Jury acquits Glenn High senior

Families of both a John Glenn High School cheerleader killed last year in a car accident and the youth charged with causing her death expressed relief Tuesday following the youth's acquittal on a charge of negligent homicide.

By Barbara Wilson Staff Writer

Brian Morrison started his senior year at John Glenn High School yesterday.

He returned to classes with a clear head knowing that he had been acquitted of negligent homicide and felonious driving charges in connection with a car accident that left his girlfriend, Melissa Thompson, dead and another man seriously injured.

After about four hours of deliberation Tuesday night a jury found Morrison, 17, not guilty. The five-day trial in juvenile court was before Probate Judge Cathie B. Maher.

"It was a relief to finally tell the truth, my side of the story," Morrison

"We feel great that this is over with and that we can get on with things," said Carol Morrison, Brian's mother. "We knew from day one that Brian was telling the truth and that he didn't do anything wrong.'

The Thompson and Morrison families waited together Tuesday for the verdict. Meliasa's family has been equally supportive of Morrison and made a plea to the prosecutor early on that no charges be filed against the vouth.

"I only wish people had listened to us," said Linda Thompson, mother of the deceased girl. "We knew all along that Brian would never do anything to hurt Melissa. It just makes us angry that thousands and thousands of dollars were spent on this."

Livonia school voters OK tax increase

Letter triggers pain, anger

By Marie Chestney Staff Writer

The letter that swiftly brought back memories of one horrible spring night in 1989 arrived in a Westland home Aug. 21.

It's not that the memory of that night - and the days that fol-— are ever far from the lowed thoughts of Darlene Hodges, newly elected president of the Wayne County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

It's just that with the passage of time and the rush of daily living, the memory of that awful night when she learned of the drunken-driving traffic deaths of her son and his friend in Florida had dimmed, superseded by the memory of the 18 years her son had lived.

'Reading that letter devastated me," Hodges said. "I felt just like the day I learned that my son was dead. Once again I thought, 'No, this can't be happening.'

But it was. And now Hodges is hoping that that same outpouring of support that came in the wake of the deaths of her son, Craig Allard, 18, and fellow Franklin High senior John Shea, 17, will surface once again.

On March 25, 1989, while on spring break, Allard and Shea were killed while crossing a street in Orlando.

Their deaths came at the hands of Francisco Canales, who already had served nearly three years of a seven- to 10-year sentence in New York for killing two people while driving drunk. Violating his parole, Canales had left New York

The deaths of the two popular student athletes so stirred the emotions of Franklin students and staff, family and friends that many wrote letters to Florida court officials, pleading for a stiff sentence for Canales.

"They wrote volumes of letters to the prosecuting attorney, Hodges said.

On Jan. 30, 1990, a Florida judge sentenced Canales to 75 years in prison: 30 years for Shea's death, 35 years for Allard's death, and five years for leaving the scene of an accident. The 75 years were to be served consecutively, not concurrently.

"It was such a high-profile case because of the repetition and because he was a habitual offender,' Hodges said.

With the lengthy prison sentence, Hodges believed it would be a long, long time before Canales would ever sit behind the wheel of a car again.

She held that belief until Aug. 21, when a five-paragraph letter dated Aug. 16 arrived from the Florida Parole Commission.

"Dear Darlene and Bob Hodges," the letter begins. "Due to strenuous demands on our prison system, the law requires a portion of the prison population be released early. (Francisco Canales) is currently being considered by the commission for this type of controlled release."

The words struck Hodges like a thunderbolt. On the night her son was killed, she had felt sorrow. Now she only felt anger.

"If he is released, I know this will happen again," Hodges said. 'They will let him out only to have another couple of families relive this kind of nightmare.

"During the trial and at the sentencing, if he had showed remorse, I'd be willing to give him a chance to prove to me that he wouldn't do this again. But he showed no remorse.

"I'm against this not because he killed my son, but because of who he is. That man is definitely a problem to society.

Character witnesses sway jury

The testimony of character witnesses and the details of the accident as recalled by defendant Brian Morrison swayed jury members and resulted in a not-guilty verdict for the John Glenn High School football star and honor rollstudent.

Morrison was found not guilty of negligent homicide and felonious driving in connection with the Nov. 16 accident that killed Melissa Thompson and left another man seriously injured.

The trial in Wayne County Juvenile Court ran three days longer than expected as Wayne County Prosecutor Vonda Evans attempted to show negligence on the part of Morrison. Several witnesses called by the prosecution claimed Morrison was speeding as he attempted to pass vehicles on southbound Newburgh near Cherту Hill.

Morrison took the stand Tuesday in his own defense. He said that a car in front of him had a left turn signal on and slowed to a near stop when Morrison made a decision to pass the car. Morrison said as he came alongside the vehicle it began to speed up again and he does not remember making it back into the left lane before the roadway narrowed.

According to police reports, Morrison's car went off onto the shoulder of the road and then cut across Newburgh Road, hitting a truck in the northbound lane. The driver of the truck sustained serious injuries. Melissa Thompson, a passenger in Morrison's car, was pronounced dead. Morrison suffered two broken legs, a knee injury and cuts and scrapes.

Defense attorney William Necker cast doubt on the prosecution's case by suggesting that one witness to the accident was actually the driver who had prevented Morrison from getting back into the left lane and by suggesting that potholes in the shoulder of the road could have caused Morrison's car to shoot into the oncoming traffic.

"I was driving someone else's car and I would have never done anything that would hurt Melissa," Morrison testified.

to prevent Thompson from testifying that she did not blame Morrison for her daughter's death.

John Glenn High School principal Dennis Connolly and football coach Chuck Gordon were also on hand to speak up for the high school senior. Connolly said he came to know Morrison as an 'outstanding young man" who participated in football, baseball and basketball at the high school.

"I'm here because I believe strongly in this young man," Gordon testified. "The players just Saturday elected him captain of the team. I tell you kids can fool their coaches and their teachers and their parents, but they can't fool the people the hang out with in the locker room, shower with and play with on the field."

WESTLAND MAYORAL ELECTION

This is a primary election and the top two vote-getters will advance to the Nov. 2 election. The winner will get a four-year term. The primary is Sept. 14.

Candidate: Kenneth Mehl, 46, has lived in Westland for 24

Employment: Senior product engineer, General Motors Powertrain

Education: Bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering, Lawrence Tech

Civic activities: Current city council member, Westland festival 25th anniversary co-chairman, Dad's Athletic Club, Westland Youth, Boy Scouts, Junior Achievement, adult softball Wayne-Ford Civic League ▶ Mehl said he would seek more Chamber of Commerce involvement. "They know not only people in Westland, but also other businesses outside" of the city, he said. The economic development director could advertise for business, and an experienced planning director would be an asset, Mehl said. Cutting back on new strip malls could help, he said, but added that some depressed areas of the city need new strip centers to spur growth.

"There's no doubt in my mind that we need a new library. It's a disgrace that a city this size does not have a library." Mehl predicted that a tax increase of "at least 1 mill" would be needed. He said he is unconvinced that a library could be built with money from the city's Tax Increment Finance Authority funds, which he said should be for such improvements as roads.

Candidate: Doug Noel. 43. has lived in Westland for 30

Employment: Tax specialist, Internal Revenue Service Education: Bachelor of arts, Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill.

Civic activities: Proponent of Westland homeless shelter, involved in aid for flood victims

 Offer rent-sharing in which tenants could share space and make it more affordable to do business in Westland. Also, the city could try to make it easier for potential businesses to wade through the paper work that's required, he said.

▶ "I think a library for Westland is imperative. It's an absolute shame that a city our size doesn't have one." Westland is paying other cities for use of their libraries, elementary school libraries are being closed, and the city of Wayne, which now shares a library with Westland, is planning to build its own library, he said. He would support a "small amount" for an operating millage.

Candidate: Pickering, 50, has lived in Westland 22

Employment: Real estate broker, Remerica Pickering &

Education: Bachelor's degree in parks and recreation administration, Wayne State University.

Civic activities: Mayor 1982-86, current city council member, Westland Chamber of Commerce, Westland Jaycees, Westland festival, Goodfellows, Breakfast Lions, Dad's Athletic Club, Wayne-Westland Junior

▶ As mayor, Pickering said, "I would be a team player." He stressed the importance of the city administration working with the Chamber of Commerce, economic development officials, the William Ford Vocational-Technical Center and other community resources.

▶ Pickering is a strong supporter of a new library and believes that voters should be allowed to decide whether they support a millage increase. He suggested that money from the city's Tax Increment Finance Authority or other sources could possibly be used for a library.

Candidate. Kenneth Raupp 47. has lived in Westland his entire life

Employment: Ford Motor Co. test technician, engine

Education: Attended Wayne County Community College and is working toward degree in electrical engineering. Civic activities: Citizens Against Government Waste, volunteer chess instructor at Adams Junior High ▶ Streamline city government, privatize city services and lower taxes. Those moves would bring more businesses into the community, Raupp said.

► Telerico said he would work on some type of property tax abatement, and he would talk to landlords about possibly giving some type of break on leases for new ▶ Raupp said he doesn't support a new library because residents in previous years have rejected a tax increase for a library. "I wouldn't try to force this on them," he said. He added that "you can get anything you need" at existing libraries elsewhere.

Candidate: Louis Telerico 27, has lived in Westland since just before he turned 1 year

Employment: Runs an electrical construction company Education: John Glenn High School graduate, also attended some classes at Henry Ford Community College and some courses on business management through Garden City Adult Education

Civic activities: Donated electrical labor and parts to the Westland Fire House

► A local library is not necessary, Telerico said. "Canton Township has a beautiful facility. Wayne has an adequate facility" with the Wayne-Westland library, and he said he doesn't want to raise taxes.

Candidate: Robert Thomas 42. has lived in Westland for 30 Employment: Mayor of Westland

Education: 1968 graduate of Wayne Memorial High Civic activities: Thomas listed none on questionnaire ▶ "You have to quit building any new (strip malls)," Thomas said. "If we allow people to continue to build more strip malls, then there's not a lot of incentive for people to use the old ones." The economic development department plays a crucial role in telling potential new businesses where the vacancies are and what the rent is. Thomas said.

"Yes, I believe it should be built. I think it will be built," Thomas said. The city may be able to pursue a library in conjunction with the Tax Increment Finance Authority, he said, adding that he would support no more than a half-mill increase for library operations.

Besides learning, the students also had some fun. They played a game called multicultural Jeopardy, and they simulated a television talk show that examined interracial relationships.

State school aid

Suburban districts catch a break

Suburban school districts won't be as badly hurt by the new $3.5 billion state school aid bill as they feared.

The Michigan Legislature Tuesday adopted a money bill that contains fewer "Robin Hood" items than an earlier Senate-passed version.

"It's like taking two poison tablets instead of 10," said Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, who opposed the measure because of harm to Southfield, Farmington and Novi school districts. "It still makes you woozy, but you're not dead.

"It increases the local costs of Social Security that historically were paid by the state. But it's not as much as they could have lost," Faxon said.

'On balance," said Rick Simonson, legislative agent for Oakland Intermediate School District, "what I'm hearing is that our schools prefer this to some of the alternatives."

"Probably the best bill we're gonna get," agreed Gerald Dunn, lobbyist for 10 Wayne and Oakland county districts. "It's decent for the in-formula districts (those eligible for state aid) and respectable for the out-of-formulas. Re-

"I'm going up north this evening," said Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield. "I always vote no on it anyway. The retirement part is OK. I'm surprised the in-formula districts are going along with it."

What's in, out

The compromise version emerged at 6 p.m. Tuesday from a Senate-House conference committee and was passed that evening by both chambers. Faxon was the lone member of the conference committee to oppose it.

Hre's how Observer & Eccentric area lawmakers voted:

Voting yes were Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville and Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield. Voting no were Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion and Sen. George Hart, D-Dearborn.

Sen. William Faust, D-Westland had an excused absence and did not vote.

In the state House voting yes were Reps. Barbara Dobb, R-Union Lake, Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills; John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Township; Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth and Deborah

Whyman, R-Canton Township. Area reps voting no included Lvn Bankes, R-Redford Town-

ter; Greg Kaza, R-Rochester Hills; William Keith, D-Garden City and Richard Young, D-Dearborn Heights.

Not voting were Maxime Berman, D-Southfield and Justine Barns, D- Westland.

Here are key elements of the bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1:

■ Retirement — The state will continue to pick up 95 percent of the cost of pensions for school district employees instead of shifting those costs to local districts. Retirement costs will be up $100 million. Since the total available money will be up only $40 million, operating money actually will drop $60 million.

■ FICA, for Federal Insurance Contributions Act (Social Security and Medicare), which the state paid entirely in past years-Lansing will shift 25 percent of the cost to poorer districts (those with less than $125,00 in property values per pupil), give nothing to the richest districts (those with $250,000 per pupil), and grant something between zero and 75 percent for those in between. This takes away FICA from all the richest districts," said Oakland's Simonson.

■ "Recapture," the practice of special ed and bilingual instruction) and then taking away the money from richer districts will rise 20 percent to $87 million next year from the current 272 million. Adult education — It will be funded at 80 percent of past levels. This was good news to lobbyist Dunn, who feared even harsher cuts.

Tax-base sharing - It's repealed. Districts that had paid into an escrow account will get back their money, plus interest, Faxon noted with satisfaction. The tax-base sharing law required richer districts, mainly in the suburbs, to share half their commercial and industrial property tax growth with poorer districts. No dollars ever were shared, however, because the law was being challenged in the courts.

Gov. John Engler is expected to

The final version was closer to the House-passed version than to what emerged from the Senate and what Gov. Engler wanted.

Engler wanted to remove all FICA and retirement funding, put the money into general state aid, and let the 562 school districts decide how to spend it.

Picketers call new TV cop series pornography

By VALERIE OLANDER STAFF WRITER

Nearly 100 picketers lined up in front of the WXYZ-TV Channel 7 studio Monday afternoon to protest the new TV cop series "NYPD Blue" that the ABC affiliate plans to air this fall.

