Sassafras supporters winners

After months of lobbying the Wayne-Westland school board, the Friends of Şassafras won a major victory Monday when the board voted unanimously to retain the nature preserve.

In a political relations coup, a united Wayne-Westland school board Monday voted to preserve Sassafras Trails, a sprawling nature area that had faced possible residential development.

The 7-0 decision allayed fears and calmed tempers among 150 people who jammed a board meeting room in a strong show of support for saving the 54-acre site northeast of Palmer and Wildwood.

Board members who had been sharply divided on the potential sale emerged from a one-hour, closed-door session in solid agreement that the property should be protected.

Only a small slice of the land, slightly less than two acres on the north side, will be used for 11 houses to be built by the district's building trades students, who desperately need land for their program.

Some critics didn't want the heavily wooded area touched at all, but the Friends of Sassafras Trails citizens group appeared to accept the compromise.

"Overall, I think it's a victory not just for the Friends of Sassafras, but also for the community and the school district," Friends president Kevin Headrick said. "I think we can begin to heal a lot of old wounds and start turning the tide."

Wayne resident Jim Netter called the board plan "a marvelous piece of work, a good compromise."

School board members received a petition signed by 3,500 people demanding that Sassafras Trails be protected. Officials also saw copies of a supportive letter that the citizens group received from Westland City Council members Glenn Anderson, Sandra Cicirelli, Richard LeBlanc and Charles Pickering.

Rep. Kelly irked at Engler veto of adult ed bill

BY LEANNE ROGERS STAFF WRITER

A local legislator isn't happy with the governor's veto of a bill he drafted to address adult education and center program funding.

"Adult education was the hottest fight in the budget debate along with funding for the center programs," said Rep. Thomas Kelly, D-Wayne, noting that governor has flatly refused to provide full funding for schools despite bipartisan support.

Kelly's 17th House District includes the southeast section of Westland.

The funding eliminated by the governor's veto affects adult education but also center program foundation grants for K-12 schools, particularly in the Wayne-Westland and Garden City school districts.

The center program measure would have corrected errors created by the passage of Proposal A.

"This would have impacted only a small number of former in-formula districts which operate Intermediate School District center programs where the student population is primarily non-resident," said Kelly.

In the case of Wayne-Westland, students come from across Wayne County to attend six special education center programs. Proposal A removed funding for center programs but included those students in Wayne-Westland's enrollment fig-

"My amendment would have cleared up the inequities and placed on all the center program operators on an even ground," said Kelly.

Former out-of-formula center programs avoided the funding problem because they counted the students

State Rep. Eileen DeHart has launched a tollfree telephone number to allow local residents to call her Lansing office without making an expensive long-distance call. The new number is 1-888-833-8494. The 888 prefix provides the same toll-free access as 800 numbers, she said.

DeHart, a Westland Democrat in her first twoyear term, said that toll-free access is important for good constituent services.

The legislator also said she is continuing her in-district office hours, which are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Fridays. The first Friday of the month will be at the Westland Friendship Center, 1119 N. # City OKs 5-year financing plan

Westland city officials will. soon get help in developing its first long-range financial projections.

The city council Monday approved a proposal to have its long-time auditing firm, Plante & Moran, prepare a five-year financial model.

When completed this fall, it will help the city council and administration have longrange projections on revenues and expenses when officials meet in October for its strategic planning session.

The auditor said preparing the computer software and consulting will cost the city a maximum of $25,000.

Ken Kunkel, a senior partner in the firm, said that city finance department officials will be involved as much as possible in planning the projections.

Several council members praised the new contract and cited the need for long-range financial planning as new state legislation will restrict. state-shared and property tax revenues.

A long-range financial model "should have been years ago," said Council member Glenn Anderson. When the projection is completed, "it will be a very valuable tool" for finance director Michael Gorman and budget director Elizabeth Todd.

While supporting the action, Council President Sandra Cicirelli and Council member Richard LeBlanc stressed that the auditing firm try to do as much as possible "in-house" with existing city staffers.

In a proposal to the city, Plante & Moran's Michael Swartz said the financial projection will include revenue restrictions and expected increases in spending, such as health care, rubbish collection, increased demands for public safety, capital equipment purchases and demands for more city services.

The computerized model can be used as a tool which can be easily adjusted annually and used on an ongoing basis, Swartz said.

He said the benefits for the long-range model are:

·City officials can "look ahead" in planning for future revenues and spending, capital outlays, service expansions or reductions.

 Policy makers can make decisions by concentrating on the "big picture."

•Officials can facilitate the identification of problem areas or trends earlier than in the past.

"Because the governor has been so adamant in his quest to wipe out the program and the Legislature overrode his wishes, we had very strong fears his plans were to eliminate the $83 million which, of course, means devastation to the program," said Kelly. "The action he took is deplorable because it is the students who will suffer."

Wayne-Westland would have received an additional $1.2 million - evenly split between adult education and center programs if Kelly's bill had survived, said Patricia Brand, assistant superintendent for business. The district has had to slash its evening adult education program in half.

Wayne-Westland would have received an additional $1.2 million - evenly split between adult education and center programs - if Kelly's bill had survived, said Patricia Brand, assistant superintendent for business.

Brand hadn't counted on the additional money in planning the district's budget.

At a recent Garden City school board meeting, Superintendent Michael Wilmot didn't talk about the action during his public com-

"I really felt at this juncture there wasn't any reason to discuss it. I never felt it would go through," said Wilmot. "We assumed from the get-go that the money was gone. There is always hope there. I just never believed they'd drop another $83 million in there."

Wayne-Westland and Garden City aren't looking at additional budget adjustments, having already planned not to receive. those funds.

"In the House, key Democrats voted no on this bill because they felt it was a ruse trying to get support for the state aid act," Wilmot said. "Why was this enacted before the state aid act but not presented for the governor's signature until a week and a half later?"

Calling the center program fund problems an error is being polite, Wilmot said.

"There was more intent than an error. They had no problem correcting errors for the former out-of-formula districts," he said.

Using the small sliver of land for the building trades program means that school officials won't have to look elsewhere to buy property for the program.

School board members promised to drop the building trades plan if it interferes with the DNR grant. But Moore said he has had preliminary indications from Lansing that no hurdles are expected.

"It's not going to jeopardize the DNR grant," board president Patricia Brown told the crowd. "It's a done deal. We are taking the grant whether they (DNR officials) give us the (building trades) lots or not."

Moreover, she complimented the citizens group for helping to secure the DNR grant, although administration officials also played a strong role.

Brown called on Sassafras supporters to use their muscle to lobby for improved state funding of public education. She also said school officials will seek public help when they decide to propose a local bond issue for classroom technology and building improvements.

Red dye flushes through Rouge River

The Middle Branch of the Rouge River in Westland is clear again after fish died following a toxic materials runoff Sunday. There was no danger to public health, said officials.

Assistant Fire Chief George Riley said the department responded to the report of a hazardous material spill at the Middle Rouge River at Ann Arbor Trail at 9:45

Firefighters observed a red substance was entering the river through a storm sewer connection, Riley said.

"The river was completely colored red from this location to a point determined to be just west of Inkster Road," he added.

The Western Wayne County Haz-Mat Team was alerted and responded to the scene, to assist the fire department with identification of the substance.

Carjacker to serve 8 months to 5 years for botched attempt

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A Wayne County judge has sentenced a Garden City man to prison for eight months to five years for a botched carjacking that occurred Jan. 9 at a Westland gas station, a court clerk said.

Circuit Judge William Leo Cahalan ordered Roger Steven Thomas, 30, to prison for trying to steal an unoccupied 1983 Ford Mustang and then fighting with the owner, who caught up with him as he drove away.

The incident occurred at 10:10 p.m. Jan. 9 at the Mobil station at Merriman and Cherry Hill.

Cahalan recently announced his decision after Thomas pleaded guilty in May to a carjacking charge. The judge could have imposed a maximum sentence of life in prison.

During a Jan. 25 hearing in Westland 18th District Court, the carjacking victim identified Thomas as the suspect who tried to steal the Mustang while it was idling at a gas pump.

The 30-year-old victim left the car running while he went inside to pay for his gas tab, Westland police Sgt. Scott Hall has said.

Thomas, walking by at the time, began driving away from the pump just as the owner was returning to his car, Hall said.

The owner ran toward the fleeing suspect, caught up with him and, with the driver-side car door open, tried to pull him from the car, police said,

The two men continued to struggle as the suspect began driving away, but the attempted getaway was halted when Thomas stalled the Mustang after pulling into an eastbound Cherry Hill lane, Hall has said.

It seems that Thomas had an insurmountable hurdle in his carjacking attempt, police said: He was trying to steal a car with a manual transmission even though he wasn't skilled at driving one, initial police statements indicated.

The car owner managed to subdue Thomas until police arrived and made an arrest that resulted in the carjacking charge.

In sentencing Thomas to eight months to five years in prison, Cahalan gave him credit for 147 days that he had already spent in jail, a court clerk said.

Community approach to Rouge praised

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN

It was called a turning point by several people in attendance Tuesday.

James Murray, director of . Wayne County's Department of Environment, presented a framework for addressing the storm water runoff problem in the Rouge River during a hearing in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge John Feikens on Tuesday. Feikens has convened a series of informational hearings in his courtroom to address a case that has its origins in a suit brought in 1977 over pollution of the Rouge River.

Chad McIntosh, deputy director of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, called the plan a "very significant turning point."

DEQ's goal is clean water and clean air, he said. "I think Mr. Murray's proposal is one with considerable merit."

The framework presented by Murray would set up groupings of communities in the Rouge River area, called a watershed. into four subwatershed districts. Communities would be placed in a subwatershed district with neighboring communities.

Also, general permits would be issued by the regulating agenties, and communities would apply for the permits on a voluntary basis. Applying for and receiving a permit was referred to as like obtaining insurance. Communities covered under a permit would be protected from federal action and from further lawsuits, according to Robert Miller, chief of the Surface Water Quality Division, MDEQ. Communities that don't voluntarily enter the permit process, would be subject to federal action to come into compliance with clean water rules. "It would be the reason communities would want to volunteer to be covered by a permit," he said.

The progress in Tuesday's hearing occurred as a result of work Murray did after the June meeting in Feikens' courtroom. Murray sent a letter and the proposal to MDEQ and the Environmental Protection Agency as well as held meetings with representatives of communities in the Rouge watershed. "I'm pleased to say I feel we're making a great deal of progress,"

Representatives of several local communities said they were encouraged by Murray's plan.

Murray said.

Plymouth Township officials like Murray's plan, James D. Anulewicz, director of public services for Plymouth Township, said. Local communities, if given technical assistance, can address the problem, he said.

Livonia, because it is a community of more than 100,000 people, under current rules would be required to comply with standards before other neighboring smaller communities. Under this plan, other communities would be included with Livonia in a watershed

"This process that has been developed by Mr. Murray allows each community to get the proper size shoe," Bob Beckley, Livonia's director of public works.

"I'm very encouraged and look forward to participating in this process," he said. Livonia has been working on storm water for two years, he said after the meeting. The alternative to Murray's plan is one that is not as flexible, he said. "This allows us to not operate in a vacuum," he

But, there wasn't a completely positive response to Murray's plan. William Slattery, who identified himself as a citizen, said he has a "great number of problems" with the approach.

Present practices are scientifically inadequate, he said. "Now the state is saying we will permit communities to decide what the terms of the permits will be,"

The proposal does not work for the long term, and lets communities continue on the track of not addressing long-term effects, he

Storm water runoff has been identified in studies as a top pollutant of the river as rain washes pollutants from roads, yards, dump sites and industrial sites into the river.

But, many community leaders have expressed concern that if they are required by court order spend money on actions to correct the problem of storm water runoff in the Rouge River, as they are being required to address sewer overflows into the river, they will find out down the road that they still aren't in compliance with clean water regulations. Officials have also complained that local taxpayers can't afford to pay for expensive programs that could be ordered and that the cleanup of the Rouge to drinkable, swimmable standards isn't realistic.

Communities have to have some sense that if they do this they can assure their residents that this is the right thing to do,

Murray said.

"Wayne County and I personally believe that a general permit approach could meet all the requirements," he said. Murray's plan asked the court

- Provide a reasonable time frame for communities to act on their own, by removing the prospect of direct action by the
- court in the interim; • Offer the services of court monitors to provide advice and counsel to communities; • Create a forum for periodic court oversight and review;

• Facilitate a bridge developing between subwatershed storm water management plans and combined sewer overflow discharge limits to provide a package to improve water quality in the Rouge.

As stake holders, communities would be able to say what they want from the river, Murray

The geographic focus of the framework would allow similar communities to work together in a subwatershed approach to develop best management practices, he said. For example, Garden City would be grouped with Dearborn Heights, as similar older communities, while Plymouth Township would be grouped with similar developing communities, such as Northville Township.

Representatives from Washtenaw and Oakland counties also praised Murray's plan.

Janis Bobrin, Washtenaw County drain commissioner, said the three townships in Washtenaw County in the Rouge watershed are largely undeveloped. The goals for those communities need to be protection and preservation not restoration, she said.

This plan is "moving in a much better direction than dealing with the Rouge as one entity, she said.

George W. Kuhn, Oakland County drain commissioner, said the Oakland County Drain Office can "totally support this concept."

"This will allow for drainage subwatersheds - groups of cities working together giving these cities more control over setting goals, priorities and moving ahead with planned expenditures," he said, adding it's like the adopt a highway program.

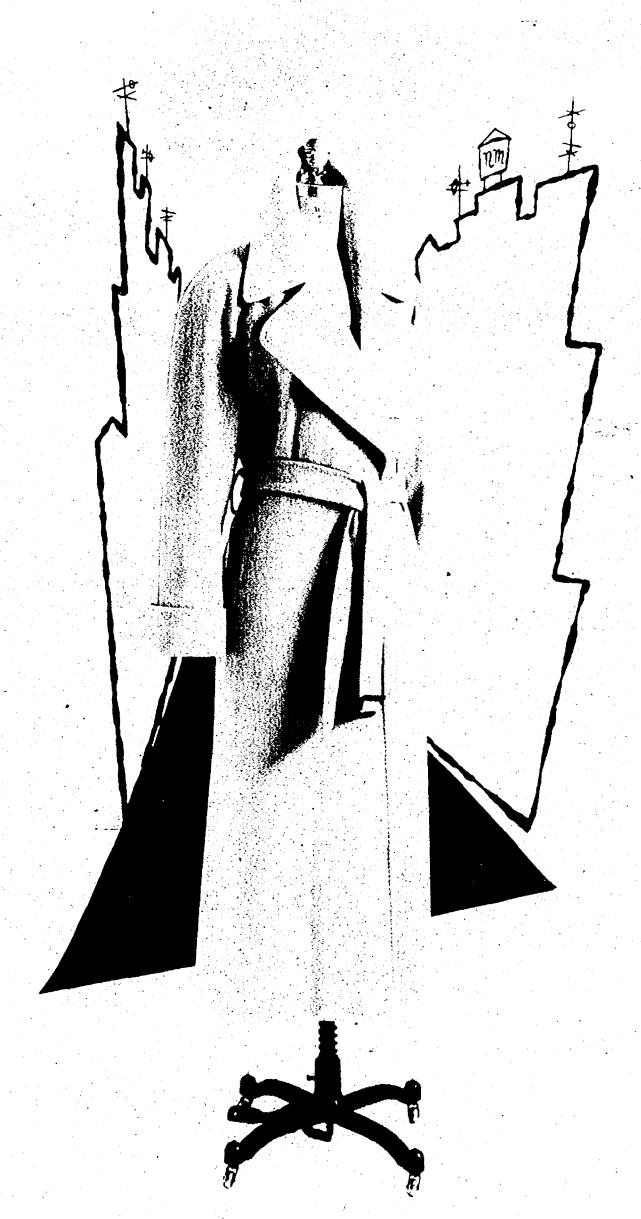

A meeting has been scheduled for 2 p.m. July 18 in Dearborn Heights City Hall to begin work on the subwatershed permit pro-

The next hearing in Feikens' courtroom to check on progress is scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 19. Feikens' courtroom is in the Theodore Levin U.S. Courthouse, 231 W. Lafayette in Detroit.

Wayne State study looks at crime concerns

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN STAFF WRITER

Speeding cars in residential areas is the number one crime issue across Wayne County.

That is according to the Urban Safety Report based on community policing and citizen surveys conducted by the Wayne State University College of Urban, Labor and Metropolitan Affairs.

A Wayne County Crime Poll was conducted in December of 1995 by the Urban Safety Program. About 2,000 county residents were surveyed, including about 1,000 Detroit residents and about 1.000 residents outside of Detroit.

Law enforcement officials, community organization representatives and citizen group leaders met to discuss the findings at a roundtable last week at Wayne State.

The poll found that 40 percent of crime is from repeat victimization, according to David Martin. research director for the Urban Safety Program.

High areas of repeat crime are called "hot spots" in the report. By addressing the issue of hot spots crime could be significantly reduced, Martin said.

The Urban Safety Program received a three-year grant in 1992, and in 1993 the first communitywide survey was conducted. The program has been funded for two more years, according to Diane Brown, director of Urban Studies at Wayne State.

The focus of the urban safety program is not just crime, but safety, she said.

Bringing public concerns and police perceptions together is another goal of the program. For example, while residents said speeding cars in residential areas was the top concern, among police officers drug dealing and drug use were considered to be the top issues.

