Board appointee widely praised

A new school board appointee assumes her post after being involved in education for eight years as a parent volunteer. Perhaps more important, she is seen as an independent thinker who brings no political baggage to the board.

Debra Fowlkes, a 37-year-old Westland mother of two, was chosen from nine candidates to serve out the remaining 51/4 months of former board member Leonard Posey's term. Posey stepped down Dec. 31 because of an out-of-state job promotion.

Fowlkes, an 11-year Westland resident and Kentucky native, was hailed by board members and some of the 20 people in the audience as an independent, standout candidate who has a firm grasp on education issues.

"I think you have made a very wise decision," district resident Ginger Champagne told the board. She has known Fowlkes for 10 years.

"Children are first and foremost in her mind," Champagne later told re-

Fowlkes is a longtime PTA activist and former PTA president at Titus Elementary, where her fifth-grade son, Darren, attends school. Her involvement began when her daughter Loreal, now a Marshall Junior High eighth-grader, was in first grade.

Trial ordered in baby shaking

By Darrell Clem

A 17-year-old Westland boy confessed to police that he forcibly shook a crying 1-year-old boy who remains partially paralyzed from "shaken baby syndrome," court testimony revealed Thursday:

Brian Spencer Sant, a Franklin High School senior, said he grabbed hold of baby Damon Evans and began shaking him while baby-sitting on the afternoon of Dec. 15, Westland

" 'I was getting a little frustrated. I guess I got carried away," Sgt. Leonard West quoted Sant as saying during a police interview.

'He (Sant) had told me earlier that the baby was being quite fussy," West testified during a hearing in 18th District Court.

In a separate interview with Sgt. Laura Moore, Sant said he initially rocked the 16-pound toddler playfully before the crying erupted. Sant told Moore he then shook the baby "considerably harder" for about five minutes as the child's head "was shaking back and forth," Moore testified.

Testimony from police, the baby's foster mother and a Children's Hospital doctor prompted Judge Gail McKnight to order Sant to stand trial in Detroit Recorder's Court for firstdegree child abuse.

A not-guilty plea has been entered for the teenager, who faces up to 15 years in prison if convicted. He is free on a personal bond pending trial, but has been warned by McKnight not to baby-sit any children.

Sandra Thom, the baby's foster mother, testified that she trusted Sant — a friend of her daughter's because he had baby-sat for 1% years for the six children in her home some of them her own, some adopted and some foster. They range in age from 5 months to 7 years.

She conceded the injured baby had medical problems even before the Dec. 15 incident, including a seizure disorder, brain hemorrhaging, asthma and "mental delays." The baby was born Dec. 2, 1992, to a drug-abusing mother.

But Dr. Marsha Newcombe, a Children's Hospital pediatrics resident physician, testified that the baby's earlier health problems couldn't have caused "shaken baby syndrome."

Thom said she left her children in Sant's care about 3:30 p.m. Dec. 15 at her home near Merriman and Ann Arbor Trail. She returned at 5:30, and

Local sailor hopes BOOST will help his career take off

Jason Jascoe has dreams of a high-flying career as a Naval aviator. But unlike those who have attended college or the Naval Academy to become pilots, Jascoe won't be stepping into the seat of a fighter jet quite yet. He's starting with his feet firmly planted on the deck of a ship.

Jascoe, son of Gerald Jascoe of Westland and Sheryl Frazer of Brighton, is a Navy seaman serving on-board the aircraft carrier USS America.

Currently, Jascoe works in the supply department, stocking and maintaining the storerooms.

"I am part of a crew of 25 who loads the ship with food and supplies," Jascoe said. "We receive and ship parts and handle all the stock that comes aboard the ship."

Storekeepers also keep track of the endless inventories of items needed to keep such a "small city" afloat.

Jascoe, a 1992 graduate of Brighton High School, and his 5,000 crew members, are on a deployment with 7,000 other Atlantic Fleet sailors and Marines on 11 other ships to make up Joint Task Group 93.

This task group, called a Naval Expeditionary Force, provides a forward presence which may be intensified or withdrawn on short notice. These capabilities are important to the Navy of the 21st century, said Navy spokesman Suzanne Dubberly.

USS America experienced the short-noticed presence when it was called to replace the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln off the coast of Somalia.

Jascoe knows part of this mission means being separated from his family and friends during the holidays, Dubberly said. He was separated from them during the holidays last year also because he was attending basic But he said his family is excited for him, knowing he is getting the chance to visit many exotic ports of call. USS America's planned port visits included France, Italy and Greece. He has already visited St. Thomas in the the Virgin Islands. Jascoe joined the Navy to travel and see the world.

"I would like to be stationed in Spain or at least visit there."

He also joined to get an education, but his uncle played a part in his decision. "I have an uncle who is a senior chief. He used to tell me a lot of stories and he said joining the Navy was the best thing he ever did. My family is all for my decision to serve." Jascoe said he would like to stay in the Navy for 20 years if he attains his goal of becoming a pi-"I plan to apply for the Navy's

"I've always wanted to be a pilot ever since I was little," said Jascoe, 19. "But I know it will take a lot of intense studying.' If accepted into this competitive program, he would attend college preparatory courses and then go on to the Naval Academy or the Navy ROTC program at the University of Michigan. Jascoe also has a backup plan for his career. He is currently an undesignated seaman, which means he is not designated to work in a specific job field, but he plans to get training as a hospital corpsman or a storekeeper.

"Either type of training would give me skills that I could use in the civilian workforce."

Jascoe has already begun to take off and achieve some of his lifelong dreams of seeing the world and getting an education.

Snyder was charged last May amid allegations he stalked the woman while she was working at the station. She accused Snyder of continuing to harass her even after he was barred from coming to the Speedway station.

Westland authorities said Snyder behaved strangely during at least six visits to the station. One night he repeatedly drove around the station during a threehour period, Westland police Sgt. Laura Moore has said.

The attendant reported the incidents because she became frightened by his behavior, Moore has said.

Official says many factors influence MEAP results

By Leonard Poger

Wayne-Westland school district parents are warned that they shouldn't jump to conclusions in comparing individual schools' scores in the annual Michigan Education Assessment Program, said the district's top curriculum administrator.

For the first time, the Observer is publishing the tests results on an individual building basis.

Reading and math tests are administered to fourth, seventh and 10th graders with science tests given to fifth, eighth and 11th,

In cautioning parents to avoid making comparisons among buildings, a curriculum administrator said there are many factors that influence test results not only within the same district but also within the same school.

There are 21 elementaries, four junior highs and two senior highs in the district which includes most of Westland, small sections of Inkster and Canton Township and all of the city of Wayne.

Jane Kuckel, assistant superintendent/curriculum, noted that the 1993 MEAP results involved a different group of students than

"There are also some differences in results, even within the same school," she said.

Over the years, curriculum officials have consistently said that family income and the level of education of a student's parents are major factors on how a youngster does on academic tests.

Kuckel said she plans a series of meetings with building principals and key teacher leaders to analyze the difference of MEAP test results among buildings and why there are differences.

"We will look at our resources and see how they are allocated,' she said. "We will also identify at-risk students.'

District-wide scores improved, but math scores at five schools decreased substantially while scores at other schools nearly doubled.

In analyzing the detailed information, she said, the district wants to make sure that students adhere to the state core-curriculum objectives as well as local school district objectives.

At the same time, the district will consider how parents can be more involved with their children's school work.

One thing parents can do is to have expectations that their children will do their homework and follow-up and make sure it sdone, she said.

Besides family income and education, research shows that schools can do some things to improve academic achievement, Kuckel said.

"We can make a difference,"

she stressed.

do is to provide more in-service training to teachers and update its curriculum to be aligned with the state core-curriculum and go beyond it.

When the district-wide MEAP results were announced a month ago, the administration was pleased with the increases in the academic tests over the previous year. But it also admitted that the there is still plenty of room for more improvement.

Of the nine categories, local students improved in seven over 1992, the administration said.

Reflecting the problems of parents drawing conclusions from the building-by-building test scores, the information provided by the district showed that some schools in modest-income neighborhoods did as well or better than those in higher-income

At the same time, there was some variance of scores in schools in the same neighborhood.

Following is the district's percentege of students who passed the tests with the previous year's figure in parenthesis:

Fourth grade math, 41.6 (35.4); fourth grade reading, 32 (29.8); fifth grade science, 62.1 (56.5); seventh grade math, 24.3 (19.6); seventh grade reading, 30.1 (25.2); eighth grade science, 46.2 (34.7); 10th grade math, 13.5 (14.9); 10th grade reading, 34.3 (30.8), and Among things the district can 11th grade science, 39.8 (40.1)

paper coverage of this incident at this time, since we are pursuing the matter in court," Camp said.

Waterkamp received a call from her daughter on the afternoon of Sept. 8, saying she had missed the bus. When the mother drove to the school, she said she received conflicting stories about why her daughter missed the bus.

Waterkamp was told that her daughter was taken off the bus to be reprimended for taking cuts in line, she said. But she also was told that her daughter got off of the bus to use the bathroom, she said.

What bothers Waterkamp most, however, is that she was assured by Muller that the girl was put back on the bus.

Waterkamp said she shudders to think that her daughter could have been abducted. She said she always calls the school when her children are not to ride the bus home, but are to be picked up by her.

"Somebody is remiss here where my daughter's safety is concerned," Waterkamp said.

When she went to the school office, Waterkamp admits saying the school was "run like s---." But she said Muller became unusually angry.

