Proponents still hope to use school WILSON SCHOOL

BY CASEY HANS STAFF WRITER

Although Wayne-Westland school officials are expected to consider selling the Wilson School property tomorrow night, proponents for a Native American academy are still confident they may locate there.

Geo Fuhst, a Redford Union school trustee and one of the organizers of the proposed Turtle Island Learning Center public charter school, said they are holding out hope they can still submit a bid for the property, or work with the developer to locate there.

"We intend to put an offer in their (Wayne-Westland officials') hands on Monday," he said.

But the Wayne-Westland school chief said it's too late at least for a property purchase.

Wayne-Westland school officials received only one public bid for the property for $825,000 from Newtowne Development Corp. of Farmington Hills, which hopes to build condominiums on the site. The board will consider whether to accept that offer at its meeting tomorrow

They did not receive a bid from the Turtle Island group, said Wayne-Westland Superintendent Duane Moore. School officials met with the group a week or two ago, at their request, but Moore said a late bid would not likely be accepted.

"They have some good intentions," he said. "But for them to submit a proposal now would be inappropriate.' Moore said the district advertised for and accepted bids on the Wilson property according to legal channels.

Fuhst said as a second choice, his group would attempt to work with the developer to lease the school and three acres of property for Turtle Island use.

He has not yet talked with the developer, he said, but is not concerned if the deal is approved by the district

Area families, churches, prepare for Easter services

When it comes to Easter, almost every country has its own customs, some of them very old indeed. And wherever people celebrate Easter, c they have Easter eggs.

In the northern counties of England, children go around "Pace egging," or begging for eggs and other presents, and acting in the Pace egg play. The Pace egg place is one of the Mumming plays that have been performed at Christmas and other seasons for hundreds of years.

"Pace eggs" is another name for Pasch or Easter eggs and comes from the Hebrew word Pesach, meaning Passover. In Scotland, the same word also appears as Peace or Paiss. Beg rolling is another old Easter pastime still followed in parts of Britain, Many people roll eggs just for the fun of it, but in Germany it has become a competition known as Elerisesn.

to their favorite boyfriends, and Finnish children beat the grown-ups with birch twigs on Easter Sunday until they are given a ransom of Easter eggs

In countries in southeastern Europe, people dye hard-boiled eggs red. Greeks and Romaniana carry scarlet eggs on Easter Day. When friends meet, they tap their eggs together with the greeting, "Christ is risen," to which the reply is "Truly, He is risen."

Some Eastern Europeans bury a scarlet egg in a family grave as a symbol of the Resurrection, while in the Balkans, scarlet eggs are buried in the field to make the crops grow bet-

Business are challenged to provide jobs

By Casey Hans STAFF WRITER

Salvation Army officials have challenged Westland businesses to participate in a jobs program by hiring people, training them and serving as mentors.

The program, called "Project Zero" is a partnership between the Salvation Army and the Michigan Family Independence Agency, designed to pull people out of the welfare system and into jobs and self-sufficiency.

The FIA is the former state Department of Social Services, which deals with distribution of welfare funds, and is now working with a reduced state program.

Westland Salvation Army officials explained the program to members of the Westland Chamber of Commerce and their guests during the group's March luncheon at the Hellenic Center on Joy Road.

Man charged with luring, then robbing

BY DARRELL CLEM

A Westland man is accused of robbing a sex partner whom he lured from an I-275 rest area in Canton Township, police said. Todd Stephen Nemeth, 31, is charged with a 15-year felony of unarmed robbery for an incident that allegedly occurred on the afternoon of Feb. 19, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fetner said.

A 50-year-old Walled Lake man was lured to a Westland apartment by a suspect who robbed him and forced him to drive to an automated teller machine, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fetner said. The victim reportedly lost $670.

The suspect also robbed the victim of charge cards used for $2,000 in charges, Fetner said.

"It all starts off as a sexual encounter," the sergeant said.

The two men met around noon Feb. 19 at the I-275 rest area, Fetner said.

The photographs are used, in essence, to try to threaten the victims to silence, Fetner said. The Walled Lake man, for example, is married with children.

'There's an incentive not to report the crime," Fetner said.

After the suspect forced the Walled Lake man to drive to an automated teller machine, he then had the victim return him to his Westland apartment, Fetner said.

Nemeth has been arraigned on one count of unarmed robbery and one count of being a fourth-degree habitual offender, Fetner said.

Nemeth is scheduled for a March 27 preliminary hearing in Westland 18th District Court that will determine whether he should stand trial.

For now, he remains jailed in lieu of a $30,000 cash bond, Fetner said.

Woman faces arson charges for house fire which injured son

By Darrell Clem STAFF WRITER

A Westland woman could face a possible 20-year prison term if convicted of starting a house fire that injured her 4-year-old son.

Jamie Ann Jingozian, 25, faces trial for arson following testimony that emerged Thursday morning during a preliminary hearing in 18th District Court in Westland.

Westland Fire Marshal Patrick Harder testified that a Jan. 28 fire at Jingozian's residence at 8338 Beatrice couldn't have been caused by a hurning candle placed in her son's room, as she claims.

"I tried to imagine in my wildest dreams how a candle could do that kind of damage," Harder said from the witness stand. "There's no way that a candle could do that kind of damage."

Only a fire caused by liquid accelerants could ignite flames so rapidly in four rooms and burn through walls, floors and ceilings, Harder testified.

A bedroom occupied by Jingozian's 4-year-old son received some of the worst damage and authorities said the boy suffered burns over 26 percent of his body. He had to undergo skin grafts at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Jingozian won't face charges for the boy's injuries; she did remove him from the single-story, wood-frame house as flames spread shortly after 10 p.m., police have said.

However, the boy's father now has custody, and Jingozian has been prohibited from visiting him, Westland police Sgt. Scott

Fetner said. The mother sat in court Thursday but didn't testify in her own Fetner testified that Jingozian told him during a Jan. 30 interview that she became upset with her son on the evening of Jan. 28 because he had gotten out of his bed repeatedly.

"She told me that she was angry with him," Fetner said.

Fetner said Jingozian told him that she put a burning candle in the boy's room after he asked for more light. The candle was supposedly in a glass bowl that the mother placed on a plastic dresser, Fetner said.

Jingozian told Fetner that she saw flames flickering about 20 minutes later and that she grabbed the boy and fled to a next-door neighbor's house, in a residential neighborhood near Middlebelt and Joy.

Harder testified that "irregular burn patterns" in Jingozian's residence left him with only one conclusion - that liquid accelerants had been used to start the fire. Only accelerants could cause the floor-level damage that the house suffered, Harder

He conceded, however, that tests performed in the fire's aftermath found no accelerants.

When asked for his opinion on where the fire started, Harder said, "I believe the fire started throughout the entire structure."

Jingozian has told authorities that only she and her son were in the house when the fire erupt-

Firefighters battled the blaze for 45 minutes, but Harder has said the house was considered destroyed.

At the conclusion of Thursday's hearing, 18th District Judge C. Charles Bokos ordered Jingozian to stand trial for arson in a dwelling, punishable by up to 20 years in prison upon con-

County parks millage

GOP commissioners oppose spending plan

By Ken Abramczyk STAFF WRITER

Wayne County commissioners approved a five-year $31 million recreation plan Thursday, but they also authorized a $250,000 limit on what County Executive Edward McNamara can spend in contracts for capital improvement projects under the plan.

They also approved a memo of understanding with the city of Detroit for parks improvements. The plan and the memo were criticized by two Republican commissioners from western Wayne County.

Commissioner Bernard Parker, D-Detroit, amended the capital improvements plan to include the cap.

That limit may conflict with a purchasing ordinance, however, and the commission may need a legal clarification on that issue before it is officially enacted.

Commissioners approved the following contracts:

■ McNamee, Porter & Seeley, Inc. of Detroit, for $2.5 million to act as program manager of the five-year parks capital improvement program.

R.J. Thomas Manufacturing Co. of Cherokee, Idaho, for $98,433 to provide 220 outdoor charcoal grills and 1,000 picnic ■Beckett & Raeder, Inc. of Ann Arbor, for $45,500 to update the preparation of a five-year master plan update for the Department of Public Services.

Backing the agreement between Detroit and Wayne County were Detroit Democrats and suburban Democrats Kay Beard, Edward Boike, Christopher Cavanagh, Susan Hubbard, William O'Neil and Michelle Plawecki.

Opposing the memo was Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, and abstaining was Bruce Patterson, R-Canton. McCotter and Patterson also opposed the five-year plan, while the same Democratic contingent supported it.

McCotter opposed the Beckett & Raeder contract, the McNamee contract and the Johnson, Johnson & Roy contract. Patterson opposed or abstained from several of those contracts as well, but supported the McNamee contract.

McCotter said his position remains unchanged from last year when he opposed the millage because he was concerned at that time that voters would be subsidizing Detroit parks. He opposed the contracts and the five-year plan on Thursday for the same reason.

"The memo means that west-

CROWNING GLORY

Those patients who prefer toothcolored restorations may be interested to know that significant advances have been made in the fabrication of porcelain crowns. Traditionally, a metal substructure was needed to support the porcelain crown. Today, however, the crowns themselves can be reinforced with Lucite and a tooth-colored core material, thereby eliminating the need for the quite=visible metal architecture. In addition, the newer materials sometimes make it possible to prepare teeth more conservatively than with conventional crowns before the crown is bonded with a resin cement, which is

House OKs tuition tax credit

BY TIM RICHARD

Parents of college students will get bigger state income tax breaks if a House-passed bill survives in the Senate and becomes law.

House Democrats kept Republicans from turning a fairly simple bill into a Christmas tree of ornaments and won 94-13 passage on March 19.

The bill would 1) double the income tax credit to $500 from $250 per student per year and 2) remove the requirement that the college keep its annual tuition increase below the rate of consumer price inflation.

Supporter Barbara Dobb, R-Union Lake, replied, This law did nothing for your constituents until it was amended (by the new bill). This removes the cap sought to reinsert the ban on tax and raises the credit to $500."

"I'm opposed. It contains perverse incentives," said Rep. Don Gilmer, R-Augusta. "It tells colleges that if you raise your tuition and fees, you'll be rewarded.

"The cost will be $35 million, almost triple the general fund increase proposed by the governor for community colleges."

Gilmer was joined by 11 other Republicans and one Democrat in voting no. Area representatives voting no were Patricia Godchaux, R-Birmingham, and Shirley Johnson, R-Royal Oak. All others voted yes.

The bill would amend a law sponsored last year by Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton. But the overwhelming vote on final passage belied the fierce, twohour debate over Republican amendments.

Among the rejected amendments:

■Rep. Nancy Cassis, R-Novi, credits where students attend public colleges that failed to keep tuition hikes below the rate of inflation. The current law eliminates students at Oakland University, the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor, UM-Flint, Central Michigan and Schoolcraft College.

The Cassis amendment failed 42-63. Supporters included Republicans Lyn Bankes of Redford, Alan Cropsey of DeWitt, Frank Fitzgerald of Grand Ledge, Patricia Godchaux of Birmingham, Dan Gustafson of Williamston, Shirley Johnson of Royal Oak, Greg Kaza of Rochester Hills, Tom Middleton of Ortonville, Andrew Raczkowski of Farmington Hills, Judith Scranton of Brighton and Deborah Whyman of Canton.

A similar Cassis amendment requiring colleges to cap tuition at 3 percent or the rate of the consumer price index failed by a similar vote.

■ Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, came closer, getting 47 votes for her amendment to include on-campus room and board as well as tuition and fees for tax credits.

■ A shouting match erupted over a GOP amendment to extend the tax credit to students at private trade schools. Democrat Tom Mathieu of Grand Rapids objected, "We shouldn't steal money from the community colleges and give it to some rinky-dink school that you think should be aided."

"It goes to the taxpayer, not the institution," replied Republican Alan Cropsey of DeWitt. "Your bill is targeted only to those approved by the State Board of Education." The GOP amendment got 37 votes, 18 short of approval.

Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, tax policy chair who shepherded the bill through to passage, said super-inflationary tuition increases were the fault of "20 years of failed state appropriations," not greed or mismanagement by colleges. "In the last five years, we've had zero, zero, 3 and 5 percent increases for higher education." "I'm surprised the other side (Republicans) didn't propose pencils (for tax credits)," Profit

As passed by the House, the bill likely would be vetoed by Gov. John Engler.

"The (governor's) budget is designed with significant tax cuts in place. We will not support any more," said Madhu Anderson, the former Farmington Hills resident who is a top official in the Treasury Depart-

Coleman called McCotter's opinion a "wrong opinion." Wayne County parks are for Wayne County residents, Coleman said.

Detroit residents have subsidized Wayne County parks for years without benefiting from local improvements because many Detroiters believe Nankin Mills is a Westland park and Bell Creek is a Redford Park, Coleman said.

"If he wants to talk about subsidy, the county has never spent any dollars in parks in Detroit since the parks were first established 78 years ago," Coleman said. Lewis suspects that as many as 60 gangs are operating in the Detroit area and its suburbs, He doesn't have an accurate account of gang members, but wants parents, teenagers and young children to learn about gangs at a conference to "Protect Our Kids and Neighborhoods" on Wednesday, April 2 at Wayne State University's McGregor Memorial Conference Center.

Residents in suburban communities should be concerned, Lewis said, "because of the growing number of teenage gangs that are pervasive and because it's growing nationwide. The increase in teenage gangs is a phenomenon growing every-for about 18 years. "The kids I'm coming in contact with are from dysfunctional homes or a lot of them are declared incorrigible by their own parents and come in contact with the law.

"Kids from dysfunctional families make them vulnerable to gangs, because gangs, in a perverse way, are replacements for their families. Kids join gangs because they look for 'love' and attention."

The three-hour conference starts at 6 p.m. It will feature topics on how to tell if your child belongs to a gang and what families and parents can do about gangs, Lewis said.

The forum will feature Dr. Carl Taylor, a criminologist and professor at Michigan State University, and Alex Montaneer, a gang mediator. Shawn Jacques, Lewis has been a social worker a prosecutor from the juvenile for the state of Michigan for court in Wayne County, members of the gang squad from the knew of one gang member who Detroit Police Department also will be attending, along with a child psychologist and former gang members who will speak about their experiences, Lewis

Lewis said suburban communities have a hard time accepting the universal problem of gangs and added that the problem doesn't stop at a community's borders.

"Two main national gangs are named 'Folks' and 'People.' These gangs are organizing subgangs and they have organized a major drug distribution network."

"It's almost like a secret society that nobody knows about."

Lewis also said some gang members are using Satanic rituals in their initiations. Lewis tried to steal body parts out of a cemetery. Usually, potential gang members are initiated by either getting beat up by gang; members or participating in Satanic rituals, Lewis said.

"Gangs are involved in many of the violent crimes in our communities: drug distribution, muggings and B and Es (breaking and entering). You name it, and they're involved."

Admission is free, but members of the public will be asked for a $3 donation. The McGregor. Conference Center is located at: 495 West Ferry Mall at Cass and Palmer Streets on the campus of Wayne State University.

Anyone interested in attending the forum can call (313) 931-1591 for information.

Meanwhile, Oakland University has moved ahead with approving the charter for the Native American academy.

A March 18 recommendation to approve the Turtle Island Learning Center school comes from Oakland's University Affairs Advisory Committee. Confirmation could come as early as April 3 when the OU Board of Trustees next meets.

Applying for charter status are Fuhst and Adrienne Brant James, who have said they hope to open the school as early as August of 1997.

The petitioners will target North American Indians as their student population.

The new school would use a core curriculum supplemented with Native American Indian child development philosophies, such as the "circle of life; medicine wheel; family connections."

"The purpose (for the school) is that we all need to know the history of this country before white man," James said. "We've been left out of the story, except in negative ways. Our kids are picked on in school, if they're recognized at all.

Geo Fuhst -Proponent for Native American academy

James noted, however, that the school would be open to the public, as long as those attending recognized that it would include studies on North American Indian heritage.

The name for the academy - Turtle Island comes from the Indian story of creation in which "Sky Woman" lands on the back of a turtle (to check out a map) and the mud comes up to form the land.

OU recently granted charter academy status to two other schools, bringing its current total to five. Academies are only being chartered by universities like Oakland and Central Michigan, which have boards of trustees that are appointed by the governor. Other universities with elected boards of trustees, such as Wayne State, Michigan State and the University of Michigan, have not been chartering academies.