A move toward community policing, in which police officers and residents work together to combat crime, would help to recognize the issues, Mar-

The message needs to be sent not only from the bottom, where people attending the police academy are told community policing is part of the job now, but from the top, where department leaders say it's something they are serious about, Robert Ficano, Wayne County sheriff, said.

"Some commanders are into the culture and some aren't," he said.

But, "not all the burden should be placed on law enforcement to make this work," he said.

Part of community policing is gaining community trust, and that leads people to eventually become comfortable with the police. "It becomes very fruitful," Ficano said.

Canton Township looked at community policing from a different standpoint. John Santomauro. director of public safety in Canton Township, said.

"We went to our police officers and said there is the philosophy of community policing, and we want you to look at it," he said.

"For us the transition was easier. The chief did not push it; the officers drove it," he said.

The police culture has to move from reactive to proactive, but there are two stumbling blocks, he said. The organization has to be able to effect change, and if an officer doesn't possess a positive. attitude all the training in the world won't change that, he said.

The Urban Safety Report breaks down its findings into regions of the county.

Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton Township are included in the far western Wayne region with Northville and Northville Township.

In that region in 1995, 3.9 percent of respondents reported being the victim of a burglary, 19.5 percent vandalism, 4.7 percent motor vehicle theft. 0 percent robbery, 13.4 percent larceny, 0 percent assault, and 0 percent sexual assault.

Larceny was up in that region from 4.7 percent in 1993, while burglary was down from 9.3 percent and assault was down from 4 percent.

The results are pretty consistent with police findings, Santomauro said. "Crime seems to be against property, not people" (in Canton Township), he said. That's the difference between urban and suburban crime, he said.

Livonia and Redford Township were grouped as a region.

In the Livonia and Redford region, 3.6 percent reported being victims of a burglary, 12.7 percent vandalism, 3.7 percent motor vehicle theft, 0.6 percent robbery, 8.5 percent larceny, 3.7 percent assault and 0.6 percent sexual assault. Larceny was up from 3.4 percent in 1993 and assault was up from 1.0 percent.

Westland and Garden City were included in the Westland area region, which also includes Wayne and Inkster.

In the Westland region, 5.0 percent reported being victims of burglary, 19.6 percent vandalism. 5.8 percent motor vehicle theft, 4.3 percent robbery, 8.0 percent larceny, 6.5 percent assault, and 1.4 percent sexual assault. Robbery was up from .5 percent in 1993.

Safety Day Camp scheduled

The Wayne County Sheriff's Department and the Wayne County Youth Education Board are sponsoring a Safety Day Camp at Lake Erie Metropark in Rockwood on July 24, 25 and 26. The camp, which runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day, is for kids ages 7 to 12.

Scheduled activities include arts and crafts, team sports, instructions in first aid and various safety procedures, and discussions on crime prevention. Riders and horses from the Sheriff's Department's mounted unit will do some showing off, and the department's Marine Division will offer boat rides. Also, the U.S. Coast Guard plans a visit by helicopter.

camper. "Cora," the sharp-nosed dog from the Sheriff's Department's Narcotics Unit will show why she is one of the unit's top employees. "She's very accurate," said Sgt. Michael Modes, director of the department's communication services. "She was $5,000 when we bought her many years ago."

Probably the best by product of the camp's experience is learning that everyone shares the same experiences.

"I think probably the most important lesson is that everyone is kind of the same, everybody has the same problems - Lake Erie Metropark is on Jefwith growing up. The kids think ferson, south of Gibraltar Road. of themselves more as the same Call (313) 224-3607.

And there'll be one canine rather than different," Modes

"We try to break up the day so it is both fun and instructional," Nancy Mouradian, Wayne County Sheriff's Department chief of staff and adviser to the camp, said. "We do a lot of crime prevention skills and gang-suppression skills in the morning. The afternoon is the fun time with volleyball, basketball and the kids' favorite, the wade pool. The setting is also beautiful."...

This is the camp's third season. There is no charge, and lunch and snacks are provided all three days.

WAYNE COUNTY PROSECUTING ATTORNEY

Voters will select a Democrat and a Republican in the Aug. 6 primary.

What is the most significant case you have tried?

Please comment on court reform. (Question asked before recent leg-Islative action.)

What programs have you instituted or advocated to fight crime in Wayne County?

What benchmarks do you use to determine the level of service being delivered?

Is the 650 drug lifer law too harsh?

John D. O'Hair, 66, Detroit resident, Wayne County prosecutor since 1983. B.A., DePauw University; J.D., Detroit College of Law. Michigan Bar Association;

Prosecuting Attorneys Association. Former Common Pleas and Wayne Circuit Court judge. Civic activities: Alliance for a Safer, Greater Detroit: Old Newsboys Goodfellows, M.E.L.L. program; Breithaupt School mentoring program.

It's difficult to choose just one, but the lawsuit by the Prosecutor's Office forcing the parole board to take public safety into consideration in making its decisions on release of inmates has successfully blocked the early release of dangerous felons and career criminals. We are not only putting violent offenders in prison, we are now successfully keeping them there.

The most important thing is that the Supreme Court or the court administrator's office be given the authority to use judicial resources to the greatest extent possible, by temporary assignment of personnel or transfer of cases. Some circuits have judges with unused time on their hands, others have tremendous docket loads. The principal objective should be to deliver fair, timely and cost-efficient adminis-

The expansion of our unit dealing with career criminals and major violent crimes has been a high priority because we know a high proportion of serious crimes are committed by repeat offenders. Our family abuse unit focuses on child and domestic violence, which impacts the drug trade: We hit the dealers hard by seizing their cash and other illegal assets.

Our office handles 40,000 cases a year, including 20,000 felonies. We have a 92 percent successful conviction rate for those cases on the trial track. We have seen a rising willingness of people to report crimes, to act as witnesses and otherwise participate in the criminal justice process. Perhaps the most important benchmark is the reduction in homicides.

Not for the major drug trafficker, or for the person regularly engaged in selling drugs. For a youthful or firsttime offender, I think it is time to review the wisdom of sending an immature 17 or 18-year-old to prison for 50 or 60 years, when more proportionate and less costly punishments are available.

Virgli Clark Smith, 49. Detroit resident, state senator and Democratic floor leader. Pershing High School, B.A., Michigan State University: J.D. Wayne State University, Michigan Bar Association; Wolverine Bar Association National Conference of State Legislators. Former state representative. Civic activities: Vernon Chapel A.M.E. Church.

As senior assistant corporation counsel, I represented Detroit in the Court of Appeals case, City of Detroit v. Muzzin & Vincenti Inc., which discussed issues regarding a defunct corporation's ability to escape liability under municipal city income tax ordinances. This case led to statutory law which protected the interests of municipalities by attaching a corporation's tax liability to its officers.

I support court reform which moves toward one court of justice, in which the state assumes greater responsibility for the operation of trial courts. I do not favor the abolition of Detroit Recorder's Court or any plan that disrupts Wayne County trial courts. These courts are national models of effectiveness and should be strongly supported.

In visiting various communities in Wayne County, I have been appalled to find police chiefs and mayors who don't feel they have access to the county prosecutor. I would create a regular round table of law enforcement leadership who meets with the prosecutor on a regular basis. Cooperative law enforcement efforts will have a greater ability to fight crime.

The percentage of successful trial prosecutions. Currently, the loss record in the prosecutor's office is at an unacceptable level of 57 percent. Further, an important benchmark of the level of service being delivered is found in accessibility of the prosecutor to the municipalities of the county. Discussions with county mayors and police chiefs indicate that the current prosecutor is not accessible.

This law is not significantly impacting the major drug traffickers as intended. I believe there should be additional drug interdiction efforts, focusing on penetrating drug traffic . at levels above the street dealer. The Metropolitan Airport and our international border are major entry points for drugs. Clearly, the prosecutor is not doing enough to attack the root of the problem.

Thomas D. Esordi, 30, Wyandotte resident, practicing attorney with office in Southgate. Gabriel Richard High School, A.B. from Kenyon College in Ohio, J.D., University of Detroit School of Law. Member of the Michigan Bar Association. Civic activities: Vice president and director of -Council 1802 of the Knights of Columbus.

The Wayne County prosecutor holds an administrative position. Accordingly, I will use my extensive experience advising clients on how to effectively run their business while holding that position. The prosecutor represents all of the citizens of Wayne County. Therefore, I will effectively and efficiently run the prosecutor's office so that each person feels that their case is the most significant.

As Wayne County prosecutor I will actively support changes to legislation that would benefit all of the residents of Wayne County. The current reform, including the abolition of Detroit Recorder's Court, is long overdue. Wayne County residents should have an equal say in the judgment of those charged with a crime in Wayne County. Accordingly, I support the reform.

Support handling non-violent juvenile matters on a local level where the judge, police and community leaders are more likely to be familiar with the child. More youth homes are not the answer. Prosecute individuals for the crime committed and supported by evidence and reduce plea bargaining.

Whether or not the prosecutor is representing the interests of all Wayne County residents and taking an active and vocal role in promoting justice for all citizens.

No, illegal drug sales and possession must be removed from our society if we want Wayne County to be a better place to live and

The right decision

School board deserves praise

The Wayne-Westland school board did the right thing Monday night when it unanimously approved retaining the Sassafras Trails nature preserve.

The board's action is important for several

One is that, with the help of a state natural resources department grant of $520,000, the property will remain a valuable educational and environmental asset in the school district.

Second, and nearly as important, the board's stand makes it clear that members can look at the long-range view of a problem instead of just a short-term perspective.

The Friends of Sassafras Trails, a private community group formed several years to fight the proposed sale of the property on Palmer and Wildwood for residential development, demonstrated that a well-orchestrated and focused lobbying effort can be successful.

The group was fearful last month that it had lost its campaign to save the nature preserve when the board tied 3-3 on selling the property. Through its unanimous vote Monday, the board demonstrated that it can listen to residents' concerns and be able to change its stand on a major policy issue that would be irreversible if the property were to be sold for private development.

The Wayne-Westland Board of Education did the right thing - from a policy perspective and a political relations view - in unanimously approving the preserving of the Sassafras Trail property. The decision marked a lengthy and successful lobbying effort by a community group to preserve the site.

With a change of board members after the June board election and two vote switches, the trustees clearly headed off potential community relations and credibility problems.

Several years ago, some board members promised to preserve property for environmental and educational purposes. But the Friends of Sassafras Trails feared that the board was going back on its word and breaking a longstanding promise.

Deserving credit for changing their votes from the June 20 board meeting were trustees Debra Fowlkes and David James.

With the Sassafras dispute now resolved, the board and administration can focus their attentions on other matters, such as providing the best educational programs possible with limited dollars.

Sassafras should be saved

When I was a teenager and young adult I was very enthusiastic about debating the superiority of my chosen candidates. Through the years I have become quite cynical about candidates from any party, for too often what they promise before election and what they do afterwards may be startlingly different.

I have never considered school board members to be politicians. I respected them as dedicated, concerned citizens who were willing to work hard for the benefit of our children without expecting much money or even thanks in return. Now I have been disillusioned by our Wayne-Westland School Board's refusal to unanimously approve accepting the state grant that would give them $520,000 for protecting our valuable nature area, Sassafras Trails.

This was the amount the school board and Administration set and approved before. Now they claim it's not enough. The million dollars they wish to receive instead from developers would allow them to run the schools for one more day than the state's grant, but we would lose Sassafras Trails forever!

Board member David James stated that it wasn't just the extra money from the developers that was needed. The children in the houses that would be build there would bring money from the state. (I thought they complained that the state gave too little to pay the costs of educating our children, so why seek more children for local taxpayers to support?)

From our front door we saw only trees, corn fields, and farms. They should see us not! We are surrounded by mini-malls (never fully occupied) and numerous apartment complexes (always seeking new renters). We have seen too much development, and now the School Board wants to develop one of our last nature areas!

We urge the school board to save our beautiful Sassafras Trails nature area so that all present and future students and families will always be able to enjoy it.

We thank Ed Turner, Mathew McCusker, and Martha Pitsenbarger for their firm support and concern for the preservation of this area.

We trust that our new board members, David Cox and Robin Moore, who were endorsed by the Democratic Club, will live up to the Democratic Party's reputation as the "Environmental Party" and be just as enthusiastic supporters. (They can't let Republican Sen. Loren Bennette's strong support put them to told me, "I want Sassafras Trails to stay just as it is." I certainly hope he will keep his pre-election promise.

As I went in to vote, David Cox personally

We must save Sassafras Trails! Please call your school board members to let them know of your concern about our possible loss!

> Dorothy Smiley, Westland

A marriage is the mutual relationship of hus band and wife, the institution whereby men and women joined in a special kind of social and legal dependence plan on founding and maintaining a family. So says Webster. He says nothing of a union between two men or two women as constituting a marriage.

Be counted for elections

Summer is finally here with warm and sunny weather and the easygoing feelings the season brings to us all.

But right smack dab in the middle of our summer fun is a serious primary election Aug.

Let's be homest. Many people figure, "So what, it's just a primary, I'll vote in the November election." That's a mistake.

No doubt the Nov. 5 general election, which this year features the presidential race, draws more attention and more voters. But that's just why the primary election is so important. It sets the stage for the general election.

You can be sure those with particular interests in particular candidates and issues will be at the polls Aug. 6.

If you're not there, you have allowed a minority of voters to eliminate your choices of candidates lined up for the general election.

This year, the primary ballot will include a tax request for new millage for Wayne County parks, as well as contested races for all but one county commission seat, and a hotly-contested race for county prosecutor between incumbent John O'Hair and challenger State Sen. Virgil Smith.

If you don't cast a ballot Aug. 6, you are allowing your opinion to be discounted, not only on candidates, but your money when it comes to new millage for the city of Westlanbd's police and fire departments and the Wayne County parks.

Admittedly, it's hard to keep interest in pol-Litics when it's summer. But don't let relaxation or being too busy at work stop you from

The deadline is 4 p.m. Aug. 5 - the day before the election.

Of course, there's also time to register to vote in the Nov. 5 general election.

And when you head to the polls Aug. 6, be sure that you've educated yourself on the candidates for whom you will be voting, as well as the Wayne County parks millage request. An uninformed voter is as bad as a voter who can't be bothered voting.

Don't go to the polls hoping you'll recognize someone's name on the ballot.

Your opinion and consequently your vote is too important for that.

Enjoy the summer, but take time to consider candidates in the various offices up for grabs, as well as the Wayne County parks millage and then get out and vote.

Your vote does count.

POINTS OF VIEW

Car crazy

Putting the world on wheels a cause worth celebrating

With such grand events as the Grand Prix, hydroplane races, the big fireworks show and the Michigan Humidity Festival this past month, you might think it would be impossible to squeeze in one more joyous celebration.

Yet, somehow, we still had to work in a birthday. This is, as you all must know by now, the 100th anniversary of the car. I don't know how much attention this momentous occasion drew elsewhere on the globe, but around these parts, this is big stuff. Perhaps this is due to the rich history this area has with the automotive industry, or perhaps it is because, without it, about 75 percent of us would be unemployed and on the brink of enrolling in that school that Sally Struthers pitches on the tube. Whatever the reason, a proper celebration was had, complete with Jay Leno as grand marshal.

Nothing against Jay, but I would have thought Mister Goodwrench to be the best choice because, if this is the 100th anniversary of the car, it is also the 100th anniversary of the car repair. I should point out that the only thing that qualifies me to write about cars is that I went to Henry Ford High School. Beyond that, I don't know zip about the things. I don't know a PCV valve from a fire hydrant, and, if I had to change my own oil, I wouldn't know if I was supposed to use safflower or canola.

If my car requires anything more complicated than filling the tank, I call on either Moe, the mechanic at my local service station, or my good friend, Al. Al has bailed out my sorry, mechanically-impaired carcass more times than I can count. Time after time, Al has answered my frantic call. He'd quickly fix the problem, and then he'd patiently explain to me, once again, why I shouldn't drive very far when all those damn little red lights on the dashboard keep flashing at me.

Clearly, I'm not an expert on the what-makes-them-go-and-whatmakes-them-stop stuff, but I'm still intrigued by the whole phenomenon. In the most mundane sense, cars are merely a means of getting from one place to another. But in the romantic realm, cars reflect the personality and position of the owners. For many people, their vehicles are so much a part of their images that they don't just drive them, they wear them. Whether it's quick and sporty, practical and efficient, or grand and ostentatious, the car often can tell you a lot about the person behind the wheel. As the old saying goes, "You are what you drive." In case you're wondering, the flagship of the Belanger fleet is a gray minivan with over 122,000 miles on it. It's seven years old, which is about 84 in human years, so the old saying hits home pretty hard.

Car fun: Area residents recently celebrated the 100th anniversary of the automobile. The event was held on Eight Mile and featured Jay Leno as grand marshal.

I can't help but wonder where we'd be if it wasn't for cars. If you're Earl Scheib or The Beach Boys, you'd probably be out of business, but if you are one of many young women I have seen, you'd be trying to put on your makeup, drink a cup of coffee, smoke a cigarette and talk on your cell phone all while riding no-handed on a bicy-

The century-long evolution of the automobile has brought the American auto industry back to the point of producing a world-class product. The quality and sophistication of American cars today are a tribute to the people who design and build them. This gain in quality, however, has taken a toll on the mystique.