According to Wayne police records, Muller said Waterkamp was "verbally abusive and irate to his secretary" and that when he tried to intervene, Waterkamp "started yelling obscenities at him"

Muller admitted he pointed his finger at Waterkamp and told her to stop using vulgarities, police reports said. But Waterkamp then "reached out and slapped his hand away," the reports said.

Waterkamp said she asked Muller to move his finger away from her face. When he didn't, the said she "swatted sideways" kamp's husband and indicated that Waterkamp owed him an apology, she said.

"If this man thinks I'm going to apologize, he is crazy," she told the Observer.

The two sides met with other school officials, but the issue hasn't been resolved and appears headed for trial. Waterkamp said she has considered filing a civil lawsuit against Muller if she is found not guilty, though no decision has been made.

Waterkamp's attorney, John Brady, noted that his client had been advised during her high-risk pregnancy to avoid emotional stress and physical exertion. She often had to use a wheelchair, he said, though she wasn't using it in the school office.

Waterkamp could face up to 90 days in jail and a $500 fine if found guilty.

"It's an absolute embarrassment for a mother who was simply questioning the safety of her children," Brady said.

No plea agreement is possible, he said, "because my client didn't do anything wrong."

In written documents about the case, Brady wrote, "In my opinion, the arrest of a pregnant mother who did nothing more than defend herself against- an unwarranted exercise of authority is so outrageous in character, and so extreme in degree, as to go beyond all possible bounds of decency, and should be regarded as atrocious and utterly intolerable."

"I'm dedicated," she said Saturday, "and I'm definitely loyal to my district."

When asked why she sought the board seat, Fowlkes said is concerned about ensuring that children have a safe learning environment. Weapons incidents have increased in recent years.

She also said her son is an honor student, and she'd like to see more programs for gifted pupils.

Her appointment ensures that the board will continue to have

African-American representation even though Posey — previously the board's only black member ever — has stepped down.

But board president Francis "Bud" Winter stressed that Fowlkes was chosen "not because of color, but because of her long years of work in the school system."

"She's an activist — a positive activist — and that's why she has been appointed to the board,"
Winter said

Winter said.

Fowlkes received equal praise from board members who are sometimes politically at odds.

"I feel very confident that your main interests are focused on the kids," board member Laurel Raisanen told Fowlkes.

Fowlkes won the appointment

during a voting process in which board members gradually eliminated candidates. In the first round of voting, for example, each board member voted for eight of nine candidates, with the lowest vote-getter being eliminated.

Fowlkes and two other candidates — former appointee Sharon Felan and Westland resident David Mytty — survived six rounds of voting. In the seventh round, however, Felan and Mytty received three votes each, while Fowlkes captured votes from all six board members. She will be officially sworn in Wednesday.

Board member Patricia Brown had been asked by Wayne resident Marti Molitor to abstain from voting Saturday because she is embroiled in a controversy with a candidate, Felan. Felan faces trial for assault amid allegations she shoved Brown during a Nov. 23 dispute.

23 dispute.

But Brown voted Saturday and, in fact, included Felan on her list of choices until the seventh round of voting, when Fowlkes won.

"We have nine excellent candidates," Brown said.

Winter commended his board colleagues and said, "This board is a completely independent board, whether the people in the audience or the people in the community accept that or not."

Board member Vicki Welty said she believed the board came to Saturday's session "without any biases."

baby Evans was in his play pen, snoring and breathing somewhat erratically, she said.

An hour later, an older child told Thom the injured baby was vomiting, and Thom thought he was having a seizure. The baby's eyes were rolling strangely, and his left hand was shaking.

"He was not unconscious, but he was not coherent. His body was somewhat limp," she said. "It appeared to me that he had had a stroke."

She phoned for help and called her husband at work. Baby Evans was rushed to Garden City Hospital and then to Children's Hospital in Detroit, where he stayed for "His body was somewhat limp. It appeared to me that he had had a stroke."

Dr. Newcombe said the baby was breathing with help from a mechanical ventilator. He wasn't moving his right side and was found to have blood between his brain and skull. Doctors had to operate to remove a life-threatening blood clot, Newcombe testified.

The injuries, which could leave permanent damage, were consistent with shaken baby syndrome, which Newcombe said requires "a very strong force." Neither a fall nor one of Thom's other children could have caused the injuries, she said.

Moreover, Sgt. Moore said Sant showed her how he shook the baby with both hands.

Defense attorney Mary Jane

the baby. But McKnight ordered Sant to stand trial.

During an interview in his office Friday, Mayor Thomas commended Plakas and assistant city attorney Keith Madden for winning the case against powerful state forces.

State officials "owe us the money now." Thomas said.

There's a hitch, however. If and when the state releases the money, the city will have only 30 days to begin spending it.

To accomplish that, city officials and the library board hope to have an architect lined up before the money comes through.

The latest court victory brought a sigh of relief to longtime library 'supporters, who have called it shameful that a city of 85,000 people doesn't have its own library.

Westland shares a library with Wayne, but it's in Wayne. That city, too, has received a grant and is planning a library. Many Westland residents also use libraries in neighboring communities such as Canton Township, Livonia and Garden City.

City officials have estimated the cost of a new library at $4 million. The state grant would be complemented with money from the city's Tax Increment Finance Authority, which collects revenues in a special taxing district to spur city improvements. Mestland shares a library with Wayne, but it's in Wayne. That city, too, has received a grant and is planning a library.

Still, the city would need to levy a millage — estimated at three-quarters of a mill to 1 mill — for operations. One mill represents $1 of tax per $1,000 of state-equalized valuation.

The owner of a $75,000 home with a $37,500 SEV could expect to pay $37.50 more in taxes a year — if the full 1 mill was levied, Thomas said. The mill would generate $1 million in revenue.

The city council still hasn't decided whether to place the millage issue on a ballot or whether to levy it without voter approval. The city could levy no more than 1 mill without voter permission.

In a best-case scenario, library construction would begin in the summer, and the building would open in 1996, Thomas predicted.

"That's really just a guess," he

Numerous issues still must be decided, he said, such as where to build the library. Several sites are under consideration.

Sexism didn't deter police inspector

By RALPH R. ECHTINAW STAFF WRITER

When Dorothy "Dotty" McAllen joined the Michigan State Police in 1973, they dressed her in culottes and high heels and sat her down beside a radio.

That was how women in the state's police department were treated until the mid-1970s. For the first few years that women were hired, they were eligible only for jobs thought "suitable" for them, including radio dispatcher. Once permitted to join the road patrol in 1975, assimilation wasn't easy.

"They didn't have uniforms for us to wear," McAllen said. "They gave us culotte skirts and high

The heretofore male-dominated, quasi-military organization likewise took time to adjust to the ever-expanding role of women. "It was awkward for (male troopers) to suddenly have female partners." said McAllen.

Four years after she joined the road patrol, McAllen got pregnant, and the hierarchy didn't know what to do with her. "They thought I should leave my job totally," she said. "(And) we had to go through a few legal battles.'

McAllen won those battles, stayed on the job, took maternity leave, and returned to her squad car after the twins were born.

Lt. Sandra Miller was a trooper at the time out of the Northville post. "Even after (McAllen's pregnancy) they didn't come out with a clear policy," she said. "I vinced women were going to stay in police work."

Still, McAllen seems to hold no grudge against the state police, and she's rather reticent regarding the oppression she has experienced at the hands of the men in blue.

Women joining the state police now, she said, have difficulty comprehending a time when their kind weren't quite welcome.

Said Miller: "We used to have get-togethers for moral support. and now we don't need to. There are enough (women now) that I don't know them all anymore."

Today, Inspector McAllen is the highest-ranking woman in the Michigan State Police, second in command of the intelligence division for southeast Michigan, an area that extends north to the tip of the thumb, south to the Ohio much, she said, because new dealline and west to Ann Arbor.

McAllen's job is somewhat mysterious and not unlike that of the spymaster "M" from Ian Fleming's James Bond novels. But where M's agents fought communism and evil geniuses, McAllen's troops work undercover don't think they were really con- to arrest illegal drug sellers and chop shop operators, where stolen cars are stripped to be sold in

> 'We don't advertise what we do," she said. "We can't really use names. We can't use faces.'

> Not only will McAllen not say where her headquarters is, she won't disclose the city or township in which she resides. The closest she'll come is to say her home is in Oakland County. "I don't worry so much for myself, but more for my kids," she said.

McAllen has been a member of the intelligence division since 1980, working mostly in the area of narcotics. What the undercover officers do, McAllen said, is buy illegal drugs and try to identify dealers higher and higher up in the distribution chain. Arresting low-level dealers doesn't help ers pop up to take their places.

On the larger social problem regarding recreational drugs, McAllen vehemently opposes legalization. Those who espouse legalization, like National Review editor William F. Buckley, Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke and The Economist magazine, are not living "in the real world.

"Narcotics is a very dirty, ugly world. I would not want any part of legalizing it. I've seen real life for 14 years and I don't want that.'

However, McAllen believes that anti-drug education, i.e. teaching children about the dangers of drugs, is more important than imprisoning dealers.

Although she says government is making progress in eradicating illegal drugs, McAllen can't point to any evidence to back it up.

She did say that the Livonia Police Department has done an outstanding job in this respect.

All in all, McAllen is pleased with the career choices she's made, despite the struggles early on. "I enjoy what I'm doing," she said. "I've always enjoyed it.