While there is no financial benefit to a university for chartering an academy, such schools are able to collect state aid and to determine their own curriculum.

Don't let green eggs and ham spoil your Easter holiday

lazed ham and colorful decorated eggs are an Easter tradition for many families. Ham or hard-cooked eggs seem to bring a little "country" to our festive tables, but both of these foods are perishable and need to be treated with

To hard-cook eggs, place raw eggs in a pan of cold water and heat until water boils. Immediately reduce heat to keep the water at a simmer, and cook for 20 minutes. Never boil eggs so hard they bounce around in the pan.

Cool eggs in their shell in an open container in the refrigerator. Water cooling is not recommended because the cooking has removed the natural coating from the egg shells so they are more susceptible to bacteria. When cooled, decorate eggs with pure food colorings or dyes formulated with food-grade colorants. Don't store decorated eggs at room temperature.

Storage rules

Decorated hard-cooked eggs should be stored in the refrigerator, before decorating, and after deco-

Some other egg-handling tips are:

■ Do not peel hard-cooked eggs until you are ready to use them.

Ham is a family favorite for Sunday and holiday dinners. The appeal of ham is that you can add your own personal touch. Honey, brown sugar, molasses or jellies can be used as a glaze or garnish. Fresh fruits including kumquats, grapes, spiced crabapples, dried fruits, herbs and seasoning blends, which all give ham wonderful flavor,

Fully cooked, cook before eating, country-style, picnic, canned, bone-in, or boneless are just a few of the choices greeting you at the ham counter. Choosing a ham to fit your taste and budget isn't easy. Once you've made your decision and the ham is in the grocery cart, maintaining its wholesomeness is up to you. Store ham properly, cook it thoroughly and handle leftovers with care.

Fully cooked hams or "ready to eat" are the most available hams in the market. That's because there is no necessary cooking before serving. However, heating ham to an internal temperature of 140 degrees F. will improve the flavor and texture. Heat ham in a 325-degree F. oven on a rack, uncovered.

For a whole ham, allow 15 to 18 minutes per pound. Remove ham from oven about 30 minutes before it's done, add glaze or decorate, and return to oven. A simple glaze can be made by combining one-half cup of brown sugar, two tablespoons orange or pineapple juice and one-half teaspoon dried mustard.

Cook-before-eating hams need to be cooked to an internal temperature of 160 degrees F. Place ham on a rack in a shallow pan and bake in a 325-degree F. oven. Allow 10-20 minutes per

After cooking, ham will keep four to five days. Most hams have a label, read the instructions for

■ Boneless ham - 4-5 servings per pound.

■ Semi-boneless – 3-4 servings per pound. Ham does not freeze well, so plan to eat it rather than freeze. If you have to freeze ham, it is better mixed in a casserole or with other foods than by itself. Freeze ham in big chunks rather than slices and use within two months. Flavors change in ham that is frozen for too long. A rainbow or iridescent sheen can sometimes appear on sliced ham, but it is harmless. This is merely a light refraction on the fat film. It is not a food safety issue. If you have a canned ham leftover from Christmas, check the "best if used by aster morning seems to bring out bas-kets of eggs, and not just from the kets of eggs, and not just from the Easter bunny. An "eggcellent" adventure for breakfast or brunch is the perfect way to start the day.

· With lives on the fast track, simple, elegant meals are the way to go, just ask Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara and his wife Lucille, or Betty-Lee Seydler Sweatt of Franklin, assistant dean in the College of Architecture and Design at Lawrence Technological University in Southfield. Easter Sunday is filled with family at the McNamara's home in Livonia - "hundreds of kids," said Mr. McNamara with a big grin, as Mrs. McNamara corrects him gently saying, "it's really ten or twelve."

The McNamaras have five grown children, three of whom are married, and three grandchildren ages 10, 7 and 2.

"Now that the kids are all grown, I don't do the cooking I used to. Ed and I go out to eat often," said Mrs. McNamara as she places her beautifully browned egg casserole on the dining room table. The casserole made with eggs, sausage, milk and bread was featured in the Observer & Eccentric Newspaper years ago, and is often requested by readers. "This is a favorite recipe," she said. "What's great about it is everyone loves it, and I can prepare it the night before."

Mrs. McNamara serves the casserole on a beautifully set table with orange juice, Mimosa's (orange juice mixed with champagne) for grown-ups, fresh fruit - either sliced, or tossed in a salad, sweet rolls, toast and jellies. This lovely holiday meal, is fast and easy to prepare, leaving the hostesses time to share with family members.

Betty-Lee Seydler Sweatt is of the same philosophy. Light, delicious, and easy to prepare dishes are her choice for holiday meals. In her beautifully remodeled kitchen, she quickly prepares shirred eggs. The tarragon cream topping is made ahead of time, and spooned over eggs, which are popped into the oven, and baked for 10 minutes.

- Soft custards are done when they coat the back of a spoon - the temperature is usually about 160

- Poached eggs should have completely set whites and thickened yolks.

Wash fruits and vegetables before using

Should you wash cantaloupe before cutting? "Yes!" says Sylvia

Treitman, home economist for the Michigan State University Extension - Oakland County. "It sounds unlikely that you could get food poisoning from fruits or vegetables, but it has happened," said Treitman.

There have been reported cases of Salmonelia, Listeria, Campylobacter, and E. coli from fruit and vegetable contamination. Contamination occurs when produce falls on fertilized soil or is handled by someone with dirty Cooking kills most bacteria, but fresh fruit and salad foods need other precautions since they are eaten uncooked. Thorough washing of produce can help to reduce bacteria.

Additional tips to prevent food poisoning.

- Rinse all fruits and vegetables with cold running water, never use soap or bleach (this can cause more problems)
- Keep produce away from raw meat, poultry, seafood. Use a separate clean cutting board for meat and poultry and seafood and one for fruits, vegetables and breads.
- Rinse rinds of watermelon, (810) 858-0904.

- Wash hands often between cutting fruit or vegetables and eating them. Bacteria on the rind can spread to your hands and from there to the part that

Beanie Babies: Hard to resist, hard to find

BY DONNA MULCAHY SPECIAL WRITER

Forget about "Tickle Me Elmo." What many kids hope to find in their Easter baskets this year are "Beanie Babies."

What are they? They're soft and cuddly stuffed animals that fit in the palm of your hand. They're filled with beans (the kind found in bean bags) and they come in more than 100 animal, fish and insect shapes, including: a lobster, penguin, flamingo, lamb, armadillo, hippo, octopus, worm, dogs, bears, bunnies, cats - the list goes on and on.

Like Cabbage Patch dolls, each one is slightly different from the rest and they all have names and "birth dates." But unlike Cabbage Patch dolls and Tickle Me Elmo, they're inexpensive, selling for only about $5 each.

The problem is trying to find them. Most gift stores in this area carry Beanie Babies, but they're selling out just as fast as they come in.

"I got two boxes of them last week and they sold:out within two hours," said Frank Madany, owner of The Country Peddler at Livonia Mall. Each box contained 100 of the critters.

"We're Out of Beanie Babies" signs could be seen all over Livonia Mall and Westland Shopping Center last week.

At Thomas Hallmark in Westland, the phone was ringing off the hook March 15. What most callers wanted was obvious by the way salesperson Priscilla Langdon answered the phone: "Thomas Hallmark, we're out of Beanie Babies, may I help you?"

Jamie Wicker of Canton, a customer who had just walked into the store, was sorry to hear her

"I'm looking for the skunk — I think its name is Stinky — because it has the same birthday as him," Wicker said, nodding toward her 13month-old son, Austin, who was sitting in his

Sherry Joyner, a real estate agent with Century 21 Row in Livonia, said she searched far and wide (well, as far as Ann Arbor) for almost a month to find Beanie Babies for her granddaughters, ages 13 and 15, after the girls mentioned that they liked them.

Finally, she was successful. Now, she said, she can spot Beanie Babies hunters just by the glazed look in their eyes.

Nobody would realize the urgency if they weren't into them," Joyner said. "I wanted to get these for my grandchildren for Easter and that's what all of these other people want to do, too."

On March 15, one place where people could find Beanie Babies was at Johnny Lema's inside the Westland Shopping Center. But getting into the store wasn't easy.

The Beanie Babies were in two large bins near the back of the store, by the cash register. The store got so crowded with people searching or waiting to search through the bins that salespeople roped off the back of the store and let new shoppers through only as old ones left.

Kayla Robertson, 7, of Garden City, and her grandmother, Chris Robertson, were part of the frenzy. Kayla pulled several Beanie Babies out of the bins and her grandmother said she could have them for Easter.

"I like them because they're soft and cute," Kayla said, cradling the creatures in her arms. She said a lot of kids at her school collect

"I have 11 at home," she said. "I have one friend who has 46, and I know of somebody who

It's not just girls who are collecting them. Boys like them, too.

John Zaccone, 8, of Canton, who was shopping with his mother, Lisa, and 6-year-old brother, Sam, at the Westland Shopping Center, said he gwns five Beanie Babies.

He said he likes them because, "When you're lenely, you don't have to feel all alone if you have one of them with you."

Beanie Babies are manufactured by Ty Inc. and are made in China. They're not recommended for children under three, because if even a tiny tear develops in the doll, beans can spill out, creating a choking hazard for small children. On the label, it says that they're for ages 3 and up.

One of the reasons why Beanie Babies are considered to be collectors' items is because some of the pieces have been retired (discontinued). When a piece is retired, its value increases because collectors are willing to pay more for it. "Some people are selling retired pieces for $500 on the Internet," Madany said. Hmmm. For $500, I'd rather have a Faberge egg in my Easter basket.

Everyone wants to hit Target

TEMPLETON SPECIAL WRITER

It's a shopping phenomenon that's sweeping suburbia. Eager consumers can't seem to wait for that next weekend Target circular to arrive. Sales on paper products, household goods and kids clothes have made shopping at Target a bi-weekly must for many.

"I really, never thought about why too much, but I just love everything about the store," said Kim Statson, a regular at the Target store in Rochester. "I like the prices, the people are friendly, and its like one-stop shopping."

Susan Keyes of Troy echoes those sentiments. When she needs anything, from new shoes to lunch box snacks for her four children, she heads to the local Target. Keyes also eyes the weekly circular to spot sales on other household necessities, like floor mops and hand towels.

"I really like Target. They have better quality in their clothes and it's a better style," said Keyes. "These seem more in tune or more modern then a Meijers or Kmart."

Such compliments are beautiful noise to the ears of Target spokesperson Carolyn Brookter, although hearing from satisfied customers is not something new for the popular chain.

"What we've been told is that it's a very easy shopping experience. There are not a lot of distractions," said Brookter. "We've got clean, wide aisles and the signs are bold and bright and we feel all of that has helped add to people's confidence in

That crisp, friendly feel is definitely paying off for the discount retailer. Target, an operating division of the Dayton Hudson Corporation, currently operates 735 stores in 38 states. The company employs 149,000 people and saw their operating profits jump 45 percent in 1995-96.

"We have been pretty lucky and ve've worked hard on our growth strategy, which has been to open about 70 new stores a year," said Brookter.

Nationally, Target earned $17.85 billion in revenues last year. The retailer, which opened its first store in Minnesota in 1962, came to Michigan in 1987. Today, there are 45 locations here.

"The Michigan Target stores are doing very well," said Brookter. "Michigan is a good market for us and we plan to continue to grow there."

Brookter says that the universal question asked about the discount retailer by consumers is, "Why do I go into the store to spend $10 but end up spending $50?"

"I think most people are shopping for the basics, maybe items they saw in our circular, and they go down the next aisle and see something that's a commodity they may not need right then, but it's priced right, so they buy it," theorized Brookter.

"You see the good prices and say-

Joy Stewart, of Rochester, makes weekly stops at the store. While the

One Target shopper's confession

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON SPECIAL WRITER

I admit it — I'm addicted to Target.

The cozy little chain of stores spun out of the Dayton/Hudson organization has captivated me and my checkbook. And if comments from family members, friends and scuttlebutt in the school parking lot count, I'm not alone.

If I need a birthday card and wrapping paper — Target. If I need toilet paper and toothpaste — Target. If my children need drink boxes and snacks for their lunch — hello, Target. The list just goes on and on.

Truthfully, much of the thrill of pushing my way through those automatic doors at the store has nothing to do with "need." I just love to shop at Target.

Grabbing a cart and heading straight to the nearby snack bar for a frozen Coke gets the shopping experience off to a pleasant start, particularly if I have children in tow.

Most of my visits are prompted by the need for some specific item I've spotted in the sale circular that week. Okay, that's what I tell myself at that time. (It's also what I tell my spouse later as he scans the checkbook register, wondering if we are singlehandedly responsible for the stores' huge

As I make my way down the center aisle headed towards the paper towel display that offers four rolls for three bucks, an imaginary magnet drags my cart towards the junk food section. Pringles, just 99 cents? I'll take two. Cheesy Goldfish crackers, two for $3? Gotta' have them. What? Hostess Cupcakes on this end cap are a mere $1.20? Can't leave for home without them!

And so you see how a typical Target shopping trip can turn the quest for six items under $20 into a cart full of goods costing just under $65. It's a nasty little habit.

Those unfamiliar with this attraction to the store that boasts a bullseye logo may not be able to grasp this "shopping" problem, but I recently found compassion on the Internet.

It seems a woman had popped into her local Target to pick up just two simple items while on her way home from work. Suddenly, a voice over the loudspeaker announced that a chemical spill behind the store would prevent all customers from leaving until the matter was resolved.

Did this woman panic? Did she plot to find her way out of a side door?

No. She promptly grabbed a cart and took off shopping. Two hours and $200 later, she was on her merry way home. Told you.

eorge Delich has the world of art at his fingertips. A state-of-the-art laser disk catalog installed in his Livonia shop allows customers to view thousands of limited edition prints, posters, photographs, sculptures, and animation cells on a monitor in a matter of minutes.

Looking for a piece of art for your home or office? Longing for a work you can relate to, or is something abstract more your style?

With just a few clicks of the keyboard, you can select from a variety of computerized images ranging from Robert Bateman's "Trumpeter Swan" or "Pandas at Play," to duck stamp prints. The video catalog, marketed by Art Information Inc., a nationwide art dealer association, enables galleries like Delich's to buy from publishers all over the world.

Searching for an animation cell of Daffy Duck or Anne Marie from "All Dogs Go To Heaven?" Select from subjects such as affordable originals, or if photography is more to your liking, choose from among dozens of categories of animals. Then narrow the field further. Some of the most popular subjects at the Delich Gallery, besides animals, are golf, landscapes and reproductions of masterpieces.

Still unsure if the work is suitable for your environment? Delich will print a color copy for prospective customers to take home or to the office for final approval. Once selected, an art work is special ordered and will arrive in about one week.

"It's very user friendly," said Delich. "Customers order right off the screen. What it does is give you another salesperson. I'm selling more off the laser than off the walls."

Creative Framing & Gallery in Plymouth installed the laser disk system nearly two years ago. According to co-owner Pat Korona, the video art catalog saves time, both for customers and sales staff. "People don't have a lot of time. If they're not sure of what they want, or if they're looking for a certain color, size or price range, customers can call up these categories instantly. Otherwise, you'd have to go through thousands of pages in 50 different catalogs," said Korona." Tired of going from gallery to gallery looking for a particular offset lithograph by an artist such as Terry Redlin? A gallery, in most instances, is only able to offer a sampling of an artist's work due to a limited amount of space for stock. The computerized catalog lists every Redlin work published. If a Redlin work sells out, Art Information's laser disk system will reveal any secondary markets available within. their dealer-to-dealer network of more than

"It's an asset for us is to be able to find prints for customers whether it's a current piece or a sold-out or secondary market," said Korona.

Art Information dealers receive updated versions of the laser disc every three months enabling the listing of art works to remain current.

"The system is growing so much," said Korona. "It covers several categories of a subject now. For instance, people will come in and ask for certain dogs like a Golden Retriever. Before, the system offered only a dog category. Now, it catalogs art works by breeds.'

DIA showcases praiseworthy 'Images in Ivory'

By Frank Provenzano STAFF WRITER

In the Gothic world of dragons, crusades and evil demons, it was spiritually convenient to carry along miniature ivory sculptures to induce prayer. After all, tardiness for penance could mean a ticket to the nether world, or missing redemption altogether.

