Young challenger takes on opponents

By MARIE CHESTNEY

May 19 was a busy day for the five Livonia residents seeking two four-year terms on the Livonia Board of Education.

First came an hourlong interview at the Observer offices, then an hourlong question-and-answer forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

The two sessions, just two hours apart, should have been similar in terms of content. But the Observer interview was vastly more colorful. What made the differ-

Kasper, who is graduating June 4 from Stevenson High, had views which differed substantially from those given by the other four candidates.

For example: Candidates Jane Teska, Patrick Nalley, Kirsten Galka and Dan Lessard all backed letting teachers serve on the board, But not Kasper. He called educators sitting on the board a "conflict of interest." ■ All four candidates backed both tax questions on the June 9 school election ballot. Not Kasper. He backed only one, a proposed one-year-only 0.25-mill tax increase to reconstruct the pool and pool areas at Franklin and Stevenson high schools. On the second, a proposed one-year-only 0.30-mill tax increase to partially demolish, enclose and remodel Bentley Center, he gave tepid support: "Bentley has served a wonderful life for many years, but the building is very old.

It's time to put the place out of its misery." The four candidates said Superintendent Ken Watson might now be sailing in troubled waters

A Michigan gay and lesbian civil rights organization is calling for an investigation of an unsigned campaign flier that attacks Wayne-Westland school board president Patricia Brown.

Jeffrey Montgomery, president of the Detroit-based Triangle Foundation, called on Wayne-Westland

Superintendent Duane Moore in a Wednesday letter to provide leadership "by publicly denouncing these attacks and calling for an investigation of the people responsible for the fliers, so that they may be held responsible and accountable,"

Montgomery said the flier's anonymity violates state campaign laws that require attribution.

Even critics of a school district policy that protects gay students, employees and board members from discrimination and harassment have condemned the flier.

"I feel that our side loses credibility and legitimacy when people put out literature like that," parent Gina Giannuzzi told the Observer. She and others opposed the district policy during a May 19 board meeting.

The superintendent also has received a five-page letter from Triangle Foundation attorney Rudolph Serra that supports the policy protecting students and employees from discrimination based on sexual orientation. Board members approved the policy in January.

Senate plan:

Show schools the money

By DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

The state Senate this week is expected to decide a bill that would pump $4 million into Wayne-Westland school district coffers, helping to avert a budget deficit.

The bill - pushed by state Sen. Loren Bennett - emerged intact Tuesday from the Senate Appropriations Committee, Bennett spokesman Bill Sullivan confirmed.

By Thursday, the legislation is xpected to be favored in a full Senate vote, Sullivan predicted.

That would send the bill to the state House, where state Reps. Eileen DeHart, D-Westland, and Tom Kelly, D-Wayne, will be pushing hard for its passage. Bennett, a Canton Township Republican who represents Wayne-Westland, touted his proposed legislation during a May 19 school board meeting, drawing applause from parents and educators.

The bill has since passed through the Senate's appropriations subcommittee and full appropriations committee on its way to the Senate floor.

The money would help Wayne-Westland school officials avert a budget deficit that could threaten school programs and services.

The district suffered a money crunch in the wake of Proposal A, a 1994 tax-slashing law. Wayne-Westland lost 10 mills of a tax rate that became linked to future school funding levels.

Bennett's measure would provide $4 million in additional state aid for 1997-98. The dollars would be gradually phased out over the following seven years, Bennett has said.

Concerns heighten over Sprint tower plan

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A Westland mother of five is concerned about potential health threats from a 150-foot telecommunications tower that Sprint wants to build near her home.

Michaeline Ward, who lives on Mackenzie, also is worried that property values will decline if Sprint builds a tower in her neighborhood, near Inkster Road and Ann Arbor

Ward and other residents are trying to boost opposition to the Sprint proposal that will be considered for recommendation by the Westland Planning Commission during a 7:30 p.m. Tuesday meeting at Westland

"We love this community, and this is a beautiful neighborhood," Ward said. "Everybody keeps up their home."

Patty Watt, University of Michigan manager of industrial hygiene and safety, said low-frequency electromagnetic energy from a telecommunications tower isn't suspected of posing serious health threats.

"There's not a lot of evidence to show that there are hazards," she said.

But Ward said she has collected documents supporting her claim that the Sprint tower will be potentially threatening. A Sprint spokesman couldn't Kilroy said he couldn't comment on health issues. He could only confirm that the Sprint tower is a permitted use of the land and that the company has met all site plan requirements.

"All I can do is look at what the ordinance requires us to review," Kilroy said.

Even if the Westland Planning Commission recommends approval of the site plan, the Westland City Council still has to approve it before the tower can be built.

Westland man changes his attorney, may change plea

By William Coutant Staff Writer

A Westland man who had pleaded guilty to the second-degree murder of two Farmington Hills women may be considering withdrawing his plea.

Wednesday afternoon's scheduled sentencing of George Tyrone Davis, 24, before Judge Barry Howard in Oakland County Circuit Court has been rescheduled to 3:30 p.m. July 9. The sentencing would have closed the book on Farmington Hills "most heinous crime."

But Davis' family requested a substitution of council, hiring Norman Robiner in place of Jose Fanego, who had been court appointed.

Davis, 24, pleaded guilty of seconddegree murder before Judge Howard in April, just prior to his first-degree murder trial for the death of two Farmington Hills women in December of 1995.

Davis and Arthur Hollingsworth

Cayce, 24, were both charged with the murder and arson that police Chief Bill Dwyer called the worst crime in the city's history.

Cayce was found guilty after a jury deliberated for about an hour in December of 1996 and was sentenced to mandatory life in prison:

Davis decided to plead to the lesser charge of second-degree rather than face mandatory life if convicted of first-degree murder, Fanego said at the time.

Davis could be sentenced to anywhere from 12 years to life for seconddegree murder if he does not withdraw his plea. Fanego, who had represented Davis since he was charged in January of 1996, said he was not sure why the request for substitution of council was filed.

"I don't know exactly," he said. "But that tells me that George's family hired another attorney. Nobody has told me what the reason is."

IN THE COURTS

Fanego said the change at this point in the judicial process would not make sense if his client were planning to go through with his guilty plea and sentencing.

Neither Robiner nor Oakland County Assistant Prosecutor Lisa Madzia; who is prosecuting the case, could be reached for comment by Friday's deadline.

The two men were charged with the murders after Cayce was arrested and charged with abducting, assaulting, raping and threatening to kill he former girlfriend. The woman had been a friend of Melissa Bovair, 21.

Bovair and her mother, Louise, 52, were killed by carbon monoxide poisoning and their Quail Hollow house was set on fire to cover up the killings, police investigators testified.

issues that "compromise the values and morals we need promoted in the teaching of our children."

The flier calls Brown "a clown and an embarrassment to our school district," among other names that include slurs offensive to gays and their supporters

"We must have leaders on the school board who are righteous - leaders we can respect and count on to build character and promote virtues that are proper for our children," the flier states.

Brown and five other candidates are competing for two four-year terms in the June 9 election. On Thursday, Brown responded to the flier during a telephone interview.

"My campaign does not participate in character assassination. We believe in treating all people with dignity and respect," she said. "I stand behind my vote that I cast on the issue (of protecting students and employees on the basis of sexual orientation). It is morally right and fiscally responsible."

Brown had noted earlier that a Wisconsin school district paid out $900,000 to settle a case in which a gay student claimed he wasn't protected from harassment.

In response to name-calling against her, Brown said, "Everybody has a sexual orientation."

In another development, Brown said she has information implicating one of her opponents in the controversial fliers, although she didn't name him.

"I have information that confirms that it is one of my opponents who is obviously desperate to win, at all cost," Brown said. She didn't elaborate, saying she has supporters investigating the matter further.

Brown and retired Wayne-Westland educator Gary Green are campaigning as a team, and all four other candidates told the Observer that they had no knowledge of the flier.

"Therefore I can't judge other people," he said. "I

I really don't know what you're referring to, so I really can't comment," he said Thursday.

The Triangle Foundation's Montgomery said similar controversies have occurred elsewhere, and he blamed "the conservative right" for anti-gay campaigns that "are not based in reality."

Donald Mullett, a Garden City pastor who has spoken against the Wayne-Westland sexual orientation policy, couldn't be reached for comment.

Giannuzzi, the parent who opposes the policy but denounced the anti-gay fliers, attends the Garden City Christian Center where Mullett is pastor. She said Mullett wasn't involved because he had approached her to voice concerns about the flier, fearing that she may have been involved.

Giannuzzi described herself as "embarrassed" that opponents of the sexual orientation policy would be suspected of distributing the anti-Brown literature.

"I would never put out anything anonymously like that," she said. "I would never be involved in a personal attack like that."

On other questions, Kasper found one or more allies among the candidates. For example, candidates were asked if the district's new technology was adequately preparing students for the workplace.

"It's fine, but there's room for improvement," said Galka, a registered nurse. "We could do better."

"We are not making the kind of progress we would like to see," said Lessard, a Michigan Bell retiree, "That machine will not teach kids. Teachers will."

"Change takes time," said Teska, a science teacher in Southfield Public Schools. "Training and the updating of training needs to be worked on.'

"I think we're doing just fine here." said Nalley, a teacher in Wayne-Westland Community Schools.

Kasper's answer came from a Stevenson insider. "The system was hastily

On student growth and building use, Kasper stood far apart in his view of what the year 2000 and beyond will

Galka urged the district keep intact its building utilization committee to study whatever needs that might arise. "You can put only so many people in one building," she said.

To meet any influx of new students, Teska urged the district to keep the buildings it now owns. "Districts which sell buildings live to regret it."

Lessard, a former school trustee, said the district does not envision a growth problem because of unused space it now

Paynter added that if "anything further along this line happens, we will be taking the proper legal action in the proper courts of law.'

A document entitled "Declaration of Formation" indicates that the court's purpose is to "encourage God-fearing men and women of all counties in the 50 states to implement the formation of similar courts and to educate the community concerning Biblical Law; to expose evil and corruption on Earth; and to serve as agents of God to protect the people of the country

DeSouza was asked whether she belongs to any religious societies; whether she was baptized; and whether she allows children under 18 to hire her.

She also was requested to produce within 30 days "each and every item" of correspondence between you and Plymouth-Canton schools; each and every document you have ever written regarding your psychic powers and Christianity," and "any other documents you want the Ecclesiastical Court to consider in your favor."

In addition to the recent development, a dispute involving DeSouza's fee for the evening has been resolved. Initially, students agreed to pay the psychic $600.

When her appearance was canceled, attorney Errol Goldman, the district's assistant superintendent for employee relations, informed students "we did not have to pay her because we never actually made an agreement with her. There was a verbal contract, but never a signed contract," said Brian Godfrey, president of the Canton High School senior class. "After the attorneys for her and the district talked, we made an agreement to pay her a partial sum. She ended up being paid less than $600," he said. Godfrey said he shared the opinion of some teachers and students that DeSouza should have received the full amount because she'd been booked for the night.

"I do think when you make a verbal agreement, your word should be as good as your signature," said Godfrey. "The only difference in this case is that it was partially her fault because of the way she came across in the paper. In The Detroit News, she seemed extreme and into her beliefs and very serious."

In addition to removing trees and other debris from the river. as they have since 1986, volunteers at cleanup sites throughout

Wayne, Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties will also plant trees, build and groom wood-chip walking paths, and build nesting boxes for wood ducks, bluebirds, and brown bats.

Volunteers will stencil storm drain inlets with a warning against dumping toxic materials like used motor oil, paint, and lawn or household chemicals.

Participants will be asked once again to avoid contact with the water. Health advisories issued by Wayne and Oakland counties continue for the river, as a precaution against water-borne ill-

"We're always pretty cautious, and we try to keep people out of the river," Graham said. "We are pretty careful and have clean fresh water there for people to clean up their faces and hands.

"We have to keep reminding people that it is still a contaminated river, especially after a rainstorm, because the storm water contaminates the river from the runoff."

Friends of the Rouge will supply gloves and trash bags.

For the third consecutive year, Rouge Rescue also includes the collection of returnable bottles and cans, which can be redeemed at Farmer Jack supermarkets to support the Friends of the Rouge Education Project, a school-based environmental education program.

'Friends' offer tips on how public can help river effort

By Ken Abramczyk Staff Writer

Whether you wash your car, fertilize your lawn or even landscape your yard, your actions affect the Rouge River.

That's because that water you used to wash your vehicle or fertilizer on your lawn can wash into storm drains and end up in the Rouge River, and contributing to the river's degradation.

Even if you leave your ground bare around vegetation and shrubs, you contribute to erosion, as soil can wash into the river.

Here's some pointers from the Friends of the Rouge:

■ Lawn and garden maintenance: Keep fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides off paved surfaces and out of drainage paths. When choosing a fertilizer, select a slow-release formula.

■ Washing your vehicle: Direct polluted wash water away from streets and storm drains. Wash your car on your lawn, or better yet, go to a car wash.

Repairing your vehicle: Only repair vehicles in areas where leaks and spills cannot flow toward storm drains, or better, take it to a mechanic.

■ Caring for pets: Clean up animal waste before it rains. Throw it in the trash.

■ Disconnect and redirect downspouts: Disconnect downspouts from sewer systems. Direct them to a vegetated area away from building foundations. Join Friends of the Rouge: Participate in Rouge River-Watch, storm drain stenciling or

Senate likely to kill bill to toughen charter school rules

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

A bill to require stiffer regulations of so-called "charter schools" passed the House of Representatives on almost a party-line vote, giving it dim prospects in the state Senate.

Public school academies are small and organized without elected boards. They obtain charters from either universities or the state Jobs Commission.

House Bill 4395 would require much reporting and more improvement plans to be filed with the State Board of Educa-

"Foes of public school academies attempt to strangle their development by crying for more accountability," charged Rep. Alan Cropsey, R-DeWitt, floor leader of the opposition during the May 20 debate.

The House passed it on a 55-

Favoring it were 54 Democrats and Republican Glenn Oxender of Sturgis. Opponents were all Republicans. Six didn't vote three from each party.

Tired of alibis

Freshman Rep. Bob Brown, D-Dearborn Heights, said he was frustrated at the alibis and lack of information he was getting on charter schools, a two-year-old phenomenon in Michigan.

"I've been told the report is on its way. The superintendent of public instruction (Art Ellis) said it doesn't tell you anything," Brown said.

"They (charter schools) say we're in transition; that they're inheriting public school problems (with low MEAP scores)," Brown said. He said it was all the more reason for charter schools to submit reports on their successes and failures - so that others can adopt the good techniques and scrap the bad

The bill is sponsored by Rep. James Agee, D-Muskegon, a former school superintendent and once a finalist for appointment as state superintendent of public instruction. Agee is an

"Charter schools have nothing to fear," said Agee. His bill:

■ Requires each charter school to submit an annual report on oversight activities, non-compliance with the charter, areas of performance that need to be improved, assurances the school has no religious affiliation, and a plan to improve performance.