The Steven Bochco production is being called soft-core pornography by groups such as the American Family Association, the Christian Activist Network, the Right to Decency and the Concerned Grandparents Association.

The series, which premieres at 10 p.m. Sept. 21, may be the only one on network TV to display the "V" - Violence content advisory. Bochco was creator of the pacesetting TV hits — "Hill Street Blues" and "L.A. Law." The local-protest was scheduled to coincide with protests at ABC affiliate stations throughout the country.

Protesters at the station carried picket signs calling for sponsor boycotts and chanted comments such as "Channel 7 Shame on You" and "No more porn, Griesdorn." Tom Griesdorn is the general manager of the station.

Petitions signed by some members of at least two Southfield Catholic churches, St. Ives and St. Michael, oppose the airing the the show, according to Ann Ingberg, a member of St. Ives.

"Channel 7 has deliberately misused the public trust," charged Jane Crowley of Brighton, a member of AFA. "The violence is to such an extreme that it's going to carry a "V" warning. The nudity is to the extent they only advertised for actresses willing to bare all. And the sex, it may not be X-rated, but it's beyond anything that's been on TV so far." she said.

Griesdorn defends the station's decision to air the series. He saw the original unedited version of "NYPD Blue" earlier this summer at a Los Angeles meeting of the ABC affiliates and called it a "serious adult program that was put in a reasonable time slot on Tuesday nights." The network acted responsibly, he said, by addressing the concerns and adding the "V" label.

Marilyn Hewitt of West Bloomfield and the Concerned Grandparents Association brought her daughter and three grandchildren with her to the protest. "I feel our children and grandchildren are being robbed of all the values that we're trying to teach in the home," she said. "There are good, clean, wholesome programs that can come out of Hollywood.

Crowley claimed that one-third of the ABC affiliates aren't going to air the show and many of the big advertisers have backed out.

Griesdorn said just 16 of the 250 ABC affiliates have chosen not to air the police drama. He also said he couldn't confirm or deny if any national advertisers dropped as sponsors. The station is "trying to be sensitive to local sponsors," he added.

"I call it the Jim Jones-ism concept," Griesdorn said. "Too many drinking the Kool-Aid are believing what they hear instead of judging on their own. I just truly hope they're not judging us on one hour a week. We work 365 days of the year," he said.

But local picketers said they are concerned about children acting out what they see on the television screen, Mary Ellen Gavin of the Right to Decency used the recent slaying of the mother at the ATM machine in Detroit. Those involved with her murder are ages 14, 11, 9 and 8. In addition, the police portrayed in "NYPD Blue" aren't the picture of role models for today's youngsters, she said.

"There's so much disrespect out there anyway but this show goes beyond its boundaries," continued Gavin, "C'mon, this is network TV. They already have Xrated videos and cable. After this there will be nothing left."

Suzanne Shermetro of Trov said most people she knows already object to the language on TV, but this is "even lowering the

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Michigan's business people are deeply divided over the chief tax they pay, especially now that it's likely to go up.

The single business tax produces about $1.7 billion a year. Business will be asked to pay more, one way or another, because the state Legislature has repealed $6 billion of local property taxes for schools.

"There's a real push for the Legislature to fund schools for 1994-95," said Rep. Susan Grimes Munsell, R-Howell, co-chair of a House Taxation subcommittee looking at SBT during a Detroit public hearing.

"I suspect there will be a lot of activity. Taxation from the SBT will be part of that activity," said Munsell, who wants to produce recommendations for restructuring SBT by Sept. 14, if it's to be done at all.

Herself a certified public accountant, Munsell said the goal will be to have business make up a proportional part of the replacement revenue or less. "We need to deal with it this calendar year,'

Rep. Barbara Dobb, R-Union Lake, predicted lawmakers will allow school districts to reinstitute some of the repealed $6 billion in property taxes. Reason: The Michigan Constitution prevents the Leg' lature from raising taxes by more than $3.8 billion.

Tax on jobs

Small-business people from Southfield and Belleville panned the current SBT as a tax on employment. Financial, computer and auto giant spokesmen like SBT the way it is.

Ease up on products made in Michigan," said Charles Hood of HLF Furniture Inc., Belleville maker of office furniture and employer of 75. Hood said non-wage costs such as health care, unemployment insurance and workers' compensation should be removed from the tax base.

"There should be an incubation period for small, start-up businesses," said Hood, drawing great applause from the audience

Paul Pickell of Pick Publications in Southfield called SBT "a barrier to growth and profitability. It's an unfair burden to small business. It's very complicated and requires a CPA. It hampers reinvestment in one's own business.'

A "reasonable business profits tax" would be preferable, said Pickell, whose firm produces business directories.

"Let us know how you want to pay the business cost of education in Michigan," said Munsell.

Linda Jolicdeur, a Southfield entrepreneur representing the National Association of Women Business Owners, replied, "Rather than look at it negatively — like what do you want to pay? — we need to improve the quality of education." She deplored Southfield's spending $9,000 per student a year and raising teach-Inconsistent ers' wages 8 percent as soon as "I have found no consistency," voters approved a property tax incomplained Rep. Kirk Profit, D-the same industry with a $1 difference in gross receipts, and they'll have different answers," said Rep. Dobb, also an accountant.

Four women are among the six panel members, but they gave no hint of whether they were receptive to women business owners' pleas to shift the tax off employment costs.

Republican members are Munsell, Dobb and Deborah Whyman of Canton. Democrats are co-chair Mary Brown of Kalamazoo, Profit of Ypsilanti and John Freeman of Madison Heights.

State treasurer Doug Roberts described SBT as a consumptiontype, value added tax based on the difference between the value of a product at sale and the cost of inputs. "Since value-added reflects the amount of business activity a firm performs, it is a good proxy for the amount of government services received by a firm,' Roberts said in written comments.

Although SBT revenue varied from $900 million in 1981 to $1.85 billion in 1985, it is a more consistent producer than the old corporate income tax, which gyrated wildly with auto booms and

Witchy woman

'Cassandra' comes out of closet

Gifts displayed: Kathy Proskie shows off a broomstick and witch's doll given her last year by Gundella, a well-known witch who died this summer.

Kathy Proskie emphasizes that she is a good witch and doesn't believe in Satanism. Her favorite holiday, not surprisingly, is Halloween, "the only time of the year where I can come out of the closet and be myself and wear my black robes."

By BARBARA WILSON STAFF WRITER

Kathy Proskie always wanted to be a witch. Deep down;

she said, she's always been a witch, but now she is ready to tell the world.

"For as long as I can remember, it's what I always wanted to be, Proskie said. "My grandmother. was a witch, and I was always fascinated by it.'

Proskie, known in witch circles as Cassandra, began studying witchcraft when she was 11. She read books about it and learned from her grandmother.

"I was never happy in church," she said. "I found myself most happy when I was out in nature looking at the trees, listening to the wind, watching the leaves

Proskie's grandmother practiced witchcraft privately for many years and was shunned by her family for it.

For many years, Proskie said she kept her witchcraft a secret, not wanting people to know. Her family members, devout Catholics, were not pleased with her choice of religious practice, and many of them no longer accept "The timing is right for me now to tell people that I am a witch," said Proskie, who will be 37 on Sept. 15.

Well-known witch Gundella, a Garden City resident who died in mid-July, was a source of inspiration for Proskie. They met at a party and Gundella agreed to teach Proskie the finer points of witchcraft. Gundella shared many spells and secrets with her and initiated Proskie when she was 29.

Gundella presented Proskie with a witch doll and a broomstick, which she considers her most prized possessions.

Gundella's death was devastating to Proskie, but she believes in reincarnation and therefore feels Gundella's presence.

Many witches practice their rituals openly and with other witches in what is called a coven. Proskie chooses to practice pri-

Proskie said she is psychic and has been very successful in per-forming spells relating to love and success. She works with herbs and oils and tarot cards.

"I want people to know that I am here to help people, not to hurt them," Proskie said. "When I tell people I am a witch, the first thing they ask is if I'm a good witch or a bad witch. I am a good witch. It hurts when people are afraid of you.

"I strongly oppose Satanism. I will not associate with anyone having anything to do with it.

Not surprisingly, Halloween is her favorite holiday because "it is the only time of the year where I can come out of the closet and be myself and wear my black robes."

Proskie, who lived in Plymouth for 17 years and graduated from a local high school in 1975, later lived in Westland before moving to Garden City six years ago.

Before going public about being witch, Proskie said she worked as a Big Boy restaurant waitress, was a Livonia St. Mary Hospital kitchen helper, and worked as an employee at the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth.

The leading killer diseases in America — cancer and heart disease — can be avoided by following three basic rules of preventive medicine.

Take vitamins

Over the past few years, physicians have been learning more about the beneficial effects of vitamin supplements. It's been proven that taking antioxidant vitamins every day - at a quantity somewhere between the toxic dose and lower RDA dose -- can lower your risk of cancer, heart disease, and several conditions related to aging

Eat low-fat foods

Library boosts quality of life

f Westland city officials are smart, they should move quickly to grab available funds, acting quickly to have an independent city library in the next few years.

In a rare moment of a major policy agreement, the mayor, city council and Westland Library Board were united on a proposal to use unspent property tax dollars from the Tax Increment Finance Authority budget to build a new library, projected to cost nearly $5 million.

At the same time, with the elimination of property taxes for school operations starting next July 1, the political timing may be ripe for levying a modest 2 mills for library operations.

The public agreement came during a council study session at which city leaders heard a detailed and forceful presentation by library consultant David Smith.

The consultant said what the Observer has been saying for years: A quality library program, including a well-stocked building and a variety of services and programs, is an asset to the community.

It contributes to the quality of life for all ages: preschoolers who need get away from the television and have quality literature read to them, students in school and retirees.

What makes the idea of using TIFA dollars for a proposed library more attractive is that it will drop the crazy idea of the city supporting the concept of a multideck parking garage for a projected expansion of Westland Center and the addition of a Sears store.

Based on an informal survey of residents several years ago, the city shouldn't pledge public funds for a project which should be financed by the commercial interests to benefit from it.

In reality, any TIFA project would not affect taxpayers in general. The TIFA dollars come from the increased property tax revenues generated in specific areas of the city by the installation of public improvements.

Several council members accurately sensed the public mood when they commented last week that the council might be "slaughtered" if it spent TIFA dollars on the proposed parking garage.

When Westland voters twice rejected a library tax proposal, the real message was that they were fed up with ever-increasing property taxes for all purposes - schools, county and city.

Tax-weary homeowners may get more help if the city is successful in getting another $1.3 million from the state of Michigan, which initially approved $2 million for construction of a new library and then canceled the appropriation. The city is suing the state for most of the promised construction money

The only obstacle in making a new library reality is buying or obtaining property within one of the two TIFA districts for the facility, as required by state law.

But library advocates should maintain the push for a new library.

Currently, the 6,000 square foot building shared with the city of Wayne should be an embarrassment to persons living in the state's 10th largest

Now that the financial hurdles for a new library can be cleared, it's time to move on and get the job

Buses are urged

ue to an April 5 millage defeat, the Wayne-Westland board of education made a decision to discontinue bus transportation for secondary and high school students in our district and to continue the sports and extra curricular activities on a payto-participate basis. This decision will force a number of young students on the outskirts of the district to walk several miles to and from

I attended the last school board meeting held on Aug. 23, in which many concerned parents voiced their opinion on the bus transportation issue. I voiced concern over the safety of our youths being placed in jeopardy by the board of education. I felt the board made their decision to halt bus transportation without the aid of an analysis to determine what intersections within the district were safe for our children and what intersections require the installation of additional traffic control devices.

The board's position on this matter is, "it's the city's responsibility to provide traffic control devices (mechanical or crossing guards) at the intersections for the students." Based on this response, it became apparent to me that an analysis was not undertaken prior to making their decision. I have two children that now must cross Venoy at Avondale where currently there is no type of traffic control device, or walk an additional half mile each direction to cross Venov at an intersection with a traffic light. The traffic enoy is heavily congested and mid-afternoon hours with a posted speed limit of 35 miles per hour. I've also heard stories from the kids in my neighborhood saying they will either walk, ride bikes, or even roller blade to and from school again crossing streets such as Venoy.

On Aug. 24, I discussed this issue over the phone with Mayor Robert Thomas. The mayor stated that he knew the intersection of Avondale and Venoy very well and mentioned that the city had lobbied the county to have traffic control devices installed at this intersection many times in the past. That afternoon the deputy mayor called me and stated that signs would be going up in the area in the near future and the police department would do a traffic study at this intersection. He also stated that a study group would be formed to identify other intersections in the city that are unsafe for students to cross and asked if I would participate.

I appeal to the board to restore bus transportation to both the secondary and high school students while the study group identifies the unsafe intersections throughout the city and takes the necessary measures to provide a safe route for our children to and from school. Bill Edwards, Westland

I have a 10th grade niece who will be forced to get rides and sometimes walk to Wayne High from the Van Born-Merriman area since transportation has been eliminated.

However, in looking at the bus schedule for the fall, I see two buses listed daily to the Ford Vocational Center from Wayne High, about the same distance my niece must walk

New cable rates are unfair gross injustice is committed when those who can least afford basic cable rates find them rising, while those who can most afford the niceties like remote controls and premium channels get a price break.

We think that residents of our communities should have access to basic cable TV at as inexpensive a rate as possible.

Citizens need to stay informed about important local issues. Cable TV, with its showing of live city council and school board meetings and candidate forums, is one way for them to keep informed.

To deny residents access to basic cable TV these days is just about the same as denying them the chance to read a local newspaper.

Cable TV rates increased for many subscribers Sept. 1, despite new Federal Communications Commission regulations intended to reduce rates nationwide.

For example, MetroVision, the outfit that holds the cable TV franchise in Farmington, Farmington Hills, Redford Township and Livonia, is sending increases to more than 60 percent of its Farmington-area subscribers. Increases range from $1.83 to $10.54 a month.

The hardest hit will be the 300 who pay bottom dollar for the broadcast and public access channels.

Of course, many at the upper end of the spectrum, those who spend more on cable TV, will have their rates cut.

