Local firm to expand, add jobs

Westland city officials said they are thrilled that Framatone Connectors Interlock is expanding and consolidating its operations here. The new plans could bring some 150 new jobs to the area.

By DARRELL CLEM

Framatone Connectors International, the largest supplier to Ford Motor Co.'s Europe operations, plans to build a $6.5 million facility in Westland - the company's premier U.S. site for automotive work.

The plan comes eight months after the France-based corporation bought a 35-year-old Westland business, Interlock, to form Framatone Connectors Interlock, or FCI.

FCI's new 175,000-square-foot plant and corporate headquarters will be built on a 13-acre site on the north side of Ford Road, west of Hix.

The company will gradually add 150 new jobs, marking a 50 percent increase over its current 300 U.S. employees, senior vice president Robert Peterson said.

"It's a bigger coup than many people realize," Peterson, a Canton Township resident, said Wednesday. "It will be a world-class facility."

Peterson sold Interlock to Framatone Connectors in September, FCI employees make automotive electrical components and earn $6 to $60 an hour for a wide variety of jobs and skill levels, Peterson said.

Company officials hope to launch the first phase of the new facility in September and complete the overall project sometime in 1999, Peterson

On Monday; an enthusiastic Westland City Council approved a site plan for the project. "This is going to be a major development for our community," Councilman Richard LeBlanc said.

"It's good for our city," Councilman Glenn Anderson said.

The new building will consolidate FCI's current operations at three senarate local facilities. In Westland, the company has its main plant and headquarters on Marie and its warehouse on Hix Road. FCI also has a sales and marketing office Collectibles: Beanie Babies continue to be the rage, and Johnny Lema's, a Westland collectible store, claims the largest selection of the beanbag toys in the country. The local store is getting hundreds of dollars for some of the "retired" characters.

usinessman Jim Beck has invested some serious money in the Beanie Babies frenzy whose popularity, he says, has multiplied 100 fold in the last few months.

Beck, general manager of Johnny Lema's in Westland, a nostalgia retailer that deals in high-end merchandise such as juke boxes and classical memorabilia, added the bean-filled animals to his collectible line. of merchandise in October and now says its the dominating force behind store traffic.

"It's like playing the stock market," said Beck. "I have invested everything I have in Beanie Babies."

The Westland entrepreneur noted a recent newspaper article on Ty Co., founder Ty Warner, who attributes his success to a whimsical delivery schedule that keeps demand up and supply down.

Officer Ronald Taig: A Westland Livonia cop wins top honor.

Top cop thanked for lifesaving

A week after he stopped a suicide attempt, Livonia police officer Ronald Taig got a telephone call from the man he had helped.

"He called to thank me, to tell me he had a lot of personal problems, and that he was in therapy," said Taig, a Westland resident and Livonia police officer since 1988.

For going beyond what a Livonia police officer is expected to do in the line of duty, Livonia police Chief Michael Murray recently gave Taig his own personal thank-you for a job exceptionally well done.

At Livonia police merit award ceremonies, Murray awarded Haig with the top departmental honor, the Chief of Police Award.

"I felt honored the department found me worthy to get the award," said Taig, a 1985 graduate of John Glenn High School and a 1993 graduate of Madonna University in Livonia. He is the son of Lenard and Pat psychiatric clinic for treatment. Taig of Westland.

Man charged with felonies following high-speed chase

By DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A rifle-wielding Plymouth man who barricaded himself in a Westland apartment before leading police on a car chase that ended in an accident has been arraigned on criminal charges.

Police said 20-year-old Michael Gustafson-was despondent over-losing a girlfriend during an incident that began at 3:10 p.m. April 23 at Yalewood Apartments on Yale south of Warren.

Visiting District Judge Michael Ciungan arraigned Gustafson on Tuesday in Westland 18th District Court after the suspect was released from a psychiatric hospital.

Gustafson faces felony charges of discharging a gun from a vehicle, felony firearms, and fourth-degree fleeing and eluding police. He also faces a misdemeanor of carrying a City Parkway, Fetner said. It was loaded firearm in a vehicle.

Gustafson could face a four-year prison term if convicted of firing the rifle from his car. All other charges carry maximum two-year terms.

On Tuesday, Ciungan ordered Gustafson to be jailed in lieu of a $50,000 cash bond.

The suspect is charged in an April 23-incident that began when a suicidal man - alone at the time - bar. said ricaded himself inside of a friend's apartment, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fetner has said.

The suspect made death threats against an ex-girlfriend, her friend and police, Fetner said. A police negotiator tried without success to end the incident by phone.

Officers in patrol cars began driving to the apartment, but the suspect got into his late-model Mustang and drove west on Hunter to Central believed that the Westland Police Department was his destination.

Instead, he led police on an erratic chase north on Central City Parkway and east on Warren, making a U-turn as he approached Wayne Road, Fetner said. The suspect then returned to the parkway and drove south to Ford Road, where he crashed into two other cars, Fetner

Police surrounded his car as he fired a found from his rifle, Fetner said. Police indicated that the suspect may have been trying to harm himself, but he missed as police closed in and captured him without further incident.

The suspect had escaped police one night earlier after fleeing from a Cherry Hill/Newburgh gas station where a suicidal man was reported.

serve the demands of my customers, said Beck.

Commanding a corner of the Beanie Babie market doesn't come without a price, as Beck says its not unusual for a customer to spend $1,000 in his store on one babie. Retired characters with a price tag of $1,000 or more include: Humphrey the Camel, Trap the Mouse, Lizzy the Lizard, Rex the Dinosaur, Steg the Dinosaur and Peiking the Panda.

"People may scream and holler about the prices but they'll pay the big price if it's one they don't have in :

their collection," said Beck. "We have 90 percent of everything that was ever made and if you can't find it somewhere else we've got it - if you're willing to pay for it."

Recently, the local retailer encountered two customers who he says, clearly defines the degree the craze . has been elevated to, whether you're a father trying to please your child or an adult involved with the latest fad.

Beck said a deep-voice male called his store to inquire about retired character, Flutter the Butterfly. The man asked if Beck had the item in stock and how much did it cost?

"I told him I had it but I didn't quote prices over the phone," Beck said. "He told me he had paid up to $5,000 for a baseball card so I shouldn't be afraid to tell him how much it was."

"I told him, $1,000."

Beck said the Bloomfield Hills customer arrived within 40 minutes accompanied by his wife and young teen-age daughter.

"He spent less than 10 minutes in the store, bought four Beanie Babies in all and spent $2,600."

Also, a man in his early 50s approached Beck with a purchase of four Beanie Babies totaling $200. Before the sale was complete the middle-aged man asked Beck if he had Tobasco the Bull anywhere in the store. The Beanie Babie was in fact in stock and sold for $200.

"I asked this guy why would he want to spend $200 for a stuffed animal?," and he said, " 'My friend has one and he won't even let me hold it.'

Beck is waging the appeal continues for a couple of years with prayers the bottom doesn't fall out on a product he's invested all of his money in.

"I don't see it ending anywhere in the near future," said Beck, "but if it does I'm in trouble. I'll be looking for a job sweeping floors or something."

Prison term: 35-60 years in murder case

BY DARRELL CLEM

Newsstands

A 22-year-old gunman convicted of slaying a Redford Township man in Westland has been sentenced to prison for 35 to 60 years.

Thomas Lamar Walker, convicted of second-degree murder for the May 1, 1996, killing of Christopher Rugg, learned his fate Tuesday when he appeared before Wayne County Circuit Judge Sean Cox:

Cox also sentenced Walker to a mandatory two-year prison term for a felony firearms charge.

Cox's decision came three weeks after a Wayne County Circuit Court jury convicted Walker of second-degree murder after deliberating for six hours over two days.

Walker would have faced a mandatory life term if he had been convicted as charged of first-degree murder. Rugg died after suffering a head wound and three chest wounds during a dispute that began on Klink Street in Inkster and spilled over into Westland. A jury believed evidence that Walker gunned Rugg timony from Dr. Carl Schmidt of the Wayne County Medical Examiner's Office indicated that Rugg was shot even after he had fallen to the ground.

Westland police have said that an investigation indicated that Rugg went to Inkster to avenge an earlier robbery when he was slain.

Rugg had taken a .45-caliber Colt handgun with him and had written notes to family members indicating that trouble could be looming, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fet-

Following a confrontation, Rugg was fleeing the scene when he was shot, police said.

Police arrested Walker and co-defendant Anthony Jacob Peay, 20, of Detroit. Peay - originally charged with first-degree murder - is serving eight to 15 years in prison after pleading no contest to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter on Jan. 15.

His case also was decided by Cox.

WAYNE-WESTLAND SCHOOL BOARD CANDIDATES

Six candidates are running for two four-year terms on the non-partisan Wayne-Westland Board of Education. The school election will be held on Monday, June 9. *denotes incumbent

The Wayne-Westland district faces a budget shortfall as of June 30. Without considering future state ald, how would you address this? What expenses would you cut?

Why are you running for school board?

What do you feel is the public perception of the Wayne-Westland schools? Has this perception changed over the past few years? How?

Please list your top three priorities for the Wayne-Westiand school district.

In 1994 when the district faced a $3 million deficit, I indicated that I would rather go to jail for not balancing the budget than cut any more big-ticket items such as busing... That is why I believe it was important for the district to liquidate surplus properties so that they could be used for this year's budget deficit. And I believe the long term solution lies in Lansing.

I am running for school board to continue the fight in Lansing for equitable funding for the students of Wayne Westland. I believe a good school district is the heart and soul of a great community. Although Proposal A provided muchneeded tax relief, there are still some components...that need to be fine-runed. I am very passionate about preservation and improvement of public education.

supplying the funding.

I want to give taxpayers a voice on our school board. It is beginning to look like a few are running their own agenda, without considering the views of the people that have elected them into this office. I will ask for other peoples' opinions on major issues and vote accordingly. I will also try to notify people affected by a particular issue ahead of time . . . before the vote takes place.

I want to see our district's priority change from a "status quo" to one that understands that we are in the business of education. We must improve our antique ways of education and provide a system that will let our students meet the future. This should improve test scores:

In asking others, I find that this district was af an all-time low three to four years ago, This is improving, but still has a long way to go. Poor finances is always a big problem with the perception of a school district. When funding is down, generally the quality of education also suffers. In the case of the W-W schools, we have fought hard to get out of this situation.

The Wayne-Westland schools, at one time, wereconsidered a top-notch line school district. That perception fell like a rock, when the thought was that money could buy an education. I do see some improvement but we are still a long way from where we were - we still need to continue the progress along this line.

I would like to see a bond issue passed to allow the purchase of new, up-to-date class books and technology such as computers and other teaching items. I would like the "citizens comments" moved to the front of the agenda, where it should be. I would also like to see the "payment of budget items" removed from the consent agenda like it was several years ago.

1. Improve test scores, by changing educational practices in the district.

2. Seek more joint partnerships between the district and business community. 3. Encourage citizens of the district to take a more active interest in our schools. Better communication between the district and its citizens. After all, the district belongs to everyone.

In an effort to strengthen the finances of our school system, I would: lobby for state-funded erties, negotiate with unions to develop cost vidual schools, "pay for play" sports. I would be necessary for unwanted budget cuts.

tured in today's Observer.

Turner, a six-month board appointee who lost election last year, said during an interview that he believes some district residents have stopped attending board meetings because they view elected officials as unresponsive and "dictatorial."

He cited the controversial renaming of the former Walker Elementary School in Canton as an example. In January, board members voted 4-3 to rename the building Walker-Winter Elementary School in honor of Francis "Bud" Winter, a longtime district administrator and former board president now retired in Arizona.

Turner, in his third bid for election, noted that the decision was made before a three-member school board committee had made a recommendation on the proposed renaming.

Brown, Cox, James and Moore supported the name change while McCusker, Fowlkes and Pitsenbarger opposed it. Opponents said the decision was made hastily. A committee composed of Fowlkes, Pitsenbarger and Moore hadn't made a formal recommendation to the seven-member board before the renaming was placed on an agenda to be decided.

· Moreover, critics said the board should have listened to concerns of district residents — specifically those in the Walker-Winter attendance area before changing the name.

McCusker agreed with statements by some challengers that some board members have been unresponsive to public concerns.

"I feel that way sometimes, too," he said.

McCusker had tried unsuccessfully to get the renaming of Walker Elementary School removed from the agenda.

McCusker and others have said the issue isn't whether Winter was deserving of having his name added to a school, but how the board handled - or mishandled — the process.

Stange raised the same issue and said it pointed to an even larger concern of his — that the board doesn't seek enough citizen input on matters in general. As a board member, he said he would continually seek advice from citi-

On the Walker-Winter dispute. Brown responded that the board needed to move beyond the renaming issue to address more important matters such as balancing the district's budget.

The decision, she said, "didn't need to be belabored.'

Brown charged that the issue became political, "and it didn't need to be."

She also said the three-member committee that studied the renaming had missed two deadlines for making a recommendation.

McCusker said he personally tries to be responsive to citizen concerns. "I take what I do very seriously," he said.

Brown said she believes that critics accusing the board of being unresponsive aren't representative of the entire

In years past, some board presidents allowed citizens to address the board at virtually any point in the agenda — a practice that Brown hasn't allowed. But she said she doesn't view that as unresponsive.

The board agenda sets aside a specifictime for citizen comments, she said, "and there has to be some order." Neither Green nor Wright criticized; performance. In fact, the two are running mates.

Brown and McCusker campaigned as a team when they won election four years ago. But they have since had some differences.

The renewed controversy over Walker-Winter Elementary comes as the district prepares for a May 22 dedication ceremony at the school.

Break-in reported

Alert police caught two suspects in action Wednesday during a break-in shortly after midnight at the Smoke Shop, 2450 S. Wayne Road, a Westland police report said.

Officers on patrol noticed a station wagon parked near the entrance and that the store's door was open. Police recovered from the car a cash register and several other items - some believed taken during a break-in at another business.

One suspect captured inside the Smoke Shop was carrying several cartons of cigarettes when he was caught, the report

Two suspects, a 26-year-Old Westland man and a 31-year-old Canton man, were arraigned Thursday in Westland 18th District Court on breaking and entering charges. They were jailed in lieu of a $35,000/10 percent bond awaiting a preliminary hearing.

Gun threats

A motorist who rolled down his window and yelled at another driver to question his erratic driving pattern was threatened with a gun, but no shots were fired, a police report said. The incident occurred at 8:05 a.m. May 3 when a 26-year-old Inkster man and a female passenger noticed that the erratic driver ran two red lights on southbound Wayne Road south of Plymouth, in Westland. The other motorist at Cowan and defendants were arraigned last exposure. yelled at him to question his driving, but the other motorist revealed a handgun and pointed it. The Inkster man backed up his car to avoid possible shots, and the suspect driver continued south on Wayne Road.

Pizza holdup

Two suspects robbed Hungry Howie's, 1820 S. Newburgh Road, Westland, during an 11:14 p.m. holdup Wednesday, the manager reported. Two men wearing ski masks entered the pizzeria, and one revealed a small semiautomatic handgun and demanded money, police reports said.

The manager opened a cash register and the other suspect removed about $245, police said. The suspects then fled on foot. No shots were fired and no one was injured.

Teens charged

Five teens suspected of breaking into Satellite Vending Co. have been arraigned on 10-year felony charges of breaking and entering, an 18th District Court administrator said. Three males and two females are accused in an incident that occurred late Monday or early Tuesday when suspects allegedly stole cloth money bags containing about $1,600, at the company located at 1020 N. Wayne, Westland, police reports said.

An investigation led police to a suspect's car in which the money. bags were found in the trunk. One suspect initially told police woman received a ticket for conthat the money was savings to suming beer on school property; Inkster man pulled alongside the be used for a vacation. The Observer recently reported that a Westland police officer climbed into an underground drain to save 12 ducklings.

Now come the baby raccoons trapped in a fireplace in the 2100 block of Wilshire, as reported to police on May 2.

The "babies were certain to perish," the report noted, until an animal control officer dismantled a door to a damper, reached inside and pulled them to safety. The officer came away covered in soot, but a hero, no doubt, to the raccoons' mother, who also had been trapped.

Couple caught

A 28-year-old old Inkster man was caught with his pants down - literally - after he and a female companion fell asleep inside a car parked near Kettering Elementary School, 1200 Hubbard, on Saturday, May 3.

Officers found the couple after responding to reports of a suspicious situation. The woman, 41, was asleep and sitting in the driver's seat with an open beer in her hand, a police report said. The man was asleep in the passenger seat with his pants pulled down to his ankles.

Both suspects awoke after officers pounded on the car windows, and the woman took a sip of beer, the report said. The

Stories such as that and the memories they evoke will be rolling like destroyers on the high seas when members of the Tin Can Sailors of America, Inc., gather Saturday at the Laurel Park Holiday Inn in Livonia for this year's Michigan Bull Session.