■ Allows the State Board of Education to revoke the charter if a charter school fails to provide an annual oversight report.

■ Specifies that, if the school closes, its real estate and personal property become the property of the state.

"It will improve schools that need improving. It will reward those who deserve rewarding,"

Agee said. Added Rep. Rose Bogardus, D-Davison: "Public schools have accountability through their elective boards." Charter school boards are self-appointed under

SC tax levy will yield $15.8 million for college

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

, Schoolcraft College Trustees set the 1997 tax levy Wednesday for residents in the college's district at 1.8521 mills, which represents no change from last

The levy will cost the owner of a home sold for $100,000 or a taxable value of $50,000 about $92.60 annually.

Schoolcraft's district includes the Wayne County portions of K-12 districts of Clarenceville and Livonia Public Schools; the Northville district; Novi Community Schools, excluding the portion covered by Oakland Community College and portions of the Plymouth-Canton school district.

Butch Raby, Schoolcraft's vice president of business services, told the board the college district's state equalized valuation - or the assessed value of all taxable property - was up 5 percent, which meant the budget approved by trustees in April would need revisions.

"It was slightly more than was ndicated, but we always want to be conservative when we work with the budget," Raby said.

That figure may be revised if the State Tax Commission changed final equalization values of Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties.

"There's always a possibility that they changed county SEVs, but it hasn't happened," Raby

Western Wayne County residents should receive summer tax bills some time in June, depending on when tax bills are printed and mailed in their local commu-

The taxable value of the Schoolcraft College district is $8.52 billion with $7.9 billion in Wayne County, $528 million in Oakland County and $55 million in Washtenaw County. That will net a tax yield of approximately $15.8 million to the college, higher than the $15.3 million in the budget.

A roll call vote was required to set the millage. Board chairwoman Patricia Watson, vice chairman John Walsh, and trustees Brian Broderick. Richard DeVries and Carol Strom backed the levy.

Trustee Steve Ragan arrived late at the meeting and missed the vote, while trustee Mary Breen was absent.

Organizational meeting

Schoolcraft trustees also scheduled the board of trustees' organizational meeting for 7 p.m. Monday, July 7, to appoint board officers for the next two Trustees are expected to elect a chairperson, vice chairperson, secretary and treasurer. The board is expected to select a temporary chairperson on June 25 to run the July 7 meeting.

On June 25, the board also is expected to review bylaws for trustees. Trustees received proposed bylaws Wednesday for approval that outlined their duties, with changes only in the time and date of meetings.

The bylaws will be reintroduced with the time and a minor language change so that trustees can have more flexibility in scheduling meetings. The board meets to conduct business, usually at 7 p.m. on the fourth Wednesday of each month in the conference room of the Administration Building.

Enrollment is up

College President Dick McDowell reported to trustees that enrollment for the spring session increased 26 percent for continuing education services over last year. The college counted 4,097 enrollees, up from last year's 3,252. Credited students were 3,795, up from last year's 3,754.

Senate bill aims to curb special assessments

BY TIM RICHARD

Voters may get a chance to put a lid on so-called "special assessments" levied for local public improvements.

A constitutional amendment and a package of bills will require that special assessments be levied on the so-called "taxable value" of property rather than the higher "state equalized value" (SEV).

Taxable value is lower because Proposal A of 1994 caps increases at 5 percent or the rate of consumer price inflation, while SEV grows with real estate inflation. Biggest savings go to suburban residential prop-

"Homeowners will be better. protected for years to come since special assessments will increase at a lower rate," said Sen. Bill Bullard Jr., R-Milford.

The package, adopted on votes of 37-0 and 38-0 May 28, goes to the House. All area senators voted yes on all items.

But a warning was issued by veteran Sen. Harry Gast, R-St. Joseph. He said townships are misusing special assessments, which were designed for improvements such as sewers, sidewalks, lighting and paving in a limited geographic area.

Instead, boards are levying township-wide special assessments for such services as police and fire to get around low prop-approval:

"When we have an ad valorem special assessment by a board without a vote of the people, aren't we avoiding the will of the people?" Gast asked. "I have serious reservations about what we've done."

The issue was raised earlier this year when Attorney General Frank Kelley ruled that special assessments weren't "taxes" and couldn't be capped by Proposal A. An attorney general's ruling has the force of law until a court rules otherwise or the Legislature changes the law.

Senate Joint Resolution L. sponsored by Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham, would amend the Michigan Constitution's Art. IX, the financial article. Bouchard said Kelley's ruling "created a loophole."

SJR L requires a two-thirds vote of each chamber to put it on the November 1998 ballot and voter approval for it to become part of the constitution.

Bullard sponsored Senate Bills 428-432 amending various tax and local governmental Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, won approval of an amendment to protect town. ships for two years. He said Royal Oak Township has a court-ordered special assessment for police and fire, and an area of Bloomfield Township called Bloomfield Village has an assessment for police.

FOCUS ON WINE

RAY AND ELEANOR HEALD

Michele Chiarlo wines focus on vineyard expression

ichele Chiarlo represents the seventh generation of a winemaking family in Italy's Piedmont region. In addition to the region's highly-touted wines barbaresco and barolo, Chiarlo crafts a handsome portfolio of wines that are the ultimate expression of their vineyard origin.

In 1955, armed with a degree in winemaking, Chiarlo joined his father's small winery. Today, he and his sons Alberto and Stefano have ownership or control over 265 acres of vineyards, the most prestigious of which are located in Barbaresco and Barolo. The 1995 purchase of the Aluffi estate with its holdings of La Court and Il Castello in the heart of the Barbera d'Asti zone, added over 50 acres of exceptional vineyards to produce barbera, a red wine beginning to excite the palates of American wine consumers.

Among the white wines in the Michele Chiarlo portfolio is the outstanding 1996 Gavi from Rovereto $26 with its big jasmine floral rush and flavorful fruit balance. Chiarlo explained that Rovereto translates from Italian as oak forest.

"This is the best area for Gavi because of the volcanic and marl, clay soil," he explained. "It's rich in iron and manganese and also quite stony."

Gavi is one of those wines with which Americans can have a love-hate relationship. This is understandable. Many bottlings of Gavi (produced from the cortese grape) are tart, lean and characterless. When it's good, it's very, very good, but when it's too tart, it's horrid!

"Gavi from Rovereto, in the southeast sector of the Piedmont, 20 miles from the Mediterranean Sea and 10 miles from the Apennine Mountains is ideal for growing simple tips bring out

flavor

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND SPECIAL WRITER

ho knows how to cook fish better than a chef who sailed the seas for almost 30 years? Especially one who created seafood buffets for his mates that included Oysters Rockefeller and pompano stuffed with crab meat.

"When you cook seafood, you want to be a gentle person," said Scotty Leggat of Plymouth, the chief steward on an ocean-going tanker from 1966 to 1993. "Don't over-accent because fish has a flavor of its own. Just bring out the flavor it already has.".

Warning! Spice overboard! Go easy on the garlic. "Seafood will absorb anything you put on it. It draws it into its tissues." said

Leggat began his career at age 7 at his uncle's restaurant, the Seafood Grotto, which preceded Topinka's, once located on the corner of Telegraph and Seven Mile in Detroit. "I stood on a wooden crate shucking oysters," he said.

Leggat's cooking adventures at sea began when he was contracted to work for Coastal Corporation through the U.S. Coast Guard. He'd start his day in the galley at 5:30 a.m. Leggat was responsible for feeding 135 men two shifts of breakfast, lunch and dinner, including a mid-watch buffet at midnight.

In addition to the oysters and the pompano, Leggat's famous seafood buffet included Dover a paper bag stuffed with sauteed you do is get the effervescence on seaweed, garlic, olive oil and lemon pepper.

"It's delicious. It (the seaweed) makes the seafood so tender." Leggat, who now works for the Main Street Deli in Plymouth, said if you want to marinate fish, use the best olive oil. "It seals in the flavors." His marinade is. simple: olive oil, a pinch of lemon pepper, thyme, dill weed and some peppercorn. Sprinkle the fish with some Hungarian papri-ka, then saute, broil or pan fry. "There isn't one seafood you Sole Popliati, which he baked in can't do with this marinade. All the surface, but you'll still taste the quality of the meat."

Chef Willie Jackson of the Ocean Grille in Birmingham was quite emphatic about his cooking prowess: "Fish is one of my strong points,"

Jackson said seasonings are the key, but they don't have to be exotic to produce a great fish entree. "Fresh cracked pepper and kosher salt bring out the best in the fish."

Jackson prefers the versatility of grilling. He suggests brushing the fish with a mixture of olive and vegetable oil, then seasoning lightly with cracked pepper, kosher salt, and a bit of fresh thyme, tarragon, or basil to taste.

"One of my favorites is Alaskan halibut. I like to do it grilled with fresh herbs and serve it with a cilantro butter sauce," he said. A simpler dish he prepares is grilled salmon with cucumber and tomato vinaigrette. "Everybody has tomatoes and cucumbers and a blender."

I like much of my fish, like trout, pan fried, so I asked Jackson: How do you fry the perfect fish? "Pan sear it, flesh side down. Once brown, flip it over. Finish it in the oven at 400 degrees for four or five minutes," he said.

Chef Mike Dopkowski of the Water Club Grill in Plymouth Township grew up in Baltimore and cut his teeth on shrimp and crab. His newest specialty is a Parmesan cheese-breaded sauteed Coho salmon with a tomato-basil sauce.

Not all the fish in the sea are adaptable to the same cooking methods, said Dopkowski. In other words, a beer batter and a quick dunk in the deep fryer doesn't work for all our finned

"Fish like scrod is too delicate to fry or grill. Just bake or broi it," he said. "Lake perch can be deep fried at a very high temperature or sauteed in a little bit of oil and finished off with bit of garlic butter."

Dopkowski doesn't recommend baking swordfish and tuna. They tend to dry out and acquire a grainy texture in a hot oven. These meaty fish do better on the grill, as does salmon, halibut, mahi mahi and snapper.

Dopkowski dispelled one myth about deep frying: It doesn't automatically add more calories. "Deep frying seals. The fish doesn't absorb much oil."

As for spices, Dopkowski likes to use salt, pepper, tarragon, and a little basil and oregano He will use these spices dried at times.

Sounds simple. Then again, Leggat, Dopkowski and Jackson consider themselves simple cooks blessed with intuitiveness. "I am not a textbook chef," said Jackson. "I go by what my taste buds tell me. There are no rules when it comes to cooking."

Meatless diet no cause for alarm

"My daughter is a terrible mother," one of my clients confided in me. "Why is that?" I asked. "She's allowing my 13-year-old old granddaughter to be a vegetari-

Trying to console my client, I explained that her daughter was not remiss in child rearing by allowing her granddaughter to eliminate meat or even dairy products from her diet. From my experience with the new wave of vegetarian children, teenagers and college students, it seems as if their parents are more in need of education when it comes to nutrition than their children.

When I was a college student in the early 1980s at Michigan State University (and a dietetics major to boot), my classmates and I thought vegetarians were 1960s leftovers who still wore their hair long and T-shirts with peace symbols. These were the people, of course, who ran the food co-op in East Lansing. I was raised on meat and dairy like the rest of the boomers, but it is the offspring of my generation who are environmentally concerned, health conscious, animal rights activists.

Should parents be concerned about their teens not getting the proper nutrients from a vegetarian diet? All teens are susceptible to iron deficiency anemia, and studies show that anemia is no more prevalent in vegetarians than among those who eat meat. Although iron in meat products is more readily absorbed, great non-meat sources of iron include beans, green, leafy vegetables, fortified cereals and dried fruits.

Calcium is a key nutrient needed to develop strong bones. It is also needed to help protect you from osteoporosis in later years. Osteoporosis is not just a disease of calcium deficiency but also a disease of calcium loss.

Many teens, especially girls, have dietary habits that facilitate calcium loss - dieting, drinking too much pop, not eating enough vegetables and fruits, and not eating enough calcium-rich foods.

The American Dietetic Association endorsed the health properties of the vegetarian diet in their 1987 position paper - "It may be easier for some individuals to meet the Dietary Guidelines for Americans by following a vegetarian diet rather than a non-vegetarian diet."

However, "Poorly planned or haphazard diets (vegetarian or non-vegetarian) increase the likelihood of diet-related disorders of deficiency or excess." Any diet needs to be based on variety and wholesome foods regardless whether vegetarian or not. If the diet is based on junk food, it will be missing many key nutrients needed for optimal health.

Sarah Grogan, 16, of West Bloomfield has begun moving toward a vegetarian diet for the past year. "Just about all my friends are vegans (they do not eat meat or dairy products) out of concern for animals," she said. Sarah wants to be a vegetarian for health reasons. "In the last year, meat started looking very unappetizing to me," she said. "I became worried about what was going into animals' feed (such as hormones and chemicals), so I started eating more pasta, vegetables and fruit."

Her mother, Andrea Bronson Grogan, enrolled Sarah in our vegetarian cooking classes and started changing her own cooking and eating habits as well. As a single working mom, Andrea finds quick and easy vegetarian recipes that she can "throw together after her busy day as a high school art teacher.

California strawberries are still available at grocery stores and produce markets, and if you have some rhubarb growing in your backyard, here's a recipe you're sure to enjoy.

SPICED STRAWBERRY RHUBARB

JAM

1 quart stemmed, washed strawberries

3 cups chopped rhubarb

2 tablespoons fresh orange juice

1 teaspoon grated orange peel 1 package powdered pectin

1/2 teaspoon cinnamon 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

6 cups sugar

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Slice strawberries, measure 4 cups into large saucepan. Add rhubarb, orange juice and peel. Stir in pectin. Bring to a rolling boil, stirring frequently. Add sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg and return to a rolling boil. Boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

Skim foam, if necessary. Carefully ladle hot iam into hot iars. leaving 1/4-inch head space. Wipe jar rim clean. Place lid on jar with sealing compound next to glass. Screw band down evenly and firmly. Do not use excessive force.

Process 10 minutes in a boilingwater canner: Yield about 6 half

Ripe idea makes summer fruit drip with flavor

sumers around the country are expected to reach for the one thing that can guarantee them sweet California peaches, plums and nectarines: an ordinary paper bag. About 10,000 supermarkets will display complimentary paper bags where they sell peaches, plums and nectarines so that more consumers will learn to use them to ripen their fruit the right way.

