Voters are reminded to go to voting locations used in municipal, state and national elections, not ones used in school elections.

Proposal A would increase the state sales tax to 6 percent from 4 percent, raise the state cigarette tax to 75 cents a pack from 25 cents, and reduce the state income tax rate to 4.4

percent from 4.6 percent.

Key to the plan is a slashing of school operating property taxes to 6 mills on primary residences and 24 mills on all other property.

If voters don't approve the plan, an already-approved backup, statutory plan goes into effect.

In that plan, the income tax rate would be raised to 6 percent with a ·higher personal exemption.

Four young men charged in separate sex assaults

BY DARRELL CLEM

Two young men accused in separate Westland incidents have been ordered to stand trial amid allegations they forced 13-year-old girls to have sex with Jamie Kendall Bell, 17, of Westland and Marvin Maurice Paschall, 20, of Inkster face separate trials on charges of criminal sexual conduct.

In two other unrelated incidents:

A 21-year-old Dearborn Heights man has been ordered to stand trial amid allegations he sexually molested a 13-year-old boy in Westland.

A 17-year-old Westland boy was arraigned Friday in 18th District Court on charges of having sex with a 13-year-old girl.

Bell is accused of inviting a 13-year-old girl into a bedroom to talk during a Feb. 26 party on St. Joe Street, near Newburgh and Palmer, said Westland police Sgt. Michael Terry. The girl has accused Bell of forcing her to have sex with him during the 11:30 p.m. incident, Terry said.

Bell also has been accused of making other threats against the girl, Terry said. The defendant remained in jail late last week in lieu of a $25,000 cash bond.

Bell has waived a preliminary hearing in 18th District Court and has been bound over for trial in Detroit Recorder's Court. He could face up to 15 years in prison if convicted of third-degree criminal sexual conduct, Terry said.

In a similar but unrelated incident, Paschall is accused of asking a 13-year-old girl into a bathroom during a Dec. 27 party in the 700 block of Forest, near Wildwood and Cherry Hill, Terry said.

The girl has accused Paschall of forcing her to have sex with him during the 1 a.m. incident, Terry Paschall has waived a preliminary hearing and, like Bell, has been bound over for trial in Recorder's Court. He could face up to 15 years in prison if convicted of third-degree criminal sexual conduct.

In the incident involving the boy, 21-year-old Stephen Henry Trimper Jr. of Dearborn Heights faces trial amid allegations he fondled a 13-year-old boy at a Joy Road residence in Westland, Sgt. Laura Moore said.

The incident allegedly occurred after a party had ended at the residence, Moore said. Trimper has been accused of fondling the boy during the late hours of Feb. 12 and the early hours of Feb. 13, she Trimper has waived a preliminary hearing and punishable by up to two years in prison. He remained in jail last week in lieu of a $20,000/10 percent bond. In the latest charges, Jamie Velez, 17, of Westland was arraigned Friday on charges of having sex with a 13-year-old girl in the 8200 block of Valley View,

Police capture suspect in jewel theft

By Darrell Clem

A jewel thief grabbed two diamond-and-gold tennis bracelets worth $17.650 from a jewelry store employee at Westland Center last week, but police have since captured a suspect.

The male suspect was expected to be arraigned during the weekend, said Sgt. Jay Deschenes of the Westland Police Department.

The incident occurred shortly before 10:30 a.m. Tuesday when a man walked into Helzberg Diamonds and pretended to be shopping for the expensive bracelets. police reports said.

The man asked to see two bracelets — one valued at $11,150 and another valued at $6,500, police reports said. When the 40year-old female employee showed the jewelry to the man, he grabbed both bracelets and fled from the mall, police said.

When the woman screamed 'Stop him," a Canton Township man shopping in the mall chased after the man and saw him gettinginto a Dodge Shadow, the reportssaid. The man provided information that helped Westland police make an arrest.

The woman described the suspect as a 5-foot-10 black male. about 28 years old and weighing approximately 175 pounds. She reported that the suspect also had's short cropped hair.

Four area students win speech contest

Four Wayne-Westland students have been named as district winners in a McDonald's restaurant-sponsored speech contest. Winners were chosen in fourth and fifth grades.

In the fourth grade, Tommy James of Patchin Elementary School won first place and Cindy Morton of Taft-Galloway Elementary placed second.

In the fifth grade, Diane Morton of Taft-Galloway took top honors and Stanley Empson of Elliott Elementary placed second.

Terry said.

The students were judged by a three-member panel of district officials, based on speeches that focused on what the children want to be when they grow up. The students received certificates of commendation.

The leak was reported about 8:45 a.m. when about 500 gallons was observed on the ground next talone of four storage tanks, Soon, about 2,000 gallons leaked before a Binch hole near the bottom of the tank was plugged. The hole was created by corrosion, said hattalion chief William Green, spokesman for the units at the site.

Large patches of peeling paint were visible on the tank.

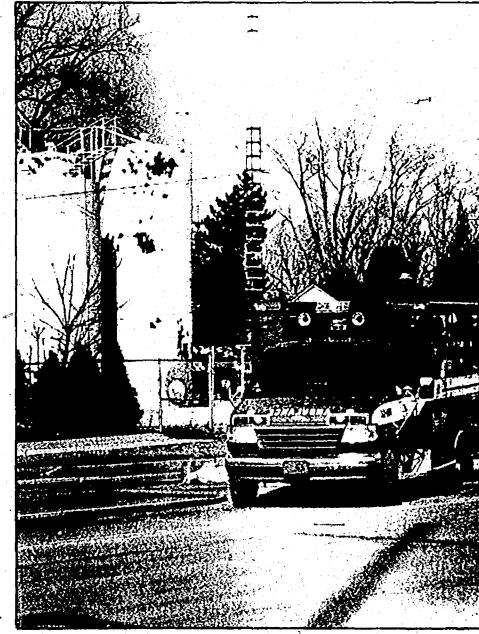

A 2-feet-high containing wall surrounding the storage tanks kept the gasoline from spreading. Green reported at noon that the firefighters had controlled the leak. Soon afterwards, they

The leak was first observed by a Peister employee who called veteran Feister truck driver Bob Richey at home. After the fire department was called, Richey stood across the street at a Marathon gasoline station to watch firefighters contain the leak and drain the tank.

Richey said he didn't know the age of the leaking tank, but said it was built before he joined the

Mayor vows to improve relations with business

By LEONARD POGER

Mayor Robert Thomas, who battled local business persons early in his administration; says he wants to improve communica: tion and let them know that his administration wants to help solve problems.

To launch the new program, called "Good Morning Westland," the mayor has scheduled the first of a series of breakfast meetings for 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, March 22.

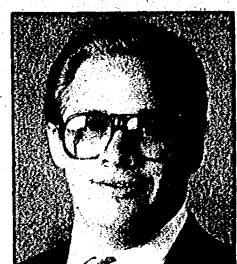

He plans to hold about three similar breakfast meetings in the next 12 months.

Mayoral assistant George Gillies said he thought up with the name of the program, which he said was patterned after the 'Good Morning America" TV program.

"I want to formulate a better working relationship between the administration and the business community," the mayor said in an interview last week. "Some business persons feel the administration isn't listening to them.'

Bu. Thomas said, he wants to 'open up a good dialogue" with local business persons.

The mayor, first elected in late 1989, ran into several highly publicized disputes with the Westland Chamber of Commerce early in his administration. When he was campaigning for a second ness owners.

term last fall, chamber leaders openly supported his opponent, city council president Charles Pickering.

Thomas was re-elected by nearly a 2-1 margin.

"We will deal with them (businesses) directly, show them that we care, that we want to listen to their problems and ask them that we can do to help them," Thomas.

The first of a series of meetings will focus on companies in the city's several industrial parks. Specifically, Thomas hopes to have industrial firms upgrade the appearance of their sites.

That session will be followed by meetings with retailers, professional persons, and small busi-

At next Tuesday morning's session with industrial company representatives, the administration will discuss a Michigan business expansion and retention program and how various tax reform proposals will affect the firms. Among the speakers will be Michael Gorman, the city's finance director, and Cynthia Faulhaber, an attorney with the firm of Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone.

Specific city administrators will attend the breakfast meetings to answer questions that relate to their departments.

Scott Veldhuis, the city's economic development director, said that in April the municipal economic development corporation will start a major program to survey local businesses as part of the business expansion and retention program.

A similar survey was made in 1985 to pinpoint how local companies feel about the community and specific issues relating to the city government.

The program will take eight to 10 months, Veldhuis said.

Besides the quarterly breakfast meetings. Thomas said informational newsletters from the administration will be sent to local businesses every three months.

There are about 1,000 businesses in the city, of which about 150 are industrial firms. Veldhuis

Irish Rovers annoy hosts

BY ALICE COLLINS STAFF WRITER

The Irish Rovers got their usual rave reviews from fans when they performed March 10 at the Southfield Pavilion, but their traditional pub songs and ethnic chatter weren't everyone's cup of green beer.

All three Southfield councilwomen, Suzanne Goldstein, Vicki Goldbaum and Joan Seymour found the Royers' performance offensive - to women and to people from other cultures.

Goldstein said she was particularly upset over one incident in the show in which they insulted Japanese in the audience by deliberately mispronouncing the words in a song. "When I looked over and noticed Japanese visitors sitting at the table next to me, I wanted to crawl under it," Goldstein said.

"I'm writing a letter to tell them that they were completely insensitive, inappropriate and way out of line," she added.

"I love the Irish Rovers music," Seymour said, "but I also was offended. They sing old barroom songs and I doubt that they mean any harm. I was offended that the city would sponsor this type of presentation."

Said Goldbaum: "I understand that they're barroom songs, but this is a diverse community." She'd have them back again, she said, but would remind them to be sensitive to everyone in the audience.

Goldstein started the discussion at the March 7 city council meeting, the first following the Rovers' third annual show sponsored by the city's department of parks and recreation. The men on council didn't complain.

"What we were seeing were Irish people performing what was Irish culture," said councilman Peter Cristiano.

Attempts to reach the Vancouver-based Rovers or their spokesman for comment were unsuccessful.

A sellout-crowd of more than 700 watched the performance in the pavilion which was arranged with tables and chairs into a giant Irish pub, cash bar

The group, which appears all over the world, always draws a big crowd when it comes to Southfield. "It was a great concert and the crowd gave them a standing ovation at the end," said Jef Farland, parks and recreation director.

The trio became upset because a Camaro in front of them - driven by 17-year-old Ryan Revoir was driving too slowly, Swindlehurst testified. Revoir, a stranger to the men, was accompanied by his girlfriend.

Actions described

Krejci began blowing his van's horn and flashing his headlights at Revoir, who began driving even slower, Swindlehurst said.

At the Wayne-Palmer traffic light, Maggio got out of the van and went over to the passenger door of Reyoir's Camaro, yelling and grabbing Revoir's girlfriend by the neck, Revoir testified.

Frightened, Revoir pulled away and drove to a June Street residence to seek help from Woodhead, who lived there with John Hollis. Revoir testified that he left his Camaro running while he and his girlfriend went to the front door for help.

In the meantime, the three men in the van had followed Revoir to June Street, and Maggio got out of the van and stole the Camaro, Swindlehurst said. Swindlehurst and Krejci drove away from the dispute at this point, though Swindlehurst, a Christine Street resident, later heard the shooting.

As Maggio drove off in the stolen car, Revoir, Woodhead and Hollis ran out of Hollis' house

Madonna University readies annual auction

They call it the "Around The World" auction, and with more than 700 donated items available for bid, Madonna University could just about string them all together and circle the earth.

The auction is set for 5:30 p.m. Friday, April 29, in Burton Manor, 27777 Schoolcraft Road in Livonia. Tickets are $60. Call 591-5063 for reservations.

The purpose is to raise money for Madonna's scholarship endowment fund, which already contains $1.4 million. The interest income of about $100,000 a year buys partial scholarships for about 50 students every year, said Leonard Wilhelm, vice president of finance.

Last year's auction cleared more than $200,000 after expenses, and this year Madonna personnel hope to top $250,000.

Rose Kachnowski, the specialevents coordinator for Madonna, said 719 items had been donated for the auction as of March 9.

State senator opposes additional public boat launches

BY TIM RICHARD

Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, is mobilizing lakefront property owners to oppose more state owned public boat launches.

"The Department of Natural Resources claims it uses criteria in picking sites," said Dunaskiss. "I think their policy is: If they can find land, they try to purchase it."

Dunaskiss also is eveing a nurchases.

Michigan United Conservation Clubs is "very much opposed to that attitude," said executive director Tom Washington.

"The lakes belong to the public. They belong to the people. The fish belong to the people. Yet they'll want the state to stock their lake and maintain a fishery.

"His effort is clearly in response to his constituents who don't want the great unwashed public out there. Oakland County is notorious for that 'I've got moratorium on state launch site mine attitude. But you'll see a dock with eight, 10, 12 different boats that belong to the owner's brother, nephew and uncle," said Washington: He recalled past "racial overtones" in the 25-year-old

-- Dunaskiss will chair a subcommittee of the Senate Natural Resources Committee to develop criteria for boat launches and put them into law. "We want to hold a public hearing in Oakland County the state," the senator said.

Subcommittee members will include Sen. David Hongiman, R-West Bloomfield, who represents the western lakes districts of Oak-Dingell, D-Trenton, known for pro-hunter legislation.

"We want to put together some kind of weighted formula. What is the usage of a lake? How many homes are there? Is there already public access? How deep is the lake?" Dunaskiss said.

He told of an Oakland sheriff's and another in the west part of marine patrol boat being damaged twice when it hit stumps in a shallow lake.

DNR boat launches in Oakland County are on Middle Straits Lake, Commerce Township; land County, and Sen. Chris Proud Lake near Wixom; Heron, Holly, Crotched, Crystal, Holdredge and Wildwood-Valley lakes in the Holly Recreation Area; and Graham Lake (south) and Trout Lake, in the Bald Mountain Recreation Area.

Other boat launches are operated by the state Waterways Commission, which issues a separate entry pass; Huron-Clinton Metroparks; and Oakland County.