Co-hosted by Fitzpatrick, a retired buyer at Ford, and Chuck Chandler, a practicing all-day regional session is and deadly light-weight grey-"And if I didn't like what you expected to draw over 100 ex-

In fact, say the co-hosts, it could attract a lot more exdestroyer sailors and officers, plus those from smaller ships and boats, but many area sailors probably "are not aware such an organization exists for them," they said.

hounds of the sea" that were nicknamed "tin cans" because of their relatively low tonnage and thin (five-eighths-inch thick) steel hulls.

Now with 16,000 members nationwide, the non-profit organization publishes a quarterly newsletter and hosts an annual national convention besides promoting regional Bull Sessions. And perhaps most importantly, the association, through its fundraising efforts, has converted six destroyers into floating museums to honor the ships and their personnel, with Tin Can weekend aboard them.

Two such museums are in New York state, with one each in Louisiana, South Carolina, Massachusetts and Washington state. Plans to establish a seventh - in Bay City, where Chandler says destroyers once were built - will be discussed at the Livonia Session.

Speakers May 17 will include Navy Captain Robert E. Johnston, a former cruiser and frigate skipper who's commander of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Michigan, and Thomas Sailors members permitted to J. Peltin of Madison, Wis., the Tin Can Sailors national president. Lloyd Borsvold of Westland, another Navy veteran, will show slides of classic destroyers.

The Michigan Bull Session offers "a real opportunity to rub elbows with others who have shared the unique experience of serving aboard a destroyer," Fitzpatrick said. "As a matter of fact, he added, Tin Can Sailors welcomes all sailors who served aboard" similar, smaller Navy ships and boats.

Destroyers, created after World War I treaties limited armed ships' tonnage, were sonamed "because that's what they were designed to do-destroy enemy ships and submarines," said Fitzpatrick, now 72. "They were thin-skinned units with as much firepower aboard as the ship's design could contain without being a detriment to their

"They could attack much larger ships and also subs, they were entirely maneuverable and they were also a very small target."

"And," added the Canton resident, "they were expendable."

While destroyers were less than half the size of a battleship and smaller than a Navy cruiser during WWII, they literally bristled with guns and other armament. Fitzpatrick's ship, the 387-foot, 2,200-ton Beatty, sported a half-dozen five-inch, .38-caliber guns; five quad-mounts of Michigan Bull Session in Lans-40-millimeter guns; 10 twin-20millimeter guns and four Kguns. It also had 10, 21-inch torpedo tubes, two depth-charge roller racks and a mount of hedgehogs - 24, 30-pound projectiles fired from the bow at submarines.

The fastest destroyers back then could do over 45 knots, or about 50 miles per hour.

Chandler, 63, an NROTC graduate of the University of Utah, served three years (1956-59) as officer in charge of the propulsion plants aboard two destroyers, the USS Owen and the Ernest G. Small.

He met Fitzpatrick at the 1996

ing and the two decided to host one in metro Detroit when the Lansing organizer called it quits.

"I get a kick out of it (the Bull Sessions)," said Chandler. "There are some old-timers there. and they have interesting stories to tell. I like to listen to them some of them tell some great stories."

He said the Session will have a supper and will also sell Tin Can Sailors T-shirts, sweats and caps and other items to raise money for the museums. Chandler is taking reservations for the Session at (313) 522-0920.

School aid budget

Suburban growth districts work quietly to obtain more state money

BY TIM RICHARD

Suburban school districts are working quietly to pry loose more money from the state school aid budget for "growth" school districts.

"Two weeks from now, things will start to happen," predicted Rick Simonson, deputy superintendent and legislative agent for Oakland Intermediate School District.

The vehicle is House Bill 4310. Gov. John Engler recommended $9.02 billion for K-12 schools, up 2.6 percent over the current year. The House raised that by $138 million to $9.16 billion, or a 3 percent hike.

But the debate is less over the total than the parts inside.

Schools get their aid on a per-pupil formula based on a "blended count" - part last year's enrollment, part this year's, Simonson said. "The money ought to be where the kids are," he contends, pointing to Walled Lake, which adds 500 pupils per year but never recovers the money.

.Growth areas in western Wayne and Livingston counties also would benefit along with western and northern Oakland County.

But no one wants to take much from districts losing enrollment because they still have overhead costs - and plenty of political clout.

Engler put in $3 million extra aid for "growth" schools. The House raised it to $6 million. Simonson has a figure of $10 million to $20 million in mind.

He has allies. Republican state Sens. Michael Bouchard of Birmingham, Willis Bullard of Milford and Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion are working with the Senate's key school money man, Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, chair of the Senate. Appropriation subcommittee on K-12 school aid. They are also working with the governor's Another ally is Al Short of the Michigan Education Association, the state's largest teachers union. "We would support a categorical (line item in the budget) for growth. It should be $26.5 million instead of $6 million," Short said in public testimony May 6.

Now, said Short, is the time to aid growth districts. "Fortunately, Michigan is now a growth state with families moving in. We have to recognize thee districts are growing."

Simonson said a total shift to a "current year" formula would cost $90 million. It can't be done in a single year. So he is hoping for a five-year phase-in starting with $20 million or so "We had 50 votes in the House to do it." said Simonson, with 55 needed for passage.

DeGrow's panel, which includes Sen. John Schwarz, R-Battle Creek, and Joe Conroy, D-Flint, will hear more testimony at 1 p.m. Tuesday, May 13, and report out the bill a week or so after that.

The final decision will be made by the so-called "third branch of government" - the joint House-Senate conference committee that tries to compromise difference between the two chambers' versions.

May 22 is another key date, Simonson said. That's when top administration and legislative leaders hold their revenue estimating conference - a multibranch; bipartisan effort to agree on what state revenues will be for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Helping growth districts is just one of many sticking points in Michigan's largest single budget bill. Some others:

■ Career preparation -The House agreed to Engler's proposal for $9.5 million to coordinate vocational programs within local Workforce Development Board regions. Many traditionalists, however, will fight the plan as producing "factory fodder" for corporations.

■ Career preparation system - The House specified the elected State Board of Education should approve career preparation standards. Engler wants to give control to the appointed superintendent of public instruction.

Proficiency tests Engler proposed making the state superintendent responsi ble for selecting proficiency tests. The House deleted this. The House also provided that students' transcripts will include their state proficiency test scores rather than the cryptic "proficient," "novice" and "not yet novice" notations.

Charter schools - Engler wants them funded the same as public schools, up to $5,945 per pupil. House Democrats capped the allowance at $5,808 for charter schools that don't operate a 12th grade, reasoning that higher grades are more expensive to teach:

See? So Mom to Mom, it is appropriate to wish each other Happy Mother's Day. Because we appreciate, we truly appreciate, each other's work, a mother's work. And we appreciate a mother's life because we, too,

Now, here's a little exercise for you to try, Moms and Not Moms. If you are a Mom, here's what you do. Flesh out the details I've purposely omitted in the next few catching-up-with-thingschatting-over-the-fence type conversation. I've written it in "Mom shorthand" (just glossed over stuff, summarized every-

Now, if you're not a Mom, read these next few paragraphs anyway, then ask a Mom to give you the real, complete picture - the whole scoop. Trust me, she'll be able to do it. OK, here goes:

"Sunday I became a Mom of a teen-ager. Tony, my oldest, had his 13th birthday. And just four days before that Jack turned 3. His terrible two's are over, at least they're supposed to be over.

"And Joe just lost his first tooth, learned how to ride his two-wheeler, got registered to start kindergarten in the fall, and was immunized.

"And Steven is doing better keeping his glasses on, and his hearing aids, and is learning to stand. And all four boys just received Daddy-generated-getting-ready-for-summertime haircuts. Are these haircuts in style? Sort of, close enough.

"Carmen competed at her first Level 8 gymnastics meet after being sidelined for a bit with her first injury. And she and Tony other day I told a friend of mine, won some goldfish at the school a Mom, "Everyone had matching carnival, so we have a goldfish aquarium now.

"Tony's band concert was a delight, Carmen's spring music program was, too. The camera finally works again, so the delight was captured forever.

"And Jack and Joe are on the same soccer team. Joe gets it, Jack doesn't.

- Tony had his first baseball. practice of the season yesterday and he tried out the new baseball glove he got for his birthday. It worked.

"My mother-in-law stopped by unexpectedly on cleaning day and I wasn't done.'

OK. How'd you do?

For Moms, this type of exercise is a snap because you're the ones caught up in the details. the busyness of family life - you. know what goes into it all. There is so much going on behind, underneath, around, and inside the day of a Mom, every Mom. And most of what goes on falls into the "easier said than done" category or in less gracious moments, the "I need a break or I'm gonna scream" category.

But really, that's what makes life so full and rich - it is the busyness and the daily-ness, and the occasional urges to scream. And Moms on Mother's Day are given a minute to take a step back from all that, take a deep breath, and then take that good look around, to see it all again, to soak it in all again, to remember what it's all about. Children. Miracles. The miracle of life. Themiracle of motherhood

Take a day, Moms. Take a breath. You, who have given life,: you, who have sustained life. God bless you!

Happy Mother's Day!

A consortium of western Wayne County communities will not support a future Wayne County /jail millage unless Wayne County agrees to act as a "central depository for all prisoners," increase the number of eliminate a "per prisoner" charge to each community.

Those were among the conditions outlined by a criminal justice committee Friday to the Conference of Western Wayne, a consortium of 18 communities from western Wayne County represented by mayors and township supervisors.

The CWW unanimously supported that recommendation. The CWW includes the cities of Belleville, Dearborn, Dearborn Heights, Garden City, Inkster, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, Romulus, Wayne and Westland decrease for the Youth Assistance Programs, which are juvenile intervention and prevention programs that are funded through the 1/10th mill. CWW would look to see additional funding for these programs during the life of the millage.

Kocsis said the issues addressed in Assistant County Executive Mike Duggan's report at the April CWW were "important." At that meeting Duggan said more than 6,000 prisoners from suburban jurisdictions were housed in Wayne County facilities; 3,782 of which were sentenced misdemeanants.

Paying for new beds in those jail facilities cost Wayne County $42.8 million with $26 million. raised by the nine-tenths mill approved by Wayne County voters in 1988, the rest spent from the county's general fund, Duggan said.

But without meaningful dialogue, Kocsis said his committee would have to "take exception" to the millage.

"We pay $15 million yearly and for what we are charged (to house prisoners), we are getting a bad value for our fax dollars," Kocsis said.

While the recommendation

may send a strong message to Wayne County, CWW officials also emphasized that dialogue was continuing. Officials from the CWW, Wayne County Sheriff, Wayne County and Recorder's Court met recently to discuss the jail operations, Kocsis said. "It was amazing that none of us knew what the other's concerns were," Kocsis said. County jail administrators and the police chiefs were expected to go to Lansing to discuss who should foot the bill for the felons' health care. Between 1993-95 that cost $6.5 million.

But the chiefs also are concerned about local communities spending money on outcounty jails to house misdemeanants, many of them ordinance viola-

"All of the chiefs need some type of relief in our budgets,' Kocsis said. "And if we don't have the support of the elected officials, then we are barking up the wrong tree."

Price concluded they were only restating what they said earlier: "We know it's a problem and we want to sit down and talk about

Veterans to get price break on special license plates

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Any military veteran with an honorable discharge would be eligible to buy a $5 special vehicle license plate under a bill that has cleared both chambers of the Michigan Legislature.

After sharp debate, the Senate, all but eliminated, an amendment to give Purple Heart winners free license plates.

"This amendment would take $165,000 out of the transportation fund. You're giving the transportation fund away," complained Sen. Jim Berryman, D-

"There are 15 bills on veterans' exemptions. This is the first one that has been questioned," countered Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn. "What's the difference if we have one more?"

But on final passage May 6, Hart and all 37 senators approved the bill and sent it to Gov. John Engler for signing.

Mom made childhood a delicious memory

ince the dawn of time, women have been nourishing all of humanity. In times past, women in most cultures were the food gatherers. The rite of passage from adolescence to adulthood came with an apron. Food was a way to man's heart as well as a cure for your children's aches and pains.

Some of our most precious childhood memories include the special soup that made us all better, those magic chocolate chip cookies that fixed our bruised knees, and remember those special Sunday dinners at grandmas - pot roast, mashed potatoes, and green beans.

Whenever a boy broke my heart, my mom made double chocolate cake with fudge icing. I'm 33, and she's still baking!

To Sharyn: Love Tara Mooney of Birmingham - "My mom would always make matzo ball soup, and she told me that it would cure all that ailed me. Who knew that she was right?"

To Mommy: Love Cierra of Birmingham - "As I am 5, my Auntie Jen is helping me write this. My mommy's macaroni and cheese with the dinosaur shapes always makes me giggle."

To Louise: Love Kathy Brian of Birmingham -"Mom, you still know your children so well. Pineapple cookies travel to Florida for Ed; Ann still gets homemade custard, a desire inherited by her son; Grandma's soup still comes to my doorstep whether it's a cold or broken heart. Homemade pizzas travel to Cleveland! Thanks for knowing, and loving us so well!"

When moms went to work outside the home microwave ovens began arriving on the home front with an avalanche of new "convenience" products. With women sharing as equal partners in the workforce, and ever pressed for time, some children won't remember "licking the spoon" while making cookies. They'll remember helping slice cookies in the tube, and putting them in the oven to bake.

Comfort food

Our childhood memories are helping fuel a craving for comfort food. My good friend and restaurateur, Mary Brady, certified executive chef of Diamond Jim Brady's in Novi, is serving her famous wild mushroom meat loaf by the Comfort food takes an elegant turn at certified master chef Jeff Gabriel's restaurant "The Farm" in Port Austin. Dumplings, Farmer's Style Braised Swiss Steak with Red Wine Sauce and Corn Crusted Fried Leeks, Veggie Stuffed Cabbage with Red Lentils and Smoked Tomatoes at his restaurant. Wow! Did grandma ever make it sound so good?

It seems as if we are all trying to get back to simpler times. Comfort food has even monopolized the fast food market such as "Boston Market" which offers real mashed potatoes, corn, and creamed spinach. If mom can't make dinner at least she can dish it up.

Perhaps today's moms are different, but today's kids don't seem to be pining for homemade chicken noodle soup. They are too busy "surfing the net." So not to worry moms, as long as we keep reading bedtime stories, and kissing boo-boos, I think we'll still have our jobs.

hich came first, the chicken or the egg? No one knows "eggsactly." Since birds preceded humans in the evolutionary and creationism chain, this question may never be answered. However, eggs from many different animals have been used as food for centuries all around the world.

Today, eggs are considered highly nutritious, versatile and economical food. Eggs contain all the essential vitamins (except vitamin C) and many important minerals too. The chicken eggs we purchase at the grocery store are a wonderful source of protein. In fact, the measurement of protein of eggs is so good it is the standard by which other sources of protein are measured.

A large egg contains about 75 calories, 6.5 grams of protein, 5 grams of fat and 200-220 milligrams of cholesterol. Seventy-five percent of these calories, and 100 percent of the cholesterol, is found in the egg

Because eggs do contain a sizable amount of cholesterol, they often are the first thing excluded from our diets. But eggs have so much going for them that it's a shame to shun them even when we're watching our cholesterol. Instead, limit egg consumption according to your doctor's recommendations, and then get creative.

Eggs should be purchased chilled; only from refrigerated display cases, and not from unrefrigerated roadside stands. Store eggs in the refrigerator, large end up. Eggs cannot be frozen whole, and should be stored in their original container to prevent loss of moisture (egg shells are very porous). Store eggs in the bottom of your refrigerator away from foods such as onions, cabbage and apples because eggs can pick up strong odors.

To freeze eggs, break egg into a muffin tin, gently stir yolk and white with a fork. Freeze until firm, and put in a freezer bag when firm. Freeze egg whites in an ice cube tray, and put in freezer bag when firm. You can store eggs, and egg whites, up to three months in the freezer.

It isn't necessary to cook eggs until they're hard and rubbery in order to kill bacteria. Include folate in your diet to help prevent birth defects

March of Dimes WalkAmerica for Healthier Babies campaigns taking place throughout the nation this spring is building awareness of the importance of a nutrition-wise diet for moms-tobe. The message: folate is a critical component of a healthy pregnancy even before a woman becomes pregnant.

Folate, also known as folic acid, is a B vitamin that, when taken in sufficient amounts early in pregnancy, may help prevent the risk of neural tube birth defects. In the U.S., about six infants out of every 10,000 - or a total of 1.500 infants out of four million births - are born with neural tube defects each year. Spina bifida and anencephaly account for about 90 percent of neural tube defects. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimate that total defects can be reduced by 50 percent if mothers-to-be consume adequate folate as part of an overall healthy diet.

Folate is most effective in preventing neural tube defects during the first month of pregnancy. Since many women may not know they are pregnant that early, the U.S. Public Health Service currently recommends that all women of childbearing age consume 0.4 milligrams (or 400 micrograms) of folate every day. (Folate consumption should not exceed 1,000 micrograms per day.)

Responding to the fact that the typical woman consumes less than three-fourths of the recommended amount of folate, the Food and Drug Administration has required that by January 1998 enriched breads, flour, pasta and other grains be forti-

One of the objectives of the fied with folate to make it easier for women of childbearing age to consume the recommended daily amount.