From the mid-13th century to about 1500, naturalistic ivory carvings of the Virgin Mary. Christ, and dramatic depictions of the Bible, demonstrate a more personal relationship between Christians and their God that would eventually transform the Church.

Many of these historic ivory carvings are included in the Detroit Institute of Arts international exhibit, "Images in Ivory: Precious Objects of the Gothic Age." The exhibit runs through May 11, which coincides with the Christian Easter season, a contemplation of the Passion, crucifixion and resurrection of Christ.

Praised by medieval scholars for providing a comprehensive range of significant works, the exhibit presents a collection of nearly 100 intricate carvings from 28 museums and galleries around the world. Because many of the lending arts institutions would not entrust their ivory sculptures for more than six months, the DIA-curated exhibit will only travel to one other museum, the Walters Gallery in Baltimore.

"The exhibit could be the last English word on the subject because of the extensive scholarship," said Peter Barnet of Birmingham, DIA exhibit curator. "But since it opened (on March 9) it has attracted all types of visitors, and certainly doesn't require any prior knowledge of Gothic art to be appreciated.

Nearly 10 years ago, Richard Randall, then-curator at the Walters Gallery, which along with the Louvre in Paris maintains one of the most extensive ivory carving collections, began to solicit support of an exhibit on the Gothic art. But in the early 1990s, devastated by funding cuts, the DIA couldn't consider the high-priced exhibit. Then, about three years ago, the DIA received financial support of the exhibit from federal grants and private foundations. Barnet, who also serves as the DIA's associate curator for European sculpture, took the lead role in coordinating the exhibit.

While many pieces in "Images in Ivory" reflect religious themes, the exhibit also includes items from the secular world, such as combs, small backsides of hand-held mirrors, game boards and ornate boxes with depictions from popular romance tales. The proliferation of ivory carvings was the result of a burgeoning trade route from eastern Africa across the Mediterranean to Paris, the capital of commerce, scholarship and art. It didn't hurt that Paris also had an emerging bourgeoisie class that could afford the finely crafted items.

To their credit, the DIA effectively presents an esoteric epoch without simplifying history. Exhibit designer Lou Gauci has created subtle, yet distinctive archways that resemble the architecture of the great Gothic cathedrals. In fact, many of the carvings are miniature versions of the sculptures found at cathedrals in Chartres, Amiens and Paris, including Notre-Dame Cathedral.

On a more practical level, Barnet's chronological arrangement allows each piece to be considered separately, yet as part of the broader Gothic movement. Visitors won't be burdened by information nor indistinct artifacts. An audio-tape tour, narrated by NPR's Susan Stamberg, makes the walk through the exhibit seem like a pleasant drive listening to "All Things Considered."

DIA docent Betsy Loomus of Farmington Hills has given exhibit tours for 21 years. The intimate venue designed for "Images in Ivory" doesn't allow for large tours, she said. "We've been answering questions about the life and times of the Gothic period, but most people want to know how these pieces were carved," she said.

Working as a docent for "Images in Ivory" has helped

Marsha Gordon of Birmingham get valuable experience before DIA's upcoming "Splendors of Ancient Egypt" exhibit in July. "Worship went from a public to a private event," she told gallery visitors. "These ivory pieces looked more human and more interactive. They encouraged people to become part of the Bible."

To the delight of medieval scholars, a meticulously detailed catalog and collection of essays by pre-eminent Gothic art experts provides unprecedented documentation on the art. Likewise, several of the ivory carvings represent precedents. For instance, the "Virgin and Child" carving from the Taft Museum in Cincinnati has been reunited with other elements of the original sculpture, two ivory angels from the Rouen Cathedral Treasury. And the mysterious dark brown patina Virgin carving, discovered in a chimney after the French Revolution, makes its first appearance in the United States.

While the thriving ivory carving trade included many craftsman, the names of few artists are known. The delicate carving, "Corpus of Christ" by Giovanni Pisano, is an exception. The porcelain-like figure reflects Pisano's exquisite sculpture skill, and a genius' ability to fuse compassion with the redemptive quality of his subject.

In the first several weeks, "Images in Ivory" attracted visitors from the Louvre, the Victoria and Albert Museum of London and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, said Barnet. Many in the museum world have not only grasped the significance of the ivory carving collection, but realize that Gothic art exhibits occur infrequently. The last major medieval exhibit in the United States was 69 years ago in Detroit, according to Barnet.

"It's hard to say when - and if - a show like this will happen again," said Barnet. "There just hasn't been an exhibit like this before. I've heard some visitors gasp when they see the work."

Although Wheeler travels to exotic destinations such as Australia, Alaska and India for inspiration for art works like "Boatman on the Ganges," she looks forward to joining fellow club members in searching for encouragement locally.

"We get together to go to other art shows like 'Our Town' in Birmingham or the Detroit Institute of Arts and that stimulates Livonia resident and vice presiyour thinking," said Wheeler.

Judy Granata learned of Artifacts when she began taking color pencil and pastel classes at David Messing's Art Store & More in Livonia. Although Granata's been a member for only two years, she's reaped benefits from belonging to the art club and learned a great deal about manipulating the timeconsuming medium of color pencil from the Art Store & More. Not to be missed is Granata's "Tall and Elegant" white orchid in a clay pot.

"Being with other artists you can learn a lot," said Granata, a dent of the Visual Arts Association of Livonia.

Although the show was judged by Livonia artist Nancy Hurd, Artifacts does not discriminate against novice artists.

Having fun

"I'm a firm believer that everyone who wants to be in the show will be, from the housewife who dabbles to professional artists such as David Messing," said club president Sherry Eid. "My thought is to let every member in. Let's everybody have some fun."

And have fun, they did.

Eid portrays a colorful clown "who's outgoing and fun" in "Hi, I'm Sketches." The color pencil work is in stark contrast to the primarily white palette Ilene Tarkington uses for "Dancing Dolphins," a 3 by 5 foot cast paper work encased in Plexiglas. However, both works are whim-several of Sims' works. "I like Sharon's work very much," said DeGiusti. "There's a traditional Italian relief quality to her work. The detail she achieves with these miniature figures is pretty skillful."

Sims works in two different styles of figures: three dimensional and flat body. The three dimensional figures were created by gradually adding solder to steel armatures to create dimension. Similar to the way a clay artist works. Sims adds and subtracts metals all with a 1/4-inch chisel tip. For the two dimensional, or flat body figures, she builds up solder as the work-inprogress lays flat.

University of Michigan student Val Richards assists Sims in her 1,200-square-foot studio/gallery in Wyandotte. She admires Sims' work.

"Sharon is really modest. She doesn't realize the impact her work has or its meaning to people," said Richards.

Like the "Forgotten Pearl," Sims believes in helping people and causes. She volunteers her time and talents to a number of organizations including First Step, Boy Scouts of America, and substance abuse prevention and community pride programs. In 1996, the YWCA of Western Wayne County selected Sims to receive the Women of Achievement Award.

"I feel this gift of mine is given," said Sims, "so I want to give back."

BY LEANNE ROCERS STAFF WRITER

The 1946 romantic thriller "Notorious" is one of my favorites among Alfred Hitchcock's films. Somebody else who frequents my neighborhood video istore apparently was also fond of the film - I kept finding an empty carton on the shelf week after week.

I finally had to conclude the movie was lost or kept by a devotee or damaged beyond viewing. The happy ending to this story is that a new and very crisp copy of the movie appeared on the shelf a short time later.

Contemporary with it's release, the film begins in Miami where an unapologetic German spy has been found guilty of treason in federal court and is receiving a sentence of 20 years in prison.

The spy's daughter Alicia, played by Ingrid Bergman at her tall and luminous best, has to run a gauntlet of reporters and continues to be under surveillance by federal agents hot on the trail of a larger spy ring. Alicia, who had an American mother and is embarrassed by her father's actions, has been dealing with the tension by drinking and living the life of a party girl.

'Notorious': Hitchcock thriller worth a look

At one party, Alicra and her guests are having a good time. Joining them is a rather silent and solemn man, shown only from the back almost in a shadow. He turns out to be a federal agent named Devlin, played by Cary Grant at his most dark and help break up a German spy ring woman in har son's life. When in Brazil - with her father's conviction and her own public silence about the case, Alicia has the perfect pedigree to infiltrate the group.

In Brazil waiting to get their assignment, the vulnerable and needy Alicia and cynical Devlin fall in love. Their romance is short-lived due to prickly miscommunications when it is suggested that Alicia re-establish contact with a man suspected as being part of the spy ring and she eventually ends up married to him. Not a happy situation for anyone involved.

Claude Rains is very touching as spy Alex Sebastian, an older man and a momma's boy, deeply in love with a taller and younger woman who betrays him personally and most perilously for his future, also betrays his spying activities. Rains is also chilling in the ruthless manner he deals with an obstacle to the end goals of his espionage activities. No Hitchcock film would be complete without the domineering older woman - in this case Sebastian's mother who is jealhandsome. He convinces her to ous and hostile to the new they discover her new daughterin law is an American agent, the mother isn't surprised.

"We are protected by the enormity of your stupidity," Mother says as they try to extricate themselves from the situation before their confederates learn their circle has been breached.

"Notorious" has many of the Hitchcock trademarks - look for the director to make his appearance downing champagne at a party. There is a MacGuffin involving uranium ore and a tense scene involving how much wine is being consumed at the party. It's also a film of relatively few scenes that keep the story moving toward an appropriate

Kevorkian's ghoulish paintings scream for attention

By Frank Provenzano Staff Writer

The media horde surrounding a frail, white-haired man talking about a fascist government and the right to die seems commonplace by now. The setting, however, doesn't include a mysterious van or a death-inducing mask. Rather this time, it's all too much like a Fellini film. It's tough to say what's more bizarre: Dr. Jack Kevorkian's ghoulish paintings, or a cynical band of reporters hovering in a gallery trying to figure out the meaning of art.

Either way, there was an absurd poetry to the opening reception of "The Double Cross of Justice," an exhibit of 13 paintings by Kevorkian at Ariana Gallery in Royal Oak. The exhibit runs through March 29. Five of the 13 paintings have been created especially for the show.

Even Ariana owner Anne Kuffler, who shares Kevorkian's views, but not his taste in art. admits that the paintings show limited ability. The Bloomfield Hills resident, however, decided to show the work because she believes the collection continues the debate about physicianassisted suicide. Based on the public response and widespread media coverage, the exhibit has succeeded to bring even more notoriety and controversy to Kevorkian.

Nearly every major news organization covered the exhibit. including Newsweek, CNN, NBC and The New York Times - a testament, perhaps, to the media's obsession with Kevorkian, or their generally bad taste in art.

Ironically, an exhibit at Birmingham's Hill Gallery of one of today's most significant painters. John Walker, will likely draw scant media coverage. Meanwhile, a troop of reporters staked out Ariana Gallery and aggressively stood four-deep to ask Kevorkian about his approach to painting. Did anyone consider that was like asking Walker about his expertise in a pathology lab?

In normal situations, a painter might be recognized for the sheer brilliance of handling a subject or the mastery of the medium. But there's nothing normal about a Kevorkian exhibit. The rules of aesthetics and logic fall away.

Treated with the pomp of a major artist, Kevorkian could only muster a sophomoric and prankster mentality in his shock art display.

In "Genocide," he spread his own blood along the frame, while he instructed for a pair of socks to be placed under "Coma," which depicts a barefoot, sunken-eye patient entering a cloud chamber. It's hardly a surprise that Kevorkian's art is most popular among those who enjoy apocalyptic renderings, grotesque imagery and assaults on religion, law and government.

In Kevorkian's art, nothing is sacred. In "Noel of the West," Santa Claus coming down the chimney steps on an infant lying in a manger. In the foreground, an emaciated man's skeleton is literally ripping through his skin. In "Born Again," a flying Hitler figure anoints the U.S. Capitol. And in what Kevorkian calls his most important philosophical painting, "The Double Cross of Justice," he serves up a double meaning as a crucifix/justice scale is out of sync.

For Kevorkian the artist like

Kevorkian the cause celeb, ideology comes first. Nearly all of his works scream from the canvas to be noticed, and for the viewer to "wake up" and see eye-to-eye with haunting figures that vaguely resemble Kevorkian's sullen countenance. In defense, Kevorkian claims that repression and genocide are "ugly and hideous," and that his renderings reflect the injustices that he has observed and experienced. That may be true, but his work reflects his dark obsessions rather than any life-affirming qualities.

Both Kevorkian and his attorney, Geoffrey Fieger, readily admit that the exhibit is another venue to promote Kevorkian's views. With posters priced at $250 and limited prints at $2,000, they might be planning on a war chest for their cause. Reportedly, the original paintings will remain with the Kevorkian estate.

The Kevorkian-Fieger artmedia happening has already paid off. Shortly after Newsweek printed Kevorkian's "The Double Cross of Justice," Fieger turned down $100,000 for the painting. The value of Kevorkian's work make the inflated art prices of the 1980s seem justified.

Regardless of the earnestness of his intentions as a social protester, the motivations of. Kevorkian the artist have an insincere ring. His claim that he's neither an artist nor a painter provides a haven from criticism. But if we take him at his word, then his paintings can only be called posters for his cause. And if that's the case, the disturbing imagery will likely convince people to rethink Kevorkian's moral grounding.

If art-offers insight into the mind of the artist, then Kevorkian's work reflects a paranoid obsession with death, torture and ghoulishness. Strangely, as he looked around the gallery at his paintings, Kevorkian observed, "I think the ideas come across."

Even the media hord'e surrounding him couldn't dim Kevorkian's illumination of Hell.

The 1997 Student Art exhibit features painting, print making, sculpture, and photography by Amy Gilson of Livonia; Tom Smyth, Redford; Janet Jolley, Northville, and Randa Ajlouny. "It's really nice," said Ralph F. Glenn, art department chairperson, "The exhibit shows a lot of interesting print making and Oriental brush work."

Smyth captures in gouache the Spanish revivalism influence of a gas station built on Michigan Avenue in the late 1920s. Smyth learned about its architecture while studying Dynamic Detroit Architecture at Madonna University. This was an era when oil companies sought to minimize their intrusion into residential areas by building quaint stations such as the one still in use in Dearborn.

Gilson, who hopes to pursue a master's degree in art therapy after graduating from Madonna, shows her diversity by creating works in acrylic, oil pastel, and graphite pencil.

"There's some very nice three dimensional pieces by Janet Jolley," said Glenn.

Also of note, are an intaglio print series featuring circles by Ajlouny.

While the first set of students showed commercial art, the second group consisting of Smyth, Gilson, Jolley, and Ajlouny were fine arts major. Smyth began his studies in commercial art at Schoolcraft College in the 1970s. In an artist's statement exhibited with Smyth's work, he states that the years at Madonna and Schoolcraft have jointly influenced him.

"Color and composition developed as a fine artist has enhanced my commercial work," said Smyth. "At the same time, techniques learned as a commercial artist have aided me in the construction and execution of my paintings. While I'm excited about the possibilities presented by computer illustration, I enjoy the hands-on experience of putting brush on paper. ## Mystery set in Ann Arbor improbable but entertaining

"Bleeding Maize and Blue," by Susan Holtzer (St. Martin's Press, $22.95, 294pp)

University of Michigan alum and --longtime. Ann Arbor resident, Susan Holtzer has included something for just about everybody is this, her third mystery novel. "Bleeding Maize Blue" should hold special appeal for techno fans, journalists (old and new), football folk, students and alumni everywhere, Ann Arbor natives and newcomers, plus practically anybody who appreciates a lively and engaging tale of mystery.

Played out against a backdrop of colorful Ann Arbor during one of those hugely important foot-marks the return of computer whiz Anneke Haagen, as an amateur sleuth. This time around, she and live-in lover Karl Genesko (a former Wolverine defenseman and now Ann Arbor homicide chief) solve a strange murder that occurs inside Michigan Stadium. (The victim falls dead, appropriately, in the end zone.)

The victim is an NCAA investigator. The NCAA is apparently preparing to investigate alleged recruiting violations at Michigan. Suspects abound.