For efficiency's sake, car styling doesn't change much from year to year. When I was a kid, it was easy to tell a '57 from a '58, and there was no confusing a Ford with a Buick. Today, a lot of them look the same, and, with their rounded, egg-like shapes, they look more like U.F.O. larvae.

Technologically, I suppose we are somewhere between the Flintstones and the Jetsons, and, no doubt, the next few decades will bring enormous advancement in vehicular travel. Personally, I'm looking forward to having electric cars available to the masses.

I understand the technology exists to make an electric car with the power, range and comfort to meet the American driver's needs. Of course, we will never see them on the streets unless the automotive powers-that-be can figure out what to do with all those extension cords.

Allegations of racism mar court reform efforts

Detroiters in the Legislature dipped into the sludge at the bottom of the pit - the race card - as they denounced a trial court reform plan passed July 3 by a hefty majority.

Rep. Carolyn Cheeks Kilpatrick, D-Detroit, equated the bill with the burning of black churches. "Racial," said Sen. Henry Stallings II, D-Detroit.

Et cetera, ad nauseum.

Detroit papers and broadcasters botched the story. To them it was the abolition of Detroit Recorder's Court, with its overwhelmingly black bench.

The story starts two years ago in the suburbs - Oakland Circuit Court, Farmington and Plymouth district courts, among others. They asked for more judges. No, said Gov. John Engler - not until we restructure all trial courts to deploy scarce resources. Engler was right.

Last year, the Legislature voted more money for trial courts. Engler vetoed it. Reform first, said he. And he was right.

The goals of reform are:

• A single "trial court" - no more layers of circuit, recorder's, probate, district and municipal courts that mystify folks. Yes, special divisions such as family court would be allowed, but basically a judge is a judge.

 A single formula for funding all trial courts based on caseload.

• Court boundaries would be entire counties. Larger counties could split into election districts - an option you would think Detroit would cheer.

To achieve the goals, voters would have to amend the constitution. Legislative leaders were ready to vote to put the amendment, SJR S, on the ballot. Detroiters balked.

So the Legislature passed bills to eliminate Detroit Recorder's Court as of Oct. 1, 1997, shift some probate court powers to circuit court, and set up the funding formula.

During negotiations, Republicans offered Detroit a deal it shouldn't have refused: Reconstitute Recorder's Court as a division of Wayne Circuit Court. Detroit would have its own judges hearing its own criminal cases.

Playing the race card, Detroiters say they fear blacks couldn't get elected in a countywide race for circuit court under the new law.

Yet for 10 years, Detroit Recorder's Court was hearing all the criminal cases in Wayne County. Chief Justice James Brickley and Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer thought that was fine. But Rep. Ted Wallace, D-Detroit, a black who has one of the best minds in the Legislature, called that situation "wrong; no defense" - precisely what many suburbanites said.

Brickley and others claim they corrected the problem by changing the rule so that circuit court hears suburban criminal cases. Not so. Suburbanites can't vote for Detroit Recorder's judges who hear criminal cases, but Detroiters can vote for Wayne Circuit judges who hear criminal cases.

And Detroiters never uttered a peep of protest on July 10 when Detroit Recorder's Judge Vera Massey Jones handled the sentencing of an

Allen Park bad guy.

Remember Vera Massey Jones? Last year, she ordered a blond Associated Press reporter to stop taking notes in her courtroom and had the notes confiscated. An appellate court reversed Jones, but the AP reporter never got her notes back.

Remember Detroit District Judge David Martin Bradfield, who threw out the Supreme Court's rules about cameras in court and substituted his own: "the last rearmost seat in the courtroom... no zoom lenses" (just like the Alabama buses prior to the 1960s)? The Free Press, known as "the white media" to some, got Brickley's Supreme Court to change that after three years.

Racism, anyone?

Games are culmination of swimmer's dream

BY BRAD EMONS SPORTS EDITOR

Olympic swimmer Sheila Taormina of Livonia is ready to break away.

But always near is a comfy security blanket, a giant cover that stretches like a canopy, staked with unending support from family, teammates, coaches and friends.

First, there is warmth that comes from her family, who will be sending an entourage of 21 to Atlanta to watch the 27-year-old Stevenson High graduate swim in a preliminary leg of the 800meter freestyle relay heat (July

The youngest of Sam and Moya's eight children, Sheila receives all the backing, while taking care of her cats, when she's around her home in Livo-

Then there is her coach, Greg Phill, who first met Sheila when she was 9. They have been a strong tandem ever since when they formed a nucleus together at the Clarenceville Swim Club.

Phill, who will also be watching from the stands in Atlanta, is a dedicated local swim coach who continues to fax workout sheets to his prized pupil, right up until the team checked into the Olympic Village at Georgia Tech.

Also, you can't forget her adopted family, where she once took refuge in Athens. No, not the Olympic birthplace of Greece, but up the road from

Shella Taormina

Atlanta at the University of Georgia, where she became an NCAA All-America.

"This is the second best place to be on this earth, I love it, the only place better is being home in Livonia," said Sheila, who spent the past two weeks training in Athens.

But it was only late last month that Taormina admitted "I didn't feel like an Olympian. I kind of panicked, freaked out. I was angry."

Taormina's set routine had been interrupted somewhat, bouncing from area pool to pool in hopes of getting a quality workout in a 50-meter pool. The quest became drudgery.

Moment to shine: "I've got to be ready to compete," Sheila Taormina says of her rigorous, but often interrupted, pre-Olympic training routine.

Because of conflicts with split is 2:00.8. camps and clubs, Taormina often found herself confined and confused. Taormina often trained in a special lane to herself, but only an arm's-length away were splashing youngsters.

Training conditions were less than ideal.

Finally somebody threw Sheila a life preserver.

She called her former coach. Harvey Humphries, an assistant at Georgia, who along with wife Wendy welcomed her immediately to their Athens home with open arms.

"They just took me in on the spur of the moment," Sheila says. "They always said there's a room for me if you need it.

"It was nobody's fault back home, I just didn't want to worry about where I was going to swim from one day to the next. This is my final meet and the biggest since the trials.

"I've got to be ready to com-

Sixth in trials

Taormina made the 20-member U.S. squad by finishing sixth in the 200-meter freestyle. She is guaranteed to swim in the prelims and as expected, if the U.S. qualifies for the finals, Taormina will get consideration for one of the four legs in the

The decision is up to women's coach Richard Quick (Stanford), who will most likely take the Trials' top two 200 freestyle individual qualifiers, Cristina Teuscher and Trina Jackson, and then choose between Lisa Jacob, Ashley Whitney, Annette Salmeen and Taormina for the other two spots.

Taormina's best time in the 200 freestyle is 2:01.35 (where she was the 1995 U.S. Open champion) and her best relay

"Sheila looks good, looks great and is real encouraged," Wendy Humphries said. Phill is also optimistic.

"She had her best workout down there last Saturday (July 6)," he said. "Her times are right where she wants to be."

And once the team assembled at the Atlanta airport to take the bus to the Olympic Village, Taormina felt like a true Olympian.

Security is big concern

And talk about a tight security blanket.

"Three FBI agents jumped on the bus to escort us to our building," she said. "They were looking underneath the bus. I guess they were checking for suspicious things like bombs.

"There were helicopters flying overhead. And every 100 yards there were Army guys holding 357s (guns). I got goose bumps."

After clearing standard security procedures, including gender testing, Taormina felt like she had gone to Disney World. "We swam in the Olympic pool and ate in the dining hall, which can sit 10,000 athletes at one time, we had shrimp cocktail," Taormina said. "We were given a shopping cart and it was unbelievable. Everything was free. They have five McDonald's inside the village, bowling, arcades, chapels, you name it. We got to adopt our own Cabbage Patch doll.

"We went through a huge line to get fitted for our uniforms and it moved along pretty fast. We got fitted right there, sweet leather jackets and rings.

"It was totally first-class. We also got a cool pager system where you can leave a 300-word message. We're in the brandnew dorms, while the other athletes are in the old dorms."

To bridge the generation gap, Taormina is rooming with 14-year-old Jilen Siroky of Charlotte, N.C., who will compete in the 200 breaststroke.

"They felt it was important to have the younger kids paired up with the older ones," Taormina said. "There are four bedrooms to an apartment. Janet Evans (Olympic gold medalist) gets her own because she gets so much attention from the media."

Although she wasn't Olympic caliber at that same age, Taormina was a success the moment she jumped into the water even though her parents weren't competitive swimmers. (Sam played tennis at Syracuse University.).

"Sheila was diving off the board when she was 2," recalls Moya. "We had to coax her out of the pool. Actually all my kids enjoyed it. They had fun in the summer. We belonged to Burton Hollow Swim Club ever since Sheila was born."

At age 5, Sheila began swimming for the Blue Racers at the Livonia Family Y.

More to life

Only a few years later, Taormina moved to the Clarenceville Swim Club to compete in statewide meets under the guidance of Gordie Larson and Phill.

"I first met her when she turned 9, she always had a lot of energy," Phill recalled. "She's always been a great competitor, but she was also able to enjoy things, laugh and have fun, but when the starter said Take your mark,' and shot the gun, she was always able to focus on what she needed to do.

"Swimming was always important, but not the only thing in Moya said her daughter was always able to separate swimming from the rest of her life. She excelled as a student, carrying a 4.0 grade-point average in high school.

bulk of her time other than her school work," her mother said. "But she was also involved in Special Olympics and her church.

"It was not a matter of sacrifice for me and my husband other than getting up at five in the morning to drive her over to practice at Stevenson. We attended all her meets, sometimes spending all day Satur-

"Swimming consumed a major, days, but her twin brother Steve was also involved. We never thought twice about it because it was our kids.

Sheila said her mother was an unsung hero in her climb to the U.S. Olympic squad.

"It's not what they've done, but the way they have been supportive and given me love over all these years," Sheila said. "My mom did make sacrifices."

Maybe I've got no business speaking out about this. But I'm going to anyway. That's because the matter has hit me, not directly, but it's hit me. And it has hit me wrong. It's hit my whole family wrong. My children are asking questions, as children frequently do when something is mentioned with such frequency on the news.

• It's on TV, it's on the radio, it's in the newspapers and magazines. And so we've entered into some discussions, the back-and forth kind, the kind where no matter what is said or by whom, we wind up shrugging our shoulders. We just

We don't understand. They don't, I don't, we all don't. But then I really don't want to understand. I don't want to understand or empathize or sympathize or walk around in the shoes of people who do the unthinkable, who do the unconscionable, who burn down churches.

Burn down churches, what kind of thing is that? It seemed that every morning for awhile there as I listened to the radio, as I made my way through the laundry and the diaper changes. I heard about one more church destroyed by fire.

And I scarcely believed what I was hearing. Who could do this? And to what end?

The whole thing makes absolutely no sense. Why would someone destroy a house of worship? It's just plain wrong on so many levels. I figure, a place of worship, no matter the

Being sun 'smart' can help prevent skin cancer

It's a fact. Someone dies from skin cancer every hour in the United States.

It's also a fact that more than 1 million new skin cancers will be diagnosed in the United States in 1996 and that half of all new cancers diagnosed this year will be skin cancers.

And it's also a fact that approximately, 7,300 people, more than 4,600 of them men, will die from melanoma skin cancer this year and that one in 87 Americans will get melanoma in their lifetime.

Believe it or not, in 1930, the risk of developing melanoma in the United States was one in 1,500, but by 1980, it had risen dramatically to one in 250.

By the year 2000, one in 75 people will develop this deadly form of skin cancer.

A malignant melanoma is characterized by the uncontrolled growth of pigment-producing tanning cells.

According to Dr. Mark Balle, a dermatologist at Henry Ford Hospital, melanomas may suddenly appear without warning, but can also develop from or near a mole. They are found most frequently on the upper backs of men and women and legs of women, but can occur anywhere on the body.

People with the highest risk of developing melanomas include: • Fair complexions who burn or blister easily. •Blonde or red hair or blue. green or gray eyes.

•Excessive sun exposure during childhood and teen years and blistering sunburns before age

•A family history melanoma.

•More than 100 moles on the body or 50, if under age 20.

The most common form of skin cancers is basal cell carcinoma, which strikes 800,000 Americans each year. Nearly all skin cancers are curable, if detected

And knowing what to look for helps. In the case of basal cell carcinoma, it's subtle changes to a spot or mole anywhere on the body, a growth that is crusting, changing or bleeding, or a sore that bleeds repeatedly.

For melanomas, it's asymmetry (half of the mole looks different from the other half), border irregularity (scalloped or poorly circumscribed edges), color (varied from one area to another. shades of tan and brown, black and sometimes white, red or blue), and diameter (larger than 6mm or the size of a pencil eras-

Balle has several recommendations to lessen the chances of developing skin cancer:

•Minimize sun exposure, especially during the peak sun hours of 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. when the sun's rays are most intense.

•Apply a sunscreen liberally and frequently and reapply every two hours when working. playing or exercising outdoors.

A sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of at least 15 is recommended for protection against skin cancer and premature aging of the skin. Even on cloudy days apply sunscreen because 80 percent of the sun's rays penetrate the clouds.

·Wear protective, tightly woven clothing during prolonged periods in the sun. Wear longsleeved shirts and pants when possible and dark colored items because they provide more protection. To protect your face, wear a wide broad-brimmed hat.

 Beware of reflective surfaces. Sand, snow, concrete and water can reflect up to 85 percent of the sun's damaging rays.

 Avoid tanning parlors and sun lamps. The ultraviolet rays emitted by these artificial sources are similar to those in sunlight and can cause sunburn, premature aging of the skin and increase the risk of skin cancer.

 Protect children by keeping them out of the sun or by minimizing sun exposure, especially those under the age of six months. Apply sunscreens on children older than six months of •Teach children and teenagers sun protection since skin damage from sun exposure accumulates over a lifetime.

The majority of damage from the sun occurs before the age of 20. One or more blistering childhood or adolescent sunburns can double the risk of developing malignant melanoma.

To detect skin cancer at an early and curable stage, Balle recommends people examine their skin and that of family members regularly for any changes in moles, freckles or skin discolorations.

Learn the early warning signs of skin cancer and at any sign of change, or if a new lesion appears, see a dermatologist immediately.

in Costa Rica. According to McCormick, who had his first opportunity to put up tin roofing, there was a shortage of many materials. Only one store in the country stocked drywall.

E-mail letters home told of physical fatigue, but also of mental fatigue from trying to translate 14 tenses of verbs.

"We worked in the rain, hard physical labor. You might wheelbarrow 200 wheelbarrows of cement a day," said McCormick, who lived in Tibas with missionary Tim Nelson, wife Julie and their young children.

Fateful trip

An 11-day trip with an adult and youth group from Covenant Community Church in Redford Township over Easter break in 1995 led to McCormick's second extended stay after Nelson invited members back. McCormick thought spending his second semester of 11th grade in Costa Rica would help him decide the direction of his future after high school.

He raised the $4,000 to cover travel and living expenses through contributions from family and church members and by holding car washes and collecting bottles and cans. "Matt did it on his own, After the initial trip, he was calling about going again before his parents even knew," said the Rev. H. Dalton Myers, pastor of the independent Bible church that helped raise the money. "Matt was impressed by the opportunity for the ministry, so we made it an official project of the church."

McCormick arranged to continue his schooling by enrolling in independent studies through the University of Nebraska in conjunction with Churchill High School. He was required to keep in touch with teachers at Churchill via e-mail and to regularly record his experiences in a

Steve Naumcheff worked out the

"Matt's always been very independent since he was a little kid," said his father, David. Matthew's mother, Jennifer, added, "If he wanted something with his heart he went for it."

McCormick was astounded to find students out of school when he arrived on Jan. 22. The Costa Rican school year begins in March to coincide with the start of the rainy season. He also was shocked that students are required to attend school only until sixth grade.

In addition to working ninehour days, five and six days a journal. School counselor/coach week, McCormick attended prayer and youth group meetings at the church in San Miguel three to five times a week in the evenings. He donated $500 from his expenses for the installation of windows in the church.

> For fun, he attended soccer games, a popular Costa Rican sport. Once a week, he would go downtown or take visiting work groups from American churches. including Troy Baptist, on sightseeing excursions to active volcanoes.

Not all of his experiences were pleasant, but they all taught lessons. While in Costa Rica, three church members drowned in the river. McCormick, who chatted non-stop for 3 1/2 hours about his trip to Costa Rica, suddenly found words difficult to come by.

"It was hard; the family was devastated," he said.

Future plans

Unsure if he will become a missionary, McCormick would like to return to Costa Rica in the future. In the meantime, he plans to attend a Christian college to study sociology and psychology after graduating from Churchill High School next year.

"I like helping people and sharing the gospel," he said. "I'll see what kinds of doors the Lord is opening and closing for me."

After learning about how most Costa Ricans work on banana plantations or cutting sugar cane, McCormick came to the conclusion that North Americans have the best life.

Central American staples were difficult to stomach and there was one item he missed most.

"We drank a lot of bottled water because San Miguel is notorious for bad water," he said. "Our diet consisted of rice and beans for breakfast and beans and rice for dinner.

"Pepsi and Coke were available everywhere, but I missed Mountain Dew and Dr. Pepper."

McCormick also "got used to not using the telephone. I didn't miss television because we had cable TV. We watched all of the playoff games and 'Home Improvement' in Spanish."