To contact the subcommittee, call Dunaskiss' office in Lansing at (517) 373-2417 or in Oakland County at (810) 738-2417.

Lewis Ansara was interviewed by Farmington Hills police Tuesday at Botsford Hospital. Inspector . Thomas Godwin said it sounds like-depression did have a role in the attempted murder and suicide. Police are no longer investigating.

"We've pretty much closed it now," Godwin said. "She did shoot him and took her own life. That's as far as we go."

Godwin said Leila Ansara was not believed to have been taking antidepressants, though police have not received a toxicology report. Antidepressants are often used in treating postpartum depression.

The couple's four children, ages 4, 3, 2 and 8 months are staying with relatives, Victor Ansara said. He has visited Lewis Ansara in the hospital.

S'craft students tutor Detroit kids

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW 3 STATE WRITER

Students at the Inkster Youth Living Center and the Golightly learn something helps Vocational Technical Center in you learn it better. Detroit are getting extra academic help in the form of tutoring, thanks to a new program of Schoolcraft College.

Dubbed "Project Seed," the program dispatches college students to the Detroit locations to tutor children of all ages in any area in which they need help.

Doris Montgomery, the Golightly culinary arts department head, said of the tutors: "They're great, wonderful, a godsend.

And the kids? "The kids are much more interested in their classes," Montgomery said. "It's really been a big help.'

Sylvia Dimaguila, the youth center's youth assistance coordinator, said 10-12 kids avail themselves of the Schoolcraft tutors Monday through Thursday. There has been "a lot of positive response from the parents," she said. And "grades have gone up."

Schoolcraft's Learning Assistance Center employs more than 30 tutors, who each spend two hours per week at Golightly or the vouth center.

Half the tutors aim to gain the 100 "pre-teaching" hours required of prospective educators, said faculty facilitator Linda Talbert. The rest of them tutor for other reasons, some because it just feels

The program began in September 1993 as a four-year federal grant of $100,000 kicked in. They started with Golightly, then spread to the Inkster youth center when tutors outnumbered available jobs, Talbert said.

Canton Township resident Debra Piper is one of 11 tutors from the Observer area. The 42-yearold mother of three boys is training to be an accounting clerk, so the tutoring experience is not a requirement for her degree.

She tutors because she enjoys it the budget.

It means something to Piper that she helps the disadvantaged children at the youth center get a leg up on life. "It makes them feel valued," she said.

The program calls for tutors to occupy a room at the youth center for two hours and help kids with whatever homework they're stumped by.

So the tutors never know what subject they'll be asked to cover. 'Sometimes we don't know-the answer to a problem and it's embarrassing," Piper said. But "the process of helping someone else learn something helps you learn it hetter, (too).`

Other local Schoolcraft College students who tutor include Kristi Hawn, Sarah Pfile and Clayton Campbell, all from Canton Township. Also Matt Cooper and Trish Blevins of Livonia, Brad Erisman and Terri Hudson of Garden City, Jason Koch of Westland and Janet Breest and Dawn DeGraffenreid of Plymouth.

Now the Clinton administration has decided to spend its education dollars in a different way, and Schoolcraft $ $100,000 grant has been severed after $35,000 was received. Learning center director Sirkka Gudan said this doesn't necessarily mean the program will wither and die, but may continue if money can be found in

Why is it then that many hospitals treat you and your baby like completely unrelated

OUR NURSES SEE THEM AS STILL BEING ATTACHED

You stay in your room. Your baby stays in the nursery. And you're each cared for by a . different nurse.

A befter way

At St. Mary Hospital we offer a better way to begin. A personal nurse takes care of you and your baby together to encourage the best possible start. So your nurse can tell how your comfort level, moods and medication may be affecting your baby. And how called mother-baby nursing.

Mother-baby nurses

With mother-baby nurses, you can learn by watching the nurse care for your newborn at your haby's behavior influences / your bedside instead of out of you. This new way of caring is your sight in a nursery. If you have a question about your baby, the nurse can answer it immediately. You won't have to wait for the "baby nurse."

The Miracle of Life Maternity Center at St. Mary Hospital has mother-haby nursing all the time.

More support, more education. It's a better way of caring. To learn more about the benefits of mother-baby nursing call 313-591-2882. Åsk for a free brochure, tour,

POINTS OF VIEW

Proposal A will benefit taxpayers, not Realtors

he organized opponents of Proposal A, Michigan Citizens for Fair Taxes, must think voters are really stupid. Now they are trying to get you to believe that Michigan Realtors are standing in line to collect $260 million dollars that is supposed to be given away by Gov. John Engler.

Taxpayers are being sorely misinformed if they believe the message provided by this group. In their efforts to misconstrue the elements of Proposal A, they are also denying taxpayers accurate data to help them make a wellinformed decision when they go to the polls on March 15.

Realtors are not the "special interest" group benefitting from the $260 million tax break in Proposal A, as noted in the ads. What voters aren't being told is that although Realtors fought hard for that tax break, the money doesn't go to them. Every cent of the $260 million tax savings from the reduced property transfer tax goes directly into the pockets of Michigan taxpayers, particularly those who buy and sell homes.

I believe that the reduction in the real estate transfer tax, along with the entire Proposal A package, enhances housing affordability, and housing affordability is crucial to the state's overall economic strength. The economic ripple effect of housing is tremendous it benefits the state's plumbing and electrical contractors, landscapers and the textile, lumber, appliance, paint and wallpaper industries and retailers, to name a few. According to the National Association of Realtors, on an average, every three home sales result in the creation of one job.

Don't be misled by those who aren't giving you all the facts. Not only is the group misinforming voters, it is blatantly illegally using the term Realtor, a federally registered collective membership mark which identifies real estate professionals who are members of the National Association of Realtors.

GUEST COLUMNIST

DONALD (JERRY) MCKEON

■ Every cent of the $260 million tax savings from the reduced property transfer tax goes directly into the pockets of Michigan taxpavers, particularly those who buy and sell homes.

This Realtor is committed to making Michigan a great place to call home and to preserving and protecting citi-. zens' private property rights. Aggressively seeking tax savings for homeowners through the reduction in the property transfer tax is just one of the ways that Michigan Realtors have capably served the citizens of Michigan for more than 80 years.

To suggest that I have any more to gain than a good healthy business climate in Michigan is absurd. If you believe that the infinitesimally small increase in my sales commission resulting from a higher sales price (to cover this transfer tax) is my motive, then why wouldn't I want the originally proposed 4 percent real estate transfer tax to prevail?

The 4 percent transfer tax originally discussed, and later reduced to 2 percent, was a big bite out of a homeowner's pocket. Now when selling your home the bite will be reduced to 34 of 1 percent. This is still a huge increase. The transfer tax, originally at $1.10 per thousand, will now be at $75 per thousand. That is an increase of nearly 700 percent. Isn't that enough for homeowners to bear?

We certainly need new ways to fund our schools. Taking some of the burden away from Michigan property owners hy lowering the property taxes is a step in the right direction. However, to increase the transfer tax to anything beyond the already proposed 34 of 1 percent is unfair to property owners, counter productive to a healthy housing market and a serious detriment to a prospering economy.

Donald (Jerry)McKeon is a Birmingham resident who is executive vice president/ partner at Hall & Hunter, Realtors, He is a member of the board of directors of the Michigan Association of Realtors, the National Association of Realtors and vice chairman of the State Board of Real Estate Broker and Salespersons.

School of real life teaches more than some colleges tanding in front of a classroom of 45 students gave me a whole new respect for teachers. It was a mass media class at Central Michigan University. It was 10 a.m. and I had to fill an entire hour with my own voice.

My kids claim I could talk anything to death, including them. But somehow all those words that always seem to be roaming around in my head eluded me after about 10 minutes.

The topic was newspapers, but what I really wanted to talk about is what you don't learn in college. Yep, there are plenty of classes at our state colleges and universities, but none in what you have to know to get through the day.

It's not really the schools' fault. The professor teaching the class that I spoke to said the students see college as that place you have to go to before you go out into the real world. It's like being in limbo.

Anyway, around our office we have a running convervation about what they don't teach you in college.

Here's a sampling:

- Smile at people. It really works. People will like you.
- You can drink too much beer. ■ Knowing when to have the oil changed in your car will get you much farther than the knowledge of foot-
- It's as important to have a balanced check book as it is to know how to find a square root, perhaps more.
- Allow people to tell a lie without embarrassing them with the truth. I know,

JEFF COUNTS

■ Yep, there are plenty of classes at our state colleges and universities, but none in what you have to know to get through the day.

you've been to college and know that stuff, but you'll get farther by just standing and smiling when somebody inflates the facts.

- When somebody says, "Hi, how are you?" they really don't want to know.
- Wearing a baseball cap backwards makes you look stupid.
- Nobody cares if you have a master's degree, but if you can fix the leaking toilet, that does make a difference.
- It's better to know where the rest areas are on a freeway than it is to know where New Zealand is located.
- As the sign says, clean up after yourself, your mother doesn't work here.
- Nobody really cares how much your college roomate drank before he or she threw up.

Just because you've dyed your hair purple doesn't mean you're a poet.

Those are just a few suggestions. With all the colleges and universities in our state, there should be some educators who can get off the high tech highway for long enough to design a course. Maybe they could call it, "What we should have taught."

There would be problems with such a course. Where would it fit into the world of higher education? Which department would claim it?

Chances are none would. And maybe that's the problem.

A rookie: Jack Berry Jr. is expected this week to complete his first Iditarod, Alaska's famous 1,000-plus mile race. Berry is shown with his team of Alaskan Huskies.

Dog sled racer readies for challenge

By MARIE CHESTNEY

Sometime this week, after 1,049 miles of 40degree-below-zero temperatures, swirling whiteouts, frozen rivers, icy tundras, steep mountains and sleepless days and nights, Jack Berry Jr. and his team of Alaskan Huskies should arrive in Nome, Alaska.

But when your're talking about the Iditarod, the most famous of all sled dog races and the Alaskan equivalent of the Indianapolis 500, nothing is certain.

Most of what Jack Berry Sr. of Farmington knows right now about his son's hazardous 10-day journey across the wilds of Alaska are the tidbits phoned to him daily from Anchorage by his two granddaughters, who get their information from the Alaskan media.

Berry Jr. was among the 58 mushers who started the race March 5 in Anchorage. As of Friday, he was 300 miles into the trip and taking a mandatory 24-hour layover.

In first Iditarod

It's Berry Jr.'s first Iditarod.

"He always was the type of kid who would have done well growing up in Daniel Boone's time," said Berry Sr., president of Pet Supplies Plus. "He likes wide open spaces and a more primitive life. And he's always had an interest in animals and dogs.'

Feeding five tons of dog food yearly to more than 50 Alaskan Huskies is no inexpensive task. Berry Jr. got his big break in the mushing business a few years ago when Berry Sr. in 1988 launched his pet supply business on Telegraph Road in Redford Township.

His dad's new business ensured Berry Jr.'s sled dogs a steady stream of high-protein, high-fat dog food. Because they sponsor Berry Jr., some of the food is donated by lams. The rest also comes from lams, but is paid for by Berry Sr. or by such other sponsors as Pfeister Co. and Stark and Co.

While now in his first Iditarod, Berry Jr. is no stranger to mushing across Alaska. In 1992, he raced in the 1,000-mile Yukon Quest Race. The race begins in Fairbanks and ends 15 days later in White Horse, Canada. Out of 47 mushers, he placed 13th, not a bad showing for a rookie.

Berry Jr.'s preparations for the 1994 Iditarod began last fall, when the warmer weather ended and he put away the tools of his cement mason's trade for the winter.

Since then, he's run his huskies daily, starting with 10-mile trips and building up to 80mile trips.

"That's to build up his dogs' endurance as well as his own," Berry Sr. said.

The Iditarod tests the physical and mental endurance of both the musher and his sled dogs. At checkpoints, catering first to the comfort of his or her dogs, the musher often winds up with less rest than the dogs. That lack of sleep can lead to hallucinations on the

What compels mushers to endure calamities from frostbite to zero visibility whiteouts is the same force that motivates all adventurers - to struggle against the elements and overcome them.

Berry Sr.'s company newsletter quotes Berry Jr. as saying: "Sometimes when you're in the middle of a race, and you're falling asleep on your sled in 40-degree-below-zero temperatures, you wonder why you're doing this. But after the race is over, and you and your dog team have prevailed over all of the elements, you know know exactly why you're doing this. There's such a great feeling of satisfaction to finishing a race. I wouldn't trade it for any-

Berry Jr. lives in Homer, about five hours from Anchorage. From his remote cabin, he runs his Lost Mountain Kennel. His sled dogs live outside in straw dog houses.

"They're bred and trained to survive outside," Berry Sr. said.

While Berry Sr. takes his son's adventures in stride, his mother, Jeannette, does most of the worrying for the family.

"She knows he's out there all by himself with 20 dogs that depend on him and in the most adverse weather conditions," Berry Sr. said. "She knows that a lot of things can go wrong, from a moose attack to getting off the track. She knows it's a dangerous thing to do. Luckily, so far, there's been no fatalities.'

The roots of the Iditarod go back to 1925 when the residents of Nome suffered an epidemic and needed serum from Anchorage. Mushers and their sled dogs carried that lifesaving serum to Nome. In 1973, the Iditarod began to commemorate that long-ago "race for

TASTE BUDS

CHEF LARRY JANES

Markets stock up on exotic vegetables

xcuse me folks, but was I sleeping when someone secretly stocked my favorite grocery and produce store with an abundant assortment of vegetables with exotic names like rapini, enoki, and jicama?

Exotic choices

At Chimento's market in Livonia, I almost stumbled over gigantic portabello mushrooms bigger than a Frisbee.

I remember having to drive to LaColomena/Honey Bee Market in in the heart of Detroit's Mexicantown for fresh chili peppers. Now Papa Joe's in Rochester stocks poblanos, jalapenos, habaneros, and other other varieties with enough firepower to light up the west side. The jicamas were as abundant as coconuts at Nino Salvaggio's in West Bloomfield, while fresh raw horseradish was in great supply for Passover meals at the Shopping Center Market in Southfield.