Could Coach Ralph Roczynski (nicknamed "Ro," of course) have committed such a dastardly deed? Or hard-working UM AD Russell Truhorne? Or influential genius-millionaire grad Daniel Najarian ("a head table kind of guy")? Surely, the investigator's daughter wouldn't have murdered her own father, but she lately, and is always stoned out of her mind. On the other hand, maybe star linebacker Kyle Farmer is the culprit. Or the Pulitzer-Prize winning has-been journalist Charlie Cassovoy, Or-Farmer's devoted girlfriend, Or that irritating cleaning woman

You won't find any deathless prose in Holtzer's novel, and certainly poetry does not lurk on every page. Her ambition lies in simply telling a nimble, timely tale, moved forward by an eclectic cast of characters, not the least of which is Ann Arbor itself. ("Ann Arbor dazzled in the early morning sunshine, crisp and bright and crystalline, the tree-lined Burns Park streets shedding red and gold in a blaze of fall color.")

Leading the (slightly overcrowded) cast, of course, is Haagen - although her she doesn't ball weekends, the whodunit seems so strange and peculiar make an appearance until Chapter Five, after Holtzer has neatly introduced us to a dozen or so of the supporting players. By turns checking calendars, schedule books, her watch, her spreading waistline, her graying hair, the middle-aged divorcee is highly conscious of the passage of time and what that can bring (here, in a sense, it brings murder). She seems almost always in a hurry, her lively mind ticking off "to-do" lists when she pauses to catch a breath and solving murder mysteries when the need arises.

> Devoted fans of the Haagen series will be perhaps surprised to discover a kind of second "leading lady" in the midst of the action. Michigan Daily reporter Zoe Kaplan goes far toward solving this case, and she even receives a special mention before the action begins (her character. is dedicated to noted Michigani-ness and curiosity make her seem the youthful twin of Anneke Haagen - and she definitely has her eye on Genesko. (A careful reader may detect a smidgen of trouble here between. Haagen and the handsome cop, by the way.) Perhaps we'll see more of Zoe in future Haagen stories. She definitely add dimension to this story, serving as more than a mere literary device to get us into the inner sanctums of the Daily, where much of this story take place.

A bothersome aspect of the whodunit has to do with the method for this murder. Stabbing someone to death with a four-foot flagpole seems a particularly odd way to commit murder to me, but this oddity is never really commented on in these pages. You'd think it was practically the preferred modus an Zolton Ferency). Her astute- operandi for murderers everywhere. Though the killer is trying to make a statement with this gruesomely-colorful gesture (at the top of the pole flies a maize and blue banner), it remains rather confusing that no one appears to notice how, shall we say distinctive, this specific gesture is. Ultimately, it seems implausible that the killer would be able to do such a thing, anyway - which is even more bothersome.

> Back on the plus side: As in most contemporary mysteries, readers can come away from this with some knowledge they perhaps didn't possess going in. You'll learn a little bit about a lot of things, including the rockem, sock-em world of big-time football, the grinding wheel of NCAA justice, plus how, in this day and age, a dead man can help solve his own murder.

Friendly Portugal allows you to experience history

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE SPECIAL WRITER

It was early morning and my husband, Ed, was reading on a bench in the gardens.

He thought he was alone. But when he looked up he saw a busload of tourists regarding him. "I was a tourist attraction," he later told me.

No, we were obviously not at home.

·We were staying at the castlelike Palace Hotel, a former hunting lodge in the middle of the Bucaco Forest north of Coimbra in Portugal, commissioned by King Carlos and built between 1888 and 1907.

A trip to Portugal allows you to experience history, not just regard its remains.

Besides this extraordinary building, with its gigantic staircase, walls covered with azulejos (tiles) depicting battle scenes from Portugal's history and antique furniture and chandefliers, we also stayed in an exquisitely renovated former monastery (Santa Marinha in Guimaraes) and a former palace (Rainha Santa Isabel in Estremoz) to which we actually drove miles out of our way to spend a night.

You, too, can experience histo-

They added immeasurably to our visit. We spent two-thirds of our time in the north of Portugal, driving its winding, narrow roads which twist up and down through miles of forest and vineyard visiting famous places like Fatima and Bom Jesus do Monte as well as lesser known such as the ruins of Citania de Briteriros near Braga, which existed from 8 to 4 B.C.

Portugal is the poorest country in the Common Market, but it has to be one of the friendliest whether you're visiting the walled city of Obidos, the old university town of Coimbra or exploring sophisticated Lisbon.

When my brother-in-law heard we were spending three days in Lisbon, he said it was too long. But he was wrong. It wasn't long enough.

It's a city, not unlike San Francisco, built on a series of hills, but the streets are narrow-

An elevator built in the early 1900s lifts you from the heart of Lisbon's Baixa shopping district with its outdoor cafes and street performers to the Chiado, full of bookshops and antique stores, and the more Bohemian Bairro Alto districts, where the fado houses flourish.

A night of fado is a not-to-miss as black-clad singers, mostly women in Lisbon, bare their souls through plaintive longings for love and Portugal's past. Plan to stay up late.

We were lucky enough to be there for the most acclaimed bull fight in a decade, according to the fan who sat next to us. Since it was our first bull fight, much of the expertise was lost on us, but none of the passion of the Portuguese spectators.

At times it was so quiet you wanted to shush your own breathing, at other times so loud you were certain you were in Michigan Stadium when U-M beats Ohio State.

The Portuguese don't kill their hulls on the field, and this night the foremost Spanish bullfighter

Not to forget food and b'est buys, shopping-wise.

Soups are wonderful, and, most often a meal in themselves. Stick to their wonderful fish and seafood and some of the freshest chicken you've ever eaten.

Desserts are easily avoided since most taste like you are eating meringues, being overly sweet.

Portuguese wines were a delightful surprise, and we lar to each area we covered including so-called green wines. And, of course, there are the ports, which we soon learned are more than mere after-dinner drinks.

Shopping-wise, jewelry (most of the gold is 18 carat) and azulejos are not to be missed - and Lisbon is the place to buy them. You can buy ancient azulejos as well as new and they will pack them for easy-carrying home.

Wayne's world toppled

Ottawa Hills ends Guess's reign, 57-46

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Wayne Memorial painfully learned Friday there's no substitute for size, especially when you're facing a 7-footer and another frontliner who is 6:9.

But it was 6-2 guard Eric Large who loomed big over the Zebras, scoring a game-high 24 points to lift Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills past Wayne in the state Class A boys basketball semifinals, 57-46, before 8,728 fans at Michigan State University's Breslin Center in East Lansing.

The loss ended the Lorenzo Guess era in which Wayne compiled an 83-16 record over the past four years, including two trips to the semifinals and another to the quarterfinal.

Guess, the 6-3 senior headed for MSU to play football and basketball, finished with a team-high 20 points. while another four-year varsity performer Richard Rashad, a 6-4 senior center and Wayne's tallest starter. added 14 points and 13 rebounds.

And although Wayne had fits dealing with senior twin towers -6-11 Jeff Rabey (12 points and nine rebounds) and 6-9 Ryan Christopher (six points and 14 rebounds), it was the sharp shooting of Large, who was eight of 13 from the floor, including a pair of three-pointers, which helped the Indians overcome a one-point halftime deficit and finish the Zebras' season at 24-2.

We had been humming right along in the tournament, but everything seemed like a struggle today, Wayne coach Chuck Henry said. "And I really don't have an answer why.

"It was tough for us to score and that's been relatively easy for us to do all season long."

With Rabey and Christopher hanging around the basket, Ottawa Hills was able to gamble defensively against Wayne's perimeter players.

The usually dead-eye LaVelle Guess, who had been averaging 15 points per game, didn't get off a first-quarter shot as Ottawa Hills led 12-9.

"When a kid gets it blocked, the next time down he's not as comfortable," Henry said. "We gave up a lot of size, 7 feet and 6-9 to 6-4 and 6-2, but give them credit. They played better basketball."

Despite shooting an uncharacteristic 10 of 32 (31 percent) from the floor during the first half, Wayne managed to pull ahead with a late seven-point flurry in the first half

But despite taking the lead, Lorenzo Guess was not feeling com-

"I was mad because we gave them a lot of easy layups," he said. "Theywere sending a lot of long passes down and we didn't get back. Guys were worried about going for offensive rebounds and crashing the boards, but it was nobody's fault because everybody was so into the game."

A Lorenzo Guess hoop to start the third quarter gave Wayne its biggest advantage of the game, 25-22, but that would be the last time the Zebras would be on top.

Ottawa Hills went on a 9-0 run to go ahead 31-25 as Large began to heat up from the outside after Rabey (four points) and Christopher (two) reestablished themselves inside.

Large had seven third-quarter entering the fourth.

Wayne tried to step up its fullcourt pressure, but nothing seemed to work as speedy 5-5 point-guard Ernest McNeil (five assists) continuall was able to get the ball into the front-court.

Adam Sturdivent came off the bench to score four points, giving Ottawa Hills a 46-33 lead with 5:44

Wayne cut the deficit to six, 48-42. on an acrobatic shot by Lorenzo Guess with 2:12 left, but it was too little, too late.

The win moved Ottawa Hills (21-6) into Saturday's state championship game with Detroit Redford (19-6). Redford won the other semifinal in the first game of the doubleheader over Public School League. rival Central, 67-65, in overtime.

"We've had an up-and-down sea-points as the Indians led 40-33 son, but right now everything seems to be in sync," Ottawa Hills coach Jim Eaddy said. "When I have both big people in there, it makes a difference, no question.

"We stressed the high-low. With 6-11 and 6-9 on the floor, that can be devastating."

Wayne was an icy-cold 27.9 percent from the field (19 of 68), while Ottawa Hills was 24 of 50 (48 per-

"We didn't want to get beat off the dribble, but we know if we do, we'd get help with those two (Rabey and Christopher) back there," Large said. "We watched the film against East Langing and we knew we had to stop the Guess brothers because they take 70 percent of their shots

when they have the ball, "We knew LaVelle could shoot and Lorenzo would penetrate and get the ball out to the 'three' (point-line)."

Zebra cagers provided many good memories

Was it supposed to end like this? Everything seemed to be going Wayne Memorial's way in this state high school boys basketball tournament until I showed up Friday afternoon at the Breslin Center in East Lansing.

When I saw Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills warming up, I said to myself, "Ought, Oh," these two big guys (6-foot-11 Jeff Rabey and 6-9 Ryan Christopher) could be trouble."

Could these little Zebras, who played giant killer all season, slew another Goliath?

My associate on press row, Dan O'Meara, however, cautioned me: "But can they play?," was his

The third-year performer made All-Michigan Metro and All-State.

"He knew how to play in the offensive zone, but what he did so well this year is learn to how to play in the defensive zone," CC coach Gordie St. John said. "He came back and made his checks." "He was a very responsible kid, a good leader." Greg Job, forward, Liv. Franklin: The three-year letterwinner and team captain moved into the fifth spot on the school's all-time scoring list after notching 21 goals and 16 assists for a total of 37 points.

The junior now has a total of 65 goals and 67 assists in his career. He was the Suburban High School Hockey League's leading scorer despite missing the final two weeks of the season with a broken arm: "Greg was the heart and soul of our team this year." Franklin coach Terry Jobbitt said. "He leads the team by example and is always ready to learn more. He enjoys helping his teammates. He's a very hard worker."

Job made All-State and All-League.

Andy Domzalski, forward, Liv. Stevenson: The senior played center and right defense this season, notching seven goats and 21 assists. He made All-League and All-State honorable mention.

"Andy is a very versatile, skilled player who can play offense and defense," Stevenson coach Mike Harris said. "He's a fast and explosive-type of skater. He has a hard and accurate

"Just a gritty-type kid."

Dan McLellan, forward, Redford CC: The senior left winger came on strong during the second half of the season, finishing with 16 goals and 20 assists.

I believe he was on the ice for more short-handed goals then the opposition had in powerplay goals. He was one of the strongest offensive players we had. He was very quick and just a hard-working player."

Darin Fawkes, forward, Liv. Stevenson: The junior right winger led the Spartans this season with 20 goals and 17 assists en route to All-League and All-State honorable mention honors.

*Darin was one of our top players because of his speed and deception he was a litterbug on the ice," Harris said. "For a first-year player he had an outstanding year.

*Darin is a real quiet kid, but a leader. He never complains and he's always on time."

Trevor Pagel, forward, Redford Union: The senior center pumped in 29 goals and 19 assists for 48 points. He had nine short-handed goals eight powerplay goals for the regional finalist.

"Trevor had a great season," RU coach Kirk Hunter said. "He's a good two-way player who is a real threat to score in any situation.

"He was our go-to guy." Pagel was named All-Suburban and honorable mention All-State. Scot Curtin, defensemen, Redford CC: Voted Michigan's Mr. Hockey by the coaches association, the senior finished with 14 goals and 23 assists for 37

"Scott was a combination of a very good defensive defenseman and a great offensive defenseman as well," St. John said. "He's very quick. He's a smart hockey player who finds the openings and puts the puck in the passing lanes.

"He's very skilled." Curtin was named All-Michigan Metro and of course All-State. Mike Porter, defensemen, Redford CC: Made up high school hockey's best one two combination on defense with Curtin. Porter, a senior, led CC in scoring with 16 goals and 25 assists for 41 points as he garnered All-State and All-

Michigan Metro honors. *Mike had the ability to to control the pace of the game, either slow it down or speed it up," St. John said. "He was not only intimidating because of his size, but also because he could dictate the flow of the game. You need a guy like

Price hurls Madonna to 6-4 victory vs. Aquinas in opener; nightcap tied

Madonna University's softball team got just about everything it wanted from Thursday's doubleheader at Aquinas College.

A field in good enough condition to play on. Weather good enough to play in. And results that ended up a single inning short of perfect.

As it is, the Lady Crusaders will have to settle for a win and a tie. They won Thursday's first game 6-4, thanks in large part to Shanna Price's four-hit, no-walk pitching performance.

But the second game had to be called because of darkness after six innings, with the game tied

In the opener, Madonna overcame a 3-0 deficit after one times to force the game to end in inning, scoring twice in the third and four times in the fifth. Shawna Greene and Dawn Shaffer each had a hit and two runs batted in to lead the Crusader attack; Vicki Malkowski added two hits, and Melissa McGue had-a hit, a walk and scored

Price went the distance, allowing two earned runs in improving her record to 4-1. In the second game, Janell Leschinger was cruising along for Madonna with a 5-0 lead until the bottom of the sixth. That's when Aquinas scored five Leschinger pitched 5% innings, allowing two earned runs on six hits. Price relieved and got the final two outs of the sixth, but not before giving up two earned runs on three hits and a walk. Madonna had eight hits in the game, with Shaffer and Jamie

Heins each accounting for two, including a double apiece. Shaffer had one RBI; Jamie Vickers and Malkowski had a hit and an RBI each. One thing that was far short of good for Madonna was the defense. The Crusaders made six errors in the twinbill, leading to three unearned runs.

The result left Madonna with a 7-6-1 record. Aquinas fell to 7-

Borgess rolls in Class C semifinal game, 79-46

By Steve Kowalski Staff Writer

Redford Bishop Borgess experienced somewhat of a time warp early in the first quarter of Thursday's Class C boys basketball state semifinal at Michigan State University's Breslin Cen-

The Spartans' opponent, Scottville Mason County Central, jumped to a quick 6-0 lead with consecutive three-point shots by guard Jesse Deering and forward Travis Aultman.

The long-range shooting looked a lot like another CC the Spartans see enough of in the regular season.

"They reminded me of (Detroit) Catholic Central with those 3s," said Aaron Jessup. Borgess' 6-foot-3 guard rapidly becoming one of the state's best juniors.

But the Spartans regrouped in a hurry, ending the half on a 24-6 run en route to a 79-46 victory. Jessup led four Spartans in double figures with 21 points, including 11 in the first quarter.

Borgess ended the quarter on a 7-0 run, culminated by a steal and dunk by Jessup, to build a 20-14 lead.

And the Spartans never looked back.

"We never lost our heads and kept positive," Jessup said. "We want to win for the seniors and coaches. We got upset in the regionals last year (by Southgate Aquinas) and we didn't want that to happen again."

The win sent the Spartans into Saturday's championship game where they were heavily favored to beat Three Oaks River Valley, a 69-67 winner over Benzie Central in Thursday's other Class C semifinal. Mason County Central finished the season with a 23-3 overall record and a real appreciation of Borgess' talent.