Two timer: Bill Thomas has the best of two worlds as a talk radio DJ and stand-up comic.

Bill Thomas stands up to radio, clubs

By BOB SADLER

Bill Thomas, a veteran of the Detroit comedy scene for more than a decade, is not the first stand-up comedian to try his hand on radio, but usually funny people are paid to be silly as part of some morning team. That makes sense, doesn't it?

Thomas, on the other hand, has found a home on talk radio where things are taken a bit more seriously. He does a three-hour shift Sunday evenings on WXYT (1270 AM) and often fills in for weekday talk stalwarts like Tommy McIntyre and David Newman.

And, by the way, he loves being serious. "People who listen to talk radio are involved on a daily basis and very intelligent," Thomas said. "No one's interested in the Bobbits on talk radio. They want to hear about Clinton and Whitewater. I really have the best of both worlds. I can go into a club and talk about the Bobbits, and then I can go on the radio and talk about the issues."

The talk radio format, driven by the popularity of personalities like Rush Limbaugh and Howard Stern, has taken the country by storm. Even politicians in the 1992 eletions had to take notice of its power, largely found in its ability to quickly reach the voters and gauge public sentiment at the

"It's fun to be able to talk to people and let them express themselves," Thomas said. "People need that opportunity. They can't just call up Tom Brokaw, Dan Rather and Bill Bonds. It's like having a political discussion around the kitchen table with a pot of coffee."

While Thomas does enjoy his stints at the mike in a radio studio, he has not totally abandoned his original livelihood — performing at the mike in

John Coltrane's "Giant Steps" is playing on the sound system and 26 years of history seep from the black and white photo-covered walls thick with momentos of those who have played - Eek-A-Mouse to Gil Scott-Heron, to those that the management sees in its dreams, like Buddy Holly.

STREET BEATS

It's a classic, often repeated motif, but it works particularly well here. Up front, in the brightly lit cafe, with its herbal teas and warm, inviting soups, the conversations are brisk, intense and, one imagines, full of politics and philosophy.

Deeper into the heart of the music room, past the bar and into relative darkness, musicians greet each. other with remembrances of the last time they jammed together, puffing excitedly on cigarettes and sipping at what may be the only beer they'll be able to afford all night.

The Tuesday rhythm and blues jam nights are not a strip-mall version of a blues jam. This is the real deal. Some of the hopeful participants look like moonlighting gangsters. Some like misplaced Nebraska farm boys sporting their first goatee or Jean Shrimpton clones lost in a time warp. Most of the audience, as is the usual case at any jam session worth its salt, is comprised of players who have come to press the urgency of their story on their house band for this weekly rite - the Chisel Bros. and their truly spectacular vocalist, Thornetta Davis.

The Chisel Bros. are the very epitome of flexibility, though a bluesy rhythm and blues band is the closest you'll get to an accurate descripton of their sound. They sidestep any easy categorization. Like the Sun Messengers, the late and great Urbations and a few other bands around whom the foundation of Detroit's reputation as one of the musical capitals of the world as built, the Chisel Bros. are an amalgram of city sounds and conscious urban influences. As lead guitarist and former Buzztone, Rob Tyner's MC5 and Was (Not Was) man Brian

"Roscoe Paradise" said a few years ago: "This music holds up, because we're not playing at anything. This is just what we sound like.'

The centerpiece of the Chisel Bros., since a year after their formation in 1989, is Thornetta Davis. There's no way around Roscoe's slash and burn guitar work or the Keith Richards look-alike basswork turned in by Tim Duvalier, the extraordinary drumming by Ron Pangborn, who's played with the Buzztones, Mitch Ryder, Was (Not. Was), Mary Wells and Matthew Sweet, or the Steely Dan/funky sounding guitarist/vocalist (and veteran of work with the Brides of Funkenstein and the Buzztones) Gary Indiana.

This is a band with chops aplenty and a pedigree that just won't stop, but it's Davis who draws the attention. Not because she's the only woman here. Not because she's "the singer." Davis is a major force of nature who blows most of the combined Top 40 out of the water.

Her range begs comparisons to Aretha Franklin, her control to Sarah Vaughan. Her passion is for the full-blown classic rhythm and blues, ala Chaka Khan and Etta James, whose "Damn Your Eyes" she covers with the fellas.

Everyone from Otis Redding to Ronnie Earl, the Temptations, Roy Head, the Kinsey Report, Elvis Presley, James Brown and Delbert McClinton gets covered by this rump-romping band, and there aren't many "cover" bands on the planet that I would recommend like I will continue to do this one. Check them out and bring the dancing shoes.

The Chisel Bros. featuring Thornetta Davis host the weekly Tuesday night jam session at Alvin's, 5756 Cass, Detroit. Call (313) 832-1328 for more information. The group will also perform at Mr. Lou's Rhythm & Blues Cafe, 16117 Mack Avenue, west of Outer Drive, Sunday, Jan. 23. The show, a benefit for the Autism Society of Michigan and the Wayne County Society for Autistic Citizens, also features Mimi Harris and the Snakes and The Alligators among others. Admission is $6. Lemon Juice savors its '70s sound

THE WINANS

Monday, Jan. 17

By Christina Fuoco

Lemon Juice lead singer/guitarist Mitchel Angelos has focused on a music career most of his life. In preparation for success, he has never strayed far from the "creative atmosphere" on which he has thrived the last 25 years.

At his Dearborn home Angelos received a music education that would make most aspiring musicians envious. Along with being the frontman for the rhythm and blues band The Reputations, Angelos's father John penned songs for the likes of Joe Cocker and sang with Ted Nugent's Amboy Dukes.

When the senior Angelos died in 1984, the younger Angelos continued his father's legacy by taking over The Reputations.

He continued to learn about the music industry while working at Cinderella's Attic clothing store in Royal Oak. His job there has allowed him to hobnob with established rock acts like Sonic Youth, The Smithereens and The Cult.

In January 1993, Angelos rolled all those experiences - with The Reputations' drummer Dominic Lamarr in tow — into the creation of the 1970sflavored rock band Lemon Juice. Although only picking up the guitar five years ago, the swirling power behind it, reminiscent of older Aerosmith, drives the band along with Angelos' smoky voice. The unique blend makes the band one of Detroit's standout talents.

Angelos has a simple explanation

"I don't follow trends. . . . We may sound a little Seattley. If we sound a certain way, that's the way it's supposed to sound," he said squinting his eyes and dragging on a cigarette in a Royal Oak pub.

Actually he prefers more of the camaraderie within the Scattle scene. On his wish list is the collaboration

'Philadelphia' is heavy on education

BY JOHN MONAGHAN SPECIAL WRITER

If good intentions always meant good movies, then "Philadelphia" would be a resounding success. Political correctness is stamped across every frame of this story about an AIDS victim who seeks justice when he's fired from his Cinematographer Tak Pajimoto, behind the camera on all of Demme's recent movies, fills the opening credits with rolling scenes of Philadelphia's suburbs and ghettos. Bruce Springsteen sings earnestly on the soundtrack while hand-written credits add a personal touch.

So why did the rest of director Jonathan Demme's much-anticipated film leave me lukewarm? Probably because it manipulates, not cynically, but with the unattainable goal of pleasing everyone with heavy-handed contrasts of homosexuals and homophobes, good lawyers and bad lawyers. It begs its audience to both cheer and tear.

Education is at the heart of "Philadelphia" and for this it should be hailed. Still, screenwriter Ron Nyswaner treats the movie like propaganda, filling it with high-minded, stilted dialogue that robs the main relationship of even the slightest nuance.

Other characters, especially Antonio Banderas as the dying man's lover, serve essentially as scenery. He logs the movie's only subtle moments because he has so little to do.

Denzel Washington plays attorney Joe Wheeler, who reluctantly agrees to the case despite his personal objections to homosexuals. He believes that his client Andrew Beckett (Tom Hanks), himself a hotshot lawyer, was set up by his high-powered firm to botch a major case.

We know Beckett's innocent. After an important file is misplaced and then retrieved at the last minute, these good old boys. led by a distinguished Jason Robards, fire him on grounds of incompetence. Beckett believes that they discovered that he had

The legal angle, according to a lawyer friend, was handled impeccably. Though Miller's line of questioning seems absurd at times, it strikes at the root of a case based on the public perception of homosexuals.

The courtroom dramatics, which take up a good third of the film, lose their power because the case seems so open-and-shut. If some doubt had been placed on Beckett's work performance, if he hadn't been so one-dimensional and upstanding, there could have been at least some suspense.

Likewise, there are few surprises in the personal relationships. You know that Miller is going to alter his views and become more tolerant of gays.

There's also the predictable contrast between the stogiechomping members of the legal community and Beckett's real family, led by mother Joanne Woodward. Ultra-supportive, smiling bravely through the court proceedings, they come off as plastic TV commercial-style versions of the ideal American fami-

This comes as a surprise from director Jonathan Demme, who has managed to create anything but predictable characters in his dozen or so films. The director of "Melvin and Howard" and "Silence of the Lambs" seems uncomfortable in the world of megabudgets and big-name stars.

Which isn't to belittle Hanks and Washington in their respective roles. Hanks, who shed some 30 pounds to depict the physical deterioration caused by AIDS, will most likely grab the gold come Oscar time.

Violins used to signal tear ducts in the old movies. "Philadelphia" employs an entire opera, with Hanks swaying in ecstasy to the sounds of Maria Callas on the stereo while Washington's eyes well up. Well over two hours into the film, as friends and family members file past Beckett in the hospital, I felt not so much moved as indoctrinated.