Yes, something's screwy.

Rate changes differ throughout communities covered by Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, even in communities served by the same cable company. For instance, Continental Cablevision in Westland formerly charged $20.25 for one basic tier service. It now offers three services: basic at $10.90, a satellite tier at $11.36 and a mini tier of three channels at $1.36. The basic, satellite and mini tiers all must be purchased in order to carry premium channels an obvious increase.

However, a remote control drops drastically from $3.95 a month to 12 cents. And premium channel costs remain the same.

In Southfield, Continental customers will pay an additional $3.25 a month, up from $19.50, to receive its 2-58 channel group. Those paying $12 for the 2-36 channel group will have new option packages of $13.27 and $14.69.

Garden City's MacLean Hunter Cable TV Inc. seems to be the most economy-minded of the lot, while the situation is entirely different for Booth customers in Birmingham. There, officials are arguing over whether to even offer local commercial stations 2, 4 and 7.

Many cable companies are sending out notices to their customers to explain the confusing rate changes. There is a better way to run cable

We've said it before in this space, but we'd like to reiterate emphatically that we don't need a federal agency to straighten out cable TV. Good, old-fashioned competition in these suburban markets would accomplish the same

The same market factors that drive our economv should apply to cable TV, that great electronic middleman that sits between the viewer and what there is to view. Who knows? Perhaps someday, with competition and new technology, we'll eliminate that middleman.

We recognize that cable companies are in business to make money, but that profit should not come at the expense of those who can least far-reaching environmental battles in decades between environmentalists and the chemical industry will take place in October.

The battle will occur in Windsor. Ontario, from Oct. 21-24, before the International Joint Commission. The IJC is a U.S.-Canadian commission established to recommend policy and oversee the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement between the two countries.

A public hearing will be held on Saturday, Oct. 23, will determine whether the policy of "Zero Discharge" for persistent toxic chemicals will be imple-

The commission also stated in its sixth biennial report that, ". . . all human inputs of chlorine-based chemicals must be halted; these persistent toxic chemicals are too dangerous to the biosphere and humans to permit their release in any quantity.

The Michigan State Medical Society and the Genesee County Medical Society passed a resolution that supports the goal of "Zero Discharge" for PCB/ dioxin compounds in the Great Lakes

This massive change in policy is a result of the weight of scientific evidence that shows that this class of compounds has devastating health consequences beyond alarming rises in breast cancer, Hodgkin's lymphoma, leukemia and cancers of the prostate, brain and kidney.

Evidence has grown that organochlorines have adverse effects on the endocrine system, which in part controls hormones and sexual development, the immune system and reproductive systems in humans.

In addition to humans, the wildlife in Michigan has bio-accumulated these toxins. Birth defects, failure to reproduce, wasting syndrome, immune have decimated many species.

Today there are 15,000 chlorinated compounds contaminating our environment.

The first skirmish is 7-10 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 21. Greenpeace is sponsoring the Great Lakes Chlorine-Free Debate. A panel of international scientists will present the case for banning chlorine and respond to industry arguments opposing the ban.

On Friday, Oct. 22, industry will sponsor an event entitled, "Chlorine: Emotion or Science," it's clear what this discussion entails.

On Saturday, Oct. 23, the IJC will conduct a workshop on the chlorine phase-out where industry and environmentalists will have it out.

At noon on Saturday, Oct. 23, at Dieppe Park in Windsor there will be a Rally for Zero Discharge. This demonstration will send a powerful message to governments and corporate polluters that we insist they stop poisoning us now. Finally, on Saturday the IJC will hear testimony from the public in the afternoon and evening.

The battle lines are drawn, and for all our sakes, we need to win this one. For further information contact Bonnie Rice, Greenpeace, 1017 W. Jackson, Chicago, Ill. 60607.

■ Lawyers across the country are starting to get agitated over "lawver-bashing jokes," especially in the wake of incidents in which lawyers have been threatened and, in one case, shot.

Some lawyers defend the jokes under First Amendment rights, but others aren't so sure. Harris Gilbert, president-elect of the Tennessee Bar Association, said:

"The jokes against lawyers are in the same vein as those against Poles or blacks or Asians. Society has got to come to the realization that this form of humor is no longer humorous.

The same officials declined another request to replace a traffic sign reading "Dead End" with something more 'upbeat.'

Contracted pay cuts show 'class' act to our students

QUESTION: As a teacher in a district near the Plymouth-Canton School District, I believe the Plymouth teachers' decision to give back their pay raise this year is going to hurt us in future negotiations. I understand West Bloomfield teachers, custodians, bus drivers and non-certified staff did something similar. What do you think?

ANSWER: I'm proud to say that I taught and was an administrator for 17 years in the Plymouth-Canton School District and a central office administrator in West Bloomfield for nine oth quality districts

I'm proud to say I was president of the Plymouth Education Association that fought and won the right for collective bargaining in 1965. And I'm proud to be an alumnus of today's PEA that showed class and style throughout the turbulence that has gone on in the Plymouth community.

With no teacher concessions, this turbulence would have eliminated 30 teacher/counselor peers, increased class size and done away with all student activities from debate to football.

Whether one is down on educators or supportive of educators, all should be most proud of the message the Plymouth and West Bloomfield teachers send to children. It says Plymouth and West Bloomfield staffs care more about the kids and the instructional program than a few extra bucks in their pockets.

It says Plymouth and West Bloomfield teachers' organizations are not going to punish students because of the political battle that is being waged by Lansing's politicians and the MEA state leadership.

It says Plymouth and West Bloomfield teachers recognize that many of their citizens have had it with skyrocketing property tax increases

Just consider the alternative. Let's say Plymouth or West Bloomfield teachers voted not to take a pay freeze.

The message to students, especially at the middle school and high school level, would be that teachers are in this business just for money So please don't lecture about right and wrong, values or that dedication to children stuff. Just do the teaching thing and let's get on with it.

But also remember, we students all grow into adults. We become taxpayers. And we will vote We will remember how our teachers decimated our instructional program, our athletic teams, our debate team, our band, our journalism program, our science and computer clubs those cherished activities of adolescence that young ones remember and reflect on the rest of their lives

It didn't happen in Plymouth or West Bloomfield and, in this case, the winners were many: the teachers, the parents, but most importantly the kids and their instructional programs.

Other winners were Plymouth's superintendent, Mike Hoben, and West Bloomfield's superintendent, Seymour Gretchko, and their boards of education. Had the Plymouth or West Bloomfield teachers perceived that, over the years. Hoben or Gretchko and their boards of education had been evil adversaries, the vote to take a 3 percent cut would never have happened.

And whether the educational community liked it or not, there has been substantial pressure. Raises are leveling off in the business world, many are out of jobs. It is not business as usual

With the uncertainty of Gov. John Engler and his troops, let's hope other school districts' education associations and non-certified unions give the community, their boards of education, the central office and their own leadership time to assess what is or is not coming out of Lansing.

All this withstanding, the teachers in Plymouth and West Bloomfield and the noncertified employees in WB showed "class" when voting to maintain a quality program.

Let's hope other school districts in this readership area follow the example set by these

Judge will address how probate court tackles family issues

How to get families working again and what steps are taken when they don't will be just two of the issues addressed by Wayne County Probate Judge Cathie B. Maher Thursday, Sept. 16, in a program sponsored by the Garden City Business and Professional Women's Organization.

Maher, a Canton Township resident, is a judge in the probate court's juvenile division. Her docket consists mainly of cases involving the termination of parental rights. The juvenile division of probate court handles cases of child abuse, neglect and abandonment and juvenile delinquency.

The Sept. 16 program, "Divorcing Mom and Dad: The Effects on Society," will be held in the Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft and Levan, Livonia. Cost for dinner and program is $7 per per-

Reservations are due no later than Friday, Sept. 10, to Joyce Pappas at Orin Jewelers, 422-7030 or 522-7001.

Maher will also discuss how the court can help in getting the family working again by using counseling and treatment programs such as the Family First and PACT (Parents and Children Together).

Maher, who grew up in Garden City and graduated from Garden City West High School in 1968, was elected to a six-year term on the Wayne County Probate bench last November. She succeeded retiring Judge Gladys Barsamian.

Pavne scores KO

ivonian Craig Payne scored a fifth-round knockout of Miami's Melton Bowen to win the World Boxing Federation heavyweight title Saturday before 1,000 fans at the Orlando (Fla.) Central State Fairgrounds.

Payne is now 10-3-1 overall with six KOs. Bowen, who predicted a third-round KO during the pre-fight hype, fell to 28-4-1 (with 24 KOs).

'It's the best I've seen Craig fight in a long time," Livonia Boxing Club manager Paul Soucy said. "This guy (Bowen) went the distance with Tony Tubbs even though he was knocked down three times.

Payne, a former 1984 U.S. Olympic Trials super-heavyweight finalist, owns amateur wins over Mike Tyson, along with Olympic Gold medal ists Teofilo Stevenson and Tyrell Biggs.

Payne is scheduled to face Californian Jeremy Williams next month in an IBO title fight.

But don't count out the Shamrocks from defending their Class AA state championship.

For one thing, Rice is a Class A team and wouldn't meet the Shamrocks in the state playoffs.

The other reason is more obvious. Even though the Shamrocks lose star players every year to graduation, a new group of potential standouts is ready to step in.

What else explains five trips to the state finals in the last six years and two state championships over the same period? The tradition starts when the players come in as fresh-

By BRAD EMONS

It may take Chuck Howton awhile to get acquainted with his Wayne Memorial football team. Name tags might even be in order.

The Zebras, 7-3 a year ago and a state Class AA playoff qualifier, were gutted by graduation losses. New faces abound for the 1993 season as only three starters return.

Howton, now in his seventh season as the Zebras' coach, could be hardpressed to replace first-team All-Area picks Bruce Calhoun, Ramzy Saleh, Murdank Forrest and Tim Mate. The foursome also led Wayne to the Wolverine A League championship.

Also adding to the uncertainty is a new league. The Zebras have joined new the MEGA downriver circuit.

They will play in the top Red Division, made up primarily of the WolvePREVIEW rine A schools with the exception of Woodhaven, which jumps in for Southgate and Trenton.

So what at Wayne's prospects for the '93 season?

"I believe our offensive line is going to be better than it was last year. Howton said, "but we've got to establish the run game like we had last

"We don't have the great running back like we had last year in Calhoun (nearly 1,200 yards), but we've got a couple of kids who will give us positive yards. And we'll throw when we nother high school football season gets started this weekend, and that means the return of the weekly Observer grid predictions. The first week consists of a 16-

FRIDAY GAMES (ell times 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Stevenson (3-6) at Redford Union (5-4), 7 p.m.: With some hefty linemen. Stevenson has the most size of any Jack Reardon team, but the Spartans are inexperienced. RU had a huge team last year but lost most of its starters to graduation. The Panthers look to veteran quarterback Mike Bjerke and tight end lason Mitchell to lead the offense. RU won 17-14 last year. PICK: RU.

Dearborn (4-6) at Liv. Churchill (0-9):

Dearborn hopes to get back to the playoffs and is expected to have a good and have been grooming sophomore Kevin Kreger to be the quarterback. Fullback Husseln Berry and tailback Brian Gleichauf are key seniors. John Muskett, Kevin Taylor and Ben Cook are the too linemen. An early win would help the Chargers' confidence. PICK: Dearborn.

Murray-Wright at Weld. Glenn: The Rockets won the air war and controlled the ground action last year when they routed the Pilots 35-7. Murray-Wright is led by quarterback William Messenger. Glenn is everybody's choice as the Western Lakes favorite. PICK: Glenn.

Wayne Memorial (7-3) at Adrian (10-2): This was the top opening game last year when the No. I-ranked Maples edged Wayne 21-13. The Zebras lost all but three starters from their playoff team. Adrian lost many of its linemen but is favored to win the South Central Confer ence again. Senior David Ritz (6-1, 180) returns at quarterback, but the top player tackle/linebacker Adam Lige (6-1, 215), who is being recruited by Big Ten schools and Notre Dame. Senior Chad Bilkey is a fine receiver/défensive back. PICK: Adrian.

Relieville (5-4) at Ply. Salem (4-5): Salem exchanged one old Suburban 8 rlval (Trenton) for another in its season opener. Believille is led by senior QB and third-year starter Raiph Truitt, who poses a dual threat. The Tigers have good team speed but a lot of two-way players. Other top players are tackle Curtis Balogh (6-3, 235), speedy receiver Curtis Lansford (5-7, 155), lineman Justin Carey (6-2, 235) d fullback/linebacker Josh Speller (5-10, 200), PICK: Belleville.

Ply. Canton (4-5) at Monroe (4-5): The Chiefs will be seeing red — and not because both teams wear that color. Canton wants to avenge last year's 14-13 loss. The Chiefs appeared to have the game won but gave up a touchdown on the last play. Canton had a strong finish in '92 and has a lot of players back. The Chiefs hope some excellent skill players will enable them to put points on the board. PICK: Canton.

Farmington (1-8) at W. Bloomfield (5-4): The Lakers will try to make it seven straight season-opening victories over Farmington. West Bloomfield graduated many of its lineman but has a lot of skill players back. The top seniors are quarter-back Craig Curry (6-6, 200), tailback Donnie Williams (5-10, 185) and third-year linebacker Toby Tobin (5-10, 185). The need to strengthen the line. PICK: West

D.H. Creatwood (6-4) at Garden City (7-2): Garden City won 16-6 last year and began one of its best seasons in years, eventually winning a share of the North-west Suburban League title. An unbeaten JV team should help restock the store Creatwood lost the majority of its team to graduation but has some skill players

Mate, a great scrambler, will be missed at quarterback.

Howton, however, may have his signal calling duties set for the next four years with the emergence of Lorenzo Guess, a 6-foot-165-pound freshman who comes out of the junior high ranks. (This is the first year ninth graders in the Wayne-Westland School District can play at the high school level.)

"Lorenzo has good technique and a good arm," Howton said. "It's going to be a challenge for him. But we've got to get positive yardage running the ball for him to be effective.'

