "It's a good product and I would not hesitate to use it myself.'

Romancing the stone

Realize, though, that we are not talking about traditional masses of poured concrete for walls and foundations. We are talking about things like concrete masonry, cast-in-place walls, PolySteel insulating forming systems (a product that is opening the eyes of many builders including Manning and Capaldi), lightweight concrete wall panelling systems with fiberglass and mesh core, and fiber cement shingles - panels of concrete that can be interlocked and stacked like bricks or bound by a series of ties and metal

We aren't talking about cave architecture here.

Let the education begin:

■ Concrete is green. It really is environmentally sound and will ease the pressure on our reportedly dwindling timber resources. Here's a stat that the concrete people reel off as quickly as their birthdate: Every time you build a house you use 41 trees, 23 for the walls and floors, 13 for the roof, five for the interior.

Concrete, on the other hand, is manufactured locally from common and abundant raw materials like limestone, clay and sand, as well as an increasing array of consumer and industrial waste products like fly ash from burnt coal, recycled polystyrene beads, and slag from steel mills.

■ Concrete is energy efficient. It will cost less to heat and cool than wood-built homes. Again, an explanation from the concrete folks: The mass of concrete acts like a reservoir with the ability to store and slow down the passage of heat from the interior to the exterior and vice versa.

It's about R Value, thermal resistance, the measure of the ability of material to resist heat flow. A typical 2-by-6 wood construction with normal insulation carries an R-Value of about 21.2. Most building codes require at least an R-19. The concrete homes are getting readings of R-25 to R-32. With the insulating form system, houses have achieved ratings as high as R. 56.

With concrete, you can expect to reduce your energy bill by as much as 70 percent even in Mich-

Concrete is safe, durable, easily maintained: It can't rust or rot and it gets stronger with age. You won't have termite problems. It weathers naturally and never needs to be sealed or painted. Concrete is inert, non-toxic, won't burn or blow away.

Yes, it'll crack

10987 Eagle Cove, South Lyon

■ Concrete will crack. But not in a way that will harm the structure or aesthetics of the house.

"The first thing you have to realize is that the formed, stay-inplace concrete is 50 percent stronger than the traditional poured concrete," said Jay Williamson, president of 3/10 Insulated Forms in Omaha, national distributors of the popular PolySteel concrete forms, who lives in the 4,707-square-foot cement house previously mentioned.

The moisture is retained longer in our forms and that makes it stronger.'

The concrete is reinforced by re-bar (steel bars within the form) and by post and beam control joints about every foot.

"There's no chance of structural damage," Manning said.

■ Concrete houses can be remodeled. But it will require more work and probably cost more to have

"We have saws and drills that can cut anything," Manning said. "You can do anything you want to these places.

Yes, they'll cost less

■ Concrete houses will cost less, eventually. Most everyone, builders and concrete people, estimate the cost for building a 2,500square-foot home out of wood and concrete to be fairly close. But by the time you factor in all the energy savings and maintenance costs, the concrete comes out less

Manning estimated that building a concrete home would cost $10 less per square foot than building a traditional wood home. But Capaldi and others thought that was a bit too high.

You are going to save on framing material, insulation and carlabor on the concrete homes," Capaldi said. "But it will cost you more for electrical, plumbing and dry-walling. Once you get over that, though, you are going to save a lot more.

Williamson's five-bedroom. 31/2-bath home in Omaha, built in the late 1980s, cost $170,000, which was the same as the similar-sized wood homes built at the time. His energy bills have been running nearly 80 percent less than his neighbors'.

"Look, I'm in the concrete business so obviously I'm going to say good things about concrete homes," Williamson said. "But when you get out and see these homes and understand all the advantages, it just makes all the sense in the world to build these. It won't cost you more and it gives you energy efficiency you just can't achieve with lumber.

Only time will tell if the stone age returns to Michigan. But hey, stranger things have happened. They're bringing back the Flintstones, aren't they?

Currently, there are only two distributers of the concrete forms in Michigan: Jim Achors, PolyS-teel, in Eaton Rapids (517-663-8587) and Ray Jawor, ICE Block, in Port Huron (313-385-7481). Manning can be reached at 517-647-4772. Williamson can be reached at 1-800-468-6344. For more information on concrete and its uses, call the Portland Cement Association in Skokie, Ill., 708-

2 area commercial Realtors merge

Two commercial real estate firms - Trerice Tosto headquartered in Bingham Farms and Hanzl, Kepic and VanLokeren of Troy — have merged to form what they say is the largest full-service commercial/industrial operation in Michigan.