In Costa Rica, he said, every home has a TV. Homes that don't have electricity hook it up to a car battery. Some people have satellite dishes bigger than their 10-by-10-foot homes.

As for the one thing he doesn't miśs?

"When the rainy season starts all the bugs come out, so I don't miss the cockroaches running around my bedroom floor," he denomination, and no matter the race, the color, the creed of those who make their way to that place of worship are there because they're seeking peace and sense in their lives. And they're probably looking to God in their quest for peace and

Granted, I am no theologian with a deep understand of things religious. Instead, what I am is a person who freely admits her own limited capabilities who can't help but defer to the power out there, the power that many, but not all, call God, the power that's capable of coming up with all the beauty and the mystery of this planet. I defer to this power knowing full well that I could never have come up with such vastness and complexity, and I've never met anyone, or even committees of anyones, who

There is something, something much bigger than myself, and yourself, out there. And flying in the face of that awesome power by burning churches, that doesn't make sense. Respect and reverence for this power, the power behind the blue of a summer sky and even the blue in a stained glass window, that's how it should be. Why do you think moms and dads in houses of worship hush their noisy children when attending services? Respect and reverence for the powers greater than themselves, I suspect. Why do folks feel compelled to dress in their "Sunday best" on that day of the week when they go to their church or synagogue or mosque? Respect and reverence, I suspect.

Burning and destruction is not demonstrating reverence or respect to the powers greater than ourselves. And that's a big scary. Here I worry about Jack dropping a hymnal on the floor in the middle of the sermon. God probably doesn't like that very much, I worry. What must God think of the malicious destruction of entire church buildings?

And to what end are these crimes committed? That's really unclear. If the motivation is to hurt a whole group of people, to disassemble them, bust them up, to fracture brotherhood and diminish or break their spirit, I don't think it's working.

As a matter of fact, it just may prove to have the very opposite effect. As my children pointed out, using a favorite story of theirs, the plan of the bad person is backfiring. The Grinch couldn't steal Christmas by stealing the things of Christmas. Christmas came anyway. The citizens of the tiny village pulled together and made a happy noise in spite, in SPITE, of the malicious, divisive actions of the bad person.

Camaraderie, oneness, unity is born out of the disaster. The village becomes even stronger. And those of us sitting home, those of us not affected directly, find ourselves pulling for the village. We find ourselves pulling for the congregation which lost its church, pulling for the humans in each case.

The crime of arson is a nasty crime against people. And the law takes a very dim view of the whole business. Now, the crime of arson when a church is the target is also a crime against people. But what about the higher authority involved? How kindly will the Law, with a capital L, look upon that? If nothing else, that's what should be feared.

Those who burned the churches may feel they're getting away with something, and they may feel their message is loud and clear, and they may feel their mission has been carried out. The way we've got it figured, they are wrong on all counts. Contributions to Project Restoration, to rebuild the churches, may be sent to the Rev. Virgil Humes, New Hope Missionary Baptist Church, 5403 S. Wayne Road, Wayne.

important to today's writer. She wants to avoid conflict at all costs. She is congenial and flexible and often strolls down the path of least resistance. Sometimes she may act more congenial than she inwardly feels. Some of her friendships may be a little superficial.

To new ideas or concepts she appears to have a limited interest. She remains with what she knows and is familiar with, rather than broadening her horizons by trying the unfamiliar. She feels secure with the known without the realization that others' ideas or suggestions might prove better.

Our writer is self-determined. She knows what she wants and can be quite decisive in this area. In addition she has learned to

A need for security is ever with her. An undue dependence upon money or what it can provide is suggested. She is practical and pragmatic.

In her early life, she did not feel that she was numero uno in her family. She has become more independent now and does not want to be held back by her past. However, traces of this perceived deprivation still hover in the background.

She is a good conversationalist, but I think she would be discreet about sharing the personal things in her life with other peo-

The day includes two shotgun starts - at 8 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. a continental breakfast, 18 holes of golf, including a cart, lunch, awards reception, educational exhibits on women's cancer, raffle and more.

Past efforts have included grants to help train young pastors for inner city work as well as Sunday School and vacation Bible school "exchange student" programs.

St. Olaf's Afterschool Homework Program aimed at first through fifth graders. According to Rev. Bob Hanson, pastor at St. Olaf, the program focused on the development of skills and the building of self-confidence.

"We want to help our children to grow up with peaceful alternatives, to help their families at home and serve their community," he said. "The program provides students an alternative place to be so they do not get caught up in the gang and drug culture of the community."

Each Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5:15 p.m., the students were offered a safe, quiet place to do homework and be tutored

With advice from the City of Detroit Health Department's Bureau of Substance Abuse, a St. Olaf Parish nurse, a chemist and others in the field of science also taught special units to increase the students' interest in science and health and to educate them about the effects of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.

"This program is the first step in a comprehensive set of programs for our young people," Hanson said.

Up to this point, the program has been run by volunteers from the congregation and neighborhood. While that will continue, the financial support from Holy Trinity has allowed St. Olaf to hire a part-time person to direct and coordinate the Afterschool Program during the regular school year and during a twoweek summer program.

In addition to funding from Holy Trinity Lutheran, Faith Lutheran Church in Flat Rock and the Detroit Lutheran Coalition, a grant for the project was provided by Prevention Network.

Prevention Network is administered by Prevention Michigan Inc., with funding provided through the Michigan Department of Public Health/Center for Substance Abuse Services and the Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Federal Block Grant, with additional funding from the Skillman Foundation.

Jazzfest features metro Detroit all-stars

BY MATT JACHMAN AND KEELY WYGONIK STAFF WRITERS

Birmingham's fourth annual Jazzfest offers a heavy-hitting lineup of Detroit-area jazz allstars. Alexander Zonjic & Friends will kick off the festival 7-9 p.m. Thursday, July 25 at Shain Park.

Three of the biggest local legends
— Marcus Belgrave, Ortheia Barnes and Norma Jean Bell — will appear together 6:30-8:30 p.m. Friday, July 26, for a free concert in Shain Park.

The program will highlight each performer in his or her metier — Belgrave on fluegelhorn, Bell on saxophone and Barnes on vocals — for 25 minutes or so, Belgrave said.

"We all know each other's style," Belgrave said. "So a whole lot of magic will take place. ... We'll feature each one in their own context."

Offstage, Belgrave could be reunited with a former student whose star is rising in the jazz world. Pianist Geri Allen-Roney, now based in New York, will wrap up Jazzfest with a 6:30-8 p.m. appearance in Shain Park on Saturday, July 27. She will be joined by bassist Ralphe Armstrong and drummer Eric Allen.

Belgrave remembers Allen-Roney well. He taught her at Cass Technical High School in the 1970s and led a tour to Europe with Allen-Roney and several other young Detroit jazz artists in the early 1980s. "They were all just babies then," he said.

He is proud of his former pupil.
"Her (music) writing has become her forte. She was quite a find," he said.

"A lot of us had the good fortune to study with Marcus Belgrave," said Allen-Roney who recently became the first woman to win the international JAZZPAR Prize. "He was like a musical father for me. I've learned so much from him. By the time I got to New York I was ready."

Allen-Roney, who won a Soul Train Lady of Soul Award for best jazz album for "Twenty One," released in 1994 by Blue Note, is a new mom, and busy working on new recording due out this fall. She was recently featured on the front of "Billboard" in an article about "Women in Jazz." Her son, Wallace Vernell Roney, was born just three weeks ago.

"It's an exploratory album," she said about her newest project, which features trumpeter Wallace Roney, whom she married in 1995, and percussionist Cyro Baptista. "I'm trying to find my space, It's all original music, the idea was to reach for the stars. I think that's what makes this record special — a lot of records are being released, but you don't hear much original writing on new releases. I feel fortunate that my company,

She promises Birmingham Jazzfest audiences will be "pleasantly surprised," by her concert. "We'll do a combination of classics and original music. It's a culmination of everything I've learned. It's my goal to mix it up."

Allen-Roney said she's looking forward to visiting metro Detroit. "I have family there, and it's always good to come home," she said. "My dad lives in Detroit. He and my mom, who passed in 1982, were my greatest inspiration. They were very supportive of my musical development. Hopefully, he'll come to the concert."

Like another Detroit jazz veteran, Wendell Harrison, Belgrave sees a great love for jazz overseas. "Detroit artists especially are respected around the world."

Preparing for Jazzfest will require coordinating the busy schedules of Belgrave, Bell and Barnes, Belgrave said.

"We've worked together many, many times," he said. "It's just a matter of tuning into the material we're going to do."

Francke creates fictional world with songs

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Stewart Francke has the rare talent of painting a picture with his words; both as a journalist and a songwriter. His songs weave tales of life in a small town, courage and the strength to make it through trying times.

His latest album "Expecting Heroes" (Wild Justice Records) continues the stories told on his debut effort "Where The River Meets The Bay" (Schoolkids Records).

"I've tried to create a fictitious place using the elements of life around here — the land, the water, the open fields .... But I think the most important thing is the songs have to be suggestive of another world, another reality to people to interest them," Francke explained.

It's important to Francke that his listeners lose themselves in his stories. "A songwriter, or any recording artist, they lay out their vision of the world. You either buy it or you don't. Like the beginning of a concert or the beginning of the record, you either buy the fact that they're going to take you somewhere on a trip that's provocative, compelling or dangerous. But at the crux of the songs really it's about confidence. self confidence. The worst thing that can happen. to somebody is they lose their self confidence. That's the conflict in the songs. The settings are all there, the descriptions are all there. The people in the songs maintaining confidence or losing confidence based on internal things or external things."

"Expecting Heroes" includes his favorite songs from "Where The River Meets The Bay" ("Kiss Kiss Bang Bang," "Expecting Heroes," "Union Town," "Where The River Meets The Bay" and "Gypsum Fair") and five new songs including his version of Van Morrison's "Into the Mystic."

Recorded at the Tempermill in Ferndale and Showplace in New Jersey with noted NYC knob-turner Bill Klatt (Everything But The Girl, Sting), the sophomore effort shows no signs of the dreaded sophomore slump. Delicate strings wrap around Francke's soulful voice on songs like "Auto Trade," while others (the rollicking "King of the Summer Hotel," and the relentlessly hook-laden "Union Town) show his newfound need to rock. The album took Francke on a new course, thanks to the birth of his second child, Stewart III.

preacher spreading the lost gospel of the clarinet.

The veteran musician, who performs and teaches around the world, wants to boost the clarinet's status in modern music, a status he says faded in the early 1900s with the rise in popularity of the saxophone.

The clarinet is a work of art, richer in history as well as in tone, and much more difficult to play, Harrison said. Though he plays the sax too, he considers it, by comparison, ordinary.

Backed by his Clarinet Ensemble, Harrison will bring the clarinet gospel to Birmingham Saturday, July 27, for a free concert in Shain Park as part of the city's fourth annual Jazzfest. He will also lead a free jazz workshop for young musicians in The Community House that morning.

"The clarinet is not really exposed to modern music today like it was in the early 1900s," Harrison said.
"We're doing something fresh with the clarinet."

Harrison spoke one afternoon last week before rehearsing with the Clarinet Ensemble. Preparing for Jazzfest, the group gathered on Detroit's east side at a recording studio run by Rayse Biggs, a journeyman trumpeter who played with Was Not Was and was at last year's Jazzfest.

This will be Harrison's second

Jazzfest, and he's looking forward to it. Last year, he was the music director as well as a performer. "They really like jazz," he said of the crowd the event draws. "They respond great."

They also respond great in Europe, which Harrison has toured many times.

There, he said, young musicians have put jazz on a pedestal and studied it from every angle.

"It's really respected... The people are so serious."

The jazz tradition in Europe, Harrison said, is strong enough that visiting U.S. performers no longer have to bring along side players—they find plenty of talent there.

In the U.S., where jazz was born, the story is different, he said. The genre is largely taken for granted. "We don't treat our own creations

As art lovers linger near the acrylic abstract titled "Hidden." they frequently comment about the "people holding hands" in the painting.

"I didn't paint it that way," (yet) people see messages or figures. I always have fitles but (they) don't necessarily reflect the content," said Enrique VanderTuin of Southfield.

"My paintings flow with the mood and feelings. I usually work in stages and layers. Some (are completed) in an hour; some in 20 hours; some take a year to finish," said the Argentina native.

VanderTuin is one of a handful of suburban artists whose work is currently displayed at the Willis Gallery in Detroit.

"The media (in this exhibit) includes ceramics, embroidery, oil and acrylic paintings, photography and prints," said Ursula Murray, art historian and exhibits coordinator for the Hispanic Arts and Education Center based at St. Anne de Detroit.

Nora Chapa Mendoza, of West Bloomfield, "paints in about four or five styles."

"I have developed my own (styles). My work is different all the time," said the full-time artist who is known for her hidden forms within the abstraction and also for painting women.

Mendoza's 36 by 40-foot oil painting entitled "Mar Caribe" (The ocean in the Caribbean) reveals pale shades of forest green, beige and white.

"You can feel the movement of the ocean waves hitting up (against) the rocks. (The painting) is not realistic — (there is) the illusion of the ocean," she said.

Mendoza, representing Chi-.. cano-Indian heritage, also has . several linoleum cuts at the show.

Alicia Palma Lesko of Plymouth, aims for "peace, beauty and serenity" in her art.

"Beauty for me is a very important value. I want beauty and harmony in my work. My dad was a painter — I can't remember not painting."

Lesko, born in Chile, has a woodblock print entitled "Alexandre," named for the 20th century Russian writer Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn.

"This (print) is his face from a portrait (I saw). His face has so much expression. I love faces. because you can see the soul of the person through the expression of the eyes. Of the three prints (in the exhibit), two are faces."

Lesko, a Livonia librarian, best summarizes the eclectic show as "an elegant mix of media, most are contemporary. . . each artist (having) a different objective in mind."

The exhibit features works by these local artists:

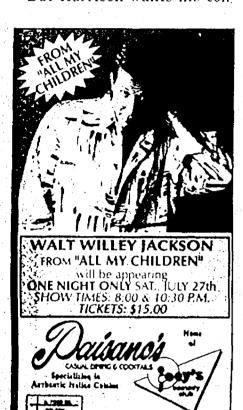

Graciela Bustos of West Bloomfield, painter/ceramist; Fernando Calderon, sculptor, Luis Calderon, ceramist, Bertha Cohen, painter, Bloomfield Hills: Gustavo Crembil, muli-media artist, Fullbright scholar studying at Cranbrook Academy of Art, Birmingham; Alicia Lesko, printmaker, Plymouth; Patri O'Connor, painter/furniture transformer, Farmington Hills; Poulet Perez, Jeanne painter/printmaker, Livonia.

Harrison moved easily between sax and clarinet as he helped the players get familiar with the structure.

Harrison has 16 recordings to his credit, three with the Clarinet Ensemble.

He went to New York City as a jazzman at 18, but has long been based in Detroit.

Celtic fiddler MacIsaac sports an angry attitude

CHRIISTINA

When Celtic fiddle player Ashley MacIsaac makes it big in the United States, he better look kindly on the Detroit area.

"My first gig ever in the United States was on my 13th or 14th birthday at an IRA club in Livonia," the 21year-old MacIsaac said. "It was a regular Irish club, but it was IRA-ish that night."

MacIsaac has come a long way in the last seven or eight years. On Friday, July 19, he will open up for the Chieftains at Meadow Brook Music Festival on Oakland University's campus in Rochester. Folk singer Nanci Griffith was originally scheduled to be on the bil, l but she dropped off due to personal reasons. A replacement had not been named at press time.

MacIsaac said he's unsure why Griffith left the tour, but he heard her say, "Due to the efforts of Mr. Ashley MacIsaac, Thursday (July 11) is my last night, but now I will no longer be a part of the tour."

"I don't know what those efforts

Last month the musician, who favors kilts, combat boots and bleached hair, released his U.S. major label debut "Hi. How Are You Today?" (A&M), which spawned the 93.9-FM CIDR "The River" hit "Sleepy Maggie." The album features the musician playing traditional fiddle tunes from his native Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, Canada, spiked with his modern musical tastes. They range from grunge to hip-hop, and guest musicians include Bass Is Base bassist Chin Injeti, Gaelic singer Mary Jane Lamond, the Canadian pop band Jale, and members of the classical group Quarteto

"I wanted to do a hip-hop track, and I wanted to do a more Ramones sounding fiddle track or quartet sounding solo track, but these were just my ideas. To be completely honest, the stuff came up because I was around people who could do it," MacIsaac said.

"They worked around my structures, and we said. How would you make a dance tune, like I'd heard in the New York clubs, out of a fiddle tune? But it's the same kind of hook, Fiddle tunes are just 16 bars of dance hooks."

MacIsaac, who calls himself a "fiddle" slut," has been playing the fiddle since he was 8 1/2.

"My father once said to me, If you want to play the fiddle, get mad at it or "don't play it at all." When I go out and do my live show. I present the image of angry young man when on stage. It's angst or punk, and that's what the Celts were, punks. But it's also about romancing because the Celts were also about

Cape Breton, Macle ac said, is one of the last remaining Coltic satellite communities of the world. The city has "an ultimate connection with Detroit. A huge junket of musicians went from Cape Breton to work in the car plants until maybe 15 years ago. There was a huge population by ag in and around the Michigan and Windsor (Canada) area. Tors of people were playing music. There were step dancers and bagpipers. There's not the same sort of outbreak into other cities," he explained.