Guess, who played on a National AAU runnerup basketball team, will deliver the ball to tailbacks Willie Bush, a 5-6, 175pound senior, and Reggie McCarthy, a 5-10, 190-pound senior. The fullback is junior Corey McClelland (6-0, 205).

Returning at tight end is senior Jason Overton, a 6-5, 210-pound senior who started last season. Overton, who will also be the punter, missed two weeks of practice playing in the Senior Babe Ruth World Series.

The split end is senior Gerald Adams (6-0, 170), a basketball player.

Offensive line vets

The offensive line is led by returning starters Jacob Rathburn, a 6-1, 260-pound senior center, and Anthony McGill, a 6-2, 190pound senior.

Rounding out the starting offensive line is senior guard John Lloyd (5-10, 175) and junior tackles Mike Kennedy (6-2, 225) and Dail Griffin (5-9, 300).

Defensively, Howton will implement a 5-2 alignment with a monster back.

The nose guard is first-year senior Kalip Ford (5-9, 170), with Kennedy and junior Marty Meyers (6-1, 182) starting at the tackles.

McCarthy, Savikas and senior Bo Burke (5-11, 185) will anchor the ends.

McGill and Lloyd lead the linebackers corps. Senior Pete Rakala (5-9, 170) is set to play the monster position.

Adams and junior Scott Wetmore (5-9, 145) will join the roving Rakala in the secondary.

'I'm sure the other coaches in the league will probably say we're down," Howton said. "My big question right now is, 'Do we have the senior leadership that we really need on this team?' Last year we had it."

The Zebras open their season Friday at Adrian before meeting Taylor Kennedy in its inaugural MEGA confrontation on Sept. 10.

Roberto Gaggioli took the halfmile, 57-lap Birmingham race considered the tour's trickiest course - by half a bike length over teammate Scott McKinley.

However, McKinely captured the overall tour title with 159 points and drove off in a 1993 Saturn SL-1 station wagon awarded to the Pro/Elite division champion. Gaggioli placed a close second with 153 points.

McKinley won four of the eight races, including Midland, Lansing, Monroe and Flint. Besides winning in Birmingham, Gaggioli, a native Italian who has enjoyed great success on the American tour, also took first in the Detroit and Rochester races.

Chris Huber, a seven-year pro who has been with Coors Light for

"It feels great," said McKinley, a 24-year-old California native. "I think we deserved to win it. Our team won every stage of the tour."

Despite an early afternoon rain storm that made for a slippery course, the Birmingham races went off on time. A total of 70 bikers started the Pro/Elite race. with about half of them finishing. A number of bikers left the course due to crashes on the wet track.

McKinley said the conditions definitely played a key factor in developing the team's strategy for Sunday's final race.

"We help each other out and we can usually race on any kind of course," said McKinley. "But racing on this kind of course (wet) brings out a luck factor. The chances of crashing are higher and there is more of a risk factor.

"We just had to be careful. That's why we tried to break away from the field right away," he said. "That way, as long as we got in front, we would be able to avoid Graeme Miller of the Duckhead team placed fourth overall in the 10-day series tour with 122 points, followed by Tim Swift of Redford and Team Kinetic Systems who had 96 points. London's Eamonn Rooney placed fifth overall with 91 points.

Canton's Rob Daksiewicz, who was 14th overall with 45 points, had his best showing in Rochester with a fifth-place finish. Rob Huff of Bloomfield Hills placed 26th overall with 21 points. Huff's best finish was seventh in Midland. Race director Dale Hughes was thrilled with the Tour de Michigan's overall showing this year. He said the inaugural Rochester stonover was a success and the Birmingham race — televised live for the first time - was well-attended despite the bad weather.

"I was real impressed with the turnout in Birmingham considering all the rain," said Hughes. "It was like watching golf with all those umbrellas coming out. "The home stretch was pretty

Pats make Country Day sweat

Livonia Franklin didn't win the Birmingham-Detroit Country Day Invitational boys soccer tournament last weekend, but the Patriots made their presence known.

Franklin won two of three games, but may have gained a moral victory in a 3-2 semifinal loss Saturday to the host Yellow Jackets, one of the nation's top-rated prep teams and sixtime defending Class B-C-D state champs.

Neil Grode's goal with 10 minutes remaining gave Country Day the victory.

DC went on to win the championship with a 6-1 win over Northville.

"We tried not to give away the easy goal," first-year Franklin coach Mary Kay Hussey said. "We wanted to hang defensively and wait for our break on the other end. Defensively we got a lot of work. We hung in

But Grode tallied the gamewinner off a scramble in front of Franklin goalie Scott Simpson. Hussey also praised the defensive efforts of junior sweeper Dan Kulick, along with Dave Binkiewicz, Derek White and Bryon Yanka.

In Saturday's consolation final, Franklin fell behind 2-0 at halftime, but rallied for three unanswered goals to beat Farmington, 3-2.

Sophomore Eric Bowman scored the game-winner with 10 minutes remaining. Smith and Mike Bona also scored for the Patriots. Buelow contributed two assists, while Binkiewicz had one.

Simpson shut out the Falcons in the second half.

On Friday, Franklin blanked Dearborn Edsel Ford, 3-0, as Dave Kosegi and Simpson combined for the shutout.

Buelow, a senior, had one goal and one assist. Bona and freshman Corey Berzac also scored.

All the scoring occurred in the first half. Stevenson's Nick Deren gave the Spar-tens a 1-0 lead before the veteran Colts from Troy answered with back-to-back only four minutes apart.

"For a high school socces game in August, it was playoff quality, a sight to be seen," Stevenson coach Walt Barrett said.
"Both teams were going hard and it was like a regional final.

"Nobody is as tough as Troy. We felt driving out of the parking lot that we could. have won. Seeing that kind of competition, based on their size and experience, I'm extremely pleased. We grew up early."

Goalie Mo Lanspeary, who came on the second half, held Troy scoreless the rest of the way. Barettt also singled out the efforts of Deren and sweeper Scott Sersen.

Roman Terrace II lightens up menu

By BILL COUTANT STAFF WRITER

Like a film sequel, Roman Terrace II is a continuation of the original, popular Farmington Hills restaurant that burned down in February 1990.

It still features

pasta dishes, provini veal and seafood specials, but in its new incarnation, the Italian-American restaurant in the Halsted Village shopping center, Halsted and 12 Mile, has lightened up.

"We've kept a lot of the core of the menu," said Terrace co-owner Bob McDonald, who also co-owned the first Roman Terrace restaurant. "But we cook with olive oil and have made some other changes. People are eating lighter, and our menu reflects that.'

The new restaurant, which opened in July, also features a lighter decor. With a seating capacity of 140 compared to 200 in the original - the new Terrace is decorated with pastels, primarily antique rose and blue, accented with a mahogany bar.

McDonald, 50, had planned to rebuild at the old location, but could not come up with the financial backing in 1990. Insurance covered only about half of the $500,000 loss caused by the fire, leaving McDonald scrambling to find a job and help his 100 or so employees find work elsewhere.

"We were able to help everyone who wanted a job to find one," he said with pride. "But I had my doubts about whether I would be able to start another business.

Businessman Harry Phinney was so impressed by McDonald's abilities that he asked him if he'd like to join the new menu.' Wamby said pasta dishes account for 60-70 percent of the orders, just as they did at the original Terrace. But the switch to olive oil for cooking and vegetables as an appetizer are among the changes designed to combine the best of traditional with the new, healthier tastes.

The restaurant also features half-orders of all its entrees to accommodate lighter appetites and budgets.

The menu features has plenty of variety, including daily specials, fresh seafood, tempting deserts such as a melt-in-your-mouth tiramisu, and even a steer burger at $3.95. With the exception of chateaubriand for two at $41.95, most entrees cost between $8.95 and $16.95.

JET opens season with hilarious, touching play

BY KEELY WYGONIK Staff Writer

Jewish Ensemble Theatre opens its 1993-94 season 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 8 with Wendy Wasserstein's hilarious and touching play about two young women, "Isn't It Romantic," at the Aaron DeRoy Theatre in the Jewish Community Center, 6600 W. Maple, West Bloomfield.

Preview performances 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 8-9, 8:45 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 11, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 12. Opening night is 7 p.m. Sept. 12. Performances continue through Oct. 3, call the theater 788-2900 for ticket prices and show times or TicketMaster, 645-6666.

Wasserstein's "Isn't It Romantic" is a story about the dilemmas two single women in their 30s face trying to find personal independence and romantic fulfillment.

Although they have very different backgrounds, Janie and Harriet have been best friends since high school.

Both grew up on New York's Upper East Side. Harriet was raised by Lillian, a single mom and very successful executive. She was a role model for her daughter. Janie grew up in a "very nice Jewish family.

The girls have drifted apart but renew their friendship after moving back to New York.

"Janie is a free-lance writer, but her parents want her to have a safe career like being a lawyer. They also want her to get married and have children," said Evelyn Orbach of Bloomfield Hills Janie's mom. "The girls live in separate apartments and struggle with a double dream — they want careers, but they also want guys.

Throughout the play, the moms play a key role. "The mothers aren't just supporting characters," said Orbach. "They also go on a journey. The play has serious moments, but it's also hysterically funny; you can't help but laugh.

Director Gordon Reinhart of Westland said the play will provoke, rather than sedate audiences because it asks

The year is 1962, a more innocent time. Millions of 18year-old boys think of Marilyn Monroe as the goddess of their dreams, but only three of them plan to tell her in person in "Calendar Girl," opening Sept. 3 at suburban movie theaters.

The determined trio - Roy Darpinian (Jason Priestley), the self-appointed leader and the one with an endless supply of smooth talk and crazy ideas; Scott Foreman (Jerry O'Connell), a born follower and such a dead-ringer for Howdy Doody, right down to his wooden leg, that his nickname is "The Dood"; and sensitive, pragmatic, eternally buttoned-down Ned Bleuer (Gabriel Olds), a walking encyclopedia on Marilyn Monroe trivia.

Priestley, who stars in the Fox television series "Beverly Hills 90210," makes his feature film starring debut as Roy Darpinian in "Calendar Girl," a Columbia Pictures release directed by John Whitesell and written by Paul W. Shapiro. Debbie Robins and Gary Marsh are the producers. The executive producers are Penny Marshall and Elliot Abbott.

The music present throughout "Calendar Girl" intertwines original hits by such R&B legends as Otis Redding ("Respect"), Ray Charles ("What'd I Say"), Wilson Pickett ("Don't Fight It") and Peggy Lee ("Fever").
Priestley got to achieve a musical dream when he found himself singing with Chubby Checker. who makes a cameo appearance in the film.

Roy, Ned and Scott first meet at a Howdy Doody lookalike coma shoo-in. As their friendship endures, the boys discover the wonders of women at 12, specifically in the form of Marilyn Monroe's nude calendar - "Miss Golden Dreams.'

At 18, the three friends find themselves about to go in different directions: Roy into the Army, Scott to the altar and Ned to col-

Using his usual combination of charm and intimidation, Roy convinces them to take a weekend off from their small Nevada town and head for Hollywood in his father's borrowed sky blue Galaxie 500 convertible. Roy's plan is simple: they'll plant themselves at their idol's feet, or at least the foot of her driveway if they can find it, until she agrees to a date.

Their trip is unwittingly financed by Roy's employers, the Gallo Brothers, (Kurt Fuller and Stephen Tobolowsky), Indian Springs' well-mannered and unconventional but still menacing loansharks. When they discover Roy's unapproved loan, the Gallo Brothers set out after the boys, tracking them to the home of Roy's Uncle Harvey (Joe Pantoliano), an aspiring actor/flourishing bomb shelter salesman who lives in the Hollywood hills.

After trials and some disappointments, the three boys must finally face the real challenge of their pilgrimage. "They have to complete the transition into becoming men," said Priestley. "But they have to do it together and they're really bonded for life."

Throughout the chaos that ensues, the boys somehow manage to salvage the dream that brought them to Hollywood in the first place - the opportunity to meet Marilyn Monroe.

"Marilyn is the ultimate," said director John Whitesell. "Reaching her is like reaching Mount Olympus, and if they can just touch her, they take themselves out of being ordinary and make themselves extraordinary.'

"I think Marilyn symbolizes that goal that's up there for all of us," said Priestley, "that if you want to go for but you're afraid to because if you fail, you're gonna feel like an idiot. So, Roy forces them all to take the leap of faith, that jump from being boys to becoming men."

"Calendar Girl" opens Friday at these suburban movie theaters: AMC Abbey, AMC Southfield City, AMC Wonderland, Showcase Sterling, Showcase Dearborn, Showcase Westland, Showcase Auburn Hills, United Artists 12 Oaks. United Artists West River.

'Son of the Pink Panther' falls prey to bad direction

I'm not a great fan of "Pink Panther" movies. But after watching the slapdash new 'Son of the Pink Panther," even I waxed nostalgic for Peter Sellers JOHN — who died in 1982, taking most of French detective Clouseau's charms with him.

And it's a shame too, because "Son" marks the first American starring vehicle for Italian film clown Roberto Benigni. The horse-faced comic had me in stitches in the Jim Jarmusch movies - as an escaped convict in "Down By Law," and as a pumpkin-loving cab driver in "Night on Earth."

"SON OF THE PINK PANTHER"

Released by: MGM / United Artists

Starring: Roberto Benigni, Herbert Lom, Claudia Cardinale. Deborah Farentino, Robert Davi Directed by: Blake Edwards Produced by: Tony Adams Written by: Blake Edwards, Madeline and Steve Sunshine Music by: Henry Mancini Rated: PG (Some material may not be suitable for pre-teenagers.)

Rating (out of a possible four):

Key: Don't miss it

Running time: 93 minutes

Worth a look Walt for video

Desperate attempts to win laughs by falling off a bike or singing opera off-key don't mean that Benigni's trying to fill shoes too big for him or that he's even wearing the wrong ones. With someone other than Blake Edwards behind the camera, "Son of the Pink Panther" might be something special.