Criticizing a movie like "Philadelphia" won't please those rightly hail it as Hollywood's first mainstream treatment of the AIDS crisis. Twenty years from now, I'd prefer to look back on movies like "Longtime Companion," a 1990 independently produced drama twice as honest as a dozen heavy-handed "Philadelphias."

comedy clubs. In his search for continued professional and artistic growth. Thomas has a oneman show concept that he's begun working on. With the project very much in its infancy, Thomas declined to say a lot about his ideas, but he is aware many have tried performing one-person shows and failed miserably.

"Not too many people have done it successfully," he said. "A 'lot of people will also say they're doing a one-man show, but they're actually doing 90 minutes of stand-up — 15 minutes of McDonald's jokes, five minutes of body parts, 10 minutes of something else, and so on. I'm not looking to just be a joke machine.'

Thomas has also been doing some writing on a sit-com pilot. He admires shows that have strong ensemble casts, like "Cheers" and "Barney Miller." and would like to craft something in that mold. Whether or not the show provides a star vehicle for its creator is not a major factor, Thomas said.

"I like what Tim Allen and John Caponera (now the star of NBC's "The Good Life") are doing," he admitted, "but it's not what I'm looking to do at this time. I just want to put something together that has some quality. I've been lucky enough in the last year to find some people I can bounce ideas off of.'

Also on the television front, Thomas expressed dismay at the glut of stand-up comedy found floating around on cable and network television.

"I fear that if there are beings out there in the cosmos watching our satellite feeds, they probably think that everyone on earth is a stand-up comic and that all we do is stand around in front of a brick wall and talk.'

Bill Thomas will appear Jan. 25-26 at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle, 269 E. Fourth, Royal Oak. Call 542-9900 for reservations and show times.

So far, year-old Lemon Juice has been mildly successful in a variety of clubs, including the hard rocking Ritz in Roseville The alternative rock venue St Andrew's Hall in Detroit has been a supporter since Lemon Juice's early days. Only a few months after the band was formed, the club booked Lemon Juice to play the Clutch Cargo birthday party at the Phoenix Center Amphitheatre

Even then, their tight playing and professional attitude hinted at future success. In March, the band will record their debut release at The Bone Yard, a new studio in Warren owned by Benjamin Ridley of SisterSeed and Blue Nation.

In every show Angelos exudes a care-free attitude. You won't hear any political ranting and raving from his rock band, he said.

BARBARA SCHIFF

I am an intelligent, thoughtful, mother of a 12vear-old son. He and I are very close. Although my upbringing was Catholic, I struggled successfully to rid myself of the biases against the open discussion of sexuality with which I was raised. I am backed up in this by my husband who was raised in a different culture, one in which openess about sexuality is supported.

Last week my son came to me and told me he wants a subscription to "Playboy" magazine. He is an active, healthy kid who is popular with his peers and gets excellent grades. He is well-adjusted. He explained to me that he loves to look at pictures of the beautiful women. He says that since he knows he and his friends will be doing this, he does not want to sneak. He wants his behavior to be out in the open.

I know my brother loved to look at pictures of naked women when he was a teenager, but he couldn't be honest about his behavior. He had to lie, to do it. My brother outgrew his interest when he was about 20. So, I reason, isn't it better to have honest communication than to know my son must hide from me? I am open, however, to suggestions about this from others. What do you think?

Dear Caller:

The question you ask is something called a "rule of the house" question. That means that in every home there are rules and guidelines the family works out which then, hopefully, help them balance good taste, good psychological and physical health and individual enjoyment. Some other examples of these kinds of questions are: "Is junk food allowed?" "How open can teenagers... and young adults be about sex?" "Is smoking allowed?" "Should infants sleep with their parents?"

Questions like these can be seen from more than one point of view; there is more than one good answer. The best answer depends on what is going on in that particular family, at that particular point in time. No professional can tell you what to do because he can't tell you who you are, or what kind of home you want to have.

Do you want your home to be one with "Playboy" or without "Playboy?" Or, in another example, one with junk food or onewithout junk food? After you decide how you will answer the first question, then you must decide who is in charge in your house; how much democracy you think is approriate. *

That said, there are some pitfalls in your reasoning you should consider. First, if you tell your son you do not want him to have a subscription to "Playboy," he need not deceive you. With your knowledge and approval, he can enjoy the pictures outside of your Second, a stack of "Playboy" magazines on his nightstand will probably command a lot of time. As you know from your brother's and husband's experience, it is expected that 12-year-old boys will like to look at pictures of sexy women, but does liking something justify spending a lot of time that way?

Third, recent feminist literature decries the commercialization of women that "Playboy" and magazines like it convey. There is much to support the point of view that these magazines encourage disrespect for women.

Fourth, and last, men have complained that a steady diet of "fantasy" women makes them? disappointed when they are with: "real" women, and thus, poor partners for them.

With these arguments, I reveal? my point of view on the subject. If any of you reading this have other arguments on either side, please write to enlighten all of us.

POINTS OF VIEW

Take action to fight racism, help revive Detroit here was a meeting recently among area diversity groups. The groups involved share a common belief that segregation and discrimination in southeast Michigan are at excessive levels and are having a debilitating effect upon the whole area.

A recent study of U.S. metropolitan areas showed a direct relation between the condition of the core city and areawide wages.

Cities that are vigorous had higher wages than their depressed counterparts. In other words, revitalized Baltimore is economically better off than Detroit. This phenomenon extends to the suburbs. That's probably why forward-thinking people like Mike Ilitch are redeveloping Detroit.

Using fear, a common manipulator, certain parties that stand to profit are trying to con homeowners and businesses into relocating farther from Detroit. To some degree this is working.

As Detroit continues to become a hollow shell, outer suburbs like Novi and Auburn Hills are booming.

This self-serving manipulation is ex acerbating existing problems and creating new ones. Inner suburbs like Livonia or Warren stand to lose the way Detroit lost because of "the great white flight" after the passage of The Civil Rights Act of 1964. The flight is now showing signs of resurgence in Southfield.

When will people stop running, stand their ground and say, "No

Many suburbanites are dumbfounded about how Detroit devolved. Others, versed in bigotry, believe they know why. The area's core city is seen as a crime-infested region filled with lazy, unintelligent people. I've heard people comment, "They did it to themselves" - "they" meaning African-Americans.

Suburbanites tend to think they have had no effect on Detroit's deterioration. Ask the people just south of Eight Mile who drops by to solicit prostitutes and buy drugs.

Intelligent, articulate blacks are often treated as aberrations in their race. Whites were startled recently when Shawn Collins, a highly recruited black football player, quit the University of Michigan's team because it detracted from his school performance. Too many people act like intelligence is something unusual for a black person. Why?

When the Civil Rights Act was passed, blacks owned very little in this country. Their neighborhoods were seriously segregated and their schools were inferior. Police did not investigate crime in black neighborhoods with the same zeal as they did in white neighborhoods. The white-controlled power structure had little regard or concern for black America. The black community, starting with almost nothing, was expected to compete as though it was starting on a level playing field. But in reality the deck was stacked against it by prejudice and limited economic re-

White flight greatly reduced job options within Detroit. It didn't take long for black society, not being stupid, to recognize that the Civil Rights Act made discrimination illegal, but did little to adjust attitudes or ignorance. For many it was just another cruel lie.

It didn't take white society long to find subtle ways to continue business, without blacks, as usual. African-Americans who went into white communities were routinely harassed by the local police. Real estate agents told prospective black buyers property wasn't available or quoted them a price that exceeded the price given to white buyers. Retailers often ignored black customers in their stores or else watched them suspiciously. Employers found a variety of ways, technically within the law, to ensure blacks didn't attain their jobs.

GUEST COLUMNIST

Soon property values in white suburbs soared, making it near-impossible economically for Detroit homeowners to sell their homes and follow the jobs Economic walls supplemented attitudinal walls and the infrastructure for segregation was complete.

It was us against them. And since we had the wealth and power to start with, we wore them down, destroyed their spirit and won. Many blacks gave up. They felt unempowered and sank into despair. Hooray for us.

The same attitudes and tactics are with us today. They're just conducted with more sophistication and subtlety.

Now we reap the non-benefits of cultural warfare. African-American society has been economically repressed. All the side effects of this repression are costing all of us dearly. Prisons, crime, substance abuse, and welfare are being supported by tax dollars. Spiritually the damage is worse. Fear and hate are crippling the whole area.

Meanwhile hypocrisy (denial) is running rampant. The poor are accused of bleeding society dry. Yet the accusers refuse to support things that would get the poor working and off the dole. Things like regionwide public transportation or social programs that don't discourage employment.

I don't believe cries of racism are unfounded. People who own their homes are more likely to take pride in them and maintain them. Yet lending institutions are twice as likely to disapprove a mortgage application by blacks as whites with equal incomes.

On many occasions I've heard white people talk with disgust about all the blacks who cheat the system. These same people will get laid off and collect unemployment, all the while working under the table and cheating the system. Of course, they eventually go back to their job.

Too many white people just don't want to see the whole truth as it relates to the black condition. Blacks comprise 12 percent of the population. They commit 45 percent of the felonies, according to recent FBI statistics. The ignorant are now saying, "See, see, they're a race of crooks!" Except less than I percent of blacks commit these crimes. So condemning the entire race as criminals is like condemning all Eu- 3 ropean-Americans as Nazis.