> In the meantime, those women planning pregnancies should be aware that good food choices of folate include: leafy green vegetables such as spinach and kale; broccoli; citrus fruits and juices: lima beans and lentils; whole grain and enriched grain products, including breads, rice and pasta; and fortified breakfast cereals.

Wheat germ is also a good source of folate and can be added to many frequently eaten foods for an instant boost of this important nutrient. A serving of wheat germ (about two tablespoons) provides 10 percent of the recommended daily amount of folate.

Sprinkle wheat germ over hot and cold cereals, fruit, salads, pasta dishes, pizza, waffles, pancakes, toast, even frozen vogurt. Mix it into ground turkey to make meatloaf, meatballs or burgers, or use wheat germ instead of bread crumbs to coat chicken and fish.

Curried Turkey Pita Pockets, a recipe from the Kretschmer Wheat Germ Kitchens, provides 60 percent of the daily recommended amount of folate.

New toys invite childhood glee

By DONNA MULCAHY

My dad fell in love with it and just had to get it for me, the story goes: A bright red, pedal car fire engine, complete with a bell to clang and a working steering wheel.

He and my mom gave it to me for my second birthday, and that made me pretty popular for a while, because all the little boys on our block wanted to ride it.

SHOPPING CENTERED

MULCAHY

The trouble was — and this is one of my earliest memories — I didn't like my fire engine very much because every time I rode it, my knees would bang against the metal rint below the steering wheel and it hurt. So my dad gave the toy away to someone he knew would appreciate it.

Two years ago Hallmark came out with a tiny replica of my old fire engine, as part of its Kiddie Car Classics Christmas ornament series. Proof that if we still had that fire engine, it would be a collector's item. I was thinking of that the other day, when my little neighbor Michael was out riding a toy he received recently for his third birthday. A realistic, black and yellow battery-powered Jeep Enforcer, made by Fisher-Price. The impressive two-speed machine can go up to five miles an hour and it comes equipped with a siren and

I told Michael's mom that he's going to be the most popular kid on the block now. And watch, someday his jeep will be a collector's item and miniature versions of it will hang from Christ-

The Jeep Enforcer is part of a series of motor ized Power Wheels kiddie vehicles made by Fisher Price. They're recommended for children ages 3 to 7, and Toys R Us is one store that carries them. The vehicles, which include a Barbie Sun Jammer Jeep, a Barbie Beach patrol jeep, a Jeep Wranger, a Bigfoot monster truck, a motorcycle, and a junior front-end loader (for tiny tots), range in price from $59.98 to $299.99.

If you're looking for inexpensive outdoor kiddie toys to occupy your children or grandchildren now that spring has sprung, here are some ideas:

• Koosh toys. Talk show hostess Rosie O'Donnell loves them, and I think they're destined to a classics, just like Slinkys and Hula

If you've never seen a Koosh ball, it kind of looks like a balled-up porcupine with spines made out of soft, flexible rubber, that fits in the palm of your hand. When you squeeze a Koosh ball it feels, well, cushy. Maybe that's how it got

I couldn't find the catapults that O'Donnell uses to shoot Koosh balls into her audience. But I did find a lot of other Koosh toys at The Channel 56-WTVS Store of Knowledge at Somerset North, Troy, including a soft, padded bat and ball set, a hockey set (complete with two oversized sticks and plastic balls instead of pucks), a foam sure grip football, a Koosh ball, yo-yo, a nylon flying ring (kind of like a nylon Frisbee with a large hole in the center), a basketball set, and kid-friendly lawn darts.

I also found Koosh toys at F.A.O. Schwartz at Somerset North and at the Toys R Us in Livonia. Most Koosh toys are for kids ages "3 to 137," are for both indoor and outdoor use, and range in price from $5 to $25.

•Who doesn't like blowing soap bubbles? Well maybe anyone who's ever had to clean up spilled bubble solution. But now there's a product to prevent such accidents from happening.

Little Kids Inc. makes a No-Spillbubble tumbler. A specially designed slot in the container allows the bubble wand to pass through, but prevents bubble solution from leaking out, even when the tumbler is tipped upside down. The tumbler, which includes a bottle of soapy solution and a wand, is for ages 18 months and up, about $7 at The Store of Knowledge and Toys

A lot of bubble-blowing toys are also on the market, including the Incredibubble Bomber Flying Bubble Disc, which is like a Frisbee that blows bubbles as it flies (ages 5 and up) $3.95 at The Store of Knowledge; and the Fisher-Price, crank-operated Bubble Blower, which can blow leaves as well as bubbles (ages 3 to 7) $14.99 at Toys R Us.

Birmingham changes signal new directions

When the local high school track team was overheard bemoaning the loss of Victoria's Secret in Birmingham, it was time to take a look at retail in the city. Despite the vacancies, city leaders say all the spaces are spoken for.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO EDITOR

At first glance, the recent rash of closed-shops in downtown Birmingham leaves passers by with a chilling feeling.

Were all the doomsayers of last year correct?

Did the August opening of the swanky Somerset Collection North mall less than three miles away in Troy kill the retail business in the neighboring Main Street shopping district?

After all, Roots, The Polo Store. Victoria's Secret, all left their Birmingham leases for spaces in Somer-

And now, The Mole Hole, Sam Goody's Record Town, Sherman Shoes, Hit & Miss, M&G Bike Shop, Irving Kay, Le Chateau, Wildwings Gallery, Tremonti and Brown, and The Body Shop are all in various stages of closing shop.

Add to that the news that the Kathryn Scott dress boutique on Pierce has been sold.

"Nothing is as dire as it seems," reassured Gail Gothelf, director of Birmingham's Principal Shopping District. "All the vacant spaces are accounted for by newcomers, except for the Wildwings Gallery on Bates and Le Chateau on West Maple.

"Plus we have a waiting list with companies like Einstein Bagels, Starbucks, Barnes & Noble, Big Sky Bread Co., Baskin & Robbins, and St. Louis Bread Co. wanting space in Birmingham.

Gothelf said in an odd turn of events, Roots is back, looking for a space in town.

She provided this update:

•Article II, an upscale men's sportswear shop is coming into the former Roots location on Maple.

•Wyland Galleries (specializing in whale murals and marine art) is moving into the former Tremonti & Brown store on Merrill Street.

•The Irving Kay building on S. Woodward was bought by the owners of The Pita Cafe who plan to add a bakery at the site and offer the remaining 1,400-square feet for Air Touch Cellular will open in the former Mole Hole gift gallery on S. Woodward.

· Bruegger's Bagels and Cafe is coming to the old Victoria's Secret

• Ex-Sherman shoes employees will open a new shoe store at the same location on Maple.

•Trumbull's Antiques is back in town, on the lower level of the Michigania Shop on Pierce.

•The Wabcek Building on West Maple is up for sale.

•LeChateau is leaving as the parent company closes all its U.S.

Kathryn Scott owner Linda O'Scallon explained her decision to sell the specialty clothing shop after one year of business to former radio personality Colleen Burear. O'Scallon bought the shop from pal Katie

"I just couldn't continue the long hours it takes to run a successful store," O'Scallon said. "I'm going to be married in September and we're building a house on Orchard Lake. My future husband wants me to start traveling overseas with him, Beat of the street: Some say downtown Birmingham has a European flair - sans the sidewalk cafes.

and I miss being home for dinner goals of our recent Green Group with my daughter who's a junior in high school."

Burcar, running the shop for less than two weeks, said the opportunity to own the classic apparel store represented "a dream come true."

"I'll be an empty nester in August when my daughter leaves for college so I can devote my energies to the store. I'm bringing in some new blood while maintaining the traditions of the shop. It's very exciting because from my store window I see a Birmingham that is alive, fun, bustling with people, with an energy that is so refreshing.'

Many long hours

Gothelf said O'Scanlon's reasons for selling the shop are also the reasons many small shops go out of business - people underestimate the hard work involved with running a retail operation.

"It's truly a 60-hour week, plus, if it's done right," she said.

Gothelf said leasing stores is just as time-consuming. She said it can take as long as three years of negotiations to bring a new retail concept

"In the case of Imelda's Closet, the PSD first began working with them in 1994," she said. "But we're selective. We want tenants with the marketing study in mind. We want to try to reduce the food uses in Birmingham while maintaining and expanding our mix of independent men's women's and children's clothing stores, one-of-a-kind shops and unique boutiques, as well as some national retailers."

Richard Astrein, jeweler and community activist, said the changes are for the better in Birmingham.

"We've got a nice blend of diverse merchants that other towns envy," he said. "We've got something for Gothelf pointed out that the latest study by the Metro Detroit Visitors and Convention Bureau listed downtown Birmingham as the 11th of 20 favorite destinations of out-of-town guests. Shopping was named as the top favorite leisure-time activity, translating into 31-cents of every tourist dollar.

She said current rents in Birmingham range from $22-$30 per square foot along Maple, to about $27-$28 per square foot along West Maple, $23 per square foot along Pierce, and $18-$22 per square foot along Bates. The PSD travels to the International Council of Shopping Centers trade show in Las Vegas next week to continue marketing efforts on the town's behalf.

Does metro Detroit have too many stores? Experts say 'yes/no'

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON PECIAL WRITER

Finding the best buy isn't as easy as ABC in the metro Detroit retail markets these Consumers could blow a cirruit traveling the city searching for the lowest price with all the Seeking direction media play garnered by some area retailers.

Can there actually be such a thing as too many stores or too many choices?

Area analysts seem to think it depends on how you look at the situation.

"In some categories there is over retailing in metro-Detroit," said Joan Primo, owner of Strategic Edge in Southfield. "Especially with the big box retailers.

"Builders Square, Home Depot and HQ are examples of too much in one category. Home Centers are overdone and they are "duking" it out in the market. right now.

owns with Jay Wedeven, provides market and research feasibility studies for developers considering new projects. Strategic Edge boasts national and international clients and its services are provided exclusively for

"The owners of a shopping center or (individual) retailers will come to us wanting to know how many shops would be good. which stores they should consider, and how big they should make them," explained Primo.

The call for information on power developments that will include a number of shops or a singular huge warehouse facility are much in demand at Strategic Edge today.

There used to be more small retail space being sought out now it tends to be a conglomeration of the bigger retailers," said Primo. New location sites for stores like Media Play, Best Buy and Circuit City have produced Primo's firm, which she co- an abundance of outlets that all seem to offer the same thing.

"They used to have a strong market but now many of them are struggling due to the overlap," said Primo.

She said many of the larger chains starts out with the development of a good concept at a "home base" location but as soon as they go nationwide they get too much of the overlap.

"It gets to a point where there isn't a differential in the stores and there's no unique appeal or special services," said Primo. "The same products are available at value pricing which was the niche but now there are too many of them to compete."

More choices

Giving shoppers a variety of product lines and options in today's industry is all about, according to William Cook, owner of Cook Real Estate and Research in Livonia. "The consumer desires and demands more alternatives and choices and retailers are trying to fit in with those demands," said Cook.

A big part of Cook's business is assisting commercial investors who are looking to solve their retail needs. Cook helps developers by scouting out property sites and exploring the possibilities for constructing a new building or taking over a vacant facility.

"We find though, that the economics of taking over an existing building can be greater sometimes then having the facility their retail outlets is what built," said Cook. Calls from retailers wanting to expand in new locations across metro-Detroit represent the bulk of Cook's client base. He said inquiries from new chains wanting into our market aren't as frequent.

"In retail it's not a matter of more or less, it's about change." said Cook, "It's about making the there's room," said Primo. "It pie bigger not just making the same pie with different pieces."

Changes in the market as retailers look to the year 2000 consumer needs and demands.

Aging boomers

The graying of America is one. of the key driving forces in the market today," said Primo, noting that the latest chain sweeping the area is Med Max, a retailer that offers aids and supplies to the elderly. Analysts aren't worried about overlap just yet though. Like anything else, if it's a new twist there's always room for more.

"To a certain extent if they come up with a different way of doing it or presenting it I'm sure just depends on the uniqueness of a situation and the category of the retailer."

Added Cook "There's always will continue to be dictated by room for retailers that have an exciting concept."

New gallery raises charity to fine art onathan and Kimberly Weymers opened Wexford Galleries in Livonia Mall three weeks ago. It's a place where "Charity and Art Prevail." Nonprofit organizations and charities can register with the gallery to receive 10 percent of purchase proceeds when a customer mentions the charity by name.

"I think we can do a lot for them," said Kim Weymers.

Inspiration for the helping-hand concept came from Kim and Jonathan's seven-year old daughter

. "She's into saving the environment," said Kim. "It's always we have to recycle or use less plastic. In the future we'd like to hold auctions with 20 percent of the sales going to charities. It's our way of giving back to the community."

With 3,000 square feet it isn't hard to imagine hundreds of art lovers crammed into the gallery to bid on works knowing that a portion of sale proceeds will help their favorite charity. If your nonprofit or charity would like to register with Wexford Galleries, call the Weymers with the name of the organization, contact name, and tax exempt number, (248) 615-1190.

Local artists

Although Wexford Galleries primarily carries reproduction lithographs at this time, the Weymers would also like to assist local artists by displaying their work. The well-lit space is ideal for showing large scale paintings by a single artist, or smaller works by more than one artist.

"We'd like to feature local artists," said Kim.

"So, we're looking for local artists," added Jonathan Weymers.

Through May 31, the Weymers will Please see ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS, C2

"There are people coming to Greektown for dinner, or after working downtown," said Joseph. "The Greektown Art Fair is one of the few large, juried art shows in Detroit."

According to art fair director Shary Brown, even though the fair exhibits a large number of artists, it is relatively small compared to the Guild's Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair.

"It's intimate. A lot of people who have come in past years will want to come again," said Brown. "We have some favorite artists second year Block will bring her returning and a number of new artists. is smaller than the Guild's children's art activity booth in Ann-Arbor every July, but just as well stocked with construction paper and crayons.

"We call it the imagination station because the kids bring their imagination, use the materials, and go for it," said Brown.

This is the first time print maker Michael McCullough will exhibit in the Greektown Art Fair. McCullough is printing every night to build stock for the outdoor art fair season. The black and white, and color prints were so popular at the eight shows McCullough did last year, he will sell them in 26 shows this spring and summer.

"I'm excited to be in the fair," said McCullough of Farmington Hills. "I've been to the Greektown fair every year. It's a different avenue as far as the setting, and there's a lot of talented artists."

STUDENT ART SHOW

Creative Kids: Fifty Clarenceville Middle School students worked together to create this quilt on display at Livonia Civic

Creativity thrives at Clarenceville

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Integrating art with science and math is the way of the future according to Clarenceville High School art teacher John Watson, Clarenceville Middle School art teacher Sarai Koster-Mockenridge and Watson look for innovative ways to stir imagination, Creativity runs rampant in their classroom, and you can see the result in an exhibit featuring works by 110 students in the Fine Arts Gallery and showcases on the second floor of the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile Road.

"There are a lot of nice three-dimensional rings and culptures," said Watson. "We just started a jewelry and sculpture class last year, so it's exciting to see that blos-

Watson and Koster-Mockenridge coordinated and installed the show, which continues through May 22.

Koster-Mockenridge introduced mathematical concepts in art to students via a box project, which worked with math and geometry to produce a sense of inside and outside. Science, history, other school subjects, and even art, trigger innovative class planning as Watson and Koster-Mockenridge continue to experiment. Guess which pieces were done after studying van Gogh and Modigliani. Josh Buell's papier mache and Fimo frogs were sculpted from live frogs brought into the sixth grade classroom to serve as models. After reading a history book on the Berlin Wall, tenthgrade student Brett Gierek created a clay work titled "Berlin."

Wall, tenth grade student Brett to have it here and everybody Gierek created a clay work titled "Berlin."

"I was reading a history book and noticed the Berlin Wall," said Gierek. "I like sculpting things from clay. I'm looking at buying a kiln. This is my first time exhibiting outside school and it's kind of exciting. I like showing my artwork off."

So does Charles Bolender. The sixth grade student worked in one of the groups to stitch together a quilt. His square focuses on the "Return of Yoda."

"I enjoyed drawing it and having fun," said Bolender, "It's cool can see it.'

"It's wonderful for a student like Charlie to take what he makes and put it out for all to see," added Koster-Mockenridge. "With art you're bringing something from (out of) yourself into the world. Art is about creating and sharing.'

Koster-Mockenridge and Watson teamed up to teach the 50 students to stitch together the quilt because students requested the class. Both teachers believe group projects lead to sociable, well-rounded individuals.

"I think it's a wonderful skill to get along and work with people. One of the students said when you put me in that group, I didn't think I liked any of them, now I do."

Among other groups projects on the horizon are a rain forest created by Koster-Mockenridge's sixth grade students are a totem pole carved from a telephone pole by Watson's ninth to 12th grade students.

"I like to do things in groups, to work in teams cooperatively rather than competitively," said Watson, "The idea (for which the totem pole is a part) is to create a sculpture garden. The students have already painted picnic work outside of the school. Last tables."

"Mayonnaise Muffins" was created by 12th grade student Nathan Keeler and junior Andy Brown for an assignment to use the human face in clay.