The title sequence finds Bobby McFerrin performing an a cappella version of Henry Mancini's jazzy "Panther" theme. Dodging the converging names on the credits, animated versions of the Panther and Clouseau yuk it up in a movie studio recording suite.

This may be the only clever moment in the movie, which quickly moves into James Bond territory with an international terrorist (Robert Davi, who played 007's drug-lord nemesis in "License to Kill") kidnapping a eautiful princess (Deborah Farentino).

The action is brutal and the body count surprisingly high for a movie supposedly aimed at family audiences

■ What can you say about a movie where the biggest laughs come from a poodle who rides on strangers' legs?

Clouseau's clumsiness. The part is softened considerably here, offering love interest with Claudia Cardinale (as Clouseau's mother) almost as an appeasement for past abuses.

He's still knocked around plenty, including the time when he jumps off a dock after a drowning Clouseau. The bit isn't funny because they are standing in kneedeep water. It's funny because this big-budget albatross, which can afford to shoot in five different countries, can't even disguise the wet suit beneath Lom's soggy shirt and tie.

The intentional humor in "Son of the Pink Panther" isn't nearly launched the "Panther" movies 30 years ago, has lost any sense of comic timing, especially in the action-packed Bondian climax at a Middle-Eastern fortress. Turn off Mancini's musical score and you'd see how clunky the filmmaking really is.

But hasn't this always been the schtick with the "Panther" movies? Just as Clouseau can bumble his way through any case and come out a hero, so can Edwards direct mediocre comedies that Showcase Westland, Star still prove gold at the box office.

He and the series may have met their match with "Son of the Pink Panther," which, if there's any justice at all, should prove one of the summer's biggest bombs.

Cutting autoworker pay offers society mixed bag of the auto industry, an autoworker made about three times the hourly rate at the MSU cafeteria, which was still under a buck an hour, a fact that often crossed my mind as I fished for pots in the hot

Today, the ratio hasn't changed much, although the U.S. auto wage rate has slipped from first to dustrial nations. Take-home pay has multiplied by a factor of five since the 1960s, as has the minimum wage, which not surprisingly tracks with new-car prices as Medical costs, housing, taxes, social security and most public sector jobs have far outstripped the take-home pay of the average autoworker, even as total employment dwindles. The casual, easy money at the plant gate is pretty much gone forever.

Needless to say, this is not a good time to be negotiating a labor contract, despite the short-lived success of Ford and Chrysler. Still, it was startling indeed to see GM ask for the first bonafide pay cut since the depression in the 1930s.

GM's proposal was cloaked in something that has been accepted in other industries - namely offering lower pay for new hires. Still, if it were accepted it would mean a lower pay base for the entire industry, and make the U.S. the only country in the world where a major heavy industry presents a dwindling standard of living to its workers.

All this is against a background of dramatically rising payroll costs, specifically the cost of medical care, heavy payouts to pension funds, benefits for retirees and even the ironic costs of benefits due after plant closings. The basic rationale for paying less for new hires at certain component plants is that the alternative is to simply buy the components outside GM from companies paying

Also, I've never quite understood the basic philosophy pursued by the UAW of paying such high base labor rates for unskilled labor, with so little premium for highly skilled jobs that take years of training. After a four year apprenticeship, or even an associate degree, you only get a few bucks an hour under the current pay structure. Lowering the rates for entry-level jobs could well be long overdue.

That, of course, would mean restructuring the pay rates for the whole corporation, and by extension the whole industry - a difficult, if not impossible task.

Still, there is something odd about a company heavily laden with retirees and those about to retire, shuffling the deck to keep

Two different plans

"When an emergency does arise people always say they wish they had medical insurance," said Jeff Dizik, a veterinarian for First Veterinary Clinics of Michigan, which is based in Southfield and operates area clinics in Novi, Rochester Hills, Southfield and

"Pet insurance does work, but people have to make an initial payment. There is another insurance plan (VPI), which began several years ago in California by a group of veterinarians. Both programs are becoming more widespread. Insurance does have a place in the market."

Medipet offers two plans. The first, Silver Tag, provides lower annual deductibles ($150) in return for coverage limits totaling $1,000 per injury or illness. Annual premiums are $129 for pets three months to nine years old or $219 for pets 10 years and over.

The Gold Tag plan, meanwhile, provides higher coverage limits ($3,000 per injury or illness) with a higher annual deductible ($300) and a lower premium — $59 for pets three months to nine years old or $99 for pets 10 years or old-

Each plan allows a policy holder to insure up to nine pets under one maximum deductible per year. Co-payment for the two plans is 30 percent.

For love of pets: Insurance

■ Pet insurance? Sounds like a joke, right? Well, it's not so funny when your beloved cat or dog becomes ill or injured and the bills from the vets climb over $1,000. Pet insurance has been a big hit in the short time it's been available in Michigan.

Sonny, an excitable Great Dane, became bloated during a dog show at Schoolcraft College in Livonia and had to be rushed to an emergency clinic or face death within five hours.

The resulting operation, which Sonny survived, cost $900. But Katherine Lucy, Sonny's soulmate and owner of Belle Creek Kennels in Livonia, paid a third of the bill, the remainder covered by a novel insur-

"I have 10 Great Danes, and all of them are insured. I wouldn't have it any other way," said Lucy, who opened her boarding kennel in 1989. (Sonny also) went through a window and broke both his wrist joints, and the insurance picked up most of that as well.

(Sadly, Sonny recently passed away.)

New to Michigan

Lucy' insurance plan has been available across the nation via a 1-800 number since the mid-1980s. The plan, Medipet, recently found an area home at Kelter-Thorner Inc., an insurance specialist in downtown Birmingham. Medipet is designed to help cover costs for dogs and cats due to accidents, illness and disease.

"I can tell you Medipet works," said Lucy. "I've never had a problem where I have to go back to a veterinarian for more letters. And payment usually arrives within 30 days, though I've had some checks come in

as little as two weeks."

For pet owners like Lucy, Medipet has proven effective in covering operations, which can easily run a thousand dollars or more. The plan covers 70 percent of expenses for X-rays, operations, veterinary fees, prescriptions and hospital stays once an annual deductible is met.

"It's actually a simple policy which is not intended for routine maintenance but rather to cover the unexpected," said Marilyn Chernoff, president and chief executive officer of Kelter-Thorner. "We've been offering Medipet (since July), and the response has been tremendous.

Chernoff, who started with Kelter-Thorner as a secretary in 1967, said the policy is backed by the Fireman's Fund, a national insurance firm that has provided a wide variety of coverage since the Civil War. Kelter-Thorner is the first insurance firm to offer Medipet in Michigan.

'To market Medipet we've sent out a letter and brochure explaining the plan to 1,500 of our existing members," said Chernoff, a Bloomfield Hills resident. "The response rate so far has been 25 percent. We plan on mailing 10,000 letters over the next few months.'

Kelter-Thorner, which had revenues of $11.5 million last year and employs 45 people at its Birmingham headquarters, also spreads the word by placing brochures in veterinarian offices and pet supply stores as well as at pet conventions and breeding

Kelter-Thorner, which operates branch offices in California, New Jersey and Ohio, provides insurance for the environmental, manufacturing, retail and service industries. In addition to Medipet, Kelter-Thorner plans to provide wedding insurance in November.

Child care can be work, can be fun

Who said caring for other people's children is

Donna Marsh, licensed in-home child care provider/professional, that's who. A resident of Livonia, she spends more than 40 hours a week providing quality child care for youngsters, infants through age 9. For her, it's a rewarding, even fun thing to do while giving of herself to others.

Marsh decide to research in-home child care by attending workshops and other formal training opportunities to learn the ins and outs and pros and cons of providing child care. Marsh said she always wanted to work with children and when the opportunity presented itself after being laid off from a major corporation, she pursued her dream. In April 1992, she became a state registered child care provider.

When children give hugs in the morning and evening while in care, I feel like a $100,000," she said. A feeling of love, comfort and security is what you'll experience when entering Marsh's day care home. A large colorful picture puzzle of the children enrolled and families that spells LOVE highlights the playroom wall. The caption above the puzzle says, "Kids are special people." What a great way to make children feel like they belong parents, too. Child care is a family affair.

The physical environment is one that says learning, child friendly, parent approved. There's no doubt as to the hard work and efforts put into preparing such an environment. Marsh says her brother, Garry Taylor, helped with the work of designing and building shelves, large storage areas and a creative fire escape exit that resembles large motor play equipment.

When I arrived to talk to Marsh, she and her brother were busy in the backyard, working on building a gingerbread style toy shed to house a plentiful amount of toys and equipment.

Not all the handiwork has been tailored for the children, but a sauna was put in for relaxing after working all day with a houseful of kids - thanks to brother Garry.

Four color-coordinated seat toy boxes contain art supplies, dress-up clothes, puzzles. Other age appropriate manipulatives are stored in the smooth wooden toy boxes. These, too, are products of tailored handiwork.

Not only does Marsh receive much-needed family support from siblings, her husband, a physician, gets into the action by occasionally reading a story or two to the children between working with his patient-clients. The schedule is filling and flexible, starting with readiness activities - ABCs, numbers, colors, shapes, etc., to arts and crafts, manipulatives, exploratory play and outdoor

In the spring and summer, Marsh's backyard is sectioned off with a garden and has a waterfall for the children for play fishing. In the winter, her vard is converted to an ice rink for the kids to hone their skills at skating, if they desire.

Marsh admits to not only having fun with the children daily, but "I like to work and have a purpose." She adds that it's wonderful not having to leave home early and still work, doing something she enjoys a lot.

The hardest thing for Marsh is getting attached to the cute little people she cares for regularly and sometimes having to discipline them. Marsh uses the time-out method and makes sure it is followed with a communication with each child's parent or parents.

She also shares that it's difficult but understandable when parents demonstrate envious actions as they relate to her communication style and bonding with the kids. One parent confessed to becoming a bit envious when her child said she didn't make scrambled eggs "like Ms. Donna."

Marsh tries to accommodate families by working hard at strengthening parent/provider alliances and providing opportunities for children to feel special and a part of their surroundings. She hosts birthday parties for each child at the day care facility's expense. She also gives gifts to parents on special occasions and at the holidays.

Her advice for new folks coming into the field is to find cut as much as possible first.

"Be flexible and learn to listen" she said. "Parents need to be educated on child care." As for the children, "go with the flow." The funniest thing about children is their Long gone are the days of "stuffy" etiquette classes.

A group of local children learned that at The Ritz-Carlton's "A Day of Eti-

They spent their day at the Dearborn hotel baking a cake with the pastry chef, learning to talk on the phone, eating lunch and touring the

Meanwhile, 10-year-old Stephanie Pease of Riverview played the black grand piano. Jeremy Winston, 12, of Allen Park, Michael Sherbow, also 12, of Bloomfield Hills, and Jonathan Rice, 10, of Dearborn explored the suite's many bathrooms and the room's fabulous view of Dearborn and downtown Detroit.

Michelle Winston, 10, of Allen Park summed up the suite appropri-

Surprisingly, all these activities taught the children different aspects of etiquette and style. The 45-minute tour throughout the hotel taught them proper manners when meeting new people, elevator etiquette and safety around the swimming pool and the kitchen.

Also during the seven-hour day, the kids learned telephone and table manners through fun activities and

Before they were allowed to enter the lunch room, teacher Sharon Gioia named two students "host" and 'guest" and taught them the proper way to enter the room. They were then allowed to enter the room filled with classical music.

Once the children were informed of the menu, many of them were apprehensive about trying potato soup, salad and zucchini. But, Gioia taught them, it's polite to try everything, not just the food they liked — chicken and carrots. (They didn't have any problems with the ice cream sundaes with nuts, whipped cream and chocolate and cherry sauce.)

Pease and 10-year-old Christina Pierce-Winter of Bloomfield were left with an eerie feeling because wherever they moved, the eyes in the paintings followed them.

Although too young to cut her chicken, Pierce-Winter's sister, 6year-old Connie, offered manners that she knew. They were included in the many tips Gioia taught the children. For example, she stressed that when someone asks to pass the salt, the pepper should be offered as well. After all, "the salt and pepper are mar-

Making etiquette fun is what Gioia likes to stress in her classes.

Back to school? Then get involved

By Sue Mason Staff Writer

Back to school. There's a family ritual related to the start of the new school year. First, a trip to the department store for new school clothes. Then it's off to the shoe store for some fancy footwear. Last stop is for school supplies, decorated with the latest mega movie hit.

But there's one last thing parents need to do to get their kindergartener up to high schooler ready for the 1992-93 school year: Talk to them and get involved in their school life.

'Parents have to start doing this when children are little," said Craig McLean, district manager for Family Service of Detroit and Wayne County. When they're at 13, parents can't say 'What can I do to get close to my child?' It's too late, people."

Family Service, with offices in Detroit, Canton, Livonia, Westland, Dearborn and Trenton, has come up with a tip sheet for families that addresses the concerns of parents and children whether ing to school.

The sheet offers 12 tips for parents, ranging from building self-esteem in children by helping them identify and deal with their feelings to speaking about education positively.

they're going to school for the first time or return-

There are also tips for parents with children entering preschool or kindergarten (emphasizing safety), for middle school-aged children (maintaining participation in the family) and high school students (encouraging continued involvement in organized clubs and school groups).

The tip sheet is a spinoff of concern about gangs, a problem considered endemic to the city of Detroit, but showing up Downriver and in the fringes of western Wayne County, according to McLean.

"We presented a couple of gang awareness nights here in Livonia and Canton and in answering questions during the question-and-answer sessions it became apparent parents wanted know what to do to keep kids out of gangs," McLean said. "The tips not only help in going back to school but help in maintaining a child's interest in school and minimizing them getting involved in gangs.

The nicest thing anyone ever said about my writing was that it was really pretty, even if he couldn't read it. The latter is what most people say about it. And what do I say? If it's good to look at, then let it be!

An interesting thing I've no ticed about people's writing, in general, and wonder what you think about it, is one generation's writing being very similar to that of the preceding. For example, my husband's and his son's writing is almost indistinguishable. Is it just the copycat syndrome?