These ordinary paper bags have the power to transform a firm piece of fruit into a succulent delight, dripping with sweet, aromatic nectar. What appears to be a slight-of-hand is "ripening vapors." The organic vapor called ethylene plays a key role in ripening fruit. And when peaches, plums and nectarines are placed in a closed paper bag, the exchange of trapped ripening vapors dramatically speeds the ripening process. Consequently, the acid content drops and the fruit softens. The result is sweet, delicious fruit.

To get the sweetest, ripest peaches, plums and nectarines:

Bookstore blues: Although the new campus shop at Grand Valley State University sells what modern coeds need, most agree that gifts from home are best.

Grads pick gifts they really want

When Holly Tomasik of Livonia graduated from high school, she received a memorable and useful package from a cousin who lives in North Carolina:

"She sent me a backpack filled with everything I'd need for college - pens, pencils, paper, note cards. Scantron forms - even aspirin," said Tomasik, 22, a senior accounting student at Madonna University in Livonia.

Everything came in handy, including the aspirin, which Tomasik said she used for the first time "right after student orientation."

Other items that could be placed in a book bag of backpack as a gift include a daily planner and three 1/2-inch computer disks, Tomasik said.

For students who do have their own computer, accessories like print cartridges and paper also make nice gifts, she said. But it's important to the gift-giver to know what's compatible with the student's equipment.

Items like T-shirts, sweatshirts, coffee mugs, notebooks and pencils featuring the name of the college or university that a student plans to attend also make great high school graduation gifts, said Tomasik, who lives off campus and commutes to college.

When a student will be living in a dorm, it opens up a whole other world of gift possibilities.

Sandra Overholt, 29, of Toledo, Ohio, is majoring in sign language and English at Madonna University, and has been living in a dorm there for the past year.

"One of the things that people may not know about, unless they've lived in a dorm before or know someone who has, is that it's really useful to have a dry-crase board for the outside of your door. You can use it to tell people where you're at and when you'll be back, or if you're sleeping or studying," Overholt said.

Dry-erase boards are the modern equivalent of chalk boards. But instead of chalk, they come with erasable-ink markers.

"It helps especially if there is a fire drill, because everyone knows then not to search for you. It's a great communication device," she said.

Power strips make practical gifts for dorm students, "because you never have enough electrical sockets for all the things you need to plug in," she continued.

Phone cards are also useful - "especially if parents want you to call home on a regular basis," she said.

For a clever gift package, why not buy a plastic, rectangular, carry-all container - the kind with the handle in the center and deep wells along the sides — and then fill it with shower items, cleaning supplies, or instant food and eating utensils?

Overholt said she uses a container like that to carry her soap, shampoo and towels to the shower. In general, dormitories do not have in-room

Another nice gift package, she said, would be a laundry basket or bag filled with detergent, fabric softener, stain remover, and quarters for coin-operated washers and dryers.

Stackable plastic crates are also useful, said Kathleen Deschoff of Farmington Hills. Her daughter, Christina, a senior at Eastern Michigan University, uses them to organize books, clothes, and other things in her room. "And when the semester is over, she uses the crates to lug everything home," Deschoff said. A dolly — not the kind you play with, but the kind that's used to haul stuff — is a very useful gift for parents who will be helping their children move into a dormitory, she added.

I know a college student who doesn't like coffee, but he loves his coffee maker. It's a quick source of hot water for Ramen Noodles, Lipton Cup-of-Soup and other instant foods he can make in his dorm room.

Small refrigerators and microwaves also make good gifts, provided that students are allowed to have them in their dormitory. "We're not really supposed to have them here," Overholt said, "but I can't say that some students don't have them."

When in doubt, jewelry and keepsakes featuring the year of the student's high school graduation make nice gifts. So do gift certificates for restaurants, stores and Ticketmaster, Tomasik said.

But the best high school graduation gift by far, according to everyone I've talked to, is money. It can't buy happiness, but it can pay for lots of other things graduates will need as they enter "the real world."

Grocers move into the meal business

"Can you stop at the grocery store after work?" used to mean mom needed a quart of milk or loaf of bread. Today it may mean mom wants the entire family dinner - ready to set down on the table hot and hearty.

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON SPECIAL WRITER

It's no secret that the fast and full lifestyles of the 1990s have forced home cooking to the back burner for most folks. Still, people are thrilled to have that hot, delicious meal at the end of the day.

Keeping these busy consumers in mind, many area food stores are tapping into the restaurant biz - offering salads and hot entrees to go.

Vivian Shouneyia, manager of Market Plaza in West Bloomfield, attests to the public's desire for fresh pre-cooked dinner entrees that don't include a side of fries.

"We have people coming in here every night, men dressed in suits and women who are all dressed up, and they're looking for the prepared foods," she said. "That market is definitely a big part of our business."

The Shouneyias of Bloomfield Township opened the grocery/convenience store in March at Commerce and Green Lake Roads. After operating the shop for several months, they decided to expand the deli counter and increase the take-out foods section.

They hope to use their 5,800square feet to offer products that cater to customers who are short on time but heavy on hunger.

Breads and pastries, prepared by baker Emily Curioca, are offered hot out of the oven. Coolers adjacent to the bakery offer a variety of complete meals ready for shoppers to take home, heat and enjoy.

These 15 entrees are made inhouse fresh by Market Plaza's fulltime chef Jeannie Zanowski. Chicken Wellington, Dijon Sirloin Tips and Stuffed Seafood Shells are among the entrees packaged to go. Customers can compliment their hot plate with a specialty salad or any one of a number of fresh pastas such as Sundried Tomato Pesto and Mushroom Broccoli Alfredo.

For those who eat on the road or can't spare the time to re-heat a dish, Market Plaza offers rotisserie chicken, hot pizza and even miniturkey breasts that can be consumed on the spot.

Village Market changes

That list of ready-made meals would certainly appeal to Rich Heathfield, owner of Birmingham Village Market.

"I'm single and after work I'm always looking for a dinner that I can just stop and grab and go," he said. The Village Market offers several easy meal options although scale: "We carry deli products, like subs and salads, and those sell very well." said Heathfield: Frozen foods, too. are in demand as customers on-therun purchase cart loads of Stoeffer's and Lean Cuisine entrees and frozen pizzas.

Beyond the frozen food aisle, Village Market hasn't done a lot to address the quick meal menu but all of that will change when the store is opened under new management later this month. The new owners plan to remodel and expand the store to meet customer desires to have pre-made hot foods at their finger tips, Heathfield said.

Merchant of choices

Matthew Jonna, one of the owners of the Merchant of Vino stores in they are presented on a smaller Troy. Farmington Hills and Rochester Hills, said his stores offer ready-made salads and party dips but don't really offer pre-made meals to go.

We call that the 'Home Meal Replacement Market' and it is a growing market," he said. Still, Merchant of Vino takes pride in the fact that they are a modern store, stocking a huge variety of produce, specialty foods and wines in just 25,000-square feet of space.

Produce markets like Nino Salvaggio's. Vic's, and Papa Joe's, are also expanding their selections of prepared foods to go.

Hudson's spokeswoman Chris Morrisroe said the Marketplaces in most of the Detroit area department stores, were recently redesigned to provide take-home meals for timecrunched shoppers.

Senate considers legislation restricting kids' mall visits

If the state senate approves the budget this week, the next item on their agenda is a bill by Sen. Michael Bouchard (R-Birmingham) that would provide shopping centers with the right to restrict visits by young shop-

Bouchard said the legislation was developed at the request of area mall officials who were looking for a "tool" to help them cope with the developing issue of teen groups loitering at their centers on weekends.

Bouchard would like to see kids, 16 and under, banned from shopping centers Friday and Saturday nights after 6 p.m. if they are not with a guardian over 19 years old. The area around mall movie theaters is

He said incidents of kids using profanities, threatening security officials and shoppers, blocking entrances to stores, and fighting in food courts, prompted the bill.

"These measures are not meant to ban young people from shopping," Bouchard explained. "As a group they spend $50 million annually across America. The bill is meant to serve the shopping centers by repealing parts of old laws that stand in the way of allowing malls to deal with this new issue."

Cathy O'Malley, manager of Twelve Oaks in Novi, said she is part of an International Council of Shopping Centers (ICSC) committee working with legislators to develop a "mall curfew" law. She said if passed, Michigan's bill could become a prototype for the country.

"We've seen more and more parents dropping off youngsters on the weekends with the hope that the mall will entertain and amuse them," she said. "But if something happens or there is an accident, we have a hard time tracking down the legal guardians.

"No one wants to prevent young people from visiting a mall. It's part of their socialization, But, a mall is private property. This bill would allow each shopping center the tool it needs to go before the city council and get

Rebecca Maccardini, operations manager at the Somerset Collection in Troy, has served as president of the ICSC, addressing the issue of 'troublemakers at the mall' for many years and at many different centers.

"It's very disturbing and not simple," she said. "It boils down to a question of rights. But whose rights? The teens? The merchants who pay rent to do business at the mall? The mall owners? The customers who expect a safe and pleasant shopping experience?

"I don't have a firm opinion on this bill yet. But, there are times you have to do something when a situation interferes with commerce or creates a problem where business is impeded."

Richard Fair, manager of Tel-Twelve Mall in Southfield, said he would prefer that blanket legislation on the issue be avoided.

"Personally, I believe you can't legislate everything," he said. "Whatever situation arises should be dealt with individually on its own terms by those in charge locally." Fair said a mall's best defense against teen trouble is a close relationship with the police department and tering laws. Joe Maicki, 14, of Troy, spared no emotion in blasting strict and frequent enforcement of trespassing and loi-

"I'm totally against it," he said. "Those restricted times are the hours I usually shop at the mall. I love to go up to Somerset on Friday or Saturday nights. Maybe some malls in other parts of town need the law. But not

Troy police chief Lawrence Carey echoed the sentiment. "Our jurisdiction has enough ordinances to cover anyone of any age causing trouble in public," he said. "We have truancy, loitering, trespassing and parental responsibility codes. I don't want to see kids banned from the malls. They have money to spend. They buy things. However, there may be some communities that may need this tool."

Summer chic

Keep it cool and casual

During the hot, sunny days of Backyard basics summer, staying cool and comfortable takes top priority. But how can women get through the season in comfort and style?

According to Talbots, the women's classic clothing retailer and cataloger, summer chic is all about simple, pared-down styles in updated fabrics, shapes and colors:

Relaxed business casual

In summer, when the term 'Casual Friday' seems to apply to the entire week, lightweight fabrics like Irish linen, cotton pique and silk are a smart investment.

This season features breezy, A-line skirts, wrap-front sarongs and a range of trouser silhouettes - from slim, side-zip pants to full-leg, drawstring styles.

For toppers, V-neck silk and cotton sweaters are cool bets on warm days. A linen jacket or cardigan also provides light cover in air-conditioned spaces.

Weekend traveler

The safari trend has left its mark on summer fashion. Selftie vests, khaki twills, camp shirts and cargo shorts in neutral tones all lend everyday wardrobes an adventurous spir-

For effortless dressing at home or on the road, Talbots recommends selecting classic styles that coordinate in color, and that can be dressed up or down with a few different accessories.

Comfort-minded professionals who travel frequently should opt for silk twill, crepe or other seasonless fabrics that pack well and take up little room in a suit-

Summer staple items like cotton T-shirts, rib-knit tanks, drawstring shorts and skirts take on a whole new flavor in delicious shades of mango, chili red and raspberry, and earthy neutrals like moss green, stone and oatmeal.

Other classic summer essentials a woman can't go without this season include sleeveless denim shirts, polo dresses, khaki pants and five-pocket jeans and jean shorts.

Beachgoing style

Batik-print sundresses, Mandarin-collar tunics and Asianinspired sarongs in tropical florals play tribute to faraway places and help capture summer's exotic look without leaving home.

Must-have accessories that create islandic charm include natural straw totebags with bamboo details, wide-strap sandals, woven mules and silver jewelry.

Simple, party chic

Seasoned event goers will be relying on sleeveless sheaths and classic chemises for a fresh, summertime look.

This season features bright watercolors like water blue and apple green, and exotic floral prints in lightweight linen, silk and cotton pique.

A natural straw hat and strappy sandals add drama and the perfect finishing touch to update any summer outfit.

Talbots has stores at Laurel Park Place in Livonia; Somerset Collection South in Troy; Twelve Oaks in Novi; Grosse Pointe, Ann Arbor and East; Lansing.

Fur sales are strongest in the east - says the Fur Council

What U.S. markets sell the most fur?

More people buy fur in New York than in any other city, followed closely by Chicago.

Other top fur markets, in order of retail sales, are: Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Washington D.C./Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, Dallas/Ft. Worth, San Francisco, Milwaukee and Seattle.

By region, the East (51 percent) and the Midwest (25 percent) lead the country in fur sales, followed by the Southeast, West, Southwest, and mountain regions.

In 1995, sales were up 10 percent to $1.2 billion. That year, fur sales out paced the sales of Mercedes-Benz. Mink is the overwhelming favorite among consumers, followed by sable, fox and beaver. Warmth, is the reason most-repeated for buying a fur.

Animal gallery owners wild about local artists

frican wildlife painted on porcelain tiles, whimsical animal sculptures, stained glass panels of polar bears: The Animal Odyssey Gift and Art Gallery in Plymouth offers everything to make animal lovers smile.

Sharon and Celia Atma opened the animal-related gift and art shop in November. The cozy space overflows with designer cat dolls, ceramic dinnerware handmade in Zimbabwe, jewelry, decorative accessories, T-shirts, leopard print vests, scarves and hats, toys and gifts. Much of the art displayed supports local artists.

"It's all unique," said Celia Atma, co-owner with daughter Sharon. "You won't find this merchandise anywhere else. If any artists are interested, we'd be glad to exhibit their work if we have the room."

Diane Dunn painted the bas relief tiles featuring elephants, rhinos, cheetahs, tameran, deer and eagle. The Livonia resident is mostly self-taught. Her formal training was painting classes at David Messing's Art Store and More in Livonia, and a pottery class at the Ann Arbor Art Association.

Art evolution

Dunn came up with the idea for the tiles while painting nature scenes in oil. Tired of trying to bring a flat dimension to life, Dunn experimented by adding modeling paste to the paintings.

> Unsatisfied the with results, her next step was to model animals in clay. Over time, the paintings evolved into tiles. After Animal Antics: making a neg-Diane Dunn's ative mold oil-painted, with plaster porcelain tile of and letting it dry, Dunn a cheetah is on pours a castexhibit at the ing of liquid Animal Odyssey porcelain to in Plymouth's produce the Old Village.

tiles. Then, she fires the tiles in a 2,300°F. kiln before painting the raised image of the animal in oils. "I always liked ceramics and oil painting, and decided to combine the two," said Dunn, a graduate of Franklin High School in Livonia. "I thought it would be nice to build up the paintings."