The merger immediately strengthens and expands Trerice Tosto's brokerage operations, particularly industrial brokerage.

The marriage gives Hanzl, Kep-ic's clients access to the full range of services that Trerice Tosto offers including office brokerage, property and asset management, appraisal and consulting, and investment brokerage.

The combined firms will operate under the Trerice Tosto name

Last year, the two firms combined for 513 brokerage transactions valued at $153.77 million.

Combined capabilities include 41 brokers, nine full time appraisers, six property managers and support staff including communications and market research.

Robert Hanzl, Peter Kepic and Gary Glotzhober have become principals and shareholders of Trerice Tosto. Hanzl, Kepic's five brokers and two-person support staff have been offered comparable positions at Trerice Tosto.

"This merger...creates a very strong real estate firm with local roots that offers depth and experience in every important area of business real estate needs," said

'It's a win-win situation for all involved — both firms, our clients and the local real estate indussaid Kepic, who began his real estate career at Trerice Tosto.

Several firms approached him about a merger over the years, Kepic said, but Trerice Tosto got the nod due to its 68-year history and superior reputation.

"It's a terrific fit," Kepic said. "We share similar goals and standards, a dedication to client service and an emphasis on integ-

How to keep handle on your eroding concrete

AP - Sidewalks take a beating from the very beginning.

While a house is under construction, a new sidewalk often floats high on a bed of fillsand, which eventually erodes from the sides and is swallowed by utility trenches.

Over the years, the soil be-neath the sidewalk heaves and settles. It all adds up to cracks and other problems.

To deal with cracks, the goal is to seal out water, because wet soil beneath a sidewalk only exacerbates the problems of frost heave and settling.

Narrow cracks less than a half-inch should be caulked shut with a liquid polymer crack filler. One such product is Sure-Fix Pour-n-Patch, made by W.R. Bonsal Co., of Charlotte, N.C.

Most concrete crack fillers will not cure properly when applied more than a half-inch deep. Deeper cracks require packing the joint with some form of backing, such as foamplastic backing rod, or pouring the filler in two or more applications, each three-quarterinch deep

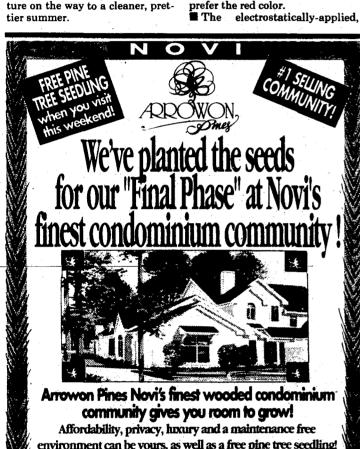

Highlights of the crack repair process begins with first brushing away debris from the cracks and then pouring in liq-uid-polymer crack filler to a level just below the surface. On edge cracks or breaks, undercut the edge of the concrete with a cold chisel to increase the bonding surface. Install a form board against the side of the slab. Then cover the board with masking tape to keep the patch from sticking to the board.

More to the Durango than fancy rooflines

The first thing you notice on the Durango, a 2,534-square-foot, two-story home design by Landmark Designs of Eugene, Ore., is the unique rooflines which give it a kind of southwestern, Tex-Mex

But there is much more to this design. Like multipaned windows and decorative brickwork, the connecting two-car garage, side-walk and the extended porch.

Two bedrooms are upstairs. The owners' suite is below. The room next to it, labeled as a den or an office on the floor plan, could make an ideal nursery. Another door could be added to provide direct access to the master

The adults can confine their day-to-day living to the main floor, once the children are grown, eserving the second floor rooms for grandchildren or guests.

Each of the upper bedrooms has a walk-in closet. Two more closets, for linen and storage, are also on the upper level. The bathroom is outfitted with a laundry chute that feeds into a utility room below.

Skylights brighten the kitchen, which features two eating areas: a nook and an eating bar. The bar provides partial separation beween the kitchen and large family room. In the kitchen you will find a large walk-in pantry with triple access, double ovens, a dishwasher and a sink that faces the street through a garden win-

A full bathroom is conveniently close to all of the family living areas. Basement steps are across the hall.

Utilities are hidden behind pocket doors in a large room with lots of counter and cabinet space and a deep sink.

A door from the garage opens into the family room, right next to the kitchen.

The master suite is huge and well-isolated from the noise in the rest of the home.

Both the living room and dining room are vaulted and have a fireplace that can be enjoyed from either room. Sliding glass doors open onto the patio.

To get a closer look at the Durango: The study plan number is 332-310, send $7.50 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Ore. 97402.