Looking forward to your thumbnail psychoanalysis. Thank you,

Bloomfield

The question our writer poses regarding her husband's and son's handwriting being indistinguishable may contain nuances that the untrained eye might not recognize, but a trained graphologist could. Research tells us there is less than one chance in 68 trillion that two people can write exactly alike. A person's handwriting is as individual as his or her fingerprints

First we write as we are taught in school and then we develop our own style. Those people who are independent and have a need to express their personality make changes in their handwriting to reflect this. Today's writer is this type of person. She probably felt a need to be independent early in life and may have been somewhat rebellious in the pursuit.

This is a versatile, intelligent and talented woman. A good mind for financial matters is a strong possibility. She knows how to get right down to the business at hand eliminating the extraneous as she goes along. She is also efficient, direct, constructively original and sometimes aggressive.

Louis and Lucille Fultz of Redford will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary Sept. 3.

The couple exchanged vows on Sept. 3, 1933 at the home of her parents, Skip and Nellie Wottowa, in Coulterville, Ill. They were surprised with a shivaree at their new home, a celebration arranged by their friends and fami-

They couple moved to Redford in 1950 where they raised three children the late Richard Fultz, Nellieann Mattson of Hadlev and Gary Fultz of Port Huron. They also have 11 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren, with three more expected in early 1994.

Foster care has permanence for infants Children less than a year old are one of the fastest growing populations in the U.S. child welfare system and more than half of them placed in foster care are still there after four years, according to researchers at the University of Michigan.

In a study of nearly 5,000 infants who entered the child welfare system between 1981 and 1987, 54 percent were not reunited with a natural parent or parents, permanently placed with a relative or legal guardian, or adopted by age 4, according to a study conducted by Ira M. Schwartz, Robert M. Ortega, Gideon Fishman and Shenyang Guo of the U-M Center for the Study of Youth Policy.

The researchers say the number of infants placed in out-of-home care increased 37 percent between 1984 and 1990, far outstripping growing placement rates for any other age group.

"These findings are counter-intuitive and inconsistent with the conventional wisdom on the subject," they said. "They are potentially explosive. There are many families and single adults who desperately want to adopt a child, but a large proportion of infants placed in non-relative foster care languish and bounce around in the system for years.

According to the study, while the number of infants achieving permanent placements increased from 35 percent in 1981 to 56 percent in 1987, the proportion of those experiencing multiple out-of-home placements rose from 55 percent to 73 percent during this time.

This represents a dramatic shift over the years from single to multiple placements," the researchers said. "This is very disturbing, particularly in light of the extensive and compelling research regarding the importance of attachment, stability and bonding for infants.'

The U-M study revealed that infants initially placed with a relative are more likely to find a permanent home within four years than if placed in public or private agency care, or in a child care institution.

While child welfare officials should consider placing more infants with relatives, they need to learn more about the willingness and capacity of relatives to care for children in state custody, the researchers said.

"More also needs to be uncovered about when placements with relatives are desirable, when they might not be, and what services relatives need in order to provide proper care and supervision.

Furthermore, the study shows that infants placed in publicly administered foster care stand a better chance of permanent placement than those in private agency care. The researchers say the lack of official incentives encouraging private agencies to expedite placement may be part of the reason.

The researchers also found that older infants are more likely to achieve permanent placement than those less than a month old, and a greater proportion of Hispanic American than African-American or white babies find a permanent home.

All together, the results suggest that many infants entering the system have little chance of returning home or to another permanent living environment within four years of initial placement," the researchers said. "What was supposed to be geared toward temporary placement for these children has become relatively permanent. Ironically, for these infants it can be said that there's nothing more permanent than a temporary placement." The researchers recommend that child welfare support ser-and restructured, and that public and mental health agencies and private human service organizations aid in this process. They also suggest that steps be taken to minimize the number of infants experiencing multiple placements by bolstering reunification and adoption services. "Clearly, child welfare services must give infants priority atten-tion," the researchers said. "More knowledge needs to be gained about why large and growing numbers of infants are being separated from their natural birth parents or parent. This may lead to more appropriate and effective strategies for preventing these placements in the first place."

Don and Emajean Kellner

Only the Presidential Suite was good enough for Don and Emaean Kellner, who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary July 15.

The Kellners were the guests of honor for dinner with their immediate family at the Embassy Suites Hotel in Livonia before retiring to the suite their children had reserved for the couple.

They also renewed their wedding vows at St. Alexander Church and then were surprised with a party, attended by many old friends and relatives.

The Kellners were married on July 15, 1943, and lived in Dearborn Heights until he retired from the Detroit Edison Co. in 1980. They now live in Houghton Lake and winter in Crystal River, Fla.

The Kellners have three children — Sandy Cookson of Farmington Hills, Gary Kellner of Westland and Kathy Renaud of Garden City. They also have nine grandchildren - Michelle, Stephen, Beki, David, Danny, Kristy, Debbie and Jessie — and one great-grandchild — Brittney.

"If a child feels needed, he will be at home and not get in a gang to feel he belongs."

Working parents and two-parent families need to get to know their child's teacher and get involved in their education. They also need to stay involved. It can't be a case of the parent "being here and school being there; the two have to come together for the

"Usually, it isn't the young children who dislike school; for them, it's an adventure," he said. "Usually it's the older ones who talk about hating school. One thing happens and they generalize for all of school. That's a red flag that needs to be investigated."

The back-to-school tip sheet was a group effort with each of Family Service's offices providing ideas and responses. It came about quickly partially because of its large staff and wide range of ages. The informational sheet on gangs was prepared at the request of Livonia Youth Assistance.

And its history also works in the agency's favor in gathering information for such publications. Family Service has been in existence more than 100 years and its main thrust is to work more intensely with families to strengthen family relationships.

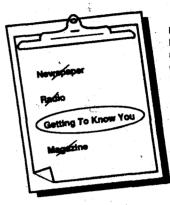

It offers family, marital, individual and group counseling, outpatient substance abuse programs and FACT, a Detroit-based program that works with at-risk families and children in their homes.

The agency also has begun a two-year training program with Family Therapist Associates in Ann Arbor to improve the staff's skills and abilities in working with an entire family not just one or two individuals.

"One thing we want to do is to become more attuned to the family's needs as a group," McLean said. "A family has a life of its own as a collective, and we believe it is an important area to nurture at this point.

Copies of "Back-to-School Tips" are free and available by calling Family Service's administrative offices at 961-1584 or by writing to Family Service, 2200 Bagley, Suite 700, Detroit 48226.

Jesus told Peter he would be "converted" (Luke 23:32) after he dehied Jesus. Peter had not lost his eternal, salvation, but he needed to CHANGE HIS BEHAVIOR Since a "BROTHER" can be converted (James 5:19), this further shows conversion to be a step of spiritual growth of a born again person. Come grow with us!

Classes study John Newman, St. Paul

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

When classes resume this fall at Madonna University in Livonia, there will be some new offerings near and dear to Mary Rice's heart, partly because she'll be teaching them.

Rice will be teaching two courses - "Think About These Things . . . Philippians, Epistle of Joy' and "Remember Newman — A Morning Devoted to a Loving Look at the Life of John Henry Cardinal Newman" - through the university's continuing education program.

The first is a study of the Epsitle of St. Paul to the Philippians, while the second will explore the influence of Newman, a scholar and pastor of the 1800s who was named venerable in 1992 by the Catholic Church, a step on the way to sainthood.

I see a parallel between the two men," Rice said. "Paul was a preacher and was remembered for his writings. Newman had an enormous amount of writings letters, sermons and even two

The university wanted a class on Scriptures and approached Fr. George Shalloub of St. Mary's Antiochian Orthodox Church about the class. When ill health kept him from handling the class. he asked Rice to do it. It was Rice who came up with the subject, Paul's Epistle.

The Epistle begins as a thank you letter to the Philippians who had provided the apostle with financial support. Paul generally shunned such support because he didn't "want people" to think he taught the gospel for money," Rice said. The epistle goes on to communicate Christ's message in a "very inviting way, whetting the appetite for the rest of the mes-

The letter encompasses passages which describe the meaning of Christ's life. Paul's witness to the power of His spirit, guidelines for Christian Life and a spirit of thankfulness.

The Epistle to the Philippians was written by Paul at a time when he was old, sick discouraged and probably in prison," Rice "But it's written in a buoyant, joyous way. When you read it,

She believes that for those interested in the Scriptures the study of the Epistle of Joy is a good entry point. It's also good to look at the Scriptures a book at a time rather than by Testaments.

"I think it's much more important to take one book and look at it in depth," she said. "It's more important to take one book and live with it, argue it and dwell on it. In flavor of it or the time to dwell on the words and let them penetrate your life.

"People don't want to study the Scriptures as a historian or theologian; the average person wants to know what difference it will make in their lives, if they study

The class will be 7-8:30 p.m. Thursdays, Sept. 16-Oct. 7, and

The parallel Rice sees is in their lives. Paul was converted on the road to Damascus and had to leave his powerful position, his wife and friends and go to a church where his wasn't trusted. Newman was an Anglican priest until 1845 when he converted to Catholicism. As a result he was forced to leave his friends and things he held dear, including Oxford.

Newman was working for reform and restoration in the Angliworks of the fathers of the church when he decided to convert. He went on to become a priest in the Catholic Chruch and in 1879 was named a cardinal. By 1890 he was well respected for his work in both the Catholic and Anglican churches. Rice said.

'Because of his convictions, he had to make a break that from an emotional standpoint was very difficult," Rice said. "He said he saw the light and even wrote a hymn, 'Lead Kindly Light.'"

Rice has a profound interest in Newman and has read numerous books on him, including an English translation of Honore's 'Spiritual Journey of Newman.' She will use several videos, one on his life and the other of Sir Alec Guiness reading the final sermon he gave to friends before leaving Oxford.

"Newman had a concern for the perplexed and great empathy for those who seek the truth," she said. "Most people like to think that what they believe is true. We have an innate desire for the truth especially in the spiritual realm. I think we can see ourselves in that."

In her class, Rice will explore the influences of Newman and students will learn more about his life as a scholar and pastor and why he has been named venerable by the church. The course will be 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Oct. 9. The cost is $10.

"Newman was a head of his time, but he wasn't rebellious, Rice said. "He believed that all things happen at the right time. He felt that consulting the faithful was important, that the faithful have to have a voice, and it's important to hear the opinion of the laymen.' Madonna University is a

It is a kind of religion that believes it is under attack. What these people feel to be under attack is more often a culture and an economy than a faith. Such radical movements also become a means to raw power.

Every religion is related to a culture. A culture is a way to look at life. A culture is a way human beings experience life in relation to their environment and traditions. Culture connects us with our very identity and survival. When cultures are attacked, religion will respond.

Without understanding for one another, we will wind up with religious leaders who advocate murder. I observe that the pressures to polarize positions are strong. The protection of diversity, and the ability to have dialogue, have weakened. There must be an acknowledging of diversity and a strengthening of the middle grounds, where diversity can be celebrated. Without this we face a terrible future.

These features are some of the reasons insects are not one of the most loved groups of animals. But the more that is discovered about this group the more fascinating they become. Learning about a subject instills an appreciation and a respect for the subject.

This summer, there were several dobsonfly adults on the walls of the Independence Oaks Nature Center. We have seen some in the past, but this summer they seemed to be particularly abun-

It's not hard to miss an adult dobsonfly. They are about three to four inches long. Their wings are long and broad, covering their entire body. Examining the wings closely reveals a very delicate veination that is easily seen because of their size.

If a male is observed, thoughts of science fiction creatures will' immediately occur. Protruding from the head of a male dobsonfly are two long mandibles. These mandibles may be as long as a third to a half of their body length. They look formidable, but are used for courtship behavior and to some extent for defense against other dobsonflies. Adult males, use the long sicklelike mandibles to position the female during courtship and mating.

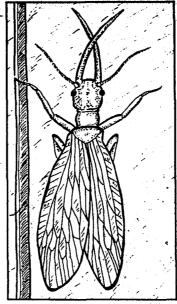

Since most adults of insects in this group only live a few days, it is believed that they do not even feed with the developed mouthparts that they have. But try and convince someone of that the first time they see those long mandibles.

Once the two adults have mated, the female will seek a place above water and lay her eggs. If the eggs are not parasitized by a wasp, when they hatch the larvae will drop into the water and grow to be about three inches long. Most people who fish know this larva has a hellgrammite. They are prized for trout fishing.

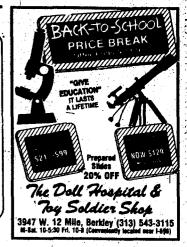

While developing underwater hellgrammites are predators on other larvae, but can in turn be food for larger predators. If they reach maturity, they will leave the water and pupate underground near the shore. After about two weeks, an adult dobsonfly emerges.

Probe traces how FBI spied on High Court

lexander Charns recalls that when he was a student at Livonia Bentley High School in the early '70s, he had little interest in political matters. He spent most of his time keeping his grades presentable and running the mile or playing basketball for the Bulldogs. Plus, there was that job at a local Big Boy restaurant, along with another one at Hygrade's where he "worked the bacon line." There didn't seem to be much time for anything else.

meticulously researched, highly intriguing account of how, for many years, the J. Edgar Hoover-led FBI repeatedly spied on the U.S Supreme Court through wiretaps, bugging devices and informers.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch called "Cloak and Gavel" a "bonanza of Supreme Court history. The Wall Street Journal lauded Charns and his 'mountains of internal government files showing that, at least through the mid-1970s, the FBI had all manner of secret sources and entanglements at the nation's highest court.'

Charns has appeared on national television to talk about his book, which was entered into the initial levels of competition for the year's Pulitzer Prize in journalism.

If you're wondering just how all this happened. Charns says the book got started in a kind of roundabout way during his first year in law school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Influenced by Klan shooting

That's when he witnessed - via television news one day — the shooting of five Communist party workers by Klansmen. The event occurred in Greensboro, N.C., at an anti-Klan rally in fall

Struck by the event, Charns (who had aspired to writing since high school) did a bit of reporting on the killings as a stringer for a Chicago weekly and then eventually sold articles to the New York Times and the Washington Post about the case.