"It seems to build camaraderie when the kids work together on projects," said Watson.

At the opening reception May 1, middle school principal Carl Wagner entered the gallery anxious to view the results inspired by Watson and Koster-Mockenridge's innovative teaching methods. This is only the second year students have exhibited year's show in the library prompted the two art teachers to encourage students to enter the Scholastics Awards Competition and a Congressional-sponsored exhibition.

"Exhibiting does two things," said Wagner, "It builds the students self-esteem, but it also encourages them to do their best work. They might come closer to some higher standards if they feel, the whole world is going to

The recent addition of a computer to the high school art room and two labs of PC's each in the

BOOKS

Well-written mystery soars before hitting turbulence

(Delacorte, pages of this

new Carlotta

Carlyle mystery,

I've scribbled

notes in the

margin, many of them exclamato-

many

$21.95, 385 pp.)

ry or underlined - something I seem to need to do words. Here's a sampling: "Great NO CHILDREN UNDER 4 AFTER start! I'm hooked at this point ... Visa & Mastercord Accepted enthralling ... more enthralling ... taut writing, building delicious tension and suspense ...

> all at once somehow ...' I hated this book. Its plot is fascinating. Barnes' pacing is relentless. Her characters are some of the most alive and colorful in mystery fiction. The setting is not only vivid but wish I could read faster, wish I could experience this entire book perfectly suited to this story. Trouble is, all stories must come to an end, and this one crash lands.

As indicated earlier, it takes off flying, though, with a brief opening scene as chilling and unsettling as a peculiar whisper in the night.

A young man is in a small. garage, opening an old footlocker, hoping to find in it some clue as to his own heritage, his own mysterious background. He discovers something else. Before he slips away, taking the contents

"Cold Case," task, he has brought with him by Linda Barnes an efficient poison. He listens "to . the whoosh of liquid death ... The wasps died silently, en masse. Not a single one escaped to warn the others.

It was a task he'd promised his mother he'd do long ago. He is in her house, in her garage. He does not know where she is. She is "unpredictable, capricious" and "never ... one to volunteer information."

The opened footlocker, of course, turns out to be a kind of pandora's box. From it, creeping and crawling, sprouting monstrous wings, comes the past. It will not be contained or controlled. It will certainly never be

Switch to Boston one year later, and the detective offices of Motown native, Carlotta Carlyle. A peculiarly behaved "sixtyish gentleman" appears, wanting the intrepid redhead to find a former child prodigy who supposedly has been dead for more than 20 years. He knows she is alive, he says, because he holds in his hands a new manuscript that is unmistakably hers.

Eventually, Carlyle will take on the "cold case," and pursue the strange matter up, down, through and beneath the streets of Boston and environs. Old money, old families, history, the past simply lurk at every corner.

Devoted Barnes' fans will be happy to learn that Carlyle's inimitable upstairs tenant, Roz, lends another helping hand here. Sporting new skin graffiti of the locker with him, he is ("Boobs are Back") and neoncareful to destroy a wasps' nest tinted, barely there hair, her reviews books.

attached to the garage. For this computer savvy and attitude are as intact as ever. Gloria, the buttery-voiced cab dispatcher, also pitches in, reinforced by her usual soul food. Mooney, the con. is here, too, still a little mooneveved over Carlotta, now gone on to other men (a bad habit of hers), including psychiatrist Keith Donovan, who comes up with some surprises.

Barnes has her characters down cold, you can bet - not just how they look and act, but the noises they make. Her dialogue rings true as a finely tuned, fine musical instrument, and together, the rhythms and the tunes of conversations sound dead-on. whether she's doing Boston Brahmin or a housewife from west of the Misssissippi. Barnes was once a professional musician; perhaps, that's the secret.

As always, adding to the delight of a Barnes' mystery as the eye-openers on exactly how a clever detective works to solve a case. At story's end, you feel you're just a little closer to obtaining an investigator's license, too. Here, for instance, you'll find out how to use the "Switchboard" line on the Internet; exactly what to look for when identifying someone; a spot burglars never search out for cash or other valuables; a way of checking to see if a manuscript has been recently

Again, this book is packed with goodies in all directions. Then there's that unimaginative, pedestrian ending. Pooey.

Book tells how to be 'terrific'

ESTHER LITTMANN

In his 1940s play, "No Exit," French author Paul Jean. Sartre defined his idea of hell as "other people." No doubt, the existentialist philosopher and resistance fighter in Nazioccupied France encountered more than his share of interpersonal hostility to warrant that comment. But for communications specialist and internationally known lecturer Lillian Glass, destructive relationships are not inevitable. In her 1995 bestselling book "Toxic People," the University of Michigan graduate described how to recognize and avoid people whose own feelings of inadequacy, self-pity, and jealousy assault the self-esteem of others.

Now Glass examines the opposite side of the coin. In a selfhelp book entitled "Attracting Terrific People" (St. Martin's Press, 1997, $23.95), the author teaches her readers how to find and keep - the people who enrich their lives and bring them

Glass admits that at one point she made a conscious decision to avoid people in her personal life who are filled with self-loathing and insecurities and therefore go from one disaster to another. Her goal is to attract only terrific people, the "givers and growers" who bring out the best in others and embrace life enthusiastically. Her personal experience and what she learned in private practice in Beverly Hills and Manhattan form the basis of her book. To attract terrific people, Glass writes, we must become terrific ourselves. The first step is to combat the negativity in our lives. Too often we sabotage potentially rewarding relationships because we feel unworthy. Negative feedback from childhood dominates our self-image and produces low expectations in our interactions with others.

To increase self-esteem, maintains this postdoc from the UCLA School of Medicine, "you need to reprogram how you see yourself . . . you need to know how to indulge and pamper yourself and learn how to openly accept others' kind words, positive opinions, and assistance."

To be sure, the author's advice is no quick-fix solution. Taking control of one's thoughts and behavior patterns requires time and self-discipline. To help her readers on the path to more successful relationships, Glass first shares client-tested techniques for overcoming damaging mental attitudes. She then identifies the characteristics of terrific people and discusses 20 types, from "Self-Respecters" and "Non-Victims" to Honest-Abes and "Calculated Risk-Takers." A list of 250 adjectives describing positive personality traits should convince anyone that being "terrific" is neither one-sided nor

But making a good first impression is also important, the author maintains. She understands the power of voice and appearance. As communications consultant, Glass has worked with clients such as Dustin Hoffman when he needed help in developing his female voice in the movie "Tootsie" and Julio Iglesias who wanted to reduce his Spanish accent. Included in her book are techniques to help us speak more clearly and dynamically and to modulate a voice that is either/too nasal or high-pitched. Other helpful exercises deal with posture, facial expressions, and gestur-

"All people," writes Glass, "long to feel important, to be loved and appreciated, and to reciprocate those feelings." Terrific people recognize these common needs and aspirations. They inspire and empower others, realizing that success and joy can be multiplied indefinitely, with no losers on either side.

Glass would agree with Sartre's existentialist tenet that the choices we make define who we are. Becoming terrific and attracting terrific people, according to Glass, is such a choice. Her book provides the key to unlock the door, even one posted with "no exit."

"Attracting Terrific People" can be found at Border's Books and Music in Farmington Hills.

Walk lively among women spirits

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER

The sheer cotton dresses dangling from the ceiling at the Janice Epstein Charach Gallery turn ever-so slightly without being touched. The conventional explanation is that the garments move whenever the ventilation system goes on, or because of a passing wind.

Don't believe it. Strolling among the hanging collection of clothes emblazoned with the names of women who passed through Ellis Island is a walk among living spirits. Pacing through Carol Hamoy's exhibit at the Charach Gallery is especially appropriate on this Mother's Day when many recall the intimate familiarity of how a woman's touch can reach from the mundane into the soul.

The Charach Gallery's exhibit along with two other local art shows at Oakland Community College and Peace Center Gallery presents a wide ranging look at women artists. While it's unfair to generalize about what is a uniquely woman's artistic viewpoint, there is an unmistakable sentimentality among the Linked by gender, familial roles and overcoming societal stereotypes, the works in the three exhibits reflect a deep "connectedness" between art and life. A feeling that Arlene Frank, coordinator of OCC's "Our Visions: Women in Art," describes as "earthiness.'

Some may also call it an expressive feminine quality or simply maternal instinct. But when translated to canvas or clay it takes the shape of an honest vulnerability and bitter tenderness. It's a viewpoint, said Frank, that often gets overlooked, not only in the art world, but in board rooms. "We point to studies that show women speak softer (than men) and many still only speak when spoken to," she tainty. There are many perceived choices and advances, she said. But there remains the ongoing struggle to either fit in or shrug off societal standards of feminine beauty and a women's role.

Christine Waters' "Ophelia" challenges those stereotypes. A lush landscape of Rosseauesque primitivism, Waters portrays a submerged Barbie Doll in a subconscious swamp, a reminder that the dazed-looking plastic simpleton represents vapidness, not beauty.

"She's so anatomically incorrect that she wouldn't be able to walk if she were real," said Frank. "Girls are told in ads from Claudia Schiffer to Kate Moss what they can be like. Yet they're also being told they can be anything they want to be. It's confusing.'

Several pieces in the OCC exhibit offer further evidence of what Frank refers to as the "diversity of women's voices." A patchwork quilt by Marianne Hall of Birmingham, entitled "Gaia's Scream," contrasts images of the environment with a series of questions, such as "What will we do?"

Other noteworthy works include Center for Creative Studies student Sandra Dupret's "Collections of My Femaleness," two shelves of miniature porcelain bras and panties; Kathleen Moore's "Fear of Flying," a clay sculpture with the feet of Cro-Magnon man and the wings of an eagle; Nancy Prophit's delicate "Mother and Child" sculpture; and Mec-Kyung's Shim's "At Peep of Day," a haunting surrealistic painting of a woman's awakening.

A Woman's Work

The exhibit at the Charach Gallery, located inside the Jewish Community Center, brings together local artist and Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association instructor Linda Soberman with New York artist Hamoy. For the most part, the mix is successful.

Sylvia Nelson, gallery director, admits that the exhibit is neither controversial nor political.

When you go to Bali, take time to savor its appeal

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE SPECIAL WRITER

When you go to Bali, plan to spend more time than we did. We included it as a stop on our way to Australia. But the four days we had there were not enough to fully experience this complex island, one among the chain of thousands that make up Indonesia. You really need a week.

Why? Because it's hot and humid and you just don't accomplish as much in a day as you would in a cooler clime. And despite its world-class resorts featured in Conde Nast magazine and artistic homes depicted in Architectural Digest, it is basically a third-world country with narrow roads, noise-filled and congested by cars and motorcycles. So you don't get where you're going as peacefully or quickly even if where you are going is peaceful and still.

In addition, if you stay at a luxurious resort - we were lucky to get in on the new Ritz Carlton Bali's opening half-price offering - it's hard to resist taking the time to enjoy its luxurious accommodations.

Picture two infinity pools linked by a waterfall that appear as if they are falling into the ocean beyond. Our three-room villa had its own private "dipping pool," outdoor shower (of course there was an ample, doorless indoor one too in addition to an oversize Jacuzzi tub), fountain and "bale" (a raised, roofed pavilion) where you could sit and read propped on huge cushions overlooking the Indian Ocean.

But in the time we had to explore the island, we encountered a procession of hundreds of Balinese men, women and children bringing food offerings for a festival at one of the 100,000plus temples on Bali. Most ride two-by-two on motorcycles, with the woman sitting side-saddle dressed in delicate white blouses and long skirts of wrapped batik sashed at the waist. You, too, must have your knees covered to enter any temple and wear a waist sash, that you can bring with you, rent or borrow. And women who are menstruating or anyone with an open wound are asked not to enter a temple. This is a taboo about blood on holy ground and extends to non-Hindus as well.

The temples dot the island on the clifftops overlooking the sea, hundreds of steps down into gorges, nestled within a village, just off a crowded street. The predominant religion is a kind of Hinduism unique to Bali. But the American expatriate whospent a day with us that ended with tea and cake at her exquisite home told us that Muslims are gaining in numbers and influence. If temples dot the landscape, then arts and crafts fill the spaces in between. Think of the Ann Arbor Art Fairs Rochester's Arts and Apples. even the current Birmingham Art Fair all rolled into one - and you will still have no conception of the thousands of artisans that make and sell their art daily in Bali. As you drive down the road you will see whole villages that specialize in certain arts or crafts, both traditional and modern. Stone sculpture, woodcraft, metalwork, textiles, ceramics, textiles, paintings, gold and silver jewelry.

Hawkers abound and bargaining is expected, but don't get carried away by the sport of it. This is a poor country where an average worker takes home about $1,000 a year. So as I bargained for a toddler-sized, crochettrimmed batik dress, that I bought for $4 but probably could have gotten down to $2, I thought about how much that extra $2 could mean to the seller and how little to me.

mainly rice accompanied by small portions of spicy vegetables, fish and meat with a hot paste ground from fresh chillies. However, most of these warungs are off-limits to tourists since the standards of sanitation are shaky.

The acres of terraced rice fields easily seen off the road attest to our American ex-patriot's statement that although it is a poor country, few go hungry.

You can't drink the water in Bali even to brush your teeth - but the ice is government-regulated so it's safe. We also were introduced to a whole new world of fruits. On the coffee table in our villa was a fruit bowl that was refilled each day. Of the seven or eight fruits offered, the only ones that were familiar were grapes and a tiny version of our banana.

A visit to Bali's new Bird Park was a satisfying way to view the full-range of glorious birds the island hosts. An adjacent Reptile Park features dragons from iguanas as well as the world's largest captive python.

The Balinese are beautiful people, diminutive with gorgeous smiles, for whom theater is an integral part of life. We viewed a troupe perform the Kecak Dance, in which a circular chorus of bare-chested male dances become a forest, a legion of monkeys and whatever else is required as the epic unfolds. Of

CC icers voted No. 1

The Redford Catholic Central hockey team and its coach, Gordie St. John, can earn no greater honor than the one they received from the National Sports News Service.

CC, the Class A state champion with a 25-1-1 final record, is the No. 1 ranked team in the National Sports News Service final poll. St. John, meanwhile, was named Coach of the Year in the same poll.

"I'm absolutely thrilled," St. John said. "I know it's a mythical thing, but I'm so excited for the kids. It was a nice ride, but the kids take you.

"They're the hardest workers I ever had. None of them complained of the work they had to do."

Wheelchair 9-ball tourney

Thirty-two of the top wheelchair pool players from across the U.S., Canada and Europe will compete Saturday and Sunday in Westland for the U.S. Open Wheelchair 9 Ball Championship.

The event, sanctioned by the National Wheelchair Billiards Association, will be at the Electric Stick Cue Club, 6531 N. Wayne Road, Westland.

The tourney will run from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days.

Trophies and prize money totaling $8,000 will be awarded at 7 p.m. Sunday.

For more information, call (313) 467-1717.

Collegiate notes

•Liz Gunn (Livonia Ladywood) of Western Michigan University's volleyball team was given the Broncos' top award for academic excellence at the school's first awards banquet.

Gunn took a 3.77 grade point average into the winter semester to earn the WMU athletic department's top academic honor.

•Mark Rutherford (Livonia Churchill) improved hits record to 8-3 when he scattered seven hits over seven innings as Eastern Michigan scored a 3-2 baseball win (May 4) over Central Michigan.

Rutherford recorded seven strikeouts while giving up just one earned run as the Eagles won three of four during the weekend series. Playing first base in the nightcap, Rutherford also clubbed his team-leading 11th homer.

Ocelot golfers advance

For the first time in memory, Schoolcraft College's men's golf team will advance to the NJCAA Region 12 Championships, which will be today and Monday at Darby Creek Golf Course in Marysville, OH.

The Ocelots-managed to qualify by the narrow est of margins. At the 14-team Michigan Community College Athletic Association State Tournament, played at Stonehedge Golf Course in Augusta (May 4-5), SC won the tie breaker for the sixth — and final — regional berth with Grand Rapids CC.

Each finished with a 679-stroke total for 36 holes (the tournament was scheduled for 54 holes, but the final round was weathered out).

Leading the Ocelots was Andy Baron, who tied for 22nd with an 84/84-168 tournament. Although none of SC's competitors placed in the top 20, their overall consistency was notable.

Next best among the Ocelots was All-Eastern Conference pick Brad Villa, 84/85-169, followed by Dan Gourlay (84/88-172) and Brian Gabbeart (88/84-172). Erik Gustaf was their fifth scorer (86/92-178).

Chiefs net win over Churchill

Livonia Churchill's girls soccer team falls to Plymouth Canton, but both coaches agree the wind may have had something to do with it. Plymouth Canton will-face Livonia Stevenson on Monday.

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR

Here's how Plymouth Canton must have viewed it: For three weeks, nothing - then this. The Chiefs had a lull in their soccer schedule, playing the lower echeion teams in the Western Lakes Activities Association, until last week. Then came back-to-back matches against two toughies, Plymouth Salem and Livonia Churchill. Not unlike what the Chargers are now facing: a brief respite, followed by last Friday's WLAA Western Division championship match vs. Canton, with a game against WLAA Lakes Division champ - and crosstown rival - Livonia Stevenson coming up Monday.