Dunn has always been an animal lover. Over the years, she worked for veterinarians and at a horse farm. In December, she showed her bas relief tiles at the Morris Hospital for Veterinary Services in Redford to raise money for the Detroit Zoo Veterinary Clinic.

"Art in the Village" June 7-8 at Greenmead Historical Village in Livonia brings fine art and crafts together for the first time.

Fifty-one artists will show paintings, pastels, photography, intaglio prints, mixed media and threedimensional art works in the Shaw House, Quaker Meeting House, and Newburg Methodist Church and School. At the same time, more than 190 artists will exhibit their wares in the 21st annual Arts & Crafts Festival hosted by the Livonia Arts Commission. Former arts commissioner Pat Gutierrez came up with the idea for the fine arts exhibit last year. This is the first time since the 1980s that the arts commission is hosting a statewide competition/exhibition. Chairperson Billie Thompson and arts commission president Bob Sheridan are both artists who strongly support the fine arts exhibit.

"There seemed to be a lack of appreciation for the arts and cultural events," said Sheridan. "We didn't think the fine arts exhibit could draw enough visitors on its own. We're hoping the fine arts and the arts and crafts festival, which is established, would feed off and support each other."

Combining the historical allure of the village area of Greenmead with a fine arts exhibit, and an arts and crafts festival, should entice a broader audience to the historical grounds. The village is a recreation of the Newburgh Road/Ann Arbor Trail intersection as it existed between 1910 and 1925. The crossroads of Newburg Corners anchored a prosperous. farming community.

Greenmead rests on 104 of the 160 acres deeded to Joshua Simmons by President John Quincy Adams for $225 in 1825. The grounds are divided into two time periods, the village of the early 1900s, and the farm complex, which contains homesteads from the 1850s.

"I think it's wonderful; we've combined the historical buildings with fine art," said Thompson. "It's a wonderful opportunity to see fine art in historic homes. While the traditional art will complement the furnishings, it will be interesting to see abstracts in such a setting."

Award-winning watercolorist Toni Stevens looks forward to exhibiting her portrait "Sophia with Apple & Pear" at Art in the Village, The Plymouth resident painted the work during a class with Mary Aro at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association.

"I think it's a great idea for Livonia to institute a fine arts exhibit," said Stevens, who won first place in the Scarab Club's watercolor show last fall. "It's sounds like a lovely idea to have a fine arts show in historical buildings."

fessor Stanley Rosenthal judged the Art in the Village competition awarding $2,500 in cash prizes. Darcy Scott of West Bloomfield won the First Place ($1,000) award for "Communion with Nature." The surreal watercolor features a table set with bread and wine against a desert background. "I was extremely excited to win," said Scott, "and think the idea for the show is great. There's never enough art shows, in my opinion."

Jeri Fellwock of Farmington Hills has exhibited paintings at Farmington Artists Club shows in the historic Spicer House in Farmington Hills; Atrium Gallery, Northville, and Swords into Plowshares Peace Center and Gallery, Detroit. Fellwock will display a 30- by 38-inch watercolor entitled "Horse Parade" from a series on horses.

"I've been in many shows," said Fellwock. "We show art in a lot of different types of buildings. When we exhibit at the Spicer House, people enjoy coming to see that beautiful, old house and walking through the park. I think Art in the Village at Greenmead will get a lot of traffic from people who like historic buildings." Mary Jordan Ehlert of Livonia toured the buildings at Greenmead several years ago. A retired Livonia Public Schools art teacher, Ehlert will greet visitors to the Newburg School 2-5 p.m. Sunday, June 8.

Woodworker Ken Carter grows timber for his handmade furniture in 100 acres of hardwoods north of Nashville, Tenn. A 1969 graduate of Bentley High School in Livonia, Carter will bring his wares to the 21st annual Arts & Crafts Festival at Greenmead Historical Village, June 7-8.

Livonia arts commissioners chose 195 artists to exhibit in the featival from 350 entries. Chairperson Stephanie Skaggs thinks visitors will marvel at the variety and quality of glass, print making, pottery, metal, jewelry, fine art, country, and textiles on hand.

"It's exciting, the fact we're doing something totally different this year in the village," said Skaggs. "The show had previously been held in the farm complex. I'm sure there's plenty of people who've never been in the village. This gives them the opportunity."

Skaggs spends her summers visiting all the art fairs searching for one-of-a-kind arts and crafts to exhibit in the arts commissionsponsored festival. This year, artists and craftsmen from New York to Ohio, Georgia and Michigan will fill the village with stone etching, lacquerware, oil paintings of Indian cliff dwellings, and jewelry created with the lostwax process used by ancient Greeks and Chinese more than 2,000 years ago.

Entertainers will mingle with the crowds playing jazz and Ecuadorian music, and telling stories. For fairgoers not afraid to poke a little fun at themselves, Detroit artist William Szaro will do cariactures from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8.

ct Beauty: Inspired by her grandchildren, Jeanne Poulet recently returned to painting flowers.

Pain leads artist to making prints, painting

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Jeanne Poulet is beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel at age 64. Born in Montreal, Poulet was just nine years old when her mother died and left her surrounded by "evil people." As a child she was shuffled back and forth between her father and the homes of friends, acquaintances and strangers. Initially, Poulet's print making and paintings dealt with pedophilia and women's justice issues.

"I wanted to teach people about the and conflict issues. As of the last year, I had a request from Sherry Washington to paint landscapes for her Detroit gallery. Among the pieces is a landscape painted after a photograph my grandfather took on a Swiss camping trip in the 1800s. The palette is much like the patina on a bronze statue."

Thirty of Poulet's paintings and prints are on display in a one-woman show in the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery through June 27. Her video, "Jeanne Poulet Studio Present/ Studio Past" will be shown during recepevils happening to children," said tions to meet the artist June 10 and 17. I'm doing flowers in years. Poulet, who considers herself a survivor. Copies of the soft-cover "Prose, Poems "For all those years, I recorded peace and Etchings by Jeanne Poulet" will be

The show, sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission, spans nearly 20 years. Among the oldest works is an etching dating back to 1979. A book on German etching was Poulet's only book as a child. Print making seemed to spring naturally from her creative spirit. She etched her first print in 1971.

"Printing came easy to me because images are etched backwards on a plate," said Poulet. "I'm dyslexic, so when I paint I have to use a mirror to reverse the image. This is the first time

FINE ARTS

Disney artists demonstrate art of the Mouse

If you've always wondered how Mickey Mouse and the rest of the Disney characters come to life in full color on the big screen, you won't want to miss the Disney Ink & Paint Tour at the 14th annual Art on the Pointe June 7-8 on the grounds of the historic Edsel & Eleanor Ford house, 1100 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores.

You'll enjoy the works of more than 100 artists from across the U.S., and discover how the Disney artists add color to Mickey and all your favorite cartoon characters.

Gallery Animato of Birmingham will host demonstrations of the American fine art of inking and painting animation cels by artists from Walt Disney Studios in Burbank, California 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8.

The Disney ink and paint artists will produce images from such classic animated films as "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Pinocchio" and "Hercules." They will also be creating a special limited-edition cel to commemorate the tour.

Admission to Art on the Pointe is $3, ages 10 and under free. Proceeds benefit the community mental health programs of the Northeast Guidance Center. For more information call. (313) 824-

The American art form of hand-inking and painting animation cels thrives today through the painstaking handinking and painting of some of the most beloved scenes from classic animated motion pictures produced by the Walt Disney Studios over the last 70 years.

What begins as an animator's pencil drawing on paper is carefully transferred onto acetate celluloid sheets by artists especially trained to trace the lines using colored inks and special pens. From there, another artist applies paint to the back of the cel to complete the magical

Due to the growing popularity of collecting original animation art, which dates back to the late 1930s and brings prices at auction of $100,000 and more, Walt Disney Art Classics began in the early 1970s to create more affordable limited-edition artwork.

Walt Disney Art Classics, in conjunction with the ink and paint department at Walt Disney Studios, recreates some of the classic scenes exclusively for collectors. Guests to Gallery Animate and the Disney Ink & Paint Tour will have the opportunity to purchase limited edition images of Walt Disney Studios Animation Art which had been previously created by artists at the Disney Studios.

Hours for Art on the Pointe are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., June 7-8.

shop very much because I love animals and have always had dogs," said Dunn.

Currently employed by a pet supplies distributor in Ann Arbor, Dunn would like to become a full-time artist. A member of Artifacts Art Club. she has shown her oil paintings and tiles in the group's annual show at Livonia City Hall.

"I think the realism is what "I liked the Animal Odyssey attracts people to Diane's tiles," said Atma, a Bloomfield Hills resident. "Most people are fascinated with the 3-D effect.'

> Trina Riordan's whimsical animal sculptures and door/drawer knobs have been on display in the Animal Odyssey shop since February. My favorite is a horse sitting on his haunches. Dog and bunny candle holders run a close second.

Riordan, a Farmington Hills artist, has more than 10 years experience creating sculptures and watercolors. She is a member of the Pontiac-Oakland Society of Artists.

"Trina's clay animal sculptures are so much fun," said Atma.

Other local artists exhibiting work at the Animal Odyssey are Jenn of Plymouth, stained glass panels and sun catchers; Bob Perrish, Livonia, cold cast bronze ducks; Phyllis Hochlowski, Plymouth, watercolors and reproductions; Jeannette Pugliese, Lathrup Village, Cool Cat Creations earrings and pins, and Jana Conger, Brooklyn, limited-edition prints of a cat, giraffe and toucans.

Also of note is the hand-painted, thrown porcelain tableware by Karen Donleavy, a California potter. Donleavy's work is featured in more than 100 stores and galleries including Henri

Bendel and the Museum of Folk Art in Manhattan. Celebrities such as Lauren Bacall, Luciano Pavarotti, Shari Lewis, Cindy Williams, Anthony Perkins, Charles Bronson, and Tracey Ullman have purchased or requested Donleavy's work. Prices for original art works range from $6 for a hand-painted "cat" stone by Pugliese to $550 for the award-winning stained glass panel "Panther Eyes" by

Jenn. An adult-size stuffed llama rocker by Bev Blanchard of northern Michigan is $250. The Animal Odyssey is at 971 North Mill, call (313) 453-5764.

Ehlert will display her painting of Deer Isle Bridge in Maine. Among the exhibits in which she's taken part are the Michigan Fine Arts Competition at the Detroit Institute of Arts; Our Town exhibit, The Community House in Birmingham; Visual. Arts Association of Livonia, Livonia City Hall; Michigan Watercolor Society, and the Association.

"I think, it's about time we had fine art involved with the arts and crafts show," said Ehlert.

Village Buildings

Although the Hill House Museum will not be open for tours as at past Arts & Crafts Festivals, interpreters stationed in the four village buildings will talk about the historical aspects. Birmingham Bloomfield Art according to Greenmead program supervisor Marian Renaud.

"The museum, while not open during the festival, is open every Sunday from 1-4 p.m. ($2 adults, $1 children)," said Renaud.

"The arts and crafts fair and fine arts exhibit will enable people to tour the village buildings for free although donations are always accepted.

"It's a unique opportunity and some of the interpreters will be dressed in historic costumes."

Art blossoms

Grandchildren Sydnee and Pierce triggered Poulet's interest in painting flowers one afternoon about three years ago as she instilled the basics of painting in the two. Poulet's new floral works vibrate with warm colors like red, the landscapes with cool greens and blues.

Poulet began inventing the creatures in "Jenika's Animals" in 1990. Jenika was Poulet's nickname for her mother, a concert pianist. The images in the paintings flow one into the other. Strange creatures, some half human, others looking like elephants, prance and pose in all sorts of positions.

"I don't want to be a camera," said Poulet. "I want to be an artist. My paintings and prints come from my imagination."

Poulet came to the U.S. at age 25. A bad first marriage left her in despair. Throughout her art career, Poulet has battled depression. Son Peter Kirsh, a Plymouth contractor, brought the sun back into her life when he built a solarium/studio onto the back of her Livonia home.

"The solarium is what inspired me to paint flowers," said Poulet, a member of the Scarab Club in Detroit. "Until then, I'd painted in the basement.'

Poulet credits her husband of six years, Jose Cesareo-Perez, with making it possible to pursue her art.

"Jose's been so generous and allowed me to have that peace and contentment to work as an artist," said Poulet.

Since 1983, Dennis Kapp has been a strong supporter of Poulet's. Three years ago, Kapp loaned her a studio in Detroit. The space allows her to paint 40. by 60-inch works.

Poulet has a long list of accomplishments as an artist. She has exhibited at the Swann Gallery, Urban Park-Detroit Art Center. Galerie Biegas, and Swords into Plowshares Peace Center and Gallery in Detroit. Poulet is also a dedicated volunteer for the arts. In January, she was appointed to the board of the Wayne County Council for the Arts. Seven years ago she joined the Windsor Printmaker's Forum and now serves on the board. She is represented by the Sherry Washington Gallery and the National Conference of Artists Gallery in the Fisher Building in downtown Detroit.

"We decided to show Jeanne's work because of her reputation in the arts community, and because the abstracts bring something new to the library fine arts gallery," said Bob Sheridan, commission president.

in for children," said Skaggs. "We'll have sand art and students from the Stevenson High School art department doing face painting."

The Arts & Crafts Festival is the primary fundraiser of the Livonia Arts Commission. A little over $20,000 was raised last year, according to Suzanne Montambeau in the community resources department at Livonia City Hall. In the past, proceeds were spent to buy the bronze "Wisdom and Innocence" sculpture in front of the Livonia Civic Center Library, give money for fine arts scholarships for high school and college students and grants for the Livonia Symphony Orchestra.

"The money goes for a number of arts programs and projects including Music Under the Stars, improvements to the environmental sculpture at city hall, grants to independent groups like Trinity House Theatre and the Livonia/Redford Theatre Guild, expenses for the library art gallery, and to purchase art works for the city's collection,' said Montambeau.

Visitors feasting on a variety of foods will also be contributing to a good cause. A portion of the food vendor sales during the festival go to nonprofit organizations such as Very Special Arts (gyros, grinders and corn dogs), Livonia Symphony Orchestra (chicken), Redford/Livonia Theatre Guild (strudels and fruit shakes), Friends of Greenmead (Polish and Italian sausage), and the Livonia Historical Commission (pizza and fresh lemonade).

Author Kirsch reveals provocative, disturbing Bible

The Harlot by the Side of the Road: Forbidden Tales of the Bible

By Jonathan Kirsch (Ballantine Books, $27)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

In a promotional note on Jonathan Kirsch's provocative new book, religious writer Karen

> Armstrong writes, "This ... book is an important reminder that God cannot always be identified w i t h

Kirsch respectable middle-class morality, and that some of the more shocking stories in the Bible have hard but necessary lessons for us today." Kirsch has chosen seven disturbing Old Testament stories to show that the Bible is considerably more complex and challenging than our Sunday school ideas allow.