I used to think that kiwi was exotic. Now, my produce market is a phone call away from ordering the gooseberries that my Uncle Earl would always request in a pie my sister Rose made with gooseberries gleaned from a northern farmer.

Either the popularity of iceberg lettuce is fading, or folks in Canton are on a Caesar salad kick. At Bob's Market in Canton, there were two feet of space for iceberg lettuce, and over six feet of space afforded romaine lettuce.

World markets

What's making all this possible? We might be on the information super highway, but overnight air transport and expanding world trade markets have opened the door to exotic mangoes from southeast Asia and mustard greens from India. Parsley root, originally from The Netherlands, is now grown exclusively in, get this folks, New Jersey!

Scientific researchers have found ways to keep a tomato shelf stable for almost 30 days. They've discovered a way to use the spores from morel mushrooms to be able to grow them year 'round in Mason, Mich.

Air express, world trade and scientific research certainly has helped expand our taste buds. The popularity of ethnic cuisines, a new appreciation of our own country's native regional products, and growing awareness of sound nutritional principles certainly must mean something to produce buyers nationwide, who are offering us more choices than ever before.

All of this is fine and dandy, and it certainly has expanded the taste horizons of the Janes Gang, but what about you?

Asking questions

When it comes to knowing the difference between arugula and zapotes, sooner or later the savvy shopper will have to begin asking questions.

Chances are nil that you might catch Julia Child on Good Morning America discoursing on tomatillos the day you need to buy a tomatillo.

Then again, if you think the kid at the store with an earring making $4.15 an hour will be able to help you choose a ripe loquat, you've been sniffing too many prickly pears.

Ask for the produce manager when you seesomething that intrigues you. Consider it a free lesson in world trade, local geography and the fabled art of uncovering the uncommon vegetable. A good source is Elizabeth Schneider's "Uncommon Fruits and Vegetables," (Harper & Row, copyright 1986). Your local library is another logical source, and the new computer card catalog makes researching fast and fun.

When you see something new at the market, check it out and give it a try. Just think of all those things your mother made you try that are an important part of your culinary regimen.

First timers might want to pick up a jicama, peel it and slice it into sticks as you would a carrot. Chill for about 30 minutes and taste what you've been missing.

I just couldn't believe my eyes when I checked momma's recipe box and found a recipe using nopales, also known as cactus pads. The recipe came from her snowbird friend Jean. They're available locally at Mexican markets and can be bought fresh or canned.

■ Anna Gavin, a nursing student and mother of three boys, doesn't have time to fiddle around the kitchen. Her traditional Irish dishes are easy.

BY KEELY WYGONIK STAFF WRITER

It's hard to believe the sumptuous dinner of baked Shannon salmon, steamed carrots, boiled potatoes, Irish minted peas and nutty blarney buns took Anna Gavin of Redford less than an hour to make. For a little holiday sparkle, she put mint-flavored ice cubes in glasses of apple juice for her family to enjoy. "The salmon is delicious, different and quick," said Anna. As the busy mother of three boys and a secondsemester nursing student at Henry Ford Community College in Dearborn, she doesn't have time to fiddle around the kitchen. Anna leaves fiddling to her husband, Mick, and son Mike, 17. Sean, 7, plays the bodhran, a goat skin Irish drum. Son Patrick, 15 is a gold medal gymnast and member of the boys competitive team at the Michigan Academy of Gymnastics in Westland.

Married for 18 years, Mick and Anna met at the Gaelic League Irish American Club in Detroit where she was giving tin whistle lessons.

Mick Gavin, the youngest of nine children who grew up in East Clare in southwest Ireland, comes from a family of musicians. He plays fiddle and button accordion.

Anna was born in Detroit and plays piano, guitar and tin whistle. Her father, a history professor at the University of Detroit, was raised in Corktown: Anna, who earned a fine arts degree from the University of Detroit, remembers childhood visits to her grandmother in Corktown, learning about Irish literature from her father, and going to basement parties where Irish musicians played.

Mick came to the United States as a musician, and later fell back on floorcovering, the trade he learned in

ing care of business. In his spare time he plays the fiddle, passing his love of Irish music on to his sons. "I enjoy it. It has made my life wonderful," said Mick, who performs with other musicians in the metro Detroit area.

Father and sons are busy rehearsing for an Irish festival of music, song and dance 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. Thursday, March 17, at the Bonnie Brook Country Club, 19950 Telegraph (between Seven Mile and Eight Mile) in Detroit. The price is $6; children are free. There will be continuous entertainment, a cash bar, and corned beef and cabbage dinners will be sold. For more information, call 537-3489.

"It's a family event," said Gavin, explaining how the annual festival began nine years ago. "We had a lot of calls over the years from people who wanted to know what was going on culturally on St. Patrick's

St. Patrick's Day feast features hearty fare

Sampling: Pam Maloney, an officer in the Detroit Chapter of the Irish American Cultural Institute, and Botsford Inn owner Creon Smith, sample authentic Irish dishes that will be served at the inn on St. Patrick's Day.

BY LARRY JANES

SPECIAL WRITER I can't remember if it was St. Patrick or Patrick the bartender at my favorite Irish pub who coined the phrase "Everyone's Irish on St. Patrick's Day.'

Unfortunately, not being Irish, I was led to believe that corned beef, cabbage, potatoes, green beer and Irish whiskey were Irish culinary traditions. The sole Irish cooking tradition passed on to me in cooking school was the simple process of making soda bread and scones, certainly classified as "no brainers" because they require basic measuring, not much handling, and no yeast to worry about.

But who says you can't teach an old dog new tricks? The Irish possess a culinary heritage of hearty, homestyle comfort foods that we all have grown'to love, cherish and enjoy.

Our story begins at the Irish Import Shop at 5472 Shaefer in Dearborn. Owner Jack Derrig seems to have cornered the Irish market with his noted scones, fruitcakes, shortbread and "the only USDA-approved Irish sausage in the United States," says Derrig, host of his own Irish radio show on WMZK-Radio, 690 on the AM dial.

Visiting Derring whetted my appetite for more Irish foodlore. I found myself totally immersed in Irish food and customs when Julie Demery and Pam and Jerry Maloney invited me to share an evening meal of fine Irish smoked salmon, brown soda bread, an Irish fondue and ice cream with an Irish whiskey sauce.

CURRANT SCONES

- 2 cups white flour 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1/3 cup milk
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 egg, beaten well 1/2 cup currants
- 1 teaspoon fresh grated lemon

Preheat the oven to 450 degrees. Mix together the dry ingredients. Work in the butter with finger tips as in making a pie crust.

Add beater egg, milk, currants and lemon peel. Mix well. Turn onto a floured board and knead 6 times. Pat out on a board until 34 inch thick. Cut with a round cutter. Place scones on a lightly floured baking sheet and bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes. Place scones on a rack to cool.

Here is the recipe for one of the dishes featured at the upcoming Grand Irish Buffet at the Botsford

BEEF POT ROAST WITH GUINNESS STOUT

- 3-4 pounds English cut roast (chuck, rump, etc.)
- 1/4 cup white flour 1/2 tablespoons garlic powder 1/2 tablespoons fresh ground
- black pepper 2 tablespoons solid vegetable
- shortening
- large bay leaf 3 large onions, sliced
- 2-3 bottles Guinness Stout 6-8 smaller onions
- 6-8 carrots
- 6-8 medium potatoes, peeled
- 4-6 tablespoons butter 4-6 tablespoons white flour

Combine the 1/4 cup white flour with the pepper and garlic powder on a large plate. Roll the English

-out roast through the mixture, flouring well on all sides. Melt the solid vegetable shortening in a largedutch oven and then brown the roast in the Dutch oven on all sides. Add the three large onions (sliced). two bottles of Guinness Stout and the bay leaf. Cover and cook for 3-4 hours at 350 degrees.

This is much longer than usual. You want the meat to be "overdone" and fall apart when served.

During the last hour of cooking, add the carrots, potatoes, small onions and another bottle of Guinness if the liquid in the Dutch oven is low. When the roast is cooked, remove the vegetables and cover to keep warm.

Pour 4 cups of boiling water over the roast to add to the juice. Remove the roast, cover and keep Using remaining 4-6 tablespoons of butter and flour, make a roux by combining both and stirring them into the simmering liquid to make a gravy. The recipe serves 6-8 easily. Leftovers make a great stew.

Here's a great topping for ice cream, bread pudding or other Irish desserts.

IRISH WHISKEY SAUCE

- 1 cup sugar 1/3 cup water
- 1 cup very strong coffee 1 ounce Irish Whiskey

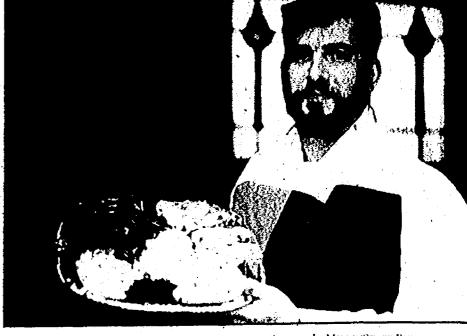

Use a heavy saucepan. Dissolve the sugar in the water and stir and continue cooking until the sugar caramelizes and turns golden (about 15-25 minutes). The mixture will get very hot. Use a long wooden spoon to stir mixture as plastic will melt and metal gets too hot. When the sugar caramel-

izes, remove it from the stove and stir in the very strong coffee.

Suggestion: Place the pot in the sink as the addition of the coffee will make the mixture bubble and possibly boil over. Stir in the coffee mixture and when it cools, stir in the Irish whiskey. Makes about 2 cups.

nearby West Bloomfield are officers in the Detroit Chapter of the Irish American Cultural Institute, and have started an Irish cooking school. They also worked with Creon Smith, newly anointed innkeeper and owner of the fabled Botsford Inn at Grand River and Eight Mile in Farmington Hills, to create a traditional Irish menu for a St. Patrick's Day feast, 5 p.m. Thursday, March 17.

Featuring more than 158 years of history and hospitality, the Botsford Inn's grand Irish buffet will please and delight even the pickiest of diners with a choice of more than 17 items, priced at a reasonable $14.95 per person. Reservations can be made by calling 474-4800. Seating begins at 5 p.m. and will be on a first come basis.

"Traditional Irish food is a lot like the food the Botsford Inn serves," said Julie Demery, "Irish cooks use a home country type of menu - not fancy but very good - calling for real butter, milk or cream. And it's very important to use these ingredients as the food came out of a farming culture and these high-quality items were usually in abundance," she said. Pam and Jerry Maloney are coconspirators in the Irish cooking school and have put together a nice little cookbook promoting Irish cuisine. "Next year we hope to attend the famed Ballymaloe cooking school in Dublin" said Pam, an assistant principal at Levy Middle School in Southfield. For more information on the Irish cookbook and future cooking schools, call Julie Demery, (810) 540-6687.

"Authentic Irish music coupled with the good food and charm of the old Botsford Inn will be a special family night and a fun way to spend St. Patrick's Day," said Smith. He was quick to add that holding the Irish feast at the Botsford Inn is especially fitting because of the Inn's ties to Henry Ford, whose family immigrated from Ireland and treasured their Irish heritago. Henry Ford's father, William, came from an area named Fairlane in Cork, hence the title "Fairlane" throughout Dearborn.

The Irish feast will be served in the rear coach house, which features inviting stained glass, big wood beams and comfy surroundings.

If you haven't been to the Botsford Inn recently, you'll certainly appreciate what Smith, formerly of the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth, has done with the place. The Botsford was once a stagecoach stop between Detroit and Lansing, and history buffs will appreciate the fact that the inn is listed in National Register of Historic Places, largely because of its ties with the Ford family.

Series offers '365 Ways' to enjoy food

BY KEELY WYGONIK SYAFF WRITER

One of the most popular cookbooks on kitchen shelves today -"365 Ways to Cook Chicken." by Cheryl Sedaker — started out as an editor's nightmare — a stack of recipes in no particular order.

"I took the job as a free-lance project," said Susan Wyler, who now edits the popular cookbook series. Wyler stopped by the Observer & Eccentric office recently to talk about the newest book in the series — "365 Easy Mexican Recipes," by Marge Poore, (HarperCollins Publishers, copyright, Jan. 26, 1994, $17.95).

The "365 recipe" series started as a single cookbook when packager John Boswell presented the idea to HarperCollins publisher Bill Shinker. A book of 365 hamburger recipes published in 1972 had sold over a million copies. In 1984, Boswell decided to commission a book of chicken recipes because he believed chicken had become the "new hamburger."

With Wyler as editor, the series was born. When Boswell approached Wyler to copackage the cookbooks, she left her job at "Food & Wine" magazine, became series editor, wrote her book "Country Farmhouse," and started a company, King Hill Productions; which packages cookbooks with Boswell.

During our interview, Wyler pointed out the "reader-friendly" virtues of the series — the books are made with a lie-flat binding; both the preparation time and cooking time are listed at the top of the recipe, the type is large enough to read from a cooking distance, the cover is washable. the steps are numbered, and you never have to turn a page to finish a recipe.

"These cookbooks are designed to be used in the kitchen," said Wyler, "Our new book '365 Easy Mexican Recipes' has authentic recipes and flavors with supermarket ingredients.

Wyler is a careful editor who spends hours with the author going over every recipe with a "fine tooth comb," then it goes to a specially trained copy editor for another look-over.

Other titles in the series include -- pasta, microwave recipes, one-dish meals, low-calories meals, barbecuing and grilling recipes, Italian, hamburger, chocolate desserts, snacks, wok, fish and shellfish, preparing for Christmas and cookies and

The series continues this spring with books containing '365" vegetarian, Chinese, cake and pie recipes.