Not long afterward, he wrote an in-depth story for the Post on migrant farm workers in North Carolina. He remembers it as an experience that sharply piqued his interest in investigative

After he'd done several other stories for the Times and the Post, he began entertaining thoughts of perhaps putting together a book, although he wasn't sure what its subject might be.

Charns started wondering, he says, if they had done that with King, what were the chances that Hoover's FBI had done something similar with other presumed adversaries in high places, such as the Supreme Court?

Pewabic Pottery offers a curriculum of basic ceramics, tilemaking and clay sculpture along with intensive band building and wheel throwing. Children 6-12 and young adults 13-18 primarily concentrate on honing handbuilding techniques with some wheel throwing.

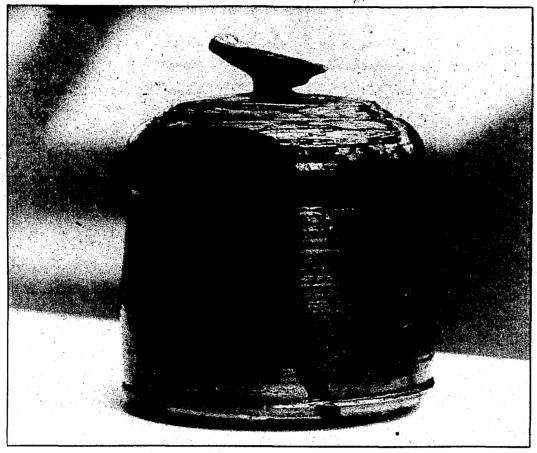

"Teachers selected the work from students who excelled. The students juried themselves. Some said they felt they weren't ready to exhibit their work," said Dorando-Marcy.

The Detroit-based pottery prides itself on drawing students from far and wide. Students from Livonia, Plymouth, Southfield, Grosse Pointe and Hamtramck appreciate learning in what Dorando-Marcy calls "the best facility in the state" because of the history that goes with the pottery.

'The environment has a lot to offer, but also being a historical site, we have a museum and archives where they can look at historic work and learn from that," Dorando-Marcy said. "We have so much to offer with the production facilities. We're always building kilns and students learn Berry and Tillman acquire their stock-in-trade from house sales, estates and auctions with criteria in mind such as "quality workmanship, good design and uniqueness.

'Ŵe buy anywhere we can. Of course, we're always hopeful individuals will call on us so we get the history of a piece. When you buy from a family, you get a sense of where it came from," Tillman Berry added, "It really should be handmade, not manufactured. It has to be unique. If I come across a very stylish piece, an accent piece, I will pick it up.

Although Tillman's shop is filled to the brim with pine and other woods, she also carries furnishings to accent a room.

"I like to find painted pieces to add color to a room," Tillman said.

Red paint worn thin on the armrests and seat of an 1880s child's rocker tells a story of a time when reading a book tripped the imagination as a form of entertainment.

"When you live with these pieces, you are living with the history of our country, with the history of other people's countries, the countries of our ancestors," Tillman said.

'You're living with their craftsmanship. They brought that craftsmanship here. We have (antique) blanket boxes because we didn't have linen closets.

Designers welcome visitors to room vignettes

BY MARY KLEMIC STAFF WRITER

Romance, drama, relaxation. adventure — these themes aren't restricted to movie theaters.

Room vignettes put together by area designers at "Design, Live!", a presentation at Michigan Design Center in Troy recently, had all those ingredients and then some. More than 1,200 visitors at the event had the opportunity to view the rooms, attend home and design seminars and meet with design professionals, including Charlotte Kennedy of Plymouth.

Colors, textures and furnishings in the 19 8-by-10-foot vignettes created a broad range of looks and moods.

Gene Galley of Joseph Productions in Southfield called his vignette a combination of Southwest and "Northern Exposure."

Greenhouse plants topic of talk

The Hobby Greenhouse Association of Southeastern Michigan will have a meeting 7-10 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 8, at the Farmington Hills Public Library, 32737 W. 12 Mile, a half-mile west of Orchard Lake Road.

Donald Hodges will present slides on interesting plants in Jamaica. The public may attend. Admission is free. For information, call Hodges at 477-4111.

with great prizes, a horse show, a band concert and cuisine di carnivale. The event is sponsored by the Franklin Community Association, and is the organization's

The organization is for those interested in gardening under glass. Many members own greenhouses, and some members hope to have a greenhouse in the future. Other members garden on the windowsill.

Future scheduled meetings will be Oct. 13, on African violets, presented by Jenny Sweet; and Nov. 10, a slide travelog on collecting plants.

The room featured warm red walls with a stencil pattern at the moulding around the top and bottom. Pillows and a blanket in the room had a pattern similar to that of the stencil. The unusual wall accents included black oars and a mounted ram's head. Black and white squares on the floor, textured to look like wood, and dark furniture added a striking effect.

Mickey Greenfield of Mickey Greenfield Interiors in Farmington Hills offered a charming view, with a flowery carpet, an old-fashioned doll, a portrait on the wall, a velvet chair and a country cupboard filled with flowery plates. A large plant stood in one corner, its leaves carrying the lush, flowery feeling of the room.

People in attendance voted the room by Gloria Tellis of Hudson's Interior Design Studio in Southfield "Most Livable." The vignette, in black, silver and cream, featured a screen with a bold. flowery pattern. The lines and flow of the pattern were carried by the stripes in the sofa, the thick shag rug and the ornate frame of "People aren't afraid of color anymore," said Linda Shears of Modern Studio of Interiors in Birmingham, and the vignette she created was true to that. The room's furnishings included a carpet and a portrait that had similar colors.

Furnishings and colors picked up each other in the room by P.K. Fields-Helm of P.K. Fields Interiors in Farmington. A bird of paradise flower and tiger rug matched the orange, while iron and steel tables harmonized with the purple-blue wall.

Roy Hankis of Roy Allen Hankis Interiors in Troy used a variety of textures in his darkwalled room - with a wood and rope chair, a marble and steel table, a marble and wood furnishing. The unusual, off-white sofa blended with the wood and rope, while a neon wall piece picked up the streaks of color in the dark

Phyllis Berg of Paylus-Beng Art Interiors in Bloomfield Hills captured the warmth and comfort of summer in her room, which featured blue walls and a mirror with a sunburst frame.

In their vignette, Linda Golden of Socially Yours Design in Bloomfield Hills and Judy Frank el of Judy Frankel and Associates in Troy conveyed a soft, restful feeling, with its carpet's rich colors, chaise lounge and glass cabinet filled with objects.

Joan Knight of Joan Knight Interiors in Southfield thought big: The large bed in her vignette was angled, and the decorating theme featured elephants.

Twig accents in a vase and a strawlike carpet were compatible in the room by Kasey Werner Pierson and Beverly Pierson Schilling of Pierson & Pierson in Birmingham.

Susan Winton-Feinberg of Walter-Herz Interiors in Bloomfield Hills featured cool marble accents in her room with red walls.

Charlotte Kennedy of A Designers Touch and Sharon Holton of Sharon Holton Interiors in Plymouth featured a section of a stained glass window.

Some of the proceeds from "Design, Live!" went to Rainbow Connection, an organization that grants the wishes of children with life-threatening illnesses.

Are you really ready to buy?

With low interest rates, plenty of available housing and an abundance of affordable mortgage plans, first-time buyers may be thinking more and more about making a purchase.

But are you really ready? There are many factors to consider before taking the plunge. Doug Stranahan, divisional president for Century 21 Great Lakes, offers the following advice.

Begin by examining your finances.

Saving for a down payment is only the beginning. There are closing costs, insurance, moving expenses and property taxes to consider.

Will your income support your monthly mortgage payments? A general guideline is that no more than 28 percent of gross monthly income should go to house pay ments which includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance.

Also, take into consideration other outstanding bills such as credit cards and car payments. Additional obligations and housing together shouldn't exceed a third of monthly gross income.

Estimate your new monthly utility bills. And remember, you'll no longer have a landlord to mow the lawn and fix leaky faucets. It's important also to have a cash reserve for unexpected emergencies such as broken pipes and a new Mileves your credit history?

Past delinquent payments stay on your credit record for seven years and can affect your eligibility for a mortgage. Check your credit record and clear up any discrepancies before applying for a

■ Determine how long you plan to live in the home.

The length of your stay affects the type of mortgage you should choose. For example, if you anticipate starting a family and moving into a larger home in five to seven years, an adjustable rate can mean lower monthly payments during the first few years

■ With your finances in order, determine your new place of residence.

Can you afford to buy where you currently rent? Do you want to? If not, are you sure you're ready to locate to a new area away from familiar people and places? Are you willing to commute a longer distance to work?

It's a good idea to rent in your new community before committing to a purchase. That way, you can check out the neighborhood and what it has to offer.

You may find the homes you can afford and the communities in which you'll live not what you had envisioned.

■ Be reasonable in your expecta-Waterfront properties and extras such as large lots and multiple bedrooms and baths are nice, but not worth it if you must over extend yourself financially. Not only does a larger home mean larger monthly payments, it may mean larger utility bills.

Examine the home's layout, appliances and decorating. Will you have to come up with even more money to replace floor coverings or kitchen and bathroom appliances and fixtures?

What about the furnace, hot water heater, washer and dryer? These are major purchases that can set you back financially.

■ An experienced real estate agent can help you decide whether you are really ready to buy and determine how much house you can actually afford.

Although now is the best time to buy - the affordability index is the strongest it's been in 20 purchasing a home probably is the biggest investment you'll ever make. Don't walk in with your eyes closed.

In addition, the law will generally not permit an agent to act in a dual capacity unless it is agreed upon by both parties.

The broker may not be entitled to commission and may be subject to other remedies and penalties including rescission of the transaction, a claim for money damages and discipline under the occupational code.

I want to leave my condominium to my son and I don't want to go through probate. Someone suggested that I execute a quit claim deed now, conveying my interests to him and give it to him for recording after I die. Is this a good idea?

It is not a good idea. For several reasons. First, you should consult with an attorney to help you prepare the quit claim deed. The attorney would advise you that if your son dies before you or the deed is lost, conveyance will not be effective to accomplish your goals.

You might consider an inter vivos trust or otherwise a transfer of your present interest in the property to you and your son as joint tenants with rights of survivorship.

It will be necessary for you to ensure that your rights as the present owner are protected with respect to any convey-

With the new federal family and Medical Leave Act, effective Aug. 5, any employer with "50 or more employees during each of 20 or more calendar work weeks in the current or preceding calendar year," is covered by the act.

Employees include all employees maintained on the payroll during the week, including part-timers, those on paid or unpaid leave and employees not eligible for leave. The 20 weeks need not be consecutive.

No DOC, the low-hassle loan

Don't forget now, bring your W-2s, paycheck stubs, income tax records, savings account and other asset records, a list of outstanding debts, credit card bills, and on and on.

It isn't always finding the right house that's a pain to potential house buyers. It's getting qualified and approved for the loan.

There's a remedy for all this pain. It's called a No DOC mortgage loan, and it's available in only one location in Michigan: Shore Mortgage in Birmingham.

With a No DOC, nothing is verified, not income, assets or employment. That's the good news. The bad news, for many, is that you need to put 40 percent down. But this service, offered by Shore, is designed for those who deal in a cash world. This includes people who have borrowed down payments (like many first-time buyers do), young professionals and others with insufficient assets, small business owners who can't demonstrate current profitability, executives who aren't willing to disclose their assets, those who accumulate unacknowledged cash, multiple families who pool money to buy a house and buyers who have a short time to close.

So, buyers who put 40 percent down, or refinancing homeowners with 40-percent equity, can get fixed or adjustable loans with a greatly reduced version of the mortgage approval process. The only requirement is an excellent credit record and appraisals of the Apartments: Hardly looks like senior citizen housing, does it? As Botsford Commons administrator Steven Faine said: "Who wants to wake up every morning and be slapped in the face with a reminder that they are getting old?"

Un-Commons

A fresh face for senior housing COMMONS

■ To look at it, you would never guess that Botsford Commons was senior citizen housing, and that's the way it was designed. Things that normally distinguish a home for the aging — support rails, emergency equipment and the like — are builtin and out of sight.

BY GERALD FRAWLEY STAFF WRITER

Botsford Commons in Farmington Hills has been promoted as independent senior citizen housing — and it is that — but such a label is misleading.

When Steven Faine, Botsford General Hospital administrator for professional and support services, sat down with architect Scott Bowers of Bowers and Associates of Ann Arbor, the design philosophy was to take senior citizen housing a step further.

Let's call it evolving housing.

That means designing houses suitable for perfectly healthy, active senior citizens and incorporating features that allow the houses to evolve to meet the needs of an aging population.

"At the same time, these things are invisible unless you need them," Faine said. "The analogy we like to use is that of a hospital birthing oom."

Birthing rooms approximate a com-

Among the housing types available for seniors at Botsford Commons will be this 1,250 square-foot patio home with a living area, full basement.

Patio homes:

fortable bedroom, but when the need arises for, say oxygen, a panel is slid out of the way and oxygen tanks are revealed.

"That's what we're trying to do here," Faine said. "When we're all done with this, I want people to say they own a nice house, not a senior citizen house."

Hidden safety aids

When completed, Botsford Commons will include attached residential condominiums and apartments for active seniors, an assisted living center for those who need a little help, the Botsford Continuing Health Center for seniors who need more intensive medical attention, a Town Commons with activities, dining, shops and services and a wooded site completed with a trail network for the entire development.

It may turn out that some residents of Botsford Commons never need the additional features the group is designing in. "And that's fine," Faine said. "But it's nice to know it's there if you need it."

A simple example, Faine explained,

A simple example, Faine explained, are support rails. Certainly, not every person is going to need handrails.

It can be expensive to retrofit a house with hand rails if someone needs them. A builder who installs them during construction, however, risks scaring buyers.