"The Bible is thought of as prim and proper - and it's not," Kirsch said in a telephone interview. "It wasn't written as Sunday School stories for children. These stories were written for an adult audience by sophisticated, worldly people."

Kirsch is a lawyer who specializes in intellectual property law, a writer and a Bible scholar and book columnist for the Los Angeles Times who often writes about religious subjects. A practicing Jew, Kirsch belongs to a conservative congregation.

"I am an observing and believing person of the Jewish faith. I would add, too, that I come to the Bible with open eyes and an open mind," he said. "I'm willing to entertain the notion that the Bible has something more going

An open mind and a willingness to give up notions of God as a genteel spirit who demands strict moral behavior is necessary to fully understand the often bizarre behavior of the biblical God. Kirsch's book retells the Bible stories in a sprightly modern language and then explores the multiple meanings of each story as explored by biblical scholars over the centuries.

And what strange stories they are. In "Lot and his Daughters," the daughters seduce their father to preserve the human race; in "The Rape of Dinah," Dinah's brothers extract a spectacularly vicious revenge for what might not have been rape at all; in the title story, Tamar disguises herself as a prostitute to seduce her father-in-law to assert her family rights.

In each of these and the other stories, right and wrong, good and evil are not clear cut. The role of God and what God wants are also murky. As presented by Kirsch, the Bible is a continuing discussion with the Deity about what is right and what is wrong.

"It's fundamental in the Bible that humanity is invited to engage in a dialogue and even in a debate with God," Kirsch said. "It starts with Abraham when Abraham engages in a debate with God about the fate of Sodom. He has the audacity to haggle with God. And this happens again and again in the Bible."

Kirsch is aware that others have a different view of the Bible. He said he respects the view of those who believe the Bible to be the revealed word of God, but he said scholars have long believed the Bible is a collection of books and stories created over a long period of time by different people.

"That's not an impious or irreverent way of looking at God," Kirsch said.

"If you believe God is mysterious and ineffable - and the Bible, itself, says He is - we can only get sideways glances at God. It's like the story of the blind men and the elephant."

The strangest story is that of Zipporah and Moses. In a few brief lines (Exodus 4:24-26) the Bible tells us that God tried to kill Moses but was restrained when Moses' wife Zipporah performed circumcision on their infant son.

Kirsch quotes philosopher Martin Buber as saying we have a moral duty to stand up to God as Zipporah does in this story.

But the story itself is mysterious and vague, even as to who is doing what to whom.

"That's the central question," Kirsch said. "What's going on here. There are secret and hidden meanings to many of the sacred texts."

Kirsch provocatively discusses the meaning of circumcision and the meaning of sexuality in the Bible. Many acts that are considered sinful in conventional morality are condoned and even lauded in the Bible. In the title story. Tamar's seduction of Judah leads to the continuance of the family line that results in David and eventually the Messiah (in both Christian and Jewish understanding of that word). The Bible also presents David (God's favorite) as a deeply flawed man whose sins are constantly forgiven because he serves God's higher purpose. And God is also presented in ways that seem cruel, capricious, amoral.

Kirsch said the overarching message of the Bible is the preservation of life and that many of these stories suggest that this principle often supersedes all others.

Kirsch will sign and discuss his book 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Border's in Farmington Hills, 30995 Orchard Lake Road

BOOKS

Journalist's first novel engrossing thriller

Dark Rage By Lowell Cauffiel (Plannacle, $5.99, 349 pp)

VICTORIA

Readers are probably most familiar with Lowell Cauffiel via his true crime stories. The most recent. "Eye of the Beholder," is the story of a Battle Creek news anchor woman murdered by her husband. "Dark Rage" is the Chelsea writer's first novel, and though it may not match the depth of the true crime accounts, it has its moments and makes for an engrossing, even eye-opening read. I'd advise not delving into it while winging across the friendly skies, however, especially if you feel more secure with

The story opens in a Detroit suburb on the day before Thanksgiving as a deeply disturbed Vietnam veteran coolly and methodically shoots his wife in the head with a Mini-Master Black Widow .22 revolver.

Soon after, he's packed three more revolvers, one rifle, and four boxes of ammo and headed for Detroit Metro Airport. It's the busiest flying day of the year, and he's chosen the time carefully. Laurel King, a disgruntled air traffic controller (and quintessential control freak) is clearly a man with a score to settle. We will see what it is, and the bizarre way he intends to settle it.

Much of this book's strength lies in Cauffiel's extensive background research, which lends substantial plausibility and immediacy to the story. By the may feel almost as if you could recognize an air traffic controller on sight.

Also, you may feel as if you could sit down in one of the those dimly lit airport towers and do a little air traffic controlling yourself. You'll know how ground traffic is handled vs. planes newly aloft vs. planes leaving Detroit's air space. You'll learn how different objects are represented by slightly varying shades of green on that flashing radar scope. You'll find out just how much redundancy is at work in a control tower, what happens to avoid disaster when a radar system fails, what's available for back-up even when all else fails. You'll also get a crash course in police work, too - especially what goes on during a hostage situation these days. Although airport/police jargon and countless acronyms get in the way both feet firmly planted on terra time you've finished reading, you occasionally, Cauffiel has a way of weaving in most of the information so that it's a seamless part of the nail-biting drama.

Some crackling dialogue and straight-forward prose go far to keep things moving apace, although the story is at times hindered by a scattershot format that can be as confusing as the overcrowded cast. Some players (tough-talking union boss, thickheaded cop, loquacious Hispanic, womanizing airline pilot etc.) seem too much like types straight out of central casting.

Cauffiel's leading men fare better. The explosive Kring (nicknamed, appropriately, "Bat") is a rather complex villain with a heartbreaking past, painted not in blacks and whites, but in shades of gray. The author's insight into a twisted mind and how a murderous fantasy can take shape there is fascinating and altogether convincing, making the bad guy ultimately the most credible character in the story.

Kring's main nemesis, Detective Sgt. Jack Riker (of the Metro Airport Police), has his own shades of gray, plus plenty of rough edges, too. In a sense, these two are opposite sides of the same battered coin. Weaponcarrying, 46-year-old Vietnam vets, scarred by alcohol, they are nostalgia prone loners traveling different routes - one the cop, one the criminal. Each is marked, above all, by a singular dedication and attachment to his work.

Probably due in large part to his experience as a journalist and a true crime writer, Cauffiel possesses a special knack for working real-life events into a tale of fiction. Here, most notably, Metro Airport's Flight 255 disaster and its aftermath plays a significant role. If you've ever visited the Nomads' travel club hangar at Metro (which served as a temporary morgue after the crash), you may never look at it quite the same way after reading of it here.

Though comments about printing glitches in the production of a book rarely find their way into a book review, I feel obligated to remark on it here since it's so appallingly extensive on these pages. Actually, I've never seen anything quite like this. Did nothing with a pulse proof this copy? Such a cavalier approach to words on the part of a major publisher may not be illegal, but it should be.

SPECIAL EVENT

Southfield Centre for the Arts – A place to call home

By Frank Provenzano Staff Writer

Weeks before the grand opening, large pieces of plywood were placed over the broken stained-glass windows at the Southfield Centre for the Arts. Vandals left their mark - again. Skeptics probably shook their heads and warned, "I told you

Yet for those who've stood steadfast for as long as 20 years to see the center become a reality, it was another moment to endure.

Without missing a beat, an idea was readily accepted to transform the shards of colored

When: Friday-Sunday, June 6-8. The center opens 7 p.m. Friday, June 6. Opening weekend hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, June 7, and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, June 8.

Where: 24350 Southfield Road, just south of 10 Mile.

Entertainment: More than 30 free performances of dance, drama, and music including blues, jazz, choral, and orchestral will be presented during grand opening weekend. Call (810) 424-9022 for information.

Highlights: ■ Mosaic Youth Theatre's "Mosaic Tales" with Michigan Opera Theatre's "Broadway to Hollywood Revue" 8 p.m. Friday, June 6; $10 general admission.

■ The Coasters, The Platters, The Drifters with special guests Heidi Hepler and Michele Ramo 8 p.m. Saturday, June 7; $25, Michigan Association of Artists Exhibit, and Park West Gallery presentation: The Works of Anatole Krasnyansky.

glass into a sculpture held and rehearsal spaces for a comwork will hang along the walls and ceiling near the entrance to the refurbished auditorium. Perhaps endurance has given the center's supporters a perspective of what's possible where some see only despair. After all, few projects in the city's recent history embody that spirit of possibility as the Southfield Centre for the Arts on Southfield Road, just north of the expressway, opening Friday, June 6.

Unifying the community

"This is an investment in the community where everyone can come together regardless of race, gender, ethnic background and religious beliefs," said Robert Block, city administrator for Southfield.

Many local art centers provide performance spaces, said Block, but few offer as many classrooms together by copper wire. The art munity that reflects the American melting pot as much as any other city.

"The arts community has been fragmented," said Block. "Some groups meet at high schools, halls or any place they can. We now have a place where they all can meet. This unifies the arts."

During the much-anticipated three-day celebration, the center will feature a packed schedule of arts activities including performances of dance, music, poetry readings and a fine art exhibit. The intent is to showcase a bustling arts center that provides classroom arts instruction, rehearsal spaces and high-quality auditoriums for community groups and professional performances.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony begins Saturday's events, highlighted by an evening concert of the legendary singing groups The Coasters, The Platters and Opening act: Heidi Hepler and Michele Ramo of Redford will perform their original blend of Brazilian, Flamenco, and Jazz music at the grand opening of Southfield Centre for the Arts.

The Drifters.

To date. Southfield has provided about $4 million to buy and renovate the former B'nai David Synagogue. Another $3 million is expected to be spent on renovations throughout the 55,000square-foot facility.

This fall, the city will seek a $1 million Kresge grant and must raise at least another $1 million to match it, said Marlowe Belanger, vice president of the city's cultural arts division.

Most of the additional money will pay for further renovations to one of the two auditoriums, a converted temple with bench seating. The tentative plan includes building second-floor dressing rooms above the stage.

"We're only at the first of three phases," she said. "We're opening the doors for the community to come visit the facility. But the appeal is regional. It's open to art groups from Detroit to Rochester.

A formal survey conducted in the early 1980s indicated a need to provide a place for local arts groups. The city recognized that need. But the debate about the value of spending tax money for the arts often paralleled the broader national debate on the issue, which often slipped into political grandstanding. Or reflected the view that art was a luxury, not a necessity, and that artists should fend for themselves.

"For the last 20 years, many people didn't think we should be spending our time on the arts center," said Albert Scaglione, a board member of the federation of the arts, a council of 53 arts groups throughout metro Detroit.

"Many of us realized Southfield is at a crossroads," said Scaglione, who also owns Park West Gallery on Northwestern Highway. "It's critical to have stability in our cultural activities and do it in a way that's not only for the upper clsses, but for all people."

Creative challenges ahead for Centre to remain self-sufficient

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFP WRITER

Not since the Macomb Center or the Performing Arts opened in 1982 has a major arts center been unveiled in metro Detroit. In many ways, the challenges shead for the Southfield Centre for the Arts could parallel those faced by the Macomb Center.

Fifteen years ago, the 144,000square-foot center on the campus of Macomb Community College was built for $9 million. Considering the center's outstanding acoustics, the facility would probably cost twice as much

In the early 1980s, the center was financed by a county tax. Until recently, it was largely supported by the college. It wasn't until three years ago that the Macomb Center was in the black and on its way to becoming financially self-sufficient, said Lynne Hoover, marketing direc-

"It's taken a while to get an identity," she said. "For a while, people thought we only had small college productions."

On the contrary, with 340 activities in the first three-quarters of its fiscal year, the Macomb Center is one the busiest venues in the country, presenting Broadway musicals and a variety of music series, including jazz, blues, country and opera. They also rent their 1,250-seat auditorium and a "black box" space to local theater and dance companies.

The breakthrough, said Hoover, came about five years ago when the center began to promote big-name performers. A sophisticated database of interested county residents and a glitzy brochure were instrumental to their success, she said.

"The key is to define what the community wants," said Larry Carrico, Macomb Center production manager. "We've defined our community as seniors, those interested in country, children's theater and Oldies acts. Plus, we're affordable. We don't have $45 tickets."

Marketing is hardly a concern at the Plymouth Community Arts Council: Since moving into the renovated former Jehovah's Witness church at Sheldon and Junction, they've presented art classes, youth choirs, recitals and exhibited work of local fine ship role to establish a model for in reducing the frequency and other communities to centralize an arts organization that provides for a group facility," said Lucius Theus, president of the federation for the arts.

"We already had many arts activities in Southfield, but once we had a place to help focus our efforts, the synergy of all the groups came together," said Theus, a private-sector business consultant and retired Air Force major general.

"As a city, we're going to accomplish our goal faster than if we'd have left it up to these groups to find a way for themselves," he said. The goal, according to Theus, goes well beyond encouraging artistic expression. Ultimately, he said, the center is a tangible means to build cross-cultural understand-

In the mid 1960s, Theus served on a committee studying race relations in the armed forces. The committee proposed an ethnic understanding program to minimize radal friction. It succeeded, according to Theus, intensity of racially motivated incidents. A lively arts center with diverse ethnic arts groups mingling with each other will cultivate wider tolerance, said

Like an evolving piece of art and the city itself, the Southfield Centre is a "work in progress." While this week the focus is on accomplishing a 20-year dream. the long-term success depends were putting the finishing touchon whether the 80 arts groups who gave commitments to use the facility will indeed make the center their home.

"When we first acquired the building, plugs and bare wires were hanging from the ceiling. There was more work to be done than we anticipated," said Block. "We told the arts groups that we'd provide the facility, but the operational funds would have to come from them."

Yet there is no formal process whereby arts groups can reserve and rent the facility. For instance, rental fees, said Belanger, are negotiated based on what the groups can afford.

The Photography Guild, which holds its weekly meetings at the center, has provided ongoing photographic documentation of the renovation in place of paying

Meanwhile, in her office not far from the cluttered generalpurpose auditorium, Belanger wondered whether the specially ordered silk draperies would arrive on time. She didn't seem bothered.

"I've been at this for 18 years," she said. "It seems like such a long time. Then again, it seems like such a short time."

Either way, the Southfield Centre for the Arts has been a long time coming.

Will Tigers pass on Anderson?

Westland pitcher gives Detroit No. 1 dilemma

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK STAFF WRITER

He is 6-foot-10. He is left-handed. And he can throw a baseball through a rainy spring game without getting it damp.