Stratford stages great theater and a lot more

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

Stratford, Ontario, is famous for its annual Shakespeare festival, but the town and environs have much to offer in addition to great theater.

Stratford dates from 1832 and its connection with the Bard predates the theater by 120 years. The Festival has brought honor to the town and the poet equally. Beginning in 1953 with a tent production of "Richard III" starring Alec Guinness, the festival has grown to a schedule of 11 plays at three venues presented in repertory from early May to early November.

The festivals range has expanded to include theatrical works from all eras and counthree Shakespeare plays, the festival also includes an American musical comedy, a children's production, a French farce, two dramas by noted Amercian playwrights, an absurdist classic and a recent theatrical hit about a famous composer.

Variety has become the norm at the Stratford Festival and variety is also the norm in activities offered to Stratford visitors.

Stratford is a great place to walk and bicycle. Its many parks, beautiful and distinctive homes and lively downtown make it an ideal vacation destination. The surrounding countryside and other interesting towns, such as St. Mary's, offer much to do and see.

ments. There are also several motels. We stayed at the immaculately maintained Queen's Inn. This downtown hotel was originally opened in 1850 as the Queen's Arms. It was rebuilt in 1905 following a fire and that is the present exterior, notable for its domed entry. The rooms are clean and distinctively furnished. The Inn is conveniently located within walking distance of all three Stratford theaters.

The Queen's Inn has three restaurants, but they are just a small part of the dining possibilities. At the high end Rundles, the Old Prune and the Church have become favorites with theater goers. This year we tried two relatively new establishments. We sampled new cuisine Georgian, Federal and Victorian

Box 818, 88 Wellington St., Stratford, Ont. n5a 6w1, will provide you with a hiking and biking map of the Stratford area and a pamphlet "Stratford Strolls" with walking tours of the city, including information on distinctive public buildings and private homes. The residential sections of town are interesting for their architecture which uses native stone and brick, often in a design that has become known as the Ontario cottage. But there are also fine examples of Tudor, hall and the Perth County Courthouse as other fine examples of civic architecture.

The town is also notable for its beautiful park system. The length of the Avon River is a green belt leading to the impressive tent-like Festival Theater. Along the park, joggers, bikers, soccer players, softball players, couples and exhibiting artists share space happily.

Nearby St. Marys is another excellent place for architecture buffs. The fortress like Opera House is no longer used for its original purpose as a 1,000 seat auditorium, but the exterior has been beautifully restored in all is unique splendor. St. Marys' distinctive townhall was built of limestone and has a romane-

Richardson. Behind the townhall* is Canada's first Carnegie Library. Built in 1905 of the same limestone as the townhall it has since been modernized in .... 1988 with an attractive and appropriatly scaled addition.

St. Mary and several other nearby villages are home to antique shops with special emphasis on Canadian memorabilia.

Stratford is home to several fine art galleries, book stores and antique shops.

In addition to plays with special appeal for children, "Alice ... Through the Looking Glass" and "The Music Man," the Stratford area also offers farm tours, trol-

Festival gets electric energy from 2 veterans

BY HUGH GALLAGHER

Two great actors in demanding roles are the heart of this year's' 44th Stratford Festival. William Hutt and Brian Bedford create that special electricity that makes theater an intimate and unique experience that cannot be duplicated on film or television.

King Lear

Hutt, now in his 33rd season at Stratford, brings to "King Lear" a rigid dignity and a controlled cadence that disintegrates as Lear drifts into madness and shame.

"Lear" is Shakespeare's unflinching look at growing old and the conflicts it creates between generations. Often hailed as Shakespeare's greatest play, "Lear" has multiple layers of meaning and insight and a rich variety of flawed characters.

before at Stratford, but he is now about family relationships and a of Lear's age and this gives spe-quieter madness. cial poignancy to his performance. Few actors speak Shakespeare's language with such a precise sense of meaning and few perform Lear with such early strength and power. Hutt starts at a higher point to make his fall that much more spectacular.

Stratford artistic director Richard Monette's production is clear and straightforward, despite the Edwardian costumes. It is pared in such a way as to put emphasis on Lear and his attempts to understand what is real and what isn't. This is not an emotionally raging production as is often the approach to Hutt has played the role twice Lear's mad scenes. This is a play

In addition to Hutt, this production gets strong performances from Colombe Demers as a sweet but too proud Cordelia, Lewis Gordon as the devoted and level headed Kent (he also replaces Hutt as Lear in selected fall performances), Peter Donaldson as the misjudged Edgar who feigns madness and Jordan Pettle as Lear's fool and sadly ignored conscience. Continues through Nov. 2 in repertory at the Festival Theater.

Amadeus

Brian Bedford is an actor's actor, a man with a superb command of every acting trick. He is able to use them all as the troubled Antonio Salieri in Peter Shaffer's "Amadeus."

This is a welcome return of last year's Stratford production of this popular if overly glib historical drama. Salieri was a court composer to Emperor Joseph II of Austria. He may or may not have poisoned Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Shaffer's play imagines an elderly and bitter Salieri telling his story directly to the audi-

Bedford is on stage for the entire production and must age and grow younger before our eyes. He must also suggest the complex personality of Salieri, a worldly man with the curse of being able to recognize great music but not the ability to write it. Bedford suggests the style, rancorous wit and rich regret that make Salieri a fascinating character.

His nemesis is Mozart, who in Shaffer's play is a genius with the manners and mentality of a rude little boy. Stephen Ouimette has neither Tom Hulce's babyface or the hysterical giggle that made Hulce seem like a naughty boy in the film version. Ouimette is more a foulmouthed and arrogant teenager, which in some ways makes him a stronger adversary especially when he argues his positions on music.

play that suggests something of Canada N5A 6V2.

Mozart's genius. Still the rivalry. makes fine theater.

This is often strong theater and Bedford is mesmerizing. From the very first moment he is wheeled on stage, the audience is in his very capable hands. Continues through Nov. 1 in: repertory at the Festival Theater.

Also this year at Festival are Meredith Willson's "The Music. Man" and Lillian Hellman's "The :-Little Foxes." At the Avon is Feydeau's "A Fitting Confusion, Shakepeare's controversial "The Merchant of Venice," a stage: adaptation of "Alice Through the Looking Glass" and Christo pher Plummer in a one-manshow, "Barrymore." At the Tom: Patterson Theater the plays are Shakespeare's "As You Like It," Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth" and Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot."

For ticket information, call 1-800-567-1600 or write to Stratford Festival Box Office, P.O. The film has a scene not in the Box 520, Stratford, Ontario,

Try 'Multiplicity,' you'll like it

JOHN MONAGHAN SPECIAL WRITER

Michael Keaton's character in "Multiplicity" has a problem we can all relate to: he never seems to have enough time. To keep on top of his job. To spend quality time with his family. To play an occasional round of golf.

All this changes when a scientist gives him the opportunity to clone himself, not once but three times. The idea is that while Number 2 brings home the bacon, Number 3 will help around the house, allowing his wife (Andie MacDowell) to return to work.

If you can handle the gimmicky premise of "Multiplicity." chances are you'll like it - maybe even a lot. It's a splendid showcase for the talents of Michael Keaton, who has created some surprising subtleties among the obvious quirks in his split personalities.

His Number 2 is a cocksure version of the way he was in his post-college days: still single. focused on his job, a slob. Number 3, meanwhile, embodies his more sensitive nature, the side that marriage is supposed to bring out. He keeps them in the garage where they live an Odd Couple existence out of sight of the rest of the family.

Anxious to get help themselves, the clones create a Number 4, though, as they point out sheepishly, "a copy of a copy never comes out as sharp as the original."

Though far from original, the scene where Keaton and his clone meet in the same restaurant is also very funny. Better yet is the night he's away and all three clones find it difficult to keep the cardinal rule - not to sleep with the main man's wife.

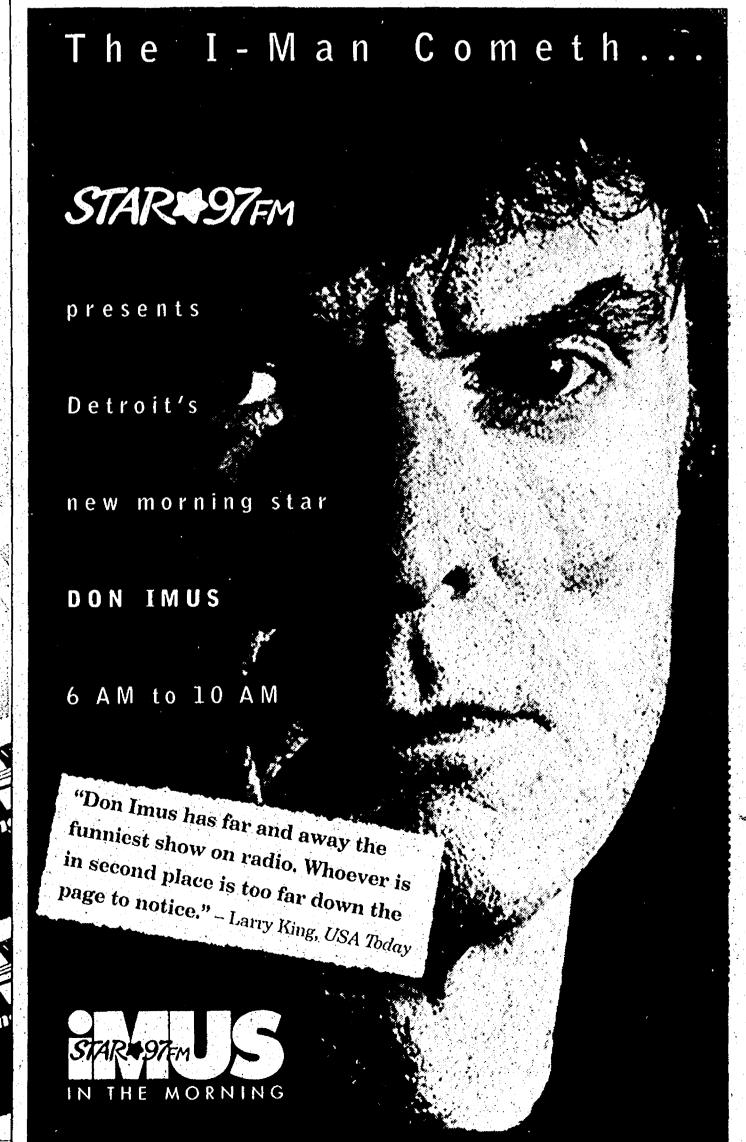

"Multiplicity" is directed by Harold Ramis, who made the superior "Groundhog Day" a few years back. That movie said that fullest, realizing that even the tone phone, mailbox 1866.

most mundane routine is a part of life's joys. It was a sort of "Twilight Zone" meets "It's a Wonderful Life" and the balance worked.

The message here is basically the same, though a little muddled. There are some moving moments, especially those involving MacDowell's confused wife. She thinks she's going nuts when she tries to pick up a conversation that she started earlier with one of the others.

Of course the special effects take much of the credit for the whole charade (a scene where the three clones shave in the same mirror is an especially clever piece of work). But it takes an actor as versatile as Keaton to make "Multiplicity" even remotely believable and, as it turns out, likable.

John Monaghan welcomes your calls and comments. To leave him a voice mail message, you have to live each day to the . dial (313) 953-2047 on a touch.

Birmingham restaurants showcase local musicians during Jazzfest

BY KEELY WYGONIK STAFF WRITER

Jazz is on the menu at 12 Birmingham restaurants participating in Jazzfest Thursday, July 25 to Saturday, July 27.

"Jazzfest is a good event, it brings a lot of new faces to Birmingham," said Dennis Brinker, Birmingham Restaurant Collection chairman. "It's a great event, it brings lots of people to town. You hope you can get new faces, so you can make new friends, and get some new customers. People can sample lots of different restaurants, and get a feel for what downtown Birmingham has to offer," said Bill Roberts, who owns 220, Streetside Seafood, and Beverly Hills

Many restaurants will be offering food and drink specials to celebrate the three day event. Most will not be accepting reservations, patrons will be served first come, first served. The exceptions are Alban's, which is accepting reservations for parties of six or more, Elie's Cafe, Ocean Grille, Phoenicia, Old Woodward Grill for parties of 8 or more, and the Townsend Hotel.

Vocalist Sheila Landis, who was scheduled to perform at City Grill, which closed on July 2, found a spot at the last minute at Cook's Garden. She will be performing there with guitarist Rick Matle. They will perform a mix of old jazz standards, pop tunes, blues and songs from their recently released CD "Fine and Mellow."

letes are able to represent their country in the greatest sports spectacle on the globe - the Olympics. For many of those athletes, this will be the single opportunity in a four-year span for them to be near the center of the world's athletic stage. Swimming is one of those sports. On Saturday, those who tune in early for NBC's Olympic coverage will be able to see what it's like to pursue a once-every-four-years dream.

They'll be able to see it through the eyes of five swimmers who didn't make it.

The program, entitled "Water-.. mark," is a local production that will air nationally on NBC at 2 p.m. EST. It was written by Char DeWolf, from Livonia, and produced by DeWolf and Sue Marx.

The 60-minute documentary examines the trials of the five swimmers, all members of the Livonia-Novi Spartan Aquatic Club, as they pursue their Olympic dream.

Four of the five are exceptional talents of local renown: Ron Orris, a Plymouth Salem and Michigan State University graduate, Scott DeWolf, from Livonia Stevenson and Texas

A&M; Anne Aristeo, a senior-to-be this fall at Stevenson; and Matt Martin, a Westland John Glenn grad now at Stanford.

All have trained for the bulk of their swimming careers under Dave Segraves, head coach of the Spartan Aquatic Club.

Certainly the angle, focusing on five who didn't make it, is a unique one. But, as Orris says on camera, "(Segraves) taught me how to win, and, more important, how to fail."

Indeed, much of the program deals not with the incredible amounts of yardage the swimmers put in while. training, but with handling the mental duress associated with it.

The initial spark for this program, according to Segraves, was ignited years ago, when producer Char DeWolf's son Scott started to excel in the pool.

"Char's been around swimming since her kids were young," he said. "She watched Scott's progress through the years and saw a remarkable transformation, and not just in

"But the story just sat there, and nce every four years, ath- she thought it needed telling."

It is rather unique to find a single coach, such as Segraves, who has been associated with five Olympic-caliber swimmers for such a long period of time. Four of them qualified for the Olympic Trials; only Martin missed.

His disappointment is not glossed over in the film - not at all. Indeed, the producers use statistics from the start to hammer home the point referred to later by Orris, on handling failure. The film starts with:

"There are 250,000 competitive swimmers in the United States. Of those, 450 will qualify for the Olympic Trials. Of that number, only 44 will make the U.S. Olympic Team." Long odds, for sure. The potential for disapppointment is great. Learning from it, and how to handle it, are part of Segraves' mission. Examples, from the film: •Scott DeWolf talks of the poor sportsmanship he openly displayed at meets as a child when he didn't swim well. Aristeo tells of being overwhelmed by disappointment, to the point of tears. And Segraves explains how he works with them, helping them focus on their individual tasks. "This tells a story of about 500,000 swimmers just like them," he said. His instructions to Aristeo, for example: "Don't ever let me see you cry in public again. Because every time you cry, someone sees a nick in your armor."

The film is full of such anecdotes and insights. "Watermark" starts with training sessions targeting the 1995 Senior Nationals last August in Pasadena, Calif. It was a final chance to make the Olympic Trials.

After that, it loosely follows the swimmers through countless training sessions, highlighting Segraves' psychological ploys and preparations. It concludes with the U.S. Olympic Trials last March in Indianapolis.

In the end, the film depicts what it takes to succeed in a sport like swimming - and then it redefines success.

Segraves certainly was happy with it: "It shows what they've become along the pathway to their dreams,' he said of the program.

"These are the kinds of kids you would want to turn the world over to someday."

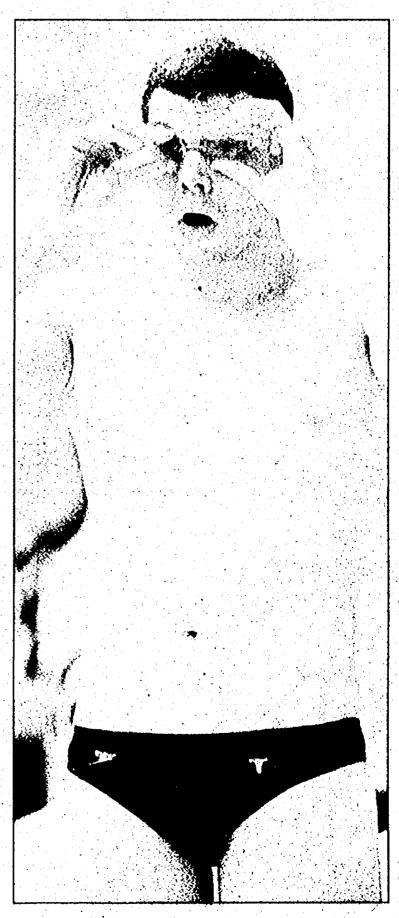

They come across as well-prepared to handle such a task.

Kalczynski helps Hines Park salvage split vs. DCI

Brian Kalczynski's hot bat continues to help Hines Park Lincoln Mercury stay in first place in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League season.