"There's something communal about sitting around a table at meal time together," said Wylie who lived in Manhattan for nearly 20 years before moving to a country house in rural Pennsylvania. "I hope these books help people cook at home, and make it easy. The recipes won't take forever to make, and won't cost you an arm

CHICKEN TACO SALAD

2 tablespoons olive oil 1 pound skinless, boneless chickens breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces

- 1/2 teaspoon salt 2 tablespoons chili powder
- I medium head of iceberg lettuce, torn into bite-sized
- 1 (8 ounce) can kidney beans. rinsed and drained

- 1 (4-ounce) can sliced black ofives, drained
- 3 scallions, chopped 1 cup crushed tortilla chips
- 1 cup thick and chunky salsa 1 cup shredded Cheddar
- ' cheese (about 4 ounces) 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1 large tomato, chopped 1/4 cup chopped cilantro

In a medium skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Add chicken and cook, tossing, until white throughout but still juicy, 3 to 4 minutes. Add salt and chili powder. Cook, stirring, 1 minute to blend flavors. Remove from heat and set aside to cool slightly. (Chicken can be cooked ahead and refrigerated).

In a large bowl, place lettuce, kidney beans, olives, scallions, tortilla chips, reserved chicken, and salsa. Toss to mix.

TOO MUCH PROTEIN

When it comes to getting enough protein in the diet, more is not better. In fact, Americans consume altogether too much protein for their own good. This protein overkill is largely born of the attitudes of muscle builders and dieters who equate eating large amounts of protein with building stronger muscles and greater health. It is also wrong to assume that eating meat better fulfills the body's protein requirements than does a vegetarian diet. The fact is that the average American eats 100 grams of protein, or two to three times the Recommended Dietary Allowance for protein. Vegetarians or not, Americans eat more protein than their bodies require. The advantage that vegetable protein has over animal protein is that it can contain less fat and is cheaper.

The Good Food Co., a natural food supermarket, is a great place to learn about non-meat alternatives: There are delicious and easy things to try both in the convenience food section of the grocery aisles as well as the freezer sections. We are also happy to announce the upcoming Great American Meatout which is enjoyed annually around the country to educate people about the dietary alternatives available to them. Turn to speed-scratch cooking for fast meals

Getting a healthful, great-tastng meal on the table in a hurry used to be a challenge, but that's not true anymore. Enter speedscratch cooking, the newest way to save time without sacrificing aste of nutrition.

Speed-scratch cooking really is very simple. Convenience products pair up with "scratch" ingredients that cook quickly and are nutrition-smart.

Handy convenience products these days can be found in every aisle of the supermarket. In addition to familiar standbys such as prepared spaghetti sauce and pizza sauce, canned beans, bottled salad dressing and frozen vegetables, there are fresh salsa, recipeready canned tomatoes with Italian and Mexican flavors, combination herb and spice blends, ready-to-use salad greens and other produce items, flavored rice mixes, instant couscous and instant rice, to name just a few. And, many products offer reduced fat and/or reduced sodium counterparts.

Among the scratch ingredients designed for quick cooking are boneless chicken breasts, fish fillets, ground turkey and lean tender cuts of meat such as pork tenderloin and beef sirloin. Wheat germ fits in this category, too, as a coating for chicken and fish and as an extender for ground meat and poultry.

And don't overlook quick cooking methods such as microwaving. stir-frying and broiling. Other time-saving tips include: buying combination ingredients such as shredded cheese for tacos and Mexican-style stewed tomatoes: using quick-cooking grains such as angle hair pasta, orzo and couscous; spraying pans with nostick cooking spray to trim calories and shorten cleanup; cooking enough chicken, fish or meat for a second meal; and making meatballs or individual meat loaves.

Mini meat loaves with honeymustard sauce take advantage of several speed-scratch techniques. These savory little loaves cook in the microwave oven in just 10 to 12 minutes. The green onions can be bought presliced from the supermarket salad bar, and many markets carry a prepared honeymustard sauce. Lean ground beef gets a nutrition boost from wheat germ, a wholesome extender for ground meat and poultry.

Equally quick and great tasting are Cajun-style fish fillets. Convenient blackened fish seasoning from the supermarket spice section flavors the wheat germ and corn meal used to coat mild, farm-raised catfish fillets. To enhance their crispness, the fillets are lightly sprayed with no-stick cooking spray and baked at a high temperature. They bake in 5 to 10 minutes, just long enough to saute red bell pepper strips and thinly sliced leeks. Complete the meal with quick-cooking rice.

Other quick recipes are available free in the new brochure, Healthy Made Easy. For a copy, send your name and address to: Healthy Eating Made Easy, 332 S. Michigan Ave., Suite 900, Dept. N. Chicago, IL 60604. Offer good while supplies last.

Here are some recipés from the kitchens of Kretschmer wheat germ.

MINI MEAT LOAVES WITH HONEY-MUSTARD SAUCE

1½ pounds lean ground beef or turkey 34 cup Kretschmer original

1/2 cup chopped green onions ⅓ cup water

1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)

¼ teaspoon black pepper 1 egg white, slightly beaten

1/4 cup Dijon mustard 3 tablespoons honey

wheat germ

For meat loaves, combine first seven ingredients in large bowl; mix lightly, but thoroughly. Shape meat mixture into eight 3 by 2-inch loaves; place in 7 by 11-inch glass baking dish. Cover loosely with wax paper.

Microwave at high 10 to 12 minutes or until meat is no longer pink and juices run clear, rotating dish after 6 minutes; drain. Let stand 5 minutes before serving.

For sauce, combine mustard and honey; mix well. Or, for added convenience, use ready prepared honeymustard sauce. Serve sauce over meat loaves.

Conventional oven directions: Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Prepare recipe as directed above; place meat loaves in 7- by 11-inch glass baking dish. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until meat is no longer pink and juices run clear. Yield 8 Servings

Whole-grain bread perfect for breakfast

AP — A sweet ribbon of brown sugar laces its way through this wholesome wheat and rye breud. You'll love its whole-grain goodness toasted for breakfast and topped with a dab of melting butter. This recipe calls for small loaf pans, but you can also bake the loaves in four 8- by 4- by 2-inch pans for 35 to 40 minutes. To freeze, wrap the loaves in freezer wrap, seal, label and freeze for up to 6 months.

WHEAT SWIRL BREAD

4½ to 5 cups all-purpose flour 2 packages active dry yeast 2 cups milk

1/2 cup honey

1/4 cup margarine or butter 1 teaspoon salt

1 cup whole-wheat flour 1/2 cup rye flour

1/2 cup toasted wheat germ 1/4 cup margarine or butter, softened 3/3 cup packed brown sugar

In a medium mixing bowl combine 2 cups of the all-purpose flour and the yeast; set aside. In a medium saucepan heat milk, honey, 1/4 cup margarine or butter, and salt until warm (120 degrees F to 130 degrees F) and margarine is melted. Add milk mixture to flour mixture;

add egg. Beat with an electric mixer on low speed for 30 seconds, scraping bowl constantly. Beat on high for 3 minutes. Using a wooden spoon, stir in wheat and rye flours, wheat germ and as much remaining all-purpose flour as you can.

Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface. Knead in enough all-purpose flour to make a moderately stiff dough (6 to 8 min utes). Place in a greased bowl; turn once. Cover and let rise in a warm place until nearly double (114

Punch dough down. Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface; divide in half. Cover; let rest for 10 minutes. Roll each half to a 15-inch square. Spread with softened margarine; sprinkle with brown sugar. Roll up jelly-roll style; cut into thirds. Seal ends; place in six greased 51/2- by 3- by 2-inch pans. Cover; let rise in a warm place until double (about 45 minutes). Bake in a 350-degree F oven about 30 minutes or until loaves sound hollow when tapped. Remove from pans. Cool on wire racks. MUSIC NOTES hen people in the United States see Eve's Plum name for the first time, chances are they recognize it as resembling the name of the woman who played Jan Bradv on the Brady Bunch. Abroad, few make the connection, although they have their own interpretation. That's fine to guitarist Michael Kotch. "That's cool because then they realize that we're not some band with a totally obscure name." Eve's Plum was in town to play the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor March 11 with a band with an equally intriguing name, Tripping Daisy.

sually record companies have to beg radio stations to play singles by new acts. With Cry of Love, their label had to tell them not to play their song "Peace Pipe" until the band was ready. "Radio jumped on it," lead singer Kelly Holland said.

"They embraced it right away. We had to tell them 'Don't play it just yet'.'

Cry of Love and their label wanted to make sure that their marketing and touring strategies were set first. Since releasing "Peace Pipe," Cry of Love has been repeatedly been told of their uncanny resemblance to early 1980s bands. Holland isn't insulted the least bit. After all, "rock 'n' roll is an apple that doesn't fall very far from the tree." Bands copy each other and add a personalized tinge to it, he added.

Cry of Love played Harpo's on Friday, March lind Melon proved at their Wednesday, March 9, show at the State Theatre in Detroit that they are more than a one-hit wonder. Blind Melon, performing their best Detroit show to date, was able to keep up the energy of the near-capacity crowd longer than the length of their acoustic hit "No Rain." The band sounded fuller and seemed more confident on stage - especially lead singer Shannon Hoon show frequently joked around with fans. (Although most of what the soft-spoken Hoon said was inaudible.) During previous stops to the area with acts such as Neil Young, Guns 'N Roses and Public Image. Ltd.. the band and its music tended to get lost in the venues. This time around Blind Melon's music sounded fuller while Hoon's vocals and Christopher Thorn's acoustic guitar came across clearly. The 1%-hour show also included a near-perfect rendition of "Tones of Home."

eading through the lyrics of Carter the . Unstoppable Sex Machine's latest album "Post-Historic Monsters," you'd think that they were telepathic. In the song "Commercial Suicide Part 1" the band writes "Throw your Gameboys in the fire. Bono (of U2) ain't the new messiah. Michael Jackson is a liar." "With that line, it was written before we knew anything about his supposed activities," vocalist Jim Bob said about the song. He thought to use the word only because it "rhymed with desire."

When Carter USM comes to St. Andrew's Hall at 8 p.m. Sunday, March 27, fans will notice an additional member - a drummer. Previously the band used recorded drum tracks during its live show, something that went over well in the United Kingdom but caused controversy here. "Everyone accepts it," he said of UK fans. "In the States, musicians and fans didn't like it. They felt we were cheating and somehow wrong. . . . Now I can't see how we never had one." The New York band Lotion opens the show. Call (313) 961-MELT for more information.

nsigned bands are eligible to win a gig in Japan through the 1994 "Soundcheck -The Yamaha Music Showcase," which begins in the summer. Bands in any genre that play originals and are not signed to a nationally distributed record label are eligible to enter.

Last year, East Lansing's The Verve Pipe won the national contest and played at MusicQuest, an international pop and rock showcase in Japan. To receive an entry form, call Soundcheck at (800) 451-7625. The deadline is May 31.

rant Lee Buffalo is a band that is definitely benefitting from a general admission seating policy. The band will open for Pearl Jam at the Masonic Temple in Detroit on Saturday, March 19, and at Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor on Sunday, March 20. Fans are expected to rush in to the venues to secure good seats shortly after the doors open - plenty of time before Grant Lee Buffalo hits the stage.

Grant Lee Phillips, the jangly alternative rock band's guitarist and vocalist, never thought about it like that.

LOOKING AHEAD

What to watch for in Street Scene next week:

■ Christina Fuoco reports on making it on the music scene when you're under age. John Monaghan takes a look at the alternative movie scene.

Fishbone — It's in the 'Swim

■ Last year was an eventful year for Fishbone — some of it good, some of it bad. But it's been the release of their album "Give a Monkey a Brain and He'll Swear He's the Center of the Universe" that has broadening their ska-based following.

By Christina Fuoco

The flurry of activity is overwhelming Angelo Christopher Moore, lead vocalist/saxophonist for Fishhone.

Answering the phone in his Richmond, Va., hotel room, Moore doesn't sound quite together.

"I got chicken in my hand; the phone's tangling up . . . all kinds of confusing (stuff)." He drops the phone and momentarily gets his act together.

He picks up the phone and begins chatting about the last year. For Fishbone, it has been an endless stream of events - good and bad. They released the album "Give a Monkey a Brain and He'll Swear He's the Center of the Universe" to critical acclaim. The syndicated rock radio station Z-Rock picked up on the single "Swim," broadening their primarily ska-based following.

During the summer they co-headlined the Lollapalooza Festival and afterward gigged around Europe with Stone Temple Pilots and the Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Behind the scenes Fishbone bassist Norwood Fisher faced charges for allegedly kidnapping the band's former guitarist Kendall Rey Jones from a religious group. Fisher was later acquitted.

That incident, Moore said, is now filed away as part of the band's ongoing transformation process. With Jones' heavy metal influences in tow, the California band has slowly folded hard rock in with its ska sound.

"It's been a big progression; it's been a transformation. We've transformed into something," he said. "We just play different kinds of music. On each album, there's a different focus on different kinds of music.'

John Bigham eventually replaced

Upon hearing that "Swim" was one of the highlights of Lollapalooza, Moore's spirits are lifted.

"Yeah? Cool. This time we won't have the (mechanical) fish but we're still gonna have 'The pool is open,' set, so if you have any requests He takes care of all that. It's hard for me to get in a request and I'm in the band.'

After the tour, the band is taking a well-deserved break. There is preliminary talk about Fishbone's next cording to Moore, their label, Columbia, wants them to do a greatest hits package featuring remixes of older songs and a few covers.

They can't lose what Fishbone has to offer them.'

Fishbone performs with Kyuss and Biohazard at Saturday, March 19, at St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Tickets are $11.50 in advance. Doors open at 9 p.m. Must be 18 with ID to enter. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT or (810) 645-6666.

HEAVEN'S WISH

BY MARK GALLO

Guitarist/vocalist Steve Gornall and his high-energy Blue Collar Blues Band have been local fixtures for years. From Sisko's to Mr. Lou's to Sully's, where they supplied my first taste of live music for the year, patrons have been lined up and geared up for Gornall's revved up take on the rockin' blues.

None of the acclaim that's come his way, most especially since the release of the extraordinary "Steve Gornall & The Blue Collar Blues Band" disc on the local Blues Factory label, has gone to his head. Like most overnight sensations, he's been at this for awhile.