In all of baseball there is only one like Westland's Ryan Anderson — 6foot-10 left-hander Randy Johnson of the Seattle Mariners.

Which is why all of baseball is hot after the Dearborn Divine Child prep star. They see Anderson as a dominating southpaw capable of leading a team into the post-season.

But being one of a kind, or, more accurately, half of two of a kind, means drafting Ryan Anderson and signing Ryan Anderson could be two different things.

Gus and Connie Anderson, the mother and father of the prep prodigy, are fully versed in the economics of supply and demand in a free market economy.

They figure $2 million, roughly what last year's No. 1 draft pick (Kris Benson) got from the Pittsburgh Pirates, just isn't going to make it this time around.

Not for a youngster almost certain to be one of the first four players picked in the June 3 Major League Draft and who could easily be No. 1.

Ryan Anderson is one of four players being seriously considered by the Detroit Tigers, who by 'virtue' of their 109-loss season have the first choice in this year's draft.

The Tigers are also considering reliever Matt Anderson of Rice University, prep outfielder Darnell

King of the hill: At 6 feet, 10 inches, Westland's Ryan Anderson is being compared to Randy Johnson of the Seattle Mariners. His fastball has been clocked in the mid-90s.

The economics of the situation have become very real to the Anderson family, ever since the major league scout came up to dad during the Team One national baseball showcase in Cincinnati, Ohio, last summer and said, 'Congratulations, your son just became a millionaire.

"Our family has become very versed in this over the course of the last year," said Connie Anderson, art teacher in the Farmington Hills school district for 31 years. "We've handled things, educated ourselves far beyond the average family.

"My husband is pretty much on top of things. We really know what we're doing as far as an amateur parent situation." But new ground rules are being formed. There will have to be gentle treading on both sides. Anderson knows his son "wants to go with the Tigers. He wants to be a Michigander. They all know that. He wants to stay local." He also has heard the whispers that it's not going to happen. He'd like to be surprised — but he doesn't expect to be. "And I'm not necessarily sold on

The Spartans added two more goals for good measure in the second half - Lanette Moss with 29:45 remaining and Sue Bear at the 18:45 mark.

"You're going to get fewer chances to score in the state tournament and when you do you have to capitalize," Kimble said. "We didn't play well the last time we played them because of poor offensive execution. Whether it was the head, the foot, or whatever, we wanted to direct the ball on the net.

"It was remarkable in the fact that in practice yesterday we worked on three different things and we were able to score on all three today."

It was the 42nd career shutout for Stevenson goalkeeper Jenny Barker, who has allowed only one goal all year. She stopped a first-half breakaway attempt by Churchill's Kersten Conklin.

"Each individual player is focused on what job they have to do, and collectively they put it together to get the job done," Kimble said. "It was a regional final, of course, and we had the luxury of playing our crosstown rival and it made it much easier to get up for the game."

Churchill bowed out with a 13-4-4 record. The Chargers found themselves under an avalanche of Stevenson blue jerseys. "They (Stevenson) won every single ball in the air and a majority of the 50-50 balls," Churchill coach Chad Campau said. "They pres-

Prep star John Patterson was one of the four set free because their drafting teams failed to make them a bona fide offer within 15 days of the draft. He wound up getting more than $6 million from the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Another was Matt White, whom Ryan roomed and pitched with on the U.S. Junior Olympic team. He was set free from San Francisco and wound up signing with Tampa Bay for more than $10 million.

"He got it," Anderson said, "because they bid it up. So that's what people will pay if they're really in the hunt for talent."

"You have to look at those four guys last year as a special circumstance," Smith said. "Certainly that has to be considered, but you have to deal with the majority of signings. I think you negotiate from a broader base. You consider, it's a factor, but you have to look at the majority of signings."

Of the Andersons, does Ryan's ceiling exceed Matt's? Decisions like those are what scouts, personnel directors and general managers make or break their reputations on. If they're wrong, they get second-guessed the rest of their lives.

"Ryan's muscle structure hasn't even caught up with his bone structure," his father said. "And when that happens, what is going to happen with his veloci-

"It's only going to get better. And that's what they bid on potential. You get pretty high potential with Ryan Anderson. There is no ceiling.'

Scouts must agree or they wouldn't tag Anderson as metropolitan Detroit's best pitching prospect since Steve Avery nine years ago.

He's left-handed, like Avery, but has a mid-90s fastball superior to the Taylor southpaw's. Avery, however, could hit, which added to his National League appeal.

Pitchers with the leverage, financial and physical, of being 6-foot-10 are rare. There are no 6-foot-6 or taller pitchers in the Hall of Fame.

So Gus and Connie Anderson rightly see something unique in Ryan. And like any parents they want only what's best for their

"I think our family is just so down to earth," Connie said, "that's secondary as far as 'here's all this money, what are we going to do with it?' His happiness is in the forefront."

"I don't want Ryan to be hurt by my statements," his father said. "But I want to be honest in my feelings.

"My feelings aren't necessarily going to Detroit (as to) where he goes, but for Ryan to make the decision. The end result is it's going to be his decision, and his only.

"Because it's going to be his life. We're going to be involved with him, helping him make that decision.

"June 3 is only one step to the majors. The next step is signing the contract. And in between that is negotiating. Who knows what's going to happen?"

If Anderson doesn't go to the Tigers, it's likely either Philadelphia, Anaheim, San Francisco or Toronto, which draft next, will select him.

The family will look carefully at the organization and bonus before making a decision.

There is a fallback position a partial scholarship to play baseball at the University of Michigan under former major league left-hander Goeff Zahn.

Zahn couldn't offer a full ride because the odds on Anderson even reaching the school were slim. The family wasn't insulted because it bought into the MET college tuition plan.

It strains credibility to believe Anderson would turn down more than $2 million to go to college.

"It appears to us, the way things are going," Anderson said, "he won't be going to college. But you never know about the draft. Funny things happen."

Another part of the equation is rumors. Ryan Anderson has done things many adolescents do as they grow up.

Those things become family "stories, a chuckle, one or two decades down the line. But when millions are at stake, the humor

"I don't want to be talking about rumors," Gus Anderson said. The trouble with rumors, though, is they take on a life of their own. Embellishment and enlargement are part of the package.

It's also a fact of draft left that rumors get started and stories get told because certain teams (and/or players) hope to manipulate the system to their advan-

- A part of life is to profit from your mistakes. Don't make them again and try to help those who follow to avoid them.

"You watch this guy play," Smith said, "and he shows you tremendous makeup on the field.

"He has had some incidents off the field. We've tried to get into tives, Alan and Randy Henthat as much as we can. We've talked to the family.

"The kid made a couple of mistakes. We wish they wouldn't have happened, they wish they wouldn't have happened. But we don't think it was anything that would make us delete him from our list.

"And as far as the conversations I've had with him, he's a nice kid. He handles himself well. He's very respectful."

It may come down to signing, though. If Detroit doesn't feel it can reach an agreement with the Andersons or their representa-dricks, then it will cross the lefthander off its list.

"Of the four guys, we've dealt with all their agents in the past," Smith said. "Scott (Boras, Drew's agent) is a tough negotiator. But that's not something to run away from. We're going to take the guy we feel has the highest ceiling."

In all likelihood, Drew has priced himself off the Tigers' list with his agent's public statements about wanting $10 mil-

Most would consider it an upset should Detroit go with McDonald, who has a scholarship to be a running back at Texas. Still, he has an older brother doing well in the Yankees' organization and he's indicated he'll play baseball if they'll play ball with the money.

That leaves the Anderson unbrothers, Ryan and Matt.

Is it Matt with his 99 mph fastball, his greater experience and the fact he's a reliever?

Or is it Ryan with his 95 mph fastball, his lanky left-handed body and a ceiling higher than

"There's logical offers, and illogical offers," his father said. "We want a logical offer."

New Metro circuit combines 2 leagues

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

A team named Livonia Adray playing under the lights at Ford Field in Livonia.

Perhaps it's a good omen.

The last time a collegiate team played under the same name at Ford Field - more than a decade ago - the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League flourished.

Livonia Adray, formerly known as Little Caesars, is a member of the new Adray Metro Baseball Association, a merger of the LCBL and the Adray Metro Baseball League.

The eight-team league includes three teams from the LCBL and five from the Adray Metro Baseball League.

Games will be played at three sites, including Ford Field. The other sites are MicMac Park in Windsor and Wyandotte's Memorial Park.

This is the first full week of action.

Four of the five teams from the Adray Metro Baseball League have no age restrictions. Some of the players are in their late 20s and 30s and have professional baseball experience.

The fifth team from the Adray Metro Baseball League is the Lake Area Rams, a collegiate team coached by Rick Berryman, who is also Redford Union's skip-

The Rams will join Livonia Adray, Livonia DCI and Hines Park in the Collegiate Division. Collegiate teams' players cannot turn 20 during the season.

The other division, called the Adray Metro Baseball Division. will consist of four unlimited age teams: Troy Jet Box, Windsor Stars, Windsor Selects and Downriver Adray.

The new league gives the three teams remaining from the LCBL a new lease on life. Teams dropping out in recent years left the league's future undecided before the merger.

Lyle Trudell of the Livonia Parks and Recreation Department is glad those troubles are past tense. The new league also PREVIEW has dropped some of the residency requirements for each team.

"Past troubles I think were not so much reality as they were created by individuals just talking, trying to find problems," Trudell said. "Most of those indivuduals are gone now."

Each team plays a 28-game round-robin schedule and each game counts in the final standings. The winner of the Collegiate Division will be eligible for a berth to the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national championship in Johnstown, Pa., according to Trudell.

offs, Trudell said. Ford Field will be the site of double-headers on Wednesday

There will be no league play-and Fridays and four games on Sundays. The Rams' first weekend of play is a busy one for Berryman, whose high school team was to play in a Class A district 24 hours earlier.

Berryman said it's a dream. not an inconvenience, to have two seasons overlap.

"To me I've died and gone to Heaven," Berryman said.

The road trips to Windsor will be nothing new for the Rams, who made the trip several times last year. It's hard to go the entire season without visiting the casino.

They better remember to have enough change leftover to cross the bridge.

"My wife June said I thought we were just stopping for a minute.' I lied," Berryman recalled. "I love those Candadian games, but I donated to the Canadian economy about 100 bucks."

John Moraitis, the long-time Little Caesars coach, has the same title with Livonia Adray.

Mike George, the former Madonna University coach, coaches DCI. Hines Park again will be coached by Dave Carroll.

Moraitis hopes the new teams

"I'm not donig hand springs but I like baseball and I'm competitive and like to be around good ballplayers," Moraitis said. There are more teams to play. Everyone has to play the same amount of times. I have a a decent team. We'll be competitive, I got about seven or eight pitchers."

Berryman played as a collegian for a team sponsored by Redford Township in the Detroit Free Press League, which played some of its games at Ford Field.

He hopes some of that excitement from his youth returns.

"It was big time baseball back then," Berryman said. "My recollections are the hill would be lined with people in chairs. My hope is that you're going to see some of the best local college players in the area playing baseball. My team is a hodge podge from all over. From Divison I. II and III these are good college ballplayers."

Titans' Gundry leaves ton of hitting records

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR

Really, it's a shame it's coming

What a road Ed Gundry has traveled. And through his entire journey, there have been two significant consistencies:

• His success:

•The lack of recognition he has received for it.

The Plymouth Salem graduate (1992) always had the ability to play NCAA Division I baseball. It was just a matter of where.

He started his collegiate travels at Eastern Michigan, but "conflicting personalities" with then-coach Roger Coryell prompted Gundry to leave after a few games his freshman sea-

Even while playing for UDM, Gundry's travels continued. He started in left field as a freshman, moved to first base as a sophomore, played first and third as a junior and this year, as a senior, he played third.

And his performance? "I'm sorry to say I'm losing him," said Miller. "He's a great talent, one of the hardest workers I've ever seen. And he's one of the best hitters I've ever seen in my 35 years of coaching."

Gundry certainly proved that. Throughout his Titan career (he never missed a game), his batting average went in just one direction - up. He hit .326 as a freshman, .335 as a sophomore, .362 as a junior and, this past season, .388.

It wasn't until this just-completed season that Gundry received recognition worthy of his accomplishments. He was named to the all-Midwestern Collegiate Conference's first Apparently, knocking in a run a game wasn't good enough. This season, Gundry outdid himself:

He hit .388 and tied the UDM single-season record for homers with 18, and he drove in a teamhigh 50 runs - in 49 games.

All of which helped guide the Titans to the MCC championship and a shot at gaining a berth in the NCAA regionals opposite the University of Alaba-

The Salem grad holds the UDM career record for hits (240) and at-bats (681); his career batting average is .352. He also tied the school's career mark for doubles (50), is second in RBI (161), tied for third in runs (145) and is fourth in homers (32).

And yet, despite all this, Gundry has never been drafted by a pro team. "He's the hardest working kid, and you never know he's around," said Miller. "Eddie has a short, quick stroke when he swings and he uses the whole ball park.

"He can hit the ball with power to the opposite field."

Gundry's fielding at third was good, if not great: "The more he played there, the better he got," Miller said.

So why is he playing for the Birmingham Lynch and Sons team this summer, while starting his off-field career in computer technology with Chrysler?

Why hasn't some pro team talked to him? "I don't know," admitted

Miller. "I talked to a couple of teams." Gundry said, "and they showed some interest. If I get a call, I get a call. I'm not getting psyched up for it though.'

His age — he turned 23 in January — is working against him; Gundry knows. So he's planning for his non-baseball

"My future's starting to take shape," he said. "I'm getting married in a year, we'll be looking for a house — I'll start doing all that grown-up stuff and give up being a kid."

Sounds like the pros' loss. Gundry's record is impressive, but it isn't relegated to his onfield performance.

He proved that this season, as

"Yeah, we were the young and the old," said Gundry. "I tried to talk to (the younger players), tried to keep them up. I remember when I was a freshman; you hit the ball right at people two or three times in a row and you start getting down.

"I'd just tell them to forget it, to keep plugging away — that's baseball."

His efforts helped UDM peak at just the right time. The Titans started a pivotal road trip by losing to Northern Illinois May 3. That dropped their overall record to 20-21.

After that, however, they won seven of their next eight, including a 6-3 win over Wright State in the MCC championship game.

"A lot of the guys had never won anything so big," said Gundry, who had been instrumental in Salem's trek to the Class A state championship in '91. "It was pretty neat watching them run all over the field, hugging each other."

UDM's season ended with 7-4 and 5-4 losses to Troy State (Troy. Ala.) in an NCAA Regional play-in series, a sad conclusion to an otherwise superb 27-24 campaign.