"Who wants to wake up every morning and be slapped in the face with a reminder that they're getting old?" Faine asked. For Botsford Commons houses, the solution is to design special chair rail moldings—almost invisible from anywhere but right on top of them and securely fastened to wall studs—that double as grab bars.

Breaking new ground

Builder John Wineman of Southfield-based building company Wineman & Komer, said Botsford Commons is unlike any project he's worked on.

"It's been a real learning experience," he said. "The biggest market coming is the senior market.

"You really have to put yourself in the mind of the senior citizen."

Your grandmother might not recognize what they're doing with her vinyl today

No longer simply the serviceable stuff that covered your mother's kitchen floor, vinyl has come of age in the '90s.

While still as durable and easy care as you might remember, vinyl is now available in more colors and interesting patterns than ever before.

"If your cabinets and appliances are in good shape but your kitchen still seems like it needs some work, the problem may be underfoot," said Florence Perchuk, a top kitchen designer.

"Adding new colorful sheet vinyl flooring may be just the thing to breathe new life into the room without breaking the bank," she said.

Retail outlets here quote prices in the mid $600 range for a good quality vinyl, subfloor and installation for a room 15-by-9 feet. Builders also put vinyl in foyers, breakfast nooks, sunrooms, bathrooms and utility rooms of new houses.

Who's attracted to vinyl?

"It goes from all ages — new homeowners to senior citizens who want something easy to maintain," said Sheri Barber, assistant manager at Independent Carpet in Westland.

"Usually the first question has to do with budget, then how long they expect the floor to last," she said. "Schemes constantly change. Technology is constantly improving."

It's vinyl: This floor in the foyer of a mansion in Atlanta is, believe it or not, vinyl. Shows you how far vinyl has come in terms of its design potential.

Like any other product, all vinyl flooring is not created equal.

Consumers should do their homework before buying to make sure the pattern, color, quality and maintenance of what they buy will meet their needs.

If you're remodeling, ask to take floor samples home to see how they actually check out.

"It looks different in your light," Barber said. "Look at it with your cabinetry, how your carpeting comes up."

Major manufacturers include Armstrong, Mannington, Congoleum and Tarkett. Vinyl ranges in price from $7.99 to $33.95, Barber said.

Other things to consider when making a selection, according to Armstrong World Industries:

Easy care.

Once you do that, Wineman said, you begin to see things a little differently.

"Even if you're (a healthy senior), it's not the same as it is for you or I.

"For example, the lighting is about twice what you or I would like or even need," Wineman said. The additional lighting come from recessed fixtures. "That way it is subtle."

Reasonable costs

From a builder's perspective, Wineman said he doesn't expect the additional features to add significantly to the time of construction - it will add some cost, but not as much as one might expect.

"A lot of it comes down to planning," he said. "And the hospital really did their homework.

Since a lot of the additional safety and convenience features are being built at the planning stages, a lot of options are designed out, he said. "That speeds up the building.'

Wineman said he'll likely adopt some ideas he's learned at Botsford Commons in other Wineman and Komer projects.

"We've always tried to take the things we've done in our custom homes and incorporate it into our other projects — even if people don't see it or know it's there, these things make a subtle impression and add to the value."

Of course, not everything being developed for Botsford Commons can be adapted because the condominiums are part of the Botsford Commons community.

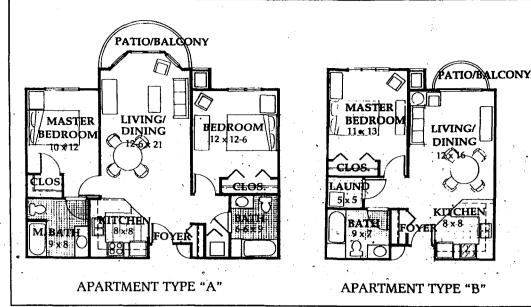

'But if I add some of these things and people say I can live here 10 years instead of five, that's a selling point," Wineman

Not profit driven

Scott Bowers, partner at the architectural firm of Bowers, and Rein Associates in Ann Arbor, said although he has worked on projects intended for senior citizens before, the level of commitment from Botsford Hospital has set this project apart.

On other projects, there have typically been more constraints because of a combination of cost controls and a lack of understand-"Our job (as architects) is complex because we work with developers on design versus cost."

Botsford wanted to control costs too, but the research and understanding into the needs of active and dependent senior citizens works in the project's favor. "There is profit in it, but it's not as profit driven as some other projects," Bowers said. Little changes can make a big difference.

Lighted wall switches, hand rails, under-cabinet lighting, extra-wide halls and doors, adjustable closets, barrier-free en-trances, single level, and wheelchair-adaptable kitchen cabinets are just a few of the additional features that can make independent living for senior citizens easi-

In addition to those safety and convenience features required by the hospital, research and focus groups provided insights into what senior citizens want and what builders and developers think they want.

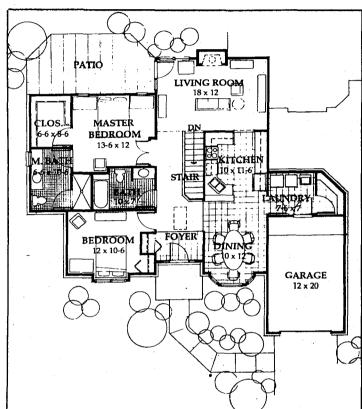

'For example, there is a mind set that says buyers want vaulted ceilings, custom woodwork and custom floors.

"As it turns out, they want nice, but economical without a lot of toys," Bowers said.

Another surprise learned from senior focus groups was that square footage isn't as important to senior citizens as it is to younger people and that the open floor plans are less popular.

They like more closed floor plans with rooms that have a specific purpose.

By visiting members of the focus groups in their own homes, Bowers said he discovered that a lot of people with 2,000 square foot houses really only use 600 square feet.

Floor plans: At top is a look inside the two apartment styles offered at Botsford Commons. Type A has 1,000 square feet of living space. Type B has 650. Above is the plan for the 1,250-square-foot patio homes. A survey of seniors showed they prefer closed floor plans to the open plans favored by most younger buyers.

Singh Development Co., Ltd.

The most important aspect of Botsford Commons, however, is the perception of commitment the buyers have about Botsford.

"It's not so much the sticks and bricks, but how you're going to be treated, the service, and the qualitv of life.'

Glass etching is affordable, do-able

If you've ever stopped to admire an etched glass door, window or mirror, you know that the effect is both unique and stunning. The combination of clear polished glass with a delicately contrasting frosted geometric or pictorial design enhances just about any set-

What you may not know, however, is that you can etch glass right in your own home or shop with a few simple, easy-to-master techniques.

Glass etching involves frosting or abrading the glass surface to create a dull, nontransparent area. The three most common methods for getting the job done are acid-cream etching, sandblasting and diamond-burr engraving. Each of these techniques can be approached with a modest investment of time, space and with distinctly personal detailing. When choosing glass to etch, keep in mind that the best material is one-fourth-inch-thick plate glass or laminated safety glass. Standard one-eighth-inch-thick window glass can be used, but the results will not be as good. And, the thinner glass is much more apt to break when placed under the mechanical stresses of diamond burr engraving and sandblasting. If you wish to work with one-eighth-inch glass, the best technique is acid etching.

The only type of glass that should not be etched is tempered glass. Tempered glass has been heat treated in a way that creates great tension within the material. When the surface is etched, the internal stresses may cause the glass to shatter. Generally, tempered glass is labeled as such in a corner of the pane.

If you are planning to etch a door or window with double glazed panes, you should check with the window manufacturer to see if you will void any warranty by etching. In this case, it might be better to etch another panel and mount it over the insulated

There are many sources of designs for your glass project. Check your local library or book store for books that feature stained glass patterns and traditional designs. You can develop your own design to give your project a personal touch. The only limitation here is to keep in mind that block designs with broader etched areas work better than thin-line draw-

Regardless of the technique you choose, begin by making a fullsize drawing of your design to transfer to the work. While you're in the planning stage, consider whether the lines and areas you draw will be etched into the glass surface or whether the background will be etched and the design left clear. Often the ultimate use of the panel will be the deciding factor in this regard.

When the design is to serve as a decorative embellishment on a window or mirror, the design itself is etched to maintain broad trans-Darent areas

up the building."
Wineman said he'll likely adopt some ideas he's learned at Botsford Commons in other Wineman and Komer projects.

"We've always tried to take the things we've done in our custom homes and incorporate it into our other projects — even if people don't see it or know it's there, these things make a subtle impression and add to the value."

Of course, not everything being developed for Botsford Commons can be adapted because the condominiums are part of the Botsford Commons community.

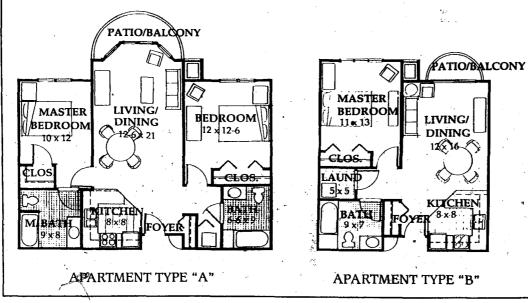

"But if I add some of these things and people say I can live here 10 years instead of five, that's a selling point," Wineman

Not profit driven

Scott Bowers, partner at the architectural firm of Bowers and Rein Associates in Ann Arbor, said although he has worked on projects intended for senior citizens before, the level of commitment from Botsford Hospital has set this project apart.

On other projects, there have typically been more constraints because of a combination of cost controls and a lack of understand-"Our job (as architects) is complex because we work with developers on design versus cost. Botsford wanted to control costs too, but the research and understanding into the needs of active and dependent senior citizens works in the project's favor. "There is profit in it, but it's not as profit driven as some other projects," Bowers said. Little changes can make a big

Lighted wall switches, hand rails, under-cabinet lighting, extra-wide halls and doors, adjustable closets, barrier-free entrances, single level, and wheelchair-adaptable kitchen cabinets are just a few of the additional features that can make independent living for senior citizens easi-

In addition to those safety and convenience features required by the hospital, research and focus groups provided insights into what senior citizens want and what builders and developers think they want.

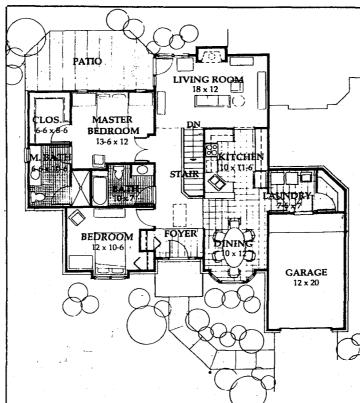

'For example, there is a mind set that says buyers want vaulted ceilings, custom woodwork and custom floors.

"As it turns out, they want nice, but economical without a lot of toys," Bowers said.

Another surprise learned from senior focus groups was that square footage isn't as important to senior citizens as it is to younger people and that the open floor plans are less popular.

They like more closed floor plans with rooms that have a specific purpose.'

By visiting members of the focus groups in their own homes. Bowers said he discovered that a lot of people with 2,000 square foot houses really only use 600 square feet.

Floor plans: At top is a look inside the two apartment styles offered at Botsford Commons. Type A has 1,000 square feet of living space. Type B has 650. Above is the plan for the 1,250-square-foot patio homes. A survey of seniors showed they prefer closed floor plans to the open plans favored by most younger buyers.

The most important aspect of Botsford Commons, however, is the perception of commitment the buyers have about Botsford.

"It's not so much the sticks and bricks, but how you're going to be treated, the service, and the quali-

Glass etching is affordable, do-able

If you've ever stopped to admire an etched glass door, window or mirror, you know that the effect is both unique and stunning. The combination of clear polished glass with a delicately contrasting frosted geometric or pictorial design enhances just about any set-

What you may not know, however, is that you can etch glass right in your own home or shop with a few simple, easy-to-master techniques.

Glass etching involves frosting or abrading the glass surface to create a dull, nontransparent area. The three most common methods for getting the job done are acid-cream etching, sandblasting and diamond-burr engraving. Each of these techniques can be approached with a modest investment of time, space and cash.

Etching glass not only makes an enjoyable project, but the results add character to your home. Whether you choose to etch an entry door, sidelight panel, bathroom window or mirror, you have the ability to transform ordinary architectural and design features with distinctly personal detailing. When choosing glass to etch, keep in mind that the best material is one-fourth-inch-thick plate glass or laminated safety glass. Standard one-eighth-inch-thick window glass can be used, but the results will not be as good. And, the thinner glass is much more apt to break when placed under the mechanical stresses of diamond burr engraving and sandblasting. If you wish to work with one-eighth-inch glass, the best technique is acid etching.

The only type of glass that should not be etched is tempered glass. Tempered glass has been heat treated in a way that creates great tension within the material. When the surface is etched, the internal stresses may cause the glass to shatter. Generally, tempered glass is labeled as such in a corner of the pane.

If you are planning to etch a door or window with double glazed panes, you should check with the window manufacturer to see if you will void any warranty by etching. In this case, it might be better to etch another panel and mount it over the insulated

There are many sources of designs for your glass project. Check your local library or book store for books that feature stained glass patterns and traditional designs. You can develop your own design to give your project a personal touch. The only limitation here is to keep in mind that block designs with broader etched areas work better than thin-line draw-

Regardless of the technique you choose, begin by making a fullsize drawing of your design to transfer to the work. While you're in the planning stage, consider whether the lines and areas you draw will be etched into the glass surface or whether the background will be etched and the design left clear. Often the ultimate use of the panel will be the deciding factor in this regard.

When the design is to serve as a decorative embellishment on a window or mirror, the design itself is etched to maintain broad trans-

Some floors are easier to care for than others. Some require only sweeping to keep clean, others more frequent washing and vacuuming. Choose a floor with a maintenance level that will fit your lifestyle.

Household stain resistance.

This term refers to the floor's ability to resist common household stains such as crayons, permanent markers, grape juice, wine and mustard. A kitchen and child's room may require a greater level of stain resistance.

Traffic stain resistance.

This is the floor's ability to resist staining from foot traffic such as black heel marks and even asphalt driveway sealer. A foyer or entry way may call for a high traffic stain resistance.