Canton survived its test (so far), tying Salem last Wednesday 1-1, then defeating the defending WLAA champion Chargers 1-0 Friday at Churchill.

The win over Churchill puts the Chiefs (now 10:0-2) into the WLAA championship game opposite Stevenson. The match will be at 7 p.m. Thursday at Canton.

Churchill finishes second in the division and will host Plymouth Salem in the WLAA playoffs at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The Chargers beat Salem 1-0 in last year's WLAA title game; earlier this season, the two played to a scoreless tie.

For Canton, scoring goals has been a problem of late, and that's not the way a team wants to approach a showdown against Stevenson. The Spartans have surrendered just one goal all season; Canton played them to a scoreless tie in the first week of the season.

It took the Chiefs 76 minutes to find the net against Salem; in Friday's match against Churchill, it took nearly 70. After relentlessly attacking throughout the second half, Canton scored when Beth

Madonna moves into regional tourney

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR

Nothing sharpens the skills like a little competition.

Which is something Madonna University's baseball team got in abundance this season. When Greg Haeger's initial campaign as the Fighting Crusaders' coach began, he said without qualification hewanted to play the toughest schedule he could.

Why? Because nothing prepares a team, tests its mettle, better than going against the best.

Haeger's theory was proven accurate last week when Madonna swept through the NAIA Great Lakes Sectional Tournament, which it hosted, winning fourstraight games to advance to this week's Great Lakes Regional in Battle Creek.

Chances are slim any of the Crusaders' regional opponents will examine their 23-28-1 record and take them lightly - particularly after their Sectional showing.

Regional play begins Wednesday. "One of the good things about playing a lot of good teams is that, when you get to the post-season, you're well prepared," Haeger said. "Everyone came to play (in this tournament) for every game. We

Lutheran Westland throws Clarenceville for a loop

The bottom of the lineup helped Lutheran High Westland come out on top.

Lutheran Westland got three hits from Ryan Moser, two from Chad Janetzke and three from Chris O'Brien to lead a 15-hit attack Thursday that gave the Warriors a 16-7 victory over Livonia Clarenceville.

"Those are our 7-8-9 hitters," coach Jeremy Geidel said. "They really came through when we need-

Moser went 3-for-4, including a double, and drove in four runs while Janetzke went 2-for-3, also collecting a double, and drove in three and scored three. O'Brien went 3-for-3 and scored four times.

"The score doesn't really reflect the game," Geidel said. "We had a lot of errors (eight). It was a close game until that one inning. "We were fortunate to win with that many errors."

never had any mental letdown, which we tended to have during the season.

"We didn't make any critical mistakes. We played very smart baseball and very aggressive baseball."

The Crusaders also smacked the heck out of the ball. They scored eight runs three times and 17 in their other tourney game. They had hit totals of 12, 20, 22 and 9.

"We smoked the ball," admitted Haeger. These kids know what to do. They go up there with a game plan when they're hitting.

"When teams play us, they know we're going to hit and we know we're going to hit."

The six-team Sectional was interrupted by poor weather -- Friday's games were played at Ford Field in Livonia - but that didn't bother the Crusaders, who came into the tournament as the fifth seed. In their first game Friday, they outlasted No. 1-seeded Marian College (Fond du Lac, Wisc.) 8-7 in 13 innings.

The winning run was scored by Eric Marcotte (from Plymouth Canton), who doubled and came home on Dan Taylor's game-winning single. Both Marcotte and Taylor finished the game with five hits apiece, Marcotte driving in three runs.

Madonna had built a 7-4 lead after seven innings, but Marian (22-17-1) tied it with one run in the eighth and two more in the ninth.

Jason Carter got the win, making his: record 3-2, with 4 1/3 innings of scoreless relief. Also contributing heavily to the Crusaders' 22-hit attack were Pete Quinn (Redford Thurston) and Mike LaPointe, each with four hits, and Daryl Rocho, with two.

That victory put Madonna into the tournament final against No. 2-seed Indiana Tech, a team the Crusaders had beaten in their first game of the Sectional by an 8-2 margin.

Tech (34-28) drew first blood, scoring three times in the first four innings, but a five-run Madonna fifth proved to be the difference.

Jeff Warholik and Taylor each drove in two runs, and Quinn and Marcotte had one RBI each. Aaron Shrewsbury, named the Sectional's Most Valuable Player for the season, and Warholik had three hits apiece.

Bob Mason worked all nine innings for Madonna, giving up seven hits and four walks. He struck out nine, raising his record to 3-4.

While Madonna's first game Wednesday, the 8-2 win over Tech, was pivotal in putting the Crusaders on the title track, its second game - a 17-16 triumph over Mount St. Joseph (Cincinnati) - was more entertain-

The win over Tech was due, in part, to the steady pitching of Dan Pydyn (from Plymouth). He worked the first seven innings, surrendering two runs on 10 hits and two walks in raising his record to 7-4.

It helped to be staked to an 8-0 lead, of course. Shrewsbury drove in two runs with two hits, Marcotte had four hits, and Taylor and Jeff Gutt (Redford Catholic Central) chipped in with two hits apiece.

In Wednesday's second contest, Madonna scored in each of the first six innings - a total of 15 runs. Yet, its lead was only two runs (15-13).

Mount St. Joseph actually rallied to take a 16-15 advantage into the bottom of the eighth inning, but the Crusaders added two more to their total in their half of the eighth to earn the victory.

Shrewsbury and Rocho were the big guns. each collecting four hits and five RBI. Shrewsbury slugged two home runs and scored five times.

Taylor also had four hits. Quinn slugged a solo homer, Marcotte had three hits, and Gutt had a hit and two RBI.

Carter was the winning pitcher in relief.

Shrewsbury, a sophomore from Dearborn Divine Child, earned Sectional MVP honors with a fantastic offensive season. He's posted a .448 batting average, with a school-record 19 doubles; he also has 10 homers, 50 RBI and 45 runs scored in 51 games. All are team Joining him on the all-Sectional team were Delano Voletti (catcher), Pydyn, Taylor (third base), LaPointe (second base) and Kevin Foley (center field).

The Regional may be next for the Crusaders, but Haeger won't let up. "Battle Creek isn't the end of our line," the Madonna coach said. "Our goal when the season started was to get to the national tournament.

"This was just the beginning of our next

Turkey hunt could've been more successful

The fly-down has cackle always been one of my favorite turkey calls and having located a pair of roosted. Toms the night before, I couldn't wait to give it a try at sunset and (hopefully) entice the Toms into flying our way. The fly-down cackle, which mimics the excited cackle a hen emits when she flys down off her roost each morning, can be a deadly call if everything goes well. If you can locate a roosted fly-down cackle, many times the long-beard will come directly to the call when he leaves his roost. With not one but two longbeards perched in the same tree, I had a hunch the opportunity awaiting could prove to be golden.

My hunting partner Al Blackwell and I crept through the predawn darkness and into a likely position, then waited for le through the budding hardwoods. As dawn arrived wecould see the objects of our pursuit perched on the edge of a ridge some 80-yards away. I hoped quietly we hadn't moved in too close and that they would feel comfortable flying down in our direction.

When legal shooting time arrived I offered a little tree talk, a few subtle clucks and purrs, as a prelude to the main course: the fly-down cackle. I never got a chance to see if it worked.

One Tom let loose with a thunderous gobble and flew down right at us. I guess he figured he'd get a jump on his opposition Tom and give him a believable and left him on the roost. We couldn't wait for the second Tom to fly down since the first was right on top of us. The report from Al's 12 ga. shattered the morning's silence seconds before Al raced over to retrieve his bird.

Now the real fun began. The second Tom, which was still on the roost, kept leaning forward in an attempt to look around the trees towards us and find out what all the commotion

the first rays of daylight to trick- was about. On his third or fourth swing forward the gobbler lost his balance and literally fell out of the tree. He tumbled for about 10 or 12 feet then got his wings beneath him and glided to the forest floor. His feet, and mine. were already moving as he hit the ground, but the Tom quickly disappeared over a ridge.

One of the exciting aspects of spring turkey hunting is that you just never know what you'll encounter over the course of the Reports from DNR District offices around the state indicate hunters are experiencing mixed results so far during the 1997 spring wild turkey season.

"The people I've talked with said the second hunt has gone real well," said Joe Robinson, a wildlife technician at the DNR's Lansing headquarters. "The gobblers are responding pretty well to their calls."

Over near Gaylord, hunters had better success during the first hunt period (April 21-27).

"Early on we had quite a few reports of success, but lately the birds have been kind of quiet." said Glen Matthews, district wildlife biologist at the DNR's number and address are listed at Gaylord office. "Hunters are hearing birds on the roost, but they're not saying much after

rescheduled

Last Saturday's Southfield Parks and Recreation Fishing Derby was canceled because on inclement weather and has been rescheduled for this Saturday, May 10.

The derby is open to the public and provides an excellent opportunity for anglers, particularly children and beginner anglers, to enjoy the thrill of catching a late hunt a shot. I'm grateful to trout without having to make a long-distance trek up north.

A section of the Rouge River near Civic Center Drive and Telegraph Road will be fenced off and the area will be stocked with 10- to 12-inch rainbow trout.

The event runs 8 a.m.-4 p.m. and is open to anglers of all ages. However, only children age 12 and under and disabled individuals will be allowed to fish for the first two hours of the event. There will also be casting contests and prizes for the largest trout. The event is free and no fishing license is required while fishing in the fenced-off area.

There is a five fish limit. Participants must bring their own fishing equipment and bait. Corn, worms and marshmallows work well and single-barbed hooks are recommended.

Call (810) 354-4967 for more information.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Ml. 48009.

had faced countless challenges throughout the match, let this one get through her; the Chiefs' Lisa Reissenweber was there to tap it in for the game's only goal, with 10:42 to play.

"The wind made a difference." said Canton coach Don Smith, a view echoed by Churchill's Chad Campau: "Going against the wind in the second half was a problem for us. (Canton) put a lot of pressure on us.

With the wind at their backs for the final 40 minutes, the Chiefs kept the play in Churchill's end most of the time. "I'm happy with the way we played," said Campau. "I can't complain.

"Games like this show me we can play with anyone in the state."

The Chiefs' performance was likewise heartening for Smith, although a few more goals would have improved his mood even more. "After playing Salem in a tough game (Wednesday), then having to come back and play Churchill, well, they did all right," the Canton coach said.

Getting even!

Westland takes down Macomb North

It may not have been as impressive as Joe DiMaggio's hitting streak or Cal Ripken's consecutive games played record, but still it was an impressive streak.

Macomb Lutheran North had gone three seasons without losing a game in the Metro Confer-

But on Friday, Lutheran Westland had different ideas.

The host Warriors, who are playing at the top of their game, routed North 16.6, in a surprisingly easy five-inning mercy.

The Warriors were able to avenge a 15-2 loss they suffered at North earlier in the season.

"We made some big plays at key times which we ' aven't been making," Westland coach Ron Gentz said. "We played extremely well for us and they played bad for them. This isn't the same North powerhouse team like they've had in the past."

Westland took advantage of eight walks in the second inning to score 10 runs and put the game out of reach. The Mustang pitchers walked a total of 12 bat-

The big blow in the 10-run second was a grand slam by Sharon Greer. The Warriors had taken a 6-4 lead before the slam after. North walked in three runs.

Kierra Decker drove in three runs while Jenny Schulz added a two-run double.

Katie Heiden hurled the five innings for the victory, despite walking eight batters. She scattered four hits and walked two. The Mustangs slipped to 9-1 in the Metro and 11-5 overall. Westland improved to 6-4 in the conference and 7-6 overall. The Warriors prepared themselves for North on Wednesday by trouncing host Livonia Clarenceville 23-1.

Again it took Westland only five innings for the victory. The big inning in this game was the first as the Warriors scored 11

Sarah Hoffmeier beat Clarenceville single-handed as she slammed a pair of home runs. Hoffmeier drove in a total of seven runs with three hits.

Decker also collected three hits with two RBI for Westland. Heiden and Holly Kaye added two hits apiece.

The Trojans' bats struggled as they could only muster a single by Nicole Riedl against Michelle Wiersig and Heiden. Wiersig pitched the first four innings, striking out two and walking

Rachel Sundberg lasted only two innings for Clarenceville to record the loss. The Trojans are 3-6 in the Metro Conference. •FRANKLIN 12, GLENN 2:

It only took five innings for Livonia Franklin to take care of visiting Westland John Glenn Wednesday in a Western Lakes Activities Association crossover.

The Patriots (17-5) were led by Margaret Schultz who was 3-for-3 and knocked in a pair of runs. Lori Jendrusik and Missy Blanton each had two hits and two

GIRLS SOFTBALL

Jendrusik pitched the first four innings for the victory. Randi Wolfe allowed one run in her one inning of action.

Jill Murphy had two of the five Glenn hits.

•CANTON 5, CHURCHILL 0: Plymouth Canton's Gretchen Hudson didn't allow a Livonia Churchill runner past second base to record the shutout on Friday. The visiting Chiefs (7-1 in the Western Division) broke the game open with four runs off Raegan Tisher in the second inning. Angela Litwin's two-run single was the key hit.

Other than the second inning, Tisher pitched well, allowing just five hits, with two strikeouts and six walks.

Dawn Perttula, Megan McGinty, Shannon Misiak and Jessica Schulte had the four Charger singles.

On Wednesday, the Chargers won a thrilling 2-1 victory over visiting North Farmington in eight innings.

The winning run came off the bat of Misiak, who singled in Tina Naif. Misiak's single smashed off the pitcher's glove' as Naif crossed the plate before a play could be made. Misiak and Naif had three hits apiece in the seven-hit Churchill attack. Adrienne Doyle went the distance and threw a four-hit gem. She fanned four and walked two.

 FARMINGTON 22, GLENN 2: Westland John Glenn ended its tough week by being handed a five-inning shellacking by the Lakes Division's first-place

Melissa Rayburn and Angie Haas each drove in a run with Glenn's only two hits.

Alana Heikkinen pitched the first three innings of shutout ball to record the victory for Farmington.

At the plate, Megan O'Rear paced the Falcons attack with three hits and five RBI. Each-Farmington starter had at least one hit.

The Falcons improved to 7-1 in the Lakes and 15-6 overall, while The Rockets are 5-14 overall.

•REGINA 8-0, LADYWOOD 5-1: Livonia Ladywood was able to salvage a split of its Catholic League doubleheader at Harper Woods Regina Wednesday thanks to an unearned run in the seventh. The Blazers were able to break up the scoreless dual by scoring the game's only run on an error, a sacrifice and a squeeze bunt. The run was all Cathy Hermann needed as she limited the Saddlelites to just two hits.

In the opener, Regina pushed eight runs across the plate against Hermann for the victory.

Danielle Raub and Annie Bolognino had two hits apiece for Ladywood (14-11 overall, 4-8 in the Catholic League Central Division).

Mid-May is the time when many species of migrant birds return through southeastern Michigan on their way to northern breeding grounds.

Colorful warblers like the blackburnian with fiery orange, black and some accentuating white will be passing through from their wintering grounds in northern South America. Blackthroated greens, bay-breasted and black-throated blues are just a few more spectacular warblers that can only be seen for a short time of the year in our area.

Some of these species will be feeding in the trees around your yard, so be on the lookout. Or keep your ears open for unusual sounds that might cause you to look up at some of these passing jewels. But not far away are some areas where migrants concentrate.

In Dearborn, the University of Michigan manages a natural area as part of the Ford Fairlane Estate adjacent to the Fairlane Towne Center. This approximately 500-acre area is part of the Rouge River floodplain. It's an oasis in a sea of concrete. Because it's the only area in the vicinity where birds can stop and refuel on their journey, many different species can be seen there.

Julie A. Craye's new book, "Birds of Southeast Michigan: Dearborn," reports that 247 species of birds have been identified on the property and another 16 in the nearby area. That's about 60 percent of all the species that have been identified in Michigan. Not bad for 500 acres.

Metro Beach Metropark near Mt. Clemens is another hot spot for birding. The area adjacent to the nature center is wooded with low lying areas containing water in spring. This prime birding area is also next to the lake where waterfowl can be seen just a short distance from the woods.

Pt. Pelee in Canada is an old standby for birders, but two other less crowded areas are on the southern shore of Lake Erie. Crane Creek State Park and Ottawa National Wildlife Refuge are great places to view migrants. These two areas in Ohio are next to each other on Route 2 about 18 miles east of Toledo? The boardwalk at Crane Creek State Park restricts travel to protect the vegetation, but a variety of migrants come down low and close to the walkway.

If you plan to be sick one day in May to view these migrants, watch the weather map and choose a day when a warm front has passed and a cold front is approaching. This condition provides winds from the south to push a new batch of migrants north. Good birding.

OUTDOOR NOTES

Outdoor buffs will have a chance to listen to a discussion about urban parks and the role they play in preserving habitat on Thursday, June 5.

The 6:30 p.m. event is being hosted by the Sierra Club, Southeastern Michigan Group, Mackinac Chapter

Joe Derek, Farmington City naturalist, will speak at the meeting at the South Shelter in Heritage Park in Farmington Hills.