"We were overachievers this year," summarized Miller. "I told them that we beat all the good teams we aren't supposed to beat, because you worked so "It was a beautiful, beautiful group because of the leadership of Gundry and (Mike) Pesci. They both deserve to be drafted."

It probably won't happen, but Gundry's is the kind of story deserving that type of finish. And as his numbers have always indicated, give him a chance and he'll be a success.

MCC Player-of-Year Pesci ready for draft

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

As a high school athlete, Mike Pesci was known more for his exploits on the football field than the baseball diamond, but that's like ancient history now.

In two seasons with the Titans,

Pesci hit .361 with 22 doubles, 21 homers and 67 RBI. He scored 53 of 86 runs this year.

Pesci, who briefly attended Oakland Community College and made stops at Eastern Michigan, Yavapai College in Arizona and Henry Ford Community College, said he couldn't be happier about his two years at UDM. "Coach (Bob) Miller is a good coach, but he gets a lot of players who are considered rejects," he

"For us to go to Michigan, Michigan State or Eastern and show them we can play baseball down here, too, that was great. A lot of times you get taken for, granted. I had fun playing for coach Miller." The pro scouts have been taking Pesci seriously, however. He most likely will be drafted Monday or Tuesday; the only question is in what round?

Pesci, who could be compared to former Detroit Tiger Kirk Gibson because of his team-first, play-to-win attitude, was taken in the 30th round a year ago and has a wait-and-see outlook this

"I'm trying to keep it in perspective; I'm not getting myself all worked up," Pesci said. "I know I won't be a top-round pick or anything. I'm confident I can compete wherever I go, but if it doesn't happen I'm not going to lose any sleep over it. "A lot of players would trade their sister for a chance to get drafted. If I get drafted, it will be an honor to play baseball again; if. I don't, it won't affect my lifelong goals."

Pesci signed papers, allowing Arizona to select him again if it wants. The Reds gave him an eye test, and the Pirates asked for medical records regarding supposed knee surgery. Pesci said he had a cyst removed from the knee, "and it was made out to be more than it was."

If he isn't drafted, Pesci said he won't try to catch on as a free agent or play independent ball. But he will continue to play Class A ball this summer with Birmingham Lynch.

"If I'm going to go, I'm going full out to make the Major Leagues," he said. "I'm not just going to kick around in the minor leagues, so I can tell stories some-

"If I'm going to play baseball, I'm better off staying here, making money and getting treated better than I would anywhere playing in the minor leagues." People might have forgotten

Pesci was an all-state linebacker on Harrison's 1991 Class BB championship team, but football is now just a sport he played long ago.

"It is until I see my brothers (Joe and Dave) out there playing," he said. "I get the itch back in my shoulder to get out there and hit somebody.

"Baseball runs you down enough. If I had played football four or five years in college, I can't imagine where I'd be today. But it will always be a big part of what I did."

RECREATION

NATURE NOTES

It's hard for us to believe that 14,000 years ago there was a mile-high thick layer of ice in southeastern Michigan. Near the edge of the glacial wall was a climate much like the tundra is today. As the glacier receded, many changes occurred in the plant and animal life of. Michigan.

Two cold hardy animals that lived in southeastern Michigan in the wake of the melting glacier were the Jefferson mammoth and the American mastodon. No woolly mammoths have been found in Michigan, sorry.

Both animals had very elephant-like features, are distantly related to our modern elephants, but are very different from today's elephants.

According to J. Alan Holman's book, "Ancient Life of the Great Lakes Basin," remains of 260 different mammoths and mastodons have been found in Michigan.

Of those, 211 were American mastodons. Mammoths were primarily grass eaters, while the mastodon preferred twigs and nuts. The flat grooved teeth and the side to side movement of its jaw reflects the mammoth's taste for grass.

If you visit Cranbrook Institute of Science's display on elephants you will get a chance to giant mammoths and mastodons that roamed Redford 12,000 years ago.

Mastodons, on the otherhand, had knobs on their teeth, something like those on our molars. Their jaw moved up and down to crush nuts and Teeth of mastodons grew learn more about in thin layers, like the growth rings of a tree. This growth reflected times of abundant food and times of little food. By examining the layers and patterns of growth. scientists can determine how old an animal was and during which season it died.

Both animals stood from 10-11 feet tall at the shoulder. Thick pillar-like legs supported their weight. Like elephants of today, these huge animals had a craving for salt. Southeastern Michigan had many good salt deposits that were beneficial to these animals.

It has been noticed that all the mammoth/mastodon finds have been in the southern half of the Lower Peninsula.

Paleontologists theorize that the glacier did not recede far enough north for these animals to colonize the northern half of the peninsula before the large animal extinction occurred 10,000 years ago.

That's when the mammoths, mastodons, woodland muskox, giant beaver, Scott's moose, shortfaced bear and flat-headed peccary died out from Michigan. Scientists are still debating about what caused these large animals to die.

If you visit Cranbrook Institute of Science's display on elephants you will get a chance to learn more about giant mammoths and mastodons that roamed Redford 12,000 years

The professional bowlers will be represented by both genders as the men will be contending in the Greater Detroit Open at Taylor Lanes on Eureka Road in Taylor and the ladies will have a regional tournament at Skore Lanes on Ecorse Road in Taylor, the L.P.B.T. Midwest Regional Taylor Open. The action starts today.

If you hurry, there may be some open spots to bowl in the adult pro-am at noon or 2:30 p.m.

The adult/junior pro-am takes place at 5 p.m. and a junior squad runs at 5 p.m.

Call Taylor Lanes at (313) 946-9092 to see about last-minute openings.

On Tuesday, two more squads of adult pro-ams start at 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. Each amateur entrant bowls with three pro bowlers as partners to shoot for approximately $1,000 in prize money.

On Wednesday, June 4, the pros begin their qualifying rounds which continue Thursday when the field is cut to 24 players for eight games of match play, followed by more match play on Friday. The TV finals are 3 p.m. Saturday, June 7.

The public can purchase tickets for qualifying, match play and the TV finals which will be televised nationally on ABC-TV with Chris Schenkel and Bo Burton announcing. As for the ladies pro tour, the 9 pin "no-tap" pro-am takes place Friday, June 6, with squad.

times at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. It's open to men and women amateurs, with a limited number of junior entries available. The entry fees are: adults/$20 or $15/re-entry and juniors/$10. One out of every six entries will cash.

The ladies schedule of events: Friday, June 6 -4-6 p.m. practice, followed by the pro-ams. Saturday, June 7 - round 1 (six games qualifying) 9:30 a.m. and round 2 (six games qualifying) at 2:30 p.m., cut to 24 players for match play. Sunday, June 8 - 12 games of match play to be followed by the five finalists in stepladder competition for the top prize money.

The Detroit area is always well-represented in these events since we have so many of the top female pro bowlers, including Aleta Sill, Marianne DeRupo, Cheryl Daniels, Lisa Bishop, Jodi Woessner and others from this area who are likely to compete.

hen the Detroit Motor City Horse Show comes Saturday, June 14 to the Bloomfield Hunt Club, Irish eyes will be smiling on 29-year-old captain Derek McConnell.

The riding officer in the Irish Army Equitation School, McConnell will don the green jacket and represent his country in a pair of international Grand Prix events,

He also feels the weight of representing 44 million Irish Americans.

"I've been receiving more and more opportunities of going to the states to ride and teach,' said McConnell, who has been riding since the age of six. "I think riding is a fantastic public relations tool for the military and it's vital part of any business. It's also promoting the American horse. It gets people to join and it helps the morale. It gets the patriotism going. And I think it's the same with any other country."

This Motor City event is made up of 12 to 15 fences at 4 feet, 9 inches to 5-3 in height, which is run against the clock.

"Any prize money I may win will go to charity. I want to put up a good performance throughout the show even though I will only be meeting my horse a few days before the start."

In July, McConnell is scheduled to host a pair of Livonia Ladywood students, Annie Bolognino and Stephanie Marcus, to prepare them for the upcoming high school equestrian season.

The two students will participate in a show in the Dublin area on Irish horses.

McConnell, a native of Naas of instruction. County Kildare, runs his own yard and trains young horses for sale as jumpers and race horses.

He has made three separate teaching trips to Florida and most recently was the featured speaker at the International Stallion Exhibition and Trade Show, a statewide event held in Lansing for the equestrian industry.

He will also coach the USFEA team and accompany a group which will compete in the 1999 CISM Military Games in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

ON THE RUN

One of the greatest things about running is the chance it gives you to get to know interesting, wonderful people whose paths you'd otherwise never cross. Many Detroit-area runners have had the good fortune of meeting Julie Hamilton, of Detroit's Downtown Runners and Walkers, and her family. This past January, Julie lost her father affectionately known throughout his hometown of Richmond as

"Farmer Bill" -- to cancer.

"His hobby was people," said Hamilton, a clinical social worker specializing in sports psychology in private practice in Royal Oak. "At the funeral, we were aghast at how many people showed up with tears in their eyes. He made so many connections, but on a small scale; he wasn't into the big flamboyant things; cocktail parties or hanging out at the bar. He'd stop in at the coffee shop or the local Coney Island and know everyone there.

"We've found out he was good at connecting with young business people. He'd go out and stop at new places just getting started. He'd give them a few words of advice and build up their confidence. People really took that to heart. He has so many adopted sons and daughters across

Macomb County.

Hamilton was the general manager of Mary Jane Shoes on Woodward in Detroit and opened stores for the company around the country before starting his own business with wife Phyllis and saving a historical site known as the Octagon House in 1974 in Washington Township.

To continue his work, the family has established the William K. Hamilton Foundation. It will sponsor local community organizations such as youth fund-raising drives and inner city food programs.

"Hopefully, the foundation will not just give out money, but form more opportunities for people to connect and work together," said Julie, who with her dad called out split times and encouraged runners at last October's Free Press marathon,

To launch their dream, the Hamilton family is sponsoring "Bill's Run, Richmond, Run!" an 8kilometer and 1-mile fun run/walk on Saturday, June 28, in conjunction with the Richmond Area Chamber of Commerce Fireworks Festival. Richmond is off I-94 between Detroit and Port Huron.

The paved, flat and fast course will begin and end at Beebe Park.

Take Exit 247 (the Richmond-New Haven exit) left, or northwest, to Gratiot, or M-19. Turn right. Go left on Main Street to 32 Mile Road, also called Division, and turn right to Beebe

Street and the park.

There'll be a carnival, volleyball, kids' games, a horse-drawn trolley, wood carvings and crafts, and food in addition to fireworks and the runs.

"We'll shut down Main Street for the morning and take the runners through Richmond's oldfashioned downtown," said Julie, volunteer race director who'll be ably assisted by the Downtown Runners and Walkers. "There are some subtle hills, but the course is mostly flat.

The 8K begins at 9 a.m., with the mile following at 10 a.m. Age group awards will go three deep. There'll also be a "Farthest Traveled Award."

Applications are available in area running stores, and the race is listed in Michigan Runner Magazine.

Pre-registration is $14, or $10 without a Tshirt. For kids 12 and under without a shirt, the fee is $8.

After June 18, the cost is $18 with a shirt and $14 without. Race day registration and packet pickup will be 7--9 a.m.

For more information, call Julie at (248) 288-9649 or the chamber of commerce at (810) 727-3900.

Items for On the Run are welcome. Fax them to M.B. Dillon at (313) 459-4224 or Brad Emons at (313) 591-7279.

Volunteers needed

Do you have a few hours a week to spend with some new friends? Botsford Continuing Health Center is seeking a few good people willing to share their time as volunteers to visit residents on a one-to-one basis, participate with residents in group activities or perform light office and administrative duties.

Volunteers who meet a minimum 100-hour service requirement and continue to make a commitment of four hours per week are eligible for benefits that include prescriptions and meals.

An award-winning facility, BCHC offers extended care, hospice care and short-term respite care for families who need relief from daily caregiving activities, as well as a variety of support groups. It is a Medicare/Medicaid-certified facility.

BCHC is located off Folsom Road, west of Orchard Lake Road, at 21450 Archwood Circle in Farmington Hills. For more information about volunteer opportunities, call Kim Petersen at (248) 426-6951.

Gulf War veterans

The Department of Veterans Affairs has published a new regulation extending through the year 2001 the period in which undiagnosed illnesses in Gulf War veterans may appear and be eligible for disability compensation.

Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown said, "Some Gulf War veterans' claims had been denied because their disabilities due to undiagnosed symptoms did not appear until after a two-year presumptive period. This rule broadens VA's ability to give disabled Gulf War veterans the benefit of the doubt for a more realistic period of time as scientific research moves closer to answers about the causes of their health problems."

The regulation, published as an interim rule in the April 29 Federal Register with a request for public comments, is effective immediately. VA may amend the rule based on input received during the public comment period, which ends June

The Detroit VAMC has seen more than 900 Persian Gulf veterans in a special program headed by Dr. Boaz Milner, M.D. Spouses and children of Gulf War veterans have been referred to affiliates for assessment and registration in a government-sponsored program designed to learn more about the effects of Gulf War service on them.

"Our approach from day one was to standardize the assessment - lab, X-rays, and subspecialty consultations as clinically indicated, thus combining phases one and two to expedite the provision of treatment and primary care to all interested Gulf War veterans," said Milner. "That includes neurology, rheumatology, dermatology, psychology, psychiatry and subspecialty disciplines from the very beginning. The most important thing has been the favorable response of our patients to our intensive efforts to help them."

Veterans who believe they may now qualify for compensation but who have not submitted a previous claim and those wishing to reopen a previous claim should call the VA Regional Office at 1-800-827-1000.

General health information unrelated to the compensation process is available to concerned Gulf War veterans at 1-800-749-8387. A special protocol medical examination is available to Gulf War veterans through their local VA medical center. Any such veteran whose health has changed since an initial examination is encouraged to receive a followup examination under the Persian Gulf Registry program.

Service members who remain on active duty but who previously served in the Gulf War theater may call 1-800-796-9699.

e hear the big stories about how sleep deprivation caused the Exxon Valdez oil spill disaster and other major accidents, but there are lot of other people who suffer from sleep disorders on a daily basis and they live close to home.

For instance, a 58-year-old Livonia woman, who asked to be referred to as B.G., was reprimanded by her supervisor for falling asleep at her desk. Even though she was diagnosed with sleep apnea at the Sleep Disorder Center at Garden City Hospital, the supervisor didn't recognize B.G.'s problem as an illness, but rather as a lack of endurance or a personal problem.

And when Elizabeth Garneau of Novi spent 13 years with excruciating headaches and countless doctors' remedies she was stagnant professionally. These women's stories are micro cosms of the effects of sleep deprivation, stories that we hear about, like train wrecks and exhausted shift doctors making bad diagnoses where lives are ruined or ended and countless dollars are spent or lost.