What are the well-intentioned to do? First, we need to accept the problem. Then we need to speak out against racism and bigotry where we see them. We have to take a proactive approach.

Join one of the many area groups that are dealing with this problem. Ask city officials, businesses, and neighbors to support cooperative programs between Detroit and its suburbs.

Maybe it's time for people at the shop or at social functions to speak out against "nigger" jokes and say they're not funny, that they promote a societal disease. It's OK to tell ethnic jokes when the ethnic group is accepted and respected in society. African-Americans don't have that luxury yet.

Antisocial behavior is wrong. Repression does not excuse criminal activity. A large number of entities in the black community are addressing Detroit's problems from within.

Suburbanites have to contribute too. It just doesn't make sense to stand by and abandon a city of one million people. This individual is making a point of going into Detroit and buying products from local businesses as a method of positive support. Perhaps you could take some time and think of progressive ways to help improve our area. And then take that extra step — ac-

Some districts outwit MEAP for better results

QUESTION: How do some school districts increase their MEAP test scores? I heard one school district cheated to raise MEAP scores. From your experience, what observations do you have of the Michigan Educational Assessment Test program?

ANSWER: My observations: ■ Whenever MEAP scores increase too dramatically, the state Department of Education is viewed as having developed a test that is too simplistic.

Once scores go up significantly on any MEAP version, the Department of -Education will develop a new, more difficult MEAP. This phenomenon occurs about every four or five years. The difficulty of the test (item difficulty) has increased, in my opinion, by about 150 percent since inception in the '70s.

■ The structuring of MEAP test questions tends to follow the flow of the latest educational thinking. For instance, today estimation, problem solving and higher level thinking skills in math and reading are seen as the direction to go to insure students are capable, selfsufficient learners.

This is a step forward for those students who come from stable, affluent or at least semi-affluent homes, but a disaster for those children in Detroit, Highland Park and other poor districts where MEAP scores in math are as low as 5.6 percent mastery.

Those children need highly intensified help in basic and essential skill development, which includes simple math calculation, capitalization and other basic skills, regardless of what the math, reading and science curriculum gurus say.

■ Many school districts, sensitive to lower MEAP results over the past few years, have developed a plan to address their low MEAP scores. They study last year's MEAP test, then develop vocabulary lists and learning modules based on last year's MEAP questions. They "prep" kids for next year's MEAP.

■ If scores on any newly developed MEAP edition are extremely low, too low for public consumption, the Department of Education will adjust and lower the "cut-off" score for mastery, as they did a couple years ago. Meaning they lowered the passing score for mastery because up to 70 percent of the children did not master the test. Why did they? One reason was the 4th grade reading selections, when analyzed, were found to be at a seventh grade reading level.

Some districts will become very creative. Vocabulary lists of words found on the MEAP test will be developed for teachers to help children familiarize themselves with the language used on the MEAP test. Obviously if the children can't comprehend the words, they can't answer the questions.

Some teachers will be surprised and angry to find their building and classroom test scores got to a board of education meeting before they even saw the results. Is this fair?

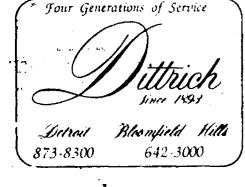

■ Principals will be very happy when the MEAP test scores are reported to the board of education and the issue is over for the year.

Do some districts cheat on the MEAP? I've only heard of one or two districts over the years in which cheating occurred. In one district, the teachers were allowed to read the MEAP reading selection to the children. This is a no-no.

Years ago, one superintendent put so much pressure on his teachers that a few teachers helped the children answer the questions. These are two isolated situations. It just doesn't happen. The seals on the MEAP test are not broken until test day.

hen Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins first opened the legendary Silver Palate, they sought to define their passion, the American cooking style. They believed it transcended their inherited culinary traditions and coast-tocoast regional favorites. And certainly American cuisine was not merely that of other cultures replicated with American ingredients.

Rosso and Lukins concluded that our emerging cooking style is slowly evolving as we learn to "lighten up but retain taste, thim quantities without sacrificing pleasure, create simple, fresh, clear, and distinctive flavors, use our sense of humor and allow enthusiasm and ingenuity to reign.'

Today, this same philosophy holds true. And to help us create those healthful, fresh, light but tasty dishes, manufacturers have developed a bevy of "must have" machines. Every new bride needs a bread maker and a pasta extruder. What college dorm room lacks a hot-air corn popper? And moms with young children praise their juicers and rice cookers. If the kitchen is stocked with all these healthy food inventions, who needs a deepfat fryer? I browsed the Marketplace at Hudson's

Northland store recently and eyed the impr sive array of upscale gadgets. The Panasonic Automatic Bread Maker ($399.95) mixes and kneads your bread dough, calculates the leavening period and then bakes the bread. All you do is add the ingredients: There's even a digital timer so you can preset the machine to prepare the loaf up to 13 hours in advance. Can you imagine waking up to the aroma of fresh-baked bread or pastries?

Leanne Silverblatt received her bread baker for Hanukkah and declares it "the best thing that ever happened to our household."

The Panasonic Rice Cooker and Steamer comes in five-cup ($49.95) and 10-cup ($59.95) capacities. No more sticky, globby rice. The cooker keeps the grains fluffy and warm for up to five hours. A perfect graduation gift, the West Bend II Hot Air Corn Popper ($16.95) uses no oil for fewer calories and no cholesterol. Team it with Hudson's Marketplace gourmet popcorn packed in a canning jar complete with red scoop ($9.99), and a wooden popcorn bucket that holds all four quarts ($14.99.) The Cuisinart Juice Extractor ($109.95) and the Braun Deluxe Juice Extractor ($89.95) are high on bridal tegistry lists, according to Hudson's personnel. Make citrus and noncitrus fruit and vegetable drinks with no preservatives or additives. The Braun model comes with a recipe book that includes Strawberry Banana Smoothies and Americans are pasta-crazy and we've been told that, minus the cream sauce, pasta dishes are healthy and energizing. Lorraine Shalvoy of Ro--chester Hills recommends the following recipe for a simple, yet delicious supper. Combine four ripe tomatoes, cubed, with one cup of fresh basil leaves, three cloves of minced garlic, one cup olive oil, two teaspoons salt and a dash of freshly ground pepper. Let marinate for at least an hour. Serve over linguine, or your favorite pasta.

Of course, that linguine can easily be made fresh with a stainless-steel pasta machine ($36.95) from Crate & Barrel in The Somerset Collection in Troy. Boil it in the eight-quart white-enamel pasta cooker ($39.95).

To expand your repertoire of low-fat, hearthealthy recipes, invest in The Vegetable Market Cookbook by Robert Budwig ($24.95 at Crate & Barrel). In "The New Tiffany Table Settings," Tiffany vice president John Loring writes: "The history of modern table settings opened on a momentous day in 1633 when Charles I of England declared once and for all that 'it is decent to use a fork."

Since that day, bridal registries have been helping homemakers select not only their forks and plates, but also their finger bowls, ice plates, compotes and stemware. The winter months are the busiest for tabletop retailers because couples who become engaged over those romantic holidays begin preparations for all those June weddings. The local leader in the bridal registry business is Hudson's. The Dayton-Hudson-Marshall Field Co.

registers 86,000 brides a year companywide, according to Mary Dearing, divisional merchandise manaer in the company's Tabletop department.

Another leader in the bridal registry business is Heslop's, registering 8,000 brides a year in 13 stores throughout Michigan. President Ron Heslop said January-February is the busiest time of year for his registry business.

Dearing will be one of several experts on hand Saturday to talk to engaged couples at Hudson's Bridal Fair in the Southfield Pavilion.

"I'll be explaining to new brides that lifestyle, not tradition, should guide their selection of china and crystal patterns and pieces," she explained from her Minneapolis office. "Yet traditions will play an important part in the new lives they are beginning."

Traditionally, beverage glasses are sold in sets of three - one for wine, one for water and one for champagne. But if a bride knows her family and friends like to drink ice tea with their meals, that bride should add long glasses to her registry. Likewise, additional bread and butter plates should be ordered by a bride who likes to serve luscious desserts, Dearing said.

Dearing refused to name the patterns that sell the best, saying that each Hudson's store stocks the patterns that sell well in that community. Price settings for fine china begin at $99 and go as high as $1,200 for hand-painted place settings with gold trim.

Via computer, Hudson's sales consultants can locate pieces and patterns anywhere in the Dayton, Hudson and Marshall Field inventories. Last year, the corporation debuted a 1-800-21 I DO I DO number that facilitates bridal gift giving for customers throughout the

There is: the Michigan Consumer Protection Act, the BBB reports. But in Michigan, retailers are not required to give you a refund without a receipt. They're not even required to post their policy or even tell you about it unless you ask.

Carmel Weehms, Michigan BBB spokeswoman based in Southfield, said the top complaint these days comes from people trying unsuccessfully to return holiday gifts.

"Ugh! These complaints will plague us through March," she teasingly bemoaned. "People don't realize that many retailers have tightened their refund policies within the last year or so. Hudson's, Kmart, Target, Mervyn's — they all require a receipt for a refund or exchange.

"And you wouldn't believe the number of people who would rather die than ask a relative for a gift receipt. It really poses a dilemma.'