Kalczynski (Farmington/Birmingham Brother Rice/University of Michigan) hit a pair of home runs as Hines Park salvaged a split of a double-header Sunday against second-place Decision Consultants Inc. at Livonia's Ford Field.

DCI scored five runs in the sixth inning of the first game to win 6-2, before Hines Park regrouped to win the second game, 3-2.

Hines Park broke a 2-2 tie with a run in the bottom of the seventh to win the nightcap. Kalczynski went 3-for-4, including a solo homer, in the second game. It was the second game in three days that Kalczynski went

"He's just playing unbelievably," coach Gary Pierce said.

The split was important because it left Hines Park with an 18-3-2 record, two games ahead of DCI with four remain-predicts Hines Park needs at least three wins the rest of the way to earn a bid to Johnstown. Pa. for the All American Amateur Baseball Association national tournament.

Because only three teams remain in the LCBL, there is no post-season tournament and the regular-season champion gets the trip to Johnstown.

"No way are we a lock," Pierce

Joel Hillebrand (Madonna University) kept DCI's hopes of winning the regular season title alive with a four-hitter in the first game.

Kalczynski had two of those hits, including a solo homer in the third that gave Hines Park a brief 2-0 lead.

Hillebrand also surrendered a first-inning run as Chris Kirian (Eastern Michigan) singled to send Steve Hornsberger (Central Michigan) home from second base.

Kalczynski started the inning with a single and was out at second on Hornsberger's fielder's choice. Hornsberger reached second on a stolen base to give Kirian a runner in scoring position.

Pete Quinn (Redford Thurston/Madonna) and Jason Rice (Michigan State) had two hits each for DCI.

Rice's single scored Joel Fabris (Madonna) from second base to cut the deficit to 2-1 in the third inning. Fabris reached base with a single and went to second when Delano Voletti (Madonna) was hit by a pitch.

DCI batted around to score five in the sixth. Quinn and Rice highlighted the rally with tworun doubles.

HInes Park starting pitcher Chris Hesse lasted four innings before being lifted without getting an out in the fifth.

Darric Terry was the pitcher of record, allowing six hits in his short stint.

Mark Fleming (Wayne State) was the winning pitcher in Game 2, allowing five hits with one walk and eight strikeouts in going the distance. He is 4-1 as a pitcheer.

Kalczynski led off the third with a solo homer and Hines Park added another run that inning with an RBI single by Chance Beam (St. Andrews College). Kirian scored after reaching base on an error and advancing to second base on a walk to Lance (Redford Thurston/Henry Ford).

DCI got a run back in the third after hits by Chris DeShetler and Fabris, a sacrifice by Eric Marcotte (Plymouth Canton/Madonna) and a sacrifice fly by Voletti.

DCI tied the score in the top of the seventh when Ryan Kelly tripled and came home on DeShetler's sacrifice fly.

Hines Park scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh. Kirian led off with a double and went to third on a single by Stacey McCollum. An intentional walk to Lance loaded the bases and Beam's ground ball got through the drawn-in infield for a single to score Kirian with the winning run.

The losing pitcher was Fabris, who pitched one inning in relief of starter Mitch Jabczynski.

The Livonia Baseball Club, which has lost four games by one run, has returned the favor. The LBC has won three of its last four games by the same margin. Dearborn No. 1 was the latest victim Tuesday night as LBC won a regularly-scheduled game, 10-9, and the continuation of an earlier suspended game, 5-4, in 11 innings. With three games remaining, LBC is now in sole possesssion of second place with a 14-4 Little Caesars Mickey Mantle Closed Division record. It trails Dearborn No. 2 and Windsor Walker

The top four teams will play against each other upon completion of the regular season in an elimination tournament to determine the league champion.

LBC sweeps 1st-place team, 10-9, 5-4

The first game against Dearborn No. 1 had four lead changes.

Steve Anderson (Stevenson) pushed his record to 4-0 by striking out 11 and walking none before being relieved in the seventh inning by Johhn Ross (Churchill), who picked up the save retiring the final two batters on strikes.

Kirk Damas (Clarenceville launched his third home run of the season with a man on board. Jim Dietrich (Stevenson) collected three hits in four at-bats and Brent Wojtyniak (Stevenson) boosted his team leading average to .429 with a 2-for-3 outing.

The continuation game took only one inning to complete with Jon Ritzler (Stevenson) picking up his fourth win of the season and improving his earned run average to 1.87. He struck out two of the three batters he faced.

In the bottom of the 11th, Brandon Gajda (Stevenson) drove a single up the middle scoring David Stando (Stevenson) who had reached third on two Dearborn miscues.

LBC banged out 16 hits in a 13-5 win over Dearborn No. 2 on Monday night at Henry Ford Community College. On the mound for LBC was Ritzler, who threw a five hitter over six innings and left with a 9-2 lead. Wojtyniak, Brett Dubay (Stevenson) and Damas contributed two RBI each. Gajda went 2-for-4 and Stando 3-5.

When the disc's friction material wears out, the clutch slips, Before a clutch replacement is decided upon however, it should be determined if a clutch adjustment is all that is necessary. On some cars, an incorrect adjustment may mimic a burned-out disc and a simple adjustment can return the clutch to normal working order. To see if an adjustment is necessary, depress the clutch pedal. The first inch or two of pedal travel, referred to as "free play," should come easily. After that, there should be some sudden resistance felt to the force applied to the pedal. Most clutch designs require free play, without which the clutch can slip.

Riding a clutch is one sure way to wear out this part quickly, often requiring a costly repair that careful driving could have evolded. Friday's final regular-season game, the team could have easily given up and cealed, which upset Tri-County en started looking ahead to the American Amateur Baseball Congress District Tournament.

But instead, coach Lou Pirronello's team showed some life, scoring 14 runs in the fifth en route to a 20-9 victory over the Michigan Indians at Redford's Capitol Park.

The win sends Concealed into the North Oakland District in Rochester Hills with some momentum and a 31-9 overall record.

Concealed tied for first place with North-Farmington West Bloomfield in the Little Caesars Federation League with a 17-3 record, but NFWB was awarded the regular-season championship because it won the first tiebreaker: strength of schedule.

Concealed opens district play at noon Friday against Mid-Michigan.

The top two teams in the district advance to the regional in Marshall. The third-place team has to go to the regional in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Finesse program wins 4 state championships

Look out, Rock Hill, S.C.

That's the next destination for the Finesse girls softball program, which completed a clean sweep at last weekend's state tournament.

Finesse's 18, 16, 14 and 12under teams won state tournaments. Finesse doesn't have a 10-under team, which helps explain why it didn't win that state tournament.

Rock Hill, S.C. is the site of the National Softball Association World Tournament, which starts this week.

The 14-under team won its fourth-straight state tournament last weekend at Rotunda Field in Dearborn.

Finesse beat Clinton Valley, 6-3, in the championship game of the state tournament after winning the semifinal game over the same team, 8-4.

Finesse had an easier time in games 1 and 2, beating Garden City 17-0 and Interlakes Flames 18-7, respectively.

The perfect record ran Finesse's overall mark to 30-7.

Rachel Sundberg led Finesse with a .750 batting average (9for-12, with one home run, two doubles and five RBI).

Katie King hit .667 (8-12, three homers, and a team-high 10 RBI and nine runs scored), while Samantha Crews batted .500 (6-12).

Other team members included Jillian Davies, Sarah Lewis, Kim Dombrowski, Karlene Kilburn, Erin Pickens, Amy Paling, Sara Masterson, Taryn McCloud, Jillian Minjoe, Ashley Julien, Andrea Spencer, Julie Stoll, Tracy Hudson, Angela Bako, Danielle Dickinson and Jackie Migliore.

"We had beat them (Clinton Valley) in the Canton tournament, improving every week," coach Bob Bako said. "We truly believed we were going to-win it. On Saturday it was our offense, we stung the ball pretty good. We caught the ball really well, made a lot of nice plays on Sunday. Early in the season, we scored some runs, turned around and gave stuff back to them. There was not a lot of concentration, pop ups with no communication. We tried to get them to communicate more and it seemed to pay off."

CUB collected nearly 350,000 signatures, 100,000 more than required by law, so even if some are ruled invalid there should be plenty of signatures to satisfy the State Board of Canvassers and bring the proposal to a pub-

Bear hunters have been conthat this threat to end bear hunting as we know it is real. CUB states it isn't coming after bear hunting, just a couple "unethical" methods used by hunters to pursue bear. But take away the use of dogs and bait, the way 96-percent of the bears are taken in this state, and you have essentially killed bear hunting in Michigan. Other methods such as glassing or driving simply won't be effective here with the enormous tracts of swamps and woodlands in the Upper Peninsula where the majority of Michigan's bear population resides.

vinced for a couple of years now

Double jeopardy

Bear hunters have said this initiative would eventually affect all hunting but many sportsmen have doubted that claim. Unfortunately, that fact is becoming clearer as election day draws nearer. Archery deer hunters, raccoon hunters and bobcat hunters could well suffer from the trickle-down effects of this so called "bear hunting" issue.

"If this thing passes the DNR will still have to try to manage the resource," said Ron Lundberg, executive director of Citizens for Professional Wildlife Management, a coalition of sportsmen groups formed by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs to fight the anti-hunting campaign. "The thing is, the language of the proposal says you to hunt deer over bait and you can't hunt bears when its legal to hunt bobcats and raccoons with dogs. It could have an effect on these other seasons because you'll have to hunt bear some-

The ballot proposal calls for no bear hunting from March 1-August 31 and no bear hunting during deer, raccoon or bobcat season if the seasons allow the use of dogs or bait.

Last year's Michigan bear season ran Sept. 10-Oct. 26. With the use of dogs and bait 5,652 licensed Michigan bear hunters harvested 1,458 black bears during that 47-day season. That's a success rate of just 26 percent, despite the use of dogs and bait.

Reduced seasons?

Michigan's archery deer season, in which baiting is a legal practice, runs Oct. 1-Jan. 1, while our raccoon season, in which the use of dogs is legal. runs Oct. 1-Jan. 31. Since black bears hibernate in Michigan from November through March, with the proposal language submitted, the only possible bear season would be Sept. 1-30.

"That puts the DNR in a situation where they would only have a 30-day bear season in September, or they would have to take something away from the coon or deer hunters," explained Bloomfield Hills resident Bill Walker,

Playing their second game in a gan Sportsmen's Defense Alliance and a board member of the Michigan Bear Hunters Association. "In September there is full foliage in the woods and the visibility is very poor. I think the DNR would be faced with a situation where they wouldn't even come close to killing the desired number of bear needed to keep the population under control. They very well could be faced with a situation where they would have to extend the bear season and take something away from another season."

CUB, which was formed by a disgruntled part-time Michigan resident because he had a problem with trespassing, is financially supported with money from out-of-state anti-hunting organizations. CUB claims this attack isn't an attempt to end bear hunting, only the unfair practices of using bait and dogs. CUB says it wants to protect bears and keep bear cubs from being orphaned.

Getting to the truth

CUB doesn't explain that despite these "unfair" practices more than 74-percent of Michigan's bear hunters return home empty handed each year. CUB doesn't explain that the bear population is healthy and thriving with upwards of 10,000 animals, or that bear cubs and sows with cubs are protected by law in Michigan. CUB also doesn't explain that with the use of dogs look at their quarry before deciding if they want to harvest that particular animal or not. When using bait and dogs, the hunter knows the size of the bear, if it's alone or raising cubs.

Take away these techniques and because of the reclusive nature of bears those hunters who are fortunate enough to catch a glimpse of a bear will only have a split second to decide if they are going to shoot or not. There will be no opportunity to make a wise decision, just a quick snap judgment.

Support the sport

I urge all hunters to become pro-active. The days of sitting back quietly and waiting for opening day to arrive are gone. The days of spending all our extra money on hunting trips and new equipment are gone. We must take an active role in spreading the truth about hunting and professional game management to our non-hunting friends and relatives. We must make allowances to financially support the pro-hunting campaign and the effort to derail this misguided ballot initiative. We must make a stand against the anti-hunting forces that want nothing more than to force their views and on all Americans.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker

Dietitians dish out healthy choices at market

BY VALERIE OLANDER STAFF WRITER

An ugly thought for the day: What would a dietitian say after looking into your grocery cart?

Gasp. Two new programs offered by Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills and Oakwood Healthcare System in Dearborn give healthy shopping tips to consumers by walking them through a supermarket and helping to make wise food choices.

"One of the biggest problems is they're not organized," said Gale Cox, a dietitian from Botsford.

Besides from getting clients to provide a tell-all food diary to get an idea of their eating habits, one of the first things she does is to help the shoppers get organized. A grocery list is essential. It also helps to include on the list the recipes that are planned for the week "so you don't go home from the grocery store realizing you bought way too much and you're still one ingredient short," said Cox.

As a society we are inundated with information on fat content and cholesterol levels, but Cox sees a new trend in healthy eating topics emerge: Nutrientquality food. It's back to the basics for a generation of people who spend most their shopping experience in the frozen food sec-

Although looking at the fat content on food labels is important, it is just as crucial to look at the nutrient quality in foods, such as zinc and magnesium.

"Seventy percent of the food sold in grocery stores is not healthy. The micro-nutrients striped from (packaged and processed) food are going to end up causing a lot of problems to our health — problems that we don't even know exist today," she genated-anything," Cox said. It creates trans fatty acid, which acts as a saturated fat. Trans fatty acids also aren't listed with the nutrition facts on the food label. (Total fats should only represent 10 percent of the product's calories.)

Look at the product's ingredi-

Look for natural ingredients. If you don't know what it is, chances are its not a healthy food choice.

More grains and vegetablebased meals is the trick to healthy eating, said Cox. Grains include bread, cereal, rice and pasta. As far as bread is concerned, it may say wheat on the package, but if the ingredients include "enriched flour," its basically white bread. Wheat bread will feel heavy when picked up.

Find cereals that are as low in sugar as possible, whether natural or refined. Most cereals, especially the ones children like, are basically chopped up cookies. Cox said. Tip: Add granola on top of cereals for more flavor and nutrients.

As health experts have said, eat pasta, pasta and more pasta. However, don't be fooled by packages of frozen pasta starters, which look like a healthy food choice, but are very high in calories, she said.

Cox offered several tips for making vegetables easier to swallow. Despite carrots and other vegetables being packaged in easy to eat slices for snacking, they're not very tasty, Cox said. Add them to a meal, such as coin-sliced carrots or peas to a macaroni and cheese dish or green peppers, onions and celery to spaghetti sauce.

Be brave and try new vegetables, such as soybean products. Tofu is rich in protein and can be added to stir fry meals. Cox also suggests soy milk, such as Vanilla Edensoy Extra. Middle Eastern dishes made from chick peas.

ents and stay away from "hydro- such as baba ghannouj and hummos, are also good for you and tasty as well.

Dark green vegetables are loaded in calcium, especially, Kale, a loose, flat leafed cabbage, she said. Kale typically is seen decorating most salad bars, although it's the most nutritious item there, Cox said.

Good mid morning and mid afternoon snacks are fruits, whether bought fresh, pre-sliced in containers, or canned,

Other types of snacks, cookies and chips, can be found fat free or reduced fat. Archway's, Entenmann's and Nabisco are just a few brand names that make fat free cookies. Size up reduced fat cookies, though, Cox said. The package may say only two grams of fat per cookie, but the cookies may be small compared to others.

Remember that the nutrition facts on the food label for chips and other munchies are based on one serving, which typically amounts to about 10 chips. If a person can eat 10 chips and put the bag away for the day, go ahead and buy the regular brand, Cox said. If not, stick to the fat free or reduced fat prod-

Botsford offers individual supermarket tours with a dietitian by appointment. Cost is $35 for one hour. For more information call Botsford's Health Development Network at (810) 477-6100. Oakwood is offering a supermarket nutrition class to be held from 7-8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 23 at Farmer Jack, 43403 Joy Road, in Canton. Pre-registration is required. Cost is $10. Call 1-800-543-WELL.

Adams Oaks is fairly close to everything

Adams Oaks offers buyers the opportunity to get into a midsize sub off a less-traveled major road but close to freeways and attractions in downtown Birmingham, Rochester and the Somerset Collection in Troy.

Fifty-one lots are available off Adams between South Boulevard and Auburn Road in Rochester Hills.

Cousins Vince Sclafani of Vincent Homes and Perry DiMaggio, Towne & Country Homes, offer seven floor plans, each with four exterior elevations. They build on a rotation basis.

"We're offering price, quality and unique design, variation of design, from traditional Michigan colonial to split levels," DiMaggio said. "We'll customize. We try to please people as much as we can.

"We try to incorporate some of the amenities of larger homes into smaller homes," Sclafani said. "What we're offering is a variety. We give a cathedral ceiling in each house. I like plant shelves. That's why you'll see them in most of my homes."

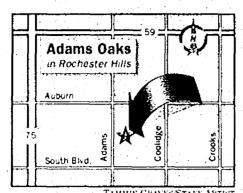

"We have a variety of lots," Di Maggio said. "You can get walk-outs, tree lots. There's pond

The big draws?

"Close freeway access to I-75 and M-59," Hochevar said. "Adams Road is really an attractive street to be located off."

"It's still thought of as a country road," Sclafani said. "There's very little commercial. It's a scenic, pleasant road to use."

"The second key is we have a 51-lot development," Hochevar said. "It's a small, intimate development. You don't have to give people a road map to show where you live."