In the early 1970s, his band Nature, which was the pride of Livonia and opened for local illuminaries like Bob Seger and Ted Nugent, gave him his first taste of fame. He traces his enthusiasm and involvement, however, back to the seventh grade, when he and Robert Noll, another of the main players in the local blues community, started jamming.

Noll went to Chicago and worked with legends like Albert Collins and Big Twist. Gornall spent a decade in the trenches of the Hollywood cutthroat Top 40 and rock world of the 1970s-80s, where he worked with "whoever would pay" him. Among those were Paul Warren, former Doors keyboardist Ray Manzarek and Richard Marx, with whom he appeared on that bastion of pop music, "American Bandstand." By the time he got back home, he was ready to dive head-first into the honesty of blues music.

The Blue Collar Blues Band, anchored by drummer Vinnie Scalabrino and bassist Tim Garrick, and featuring the secret weapon of harmonica playing icon Kenny Welk, is a band that burns in a big way, and frontman Gornall is as a tight bundle of music energy. Wearing a wide variety of influences on his sleeve, from Duane Allman

to Stevie Ray Vaughan to Buddy Guy, Freddie King and Eddy Clearwater, he's a wholly unique player in his own right. A writer of classical proportions, he's absorbed the past 30 years of rock and blues guitar heritage, distilled it and alluded to it all over the new disc.

"All You Gotta Do," for instance, has an opening right out of Jimi Hendrix's "Belly Button Window," while "Daddy's Little Girl" takes the Chuck Berry highway and "Red Hot" works a CCR "Born on the Bayou" groove into the introduction. On "7-11 Sunset Strip," the band works in a style that would do Little Charlie and the Nightcats proud, and "Heart on the Ground" comes straight out of an Otis Rush bag. But cuts like "Runnin'" and the incendiary instrumental that is "Busy Guitar" more than adequately demonstrate, Gornall is a wholly unique picker. It's a style that's turned many a sleepy club into an SRO hot spot for

Unfortunately, he has been growing weary of the local scene. By the time you read this, Gornall, one of the baddest guitar players Detroit has ever called their own, is West Coast-bound once again. While he's quick to praise Blues Factory for all they've done for him, he does not want his reputation to begin and end in a handful of clubs in the Detroit area, and on a small label that only has so many resources available for promotion.

His plan is to look up old connections and acquaintances, like John Mayall and guitarist Coco Montoya, and see about getting signed with a big label with a big budget — at least big enough to support a national tour, either in clubs or as an opening act in the

With Gornall in California, the Detroit blues scene certainly is feeling the loss of a vibrant link. ■ Wearing a wide variety of influences on his sleeve, from Duane Allman to Stevie Ray Vaughan to Buddy Guy . . . he's a wholly unique player in his own right.

The remaining members of the Blue Collar Blues Band have hardly slipped under the back porch, though. They will continue to perform.

The Blue Collar Blues Band will perform Friday, March 18, at the Sports (A-50s Bar & Grill), 166 Maple, Wyandotte (285-5060); and Saturday, March 19, at Sierra Station, 15110 Mack, Grosse Pointe Park (822-1270) for more information.

"That's true. I've gotten to shows just as the opening band is bowing and saying, 'Thank you.' I'm sure that they will bail as soon as we leave," the affable Phillips said. "But then again I'm not always grounded in reality."

The band took a break from recording its follow-up to "Fuzzy" when it became clear that they were going to do a few Midwestern dates with Pearl Jam. Both area shows are sold out.

ith the Melease of the album "Modern Life is Rubbish," Blur is hoping that their fans will be able to see their musical focus a little clearer. The English pop band feels the public got the wrong idea about them after they released their 1991 aibum "Leisure' and the single "There's No Other Way." It's "something with not a great deal of depth," the disheveled lead singer Damon said matter of factly during a press conference at Chicago's Cabaret Metro club. "Modern Life is Rubbish" is lyrically more mature and musically sound. The opening track "For Tomorrow" features the Duke String Quartet under Blur's lush Beatlesque harmonies. The band also retreated to the vocal style in the shamelessly addictive "Sunday Sunday" and "Chemical

It doesn't take long to figure out the band's opinion of modern rock. (Start with the title "Modern Life is Rubbish" and the harmonies.) "We made a conscious decision to remove ourselves from all possible comparisons. Here we are now, in our own pigeonhole."

'Gilbert' searches for an audience

By John Monaghan

You can't accuse Johnny Depp of wimping out on film roles. The pretty boy actor whose name sounds like it was developed by a Hollywood agent has starred in John Waters' "Cry Baby" and Tim Burton's"Edward Schsor hands," among others,

Add to the list "What's Eating Gilbert Grape," an offbeat and often moving new film which will hopefully stick around long enough to find an audience.

Depp's Gilbert is: a teenager with way too much responsibility. He works at the local grocery not so much for the job opportunity but because he can lug home several bags of groceries each night to feed his 500-pound mother (Darlene Cates).

She can't cook or even move from the couch to eat, so Gilbert and his two sisters literally bring the dinner table to her. While he loves his mother, Gilbert shares the town's fascination with her freakishness and even hoists neighborhood kids up the window to get a gander.

On top of this, Gilbert is saddled with Arnie (Leonardo Di-Caprio), his almost 18-year-old, mentally handicapped brother. The boy has a bad habit of climbing the local water tower until Gilbert, usually surrounded by a gathering crowd of townspeople, can talk him down.

Depp, sporting long hair and an almost visible weight on his shoulders, looks at home in the delapidated farmhouse in Endora, Iowa. He gains a new perspective from a worldly and beguiling young woman, played by Juliette Lewis, who stops in Endora while her grandmother's travel trailer is stalled for repairs on the outskirts

Lewis, the young actress so memorable in Scorsese's "Cape Fear" and Woody Allen's "Hus-

Gilbert to live a bit for himself and not just for others.

Stealing scenes from Lewis and a whale-sized actress is no easy task, but Leonardo DiCaprio is so uninhibited and all over the place that you can't take your eyes off of him. He has copped an Oscar nomination for best supporting actor and, if there's any justice at all in Hollywood, he'll win.

"Gilbert Grape" is the latest from Swedish director Lasse Hallstrom, whose bizarrely titled "My Life as a Dog" was an equally unusual account of childhood that developed a minor cult following. Halstrom turns America's heartland into a place that is both bracingly realistic and also decidedly surreal.

Endora, according to the film, is a small town on the brink of commercialization. The locally owned grocery where Gilbert works is constantly threatened by the monster supermarket across the street, where assistant managers bustle through the aisles and bands and Wives," gives the role a tank full of live lobsters attracts a mystical quality. She inspires customers to the meat department.

> Gilbert's best friend, a local lawncare guy, dreams of owning a Burger Barn, which he considers "on the cutting edge of the fast food industry" because it uses Canola oil for the fries. His other buddy, a mortician's son played by the ever-quirky Crispin Glover. drops less-than-subtle hints about elderly relatives in the hopes of bolstering a sagging family business.

> Although it wanders sometimes simlessly, "Gilbert Grape" is a slice-of-life movie that will probably stick with you a little longer than most. It has an engaging sense of humanity that is at once tragic, life affirming and unforgettable.

> If you have a comment for John Monaghan, call him at 953-2047. mailbox 1866, on a touch-tone phone, or write to him care of Street Scene, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150.

Greens are keen for spring scenes hink St. Patrick's Day, think the Trinity, think the shamrock leaf. Though it may seem oddly circumspect, when I think of St. Patrick's Day, I think primarily of color -green beer, green leprechauns, green clover and ultimately, green attire.

As a retail writer, I attach new meaning to every holiday. Easter inspires bonnets, Valentine's Day conjures rose-strewn gifts and, alas, St. Patrick's Day affords the opportunity to preview spring fashions in shades of green.

Luckily, green is in for spring. And amazingly, those who attach names to colors in the fashion industry have outdone themselves with the usually generic green. Forget hunter or emerald or olive. The new greens are as vivid as spruce or lime or apple, as soft as leaf or willow or meadow, and as pungent as basil or pine, sage or spearmint.

Greens of spring

Imagine a linen jacket the color of seaweed, a pear-hued straw hat or a silk jacquard vest in jade. A day of window-shopping will reveal all of these greens and more.

I discovered a wide-brimmed spring green picture hat by Oscar de la Renta at Jacobson's and a new selection of palm green handbags at the Coach leather goods store in the Somerset Collection. Designer David Dart interprets linen knit jackets, long vests and crinkle skirts in bay green at Hudson's. I joined shoppers at two area boutiques to uncover the newest green garb. At Maggie & Me, 924 W. Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth, the original designs are always fun and imaginative. The outfit pictured pairs a willow green floral vest ($88) with moss-colored shorts ($52). The black T is trimmed and tied at the shoulder with a contrasting floral print ($38). Pockets combine vintage fabrics for a contemporary look that bespeaks a bygone era.

"All of the clothes here are whimsical, creative, feminine," said a woman named Katie from Ann 🎜 Arbor. "They inspire you to go back to your wardrobe and use bits of things to create new things, an environment." Katie tried a plaid skirt in aqua, turquoise and yellow, trimmed in peach satin ribbon and lace.

Pink with green

The newly opened Fini of Farmington, a romantic boutique at 33318 Grand River, is a vision in pastel greens and pinks. The walls are sponged in soft pink paint, and a mint green sofa sits atop a lavender rug. Dressing rooms are opulently draped in pink and green floral fabrics.

"I love this store," gushed Mary Gooden of Detroit. "It's just what I've been looking for. Nice clothes and nice prices." Her friend, Sharon Brown, agreed as they browsed through the racks. Sharon's favorite outfit was an Indian cotton batik bustier, bolero and pant ensemble in emerald green-splashed with bright flowers and gold beading ($110). "That's mine," she said. Other standouts include a pine green Edwardian velvet-and-lace party dress with a jeweled bodice, a sueded rayon tunic and palazzo pants in pale celery ($129), a rosepatterned and tiered gauze dress, overrun with leafy green vines ($99), and a pastel green lace tunic and crinkle skirt ($99). Accessorize with a charm necklace, bracelet and earrings finished in an antique green wash ($24.99/set). Think flora and fauna and fruits and herbs when looking for your new spring wardrobe. The most enviable green? Sage, definitely.

Mary Matalin talks politics in Hudson's fashion show series

When Hudson's announced that Mary Matalin would be spring's guest speaker for its Challenging the Future series, the phones began ringing and the event sold out in two days. Matalin's presentation didn't disappoint the crowd.

By Susan DeMaggio

ary Matalin is a lot of things, and that's why Detroit-area women drove to Hudson's Oakland Mall store March 5 to hear her speak at an 8 a.m. breakfast

Matalin didn't disappoint them. Her material came from the 1992 presidential campaign where, as George Bush's deputy campaign manager, she emerged as a vocal and controversial defender of the president and his policies.

It came from experiences on her new weeknight talk show, "Equal Time," where, with co-host Jane Wallace, newsmakers of the day air insider views. And it came from her threemonth-old marriage to Bill Clinton's campaign manager, James Carvell.

"I love this guy," she said defending her marriage to the opposition. "I'm crazy for this big-taxing, bigspending, redistributionist dema-

The good-natured putdowns continued when she was asked about the Bushes. "I had lunch with President Bush recently. And he looks fit and tan. He still refers to Clinton as 'What's His Name,' I really like the Bushes. They are good citizens . . . true public servants.

Despite the rigors of politics, they out great. They are not of this era, however. Bush wasn't a good speechmaker. He didn't understand TV.

"He told me that Barbara was ready to publish a book on her memoirs. Barb's making all this money now, he joked. 'And she's waving this independence in my face.'

But the meat of her message was to warn the audience of the dangers of emerging "Junk Journalism," which Matalin blamed for the "firing" of George Bush.

"The lines between hard news journalism and tabloid journalism are blurred," she said. "Reporters in the print media are trying to compete with the electronic media, and they can't get the news out as fast as television or radio can. So they are turning to news analysis and opinion reporting to sell their papers."

Running with the pack

Matalin said a "pack mentality" exists in newsrooms where the same viewpoints are reinforced in papers across the country by editors because, "How can we run a story about Bush that's positive, when it's running on the wire services that Bush is having a bad day?"

She cautioned that when stories about various national health plans managed to raise five kids who turned | are published, they are often about who's for what plan, instead of the contents of the plans or their ramifications.

"You think you are getting news," ighthalin said. "But what you are getting is horse race and poll stories.

Who's on what side? Who's winning?

She insisted her views weren't sour grapes and quoted from an article by Kraft's crowd: The gals from the office (Kraft General Foods in Farmington Hills) bought a row of tickets when they heard Mary Matalin would be speaking. They are: Cheryl Fogel of West Bloomfield (left). Eva Reame of Northville, Eileen Leggatt of Lathrup Village and Marge Thompson of Royal Oak.

political journalism guru David Broder, who also warns about the trivialism of substance by today's media.

Matalin said the country's best minds are forced to communicate complex issues to the public in 9second sound bites that can make the 4 p.m. evening news deadlines.

"This has led to the media giving a very cynical public a very distorted picture of our society," she said. "Yet in order to preserve democracy, we need participation by citizens who are informed and interested."

Matalin rocked the crowd by revealing that reports of Clinton's $200 haircut that allegedly stopped air traffic for two hours were untrue. "The incident never happened," she said.

And she insisted that an incident where an editor claimed Bush was so out of touch with the masses that he didn't know what a grocery scanner was also never happened.

Check it out

"So I leave you with this advice," Matalin said. "The next time you want to boot out a school board member or remove a state representative because of a reported incident, call up their office and find out if what you read or heard really happened."

Her views were appreciated by sisters Ruth Rosetti of Shelby Township and Connie Cowper of Clarkston.

"I think she's so intelligent and refreshing," Rosetti said. "I like her show on CNBC. She's wonderful. I just wish she would have told us how to get the truth if we can't depend on the media."

"But she did," Cowper said. "She gave you something to think about while you're reading or listening to the news."

Judy Elliot of Farmington Hills came to hear Matalin with some friends from the Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn.

"I appreciated her perspective on how information is given and received today," she said. "She certainly gave us all something to think about."