Coordination counts

Dearing and the company's linen buyers travel together to make sure the various tabletop departments are well coordinated so customers can buy the latest become more casual in the '90s, the love of formal dinnerware has not diminished. Brides still buy the good stuff, the patterns trimmed in gold or silver that spurn the convenience of the microwave and dishwasher.

will continue that kind of entertaining in their new lives together. They want the good stuff for these occasions."

Heslop's hits

Ron Heslop said the three bestselling brands of china at Heslop's are Noritake, Lenox and Mikasa, with Royal Doulton and Wedgewood close followers. Casualware place settings begin at $25 and go as high as $750 for some fine china patterns.

'We recommend a bride register for 12 place settings. And an extra vegetable bowl or platter is also good idea," he said. "People always run short of serving pieces. The five-piece completer sets also come in handy.'

Heslop said his store has an advantage in that the stores can display more patterns and more pieces of that pattern because tabletop is all they do — their numberone concern.

"We show the bride the napkin rings that match her selection, the teapot, the coffeepot and the gravy boat, for example," he said. "Our service is outstanding because that's all we do. Sometimes a bride won't like the shape of the teapot that goes with her pattern. so it really helps to see it up close.

TASTE BUDS

CHEF LARRY JANES

Give salt, pepper a shake for flavor

Iry to imagine cereal without milk, bread without butter, and beer without pretzels. Now try to imagine salt without pepper. What is it that makes this tasty twosome such a hit? Salt and pepper enliven simple and elaborate dishes without masking their individuality. Salt is a flavor enhancer, and pepper serves as a penetrator enlivening dishes with a peppery aroma and biting, pungent flavor.

Grain of salt

There are many varieties of salt available on today's market. A trip to the grocers will have you noticing racks jammed with table salt, iodized salt, Kosher salt, pickling salt, seasoned salt, popcorn salt, rock salt, sodium-reduced salt and even sea salt. All have special flavors that enliven dishes.

Table salt is a frequent choice of cooks who use it because it dissolves easily. Kosher salt is used for it's flakiness, pickling, and many garnishes. It's especially tasty as a coating for bread. Seasoned salt is fine grained and interspersed with such notable herbs and spices as garlic, onion, celery and tarragon. Pickling salt is usually a fine grained salt made expressly for canning mainly because it is made without additives that can cloud the liquid used in canning. Popcorn salt is heavily flavored and made extra fine so that it will cling well to popcorn kernels.

Rock salt is usually unprocessed and mainly used for making ice cream. Local super chef Jimmy Schmidt bakes whole pears in rock salt while yours truly enjoys Yukon Gold potatoes covered in rock salt then baked to absolute fluffiness.

Sodium-reduced salt contains half the sodium of regular salt. It is made by chemically reducing the sodium content of the salt crystal. Sea salt is sought out by cooking professionals for its flavor enhancing capabilities without the saltiness of taste. It is usually more expensive than regular salt because it is made by dehydrating sea water and cannot be mined.

Peppery flavors

Pepper, on the other hand, is a berry or peppercorn of a woody perennial evergreen climbing vine. Pepper berries grow in spikelike clusters four to six inches long. Each cluster contains 50 or more berries. As they ripen, the berries change color from a green to a yellow and then to a red. They are fully ripened and ready for harvest after about ning months on the vine.

Supermarkets have a lot of catching up to do with the marketing of pepper varieties as com-

Sure, there's the traditional black pepper, white pepper and cayenne pepper, but a trip to a good gourmet shop or store specializing in spices will offer Telicherry pepper, Lampong pepper, Sarawak, Malabar, Brazilian, Chinese and Celaneese, just to name a few.

Personal favorites are the jars blended with the multicolor peppercorns that offer a well rounded aroma and pungency.

Pepper is one of the few spices that can be stored almost indefinitely (under proper conditions). Store them in a tightly closed jar, and whole peppercorns will outlast just about any spice on the rack.

If you have yet to acquire a pepper mill, run, do not walk, to your local store and buy a pepper mill. Throw away the pepper shaker. The flavor derived from fresh ground pepper compared to that which shakes from a jar is like the difference between night and day. Good pepper mills will set you back about $18 to $25, but a good mill will last, as mine has, going on 20 years.

When it comes to cooking with salt and pepper remember that real cooks will salt their foods only after cooking and tasting. Never salt meat before cooking as salt has a tendency to draw out the natural juices, making for a dryer, tougher piece of meat. Pepper, on the other hand, can be added during the cooking process to enhance the flavor and aroma. Folks on a restricted salt program will certainly enjoy the taste of Morton's Nature's Seasonings and the Mrs. Dash varieties of salt substitutes. These are really herbal blends that heighten the flavor without the added sodium. But when it comes to using the real thing, dollar for dollar, you just can't beat the added flavor and aromas derived from the use of something as basic as salt and pepper.

DIWAYE MAKES LOW-FAT DIMAKES

■ Norma Schonwetter takes the mystery out of microwave cooking in her new cookbook "Microwave To Your Heart's Content."

BY KEELY WYGONIK STAFF WRITER

Lots of people have microwave ovens, over 80 percent Americans, according to the Association

Home Appliance Manufacturers, but I don't know anyone who cooks dinner in them. Norma Schonwetter, author of the newly published "Microwave To Your Hearts Content: A Heart-Healthy Cookbook," has two microwave ovens, and hardly ever uses her stove.

"You can cook in the microwave without any added fat, you don't have to grease pans, foods don't stick, and you can cook and serve in the same dish," Schonwetter explaining some of the reasons she prefers microwave

Until I met Norma, I used my microwave for reheating, defrosting, and cooking vegetables. One rubber chicken is enough I told her explaining why I never cooked in my microwave.

"Over-cooking is one of the biggest mistakes people make,' said Schonwetter. "It's better to undercook foods in the microwave, you can always put them back in to continue cooking. Food continues to cook after the microwave is turned off. By allowing the food to stand or rest a few minutes, the heat that is built up in the food is distributed throughout. Standing time is usually about 1/4 of the cooking time."

If your microwaved dish comes out dry, tough, rubbery or brittle, Schonwetter says it's overcooked.

I wasn't easily convinced, I wanted proof. Norma's Chicken Lanai made a believer out of me. This Polynesian chicken dish, photographed in our Livonia studio, is ready to serve after seven minutes of microwave cooking. The chicken was moist, and flavored with fresh ginger. "How long did you marinate this chicken to make it so moist?" I wanted to know. She didn't. A home economist, and mother of two grown children, Schonwetter said she had a feeling microwave cooking would really take off in the late 1970s, and started learning all she could about it. She worked for Amana and Sears doing microwave cooking demonstrations, and teaching classes to people who purchased microwave ovens. Later she taught classes in Oak Park, Southfield, and Troy, and has written a syndicated column "Micro Magic," for 16 years. Writing a book was a logical next

"I try to make things as healthy as possible," said Schonwetter. "The recipes are easy-to-prepare, and use easy-to-find recipes. I don't like to complicate things.'

Now lets get cooking:

The American Heart Association recommends using the microwave for cooking foods that cook well in moist heat - chicken, fish, ground meat, vegetables, sauces and soups.

Here are some tips for checking foods for "doneness" from the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers.

Food steams throughout, not just around the edges.

Center bottom of dish is very hot to the touch.

■ Poultry thigh joints move easily. ■ Meat and poultry show no signs of pinkness and meat juices run clear when meat is cut close to the

■ Fish is opaque and flakes easily with a fork.

For crisp coated chicken parts, Schonwetter removes the skin, brushes the chicken with melted margarine or combines 1/4 cup egg substitute and 2 tablespoons of skim milk; dip chicken parts in seasoned bread, cornflake or cracker crumbs.

Fruity Newlan, Armida wines tasty sips

Focus on Wine

ELEANOR & RAY HEALD

Bob Foley is a talented musician, speaks six languages, lives in Napa Valley and makes great wines. We first met Foley when he made wine for Markham

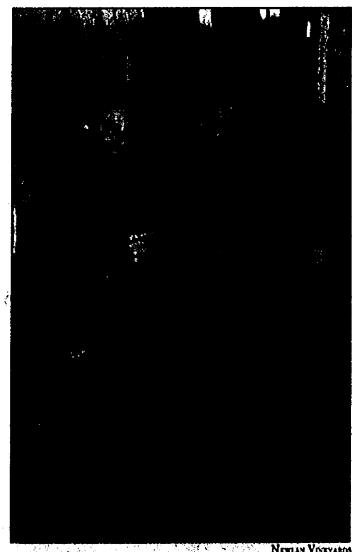

Vineyards. He is responsible for the delicious merlots that put Markham on the wine map. After increasing Markham's wine production and building a new winery, Foley decided that he wanted to return to making hand-crafted wines. In 1992, he joined Bruce Newlan at Newlan Vineyards and began making some flavorful wines we think you should know about. Like so many people in the wine business, Bruce Newlan came from another business -Lockheed Aviation. In 1967, Newlan and his wife bought 13 acres of Napa Valley cabernet sauvignon and sold the grapes to wineries like Inglenook, Robert Mondavi and Silver Oak. In 1974, Newlan decided to leave Lockheed to become a full-time grower. He bought another 16 acres of pinot noir vineyards and began to experiment with winemaking.

Newlan Vineyards pinot noir is so special that Robert Mondavi bought most of it for his Reserve Pinot Noir. Today, Foley gets first pick of the pinot noir vineyard to make Newlan pinot noir.