Two models have been completed; one is nearly finished, and a fourth is under way.

among the states and metro Detroit 11th among major population centers for number of residential building permits projected to be issued this year.

U.S. Housing Markets, a tracking serviced based in Canton, estimates that permits for 50,500 houses, condominiums and apartment units will be issued in the state this year, an increase of nearly 7 percent from 1995.

Florida ranks first with 124,000 units projected. Michigan is expected to rank just behind Illinois, 51,500 units, and just ahead of Colorado, 49,200.

Builders in metro Detroit, which includes Oakland and Wayne counties, are expected to acquire permits for 18,800 units this year, an increase of 4 percent.

> "Although some of the gains were posted against weather-hampered 1995 marks, the growth of new construction in 1996 is a legitimate achievement," reported Brian Bragg, U.S. Housing Markets editor.

"Americans are shrugging off this year's higher mortgage rates," Bragg wrote. "They're buying homes because they like the feel of the economy."

Many variables impact residential construction, U.S. Housing Markets pointed out.

"Unanticipated events, either domestic or international, can bring new influences to bear on builders' planning and scheduling," Bragg reported.

"Last year, for example, we projected a decline of about 8 percent in total U.S. permits, partly because of the very wet weather early in the year," Bragg stated.

"But falling interest rates brought homebuyers out in droves, and before the year ended, builders cut the shortfall to just 3 percent."

Perception of the local economy and job security are the key factors influencing buyers of new hous-

"Las Vegas permit offices probably will issue some 33,000 residential building tickets this year, smashing the market's 1995 record of 29,545 by about 13 percent," Bragg reported.

"That's what job growth of 8-10 percent will do for a metro area - with a little sunshine and desert air."

On the rise: Residential building activity is expected to increase in all regions of the country this year except parts of New England, some Mid-Atlantic states, Montana and Hawaii.

becomes more sophisticated, so do the features and designs incorporated into new houses. House-buyers are asking contractors to include everything from fireplaces in the kitchen to computers that run the entire house from a single control.

"Because of the endless options available to new home builders, people can expand the uses they have for their homes," said vacation, Kristina Tibbits, communi- among others. cations director for the Michigan Association of Home Builders. "The home is not a place to just eat and sleep any more. It has become the office, the gym and the theater."

The Michigan Association of Home Builders has identified some of this summer's most popular building trends. The top five trends are:

Larger kitchens. The kitchen has become a social area and people want more space for seating along with special amenities like fireplaces.

"The kitchen is a natural gathering place," said Randy Smith, president of the National Association of Home Builders. "It's not just about cooking. Extra counter space and walk-in pantries all help to make the kitchen a more comfortable place for families to gather and talk."

Subdivisions designed around activities people do in their leisure time.

Contractors are now bullding communities around horse stables, canals and lakes or golf courses, making it easier for people to pursue their hobbies. "With these communities, the residents can have their relaxation with- providing ser-out all the travel," Tibbits said. "It alsocreates a sense of community, since people living in the neighborhood enjoy the same activities."

■ Houses designed with space for offices and dens. Modems, faxes and other technologies have all contributed to more work being done at home.

"Technology has made it easy to work from the comforts of home, and people are taking advantage of it." Tibbits said.

Requests for "smart homos" aré increasing. These houses have a computer managing a variety of systems, from sneurity and lighting to kitchen gadgots.

With a smart home you can set the computer for an 'Awake mode' where cortain things will change the security system, etc.," said Susan Ritter, director marketing for S M A R T HOUSE, L.P. Other house "modes" are: asleep, unoccupied and

Government is trying to automate home loans

By DAVID C. MULLY SPECIAL WRITER

I recently received a press. release that should be of interest to potential FHA home buyers. Here's some of the information on a new program.

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and Freddie Mac will begin a six-month pilot program using an FHA-specific version of Freddie Mac Loan Prospector® to automate the cooperative effort is aimed at writing technology can help expand markets to more creditworthy buyers; making the origination of FHA loans efficient and affordable; and, ensuring that the use of automated underwriting technology will not adversely affect borrowers served by FHA.

"This pilot represents the National Partners in Homeown-underwriting of FHA loans. The ership at their best," said Henry ations, using loan application, G. Cisneros, Secretary of the studying how automated under- Department of Housing and Urban Development.

> "Pooling the resources of the private sector with those of government, we are striving to increase the nation's home ownership rate to its highest level ever, This pilot brings together Freddie Mac, mortgage lenders, and the FHA in a test of how new technologies can make the FHA work better for more American families.

"This joint initiative offers a glimpse of the mortgage market of the future _ a future where FHA loans can be processed by lenders in days instead of weeks," said Leland C. Brendsel, chairman and CEO of Freddie Mac. "By reducing costs and bringing greater efficiencies to the mortgage market, we will own home."

What this all means to you, the prospective homeowner, is that mortgage lenders will be able to respond much more quickly to mortgage requests and have much of the information they need to evaluate an application at their fingertips,

Loan Prospector, Freddie Mac's automated underwriting service. provides lenders with risk evalucredit and property information to evaluate a potential borrower's ability to meet a mortgage obligation. Freddie Mac is actively working to expand the uses of Loan Prospector to meet the needs of lenders. Freddie Mac took a sample of FHA loans and built a statistically-based mortgage scoring model to predict the likelihood of default, specifically for FHA loans. This model was integrated in software that allows Loan Protector to performrisk evaluations on FHA mortgages within four minutes.

"With this initiative, Freddie Mac takes a big step forward in underwriting FHA loans with Loan Prospector," said David Glenn, president of Freddie Mac. "We're well on our way to providing lenders with a single, automated underwriting service enable more people to own their to process virtually all of their mortgages."

Lenders will be able to access Loan Prospector for FHA Loans by linking directly through their loan origination system, In addition to risk assessment, the system will evaluate the application against FHA statutory requirements such as down payment, geographic loan limits, maximum amount, as well as eligible product types and any additional FHA credit guidelines.

The system will report its assessment to the lender, who will make the ultimate credit decision. During the pilot, FHA will agree with individual lenders to modify some of the documentation or credit requirements for loans that receive a favorable risk assessment.

Freddie Mac and FHA said that they expect that eight, geographically diverse, FHAapproved lenders, including current Loan Prospector users and new users, a housing finance agency and a non-profit, will participate in the sixth-month pilot, with 4,000 to 6,000 loans being made under the demonstration.

"FHA presents an unique opportunity to demonstrate to the market a responsible approach to integrating automated underwriting into the mortgage business," Federal Housing Commissioner Nicolas P. Potsinas said. "We must move forward with new technologies, but only after we carefully evaluate the impact of their use and design strategies to ensure that their use serves our mission of expanding home ownership opportunities."

The FHA was created in 1934 to provide mortgage insurance on home mortgage loans. For more than 62 years, FHA has pioneered low down payment and long term mortgages allowing more than 24 million American families to achieve home ownership. Today, FHA insurance allows lenders to make loans using more flexible underwriting than they use for conventional loans, including lower down payments, closing cost financing, and higher debt-toincome ratios.

Last year, 70 percent of FHAinsured purchase money mortgages were made to first-time home buyers.

Freddie Mac is a stockholderowned corporation established by Congress in 1970 to create a continuous flow of funds to mortgage lenders in support of home ownership and rental housing. Freddie Mac purchases mortgages from lenders and packages them into securities that are sold to investors.

Over the years, Freddie Mac has helped finance one is six American homes:

Olympic thrills found on Internet

hyped yet on the Summer Olympics?

There are lots of reasons why the Olympics are drawing a lot of attention. The opening on Friday, July 19, marks the 100th anniversary of the Olympics.

There's also interest for Americans because the summer version is being held in the U.S. And this is the first Olympics that will be covered extensively, if not exhaustively, on the World Wide Web.

A lot of the sites I've been to include "spectator guides" which contain tips on how to get the most out of summer games. Blue Cross and Blue Shield have a Web site with an unusual spectator guide, the "Spectators' Wellness Guide to the Games."

The wellness guide was created to help the estimated two million spectators to the Olympic Games have a safe and memorable stay while cheering for their favorite athletes in Atlanta. Covered are such things as tips to beat the heat, how to use the Olympic Games as motivation to begin your own wellness program, tobacco use, and travel tips.

Persons planning to attend the games who have Internet access may access the wellness guide at the "Travel" section of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games at http://www.atlanta.olympic.org. This is the official Olympics site

Are you overthe Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games. The IBM site since April 1995 has been running pre-Games reports, schedules, venues, and ticket sales. The site now is receiving about 250,000 hits an hour but is prepared to handle one million hits an hour after Friday. So far more than 32,000 tickets . to Olympics have been sold through this site which is being maintained by a staff of 70 which will expand the site to where it have 20,000 images and pages by the end of the Games in August.

There are many, many Web sites on the Internet about the Summer Olympics. For several months now, O&E Online's News Stand has had a link to the summer games on its sports page http://oeonline.com/~emoryd/spor ts/index.html under the "national sports" heading.

The direct link to the site O&E Online has selected is http://www.mindspring.com/~pro g400/atlanta.html. This easy-touse site provides the latest on the Atlanta summer games for July and August including information includes tickets, events, a venues, a map of Atlanta, places to stay, and links to several Olympic sites include IBM's, the Atlantic-Journal's, Coca-Cola's and many others.

Other Olympic sites include: • NBC will complement its television coverage of the Olympics with its Web site at http://www.olympic.nbc.com where users will find personal features on selected athletes, presentations on featured sports, a downloadable midi file of the theme song, and broadcasting schedules for the trials and the maintained by IBM jointly with

• Coca-Cola Olympic City at http://www.cocacola.com/olympic s/ is a virtual Olympic experience with a complete tour of the games, the individual sports and the athletes, features for trivia buffs and collectors. You also will find a map that tracks the location of the Olympic torch runners. The best job of tracking the torch, however, is probably being done by Qualcomm, producer of the Eudora E-mail software, http://www.qualcomm.com Cyber where the torch is tracked live via a satellite-based positioning system.

If you aren't going to Atlanta, and most of us aren't, Mercury Mail is launching a free, up-to-the-minute means to follow your Olympic favorites. r. 0

Through either means, users can sign up to receive the Olympic coverage they are interested in and have it delivered to their E-mail box as it happens, beginning July 19. The frequency of messages depends on the personalized coverage requested.

Mercury Mail uses numerous wire services and ESPN's SportsTicker to deliver such information as specific events, Olympic news, final results, schedules, recaps, medal counts and more.

• The Atlanta Journal-Constitution has its site for the summer games being played in its city http://www.atlantagames.com. This is a good site for anyone planning to attend the games because there's detailed information on lodging, restaurants, and rentals, and a pretty good search engine on the Olympics. Stories done by its reporters on the Olympics will be available on Nexis, Knight Ridder Information (Dialog), DataTimes, and Dow Jones.

Michigan's public employment service is highly recommended among job seekers who use the service, according to a recent survey.

"Among jobseekers who respond-

"Within 30 minutes of entering a MESC office, 70 percent of the job seekers said they received some type of assistance," Edwards said. "And 72 percent were pleased with the help they received. They found our staff to be courteous, helpful and able to answer their questions." # Rebuilt appliances might be a good deal

There are a total of 4,800 sites in this country where steel is being recycled and where over 41 million appliances were laid to rest during 1995. It just seems so inappropriate, so out of place, to picture this big plot of land with all these appliances sticking out of the ground.

Fortunately or not, the new products we purchase today contain 28 percent of recycled steel which means it didn't go to waste. The service industry in the field of major home appliances does provide a recycled product to the consumer as well. There are a few shops which will rebuild a washer of dryer and sell it with a warranty. Some mighty good deals are available out there, but again, the consumer has to use caution on who they are dealing with. Let's see if this column can make you more aware.

1. The warranty given to the consumer has to be the biggest indicator of how thorough the shop rebuilds. Many times a product is received in good condition. There might be just a small defect that is corrected at a minimal cost. If the shop didn't replace the other fast-moving parts in the product, the shorter warranty could be the indicator that this is not such a good deal. The "shop" should tell you all you need to know, so be "aware."

2. I was in the shop not long ago looking through their rebuilt products and noticed that they were not very clean. I would suggest that you pull off any removable panels and have the shop guy show you the inside of the product. If they didn't get inside to clean it. I doubt if they replaced the moving parts. Ask, "If I get a complete product failure, will you replace the product with a comparable one?"

3. Just how much faith can you have in a used product? I along with many servicers will tell you that many of the older products produced have a lot more quality than what is being sold today. I'm sure that a few million homeowners would testify to that statement. If you're buying a product that lasted 15 years in a consumers home, there is no reason why it shouldn't last for another 10, if it is rebuilt properly.

4. Remember how many millions of appliances placed into the scrap pile during 1995, well, there are a few in there that shouldn't

'Furniture' has many definitions

The simple word "furniture" elicits a multiple group of things, and we are hard-pressed to define what that encompasses.

Webster defines furniture as "equipment that is necessary, useful or desirable"; also as "movable items used in readying an area for occupancy or use." Not very clear!

Personally, I would describe furniture as "an item that adds comfort to everyday living." It falls into many categories. It could be called a "decorative art" that includes seating furniture, storage and cabinetry furniture, and tabletop furniture.

Seating pieces have an incredible range. Just the word "chair" conjures a dozen images. It can be upholstered and overstuffed, affording luxurious comfort for lounging. In another venue it might be all wood, with no comfort at all. A dining chair is often produced with a saddle seat, hard as nails, of wood, preformed metal or plastic. It also is known to have upholstery or a cushion to lend some degree of softness.

Seating is the core of comfort in any room. A luxurious sofa is pragmatic and will withstand an awesome amount of use. A pair of wonderful sofas makes your room inordinate. That is my idea of what furniture should be, even if it avoids definition.

The storage or cabinetry classification is so essential to every-day living that we day living that we cannot imagine our existence without said pieces. We need to be able to put our possessions away. Life would be very complicated without dressers, armoires, nightstands, dining room sideboards, hutches, ad infinitum.

I haven't delved into styles of furniture: There are periods that are dated, and there are countries and their origins. As an example, English furniture of the 15th century is totally different from that of the 19th or 20th century. The former is ponderous and heavy, while the latter periods are light and delicate. The woods used differ just as much; embellishments range widely.

Reproduction furniture now found in stores is mostly derived from the 18th century, perhaps because it is middle of the road.

As we approach the 21st century the "new" is less defined. Chairs may just be an inflated bubble that you can crash into, making a dent to conform to your own body. The cost is negligible, and young people love them. If they need to move, packing presents no problems.: College students call this furniture.

"Beauty is in the eyes of the beholder" says it all. Our admiration for lovely furniture can range from an awesome antique to an unparalleled handcrafted original, in any of the three aforementioned categories.

Serendipitous splendor: Birmingham architect Bill Gardner incorporated windows from a 1903 Milwaukee house in a hutch he designed.

Designer Arts & Crafts

I f a new residence designed by Birmingham architect John Gardner was a person, you would say it has good genes. And you could add that a lot of them are Midwestern.

Gardner's clients, a couple with two teenage children, came to him because they had seen one of his houses. They already had a lot in Bloomfield Hills.

Saying, "She grew up in Indianapolis and he's from Chicago," Gardner determined they would like a house reflecting the great Arts and Crafts movement of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, still very much in evidence in those cities.

What Gardner didn't know immediately was that he would be designing furniture for the house and doing the landscape architecture as well.

"First time I've done furniture." he said As he spoke about his design philosophy. Gardner said, "I've always had sort of an abhorrence to large monumental build-

That's significant here, considering this house is 5,000 square feet on the main and upper levels, not including the finished lower level.

Special spaces

At first glimpse it has all the trappings of monumental, even to the waterless moat on each side of the bridged front entrance and the two-story banks of casement windows across the front and back. These windows, beneath a generous over> hang, offer views of Endicott Lake on one side and a picturesque woods on the other. The wide overhang is reminiscent of Frank Lloyd Wright's prairie house, but the style overall is highly individual.

"It looks larger han it is. It is really an assemblage of pieces with breezeways between and glass on both sides like to take a large project and break it down into spaces, inside and out."

The spaces are large rectangles, connected by smaller ones. On the main level the large sections start with the master bedroom suite at the north end, followed by the den, the main entrance leading to the living room, the dining room, the kitchen and garage. On the second level are three more bedroom suites arranged over the central portion of the

What the architect calls breezeways are much grander than his name implies. They function like commas on a written page: to indicate a division and to provide definition. Ceilings in the breezeways are a foot lower than in the main rooms where they are eight feet eight inches. Archways leading from room to room are 10 feet wide. These changes of ceiling height not only define space, they all have a positive effect on sound as well.

Materials

As he described the house, Gardner said, "The materials we've used are like an old baseball glove: They will get better as they age."

He was referring to the fieldstone and cement plaster exterior, topped by a machine-cut cedar roof and the Brazilian cherry flooring and American cherry casework and cabinetry throughout | the interior.

Beautiful tile from Detroit's Pewabic Pottery and other sources is used for the fireplaces in the living room, the library and the master suite as well as the bathrooms.

These materials and his design made it impossible to find the right furniture for certain key spaces.

"It started when they couldn't find the bed they wanted for the master suite, so I designed one (in American cherry) and had it fabricated.

In the entry hall, the handsome, slim, cherry table he designed exactly fits the shallow curve of the wall.