THINKING ABOUT

PREP HOOPS

The quick start, which gave Mason County Central a 14-13 lead as late as 3:27 remaining in the first quarter; was almost too good to be true.

'They're good, real good," Mason County Central coach Tim Genson said. "They are well rounded inside and outside and hit the glass real well. I told my JV coach 'I don't think we missed any of our first five shots. If we keep this up we'll be in great shape.' A 94-foot game wasn't the kind of game we were going to win."

Defense was an even bigger concern for Mason County Central.

With Mason County Central laying back in a zone, Borgess canned five shots from threepoint range in the game's first 11 minutes to gain a 27-14 lead.

Mason County Central went to a man-to-man defense, more out of desperation than anything else, and Borgess was able to build its lead to 37-20 at half-Borgess, which led 57-26 after three quarters, made 29 of 69 shots from the floor, including 9 of 23 from three-point land. Mason County Central was 19-39 from the floor, 4-12 from three-point territory.

Joining Jessup in double figures were John White with 14 points, Kevin Jordan with 12 and Durand Bynum with 10. White was 4 of 9 from threepoint range and Jordan was 2-4. while dishing out a game-high nine assists and only one turnover.

Mason County Central's junior point guard Jesse Deering might have been the quickest guard Borgess has seen (believe it), but even he was overwhelmed by coach Rosey Barne's overall team quickness...

"They're definitely the quickest and moth athletic players I've played against," said Deering, who finished with 10 points, six assists and six turnovers. "I know I was rushed and I felt the adrenaline flowing. It was just a good experience and I think we'll build on it."

Borgess committed only nine turnovers to Mason County Central's 23 and enjoyed a 36-23 rebounding edge, including 21 on the offensive end. Jessup led Borgess with eight rebounds and Bynum added five.

Mason County Central did an admirable job on Sam Hoskin, the Spartans' 6-7 junior center who finished with seven points and two rebounds.

Chad Pleiness, Mason County Central's 6-6 junior center, had a team-high 12 points. Aultman had seven points in the first quarter and only two more the rest of the way.

"They came out with a lot of intensity and aggression and our young men kept their composure and fought back," Barnes said. "We're playing a lot better team defense and getting what we're looking for on offense, making that extra pass."

Editor's note

Because of new Observer Sunday edition deadlines, results and photo coverage of Saturday's Class C state championship game between Bishop Borgess and Three Oaks-River Valley will appear in Thursday's Observer.

Also, the All-Observer boys basketball and girls volleyball teams will appear in the Sunday, March 30 and Thursday, April 3 editions. Both teams will be selected by the Observer staff.

DePorres handed them a 70-57 loss).

Ottawa Hills deserves credit, for sure. They were the better basketball team on this day.

But as Wayne coach Chuck Henry and his two seniors — Guess and Richard Rashad addressed the media afterwards to explain what had happened, I couldn't help but good moments this team provided over the years.

Yes, it's the end of an era in Observerland for sure.

Guess, a four-year varsity performer, led his team to an 83-16 record. He was a gamer and a leader, a guy who played the game the way it was meant to be played, a warrior and a thinker who never let his guard down.

If you're talking about the all-time greats in Observerland, then put him right at the top of the list.

And to watch the development of his brother LaVelle during the past three years was a thrill as well. He emerged from his brother's shadows and made a name for himself. Certainly one of the area's best shooters, even though he didn't show on Friday. Rashad arrived at Wayne High with Guess right out of junior high. The two played on the varsity as a ninth-graders. He was consistent and poised, a player who sacrificed for the good of the team to play the reflect and recall the many middle despite being undersized at 6-4.

> "These two kids were so special from the fact that I wanted them to win the prize," Wayne coach Chuck Henry said. "These two kids (Rashad and Guess) have been model citizens. They're not only gifted and talented, but I've enjoyed coaching them. It's been a blessing to be with them."

> Rashad carries a 3.7 gradepoint average and ranks 25th in his class, while Lorenzo is a 3.6 and ranks 27th.

Rodney Hurst, another senior starter, proved to be the perfect complement, a guy who could shoot, handle the ball and play defense.

It was the last time these four seniors, along with Deon

Willis and Charlie Bailey, will play together.

And to their credit, there was no crying afterwards despite the painful defeat, no emotional outbursts.

They took their medicine and proved good sports are win-

Lorenzo may have summed it up best outside the media room when he talked about his basketball experience at Wayne.

The All-Stater will have more games and more challenges awaiting him on the gridiron and the basketball court at MSU, but a chapter in his athletic career is now over.

"I liked this team, even better than the one last year, because we bonded so well together," he said. "I'll miss, playing with them."

And from this writer's standpoint, a piece of me goes along with them.

I'll miss this group because they did so many things in the right manner.

Perhaps it is supposed to end this way.

Stingrays wear state Midget AA hockey crown

the Plymouth TNT Stingrays what they had sought all season — a state hockey title in the Midget AA bracket March 16 in Battle Creek

Reinhart's tap-in goal, on a shot from the blue line by Matt Church, came with 2:48 left in the game, giving Plymouth a 3-2 lead over the St. Clair Shores Saints, which proved good enough. The win sends the Stingrays to the National tournament in St. Louis.

After a scoreless first period, both teams scored twice in the second. Plymouth goals came from Reinhart, on an unassisted breakaway, and Jeff Lang, assisted by Marc O'Keefe and Ryan Safran ....

Gordy Smith was in goal for the Stingrays.

The five-game tournament began the previous Friday evening (March 14), with Plymouth meeting - and beating - Calumet, 7-1. Clint Bonkowski scored three

A tip-in by Brett Reinhart late in the third period gave Stingray goals, with Brad Feiler, Reinhart, Ryan Ward and Lang also getting goals.

On Saturday (March 15) the Stingrays clubbed host Battle Creek 4-1, with goals coming from Lang, Ryan Ossenmacher, O'Keefe and Reinhart, then defeated AFI Thunder 6-2. Nik Derouin, Feiler, Lang, Ossenmacher, Reinhart and Jay Perino got the goals, with the win clinching first for Plymouth in the National Division.

Which put the Stingrays into the semifinals against Midland, which they won 5.2. Lang scored twice, with Feiler, Reinhart and Bonkowski each getting a goal.

RECREATION

The ice storm on March 13 was inconvenient for people who didn't have electrical power and for those who may have slid into another car accidentally.

But to the early migrating birds and our resident birds, ice storms can be deadly.

When ice covers so much of the vegetation, as it did during the storm and the following several days in some areas of southeast Michigan, it's hard for birds to get food. Researchers think birds still get 80 percent of their food in winter from the wild. Feeders only supplement their diets. Although birds get only a small amount of their food from feeders, they're absolutely critical for their survival during ice storms.

A researcher followed a group of birds in a forest and monitored a group of birds that frequented a feeding station.

During severe storms that lasted two-three days, there was greater mortality in the forest group that didn't have access to a feeder than in the population that visited the feeders.

Early arriving migrants like robins and redwinged blackbirds take their chances when they return North early.

Late winter storms can take their toll on birds weak from their journey.

If they can't find food and are too weak to fly back South, they die in several days. Some of the early arrivals exhibit what's called reverse migration, Birds fly South just far enough to find food and suitable conditions. They will return when conditions are once again suitable in the North. I didn't see any red-winged blackbirds on my way to Jackson, Mich., last weekend, though I know they had returned in good numbers. This ice storm was considered the worst in Detroit Edison's history, but according to Richard Keen in his book "Michigan Weather," it wasn't Michigan's worst. In 1922 a 100-mile wide band of Michigan was coated with ice up to 2 inches thick. Wires were covered with up to 4 inches, about 11 pounds per foot of wire. Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

ON THE RUN

DILLON

One of the nicest things about this time of year is that the calendar begins to fill up with roadaces - organized incentives to roll out of bed and enjoy a morning in spring with fellow runners and walkers. With winter on its way out, numbered are the days of battling inertia brought on by frigid temperatures, wind, ice and snow.

In southeastern Michigan, we're blessed to have a wealth of races from which to choose.

March 29

The Easter Bunny Boogie - a 4-miler sponsored by the Metro Macomb Runners at Metropolitan Beach Metropark - kicks off at 11 a.m. A special race for kids, a 50-yard run, is scheduled for noon. Entry fee is just $6.

Metro Beach on Lake St. Clair, a wonderful place to visit year-round, is closer than it seems. Exit I-94 at Metroparkway (16 Mile Road). For more information, call (810)426-7221.

The Motor City Striders present the Detroit Pistons Fast Break 5K at 10 a.m. at the west entrance of the Palace of Auburn Hills. The $20 advance entry fee includes a ticket to the Detroit Pistons vs. Philadelphia game, 7 p.m. Sunday, March 30; two vouchers for the Detroit Vipers hockey game at noon March 29; t-shirts; giveaways; and awards. Race day registration ($25) will be at the Palace from 8:30 a.m. - 9:45 a.m. Call (810)544-9099 for more information.

April 5

Run the Shores, presented by the Lake Shore High School Athletic Booster Club, kicks off at 9 a.m. The 5-mile run/racewalk and 1-mile Fun Run courses in St. Clair Shores are fast and flat. Run the Shores is known for some of the best post-race goodies in Michigan. Call (810)293-7937 or (810)294-5726.

April 6

Enjoy Americana come-to-life as you run past the old mill stream at the Manchester Mill Run. Norman Rockwell would paint a scene of this one. The 1-mile starts at 11 a.m., followed by a 5miler at 11:15 a.m.

Entry fee is $15 for applications received prior to March 28. After April 3, the fee is $17. An all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast follows the race. Flowers and four-color, long-sleeved tshirts go to all runners. The popular race is known for its original awards and homespun hospitality. Proceeds go to Manchester school athlet-

"Everyone over 21 is invited to a post-race cross-country fun run and get-together hosted by the Hash House Harriers running club, with a free dinner and beverages afterwards," says Manchester race director Chris Brooks.

For more information, call (313)428-1447 or (313)285-1116.

April 19

Detroit's Race for the Cure 5K run/walk and 1mile fun walk is expected to draw 15,000 to the Detroit Zoo. The men's 5K starts at 8:30 am. followed by the 9 a.m. 5K walk and run for women, family and friends, and a 9:10 a.m. 1-mile fun

Registration, if postmarked by March 28, is $15. For more information, call (800)527-6266. Entry forms for most races are available at area running stores. M.B. Dillon is an Observer staffer who has run 31 marathons. Send results and race information for "On the Run" to her at 794 S. Main, Plymouth, or fax material to (313)459-4224.

Looking for toe holds: Safe in his well-knotted harness, 11-year-old Doug Perkins of Farmington Hills makes his first climb up the artificial wall at Benchmark.

Getting started

The best way to get started in rock climbing is to first work with the experts to learn safety techniques.

The Benchmark class cost students $20 for a three-hour session with an expert, Mike Hurd of Vertical Ventures in Lansing.

Both the Benchmark in Farmington and the new Recreation Equipment Inc. (REI) store in Northville have practice climbing walls, with artificial toeholds embedded in the wall.

Harnesses and ropes are available, but the climber must know how to use them.

The newly opened REI store is just getting underway, so many details are undecided. There are no classes, but at certain times a belayer is on staff to help climbers use the wall. The belayer's help is free. For more information, call 810-347-2100.

REI's wall is not like the wall at Benchmark, which abuts the wall of the store. REI's wall is a free-standing pinnacle that has a "chimney" (a more difficult climb) in the middle.

By MARIE CHESTNEY STAFF WRITER

For a beginner, rock climbing is mostly about tying knots.

In fact, at a recent beginner's class at the Benchmark in Farmington Hills, two hours were spent tying, untying and tying again "figure eight" and "keeper" knots.

The six students in the class only spent minutes actually working their way up the artificial climbing wall inside the sporting goods store.

Instructor Mike Hood quickly made it plain why a well-tied knot is critical to mastering - and surviving - the sport.

"Rock climbing is a dangerous sport," said Hood, co-owner of Lansing-based Vertical Ventures, which puts on the classes. "It has a high bonehead potential, with lots of improper things done. You must put your gear on properly. Being safe is being smart. Most accidents are avoidable. Never get lazy and use bad knots. Have a reason for everything you do, and have it checked."

A well-tied knot hooked to the climber's harness is critical mainly because of the law of gravity. What goes up can come crashing down.

Everything's dandy as long as the climber keeps moving upward. But when a climber misses a toehold and topples, it's only the rope tied to the harness, and a partner holding the rope, that keeps the climber from falling to the ground.

A poorly tied knot can snap open quickly under the weight of a falling climber.

Students who take the class can come back repeatedly to master the techniques of climbing the store's wall. But they get very few shots at learning sound safety techniques from an expert.

Hood has climbed rocks around the world, "as far north as Scotland, as far south as Venezuela." In teaching 5,000 an accident happen.

"You guys (and gals) will remember these knots the rest of your life," Hood said, as he once again tells them to take apart their knot and start over.

Caribiner technique:

Well-dressed "figure 8": Over and over, Doug Perkins took apart the knot hooking him to his harness and remade it. Jim Perkins helped his son through the complex process.

One of the six beginners is Doug Perkins, a fifth-grader at Franklin Road Christian School in Farmington Hills, who is accompanied by his father, Jim.

The Perkins family is going to Colorado this summer; one of Doug's goals is to do some rock climbing there.

The Benchmark has one of two artificial climbing walls now available in the Observerland area. The second one opened March 14 in the Recreation Equipment Inc. (REI) store in the Northville Centre shopping mail at Six Mile and Haggerty in Northville.

With a dearth of mountains in Michigan, Hood teaches most of his students mountain climbing students, he said he's never had techniques on the ledges near Grand Ledge in mid-Michigan.

Partners are essential to mountain climbing. Partners check each other out, making sure each has done everything right before the climb ever begins. The climber even has to get permission from the partner/belayer to begin the climb.

"Ready to climb?" Doug asked his partner, Kevin Kenny, an industrial electrician from Wolverine Lake:

"Climb on," Kenny said, after checking Doug's knot and har-

While Doug searches for the next toehold on the massive artificial wall, Kenny keeps the proper tension in the rope. He gives Doug just enough rope to let him move upward.

Doug slipped, but remembered Hood's rule of safety: "keep your hands on the wall if you fall; make sure your hand touches the wall, not your head. Launch yourself off the wall and slide down."

. Doug swings back and forth on the rope; as belayer, Kenny did his job in halting Doug's drop.

In subsequent visits to the artificial wall, Doug will learn the skills of climbing. He'll learn to gently move over the rocks, not muscle his way upward.

"It's more like ballet," Hood said. "It's about finesse, balance, grace."

TEN PIN ALLEY

This is one story that I had better not forget to write. Last Saturday it was the Alzheimer's Association with their 1997 Bowling Bonanza at Cloverlanes in Livonia. This event, their 8th Annual was hosted by Bob Allison, the well known voice of "Ask Your Neighbor" on WEXL-AM radio. Altogether, over 500 people participated in the bowling games to have some fun and at the same time raise money for the fight against Alzheimer's Disease. In the greater Detroit area alone there are some 70,000 people who are afflicted. The participants each raised money on their own through pledges, and those who raised the most were rewarded with special prizes for achieving various levels of donations. Those who brought in $2,500 or more received a trip for two (2 nights stay) to Toronto. The $1,000 level was good for 13" color TV, while the lesser amounts were also rewarded nicely. In addition to the fund raising prizes, there were over 200 other door prizes given out in random drawings during bowling. Many of those were gift certificates from local merchants and restaurants who donated to this worthy cause. Host Bob Allison is remembered by a lot of bowling fans for his TV show, "Bowling for Dollars," which was aired weekly on Ch. 4 a number of years ago. Many of the participants, like Lilly Evans of Canton who entered with her friend, Ernie Wygrecki said, "I like bowling and wanted to participate in this fund-raiser, it's my second year with it and many of my friends from the Farmington Singles Professionals are also in it today." Ann Hengstebeck entered with her friend, Rich Szurek and she said, "I just wanted to help in the cause, to raise money in the fight against Alzheimer's. I brought in $88 in pledges." According to Dian Wilkins, Executive Director of the Detroit Chapter, "This is the best turnout we have ever had. I am excited about it, and all proceeds go directly to help provide services for the patients and their families. Event coordinator, Mickey McGee added, "I want to thank our many sponsors and donors for the many awards and great door prizes."