Practical programs

Hudson spokeswoman Chris Morrisroe said that's what Hudson's semi-annual Challenging the Future series was all about. Of course, the department store wants to show its seasonal merchandise to the audience most likely to buy it, but it also wants to give customers interesting programs that affect lifestyles.

'Matalin was brought in through the Washington Speaker's Bureau, and she will eventually address all three of our markets - Detroit, Chicago and Minneapolis," Morrisroe said.

"These programs are targeted to win the loyalty of career-oriented customers who, in response forms, indicate that these are the kinds of programs and fashions they want to see.'

Morrisroe said shoppers have asked Hudson's to bring in Oprah Winfrey next.

After Matalin spoke, a 134-outfit spring fashion show hit the runway, including a large-size model for the first time. Morrisroe said customers want to see real people wearing real clothes and Hudson's is glad to oblige, "because that's what we're all about," she said.

After the show, (and a boxed breakfast that included a pastry basket filled with fresh berries, a tart with imported cheeses, and a cinnamon scone with flavored butters), guests made their way through Hudson's with coupons for discounts and cosmetic makeovers.

Hudson's also used the occasion to debut the new espresso bar on the second floor. Caffè Giò. This new European-style deli and coffeehouse features drinks and light menus-to-go as well as cappuccino, expresso drinks, Italian sodas and desserts. There is counter seating for five. Four new coffee flavors are served daily.

She said Hit Or Miss sales were greatest in woman's running suits, adding, "We had the prettiest joggers in the best prices."

Another winning store, Athletic X-Press won a star for sales increases of 5.6 percent. Chris Holmes of Westland manages the

"We had great sales last year because we sell merchandise that is really hot these days with people of all ages. Athletic apparel is really cool," Holmes said. Ford Motor Co. helps local students explore careers

Ford Motor Co. is helping nearly 300 area high school students explore career opportunities as automotive scientists and engineers through an interactive educational program.

The objective of Ford's High School Science and Technology Program is to provide students and teachers with an increased awareness of technical careers and the importance of science and math in industry.

Throughout the year students from 100 local schools attend educational workshops at various Ford facilities. Sessions are on select Saturday mornings and focus on current topics in the areas of chemistry and physics, automotive materials, electronics, engines, transmissions and manufacturing. A typical day's agenda includes lectures, tours of Ford labs, scientific demonstrations and hands-on activities.

"We are in our 10th year of hosting this program, which is run on a total volunteer basis.' said program coordinator Steve Lucchetti. "Ford is proud of the program's success and its outstanding participation by both students and employees."

Prior to each workshop, teachers are encouraged to invite several of their students to attend the latest session. Workshops are also open to select students from the Detroit Area Pre-College Engineering Program, an educational outreach program for students preparing for careers in engineer-

In addition, advanced students attending three of this year's six sessions are eligible to compete for summer internships, in which they assist Ford engineers and scientists with active research and engineering projects. The Ford Research Lab also sponsors summer fellowships for high school teachers through the Michigan Industry Initiatives for Science and Mathematics Education, a program administered by

Goins propels Rockets to title

■ Westland John Glenn captured the Class A district boys basketball championship Friday night at Romulus with a 59-57 win over Wayne.

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Haven't we gone through this before? The Westland John Glenn football team made a sterling run in the state playoffs last fall, and now the basketball team is starting to make the same kind of noises.

Riding the scintillating 32-point performance of 6-foot-4 senior forward Tony Goins, the Rockets are off to the regionals after beating rival Wayne Memorial for the second time this season, 59-57, Friday at Romulus.

The district champion Rockets, now 18-4 overall, will play Adrian in the Class A regional semifinals, 7 p.m. Thursday at Jackson High School.

"Coming into this program last year I wanted us to earn the respect of being a smart, disciplined basketball team instead of a shake and bake type of ballclub," said Glenn secondyear coach Mike Schuette, who went with his five starters the entire way. "I thought tonight we played under control. There weren't too many times where we went one-on-one."

The Rockets shot 50 percent from the field and committed just 12 turn-

Goins hit 12 of 17 shots from the floor, including a pair of threepointers. He also made six of seven free throws and grabbed 12 rebounds.

Teammate Guy Rucker, a 6-9 junior center, added 15 points, 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots.

"Goins and Rucker are just really tough," said Wayne coach Chuck Henry, who congratulated the victorious Rockets in their locker room afterwards. "We had a difficult time matching up with either or both of

"Tony was the best tonight. He's strong off the dribble and strong off the offensive and defensive boards. He did it all."

It's over: John Glenn's Tony Goins (dark jersey) proclaims the Rockets are No. 1 as the final buzzer sounds during the Class A district championship game Friday at Romulus. Goins scored 32 points as Glenn beat Wayne, 59-57.

It was a doglight from start to finish.

Wayne led 12-11 after one quarter, but Glenn took a 29-26 lead at intermission.

In the third quarter, Glenn's Savon Hubbard scored a hoop with 1:55 left to give his team a 41-34 advantage.

But Wayne responded with seven unanswered points, capped by Gerald Adams' bucket with three seconds to go, knotting the count at 41-all.

Wayne twice led by a point, 52-51 and 54-53, with 2:38 and 1:45 remaining in the fourth. But Rucker's short turn-around with 1:22 put Glenn ahead to stay. Albert Jones' drive down the middle gave the Rockets a three-point cushion, 57-54, with 45 seconds left.

A pair of free throws by Goins then made it 59-54, but Wayne's Jameel Wooden drilled a three-pointer with 14 seconds left, pulling the Zebras to within two.

Wayne fouled Hubbard on the ensuing inbounds pass. The Glenn guard missed the front end of a oneand one.

Wooden came down and fired up a long three-pointer that missed the mark. Courtney Howard grabbed the rebound and tried to hit the rim, but the ball was partially blocked.

Goins, fittingly, grabbed the rebound as time expired.

"I've always been the kind of coach who is the first to congratulate the other team and other players," Schuette said. "But on this night I have to say that Tony Goins is as good as anybody I've seen on this side of the state.'

Wayne, which bowed out at 16-6 overall, got 13 points from Howard, a 5-11 senior guard. Wooden, a sophomore, and Adams, a senior, each add-

The Zebras hit 22 of 55 shots from the floor (40 percent) and committed only 11 turnovers.

"We hit some big shots, we just needed one more," Henry said, "All I remember is two teams fighting hard and trying to advance in the tournament.

With the rapidly improving Rucker becoming more and more of a force each time out, Glenn appears to have an excellent shot at winning the regional, which also includes Ann Arbor Pioneer and Taylor Center.

"Our perimeter people are realizing they can have a great game, and yet get the ball to our big people." Schuette said.

But even Rucker's solid outing palled in comparison to his teammate

"Tony played a real good game, he stepped up when most of us couldn't get into a rhythm offensively," the junior center said.

A little redemption

Shamrocks return to state championship, win with ease

By Steve Kowalski Staff Writer

Redford Catholic Central senior goalie Mike Brusseau missed the disappointment but not the celebra-

Brusseau, who did not play as a junior when CC lost in the Class A state final, helped the Shamrocks win their first ever state championship Saturday at the Flint IMA.

Brusseau stopped 31 of 32 shots as the Shamrocks dominated Midland and gave the Chemics their first loss of the season, 8-1.

A shutout would have been a fitting ending to Brusseau's spectacular season, but the Chemics scored with 12 seconds left as Josh Tauren slapped home a rebound after Brusseau stopped David Meinhardt from point-blank range.

Brusseau, who played for a Midget AAA travel team last year, joined his teammates in a victory lap around the ice afterward.

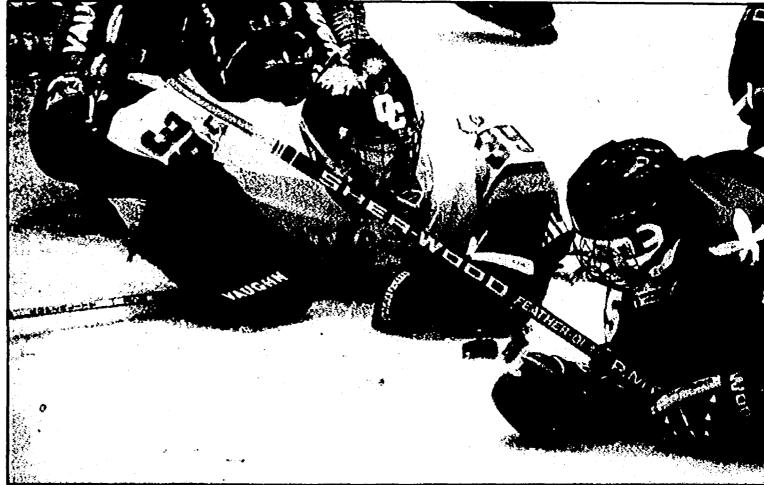

"Nothing beats this feeling," said Brusseau, who watched the Shamrocks lose last year's state final to Alpena, 2-1. "When you go all the way, you should have a little time on the ice to celebrate. It's good to know your last high school game, you win the state. Coach (Gordie St. John) is great. As soon as he came here, he picked up the team. He's an excellent coach."

In the midst of the celebration, the Shamrocks doused St. John with a bucket of water.

"I've been around long enough to know to always have a change of clothes," St. John said.
The Shamrocks, who finished 24-

1-2 overall, led 2-0 after one period and took a commanding 6-0 lead after two periods. The only competition remaining in the third period was the one taking place between the cheering sections.

It looked like CC won that battle, too, as its cheering section was a little more vocal than Midland's sec-

Couture scored on a backhand shot at 6:34 to put CC up 5.0 and Eric Vaquera scored on a shot from the point at 9:08 for a 6-0 lead.

Hunt and Gonzalez scored goals midway through the third period. "The first time we got together we

Ladywood romps into state quarterfinals

By Brad Emons

Going to the state volleyball finals has become old hat for Livonia Ladywood coach Tom Teeters, but it will new experience for most of his players.

The Blazers made quick work of Ferndale (15-3, 15-1) and Catholic League rival Farmington Hills Mercy (15-6, 15-0) to win the Class A regional crown Saturday at Berkley.

Ladywood, 38-5 overall, will face the Bay City Western regional champion at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the state quarterfinals at Portage Central High School.

Teeters, who won state crowns in 1988 and '89, is back in the final eight after a one-year absence.

two years ago, but basically it's new kids, new reactions and new fun . . . it makes it all worthwhile," Teeters said. "I never get tired of it."

Some teams, however, are tired of seeing Ladywood, especially Mercy, which lost to its Central Division foe for the fourth time this season.

ship game with a 15-7, 9-15, 15-12 upset of Plymouth Salem in the semifinals. The Marlins then looked like a hot team as they jumped out to a 6-1 lead in the opening game against the Blazers.

But Ladywood regrouped and took control, reeling off 29 consecutive points to win the match.

"Mercy was serving real tough, but from our experiences in the past, we've been behind before and come back," Teeters said. "We were used to it. There was no panic. We just had to do a better job of serving and serve receiv-

Mercy started the day by upending Salem, as 5-11 senior Christiane Grant had 13 kills and five blocks. Jill Higgins, who was moved to the right side attack after the Catholic League playoffs, added seven kills. Sonhomore Jamesea Emerson, who had the game-winning kill, finished with

"We've had a new lineup and changed everything since the Catholic League playoffs," Mercy coach Peggy Spengler said. "Jill is very comfortable on the right side even though she's a great passer on the left side. She's found a

"We've done well all season defensively, but our offense has let us down.'

It was a downer, meanwhile, for Salem, which bowed out with a 38-7-6 overall record.

Paula Dombrowski had 10 kills in the losing cause, while Karen Gundry and Jamey Viau added six and five, respectively.

"We beat them at Schoolcraft (Invitational), but it seemed today we couldn't get a break," Salem co-coach Brian Gilles said. "We never really got into the flow. We never really got that big block all day.'

Mercy also frustrated Salem with several key digs.

"They did things other teams couldn't do against us," Salem cocoach Allie Suffety said. "Serve reception gave us trouble and we passed balls out. We got too excited and our back row overplayed some balls.

"But the kids played well and we're happy with the season."

Riding a wave of momentum, underdog Mercy appeared to mean business during the early stages of the championship match against Ladywood.

But the tide quickly turned.

"We've been having some inner team turmoil early in the season and thought we had it taken care of by the end of the season,' Spengler said. "But all the sudden it reared its ugly head again. And when it happens, we're just not the kind of team we should be. A lot of it has to do with our confidence level. We can't have people getting on each other."

Canton youth denied by sanctioning quirk

HARRISON

Any bowler who is sanctioned and rolls a perfect game gets awarded a 300 ring from either ABC, WIBC or YABA. Such was not the case for 16year-old Terry Zelek of Canton who rolled a 300 game last December at Town Country land. Had he bowled it in his W.W.Y.T.C. traveling league, he would have received the ring from Y.A.B.A.

But this happened in the Saturday Majors, which is under the sanctioning of M.B.A.P., the Michigan Bowling Proprietors group, which does not have any provision for a ring even though the members pay a sanction fee in that organization. This just does not seem right, and it is the youth bowlers who are the Last Monday the press party for the U.S. Open Pro Bowling Tournament was held at the Northfield Hilton in Troy.

On hand were representives of the local newspapers in which bowling is reported, some of the many sponsors of the event and representatives of the local bowling associations, including Tom McKay, immediate past President of ABC.

Two of the touring pros on hand were Randy Pederson and Robert Lawrence in addition to the one-andonly Gene Stus, who has been the top bowler on the senior tour lately. Bill Strike, general manager of Bowl One Lanes in Troy, was the genial host of the activities, and it is mainly through his efforts that event has been brought to our area. There are already over 1,000 entrants in the pro-am, which will start on Friday, April 1, with the ABC-TV finals on Saturday, April 9.

Oak Lanes in Westland will have an Easter Hunt Ladies Singles event at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, March 29. The cost is $9 and free baby sitting is available. Call 422-7420 for details.

No. 2 Burton-Atherton fends off Clarenceville bid more fans than the basketball

BY STEVE KOWALSKI

Four of Burton-Atherton's girls volleyball players will play next ture. year for Tim Bearden at Flint Mott Community College.