"Fruit this good is very special to the Napa" Valley," said Foley. "Pinot noir at Newlan

Wine Selections

Value wines from Newlan Vineyards are labeled Napa-Villages ($9 each) and include a Pinot Blanc, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, a red wine that is a blend of Rhone varietals and a white that is 80 percent semillon and 20 percent chardonnay.

Under the Newlan Vineyards label, we recommend the 1991 Newlan Chardonnay ($14), 100 percent barrel fermented in 50 percent new French oak barrels, the 1989 Newlan Pinot Noir ($15 reviewed above), the 1987 Newlan Cabernet Sauvignon ($14.50), a silky wine that was bottled aged at the winery, and the 1991 Newlan Zinfandel ($13), a premier release.

Armida wines available in this area include: 1992 Armida Chardonnay ($10), 1991 Armida Pinot Noir ($12) and 1991 Armida

Merlot ($12) - all exceptional values.

Vineyards is the epitome of a hand-crafted wine. The grapes are given a long, cool, fermentation in small tanks, punched down by hand and the wine is aged in 50 percent new French oak barrels."

Foley makes two pinot noirs from his fruit, each represents a great value. As avid pinot-philes, we can attest to the virtues of The 1990 Napa-Villages Pinot Noir ($9) showing excellent fruit, withsupple textures and juicy flavors. The 1989 Newlan Pinot Noir ($15) boasts big, toasty oak, good structure and bright, cherry fruit and spice that explodes in the glass. Why would you spend $40-$50 for a French Burgundy when this flavorful little beauty is available at one-third the price?

Our latest discovery from Sonoma County is tiny Armida Winerv on the west side of Dry Creek Valley near Healdsburg, Calf., approximately 1.5 hours north of the Golden Gate Bridge.

The story of Armida Winery may sound strangely like the Newlan story; certainly there are interesting parallels. Owner, Bob Frugoli was born in California and spent most summers and many weekends visiting his grandparents on their Sonoma County farm. Frugoli's adult career, as a financial adviser with a national investment house, took him to Chicago and away from California farm life.

After several years, he began to realize how important the farm was to him and planned his return to that lifestyle. In 1979, Frugoli purchased established vineyards in Sonoma County's Russian River Valley. The cool nights and warm days of this wine region are particularly hospitable to chardonnay, pinot noir and merlot. For 10 years, Frugoli grew grapes that he then sold to local wineries. In the meantime, each year that he carefully tended his vines and raised his grapes meant another year of maturity for his vines and another year closer to his dream of leaving the investment business to return to the

In 1989, Frugoli realized his dream of a lifetime when he located a spectacular site for his Armida Winery in the western foothills above the Dry Creek Valley with a view overlooking the Russian River Valley and Mount St. Helena to the east. At Armida Winery, Frugoli is able to use his own, estate grown grapes, in his carefully planned winery, to produce small quantities of three hand-crafted wines.

Armida Winery Chardonnay showcases exuberant fruit with oak in evidence as a spice rather than a dominating component. Fruity and lengthy, this is a wine to drink rather than ponder.

"Achieving a balance of fruit and oak is our chardonnay goal," admits Frugoli. He has tasted too many chardonnays where the delicate fruit is overpowered by raw

According to winemaker, Frank Churchill, "Our vineyard will always have a characteristic grapefruit-like component." And Churchill does a masterful job of letting that fruit shine through in his wines.

EATING AND COMPETING

Athletes no longer believe the myth that they must gorge themselves with meat in order to build muscular bodies. This outmoded training table practice has all but been replaced by eating carbohydrates, which is the fuel that runs engines of muscle. Nowhere is this more evident than in the National Football League. More than 70 percent of the NFL trainers from 23 teams recommend that players bulk up on such foods as pasta, pancakes, cereals and fruits in preparation for competition. The wisdom of this strategy can be seen in the 1992-1993 Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys. Rated as the healthiest team in the NFL, they eat six daily servings of fruits andvegetables, in addition to such low-fat grain-based foods as bread and spaghetti. Eating a diet comprised primarily of fruits, vegetables, and complex carbohydrates can create a healthy, happier you. The GOOD FOOD CO., a natural food supermarket, offers a tremendous variety of quality natural foods, along with vitamins and supplements to keep you in peak condition. Our staff is always willing to answer any questions you may have about a given product. Please call us at 981-8100. We are conveniently located at 42615 ford Rd. Hours are Monday-Saturday 9-9 and Sunday 10-6. Give us a try - we offer great food at a great price! P.S. According to the Dallas Cowboys' trainer, the players are most partial to broccoli, pauliflower, oranges and bananas. . Advertisoment .

Bowl 'em over at half-time with chili

If you're tackling this year's TV Super Bowl party, you'll want a game plan that fuels the fans and allows the cook to catch all the gridiron action. One simple solution, sure to please armchair athletes and keep cooking and cleanup at a minimum, is to serve steaming bowlfuls of great-tasting chili with an appealing selection of help-yourself toppings.

Two richly flavored, crowdpleasing new chili recipes from the Pace Picante Sauce Test Kitchens will help keep the fans cheering through the final play. Both can be made in short order on the morning of the big game, or made in advance and reheated. They only improve with "age."

Beef and Bacon SuperChili teams the crowd-pleasing flavors of ground beef and bacon with colorful vegetables, beans, picante sauce and Lone Star State seasonings for a hearty, satisfying meal-in-a-bowl that's easy to prepare and serve.

Touchdown Turkey Chili is a far-from-the-ordinary bowlful that simmers ground turkey, vegetables, picante sauce and seasonings with a touch of cinnamon for a spicy, satisfying dinnertime treat with super-special taste appeal. With either or both chilies, pass your favorite crusty bread, corn bread, rolls, tortillas or crackers and you've got a winning combination that's sure to rate

There are three basic kinds of honey; comb, chunk and extracted. Comb honey is a section of waxen comb, filled with honey just at the bees stored it. Chunk honey has pieces of comb covered with liquid honey. Extracted or liquid which in most common form, is extracted from the wax comb into a clear liquid, convenient and ready to use.

Honey has a delightful flavor spread on toast, pancakes, waffles, muffins and other hot breads. It can be used as a topping on fruits and ice cream or as a sweetener for cereals and beverages. From a nutritional point of all, honey is four-fifths sugar and one-fifth water. Honey does contain little amounts of protein, minerals and vitamins but these all in very minute amounts.

Honey may be used, measure for measure, in place of the sugar in preparing puddings, custards, pie fillings, baked apples, candied and "sweet-sour" vegetables, salad dressings, and cinnamon toast. Brushed or drizzled on ham during the last half hour of baking, honey adds flavor and gives a golden glaze.

Baking with honey

Cakes and cookies made from honey remain moist on storage. Some are improved in flavor and texture when aged a few days. Crisp cookies, however, are likely to lose crispness on standing. Some honey candies and frosting may stay too soft in humid weath-

For cakes and cookies made with honey, you'll get best results if you use recipes developed especially with honey as an ingredient. In cakes, honey can replace as much as one-half of the sugar without making it necessary to change the proportions of the other ingredients in the recipe. In cookies, the amount of honey that can replace the sugar varies with the type of cookie. For gingersnaps, for example, replace no more than one-third of the sugar with honey.

In both cakes and cookies, the honey should be mixed thoroughly with the other ingredients to prevent a soggy layer from being formed on top. Combine honey with either the shortening or the liquid. Honey with stronger flavor may be used in spice cake, gingerbread, brownies, and in other rather highly flavored products.

Other hints to use honey in baking are: each cup of honey contains about one-fourth cup of liquid so, deduct one-fourth of the liquid from the recipe when replacing one cup of sugar with one cup of honey. When substituting honey for sugar in baking, add one-fourth to one-half teaspoon baking soda for each cup of honey used. Honey caramelizes at a low temperature so lower the oven baking temperatures for cakes and other baked goods made with honey or they will get too brown.

Franklin freezes out Spartans

■ Franklin has temporary bragging rights in Livonia basketball following Friday's convincing 66-43 triumph over Stevenson. Franklin and Churchill meet again Feb. 18.

By Brad Emons

Despite the frigid Arctic temperatures outside Friday, the Livonia Franklin boys basketball team felt warm and snug inside the friendly confines of Walt Cosens Gymnasium. The host Patriots scored a bundle of points the opening half, 40 to be exact, while leaving city rival Stevenson out in the cold en route to a convincing 66-43 triumph.

Both teams have identical 1-1 records in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

But Franklin is clearly the best team right now among the three Livonia public schools. The Patriots beat Livonia Churchill convincingly before the holiday break, 75-48. Meanwhile, Stevenson and Churchill have split.

Paul Kruschka, a 6-foot-2 senior forward, paced a balanced Franklin scoring attack with a game-high 22 points. Greg Maple, a scrappy 5-11 senior, added 16.