This year's event was a huge success, everyone who came in enjoyed the bowling and the pizza along with knowing that they had helped raise the projected amount of about $25,000.

Fortunately for the fund-raiser, the worst ice storm to hit here in years was a day earlier, and people were able to function normally again. On Friday most of the schools were closed. Isn't it funny that when the schools are closed by bad weather, all the bowling centers are open? That is always a big day for business as the kids then have a free day to go bowling.

Oak Lanes in Westland will host a "Easter Hunt Ladies Singles" tournament on Tuesday, March 25 in the morning with a starting time at 9:30 a.m. The $10 entry fee includes 3 games of bowling (1stregular, 2nd 3-6-9 automatic strike frames and 3rd nine pin no-taps). They will have three high game: jackpots (handicapped), two mystery games special Easter prizes, position payoffs and free baby sitting is available, all included. For additional information, call Oak Lanes at (313) 422-7420.

The future is now, as the high technology of the: 21st century has reached a few of the bowling centers. Brunswick has "Instant Replay" and "Bowler-Track" which both provide information on each ball delivery. Cherry Hill Lanes on Inkster Road at Cherry Hill has the only such installation present. ly in Metro Detroit area. Why not more? The expense of this program is "Outta sight" accordingto Ted Hochstein at Cherry Hill. They only have two lanes set up with it, but it works great if you want to really be able to analyze your game. You can play back the frame and see your delivery from a frontal view, you get a readout on the ball speed and where it was as it traveled down the lane, what board it was on at 15, 21, 33, 40, 45, 50. and 55 feet. It even has the angle of entry to the pins, so you can see exactly what you are doing, and how it relates to the pin action. Someday more of these will be in use, but for now, only at Cherry. Hill.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Cardiology research

Botsford General Hospital's cardiology department is taking part in the largest multi-center international study exploring treatment options for cardiogenic shock, a condition which is fatal in more than three-quarters of patients who experience it.

The 12-month study, Thrombolysis and Counterpulsation to Improve Cardiogenic Shock Survival, will involve approximately 550 patients in an estimated 75 sites throughout the world, including 40 community hospitals in the U.S. The study began with the first patient enrolled at Botsford in Farmington Hills in January.

"We're excited at the prospect of contributing to this crucial study," said Dr. Robert J. Stomel, D.O., Botsford's chief of cardiology. "For over 10 years, Botsford has been involved in several pioneering studies examining how - in a community hospital setting - aggressive treatment strategies can save the lives of a significant number of patients experiencing acute myocardial infarction (heart attacks) and cardiogenic shock."

Cardiac shock, an emergency condition linked with heart attacks and heart failure, is a form of shock caused when the heart fails to supply enough blood to the body. It is fatal in about 80 percent of patients.

The survival rate for patients suffering from cardiogenic shock brought to most community hospital emergency rooms is lower than patients in tertiary-care centers (or much larger facilities offering a more specialized, highly technical level of care). Most community hospitals are not certified or designated as sites to perform angioplasty intervention (or surgery that transfers health tissue to repair coronary blood vessels, thus enabling increased blood flow).

Led by Stomel, a team of Botsford cardiologists has contributed research in several nationwide studies on the increased success rate of treating patients who develop cardiogenic shock with a two-step approach. This aggressive treatment strategy begins with thrombolytic therapy (administering a series of medications which dissolve blood clots), followed by surgery inserting an intraaortic balloon pump (a device which assists the heart to pump). Patients are then sufficiently stabilized to allow early transfer to a tertiary-care hospital for revascularization, or the treatment to reactivate the heart's blood vessels after the trauma of being deprived of blood sup-

"Our investigations demonstrate that the inhospital survival rates improve to almost 70 percent with aggressive therapy, compared to previous community hospital survival rates, between 10 and 20 percent," Stomel said.

Donor cards

Taxpayers who get a refund check this tax season will find a little something else in the enve-

For the first time, the U.S. Department of Treasury will enclose an organ and tissue donor card along with each tax refund check mailed this year. The 3-by-7-inch organ donor card answers commonly asked questions about donation and describes the steps necessary to becoming a

The initiative is the result of federal legislation passed last year that directed the Treasury to enclose organ and tissue donor information with each tax refund check mailed between February and June 1997. Michigan Sen. Carl Levin, a Democrat, and Congressman Dave Camp, a Republican, were part of the team of legislators behind the initiative. "It is very important that if you agree to become a donor that you make your. intentions known to someone who is close to you," said Camp. "This is an important step that is not taken often enough. Signing up to be an organ donor is only one part of the process. Informing loved ones of your intentions is the other."

Today, nearly 2,000 Michigan patients await a life-saving organ. Medical advances in transplant surgery are giving new hope and life to many terminally and chronically ill patients; however, the long waiting list outpaces the donation rate.

Public education about family discussion is key to increasing the number of families who consent to donation. Levin, a longtime champion of organ and tissue donation, has recorded a 30-second radio public service announcement urging families to engage in discussions about donation.

The radio PSA is being distributed by the Michigan Coalition on Donation, 39 transplantrelated organizations dedicated to increasing donation.

For more information on organ and tissue donation or to receive an organ donor card, contact the Gift of Life Agency of Michigan, 1-800-482-4881.

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI SPECIAL WRITER

loomy medical reports about the long-term effects of children carrying too many pounds have inspired area educators to invent creative ways to trim the fat from kids in your neighborhood.

It's not a small problem. In fact, one in five youngsters between 6 and 17 years old is overweight. Twenty percent of boys and 22 percent of girls are carrying around more bulk than they should for their health now and in the future, according to a National Center for Health Statistics study conducted by Richard Troiano.

He blames excess pounds on today's lifestyle, Physical education teachers and nurses in area school districts agree.

"What happens is children grab a bag of chips and sit in front of the TV," according to Linda Rotramel, Plymouth-Canton School District elementary physical education teacher. Local students are falling short of meeting physical fitness standards.

Rotramel sponsors a Presidential Physical Fitness Challenge and Awards program that measures children's cardiovascular endurance through a number of different tests. Students 5 to 15 years old participate and only between six and 10 out of some 400 students pass annually.

"It's not something that teachers have to do," she said. "The kids enjoy the challenge and this is a way to measure their fitness. Unfortunately, the majority of the children fail."

Students must meet the challenge in every category to pass. Many children pass some routines and fail others. The successful children receive a badge and a certificate with the president's signature Gymnasts and ice skaters do the best on the fitness challenge, because those sports strengthen many body parts.

As a society, we need to teach children at a young age the value of daily exercise and eating properly, just like we teach them reading and arithmetic, Rotramel said. There's a growing concern about weight nationwide. Consider that the number of overweight children in the U.S. has doubled in the past 30 years, according to information provided by Henry Ford Health System.

Kids at risk

While heart attacks and stroke are rare in children, evidence suggests that the process leading to those conditions begins in childhood. Inactive children also weigh more, have higher blood pressure and lower levels of heart-protective high-density lipoprotein (HDL cholesterol) than active children.

At the elementary school level, physical education teachers in the Plymouth-Canton School District only see students one day a week for 45 minutes. "When they get to sixth grade they are getting it five times a week, but it's too late," Rotramel said. "It's not enough. By sixth grade they've learned a lot of poor habits.

Rotramel recently took students on a field trip to Compuware Sports Arena in Plymouth Township to see the new facility and try to get students involved in lifelong activities like, ice skating. We're teaching kids to stay active through their adult lives to maintain good self-esteem and a healthy body."

Rotramel encourages kids to bring apples, cheese, celery with peanut butter and similar snacks during school breaks as opposed to packing flavored gummy bears and considering that a fruit. At home, she said, it's just as easy to grab an apple from the refrigerator than a bag of chips from the cupboard.

There are many things a family can do to stay active, according to Bill DeFillippo, physical education teacher at Roosevelt Elementary School in Livonia. Preparing a schedule of various activities the family will do together is a good start. The first step is finding activities your children enjoy. "You can be creative," DeFillippo said. "Find different activities and sports. The kids here are crazy for playing street hockey. It's a cardiovascular workout, it's a workout for their legs and they enjoy doing it. Mix things up so you don't get bored with the routine."

Most elementary schools in Livonia see kids one time each week for phys ed, he said. "We're lucky enough to have kids two times a week, but it's still not enough,"

Helping children cope

Lynn Waldecker, Garden City physical education teacher, said most overweight kids are "horrified" to take physical education classes and they're the ones who need the activity the most. Certain concerns overweight students have, like changing clothes in the locker rooms in front of other students and not being able to keep be overwhelming. "We had one girl who was sick about it." Waldecker said. "They're afraid of physical activi-

up with the physical activity, can

She tries to soften their fears by allowing them to do things like wear a T-shirt over the swim suit in the pool, that will make them more comfortable. Waldecker treats overweight children as if they have a health risk.

For instance, she said wouldn't send those students out to run one mile until they worked up to that level of endurance. "Unfortunately, our school district doesn't have phys ed in (kindergarten through sixth grade) and that's a huge problem, because that's when they set their metabolism," Waldecker said. "We want to get them to like activity. We want them to pursue lifetime leisure activity."

Between 10 and 15 percent of the students in gym classes are. athletes. "We try to deal with the ♦ other 80 percent," she said adding ★ ways to make lifestyle changes.

that she starts students out playing games like horseshoes, pingpong, bowling and badminton. Swimming, golf, tennis and basketball are also offered.

Kids, including the heavier ones, who can't keep up on basketball teams are allowed to shoot baskets and that keeps them from running back and forth on the court. The idea is that when they get older they'll have some skills at sports that can be played by getting two or three people togeth-

Waldecker and Ron Pummill, who also teaches Garden City physical education, say their first role in teaching is to motivate students, "Our greatest joy is when a non-athletic kid comes back and says, Tm going to take it again, just because,' and she's overweight."

Leo Kinsella, Clarenceville schools athletic director, offers overweight students independent study classes involving walking, swimming, exercise and weight training. The nonstructured class is an alternative to classes involving team sports where these stu-. dents wouldn't participate much.

Another option for overweight students is the individualized fitness classes where instructors and students decide what they want to achieve, like physical fitness or building strength. Realistically, Kinsella said, a lot of the programs for overweight kids are only moderately successful. Consider, though, that many overweight youngsters have extreme weight problems that began in early childhood, he said.

"There are more kids who are very opposed to physical activity today," Kinsella said. "The kids don't like to play as much as they used to. It's more of a chore to them. I think a big factor is that kids aren't getting the involvement they used to with parents in early elementary. Fewer parents are taking their kids out to play.

Attitude about exercise and good nutrition is important not only among students, but their parents, too, according to Jerry Szukaitis, athletic director for John Glenn High School in the Wayne-Westland School District.

"They need some type of physical activity daily. Make it fun for them."

Nurses also assist

School nurses often work closely with physical education teachers in helping overweight kids. When Carol Bass, Redford Union nurse, is approached by a teacher or parent about overweight students she recommends they go to their doctor, a Weight Watchers program for children and various exercise classes.

"A lot of teens who are normal weight are unhappy with their weight," Bass said. Working individually with each child with a weight problem is impossible, she added, considering there are two nurses for 5,000 students.

Stephanie Bury, South Redford School District nurse, said when an overweight child is brought to her she contacts the student's parents and recommends the child seek medical attention. If finances are a problem she refers them to agencies that will help.

"Usually if a child is overweight we look and the whole family is overweight," Bury said. "People" are overweight because they eat too much or they eat the wrong thing."

Following nutritional guidelines and writing down everything the child eats daily are two more

Teen girls report more severe dating violence

victims of physical abuse by a date, girls report more severe violence and greater physical and emotional effects, say University of Michigan researchers.

In their study of 635 students from a large Midwestern high school, U-M social work Professor Richard M. Tolman and Christian Molidor of the University of Texas at Arlington found that about 37 percent of boys and 36 percent of girls say that they have experienced physical violence during a dating relationship.

However, more than 90 percent of the boys say very little" or "not at all," while nearly half of the injury (caused bruises, needed medical attention), they are experiencing."

Tolman said. "Girls were much more likely to be punched and ners started the abuse 70 percent of the time, while

While teenage boys are just as likely as girls to be to be forced to engage in sexual activity against their will," he said. "Boys, on the other hand, were significantly more likely to be pinched, slapped, scratched and kicked."

The study results show that more than half of the boys say they laughed at receiving the abuse, while a third ignored it. Girls more often fought back, obeyed or tried to talk to their partner after experiencing violence. Furthermore, about 36 percent of the girls say that they defended themselves when abused by their date.

"This is one way of accounting for some of the incidents of violence that boys report occurring that their worst incident of dating violence "hurt toward them," Tolman said. "The boys' reports of violence toward them may, in fact, be their partgirls report serious harm ("hurt a lot") and physical ... ners' acts of self-defense in reaction to violence that boys report that their dates initiated the violence 27 percent of the time.

According to the study, unwanted sexual advances, jealousy and drunkenness are primary reasons for teen dating violence.

About 37 percent of the abused girls report that their partners had made sexual advances toward them, while nearly half of the boys and one-fourth of the girls who were victims of violence say that their dates' jealousy was the reason they were subjected to physical violence, Tolman said. Few reported incidents to an authority figure or a family member, although nearly two-thirds confided in a friend. Tolman suggested that schools should help prepare teens to respond effectively to abuse reported by irlends, and to develop intervention plans and encourage student input to help prevent dating violence, much of which happens on school grounds.

Internet fun appeals to children and teens

ONLINE

At the Summit Place, your 4year-old can surf the Internet while you are shopping, thanks to MST TechnoKids,

The TechnoKids shop is next to Kohl's department store in Summit Place. It offers families access to the latest technologies in a convenient, affordable and safe environment. All ages are invited to use the shop's computers and robotics.

Children can learn about robotics while they program motorized Legos with a computer. At Internet Central, children can surf the Internet or video conference using the shop's T-1 connection or can build their own Web page. At the Science Center, hands-on experiments.

computer dissections, robot construction and programming are available. In the Morphing Lab, youngsters can use a digital camera and morph the image with GOO software.

And in the Gaming Lab, kids can use any of more than 30 TechnoKids approved knowledgebased games. Programs and technologies are presented in an age-appropriate format at all centers. The first 15 minutes are free and $2 for each additional 15-minute segment. A one-hour program using any two labs costs $6.50 and a two-hour program selecting any two labs will cost $11.

Child drop-off programs are available for ages 3-12. For security reasons, a digital image of the parent and child is taken and each adult is given a beeper while he or she shops.

TechnoKids always has certified teachers on staff to offer personalized instruction. TechnoKids has provided computer education to thousands of children in more than 27 school districts in the Detroit area. They also have a Special Beginners Program for senior citizens older than 60 from 3-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Click on Click

Click, a new Web site developed to entertain and provide a guide to the Internet for teens, is worth visiting at http://www.click.toplinks.com, if you are a teen or young at heart.

Guided by the preferences of 13- to 19-year-olds, short reviews and recommendations are made in categories such as music, sports, fashion, the arts, hobbies, entertainment, humor, games, the media, and the Internet.

The categories offer Web surfers a chance to look, at recommended sites and ask them for their opinion and recommendations as well. "We want kids to tell us what they think on a variety of subjects, get them to communicate with one another as well as give us an idea of what they consider good sites," said project developer Paula Guran.

Click also offers exclusive content in two other forms. Monthly astrological forecasts, designed specifically for teens are provided by professional astrologer "Sultana Marijah." Josh Ellis, an 18year-old from San Francisco, provides a fresh 'rant" of his decided opinions each month.

"Josh is a self-styled 'cyberpunk cub reporter,' " said Guran. "Even though he is rooted more in the literary movement than the technological one, he knows his way around the Net. We think he will make his readers think and react. His writing and the special astrology should be a big plus for our users."

An educational advantage is found most prominently in "Study Hall," an area with a list of how to find information and help with homework on the Web. The interactive features encourage students to communicate their own ideas using E-mail, chat and message boards.

Click also steers high school students to sites that can help them in finding the right college and obtaining financial aid. "We all need something of a pathfinder for the Internet. With Click, we think kids now have a great spot to start," added Guran.

Click is part of Internet Association Corporation's TopLinks venture. The TopLinks sites are online guides to the Internet designed for specific market segments of the population. Click joins University TopLinks: http://www.university.toplinks.com as part of an expanding Web presence.