Until then, they have some unfinished business playing high school volleyball for Bearden, who doubles as Atherton's coach.

The defending Class C state champion Wolverines eliminated stubborn Livonia Clarenceville, 15-9, 16-14, in Saturday's regional championship at Goodrich High School.

The four seniors who will be attending Mott, Christine Skinner, Melissa Pale, Natalie Hatch and Laura Hummel, look like they'll Atherton's only losses this year have come to Class A powers Livonia Ladywood and Temperance-Bedford.

"At Atherton, volleyball is the ble matching up with Atherton in sport," Bearden said, "We get games.

Zemke, one of five Clarenceville players playing their last high school game, had eight kills, eight solo blocks and 20 digs for the day. Juniors Wendy Roy and Tracy Sledz were strong at the net with 15 and 16 kills, respectively.

Roy had 19 digs and Sledz 20 digs and six serving aces.

Senior Joanna Galuszka had seven kills and 20 digs and setter Kristen Przegendza had 40 assists. Chris Nunnery, recently returned from a back injury, had three aces and 30 digs.

"I loved the senior class, it was a beautiful group," Love said.

Shamrocks bounce East Kentwood in shootout, 7-5

By Steve Kowalski STAFF WRITER

The Redford Catholic Central hockey players didn't act like gentlemen in the presence of a female goalie Friday night.

The Shamrocks couldn't stay out of the penalty box, and it almost cost them before they held on for a 7-5 Class A semifinal playoff victory over East Kentwood at the Flint IMA.

CC led 6-1 after Jon Heady's goal at 13:29 of the second period. But the Falcons scored four unanswered goals, including three on power plays, to cut the deficit of that (a rash of penalties). "You get a four-goal lead, you shouldn't end up winning by two goals, especially when the last one is an empty net goal." Heady and senior forwards

Greg Vaquera and Jason Couture scored two goals each and junior winger Chris Gonzalez scored one goal for the Shamrocks. Mark Holdridge had a pair of assists. The five goals were the most allowed this year by CC senior goalie Mike Brusseau. Junior forwards Mike Slobodnic and Toni Lasorsa had two goals each for the Falcons and senior defenseman Martin Brutenic scored one goal. East Kentwood, the 1990 Class A champion, had an eight-game winning streak snapped and finished 18-7-1 over-

"I could be happier if we won, but I couldn't be prouder of these guys (and girl)," East Kentwood coach Ron Baum said. "They could have thrown in the towel after (falling behind 4-0 in) the first period. It took a lot of resolve to adjust to the size, strength and speed of CC. I thought Lori played outstanding. She got us here and deserves all the credit."

CC scored four goals in the first period against Townshend, the first two coming on rebounds. Gonzalez opened the scoring at 2:57, putting in a rebound on a shot from the point by Holdridge. Couture made it 2-0 at 7:25, following up a shot by Heady. The Shamrocks opened up a 4-

6-1 lead. Heady picked up the puck up in his own zone, went around a defenseman at the Falcons' blue line and flipped the puck high over Townshend, who had gone for a fake. The Shamrocks scored on seven of their 15 shots on goal but this was one of the few times Townshend looked out of her element.

CC wins district, 62-45

By NEAL ZIPSER STAFF WRITER

When Joe Daly watches University of Michigan basketball games the next few years, he'll remember Friday night.

Daly, Redford Catholic Central's senior center, helped contain UM-bound Maurice Taylor as the Shamrocks survived a fourth-quarter scare and beat Detroit Henry Ford, 62-45, for the Class A district title at Southfield.

CC(16-5) will play stateranked Detroit Cooley Tuesday at Southfield. Tip-off is 7:30 p.m.

"When I see (Taylor) playing for U-M, I'll remember covering him tonight," Daly said, adding that Taylor will have little problem blending in with the sometimes vocal Wolverines.

"He did a lot of talking," Daly said. "He was saying things like 'I'm an all-American and I'm going to show you why.'

Daly, with the help of Sean Gallagher off the bench, limited Taylor to 19 points on an 8-for-26 shooting performance. The 6-foot-8 center added eight rebounds and seven blocks. Daly (11 points) and Gallagher (10) outscored Taylor and matched him in rebounds.

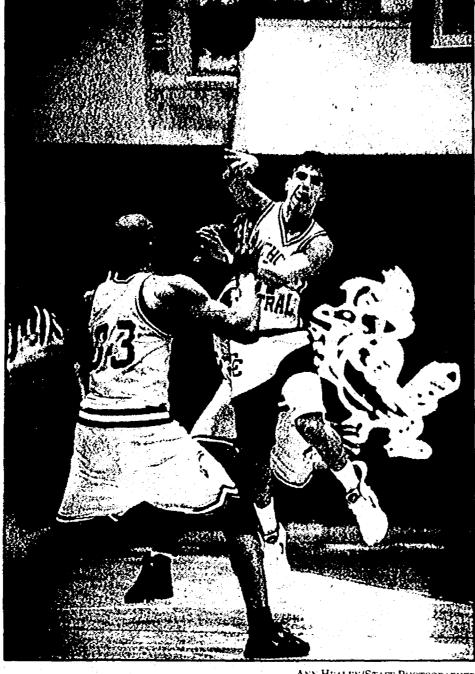

"Our plan was to go right at him and not alter your shot," said guard Andy Slankster, who scored a game-high 23 points - one short of matching his career-best.

"We didn't do anything special on him," Daly said. "We just wanted to help out on defense and contain him."

Taylor played the entire game in foul trouble and was forced to exit the game with 45 seconds left after crashing to the floor on a layup attempt. It was the third time Taylor needed assistance after a fall on the court. Taylor sustained an injury to his left shoulder, but the injury isn't serious.

CC coach Bernie Holowicki, who scouted Ford six times this vear, said the Shamrocks' game plan for Taylor was simple.

"We just wanted to play him hard and lean on him," Holowicki "He's an awesome talent.

Salem crowned

Churchill goes flat in 2nd half

By C.J. RISAK STAFF WRITER

What Plymouth Salem needed at halftime was some sort of energy transfusion. Something to get their collective engines jump-started. Rocks' coach Bob Brodie had spent much of the first half searching for that missing ingredient, but had come up empty.

This was no meaningless game. A Class A district basketball championship was at stake.

Livonia Churchill, winner of just seven of its previous 21 games, had a 23-21 lead over 18-3 Salem at the break. "We were trying to penetrate," said Charger coach Tom Lang. "When we penetrated, good things happened."

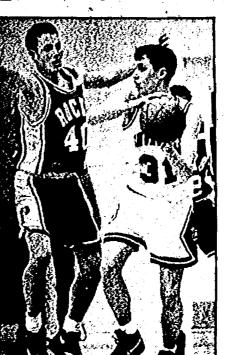

But a couple of things changed in the second half. Salem turned up its defense a few notches, Churchill started to fade, and a game that was close for 21/2 quarters ended in a rout - with Salem on top, 60-38, at Northville.

The win takes the Rocks to the Highland Park regional against an old nemesis: Detroit Pershing and Willie Mitchell, a lethal combination that ended Salem's season last year with an 83-52 pounding in the regional final. The game is 6 p.m. Tuesday.

"We're looking forward to it," said Brodie. "These guys want the opportunity to show they're a better team than they showed last year."

If Salem plays any part of Tuesday's game like it did in the first half against Churchill, Pershing will enjoy another lopsided victory. "My kids did exactly what I wanted them to do," said Lang of Churchill's first-half effort.

Brodie agreed. "It was hard. for us coming off that emotional win (over Plymouth Canton in the semis)," he said, "and

BILL BRESLER/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Passing thoughts: Churchill's Jedd Thorderson (right) tries to slip the ball past Salem defender James McDonald.

Churchill executed their game plan to perfection. They spread us out (defensively) and went inside."

Which is where Bill Morris did his damage. The junior forward muscled his way into the paint to knock down 10 firsthalf points.

But the Rocks adjusted, and the second half belonged to them. They recaptured the lead at the 4:17 mark of the third quarter on a basket by James McDonald; Churchill never regained it.

Indeed, the Chargers could not score at all. They managed just six points in the third quarter on 3-of-10 shooting, and were worse in the fourth period Salem scored 17-straight points before Churchill countered with two free throws by Jeff Anderson with 3:53 left.

By then it was far too late. Salem had already finished the third quarter with an 11-2 run to take a 36-29 lead into the final period; the Rocks' 17-point run provided them with a 53-29 advantage. The Chargers didn't score a basket until less than a minute remained. In the second half, they were 5-of-20 from the field (25 percent).

"We switched to a half-court trap and increased the intensity a bit," said Brodie. "And I think, in the second half, our kids did not want to be denied."

That trapping defense did more than force turnovers (Churchill had 10 in the last two quarters). Since Brodie had shuffled so many players into the game in the first half -"partially because I didn't think anyone was playing all that well, so I kept rotating until I found someone." he said his starters were rested.

When they got into the game in the second half, with a more focused attitude, it took a toll on Churchill.

"Their half-court trap hurt us a little bit," Lang said. "But the big thing was they were fresher. When they went to that half-court trap, we didn't take care of the ball the way we should have, we didn't move (the ball) inside the way we should have. I think what all that stems from is - we were tired."

Morris ended up as the game's high scorer with 14 points. Ethan Jerome added eight for Churchill, which ended its season at 7-15. Salem (19-3) got 12 points from Adam Hammons, 10 from Joe Measel and nine apiece from James Head and Doug Herriman. Head was the Rocks' leading re bounder with nine.

"Had it been a three-quarter game, we could have won it,' Lang said. Perhaps so.

Mercy students to present 'Annie Oakley' musical

Students at Mercy High School in Farmington Hills are learning about the historical Annie Oakley as they prepare to present the classic Irving Berlin musical -"Annie Get Your Gun" - Friday-Sunday, March 18-20.

America's most famous markswoman was immortalized in Berlin's 1946 Broadway musical and the 1956 movie starring Ethel Merman.

But some say the Annie Oakley of stage and screen bears little resemblance to the real-life Annie, who starred in Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show in the 1880s and

The Mercy production will attempt to present a more accurate characterization of Annie and the play's other characters, who include Annie's husband and manager Frank Butler, Sitting Bull, and Buffalo Bill Cody.

'Annie Get Your Gun' is an outstanding musical with one of the best scores in musical theater, but after 50 years it has become dated," said Roberta Campion, producer/director of the Mercy production.

"We found that some of the language used in the script is sexist and racist," she added. "We wanted to revise our production to make it acceptable to an audience in 1994, and we found we could do that just by making it more his- 37.176 for Grand Marquis and torically accurate.'

Campion enlisted the aid of Oakley's great-niece, Bess Edwards, president of the Annie Oakley Foundation in Greenville, Ohio, where Oakley was born. Edwards is committed to restoring Annie's legend to historical accuracy and preserving it for future generations.

"Annie was not the brash, uneducated tomboy that Ethel Merman created on the screen," said Edwards. "She was actually very modest and refined. She was $8,198 is $7,434 also one of the most famous women of her time and one of the best loved.

Now is the perfect time to revisit the legend of Annie Oakley, says Campion. Oakley - born Phoebe Anne Mosey in 1860 was inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame in 1993. Next month, the U.S. Postal Service will issue an Annie Oakley stamp as part of its new Legends of the West series.

"Annie Oakley is a superb role model for young women," said Edwards. "Despite extreme poverty and severe childhood abuse while living in a foster-type home, Annie resolutely faced contemporary prejudice and severe physical setbacks in her struggle to suc-

Between 1885 and her death in 1926, Edwards 'said Oakley proved herself an outstanding athlete in trapshooting competition and shooting exhibitions.

"As the first well-known women sport shooter, she opened shooting ranges and matches all over the U.S. and Europe to women competitors."

Oakley also helped women in other ways. "She was widely known for her philanthropic work, especially for helping orphans, widows, and young women who wanted to further their education," Edwards said.

If we did that, the play would not be. But we do intend to let the real Annie Oakley come through.

Cellular Phone In A Dependable Car Enhances Driver Security

Highway crimes, most notably car-jackings and drive-by shootings, are challenging law enforcement officials. A motorist is highly visible and vulnerable in his or her vehicle.

Safety devices available on new cars should go a long way toward reducing traffic accidents and personal injuries. But there's another type of risk a driver faces, the danger of personal attack when the vehicle is disabled. Under such circumstances, at the side of the road, at a stop light or even in a parking lot, a driver is very vulnerable. This is when the "good Samaritan" who claims to offer assistance may have more devious motives.

Another potential danger to anyone in a disabled vehicle is severe weather, where prolonged exposure to the elements can be life threatening.

Whateverthe situation, a dependable vehicle and personal security go hand-in-hand.

Car Care Council lists the five most common causes of breakdowns on the road:

- *Out of gas
- *Engine stalls/won't start
- *Dead battery
- *Flat tire
- *Overheating

All of the above are avoidable with common sense preventive measures, says the Council. These in-

*Regular inspection of tires to spot damage unusual wear or under inflation that can lead to fire failure;

*A seasonal check and preventive maintenance of the cooling system, a frequent factor in roadside breakdowns:

*Periodic mechanical check-ups, especially when engine stalling, hard starting or other such symptoms signal trouble ahead;

If you are stranded, try to move your car to a safe location on the side of the road out of traffic. Turn on your emergency flashers. If at all possible, stay inside your car with the doors locked-until help arrives.

A cellular phone is the best way to call for roadside assistance, concludes the Council.

For a free brochure detailing signs of engine trouble, send a stamped, self addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. TU, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452

TIP: Watch the gas gauge. Get in the habit of keeping the tank at least half full at all times, not only to prevent running out of fuel but also to prevent condensation in the tank. Moisture in gas lines can freeze, causing the engine to stall.

True or Faise?

Tire pressure 8 pounds low can cause up to a 5 percent drop in gas mileage.