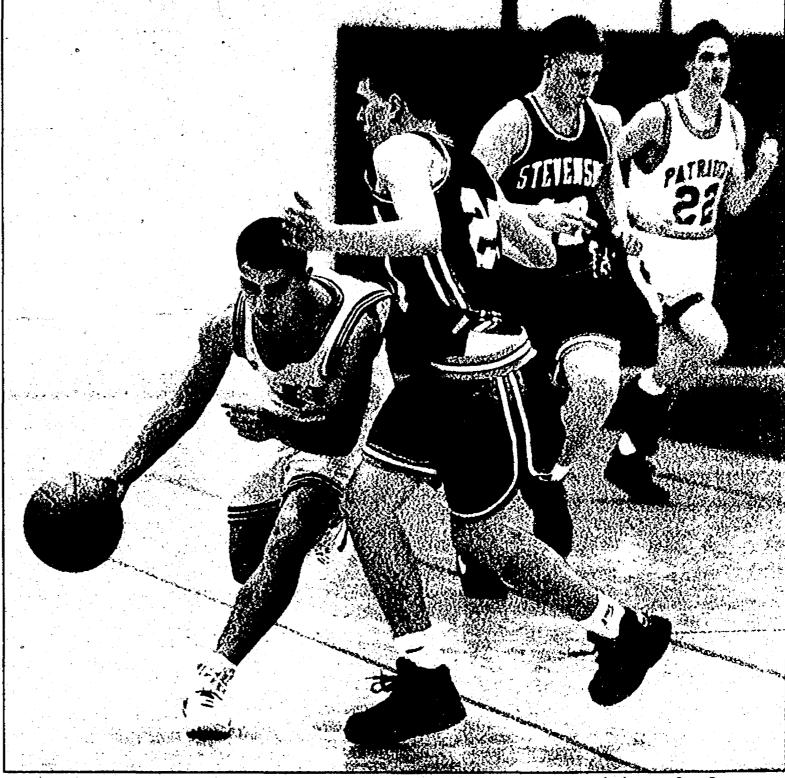

Other contributions came from starters Jason Maschke (12 points and 14 rebounds). Clemente Herrera (five assists) and Mark Baluk (seven points and eight rebounds).

Franklin, now 3-3 overall, dominated just about every category with the exception of three-pointers made (9-8 for Stevenson) and turnovers (14-13).

But the Patriots made life miserable for the ice-cold Spartans, who could connect on only 15 of 65 shots from the floor (23 percent).

We shared the ball very well the whole game, the kids have been very unselfish," Franklin first-year coach Larry Jackson said. "Coming in we knew we had to play defense and take away everybody shooting near the three-point stripe.

Ladywood's Poglits proves Mercy killer

By Dan O'Meara Staff Writer

Farmington Hills Mercy had no one to match the stature and ability of Livonia Ladywood's Ann Poglits, and that spelled the difference Thursday in Catholic League volleyball.

The 6-foot-3 junior made an impact with her serves and spikes as the Blazers defeated the host Marlins in two games, 15-8 and 15-10.

"I think she was the main factor in our attack and serving," Ladywood coach Tom Teeters said. "As our team evolves this year, I think we'll see her hitting from the back row."

Poglits, who moved to outside hitter, had 18 kills in the match, including eight in the second game, out of 22 attacks.

She had 12 serves without an error in the first game, running off six in a row at one point. Poglits also had two

"I was surprised she wasn't hitting in the middle," Mercy coach Peggy Spengler said. "She's a very intimidating blocker. We had practiced for her to be hitting from the middle, but we knew they were going to have good outside hitters, too."

The Blazers are 2-0 in the Central Division of the Catholic League and 7-1 overall. Mercy fell to 0-3. Others contributed to the Ladywood victory, including Stacey Judd with five kills and 16 attacks. Nicole

Lady Crusaders top Tri-State in OT gem

Defense took over for Madonna University's women's basketball team in overtime Thursday against visiting Tri-State Univer-

The Lady Crusaders forced six turnovers in the first 41/2 minutes of the extra session, limiting Tri-State to two points in that span. That was enough to lift them to a 67-60 lead en route to a 69-62 triumph.

The win improved Madonna's record to 6-8. Tri-State is 7-9.

"We were quicker," said Madonna coach Bill Potter. "Our press beat them."

The Lady Crusaders trailed 58-56 with 25 seconds left in regulation when Jill Burt was fouled on a three-point attempt. Burt, who led Madonna with 18 points, converted 2-of-3 free throws to knot the score.

Burt and Rachel Emery (14 points, four steals) each had four points in the overtime. Shawn Bannon finished with 14 points, five assists and five steals for the Crusaders.

Tri-State got 22 points from Kim Brefka, 14 and 10 boards from Carmen Ham, and 12 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks from Jennifer Stikes.

Free throws were a telling factor: Tri-State was 8-of-14 (57 per-

TRI-STATE 121. MADONNA 80 (MEN): A horrendous shooting start doomed the Crusaders to their 18th loss in 19 games Wednesday at Tri-State.

Madonna trailed 59-25 at the half, thanks to 11-of-40 (27 percent) floor shooting. Tri-State converted 23-of-41 (56 percent) in the opening half.

The Crusaders, who attempted just 20 three-pointers, a low number for them (they made five, 25 percent), were better in the second half. But they still struggled defensively.

"Defense is the most difficult thing to get a group to learn," said Madonna coach Bill Sharpe. "They have to play defense. It isn't glamorous, it isn't fun, but they have to play it.'

- J. Dimes paced the Crusaders with 19 points and seven rebounds. Shawn Branum had 16 points and Mike Slone scored 14. Tri-State got 33 points from Chris Singpiel and 16 from Doug Targart. Each also grabbed nine boards. Chris Keil added 12

Livonia Clarenceville, a state Class C quarter finalist the past two years in volleyball, is off to a 2-0 start in the Metro Conference.

Last week, the Trojans defeated Bloomfield Hills Kingswood (15-13, 15-13) and Willow Run (15-8, 15-2). Wendy Roy led Clarenceville with 10 kills, while Jaime Zemke

Stacy Bishop-Rick contributed three each. Chris Nunnery had five service aces, while setter Kristen Spengler changed her lineup and rotation after a loss earlier in the week, but the Marlins never practiced with it since Mitzi Ruddock was away on family business for two days.

"I just said 'Go out on the court and try this," Spengler said, adding five service errors cost the Marlins, too. "There was also a little bit of the Ladywood aura, so I told them 'There's no more Ladywood aura; it just ended.' After falling behind in the second game, the Marlins rallied but fell short of winning. Poglits had four kills (three for points) as Ladywood jumped in front 6-0. The Blazers were coasting with a 13-4 lead when Mercy scored six straight points (four

Available pools sinking fast

Sports and statistics are so woven together, tightly bound, that people often mistakenly believe that the former cannot survive without the latter.

Untrue. If you are familiar with sports at all, you know statistics do not always tell the story. Stats are portions only; people provide That is why I cannot accept all the facts and figures tossed about by the Michigan High School Athletic Association's executive director, Jack Roberts, regarding the mid-year recommendation to change the minimum depth for starts in swim meets.

Roberts and the MHSAA "recommended" to member schools that all starts off blocks at competitive meets be in at least five -feet of water. Until that decree (or whatever the MHSAA wants to call it), the minimum depth was four feet.

Now understand — you don't just go get out the hose and pump another foot of water into the pool. Nor do you just pull out the starting blocks and move 'em around to where it's deep enough.

Here's the reality of the situation: Only four of the 11 teams in the Western Lakes Activities Association compete in pools that meet the MHSAA's new requirements.

And you know what? Those four - Plymouth Salem, Westland John Glenn, Livonia Churchill and Livonia Stevenson (the Spartans compete at Livonia Bentley) - might not be able to keep pace with the MHSAA, either.

How deep will it go?

That's because there's a good chance the depth requirement could change again. Two meters (six feet, seven inches) is the most common figure now tossed-about.

Or maybe it'll be seven feet. Or eight. Who knows? Certainly not the MHSAA — it was just four years ago that the mandate was pushed through changing the minimum depth from three and a half feet to four.

That caused a major problem for lots of schools. Farmington's schools did not host a swim meet whenever possible, because any competitions at North, Harrison or Farmington had to have in-thewater starts, pushing off the wall.

Ever seen a 400-yard relay with four swimmers starting in the water? It's not the stuff Olympic dreams are made of.

So. Now we come to Roberts' reasons. Why the change?

"We felt we were slipping behind what a prudent high school association should do," he explained. And what's that mean? Well, according to Roberts:

First, swimming has more catastrophic (defined as paralyzing) injuries than any other high school sport;

■ Second, the result of those injuries is (surprise!) a lot of lawsuits; Third, because of the first two, all sorts of state agencies are getting in their two cents worth of opinion. Back to the statistical game. How many catastrophic injuries have there been in swimming?

Numbers twisted

Roberts said there have been at least two and as many as four swimmers injured in the state in the past 15 years while diving into pools. In football, Roberts said there were two catastrophic injuries this past season, "but there were none in my previous seven years here."

Is that an accurate statistic? Not according to every swim coach from the Observer area questioned. "In my 13 years here, I have never had an accident off a starting block," said Canton coach Hooker Wellman. "Never."

Farmington coach Ross Bandy

extended that viewpoint. "Nationwide, I have never, during a meet, heard of a kid suffering an injury" while diving.

Even Roberts wouldn't argue. He could only recall one of the diving accidents, and that involved horseplay on the deck. It had nothing to do with the swim

"It is not unsafe for trained persons to correctly use starting blocks," Roberts said. "The problem is incorrect use. That's where the injuries occur."

That means, because the use of blocks cannot be completely policed, the pool depth must be changed? And that will prevent injury?

That's pretty hard to swallow.

As Bandy noted, "They're penalizing the wrong people. That's where I find fault with the system."

Roberts goes back to his book of facts to argue his point. Florida and Iowa, he insists, have already mandated all pools must be five feet in depth. The YMCA and YWCA are endorsing the same thing. And the state department of health is considering both a five-foot and two-meter depth requirement (in doing so, the department has opted to disregard a University of Nebraska study that concluded 31/2 feet was adequate).