KidSurf

Speaking of youth and kids, the young and young at heart finished visiting Click can now go to Online at http://www.kidsurf.net

KidSurf is an Internet Surfboard for Kids and Teens. While it looks like a day at the beach here, it's also educational and entertaining. KidSurf has separate sections for both younger and teenage audiences. Parents can freely download the net filter CyberPatrol while reading about the SafeSurf rating method.

Younger kids can play their favorite sports online at The Sand Court or browse a library full of math, science. English and art sites in The Lighthouse. Teens can catch up on their favorite teen magazines, chat with others their age, or ask questions of Dr. Marla.

Panic attack, heart disorder have similar symptoms

debilitating, recurrent rapid heart rhythm produces symptoms easily confused with "panic attacks" - a misdiagnosis made twice as frequently in women. Recognition and appropriate treatment of the cardiac disorder can eliminate panic-like symptoms in 90 percent of cases.

These new findings are reported in the March 10 issue of the American Medical Association journal Archives of Internal Medicine by a Wayne State University School of Medicine research team, whose senior member is Dr. Michael H. Lehmann, M.D., clinical associate professor of medicine and director of the Arrhythmia Center at Sinai Hospital in Detroit. The lead author of the article is Dr. Timothy J. Lessmeier, M.D., currently at the Heart made. Prior to that time, symptoms in

A non-life-threatening, but often Institute of Spokane in Washington 32 (54 percent) of these unrecognized

The researchers studied 107 patients (median age 40 years, 55 percent women) referred for electrophysiologic testing, a special heart catheterization procedure for rhythm problems. This test proved that the patients suffered from paroxysmal supraventricular tachycardia (PSVT) - a recurrent, nonlife-threatening heart rhythm disorder (typically 150-250 beats per minute) that often stops on its own after several seconds to minutes.

At the time of physician contact, however, the diagnosis of PSVT was made in only 48 (45 percent) of patients. Among the 59 initially unrecognized cases of PSVT, a median of 3.3 years elapsed until the proper diagnosis was cases of PSVT were attributed (by nonpsychiatric physicians) to "panic," "anxiety" or "stress" - a diagnostic error made twice as frequently in women vs. men. In fact, 12 percent of patients with unrecognized PSVT sought the care of a mental health professional because of their symptoms.

The potential for symptom overlap between PSVT and panic attack was striking. Of the 107 patients studied, two-thirds had a PSVT episode frequency and symptom profile that met American Psychiatric Association criteria for Panic Disorder.

Following the electrophysiology test, PSVT was treated either by another catheterization-like procedure designed to eliminate the abnormality, called "radiofrequency ablation," or by medication aimed at suppressing recurrences. After a median 20-month followup period, 86 percent of patients were cured of their symptoms - including 91 percent of those whose symptoms were attributed to "panic," "anxiety" or "stress."

The fleeting nature and relative infrequency of PSVT episodes likely contributed to such initial misdiagnoses. Even the traditional portable 24-hour electrocardiogram recorder succeeded in catching a PSVT episode in only 9 percent (six of 64) of patients having this

Far more effective, the researchers found, were "event monitors" which detected PSVT in 47 percent (eight of 17) of patients so tested. An event monitor is a lightweight electrocardiogram recording device that is typically worn (like a beeper or wristwatch) over a oneto two-week period, and activated by the patient whenever he or she has palpitations or other symptoms.

Also potentially helpful is a subtle auggestive marker of a tendency toward PSVT, called a "delta wave," which sometimes may be evident on a standard electrocardiogram. However, this diagnostically valuable clue was not initially recognized in over one-third of the patients with this telltale electrocardiographic sign.

The study's findings should help physicians to avoid overlooking PSVT a curable heart rhythm disorder - as the basis for recurrent "panic"-like symptoms, especially in women. Research is now needed to define the proportion of patients with panic attacks actually suffering from PSVT.

Several plans honored in Parade of Homes

What makes for a really good

Design, architecture, special features and value, according to architects here who judged the seventh annual Parade of Homes competition.

Sixty-six plans were nominated by builders in conjunction with the International Builders, Home. Flower and Furniture Show.

"We were looking for, first of all, innovation in planning, good design, good relationship and flow between functions," said George Erdstein, a Lathrup Village architect and panelist.

"A lot of the plans were similar. A lot of times, we found ourselves finding the best dollar value per square foot," he said.

Judges made their choices after scrutinizing floor plans, renderings, photographs and written descriptions. The houses must have been built or are currently under construction. Prices at which the plans were entered must hold through April 6.

"What builders have done is take primary relationships and refined them," Erdstein said. "Amenities seem to be forever expanding. The master bath is augmented by closets, sitting movie's first 40 or so minutes are filmed primarily in a '50s modern house in Los Angeles.

David Lynch movie I am nearly certain that no natural light was allowed to and it made me enter the home during filming, the and this allowed the lighting designers to carefully control the importance and role of light in light, only adding it where necessary. Darkness is a blanket that effecting the quality of space. can be removed by light, which cuts through the darkness - sort of like paint. In the movie, lighting was modest and very dark in general, which only makes sense because the film is a contemporary film noir adaptation.

It is through the lighting of space that mood and understanding of volumes is created. Lighting highlights certain activities and renders others less significant. A room with a single light source in the middle gives one kind of understanding of space and lighting just the sides emphasizes different aspects of the room and may even make the room feel completely different.

I am a big fan of providing light where it is needed to perform-certain-tasks but thenallowing the general room lighting levels to fall off to very modest levels - enough to circulate and move safely. Night time is night time, and in most cases there is no need to raise lighting levels to match daylight conditions. The dramatic effect of lighting levels that vary across a room is really quite powerful actually slightly mysterious. In addition, it certainly is a big energy saver to light in this way.

Years back I had the opportunity to work with a lighting designer by the name of Bill Lamm, who is the father of indirect lighting. Indirect lighting is the means by which spaces are light but the fixtures are concealed. It is light as opposed to fixture.

From the standpoint of fixtures, it is less expensive than traditional good light fixtures, but usually there is more construction required to conceal the fixture itself. The most common form of indirect lighting is under-cabinet-mounted fluorescent fixtures in the kitchen. In this application light will be emitted onto the counter-top but the source will be concealed.

This same idea can be utilized throughout a house to make surfaces glow and light to be "emitted". I have used such ideas in bathrooms, bedrooms and living rooms. Fluorescent fixtures are frequently used for this purpose, but I have even used cold cathode lighting, which is similar to neon, to provide a continuous light source in the middle of a large living room ceiling. Although I have not used an incandescent fixture, I imagine it could be used if the bulb spacing was tight enough to avoid scalloping. To pull this detail off the fixtures must be very close together so that the light is lineal in nature.

Indirect lighting can be used as either an ambient or a task source. It is better suited as an ambient source due to the light output of the source as well as the distance that it is usually operating from the task being performed. Direct lighting placed in the proximity of the task is better for lighting high precision work and reading, etc.

While I am a big fan of indirect lighting, I am also a fan of the jewelry-like quality of beautiful fixtures. As I said in an earlier article, the Italians seem to have a corner on the high-end light fixture industry, and nice fixtures seem to start around $175 and go up from there. Publicparts of the house should get the nicest of the fixtures and bedrooms the lowest of the nice fixtures.

To save money I have resorted to using "keyless" fixtures (porcelain-socket fixtures) in basements and garages in order to use nicer fixtures on the inside of the house. These nice fixtures should be seen as more than just light providers but rather as part of the decorative program (and budget) of the house.

If I had to guess, I would sav that one should allow a minimum of $3.50 -$4.00 per square foot for the lighting budget alone (materials only) to be convincing about the fixturing. Get into spe. cialty lighting for art or special object display and the budget could double.

In any case, the important thing really is the light and the activities being illuminated, not the fixture.

Anyone who is interested in lighting and the effects achievable with light should check out "Lost Highway". Sure it is as strange as it gets, but the lighting effects are great!

the works of about 40 furniture makers in the United States and Canada.

He says rustic furniture made from branches, trunk, bark and roots of trees - is currently popular and easy to find. Or to make. Mack suggests looking for pieces at regional crafts fairs and garden centers and, for really deep pockets, antiques stores.

We do a lot of second homes," Mario Costantini of Milwaukee says. "Rustic furniture has the same appeal as four-wheel drives and log homes."

Costantini's La Lune Collection of 600 designs is sold through decorators.

Old pieces such as those by Thomas Molesworth, who worked in Cody, Wyo., in the 1920s and 1930s, are very collectible. At a recent auction, Mack said, some Molesworth... pieces made of burls and juniper logs brought five- and six-figure prices.

Quirky one-of-a-kind pieces from camps once owned by wealthy Americans in Maine and the Adirondack Mountains in New York also are to die for. Also in demand is mass-produced rustic that was popular with the middle class around the turn of the century.

But why buy the furniture when you can make it? It is one of the few techniques equally adaptable to hobbyists and journeyman cabinetmakers, Mack

"I can teach the woodworking skills in a day or two," he says. "Most people have hammered" before, and if you break the process down, no single step is very difficult. You can nail, wire, orwrap with twine to make joints."

Twig or stick style, made from slender branches nailed together, is the easiest. A piece can becompleted in a day, from finding the branches to nailing them together.

Mortise and tenon, or hole and peg, construction takes longer and requires more skill. The wood must be dried so it won't loosen as it ages, but in the end it has a more finished look, Mack Logs and trunks produce twig on the grand scale, but it takes heavy machinery to move and cut it. Bentwood furniture, typically made from fresh willow, alder or cottonwood, requires a form to which the fresh wands are bent and nailed. Bark applique and mosaic twig work is like veneering. Technically, it is not difficult to do," Mack says, "But it requires someone who is sensitive to form and color and has a capacity for tedium because it goes on forever."

Increasing the value of your home and adding additional storage space can be met by adding this two-car, eave-entry, gambrel-roof garage with loft area/workshop. The loft workshop is something that most homeowners are thrilled to have. The space can be used for whatever purpose suits your needs. There are five sizes to choose from: 24' x 26', 24' x 32', 24' x 28', 24' x 36' and 24' x 30'. There are options for a ceiling support for an engine lift, a side personnel door, a slab or stem wall foundation, lower rear windows and 8', 9' or 10' walls. The plans include interior access to the loft workshop and side loft cargo door with a pulley lift. Two complete sets of the plans are included: one for you or your builder and one for the building department. Plans include clearly labeled, detailed drawings along with full framing instructions. Illustrations are drawn three dimensionally with full elevations and cross sectional diagrams. Stepby-step comprehensive instructions are included to aid you in construction. ## The Weekly Do-It-Yourselfer Window-insulating products save on fue

By Popular Mechanics FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

For an affordable alternative to increasing the R-value of your windows, consider insulating window treatments (shutters. shades, draperies, blinds).

Single-glaze windows are poor insulators having an R-value of 0.9. Double glazing raises window insulation value to R-1.84. Energy-efficient glazing raises R-values significantly higher.

Window insulating products, often called movable insulation, add considerable energy efficiency to any window. Insulating shutters, for example, can raise the R-value to as high as R-10 in a home in the North, resulting in a decrease in fuel consumption by as much as 25 percent.

Insulating shades operate in practically the same way as ordinary window shades. They are wrapped on spring-loaded rollers. They are heavier, however, than paper shades and may slide in tracks rather than swing free. Some models are electrically operated.

Insulating shutters usually are positioned inside the house. They lie back against the wall and swing forward or slide over the window. Some are designed in the form of a panel that must be inserted and removed manu-

Shutters are available as single or double fold panels. The installation of insulating shades and shutters is no more difficult than installing a Roman shade or louvered blind. Insulation fixed within windows, such as blinds, come built into the window itself and requires window replacement. Insulating draperies are installed similar to ordinary draperies.

Cost-effective placement of movable insulation in your house is an important consideration. If your home has single-glazed windows, and where no door is protected by a storm sash, insulation over every opening would slash your fuel bills. But even in this extreme example, a combination of glazing replacement and adding less expensive window treatments to strategic windows usually is less costly than adding storms to all your windows.

To save money, limit window treatment to north opening windows and possibly to west openings or on the side where prevailing winds blow in the winter. Limiting the use of movable insulation makes good sense especially when your home is already tightly sealed and protected at windows and glass doors with at least double glazing. Then heat loss through windows (minus normal heat gain on sunny winter days) accounts for less than 20 percent of the total heat loss.

Another saving can be realized by mixing the various types of movable insulation. Use the more expensive, high R-value treatments for the coldest side of the house. On the less vulnerable sides, lined draperies may be all: the treatment you need as long as you remember to keep them; pulled at night or whenever the room is not in use.

In Southern states where protecting the house from heat entry is the greater-concern, the most effective treatment is usually an exterior form. Shutters, awnings and screens are generally more efficient than indoor: movable insulation in keeping the heat of the sun out of the

3 dread words: Some assembly required

(NAPS) - It happens every time you purchase a computer, you encounter the three dreaded words, "Some assembly required." No matter how many sets of instructions and diagrams are provided, the task always takes longer than expected, and the manufacturer's never available to walk you through them. Unless you think through your purchase carefully, getting the right PC for your family from the right source could make "some assembly required" a true night-

How can you make sure that you get the PC that best suits your family's needs?

Answering a few basic questions before you start shopping will help narrow the field tremendously. Most important, they will help eliminate a lot of the hassle and worry before you

Who's going to use the PC? Will it be primarily for Dad working on business at home? Mom for working on business at home, household bookkeeping, or essential family information? The kids for playing electronic games, learning through educational software programs or surfing the Internet? Or for everyone in the house? The more users, the more memory and power you'll need. Children may need special add-ons like joysticks or an oversized "mouse" that lets small hands maneuver through programs eas-

What software will you use? The more software you plan to install, the greater the internal memory you'll need. Don't try to save money here by settling for only 8 megabytes of RAM (that's computer parlance for Random Access Memory). Buy more than you think you need - a good amount is typically 24 megabytes. You'll not only be able to enjoy more programs, but they will also run much faster. As for the great chip debate, you probably don't want to settle for anything less than an Intel Pentium processor. PCs that operate with Intel-486 microprocessors may seem like a bargain now, but in the future, you'll need the extra horsepower of the Pentium chip. In fact, make the investment in a computer driven by the Pentium-Pro chip. It will save you from having to upgrade your machine too soon. Don't forget the larger hard-drive, too. It will hold more software, and you won't have to worry about running out of disk space. Don't even look at purchasing a hard disk

Are you going to "surf the Internet with your PC? If so, you'll definitely need a highspeed modem built into the PC. Don't settle for anything less than a 28.8 Kbps modem to make downloading all those files faster and eliminate a lot of waiting time; a 33.3 Kbps is slightly faster. Also, make sure your computer comes with software for crucial on-line services that help you get access to the Internet. If many people in your family are going to surf the Internet regularly, consider upgrading the standard monitor to make the images more vivid and text easier to read. Many World Wide Web sites now also include sound, so including a sound card as part of your purchase package means that you can hear the Internet as well as see it.

What other add-ons do you need? Many new software programs now come on CD-ROM instead of the typical floppy disks. You can save a lot of time by installing them from the CD-ROM instead of the floppy disk. To handle the CDs, you'll need a CD-ROM drive built into your with a capacity of less than 1 PC. ## Elegant-looking house is a duplex in disguise luplex? Two sets of porch steps and front room as well. doors are the only exterior clue. One faces the street; the other is around the corner to the left. This is an ideal set-up for a family that wishes to provide supportive but independent housing for an aging relative, or wants income from a rental they can easily supervise.

From its tapered porch supports to its lowpitched side gables and large centered dormer, the Tupelo's exterior styling harks back to Craftsman homes of the early 1900s. Inside, both of the duplexes have contemporary floor plans.

The ground floor unit is larger. In addition to the great room/kitchen, it has a master bedroom, two secondary bedrooms, two bathrooms and a small utility room that's tucked into an alcove just inside the front door. An eating bar defines the boundary between the kitchen and a great room with patio access and a large walk-in storage closet.

To enter the second floor unit, you step into a bright ground-floor foyer outfitted with a coat closet and a bench for removing and storing boots. Natural light streams in through sidelights. More light washes down from the dormer window above, brightening

History of wallpaper

(NAPS) - The advent of wallcovering goes back hundreds of years. As revolutionary as it was when first introduced, it took all these years for someone to develop an easy way to remove unwanted paper from walls.