For more information about the meeting or other Sierra Club activities, call Joanne Spatz at (810) 932-5370.

Wilderness school: The Novi chapter of the Safari Club International will host its 4th Annual Michigan Educational Wilderness School Friday-Sunday, May 16-18, at the Ralph MacMullan Conference Center at Higgins lake. The workshop gives teachers and educators from Michigan an opportunity to learn about outdoor activities. There is a nominal cost. For information, call (810)685-3658.

Urban canoeing: (Above) Paddlers don't have to travel to northern Michigan for scenic views. Crosswinds Marsh in Western Wayne County offers two miles of marked canoe trails. More than 100 species of birds can be seen at the newly opened Crosswinds Marsh, including egrets like the one below.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO TRAVEL FAR TO DIP YOUR PADDLE

By JEFF COUNTS STAFF WRITER

ou don't have to travel to the Au Sable River in northern Michigan to dip a paddle.

Canoeing is taking on an urban attitude. Western Wayne County residents can spend an afternoon paddling close to home in the Rouge River, the newly opened Wayne County park, the Crosswinds Marsh, or even the Detroit River.

Lakes and rivers dot the Pinckney Recreation Area near Ann Arbor, less than an hour from the western suburbs.

"We're seeing a big increase in the amount of canoeing," said Kelly Vore, manager of the newly opened REI store on Haggerty Road in Northville Township.

The sport is popular for families because it's relatively easy to do and not expensive to get into, she said.

"You can strap the canoe on the top of your car and go out for an evening or a week," she said. "There's lots of access right around here for it."

Free seminars

To help people learn more about canoeing, REI is hosting two free seminars at the store on Saturday, May 17.

At 1 p.m., a representative from Canada South Outdoors will present "Preparing for a Canoe Trip."

The session would be good for both the experienced and novice canoeist, she said.

This means it's a good place for folks to learn the basics of how to put the canoe on top of the car for an evening of paddling near home or to prepare for a long trip that would involve camping. Participants will receive a checklist of what to take.

Another seminar will be held on the same day at 4 p.m. at the store. Ron Smith a certified canoe instructor and vice chair of the Sierra Club's Michigan Chapter,

Starting costs: About $825 will get you paddling. An entry level canbe. costs about $650. Lifejackets run from $40 to $50, paddles from $20 to $25 and a rack to carry the canoe about $25. Source: REI

Kayak costs: The boat's range in cost from $400 for a kayak that anybody can use to about $3,000 for a large touring model, in the middle, a basic good keyak for all around use costs about $1,350: Like with a cance, life vests are needed, along with paddles. Source: The Benchmark will present a slide presentation on "Camping and Traveling with a Sea Kayak in Michigan."

The session will deal with the diversity of the sport, from urban paddling on the Detroit River to wilderness trips.

"He'll be dispelling some myths about canoeing," said Vore. "A lot of people think you have to go out in the woods to do it. The access is good around here. It's a versatile sport."

She said families are attracted to it because canoeing can be as intense or as relaxed as people want it to be.

at (810) 347-2100.

Kayaking seminar

The Benchmark in Farmington is hosting two free seminars on canoeing and its sister sport, kayaking. The first is a kayaking demonstration on Tuesday, May 13, at Dodge Park No. 4 at Cass Lake in Oakland County. It runs 3-7 p.m.

"We use the program to give people a basic introduction to kayaking," said Paul Goodman, Benchmark manager. "We'll show them the basic difference between white water kayaks and the simpler boats."

He said the seminar is good for people who are looking at hull designs and trying to decide which is the best for them. There will be about 30 kayaks available for testing.

On Sunday, May 18, the store will host a canoe seminar at the same location from noon to 4:30 p.m. It will cover the basics ofcanoeing and there will be boats available for testing. For information, call (810) 477-8116.

Goodman said kayaking and solo canoeing are becoming more popular because people can go at their own pace.

"Everybody knows the canoe as a two-person boat, but solo boats are getting more popular;" he said.

One reason is that you can't always find a partner, he said. Also, there's the couple factor.

"A lot of couples like to use solo boats. That way they can proceed at their own pace. They can stop and stare at a certain landscapes and then catch up with each other later," he said. "There's a certain art to solo canoeing that's appealing to people."

Places to go

One of the newest places to put a cance in for an evening is the Crosswinds Marsh, a 1,050-acre nature preserve in western miles of signed canoe trails that pass through shallow and deep water areas. Canoes are available for rental. Fees are $10 for two hours and $4 for each additional half hour.

According to the Wayne County Parks Department, there are more than 100 types of birds to see in the new park. There have been bald eagles and Virginia rails spotted in the area.

The marsh was built to replace wetlands removed by the expansion of Wayne County's Metro Airport. The recreational facilities at Crosswinds March were paid for by a 1/4-mill parks tax approved by Wayne County voters last year.

The marsh is located on Haggerty Road near Oakville-Waltz Road in Sumpter Township. To get there, take I-275 to the Will Carlton exit and follow Will Carlton/Oakville-Waltz Road west to Haggerty. For information, call (313) 261-1990.

For those looking for a formal introduction to canoeing, the adult education program at Matthaei Botanical Gardens, University of Michigan, is sponsoring "Canoe to Hell." This isn't a scene from the movie "Deliverance." It's a tour of eight lakes near Ann Arbor that are interconnected by way of Hell Creek Passage.

The tour is slated for June 7 and runs from 9 a.m., until midafternoon. The cost is $45. For information, call (313) 998-7061.

Other nearby areas that offer good canoeing include northern Oakland County lakes, said Goodman. The Clinton River in Macomb County is good. And don't forget Kensington Lake, he said. "There are plenty of quiet places on it."

Those looking for a quick northern Michigan experience can head west to the Huron River near Ann Arbor.

"Out on the Huron River early Wayne County. The newly opened in the morning you could swear For more information, call REI Wayne County park has two you're 300 miles north," he said.

On one weekend a year, camping is permitted on Belle Isle, the Detroit River's island jewel. That weekend arrives May 16-18, when the Wolverine 200 Cycling Marathon rolls again. Cyclists log up to 200 miles between 10 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday, raising money for

are available at local bike shops or by calling Michele Bobrowski with the Hughes Sports Group at (810) 652-0511.

Late entry fee is $30, which includes a T-shirt and colorful Wolverine 200 patch. It's not mandatory to ride the full 200 miles. "You can do as many miles or as few as you want to," said Bobrowski. Raising pledges also is optional. "A lot of people make a donation to help out the Burn Center when they pay their entry fee." You can register on Belle Isle near the Coast Guard Station (signs will direct you there) 7-9 p.m. Friday, May 16. You may also register beginning at 7 a.m. Saturday.

Run from the Heart: Those who gather for the 2nd Annual 5K Mothers Against Drunk Driving/Caryn Casaz Run from the Heart at 9 a.m.

Saturday, May 17, in Hines Park will do so with memories of tragedies that took the lives of three young women.

Casaz, on the fast track at Ford Motor Co., was struck by a hit-and-run driver in Hines Park while running near Merriman Hollow. A talented Illinois-born runner, Casaz was training for the 1995 Free Press Marathon.

The 3.1-mile run and walk, as well as registration, will be at Merriman Hollow in Edward Hines Park.

Entry fee is $15. Registration information is also available by phone. Call MADD at (313)721-8181. All entrants will receive a red and white silk-screened T-shirt memorializing Casaz and Amy Alexander.

Awards will go to the top thee finishers in each age category, and to the overall male and female winners.

Alexander and her friend, Frances Roehl, were both killed by a drunken motorist in 1990 while driving in Hines Park.

Lake Charlevoix training camp: All fitness and age levels are welcome to attend a running, walking, cross-training and exercise camp Aug. 26-30 at Camp Sea Gull Lodge on Lake Charlevoix in northern Michigan.

Beginners and future Olympians alike will work to reach their personal best. On tap are daily workouts, seminars, video coaching and instructional clinics. Also offered at the adult camp will be organized runs; fitness and weight training; race walking; and cross-training activities including water sports.

Camp director Jeanne Bocci says there also will be nutritional and healthy weight-reduction education; biomechanics; speed and strength training; structured drill work for fitness and racing; motivational and mental training; and racing and competition strategy - "all in a beautiful" locale."

For more information, contact Jeanne Bocci, 1353 Grayton, Grosse Pointe Park 48230. Bocci can be reached by fax at (313) 886-2051.

Rocket Dog Ankle-Biter Trail Run: Set for 9 a.m. Sunday, May 18, this trail run showcases Michigan spring scenery at its finest. The venue is Island Lake Recreation Area, a state park half a mile south of I-96 east off Kensington Road.

Entry fee on race day is $10, $12 with a T-shirt. There'll be camping and a campfire on Saturday night. Race organizers promise "high quality Rocket Dog apparel" will be available for purchase.

For more information, call (810) 348-5866 and ask for race director Jim Betz, who warns, "Trail puppies beware. This is a tough one." Fax race results and running news to "Or

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Fighting skin cancer

Many years ago, that sun-baked look was "in." People flocked to the beaches with their baby oil and bikinis. Nowadays, you're more likely to see sunscreen, umbrellas and paler bodies. Many people recognize the benefits in taking care of their skin and avoiding sun damage.

That's why the American Cancer Society and the Michigan Dermatological Society have teamed up to conduct free skin cancer screenings at many area locations on Wednesday, May 14. Local sites include St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, 16360 Hubbard in Livonia, where screenings will be offered 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Starkweather Center, 550 N. Holbrook in Plymouth, where screenings will be offered 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Screenings at both sites will be offered on a first come-first served basis.

For information on sites, call 1-800-925-2271 "Skin cancer is the most common cancer in America," said Dr. Helene Dombrowski, M.D., who will be one of the physicians conducting the screening on behalf of the Michigan Dermatological Society and the American Cancer Society. "Fortunately, in most cases, it can be treated successfully if detected early. The free screening programs can aid in the early detection of the dis-

The free screening consists of a painless visual examination of a suspicious area by a medical doctor specializing in dermatology. Participating physicians are volunteering their time and expertise. Participants in the screening are asked to have the area in question readily accessible for the doctor to examine.

"During last year's Skin Cancer Detection Day, thousands of people were able to have screening: by dermatologists free of charge," said Cal Morgan, vice president for the American Cancer Society. "Most were able to put their fear of having skin cancer to rest. For others, the screening may have been the early diagnosis that saved their lives. Across the state, almost 2,000 people were presumptively diagnosed with a form of skin cancer or precancerous skin condition. Because of this screening, they were referred for followup care."

The intent of the two organizations is to help everyone learn the basics of sun protection and awareness of early warning signs of skin cancer. Individuals should look for the "A-B-C-Ds" in a wart or mole: A - asymmetrical shape; B - border irregularity; C - color of the growth is not uniform; and D - diameter greater than 6 millimeters.

Studies have shown that sun protection is key in ayoiding skin cancer. The American Cancer Society recommends a sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor, SPF, of 15 or greater. This means it offers your body 15 times its own protection from

Stroke risk

Henry Ford Hospital has launched a two-year clinical study aimed at preventing repeat strokes in African Americans.

African Americans have more than double the risk of a stroke than Caucasians. And individuals who have suffered one stroke are at high risk for having a second one.

The study compares two medications to see which is more effective in preventing a second stroke in African Americans. The medications are aspirin and ticlopidine, both of which are approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for the treatment of stroke. Both medications act as an anti-clotting agent, preventing platelets from join-

"Both medications have been found to reduce the risk of another stroke in patients who've had a first stroke," said Dr. Harry Mansbach, M.D., principal investigator of the study and a staff neurologist at Henry Ford. "But this is the first major study to compare one drug against the other in a specific targeted population."

While ticlopidine appears to reduce stroke better than aspirin in certain groups including African Americans, it is a far more expensive drug and it may cause a major side effect in some individuals - the reduction of white cells, which prevent infection.

The national multi-center trial, called the African American Antiplatelet Stroke Prevention Study, is sponsored by the National Institutes of Health and coordinated at Chicago's Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

To participate, a person must have had a stroke caused by a blood clot within 90 days of joining the study. During the study, participants will receive one of the two drugs, which will be provided free of charge during the study. Participants will receive regular examinations at no extra cost.

More than 500,000 Americans suffer a stroke each year. Stroke ranks as the third leading cause of death in the country after heart disease and cancer, killing about 150,000 Americans each year.

elen and Floyd Morris took up a vegetarian diet about six years ago after Floyd had a heart attack. "He was having quite a bit of trouble with his cholesterol," Helen, 63, said, adding that their diet is strictly vegetarian except for an occasional plate of walleye during fishing

The Redford residents are among about 12 million Americans who consider themselves vegetarian, which is about twice as much from 10 years ago. The Morrises have sworn off pizza, hamburgers and typical meals that are geared around a main entree of meat. They've stocked their shelves and nourished their bodies with vegetables, fruits and whole grains instead.

"It's harder (eating a vegetarian diet) until you get used to it," said Helen, adding that she and Floyd, who is 66 and also a diabetic, eat a lot of stir fry, lentil soup and bread. Since they went to a meatless diet Floyd's cholesterol has dropped.

*My cholesterol went up, but that's because I eat ice cream," Helen said. "You feel a lot better eating vegetarian, especially if you exercise, too. We try to keep ourselves fit."

After six years, Helen said, she can't imagine going off the vegetarian diet. In fact, she said, meals with meat are unappealing and seem overly greasy to her

More and more of us are pushing aside meat entrees and reaching for veggies. And we're doing it for a lot of different reasons.

Some vegetarians are stricter than others, refusing milk, cheese and eggs. Others consider themselves vegetarian and sometimes eat chicken and fish.

Research has shown that eating a vegetarian diet cuts down on heart disease, stroke, diabetes, cancer and other diseases. Other studies show that a not-quite vegetarian menu may be the best way of all. Research studies often include Seventh Day Adventists, whose religion discourages eating meat, fish or eggs. However, followers tend to place family and religion high in their daily routine, which studies have shown has a good influence on health,

Seventh Day Adventists Dr. Arthur Weaver, a surgeon who retired in February, and his wife, Natalie, a nutritionist, have been végetarian all their lives. "There's tremendous benefits from being vegetarian - the most significant is there's a significant reduction in the heart attack rate," said Weaver, adding that there's also 50 percent less cancer among veg-

"There's hundreds of compounds in fruits and vegetables that have anti-cancer activity." Also, fruit and vegetables help reduce breast cancer, the most common cancer among women, according to a November 1996 article in the American Cancer Society publication, CA. Likewise, Americans can reduce prostate cancer rates by lowering meat. consumption and increasing vegetables in the diet.

Plants top the list

The American Cancer Society recommends to choose most of your foods from plants first. Eat five or more servings of fruit and vegetables every day and include fruits and vegetables in every meal. Choose beans as an alternative to meat. Keeping a low caloric diet is easier eating vegetarian,

"There's no question that vegetarians live longer, probably in the neighborhood of seven to 10 years longer," said Weaver, who is widely known in the metropolitan Detroit area for his successful smoking cessation classes. "We're all going to die of something, but you'll probably do it a little later and feel better while you're getting older" when you eat a vegetarian diet, he added.

For generations, the alarm button went off for parents when their children announced: "I'm only going to eat a vegetarian diet." Parents often worried how their children were going to get enough protein and iron. Wouldthey have enough nutrients for their growing bodies?

Scientists believe that Americans get twice the amount of protein they need. In fact, too much protein has been linked to osteoporosis, kidney disease, calcium stones in the urinary tract and some cancers. Protein is built from amino acids from foods like beans, lentils, grains and vegetables, according to the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine. "As long as one's diet includes a variety of grains, legumes, and vegetables, protein needs are easily met."

"People don't understand that there is protein in everything," said Natalie Weaver.

Filling your body with enough iron on a vegetarian diet was another worry. But consider that there is iron in many fruits, vegetables and grains. One vitamin, however, B-12, is only available in meat and dairy products. Vegetarians can get B-12 from breakfast cereals, breads and fruit juices that are fortified. Vegetarians who worry they aren't getting enough B-12 often take a multivitamin that provides all they

Natalie Weaver noted that usually it's a good idea to slowly ease into a vegetarian diet. Add one or two vegetarian meals a week to your menu until you build up to a full vegetarian diet. "I think that when people switch from a meat to vegetarian diets sometimes they feel a bit of a letdown, because meats are a stimulating food," Arthur Weaver said. "When that animal died they are kicking out a lot of hormones."

Menus are lively

And don't feel your menu will be dull and spartan as a vegetarian. Natalie Weaver often holds vegetarian tasting demonstrations and cooking schools to show people the wide variety of meals that can be offered. "The only thing I can't make is probably a pot roast, or something else that would be a hunk of meat "she said, adding that she and her husband raised six children on a vegetarian diet. They also have 17 grandchildren who are vegetari-

Other benefits of following a vegetarian diet include having greater bone strength; lower blood pressure; less obesity; less expense in preparing meals; fewer problems with constipation and hemorrhoids; less chance of developing varicose veins; less exposure to toxins present in meat; conservation of the world's food supply; no danger of ingesting parasites, bacteria, carcinogens, or other toxic substances found in meat and "vegetarianism doesn't require the cruel treatment and slaughter of animals," according to the book, "Back to Eden" by Jethro Kloss.