Metro Detroit's Most Knowledgeable

Sales Staff! Winners of the 1993

"Metro Cup" Product Knowledge Championship

By Lyn St. James, IndyCar driver, Director of Consumer Relations and National Spokesperson for the Car Care Council; Consumer Advisor to Ford Motor Company; Author of "Lyn St. James Car Owner's Manual".

Besides the first robin, a sure sign of spring is seeing your neighbor armed with a bucket of suds and pile of rags washing the family car in the driveway. Not only is this a great way to enjoy the warmer weather, but the efforts to maintain a vehicle's exterior will pay off when you sell it. The first thing a potential buyer notices is a sharp exterior, evidence of a well-maintained car. No exterior will last forever, but there are steps you can take to substantially lengthen the lifespan of your car's finish.

The best way to keep the exterior of your vehicle looking new is to wash it frequently, preferably by hand. Consider the quality of your local water, if you have "hard" water, rings and film my be left on your car's surface. Because it is difficult to change the water supply, the next best thing is to dry the car before the water can evaporate.

Don't use detergent or common coarse soaps. Harsh detergents cause your car's paint to lose its residual oils. Use a nondetergent soap made especially for waxed surfaces or a liquid soap used for dishwashing by hand. Be sure the soap is diluted to the proper strength. In warm weather, wash in the shade with cold water, in cooler air, use warm water.

Use a nozzle with as much pressure as possible to dislodge dirl. Be sure to rinse the car thoroughly. Start washing your car from the top and work down. Abrasive dirt tends to flow down and away from surface parts. The best washing tool is a sponge, a car-wash mitten, or a soft towel. Whichever you use, keep it clean by rinsing frequently or replace it when it becomes dirty.

Protect the vehicle's finish by parking in a garage or under a roof whenever possible. Avoid parking under trees, as sap and bird droppings may damage the finish. If your vehicle is exposed to pollen or bird droppings, especially in hot and sunny weather, wash it as soon as possible. Do not allow spilled gasoline, antifreeze or windshield washer fluid to remain on your vehicle's finish.

Rinse your car with clear, cold water. Even clean rinse water can leave obvious water spots which may be difficult to remove. A soft terry towel is best for drying the car. A chamois will work well, but it can also drag dirt particles along with the water. Start drying at the top and work your way down.

Some areas of your car may require special attention. For instance, vinyl tops should be washed frequently using a brush and vinyl protective spray. Not only will regular cleaning safeguard the top from sun and pollution, it will allow you to inspect it for tears. Vinyl cleaners, not wax, should also be used on any rubber trim on your car's exterior. Don't neglect windshield wiper blades where motor oil residue can build up and reduce effectiveness. Wash your wheels and tires last by spraying water up inside the wheel wells and under the rocker panels where salt and debris may get trapped and cause rust.

A wax finish will remove harmful deposits from the vehicle's surface and help protect the finish. For best results, work in the shade or your garage. Always apply the wax to the pad, not to the car. Do not wax for the first 60 days after purchasing your car while its finish is especially fresh.

No matter how much you try to keep your car's exterior looking good, it's almost impossible to avoid chips and scratches. Automobile manufacturers have been expanding their efforts to maintain the beauty of your new vehicle after it has left the showroom. Ford Motor Company, for instance, instituted the "Nice Touch" program as part of its owner follow-up-plan. According to Dwight Reed of Ford Customer Service Division, more than 2,000 Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealèrs nationwide mail out a half-ounce tube of touch up paint to new car buyers within 30 days after a purchase. The lacquer automotive refinishing paint, an exact match to the owner's new vehicle, is an easy way to deal with knicks and Pollution, effects of harsh weather, door dings, and even oxidation - exposure to air, are hazards gyery vehicle faces once it leaves the showroom. By taking the time to care for the exterior of your vehicle, you'll be able to minimize these threats to its finish. Not only will a well maintained exterior pay off during trade-in, but driving is much more enjoyable until that time.

For more information on maintaining your vehicle's good looks send for the free brochure "HOW TO KEEP YOUR CAR LOOKING YOUNG". Mail a stamped, self addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Department N. One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Ignore Car Care And Face Consequences

"Reactionary Maintenance" Abounds

By Larry Yeager, Manager of Training/Technical Ser es, BWD Automotive Corporation

You have probably heard your dentist say, "If you ignore your teeth they will go away",

Without proper dental hygiene and regular visits to the dentist, it is very likely that someday you will be soaking your teeth instead of brushing them. The same thing can be said about your car. If you deny your car proper preventive maintenance and avoid regular car trips to a good technician, then, like your teeth, your car will go away.

Up until the mid 1970s, most car owners practiced preventive maintenance. This was largely due to the fact that as the ignition points wore out and lead in the fuel masked the spark plug, vehicle performance and economy began to deteriorate very noticeably. The car would then be brought in for the proverbial "tuneup". This tune-up usually took place about once a year or every 12,000 or 15,000 miles

This was also a good opportunity for the technician to check for additional maintenance needs in areas such as the radiator and heater hoses, and coolant condition, the fan belts, the vacuum hoses, the fuel and air filters, the canister filter and the condition of the battery, the tires and the emission control and exhaust systems, just to name a few.

With the advent of electronic ignition and unleaded fuel in the mid 1970's, as well as the addition of computer controls in the early 1980's, the deterioration of the cars' performance and mileage is hardly noticeable. This, combined with the fact that there are very few full service gas stations left today (full service meaning that there is a knowledgeable person on hand to check under your hood as a form of preventive maintenance while filling the tank), causes most vehicle owners to practice what is called "reactionary maintenance".

Reactionary maintenance is when you continue to drive your caras long as it runs well, neglecting to raise the hood to check the oil or anything else. Then, the first time you notice a change in drive-ability, usually at 50,000 to 60,000 miles.

Can You Do It Right Away?

youvrush to a repair facility and want the problem fixed in a couple of hours.

And you often complain about the cost of repairs. It may sound a little harsh, but this scenario happens thousands of times each day across the country

Today's cars need regular, preventive maintenance. Even though oil and gasoline have improved, and car manufacturers will try to persuade you that their product has improved, new cars still wear out. Actually, new cars are wearing out faster than old ones due to the lack of preventive maintenance.

If you want your car to last as long as the payments, dig the owner's manual out of the glove box. Turn to the "Maintenance Instructions" section and read it carefully. Pay particular attention to the page which discusses oil change intervals. You will note that the manufacturer differentiates between "normal driving conditions" and severe driving conditions".

Usually, severe driving conditions are defined as: driving 'hrough dusty areas, towing a trailer or boat, frequent idling or idling for long periods, and driving for 10 miles or less in freezing weather. Cars operated under these conditions should have an oil and filter change every 3,000 miles or three months, which ever occurs first.

Normal driving conditions occur if your driving does not fall in any one of the severe driving categories. However, less than 25 percent of the cars on the road actually qualify for the normal driving category. In addition, if your car is equipped wit' a turbo-charger, frequent oil changes are a must.

If the turbo becomes coked up, it could cost as much as $1,000 to replace it, and the factory warranty won't cover the hill if you can't show proof of oil changes at the factory-recommended intervals.

Engine coolant and transmission fluid are two more items that must be changed regularly to ensure a long life for your car. Engine coolant should be changed every two years and diluted with 50 percent water, as pure engine coblant will freeze at around 0 degrees Fahrenheit. This mix gives you the best cold weather protection and the bestheat dissipation ability in hot

The life of the automate transmission fluid is basically determined. by how hot the fluid has been during operation. (See the chart.) Since you have no way of really knowing how hot the fluid has been, an easy way to check is by pulling out the

at the fluid. If the fluid is brown instead of red and smells like you just ran over a skunk, it needs to be changed ASAP! It is a good habit to have the transmission fluid changed every two years or 24,000 miles.

The high temperatures under the hood of today's cars take their toll on rubber and neoprene components such as radiator and heater hoses, fuel lines, and vacuum hoses. One of the main causes of breakdown is fan belt and/or radiator/heater hose is to keep close track of the failure. The best insurance against this catastrophe is to have the belts and hoses replaced every two years.

And while on the subject of rubber, I shouldn't forget to mention transmission dipstick and looking your car before it leaves you stranded, or pay a service call and a new battery plus the inconvenience of being stranded? The fact is, preventive maintenance is cheaper in the long run than reactionary maintenance. The question that often remains is: "Where do Fget the money for preventive maintenance?" Most people budget only for car payments, insurance, and

> All that really needs to be done miles you drive each week. Set aside ten cents for each mile that you drive and place this money in an interest bearing account.

At the end of one year, if you

Choosing Gasolines

Does higher octane premium gas mean more detergents to keep your engine healthy? Not necessarily. says the Car Care Council. In most cars premium gas adds up to wasted money and resources.

For people who believe they're doing their cars a disservice by using less-expensive "regular" gas. the Council states that all grades contain engine-cleaning detergents. ²and most cars seldom/need more (than a good quality of regular, 87-5 octane fuel.

Exceptions to the rule:

- An older engine that has accumulated carbon in the combustion chamber, causing knocking or pinging under load. Higher octane can help, but sooner or later a more radical procedure may be necessary to remove carbon.
- Mechanical problems, sometimes due to a vacuum leak, overheating or emissions control system. malfunction. Remedy: dragnose and correct the trouble. ,
- The engine needs attention. Remedy: have the engine diagnosed and serviced as required
- The vehicle is designed for higher octane fuel. Remedy: use recommended grade of fuel.

Besides the cost factor, high-octane gas requires more crude oil per gallon to produce. It also creates more toxic hydrocarbons, something the ozone could do without.

"So the next time you're debating at the pump and decide to give your car a treat with some expensive, higher octane gas, remember that a better investment of your money may be in routine preventive maintenance services.

Automatic Transmission Fluid Oxidation

Automatic transmission fluid provides 100,000 miles of service before oxidation occurs under normal operating temperatures of about 170 F. Above normal operating temperatures, the oxidation rate doubles ruseful life of fluid is cut in half) with each 20 F increase in temperature

175:10	ita)(XX) miles	315 F	750 miles
195 F	50,000 miles	:34-F	325 miles
212°F	25.000 miles	155 F	160 males
235	12.000 miles	375 F	80 miles
255 F	6.250 miles	(K)	40 miles
275 F	3,000 miles	475 F	Less than 30 men
295°F	1.500 inites

This information clearly shows why transmission oil coolers and the various maintenance intervals are

Above 300 F, the metal inside the transmission will warp aid distort in varying degrees depending on the seventy of overheat. Because this damage occurs and fluid life is so scriously impaired, rocking out of snow, mud or sand should never exceed a very few minutes the tires. There is no reason why steel belted radial tires shouldn't -last at least 70,000 miles or longer. It takes only three things to make this happen. 1) Have wheel alignment and . re balance checked once a year. (2) Keep tires properly inflated and check weekly. 3) Rotate tires every 6,(XX) miles.

tires once a week. If you notice any good alignment shop check the alignment, the suspension components, and the tire balance. Tire wear problems do not fix themselves.

One final area which I would like to discuss is the battery. Most batteries are replaced on the first cold morning that the car won't start. The average life of a battery is three and one-half years. If you are driving around with a battery that is older than that, then's ou shouldn't be surprised if you are stranded at the train station parking lot or the shopping center when it is 10 degrees below zero and the wind is blowing at 20 m p.h.t.

Why not just replace the hat tery before this happens? That is what preventive maintenance is all about; looking, checking, and replacing automotive components' across the country that are very before they fail yourself that preventive maintenance is too expensive to follow. On the contrary, would it be more expensive to replace the battery in have driven 15,000 miles, you will have saved $1500 to spend on preventive maintenance. That will buy a lot of maintenance. Any money left over can either be left in the account to let your balance grow, or can be put towards the principal of your car loan. This will reduce both the interest you are paying as well Perhaps the key is to examine the as the number of payments.

Your car is a major investment, unusual tire wear patterns, have a so why not take care of it? If you borrow $16,000 to purchase a car at 14 percent interest, and you pay this off over a period of four years, you will eventually pay almost $5,000 in interest. That's $21,000 that you pay out of your budget in a four year period

If you practice preventive maintenance, your car will oútlast your payment book. Then, if you keep your car for another four years and make those same car payments to yourself, you will have $21,000 to spend. I don't know about you, out I could think of all kinds of near texs to bus

Remember it is cheaper to look at check, and replace components thetoraffailtine than it is to drive your car until it drops. It you are not fixing your own car, there are thousands of repair facilities capable of performing the pre-You are probably thinking to ventive maintenance which I have discussed in this article. Give preventive maintenance a try, and you will find yourself with money in your pocket.

True or False?

One worn spark plug can damage the catalytic converter on your car.

True! The unburned fuel that results from the mistiring plug is ignited inside the converter an emission control device. The heat can become so intense as to melt the interior of the converter. Keep your car running right to save the expense of a new catalytic converter.

An Added Springtime Ritual: Change The Oil, Recycle The Filter

Springtime. Time to shake the winter doldrums. Whether you have traveled great distances over the winter or staved home by the fire, it's important to make sure you perform althorough inspection: of your vehicle before heading out on a family vacation.

. .. "Many times people neglect their vehicles over the winter due to the cold or the belief that the car is fine because they didn't use it that much," explains Gary Donahue, lead trainer for AlliedSignal Automotive Aftermarket "However, sludge can build up in the engine and cause expensive problems down the road The quickest, and easiest, way to avoid this problem is installing fresh oil and a quality oil filter."

، تواقع To Do

Changing the oil and filter isn t very complicated. Donahue explains that on many cars, the oil drain plug as easily accessible and can be removed without having to raise the vehicle. Likewise, the oil Tilter is easily accessible and can be removed either by hand or with an oil filter wiench.

Any pan or basin with a capac its of a couple of gallons will give you plenty of room to handle the Tour to six quarts of oil confained in most engines." Donahue explains "You get it to come out by simply unscrewing the orldinin plug from the oil pan at the bot in of the éngine counterclockwise. It s'always best to take the car for a short ride to warm the oil before removing. This will make it flow easier.

Once you we changed the oil, be sure the drain pling is in place, and add freshoil. Make sure you use a quality oil. A quick check of sport owner's manual will give you the recommended weight and quantity for your driving conditions