Here's the abridged version of wallpaper

England dominated the early industry. Paper has been used there to decorate walls since the 1500s.

After the American Revolution, people in the U.S. were attracted to designs from France. The exact processes employed to make wallpaper in the 18th and early 19th centuries are not known.

Before the 19th century invention of continuous-roll paper, designs were placed on "joined" paper, which was made by gluing together sheets of handmade rag stock.

Machine printing reduced the cost of wall coverings and made it affordable for the mid-

Removing unwanted paper involved soaking walls with hot water, mixing chemicals. or using steamers and scrapers. A few years ago, 3M Wallpaper and Paste Remover entered the market. It is a gel that is applied to wallcoverings with brushes and rollers. After about 20 minutes, paper and paste are removed more quickly and more easily than with the traditional methods.

If you are trying to make a historical record of your living space and, while removing wallpaper, you find layers upon layers, do not assume that you are looking at paper in the order each was applied. Some rolls may have been purchased and put aside, only to be hung by a later resident.

Shopping for ceramic tile

If you're considering ceramic tile for a new or remodeled room in your home but are concerned about making a confident purchase decision, no need to worry ... shopping for ceramic tile is easier than ever before.

Before you begin the shopping process, it's important to be aware of the different types of ceramic tile that are available. Because of the different composition, glazes, surface textures and gloss levels, some ceramic tiles are more suitable for specific

■ Glazed Ceramic Tile has a glasslike, colored surface that can be smooth or textured-bright or satiny. Glazed ceramic tile won't fade or discolor and it's stain-and scratch-resistant. Consider high-gloss tiles for walls and backsplashes, matte glazed tiles for bath and kitchen

■ Unglazed Quarry Tile in warm solid colors comes from the natural hues of the clays, and a rich patina will develop on the surface with wear. Though not as stain-resistant as glazed ceramic tile, it tends to be more slip-resistant. Quarry tile is a perfect choice for sunrooms.

Ceramic Mosaics, unlike other ceramic tiles, are made of porcelain and are available in a wide variety of colors. They are extremely versatile, provide unlimited design potential and are dent-proof, stain-proof, frostproof and easy to keep clean. Consider ceramic mosaics for a bath floor or kitchen countertop.

Additional information can also be found in your retailer's showroom. American Olean Design Center 2000 showrooms, for example, offer homeowners information on everything from plumbing fixture coordination to design ideas. Homeowners will see room photos for each product to see. how the tile will look installed as well as useful information, care and maintenance, plumbing fixture coordination and an abundance of other

Certain behaviors can sabotage your search

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

If you've been job hunting recently, you've probably discovered that being qualified for a job doesn't necessarily mean you'll get that job. Besides the fact that there's usually more than one qualified applicant for every vacancy, employers say qualified candidates frequently sabotage their search efforts by committing one or more common "faux pas."

Among the most common self-sabotaging behaviors: arriving late for interviews. Punctuality may not seem all that important to individuals who consider themselves qualified for a particular position, but employers typically don't see it that way. It's common courtesy to be punctual and few excuses-including car trouble or heavy traffic-tend to erase the negative impression made by a late arrival for an interview. Employers say such behavior leaves them wondering, "Will this person arrive late for a meeting with clients? Do they have poor time management and organizational skills? Don't they value other people's time?" Frequently, employers are left to conclude that if someone isn't sufficient. ly organized or professional to arrive on time for a meeting as important as a job interview, they're likely to be equally unprofessional on the job if hired.

To avoid undermining your candidacy in this way, make a conscious decision to do whatever it takes to arrive on time for all interviews. If you're unfamiliar with an employer's location, consider making a trial run the day or week before yourinterview so you can find your way. If you're not certain of traffic patterns en route, try to do your practice run at the same time of day as your interview.

If time or geography doesn't allow for this approach, make sure you leave ample travel time the day of your interview in case you encounter heavy traffic or lose your way. If all goes smoothly, you'll arrive early and have plenty of time to gather your thoughts and make a quick stop in the bathroom if necessary. You can also use extra time to peruse any magazines or company brochures you find in the employer's lobby. From such materials, you can often glean additional information about the company or its industry that can prove helpful in asking or answering interview questions. At the very least, arriving early and having a bit of added preparation time beats arriving late—disheveled and distracted.

By the way, before leaving home, besure you have not only the address of the employer you're meeting with, but the telephone number as well. You want to be able to call if you get lost or end up stuck in traffic. Although it's clearly best to do whatever you can to arrive on time. calling if you're unavoidably detained can go a long way to minimize the negative impact made by a late arrival.

Besides punctuality, attitude counts for a lot with employers. Qualified candidates who are punctual can still end up sabotaging their search efforts by being rude or arrogant with the administrative staff they encounter at a prospective 'employer's office. Unfortunately, some job hunters reserve their best behavior only for the hiring managers and human together. If an employer is delayed, do resource professionals with whom they're interviewing. They aren't as courteous to the receptionists, secretaries and administrative assistants they encounter when first arriving for their interviews. Such behavior can definitely backfire. Administrative support professionals often communicate with their bosses about rude applicants.

The same goes for applicants who lose their temper when kept waiting for more than fifteen minutes for an interview. Usually, it's an unexpected circumstance that delays an interviewer. Sometimes, however, employers will keep applicants waiting beyond the appointed interview time just to see how they'll react. They want to know if the person has "a short fuse." Companies aren't generally looking to hire volatile people with a low threshold for frustration.

To avoid problems in this regard, plan ahead. Recognize that delays occur and try not to schedule interviews too close something productive while you're waiti ing. Review your resume. Make sure you're familiar with the details. Go over the list of questions you've prepared to ask. Mentally rehearse a description of two or three work accomplishments-so. they're easy to recall when the interviewer asks, "What would you consider some recent successes?" There are plenty of ways to use your waiting time constructively.

If the interviewer is delayed excessively and you absolutely can't wait, ask if you can reschedule the appointment and do your best to confirm the new interview time and date before leaving the premises.

Whatever you do, don't lose your cool. Employers aren't impressed by tantrums. In job hunting, as in life, patience is a virtue.

Working Life: Smart moves in the reference game

By Deborah L. Jacobs : Chronicle Features

When it comes to getting references from a former employer, there are two realities. Officially most companies, worried about potential lawsuits, will confirm just the bare facts of a staffer's work history job title, years of employment and salary, for example. Unofficially though, much more information often gets exchanged without a worker even knowing it.

That's distressing news for job-hunters concerned about making the best possible impression. Maybe you're leaving because you got passed over for a promotion, didn't get along with a new boss, or were fired. Your strategy will be to emphasize the positive (for instance, you're looking for a job that offers new challenges, room for advancement, the resources of a large company, or the intimacy of a small one). Even when an interviewer seems receptive, you may wonder with each rejection if you didn't get the job because someone bad-mouthed you.

Negative information leaks out by more than one path. Sometimes, one of your references may describe your work in less than glowing terms. More often, hiring managers rely on their own resources to ferret out any unfavorable details.

Typically, this second approach involves bypassing the personnel department (which tends to deliver just the fact"). Instead, managers might go directly to those you reported to, whether or not you've given out their names. Or, prospective employers can rely on their own contacts at a company to get an "inside read."

Of course, you can't stop interviewers from calling anyone they please. But there are some steps you can take to help them get the most favorable overall report. •Handpick your references. If, for whatever reason, you're afraid your latest supervisor will damn you with faint praise, don't use him or her as a reference. Instead, rely on previous bosses, colleagues, clients or team members who have

Coach references about what to say. Once you've interviewed at a place and have a sense of the issues that concern this company, bring your references up to date. Talk about the kinds of inquiries to expect, and possible responses. If you're not totally satisfied with how your reference reacts, don't give this person's name to the business where you're applying.

Negotiate, on your way out the door, what your previous boss will tell the new one. Increasingly, this conversation is part of severance discussions when workers get fired, says Kathleen Cahill, an employment lawyer in Baltimore. In such cases, it's perfectly reasonable to say, "As you can imagine, I'm very disappointed that you can't use me here. To help me find another job as quickly as possible, I hope we can agree in advance on how you'll recommend me to potential employers."

The ideal method is usually a reference letter that you draft, preferably with a lawyer's help. It should highlight your strong points, summarize the kind of work you've done (including a few examples), and describe in neutral terms why you're leaving. ("Our company recently underwent a 20 percent staff reduction, and John's job was unfortunately one of those cut.")

Get a written agreement that the company will promptly send out this text in response to any requests for references. The next best thing is to ask for 10 originals of the letter that you can use as needed (though many hiring managers frown on this prefab approach).

Depending on the level of job you're applying for, the letter may not stop businesses from probing further. Still, most former bosses will live up to their promises, Cahill says. And having some committent about what they will (or won't) say is better than leaving people completely to their own devices.

Someone who digs deeply enough can probably come up with at least one reason not to hire you. Your goal is to give them many more to go the opposite route.

Bad Bosses: Saving your sanity in the workplace

by Linsey Novak, Tribune Media

"Why is it that when people get into managerial positions, they are so bad?" a reader writes. "Do they know how miserable they make people, and in some cases, even cause illness? How do they get these positions? Thank God there are a few professional people in management, but they are few and far between."

This isn't just whining from a single disgruntled employee, but a common complaint. Many workers have written about being made miserable by intolerant, oppressive, ill-mannered disturbed bosses.

Peggy writes, "I'm having trouble finding a job where management treats employees decently. My current boss is one of the worst I've had, using much profanity, which makes working here really humiliating." Peggy (not her real name) has already switched jobs to get away from such rude and crass behavior, but her boss's" behavior seems to get worse every time she changes jobs.

"I feel as though I have gone back in time to the days of sweat shops, when employees hadnowhere to turn. For some reabehavior to bully the staff."

Well, it isn't appropriate behavior, and though Peggy has had a stream of bad luck with bosses, she may need to change jobs one more time. Staying in a negative situation harms you, even if ever so gradually. You could end up doubting yourself, which in turn could ruin your ability to interview well when you finally realize that your current situation is not going to change and you start a job search.

Jim explains his predicament this way: "Within two weeks, I. knew my manager was incompesales material and a pricing model, which my boss shredded in front of fellow employees while mocking me."

This was just the beginning of her personal attacks, which led Jim to speak to his boss's manager about her behavior, only to be told that the company had had problems with her before.

Jim wasted no time finding another position because "life is too short to let the unprofessional boss rule your life," he says. He's thankful he had emotional support from friends and family, because if he hadn't, he might not have had the strength to and sometimes even emotionally son, they feel it is appropriate tent, I created a new brochure, ignore his boss's personal attacks while looking for another

> Jim thinks he has learned a good lesson. "Our culture is full of people who find it easier to. tear down others than to help and share in their success. It can be devastating to one's psyche. Avoid situations like these because you can't win."

And he's right. When bosses exhibit rude, crude and outright sick behavior, odds are they are not going to change. You can complain to their bosses about them, but that's no guarantee. the company will deal with the problem or rectify the situation 01997 TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES, INC.

Mary writes that upper management tolerates almost any type of behavior by bosses as long as it doesn't interfere with the company's profitability. While that may be true, it won't help you to analyze why your boss is mean, vindictive or just plain crazy. Take your sanity and run.

until you start believing what they say. Good jobs aren't particularly easy to get, but the longer you're in a negative environment, the more difficult it will be to leave.

What, me worry?

Entrepreneurs must ward off the worrywart

by Alice Breeding Tribune Media

I was on vacation in Vermont recently at a resoft that offered seminars addressing all sorts of subjects, including nutrition, time management and worrying. We weren't in the mood to attend structured classes, but I did ask the teacher of the worrying seminar about the habits of entrepre-- your business. neurs.

Entrepreneurs genuinely have a lot to be concerned about: cash of. Most of the time, worrying is flow, taxes, technology and all the other responsibilities that are part of running an office. Home-based business owners often have the most to worry about, because they are less likely than larger businesses to have staff, and they can feel pulled between work and home,

The teacher of the seminar was Juliana O'Brien, a Shelburne, Vt.-based social worker and divinity school graduate who specializes in anxiety. She made some interesting points that may prevent you from wasting time worrying when you should be working on

Worrying is a habit that you will have to work to rid yourself a means of avoiding your most pressing concerns. For example, if you consistently worry about your technology, ability to meet deadlines and every other aspect of your business, you may actually be concerned about cash flow. You may be using the other temporary concerns to prevent you from having to examine what bothers you most.

By examining your worries and determining the real source of your anxiety, you can take action on the cause of the concern. In the example above, you could take steps to increase cash flow and increase your business's viability once you have determined that the issue of cash flow is the root of your problem.

Another common source of worry is indecision. Many entrepreneurs vacillate before accepting a job assignment, hiring, spending money or taking the business in a new direction. If indecision causes you to worry, recognize this as a behavior pattern and consciously make a effort to take action sooner.

The next time you are trying to make a decision, recognize that you create worry for yourself in these situations. Change your pattern by weighing the pros and cons and making an educated decision without spending time obsessing over it.

You probably won't be able to change your habits right away, but stopping yourself each time you start to worry over a decision will wear away at your tendencies.

Other tips to keep your worrying to a minimum.

•Put your worries into two categories - things you have some control over and things you have no control over. Let go of the things you have no control over and make plans of action for the things you can control.

·Stop worrying about the future. O'Brien calls this "a negative habit that needs to be broken and it can be unlearned." She says that 97 percent of events we worry about never happen. Worrying about them is a waste of a time - and time is a precious commodity if you run a home-based business.

•If you are worried about money, do something to improve your financial situation. Make more client calls, send out more material about your company, network more. Use the energy you would have devoted to worrying to take action.

Analyze what you are worried about. What is the cause of the concern? What are all the possible alternatives to the problem? Which approach will you take? How can you put your plan into action?

•Keep active and busy Worry can be the result of too much thinking time. Live more day to day and think less about the future,

DIAL CLASSIFIED DIRECT

By Anne Fracassa Avanti NewsFeatures

The 1997 Honda Civic is roomy. It's got a functional back seat. The doors sound solid when you close them. And, hey, it's even kinda cute.

Not small cute. This new Civic, redesigned in 1996, is now in its sixth generation. Honda started selling the Civic here in 1972. And now, all these years later, the company's East Liberty, Ohio, plant is the largest manufacturer of the Civic worldwide.

A little more about East Liberty - Honda's the only automaker (and East Liberty is the only auto plant in the world) to accomplish completion of a running model change in the midst of a plant production increase of more than 30 percent. Right now the plant is building around 800 Civics a day for us here in the U.S.

market and for export to Japan and other countries. That translates to about 300,000 cars. Whew!

Now ... back to the car.

Last year it enjoyed its first major makeover since the 1991 model year. It's classified as a small car, but it's really bigger, quieter, faster and more fuel efficient than it has ever been. It's also more distinctive in styling. All available Civics have strong transmissions, smart styling, stiff bodies and better engines than their counterparts in previous generations. Now this is cool: The Civic HX coupe is available with an innovative automatic transmission Honda calls CVT -- Continuously Variable Transmission.

What Honda has done here is melded the fuel efficiency of a manual transmission and the performance of an automatic.

What this means is that it's totally shiftless. You stomp on the gas and the rpms rev up without ever having a shift-back on the car. There's never an interruption of power, either.

All available Civics have strong transmissions, smart styling, stiff bodies and better engines than? their counterparts in previous generations.

This feature is a little unnerving because you expect to feel the car shift up a gear. But it never does.

The Civic is also available with an improved 5-speed manual and a new 4speed electronically controlled automatic on most models.

The automatic features Honda's grade logic control for smother shifting when climbing or descending hills. Anti-lock brakes are standard on the EX sedan and are optional on the other models.

Instrumentation is laid out well. The speedometer has a 247-degree sweep that's neat. All other instrumentation - including a tach, coolant temp and fuel-2 level gauge - is backed by a soothing blue background.

Seating is comfy in front — with enough leg room for anyone under 6-foot-2 The back seats, again, are functional for normal-sized people. Just don't push the seats all the way back. You'll fit, but the knees will touch the back of the front? seat.

All in all, the new Civic is a "small" car that's fun to drive, easy on the pocket and easy on the trips to the gas station. Thumbs up,

See HONDA-CIVIC.