His most interesting piece of furniture was serendipitous. When he and his client went searching for doors in architectural artifact shops, they returned with windows instead. Their find, brass camed or latticework windows. was from a Milwaukee house built in 1903.

Gardner incorporated the windows in a hutch he designed for the dining room They never did find doors, so he did eight-panel cherry ones and had them fabricated.

Birmingham interior designer Mary Magdeline is helping the owners blend furniture and art work from their former house with many new pieces that include some large Oriental rugs.

In harmony

The jewel tones of these rugs in the living room, dining room and library provide strokes of brilliant color in a setting of white walls and the rich browns of the cherry floors and trim.

Then too, nature brings its palette of brilliant color into every room with spectacular views - the blue of the lake, the variations of greens of the woods, the white of the stand of dogwoods (in early May) near the driveway and the changing hues of sunrises and sunsets.

In the library, the rich blues and greens of the striking large-patterned Oriental rug are repeated in the Pewabic tiles of the fireplace. The mantel is New York bluestone, the same material used outside on steps to the terrace. With its beautiful custom-made shelves and casework, this room incorporates much of the richness and comfort of the Arts and Crafts period. Since he was also the landscape architect, Gardner's philosophy of breaking down a project into spaces is evident outside as well where there are intimate areas as well as broad vistas.

The most spectacular of these is the terrace that overlooks the lake. In every sense it is an extension of the living space of the house. There are four entrances to the terrace from the main level. Stairways on each side lead to the lower level family room. This room with a massive fieldstone fireplace has a Gardner-designed media center that fits its designated location to perfection.

From offices at opposite ends of the house for the parents to the bedroom suites for the children, individual wishes were respected.

"Everybody in the family got to play a role." Gardner said with an approving smile.

Gardner, a third-generation architect, is the principal of Gardner & Associates Architects of Birmingham. He completed his bachelor's and master's degrees in architecture at the University of Michigan and holds a degree in landscape architecture from Michigan State University. SPECIAL PURCHASE

Summer salsas

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Today the word "salsa" is as common as ketchup, and used in a similar fashion. Since 1991, salsa sales have surpassed dollar sales of ketchup — in dollars, not volume! Two decades ago "salsa" was thought of as a tomato-based Mexican condiment used as a dip for salty corn chips in sparsely visible Mexican restaurants. Times have changed, and so have the salsas—the trendy salsas of the 1990s, may be made of the old standby tomatoes or tomatillos, but you will often see them made from—mangoes, peanuts, a variety of roasted peppers, exotic mushrooms, and an array of herbs. There are currently over 2,000 brands of salsa sold in the United States.

Here are a few summer salsa recipes to try:

EVIL JUNGLE PRINCE SALSA

- 3 large ripe tomatoes (about 1 1/2 pounds total)
- 1/3 cup finely chopped white onions
- 1/4 cup fresh orange juice
- 1 or 2 fresh habanero chilies, stemmed and coarsely chopped
- 1 tablespoon fresh lime juice
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt

- 2/3 cup finely diced seedless cucumber
- 2/3 cup finely diced red radish
- 2/3 cup finely diced jicama root 1/3 cup finely chopped cilantro
- 3 tablespoons finely chopped fresh

Trim and halve the tomatoes. Gently squeeze out and discard the seeds and juice. Chop the tomatoes.

In a food processor, combine the tomatoes, onion, orange juice, habaneros, lime juice, and salt and process until fairly smooth. Transfer the puree to a bowl and stir in the diced cucumber, radish, jicama, cilantro and mint. Adjust the seasonings. Refrigerate for at least 30 minutes before serving. The salsa can be prepared up to 1 day in advance. Yield: about 4 cups.

CHOCOLATE-CHERRY SALSA

- 2 cups fresh black Michigan cherries washed and pitted
- 1/2 cup shaved dark semi-sweet chocolate
- 2 tablespoons Kirsch, or desired amount

In a large bowl gently mix all ingredients — serve at room temperature. Yield: approximately 2 1/2 cups

LET'S REMODEL

Roof tear-off job might be a rip-off

Q: We recently hired a general contractor to do our roof. They had to remove two layers of shingles. We have been unable to get the contractor to finish the job. There was some leaking into the house during the rains we had in June and interior damage occurred. It has been more then five weeks now. I do not want to get into legal action but really want the job done as it was promised. Also, who is responsible for the license? The subcontracted roofer or the general contractor?

A: You should always hire a contractor that is licensed in the state of Michigan and registered in the city that you live in. The city requires proof of insurance for workmen's compensation and public liability, property damage insurance and a copy of the contractor's building license.

In addition the city requires building permits and the contractor must perform the job within the city's building codes, and the contractor must call for the required building inspections.

If you have problems with a contractor you should call the city building department and have the city building inspector inspect the roof and determine if there are any city building code violations. Ask the city building department to contact the contractor for any corrections.

When you select a contractor to do a roof tear-off, you should insert in the contract agreement an approximate starting date and an approximate completion date. A roofing tear-off job is a major demolition job and usually takes two to seven days to complete. If, during the roofing tear-off a leak develops or property damage occurs, and there is a question as to who is at fault, you should contact your homeowners insurance company and drey will in turn contact the contact insurance company and determine responsibility, resolve this problem and repair the damage.

If the contractor does not complete the roofing in a timely and satisfactory manner, you can hire another contractor to finish the roofing job and deduct that reasonable amount from the original contractor's contract. If the amount exceeds the original amount of the balance due, then you will have to seek legal help.

The contractor that sells the roofing job must be licensed with the state and registered in your city. The contractor can hire unlicensed subcontractors to perform the work but the selling contractor (or general contractor) is responsible for all licenses, building permits and the completed roofing job.

In closing, you should not let price be your main motivation in choosing a contractor. Many people chose a contractor for their prices and are later disappointed. Be as thorough as possible in selecting the person you want to hire to work on your home.

Keep high hopes for sunflower contest

MART

I hope many of you are growing sunflowers for our third annual contest. As promised, here are some growing tips and other ideas and information about these native plants.

One of the most important practices to avoid stem borer and stem maggot, rust or powdery mildew is to keep the area around the plants free of debris. This can easily be accomplished when the debris is dry. A good rule is to clean it up just before each watering session.

If you haven't put a stake near the stem, now is the time to do that, especially if you are striving to grow the largest seedhead or if the plants are in a place where high winds might topple them.

Sunflowers don't need a lot of fertilizer before the flower heads appear, but when they do, give them a fertilizer with a higher percentage of K (phosphate) and P (potassium). A larger dose of N (nitrogen) will help the plants grow tall with lots of foliage, if you are entering for the tallest sunflower. From our former contest winners we found that many used Stern's Miracle-Gro and Rapid Grow, other fertilizers, composted grass, leaves and manure. A lot of water is needed.

Native plant

I spoke about the sunflower being native to our country. The National Garden Bureau, which celebrates 1996 as the Year of the Sunflower, said remains of these plants have been found in North American archaeological sites, dating as early as 3,000 B.C.

The center or origin for wild sunflowers is considered to be the western plains of North America, but the ancestors of the cultivated type have been traced to the Southwest or the Missouri-Mississippi River valley areas. It seems the first people to breed sunflowers were the Ozark Bluff dwellers, who selected plants and seed for cultivation.

To protect the seedheads from birds and squirrels, cover the seedheads with cheesecloth bags or cut the heads off the plants when the backs of the heads are dry and no traces of green remain.

When you cut the seedheads from the plants, cut them with one to two feet of stem attached and hang them in a warm, well-ventilated place to mature and dry. Tie a paper or cheesecloth bag around each head to catch the seeds that drop out.

When the backs of the seedheads are completely dry and papery, brush the seeds out with your hands or a stiff brush. If you want the animals to have a feast, you can skip these steps. Raw seeds, hulled or in the shell (unwashed) in an airtight container in the refrigerator or freezer, can be roasted for a healthy snack or used raw in baked goods or homemade granola. When we announce the winners, I'll give you a recipe for a sunflower kernel cookie.

Have you ever noticed the arrangement of seeds of the sunflower? Sunflower seeds are arranged in what is called hexagonal-packing in solid state physics, said Jay Kirsch, a physicist teaching at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

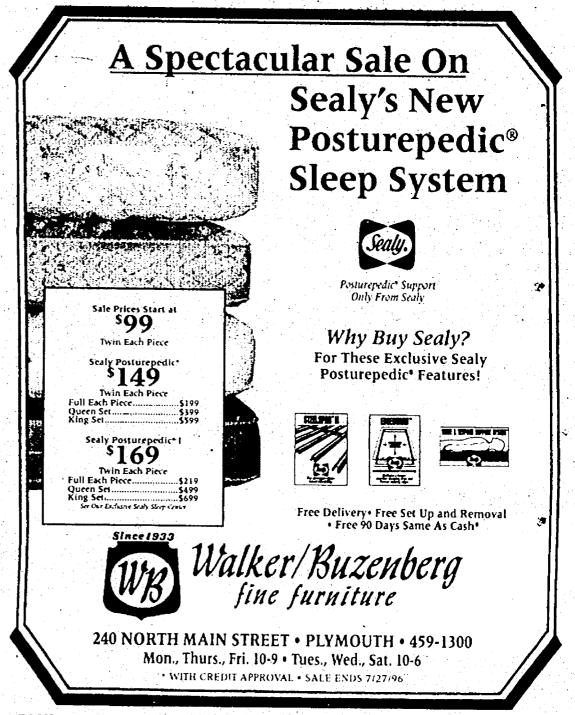

"If you first draw a horizontal row of circles and then draw successive rows so that each circle sits in the cusp formed by the two adjacent circles in the previous row, each circle will be surrounded by six adjacent circles whose centers form a hexagon," he said. "In the sunflower the seeds on the outer edgès of the seedhead are larger than those at the center."

Maybe you can find another plant that has a similar seed arrangement.

Tolling together: Ray and Lisa Smigelski, left, Lee and Noel Bittinger, Michael and Tracy Katz, George and Clara Goodling and Sheila and Louis Rose enjoy their spouse's company at work as well as at home.

Couples tout team approach

George and Clara Goodling owned and operated ERA First Federal Realty in Livonia for 17 of their 21 married years.

Michael S. Katz and his wife, Tracy Stanton Katz, married a year, work as a team at Coldwell Banker Schweitzer in Birmingham:

Noel and Lee Bittinger, marriage and business partners for 14 years, recently opened their own franchise. RE/MAX Classic, in Canton.

Sheila and Louis Rose, married 27 years, have teamed at Ralph Manuel West in Farmington Hills for a year and a half.

And Ray and Lisa Smigelski, married for 6-1/2 years, are fairly new to the business at Real Estate One in Clarkston with two years full time and about seven months part-time. experience, respectively.

What they all share is a firm belief that working together as a team is more effective, productive and enjoyable than pursuing separate careers or similar careers with different

"I just think two heads are better than one if both have the same goals and vision in mind," said George

"Ninety percent of when things don't work out happens because they haven't developed to the point where they recognize the other person's weak and strong points and their own weak and strong points," Goodling said. "We never really had that probother's responsibilities and honor said.

that. Keep your duties separate." "I love working with my wife," said: Michael Katz. "She's so easygoing, so laid back. She has such a good disposition. She makes work pleasurable.

"We feed so well off each other," Tracy said. "I think I'm good at marketing and P.R. He's great with numbers and listings." Sellers very often are impressed when a husband-and-wife team shows up to pitch a listing. "It's a confidence factor for people to know that two people are working for them, two different personalities," said Sheila Rose. "We always go together on a listing."

Louis Rose recalled a specific for-instance. "There's an estate we have listed in Southfield, an older couple, wonderfulpeople. It isn't a simple little home easy to sell.

"When we went out and met them because they were so close - when they saw a couple was working with them, they hired us right away."

Lee Bittinger remembers a situation where being part of a team was definitely better than flying solo.

"There was a client about three months ago coming from Germany, a Ford employee, relocating back to this area. He picked up on us on the Inter-Wednesday meeting and Ray was in with a gal signing a purchase agreement. I was in the meeting and went for the property tour. When you can't be in two places at one time, it falls into place real good."

"The most enjoyable part of working together, I'd say, is bouncing off ideas," Noel Bittinger said. "Whenever a problem comes up, you have someone to talk to. You're not alone to make a decision."

Real estate agents can work a lot of hours. Togetherness can help break up the strain.

"It's so nice to go up to my wife and get a big hug if we're having a tough day," Michael Katz said.

Try doing that with a colleague who's not your spouse. "Two is better than one, definitely," said Ray Smigelski. "I can't be in three places at the same time. You might have a buyer to show houses to, a listing appointment, then paperwork. You kind of juggle around to give variety, keep work interesting, challenging."

But there can be too much together-

"We don't share the same office room," Sheila Rose said. "It gives us more space."

The Katzs no longer have an office 'into the normal presentation."

Couple teams can have drawbacks from a management perspective playing one off against the other, Clara Goodling recalled.

"We found salespeople came to both of us for an answer," she said. "We caught on to that. We'd say, 'What did George say?' What did Clara say?'".

George Goodling said he and his wife regularly made appointments with each other to eat, shop or go to a show "away from the office and away from the telephone."

The Smigelskis make it a point to take mini-vacations with their children, relatives and friends to break up the doldrums.

What it all boils down to - whether an agent goes it alone or in tandem is the impression made on prospective clients.

"I think they feel you're more stable, more grounded," Tracy Katz said of the couples concept. "Being pregnant and everything makes people feel comfortable with a family. They feel they're in good hands."

"We all know husbands and wives play different roles in different households," George Goodling said. "We'd ascertain in the first five, 10 minutes, sense how the household works.

"Sometimes, we found they related more to my wife than me," he said, "We had little node that might indicate that. She would take over and go

Q. We have a problem with our developer and have not sought legal counsel, but plan to picket, distribute leaflets and verbally express our opinions regarding the developer's misdeeds. We are in the process of getting organized and want to know what our rights are.

A. Your proposed actions will incite the developer to seek legal redress, perhaps by claiming that you are trespassing, defaming or otherwise interfering with its business relationships. It might also claim that you have violated a covenant under the Master Deed if in fact you display signs, if signs are prohibited.

On the other hand, there is some authority in an able? out-of-state case that allows unit owners to picket, distribute leaflets and verbally express their opions since those actions are protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

However, to the extent that signs are in violation of any covenants in the Master Deed, the developer may have a right to withhold the use of such signs and to otherwise not trespass on any property that he retains, i.e. the units that he is selling. However, this is a drastic course of action, and you are better advised to seek legal counsel to examine what legal rights you have to purse the developer and all other persons responsible for the apparent defects that you have in your condominium. It is this writer's experience over the years that condominium associations that seek legal redress are generally the most successful.

Q. Our condominium is considering charging a rental fee for reviewing the rental transaction and inspecting the rental unit. It would be an administrative inspection fee. Is this reason-

A. In an outstate case, interpreting the New Jersey Condominium Act, the court authorized the association to assess rental fees and recognized the condominium association's power and responsibility over the common elements. The appeals court gave the condominium association the right to charge a fee for inspecting the unit to make sure that there is no damage. The condominium association may also review the lease to ensure that both the owner and prospective tenant comply with the Master Deed, condominium association bylaws and rules pertaining to rentals. The costs of review and inspection are not considered costs of common expenses. Whether or not that would be sustained in Michigan, of course, is something that would have to be decided on a caseby-case basis.

New house averages $1255,000 nationally

Results from a Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service housing cost survey show the national average sale price for a new house is $155,500 and for a resale home, $117,400.

The national average number of days a house stays on the market before selling is

In the Mideast region, which includes Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, the average price is $153,600 for new and $88,600 for resale. Average listing period before selling was 82 days.

But things are hopping

"The average price of a new home in Livonia is $272,500," Don broker/owner of Quality Real Estate NW/Better Homes and Gardens. "The average sale price of an existing home is $121,000. And in Livonia, a home stays on the market an average of 26 days."

Corresponding figures provided by Kamen for Farming$260,000 for a new house, $160,900 for existing and 39 days on the market.

"Around here, it's an extremely hot seller's market, 'way more buyers than sellers," Kamen said. "The pressure's definitely on buyers because there just aren't enough homes.

"Unless there's something dramatically wrong with a house or it's 'way over-priced, they're selling practically as soon as they get on the market," he said.

The annual survey is based on reports from participating members of the Better Homes and Gardens national real estate network and selected firms.

The sample included 670 markets. Several California markets with new home average sale prices over $1 million were omitted from the averages.

The average sale price of new homes ranged from a low of $110,400 in the South Central region including ton Hills/Farmington are Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas, to a high of $240,500 in the Northeast - Connecticut. Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont.

> The Midwest, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota, showed the lowest average price for a resale house, $77,600.

> That region also had the lowest average days on market nationally at 74.

> The Pacific region, California and Hawaii, tops the list for both highest average price for a resale home, $181,500, and longest average days on the market, 137.

> Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service, formed in 1978, is an international network of more than 750 firms with more than 1,500 offices and 24,000 sales associates in the U.S., Canada and Puerto Rico.

Buying one was just like in one of those commercials.

Prior to buying a new car, Tom and Molly pored through auto magazines, and even went so far as to watch car commercials. They liked what they learned about Saturn's safety features and low cost of ownership, so they decided to come by and take a look for themselves.

And, true to what they'd seen on TV, they were treated respectfully and honestly. No runaround or rigmarole. Which just goes to show, life not only imitates art, but sometimes even what you see on TV. Hope to see you soon.