"There's plenty of food around to feed the whole earth if we all stick to a vegetarian diet," Arthur Weaver said. Vegetarians, in the past, were considered oddballs, extremists who likely had their own gurus.

"Now it's kind of respected," Weaver said. "You can discover that food can be just as good."

Natalie Weaver added: "And once they become vegetarians they feel so much better. The main worry is the simple fact that a high-fat, high-protein diet is a cancer promoter and a vegetarian diet is a cancer inhibitor. People are plugging their arteries and getting their cancer when they can just as well be without it."

The Weavers have a mailing list of 6,000 people in metropolitan Detroit for their smoking cessation and nutrition programs. Call (313) 531-2179 for more informa-

Teen drug use demands honest approach

This is Chapter 9: "Teens Who Use Drugs," from Alice R. McCarthy's "Healthy Teens: Success in High School and Beyond." The book is available at Borders, Barnes & Noble and Waldenbooks.

Facing the Problem

One of the grander myths about the American family is that a family solves its own problems, quietly and effectively. A family is strong and support-go just the opposite route and find blame for the problem in every aspect of society except their own family and their teen. Getting a teen off drugs and keeping that teen off drugs regardless of the drug - is tough, graeling and often painful work.

Caring adults can either be involved on the upside to recovery or the downside to continued use. Those are the same options available for a teen using drugs.

Internet offers abundance of health information

Michigan's largest health care provider, Mercy Health Services, now has its own Web site which can be visited at http://www.mercyhealth.com.

The site features pages for most Michigan facilities and for all Iowa locations. The home page points to six main categories, including Who We Are, Community, What's New,

Career, and Locations. When you Click on Locations, you can travel to Iowa or parts of Michigan to find information about that particular facility or you can link to local events. The home page also provides information on University of Detroit-

Mercy classes. Mercy Health Services developed its site to provide customers, providers, community leaders, and employees with the lates company information, including services and products Specific addresses for nearby Mercy facilities include: Mercy Health Services, Farmington Hills, at http://www.mercyhealth.com; Amicare Home Healthcare, Novi, http://www.mercyhealth.com/amicare/;

St. Joseph Mercy Health System, Ann Arbor, at http://www.sjmh.com; and Mercy Hospital, Detroit, http://www.mercyhealth.com/detroit/.

Mercy Health Services, based in Farmington Hills, is the second largest Catholic health care system in the United States. A continuum of services is provided within the system, which operates primarily in the states of Iowa and Michigan. The system operates or is affiliated with 39 hospitals, 200 clinics, 17 long-term care nursing facilities, 23 home health care offices, and 10 hospice offices.

The medical blues

Speaking of health care, Blue Cross Blue Shield and Blue Care Network of Michigan now have a site on the Web available to all Internet users...

the body by sections, muscles and bones, and the arterial system.

The health and medical resources link provides a list of sites for health associations including Alzheimer's, AMA, Red Cross, National Institutes of Health, World Health Organization and several more. Health topic links include AIDS, aneurysm, allergies/asthma, cancer, diabetes, pediatric rheumatology and first aid.

The health and medicine section has links to the Doctor's Guide to the Internet, Healthwise, and others. And there are also links to Healthy Doc, Go Ask Alice, HomeArts, Interactive Patient, The Tooth Fairy, Virtual Health Library, and the Virtual Hospital. This is one area where given the choice between virtual and the real McCoy, I'd choose the virtual hospital.

Return to the home page again and launch off "Something for Everyone" and you will find links to Weight Watchers discounts, community events, to the questions above, the more you need to know. It is not normal for a teen to be out all night. sleep during the day, and then be unexpectedly frantic to go out the next night. When you think. about drugs and your teen, think objectively and coolly.

Denial

Most people with a drug problem will deny it. Generally, the greater the problem, the greater the denial. For this reason, prying facts about drug use out of teens is usually not very productive. Most people have more success presenting their teen with a list of objective behaviors that point to a problem that they want to solve with their teen. Sometimes the problem is somebreak. Stick to facts and ask your teen to respond. If you are uncomfortable with such a confrontation, contact a local crisis center or community health agency and ask what they think about your observations and how you might proceed. There may be an underlying depressive illness causing your teen to seek "selfmedication." A crisis center professional may be able to help you sort out facts, identify the problem, consider possible solutions, and then decide on what to do next.

Getting Help

The outcome of your discussion or discussions with your teen may lead you to seek professional help. For many people, it is tempting to seek psychological help for their teen. If you decide to go this route, make sure that the counselor or therapist knows that you are very concerned about your teen's drug use. Again, a few simple rules apply. It is difficult - some say impossible - to treat an active drug user. Many therapists will not diagnose or treat a teen until the drug use has stopped for at least a few months. Don't allow anyone who downplays drug use to treat your teen. The risk to your teen is too great. There is no psychological or medical solution that works in conjunction with

Many families seek a more complete answer to their teen's drug use at a hospital or drug treatment center. You should know that more and more hospitals and treatment centers are treating drug use on an outpatient basis. Hospitalization is increasingly being reserved for emergencies and detoxification. Cost is certainly a factor, but more important reasons for outpatient treatment are recent study results about the effectiveness of treating drug use.

Studies show that the number of hours a patient spent learning about their drug problem and recovery were the most significant factors in recovery. In other words, keeping a patient physithing else. Give your teen a -cally away from drugs is less important than the patient learning about their problem and how to recover, Of course, there are still many private institutions that provide inpatient care over a period of weeks or even months.

Choosing a treatment plan for your teen can be confusing. Treatment centers range in cost and amenities from the Salvation Army to the Betty Ford Clinic. Fortunately, your own community will probably have a fairly wide range of treatment centers. Talking with a trained drug and alcohol counselor, your religious leader, your doctor, or any adults you are comfortable with and trust will usually yield a solution that fits the problem your teen has. Depending on your teen's situation and condition, you may want to discuss treatment options with him or her. Your teen is not the first person who has had a drug prob-

Support for Your Teen

Drug use and alcoholism where or not you wish to calleither a disease - are both, in part, defined by relapse, returning to abuse. Few people seek help for their own problem, fewer people are drug-free one year after treatment, and very, very few people are drug-free for the rest of their lives. It is no surprise then, that the most effective treatment programs tend to focus on one day at a time. The other general trend in treatment and recovery programs is toward individual responsibility - for behavior toward one's self and others and developing a work ethic that includes practical as well as spiritual matters. At the core, good treatment centers realize the need to change how a person thinks about his or her drug use, whether that means facing the objective facts of how their use affected them, or challenging how the user things about drug

Effective treatment centers always involve the family of the patient. Families need to know what they can do to help, but probably more important, families need to show up for their teen. Recovery is frightening and difficult for anyone, but many families are often blind to the power of the simplest kinds of help they can provide. Showing up for family sessions, talking with counselings, and listening to your teen don't require much effort, but often have a striking effect on the person in recovery.

Finally, you need to have hope and strength and the teen will get help. Any drug user in recovery will tell you that each single day of recovery is hard-won and a blessing. Don't give up on your teen. A day clean and sober, whether that is day one or many, many days later, is the only real way to a useful and productive life for most drug users.

Condos arise in 3rd phase at Polo Fields

If the clubhouse, pool and golf course don't bring buyers to the Fairways residential phase at the Polo Fields in Scio Township, maybe the Ann Arbor schools will.

Or, perhaps, easy freeway. access to jobs back in this neck of the woods will prove to be a draw. It's a quick drive.

Then, there are the detached site condominiums, themselves.

Seven floor plans range in price from $218,900 for a two story of 1,969 square feet with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $281,900 for a 2,785-squarefoot two story with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

"I think what has been selling is people's impression of our quality," said Michael E. Berger, vice president of BRG Homes and BRG Custom Homes in Farmington Hills.

Prospects who walk through the company's custom model in the Ponds Phase at the Polo Fields, where prices start at about $300,000, certainly are impressed, Berger said.

"They're in awe. They see it and say, 'This will work.'"

Buyers of the 22 condominium units or one of the dozen platted sites still available at the upscale Ponds get a social membership to the clubhouse and access to a restaurant, exercise equipment and outdoor pool.

A golf membership is available for an initiation fee of $7,500, plus monthly dues of $180 for a single, $200 for couple and $220 for family.

"The location is great," said Kathy Keenmon, sales manager. "You're two minutes from I-94. 30 minutes from metro airport."

"It's a park-like atmosphere with a lot of open space," Berger said. "It's really nice and wooded back here, too."

The large-sized rooms and traffic pattern of the floor plans also receive good reviews, Keenmon added.

All of the floor plans in the Fairways include at base price fireplace, two-car garage, firstfloor laundry, basement, a $500 lighting allowance, carpeting throughout and all new appliances - refrigerator, range, dishwasher, microwave, washer and

The Pinehurst, a two-story of 2,417 square feet, will feature a first-floor master suite with pan ceiling, separate tub and shower with seat, dual sink vanity and plenty of storage space - two wall closets, a walk-in closet and a linen closet.

The main living area also will include a great room with cathedral ceiling, formal dining room and kitchen/nook.

Three other bedrooms and a full bath are upstairs. The model also will contain a 300-squarefoot honus room upstairs that can be used as a fifth bedroom, computer room, media room or

Getting ready for construction of custom home

Some readers have asked me to follow a project from the beginning to illustrate the entire process with its inherent ups and downs. I thought it was a great idea, so in addition to discussing a series of ever-changing topics related to architecture and construction we will follow the design-and construction of a "custom" home which is on the boards at my office.

Three months or so back Ibegan reporting on the progress of this project, and I will continue to have monthly updates as the project progresses.

Well, the big day has finally come! After months of thinking, drawing, looking and talking, the big shovel finally goes in the ground. Although the stake out was done early last week, the moving of dirt is really the beginning of the construction process. Block work is supposed to start on Monday, provided the mason can remember which Monday I am referring to!

Everybody's time is tight, so I have scheduled way in advance with all of the sub-contractors—but even that won't work every time because they can get held up or the quantities required can change—it can even rain! Acts of God are hard to schedule and so are employees who fail to come to work. The construction process doesn't work the same was the the automobile production line

After months of thinking, drawing, looking and talking, the big shovel finally goes in the ground. Although the stake out was done early last week, the moving of dirt is really the beginning of the construction process.

The first step in the process in highly accurate: The surveyors take the exact dimensions of the house as found in the architectural drawings and convert those to full scale on the site. The process is pretty exacting and carefully done.

The next step, however, uses very crude machinery to cut into the earth. With the exception of the offset staking, all accuracy is erased by the power shovel. The next step is the installation of the footings, which are fairly accurate but not exceptionally so. The construction of the walls, however, is highly accurate, and the work of the carpenters is influenced significantly by the accuracy of the masons.

Block basements are much straighter and more level than poured-wall basements. The downside is that most block walls are not as strong as poured walls. This has been overcome here by solid grout filling of the cores and the use of steel reinforcing at 48" oncenter (vertical) and the use of two continuous bond beams.

This wall perform

every bit as well as a concrete wall.

Basement waterproofing has to be installed before footing drains are installed. After this is complete, pea gravel is set below the future floor. Underground plumbing and the first-floor steel has to be set prior to the basement floor being poured. This steel helps to brace the walls during the backfill, which, in this case, is sand (it helps the basement remain dry as well as reducing the load on the block wall).

One of the interesting parts of this process is the sequencing of many different sub-trades and the interweaving of these processes. I am reminded of that old song about how "the ankle bone is connected to the knee bone; the knee bone is connected to the ..." and on and on. I have also

..." and on and on. I have also found that the people whom I have hired to do the work have been amazingly helpful in educating me about the process and the order in which work ought to be performed. Perhaps that is why I have hired these people in the first place.

At this point, contracts and, occasionally, money deposits have been signed with the mechanical, plumbing and electrical contractors. All final decisions have been made regarding fixtures and finishes as well as the furnace type. In the end, the house wound up having three furnaces, of which the third is a Lennox Complete Heat. This furnace provides both hot air as well as hot water, which will be used for both domestic purposes (instead of a traditional hot water heater). And it will heat the tiled floor of the master bathroom! Pricing for the system was quite reasonable, and we are all excited about the heated bath floor.

Long-lead items have been ordered, or at least it is known when such items must be ordered in order to have them on the site in time for installation. For example, the mason must have the prefabricated fireplace on hand when the masonry chimney is being built. The windows must be on site as the walls go up, etc.

I have to say that I enjoy the "bean-counting" that is part of the act of building this kind of house, and I hope that any of the readers out there who are building their own houses are also having a great time as well!

Preparing the soil for summer garden

By LEE REICH FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Good gardens start from the ground up. Now, before'a single seed is dropped into the ground, is the time to pull back any winter mulch, and to fertilize, adjust the acidity and

Although mulches such as leaves and straw protect and enrich the soil, they also insulate it, keeping it cold in spring.

In cold soil, seeds rot rather than germinate, and roots of transplants shiver ratherthan grow. Pull any mulch aside to expose the soil to the warm, spring sun. Cart the mulch over to your compost pile or set it aside to put back on the soil once the weather turns hot.

Fertilizer is needed to replace nutrients harvested as vegetables and fruits, or otherwise lost from the soil since last fall. How much is needed? Ideally, a soil test supplies this information (Call the Cooperative Extension Service for soil-testing information.) As a general guideline, however, sprinkle about 3 pounds of a fertilizer containing 5 percent nitrogen (such as 5-10-5) per 100

This one fertilizer will supply nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, the three elements needed in greatest quantities by plants. Their respective percentages are indicated by the three numbers on the label. Adjust the rate accordingly for fertilizers containing more or less than 5 percent nitro-

If you are an organic gardener and want to avoid synthetic fertilizers, fortify your soil with nitrogen from soybean meal or cottonseed meal, at 3 pounds per 100 square feet. Wood ashes, applied at a half-pound per 100 square feet, supplies potassium. Compost or manure also provide nutrients.

The final phase of spring soil preparation is tillage, a practice that uproots weeds, and smooths and aerates the soil.

Two rules for tillage are: not too much, and not too soon.

"Not too much" - The objective in tilling a garden is not to reduce the soil to fine powder. A range in particle sizes leaves a good balance of pore sizes for the air and water needed by plant roots. Control the urge to repeatedly run your power tiller up and down the rows. Nothing beats tillage with a shovel and a rake for tempering the tendency to overwork the soil.

"Not too soon" - Wait for the soil to dry somewhat before tilling. Working a wet soil, especially one that is rich in clay, ruins the soil structure, making the soil good for sculpture but poor for plant growth. Squeeze a handful of soil. It should crumble apart easily. If if wads up, let the soil dry more before tilling; if it feels rock hard, a little moisture is needed to soften it.

Not only should you avoid tilling your soil when it is wet, but do not even walk, bicycle, or drive on it then. Instead of "Keep Off The Grass," "Keep Off The Dirt."

Larger pots encourage root system

By James E. Walters Special Writer

(AP) - Is it smart to buy bedding plants already in flower? And how good are those six-packs for transplanting?

Most bedding plant annuals are currently being bred to withstand transplanting in bloom. However, most annuals will come into full bloom faster if existing blooms are pinched off before transplanting.

. Most experts recommend buying 4-to-6inch pots rather than the more common six-

They say the larger size provide a better root system to help the plant adapt when transplanted. Such pots are considerably more expensive, of course. And plants from seeds are even more economical than transplants of any size, but take more time and Experienced gardeners use this rule of thumb if purchasing six-pack transplants: look for compact, healthy plants that are just starting to show bud color. That way you can be sure the label's color description is reasonably close and you avoid much of the transplant shock.

If there is a choice, select six-packs with the largest individual compartments since this allows development of larger root sys-

Look for bedding plants that are well-proportioned with stocky stems. Avoid plants that are leggy or limp.

Leaves should have a rich, green color. If the foliage appears mottled or if the edges of the leaves are curled, the plants may be suffering from pests.

Another gauge: if the lower leaves are turning yellow, it could be because the soil the plants were grown in got too dry. When the soil mixture has been allowed to dry out completely, the plant's root system can be permanently damaged and the plants may never flourish.

To minimize stress from sun, transplant on an overcast day or late in the afternoon: If the soil in packs or pots is not moist, drench it thoroughly. Loosen the ground to a depth of 6 to 8 inches and dig a hole about the size of the root ball.

Hold the bedding plant by its root ball, not by the stems or leaves, before setting it in the hole. Securely tamp the soil around the plant, making sure that the ground level and soil level of the plant are at the same height. Then thoroughly drench the bed, watering; slowly, evenly and deeply.

For the next few weeks, keep the soil evenly moist by watering when the surface begins to feel dry. During one of the waterings, apply fertilizer according to the product's label. To minimize watering needs and keep, down weeds, an organic mulch is a good idea.

There are two main reasons why some flowering annuals are easier to care for than others: They don't require regular removal of fading blooms to stimulate new ones (deadheading) or they don't need pruning to avoid becoming spindly.

Prepping your pool for peak performance

(NAPS) - Here are some questions commonly asked by pool owners, answered by Dave Knoop, Olin Corporation's technical service expert and educational advisor to the National. Spa and Pool Institute.

Q: After a long winter of not using your pool, what's the first thing you should do? A: Replace any parts that look damaged or worn.

Q: After the pool has been running for a few hours, is there anything else you should do?

A: Test and adjust your water chemistry. Many pool owners choose hth® and pace® pool care products to keep chlorine at an effective level. Proper water balance is essential to maintain a trouble-free pool.

Q: What is a shock treatment and why are pools shocked?

A: Contrary to their name, shock treatments have nothing to do with electricity. Shock treatments shock the pool with an extra dose of chlorine to remove impurities or bacteria. Shock treatments prevent the formation of compounds responsible for the single largest complaint from bathers - eye irritation and obnoxious odors. Shock treat using sock it®, super sock it®, hth super shock IM or pace® shock treatments.

Q: Does the weather affect 'your pool?

A: Definitely. Rainstorms, wind or long periods of prolonged heat encourage the growth of bacteria and algae. Always consider the weather. For weather updates from the Olin Pool Guy tune to your local radio station. For literature on chlorine and your free poolside fun pack, you can call the Olin Pool Care Hotline at 1-800-POOL-987 or visit Olin on the Internet at http:// waterworks.olin.com

Q: What's the significance of the pH level?

A: PH is the measurement of the water's acidity and should be maintained between 7.2 and 7.8.

Q: How often should I back wash my filter?

A: Back washing a filter is dependent on how much dirt is picked up on the filter media. When your filter is clean check the filter inlet pressure gauge, mark it or write this number down. Check the pressure each time you test your pool water. When the pressure increases by 5 to 7 psi or by the amount in your filter manufacturer's operating manual it is time to back wash.

If the water appears hazy or dull you should also check the filter to assure that it is operating properly. When back washing be sure that your back wash water does not go into a stream, river or lake and don't back wash onto your neighbors property. If you have questions of where your back wash water goes, check with your local department of natural resources.

Q: If I have some granular chlorine left over when winter is just around the corner, what can I do with that prod-

A: A heavy dose of chlorine is one of the best ways to winterize your swimming pool. Dissolve your leftover chlorine in water, always add the chlorine to the water, and put it in your pool. A dose of 15 to 30 ppm will keep a covered pool free of algae throughout the winter. If you have to store some chemicals over the winter be sure that the containers are closed and store in a cool, dry, well ventilated

Q: Is there any free information available on pool

A: For a free booklet on pool care or a free pail guard to protect children, call the Olin Hotline while supplies last. For instance, a pail guard is a special plastic insert that is snapped into the top of a large pail to prevent the possibility of an infant toppling in.

Graceful tradition in Plymouth's prized Beacon Estates

12436 Duxbury Court Plymouth E. of Beck Road S. of North Territorial RE/MAX on the trail $294,500

Deep within Beacon Estates on a quiet court you will find this classic colonial enfolded in Tush perennial. landscaping.

Impressive circular drive, column porch and bay windows greet you upon your approach.

Beyond the entry is a ceramic foyer and with curved stairs. The traditional 2,900+ square-foot floor plan is a Plymouth favorite and offers four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths. The first floor offers an 18- x 13-foot formal living room, 13x 12-foot dining room, bright 12- x 11foot library, 29- x 15-foot family room with floor-to-ceiling fieldstone fireplace and cathedral ceiling, 13- x 12-foot kitchen, 12- x 11-foot nook and spacious laundry/ mud room.

Upstairs you will find four generous bedrooms, including an 18- x 16-foot master suite with updated bath and walk-in closet:

Rounding off this home is a 25-x 21foot garage, deck, sprinklers, security system and built-in speakers.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"THE BENEFITS OF KEEPING YOUR HOME IN TOP SHAPE"

Everyone knows that it is important to have your home looking good when the time comes to sell. It is, however, difficult to think about spending money to fix up a home that you are getting ready to leave. Many homeowners feel that they have already spent enough on this house and the next owner can be responsible for any needed improvements. As understandable as these feelings are, an owner often makes a big mistake with this attitude. If your home is in top shape when you prepare to sell it, here are some benefits you can expect:

ENTHUSIASTIC LISTING AGENT

All Realtors® will provide the basic services needed to bring your home to the attention of potential buyers. A good appearing, well maintained home can, however, bring more buyers to your door because the increased enthusiasm of the listing agent about your home spreads to other agents. This begins an initial burst of quick showings which enlarge the number of agents who have seen your home and their enthusiasm encourages additional showings.

LESS TIME ON THE MARKET

Good showing activity will lead to getting an offer more quickly. Buyers will be more inclined to make an offer on your home because they won't be worried about costly repairs and reflectoration. Realtors® know that there is a lot of interest in a cettain home and this information encourages their buyers to make an offer before they lose the house to someone else.

BETTER NEGOTIATING STRENGTH A very attractive home could have two or more buyers bidding on the house at the same time. It is not unusual for their "bidding war" to result in a sale price that is actually higher than the original asking price. Multiple offers put you in the driver's seat when negotiating the sale. If a buyer offers less than your asking price, he or she usually likes to point to some shortcoming of the house that precludes an offer in a higher amount. If you have your home in top shape, you take this negotiating ploy away from the buyer, thus strengthening your hand.

ADVICE: Spend the time and money necessary to put your home in good shape before putting it on the market.

High Tech World Welcomes Liberal Arts Grads

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Are you a liberal arts grad wondering if there's any way---short of returning to college for a computer science degree---to jump on the high tech bandwagon?

Hiring managers and recruiters say there myriad opportunities in the world of technology for liberal arts graduates and indeed, a wide variety of individuals who didn't major in computer science while in college.

Marketing communications, for example, is one career area where experience in the field, coupled with computer and Internet skills acquired on the job or at home, is sufficient to garner positions in forms that serve technology clientele.

Jenny Morgan, vice president of public relations for KSK Communications Ltd., a full service marketing communications firm in Vienna, Virginia, says that even for her firm which primarily services high tech clients, a technical degree is not a high priority for staff members: For positions ranging from account executive to copywriter, Morgan says, "Understanding marketing is the top priority. I look first for someone with business to business marketing communications experience. Writing and editing skills are also critical."

recruits, she says, "Typically, the people we hire have journalism, marketing communications, or liberal arts degrees, not technical degrees."

Suzi Lathrop, director of client services in Los Angeles for Bernard Hodes, a New York headquartered recruitment advertising firm with 47 offices nationwide, says she too places a high priority on marketing background than technical credentials when hiring people to work as account coordinators with technology clients. Like Morgan, Lathrop says communications, business and marketing degrees are most common among those hired.

This focus on non-technical skills doesn't mean computer skills aren't important, in fact, Morgan says, "If people want to get a job in marketing communications today, they better be comfortable with technology."

How "comfortable?" "Someone must be able to use the basic business packages like Microsoft Word and Excel that are out there," say Morgan. "We're also looking for people who understand technology trends such as Year 2000 issues and what's happening on the World Wide Web. It's also important to have from technology by certain types of business-

Lathrop says she too looks for people to be computer literate. Since staff assigned to work with high tech companies typically have to deal with a lot of technical jargon, she also looks for people with good listening and communication skills, who are quick learners.

Increasingly, say both Lathrop and Morgan, it's essential for people in marketing communications to be comfortable navigating and utilizing the Web. "A good understanding of the Internet is key," says Lathrop. "It's an important research tool for us. We can use it to gather statistics. We can look at the Web sites of our clients' competitors and identify how other companies are using the Web."

"The key is to be able to use the Web as one of the many tools in your marketing arsenal," adds Morgan. "We also need to be able to use the Web for research and for sending and receiving e-mail."

Is it important that someone's computer or Internet skills are acquired in a classroom setting? Not for Morgan. "We actually prefer people who have picked up their technical knowledge and expertise in a business set-

As to the degrees Morgan looks for in new an understanding of the benefits garnered ting," says Morgan, "Classroom knowledge alone isn't usually adequate."

The customer support and help desk function is another area of expanding opportunity related to technology that doesn't require a technical degree. As more companies computerize and populate the desks of their employees with PCs, the demand for staff in this area has grown dramatically.

According to a number of recruiters who place and hire people for these jobs, technical expertise is important, but customer service skills can be even more critical when hiring decisions are made. This can be particularly true for internal help desk positions because companies often offer computer-based training to teach new help desk staff how to assist users of their particular software. What can't be taught as easily, say those hiring, is patience and the type of interpersonal skills needed to be effective in a customer support role. That's why those are among the traits employers look for when screening candidates for these jobs.

WORKING LIFE: How to Avoid Having to Sue Your Lawyer

By Deborah L. Jacobs, Chronicle Features

With the recent rash of workplace lawsuits, more people are becoming distilusioned with lawyers. Some who start out suing the boss wind up in court confronting the very lawyers who handled their case."

There are many reasons why that can happen. Occasionally, the case starts with an unscrupulous lawyer who promises the moon, or a client who can't accept the disappointment of losing. Far more often, the attorney isn't knowledgeable enough about employment law and makes a major mistake. One common source of errors is not submitting a claim with the appropriate state or federal agency, says Tanya Stames, a malpractice lawyer in Emeryville, Calif. and author of the book, "Mad at Your Lawyer" (Noto Press, 1996). Before bringing a federal discrimination case, for instance, workers must file a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Deadlines are short (depending where you live, they may be as little as 180 days after the discrimination). A sloopy lawyer can easily miss the cutoff. Another recurring blunder is not pursing all the obvious allegations, Starnes says. For example, a 55-year-old African American woman who's dyslexic might be able to sue for discrimination based on age, race, sec or disability. A lawyer who mentions only one of these in court papers might be negligent.

Even seasoned lawyers can make tatal slips, though--as William Petrusky found out. After getting laid off from his management job at American Cyanamid, Petrusky hired a reputable New Jersey lawyer (but not an employment law pro) to handle his federal age-discrimination suit against the company. When Petrusky lost that case in 1988, his lawyer sued him

Petrusky consulted two more lawyers, then fired back with a state court malpractice claim against the first one. The essence: Lawyer No. 1 didn't take the necessary sleps to call a key witness-one of Petrusky's former supervisors-at the trial, As a result, Petrusky argued, he lost the chance to refute some of the company's complaints about his performance. This time, a jury sided with Pertrusky. It said he was entitled to $256,000-what the state jury thought a federal jury would have awarded Petrusky if his original lawyer had done the right thing. With interest going back to 1984, when the age-discrimination case was filed, the total came to $484,312,

But the story isn't over, since his case is now on appeal. Petrusky, who took out a second mortgage on his house to raise the $45,000 he's shelled out for legal expenses, so far hasn't collected a cent. Since leaving American Cyanamid 14 years ago, he's been a marketing consultant, but never made his way back into the corporate workplace.

What can other workers learn from Petrusky's experience? Interview former clients and watch lawyers in the courtroom before you hire them, advises Petrusky, now 67. Just because they're smart, doesn't mean they know how to try a case." While a clever, conscientious lawyer could conceivably tackle workplace issues, my own preference would be for an employment law specialist. Too often, attorneys with no expertise in the field think they can cash in on this sometimes lucrative pursuit. There's a risk, then, that they; il accept cases they're not qualified to handle.

Whoever you hire, it's best not to take a backseat in the case. Hilton Stein, of Montille, N.J., who represents Petrusky in his malpractice suit, encourages clients to keep abreast of everything that's going on (including deadlines), ask to see copies of court papers before they're filed, and be an "active participant" in all decisions.

One of the most important is whether or not to accept a substantial settlement offer. Lawyers gambling on a huge verdict (and the publicity that goes with it) might be tempted to turn the offer down. But a worker who rejects it "may never have another opportunity to recover his or he losses," Stein says. Given the risks--and the lawyer's vested interest--it's a good idea to get a second opinion.

Though most lawyers will gladly give a consultation at this late stage, it's a rare breed of lawyer who'll represent you in a suit against a lellow attorney. You'll find a directory of malpractice specialists in the book, "If You Want to Sue a Lawyer," by Kay Ostberg, It's available for $10 from HALT, an organization of Americans for legal reform, at (202) 347-9600.

Deborah Jacobs welcomes letters from readers and will address topics of general interest in this column. Minivan Safety: Think Ford first with the 1998 Windstar

By Anne Fracassa Avanti NewsFeatures

The very first thing you'll notice about the 1998 Ford Windstar is its wonderful, comfortable ride. It's quiet and you'll barely feel a bump in the road — even roads as cold-patch- and pothole-laden as they are here in southeastern Michigan.

And for a seven-passenger minivan as large as this one, the EPA mileage rating is pretty good: 17 in the city, 23 on the highway.

There are some really neat innovative features on the new Windstar, too, like a panoramic convex mirror that lets you see every passenger and a tip-and-slide driver's seat that allows access to the second row of seating.

But what you won't find on the 1998 Ford Windstar is a fourth door. It's not even an option. At a time when another Big Three automaker — Chrysler — is giving the fourth door away free, Ford doesn't have a minimum with an available fourth door. Incredible.

The upshot is that all you lovel Ford owners will have to weit until at least

The upshot is that all you loyal Ford owners will have to wait until at least 1999, which seems like a long way away, to get that important fourth door. Between now and then, Ford must figure out whether the extra door will be standard, or an option. Hmmm ... something to think about.

But let's get back to this new Windstar, the one you can buy right now in Ford's showrooms. If safety features for the family van are the driving force at Ford, no stone has been left unturned with these wheels. We can count on 4-wheel anti-lock brakes, dual air bags, knee bolsters, a front crumple zone, side impact intrusion beams and a sliding door safety lock. And available as an option is all-speed traction control on some models.

Back to that panoramic convex mirror thing. It's offered on a preferred equipment package that's pricey, but the mirror is really a great tool to have when children are strapped into the back seats. The mirror is located in the overhead console.

The National Highway Transportation Administration (NHTSA) rates Windstar as "5 star." Five stars indicated the best protection for vehicles in the same weight class; the level of crash protection in a head-on collision.

'It allows a wide-angle view of all passengers and even can be used to double-check right and left lanes during lane changes. One added benefit: When one kid says the other one hit them — you'll know exactly who hit who.

The 1998 Windstar has neater lines and a contoured (no pun intended) front. It's really pretty on the outside, especially with its flowing lines and rounded corners.

The inside has been improved as well. There are second- and third-row head restraints on the seats, a new overhead console on select models, new seat fabrics and adjustable shoulder belts for second-row passengers.

Instrumentation is simple. It's all analog, is laid out well, easy to reach and operate and perfect for anyone who hates to take their eyes off the road — even for a second.

The odometer, trip odo and gear shift indicator resemble something you'd have seen in the 1960s. But, in all fairness, some people just can't stand change.—like seen in the 1960s. But, in all fairness, some people just can't stand change — like my mom, who's 76 years young. She turned in her leased 1995 Sable a few months ago to get a brand new one. And she still complains she can't operate See FORD WINDSTAR, Next Page every function like she could on her "old"

Another neat innovation is the Family Entry System. It takes the sting out of not having the fourth door, if nothing else. The driver's seat tips and slides out of the way to allow easy access to the second row of seats from the driver's side.

It's really neat. A regular door length on the Windstar had been 47.5 inches. The door length is now 53.4 inches, which allows ample space for a kid to squeeze out of. The door has been redesigned to allow plenty of clearance to open in parking lots and in an average-sized garage.

About the engine. I already said it was quiet. You've got two choices: The entry-level 3.0 liter or the 3.8-liter V6 with 200 horsepower. Gotta go with the the 3.8. It's got plenty of power to merge you quickly onto that freeway. I was impressed with the mileage more than anything.

The 3.0-liter Windstar costs $19,665 base, so if bucks rule, the 3.0-liter model will do. But go with the 3.8 if you can.

The Windstar is also comfortable. I drove the test van close to 500 miles and never felt fatigued. The driver's chair is really comfy and includes armrests on the right side. Even the seat belts were a breeze to hook

Speaking of quiet, you could drive on the freeway (with the windows rolled up, of course) and still hear the person sitting the farthest away. That says a lot about the interior noise level of the Windstar. There isn't much, so you don't have to scream to be

The Windstar is also easy to get into and out of It's got a lower step that makes running boards unnecessary. Even in a dress and heels it was easy for me and my two girls and my mom to step in and step out.

Worth a mention is the fact that the National Highway Transportation Administration (NHTSA) rates Windstar as "5 star." Five stars indicated the best protection for vehicles in the same weight class; the level of crash protection in a head-on collision.

What this means is that the government rated the Windstar as a safe minivan, one that gives a high level of protection during a crash, as compared with minivans that were similar in weight.

All in all, the 1998 Ford Windstar is a fine minivan and a great people mover, especially for busy families with hectic schedules.

Writing a classified ad that gets results-whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise-is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific Information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifleds. What would you like to know about the Item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

2. Include the price, Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those Items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys Indicate that many people. don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in-kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your mon-

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your Item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, It is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.