A national commission on sleep disorders research conducted a two-year study and concluded that sleep-related accidents accounted for $46 billion annually, according to information provided by the American Sleep Disorders Association. Likewise, B.G.'s and Garneau's sleep disorders cost them financially and emotionally.

B.G. found herself dozing off at work and while she stopped at red lights. She forced herself to stay awake if she drove for long distances. She can't sit and watch television, because "I'm out like a light."

B.G. had these and other sleep disorder symptoms for four years. "My biggest problem has been at work," she said. "I can be typing and looking at a computer screen and I will go into a little doze for a minute or two or three. The last time my supervisor saw it she chose to write me up, which could cause me to have three days off without pay. She's calling it sleeping on the job. She didn't find me in a corner with my head down asleep. I'm sitting up with my hands on the keyboard."

Suddenly awake

A noise or a body twitch usually jars her awake. "It's a disease just like any other disease." B.G. said. "I'm a very energetic person and in the past few years I'm dragging."

Her treatment has included wearing an apparatus on her face while she sleeps that pumps air into her body. Meanwhile, Garneau, 39, can only guess how living with sleep apnea affected her

For the last 15 years, she usually woke up with migraine headaches. Drugs didn't help and a host of other doctor-prescribed treatments, like steroid injections in the back of her head, failed. Finally she went to the Sleep Disorder Center.

"It seemed silly to me that all that time doctors were treating me and it was something as simple as discovering that it was sleep apnea," she said, adding that the first test showed she stopped breathing 140 times during the night. "Financially, I managed to maintain a job anyway," she said of her employer, Ford Motor Company. But Garneau took countless sick days due to headaches.

"The effects of sleep apnea drastically altered my life," she said. "If I woke up with migraine on Monday I would cancel any plans for the weekend, because I could depend on still having it then." After her treatment, Garneau said, her routine changed dramatically: "I can do anything. My job has escalated to incredible proportions. I could take my career leaps and bounds. I haven't had a headache or lack of sleep alter what I want to do. Referring to a recent promotion with her new employer, Mayflower Vehicle Systems at Johnson Controls in Plymouth, Garneau said: "I could have done this well years ago. Because of being exhausted all the time it held me from even trying. I couldn't count on how I was going to feel to make the plans for the future."

The emotional cost of sleep apnea included feeling dead tired all the time and trying to endure the migraine pain during daily activities. I can imagine all the people with sleep apnea who don't know they have it." she said. "Mine happen to come out through headaches. But the fatigue sets anywhere else in their body."

Both Garneau and B.G. found answers at the Sleep Disorder Center at Garden City Hospital which opened in June 1994. Last year, doctors saw 501 new patients. Both women also had sleep apnea, which is characterized by a cessation of breathing caused by an airway closure, a failure of the brain to send impulses to the diaphragm or a combination of both.

Common disorder

Usually when people with sleep apnea go into a deep sleep the airway closes down and the body automatically throws them back into a lighter sleep. It's the most common of about 88 identified sleep disorders that can be treated, according to Karen Parsell, Sleep Disorder Center a Garden City Hospital manager.

"People who have this have a progression of problems," Parsell said. "They have high blood pressure, many go into cardiac arrest and have a heart attack. The body compensates for no air. As the airway closes down, the heart slows down. It is going into a slow death. Unless you have a very, very strong heart it is going to affect it. Many people die of cardiac arrest and never have their problem diagnosed."

Many patients at the Sleep Disorder Center exhausted every other medical treatment. Parsell said. "Not only does it cost them in so many different ways, but mostly in their quality of life and how happy they are when they get up," she said. "Imagine going two years with grabbing little sleep. Even though they're sleeping 12 hours a night they are in a state that they are not sleeping at all. Their bodies are working harder. Sleep is nourishment. We bring these people in and in one day we can figure out what their problem is. The second day we can treat their problem and they say they feel better."

HELEN FURCEANSTAFF ARTIST

She tells an array of success stories. There was a man who scheduled to be tested, but before he came in he had a heart attack. Doctors recommended a pacemaker but, before the surgery, Sleep Disorder Center doctors discovered he had sleep apnea. The next year, he had lost 45 pounds.

"He told me his quality of life had improved by 200 percent," Parsell added.

The right diagnosis is a matter of life and death for a lot of people. The National Commission on Sleep Disorders found that habitual short sleepers are at risk of increased morbidity and mortali-

"According to several studies, individuals who report sleeping six hours or less a night experienced poorer health than those sleeping seven to eight hours a night," according to the commission. Also, a study by the National Transportation Safety Board found that fatigue was the most common cause of fatal-to-the-driver truck accidents.

Sleep deprivation has been named the cause of countless accidents on the rails and buses. At sea, the most notorious was the Exxon Valdez oil spill. Although many believe the captain's alcohol impairment caused the accident, in fact, it was the third mate, who had slept only six hours the night before after two days of loading cargo, who was in charge of the ship at the time of the accident,

Adhesive could make stitches obsolete

Remember all those warnings about gluing your fingers together? If a University of Michigan Medical Center doctor has his way, emergency rooms all over the U.S. will be using something similar in place of stitches.

Dr. James Quinn, M.D., a U-M emergency medicine expert, has completed an extensive study of a skin adhesive that takes the place of sutures in closing wounds. The study was published in the May 21 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The glue is less painful to used in Canada and Europe, but according to Quinn, it's stronger, more flexible and less toxic. It works by simply squeezing the wound together and applying the glue on top, essentially forming a bridge. It can be used practically anywhere on the body, except the hands, feet and around mucous membranes such as the lips. The glue does not have to be removed; it simply wears away as skin cells are sloughed off.

The study looked at 130 Canadian patients, half of whom were treated with the new skin adhesive while late tissue adhesive, is awaiting the other half received standard sutures. Quinn says the glue is great clinical studies that the glue is less for treating children and others who closed by the new adhesive and painful to use, quicker to apply than are afraid of needles since it's a virtually pain-free procedure.

Travel details at your fingertips via Internet

plans keep changing as it is so I won't be searching on the Internet for things to do and places to go.

If your vacation plans aren't firmed up yet, there are at least three Web sites you might be interested in visiting: the Hostelling International-American Youth Hostels site; Preview Travel; or the Go

Camping America Directory. Planning a camping trip will be easier if you visit the Go Camping America Directory www.gocampingamerica.com. RVers and campers now have more than 3,100 listings full of helpful information. Organized by state, the directory contains information on individual campgrounds such as ratings from consumer directories, descriptions of the campgrounds, details about the number and type of sites offered, amenities, services and recreational facilities.

Coming soon will be maps so consumers can view lists of campgrounds by region. The listed campgrounds are members of the National Association of RV Parks & Campgrounds (ARVC) which is the host for the Go Camping America Web site.

My summer vacation All in one travel site

Preview Travel at http://www.previewtravel.com could be your all-in-one site for planning summer vacations.

Whether you're looking for a back road adventure, you're a family of four waiting to hit the beach, or a more casual traveler attending a class reunion, Preview Travel will help you research, plan and book your own trips.

"People want their summer vacation to be a fun, relaxing escape from everyday life, and that's where Preview Travel comes in," said Barrie Seidenberg, vice president of online services at Preview Travel. "And unlike traditional travel agencies, we're open 24 hours a day, seven days a week,"

Whatever your destination, Preview Travel can help you find the best airfares available and book your car rentaland hotel reservations.

And, if travelers know what they like but don't know where to go to find it, Preview Travel has its Find-A-Trip feature ready to do the job.

Find-A-Trip helps travelers discover escapes based on selected criteria. Tell Find-A-Trip what you want from your vacation - cities, beaches, shopping, family activities, etc. - and different trips are offered for your selection.

Preview Travel also operates the primary ticketing service on America Online (keyword: previewtravel), its own Web sites and co-branded travel sites. Preview Travel is a privately held among others.

Hostelling International-American Youth Hostels has its own site at http://www.hiayh.org with information on more than 150 hostels in the U.S.

At the site, visitors will find a link to the International Youth Hostel Federation which connects with nearly 5,000 hostels in more than 70 countries. The IYHF site, in turn, provides links to other associations and their hostels.

At www.hiayh.org hostel locations, overnight prices, reservation information, and special hostel features and services are revealed. Onliners also will find information on where to go and what to do in the area surrounding each

General information is given on hostel history, special programs, and a hostel fact sheet. If you want to join, download a membership application, and print it out to be mailed or faxed back to the HI-AYH national office.

One section of the Web site highlights 35 local/regional offices across the country which operate travel centers, travel workshops, special activities, and trips. Links are provided to those hostels that have their own Web sites.

Hostels are inexpensive accommodations for travelers of all ages. Hostels provide separate facilities for males and females, fully equipped self-service. kitchens, dining areas and common rooms for relaxing and socializing. Many hostels have private family/couple rooms which can be reserved in advance.

Several hostels are historic buildings that have been renovated and readapted for use as a hostel, including light houses, a lifesaving station on Nantucket, and a landmark building in New York City.

Westfield offers landscaping at base price

Danny Veri, a builder who sold all 34 lots within seven months in Canton's Camden Park a couple of years ago, is enjoying lightning-like success at his current project, Westfield Estates in the same township.

Nearly two dozen of the 79 lots in the platted sub off Haggerty between Cherry Hill and Palmer roads sold within a month after the model was opened.

"We realistically market to get a project completed in a year," Veri said. "It benefits everybody - customers, trades, us."

Residents don't have to endure years of construction with noise and debris, subcontractors can anticipate a steady work load, and the builder doesn't have to worry about high carrying costs.

So what's the draw at Westfield Estates? "Two unique features to us is we fully landscape each home at base price ... and if you originate a mortgage through our lender (Jamestown), we give $2,000 credit," said Bill Dempsey, onsite sales rep.

"I think we're the most competitive builder in the township," Veri said of his prices. "I think our standard features go above and beyond our competitors landscaping, cast iron kitchen sinks instead of stainless steel. All ceilings are textured."

"Plymouth-Canton schools is a nice feature in this price range," Dempsey said. "It's drawing a lot of attention."

"You get an easy location for Ann Arbor, Detroit, wherever highways will take you," Veri said of easy access to I-275 at either Ford Road or Michigan Avenue.

Louis Gorenc and Donna Haase are trendsetters.

They have built a three-bedroom, two-bath ranch of 2,000 square feet off John Hix Road in Westland with concrete blocks from the ground level to the eaves all the way around the structure

You can paint over paneling to brighten room

By Popular Mechanics FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Q: Several years ago, I paneled three rooms with a dark shade, low-priced paneling. Now, I would like to paint the paneling a lighter color to brighten the rooms. Will this require a special paint? What treatment, if any, should I give the paneling prior to painting?

A: Prior to painting, the walls should be cleaned thoroughly. If these are kitchen or bathroom walls they may have become grease- or scum-coated. Wash them down with a detergent solution on a nearly dry cloth to successful project is when all of the parts come together and make sense as a whole. In a recent phone conversation with a potential client, I tried to explain, among other things, that while there are many nice faucets on the market, just one or two could be a good match for her project. This issue came up because I was trying to explain my plan "B" contract whereby the client

The right touches tie a home together

One sign of a of the finish items, which include plumbing electrical fixtures and cabinetry, (Which, by the way, saves a typical client about 5 percent of the cost of the home)

My point was that while "X" might be a nice Georgian faucet, it would make no sense in a Victorian house and that one must be careful to avoid selecting such a faucet because one merely "likes "X". Good architects can make sense of the whole and can usually "tie it all together."

In order to avoid making such a "blunder," one must know not only what style the house is but also what the details are that are used in the house. If the house uses reveals as a standard is responsible for picking out all large-scale or exterior detail, there may be the opportunity to use the same detail at a smaller scale, for example at the baseboard-to-wall detail or as a drawer-pull detail,

Even the colors that are used in a house may not be random for example, the early Post-modernist architect Michael Graves had a reason and an explanation for every color on his projects (and these were complexly colored projects). Some colors related to the sky and some to some imaginary distant landscape, but these same colors would relate to the exterior palette and the building materials that were being used.

Sometimes I have this habit of introducing a certain material and/ or color and using it in certain areas and intentionally reusing it in other areas. An example of this in the house that I have been writing about every month is the black cast epoxy countertop material. This material also happens to be the interior window sill material. Floors are maple and so are all of the cabinets - even the bathroom cabinets.

Tying it all together can also incorporate the use of horizontal and vertical elements that actually do tie the project together. Elements in one part of the house can be related to other parts in distant corners through this age-old technique. These "lines" can be reveals (subtractive) details or applied trim (additive) - either one works well to unify a project. A consistent use of geometry can also be used to tie a project together.

Geometry can help tie a project together by repeating certain elements over and over again; the artful part is not to bore the viewer with too many repetitions. An arc can be found to have a major function or scale but can also reappear again at a smaller scale or even in the light fixtures in the room for which the arc applies.

If you are designing a project yourself, keep your eyes open for opportunities to make the project. consistent with itself. Compate: all of your choices with each other and ask your friends if : they think that the choices are harmonious. Changes are easy now before the fixtures are: installed or bought.

Book touts uses for WD-40

'(NAPS) - You probably know WD-40 as a handy household lubricant, and you probably have a can in the kitchen, the workshop and the car - but did you know that little miracle in the blue-and-yellow can will remove dirt, grime and soap scum in the kitchen and bathroom, get the dead bugs and road tar off your car's grill, and even remove scratches from furniture?

That's what WD-40 users claim. Over the years, fans of WD-40 have sent the manufacturer literally thousands of testimonial letters claiming that WD-40 can be used for everything from removing stickers and adhesives from glass to keeping cut grass from sticking to lawnmower blades. Now there's even a book about it: The WD-40 Book by Jim & Tim, The Duct Tape Guys.

The book pairs testimonial uses sent in by WD-40 users from across the globe with Jim & Tim's rather unique applications for the product. It also includes several "bonus" sections, including Jim & Tim's "retelling" of the history of WD-40 and an appendix of hundreds of uses sent in by WD-40 enthusiasts. The appendix features ideas submitted by consumers of how they use WD-40 in the house, garden, garage, at play and even at work, where WD-40 has a strong industrial following.

So why have the Duct Tape Guys written a book on WD-40?

"Well, we always figured duct tape was the only tool you ever needed in your toolbox," says Tim. But then one day our toolbox rusted shut. We had to use WD-40 to get it open."

"Now we have a new credo," says Jim, Tim's brother-in-law and fellow Duct Tape Guy. "If it's not stuck and it's supposed to be, duct tape it. If it's stuck and it's not supposed to be, WD-40 it."

The familiar lubricant, penetrant, rust preventative, moisture displacer, and cleaner is found in more than 83 percent of households across the country, so chances are you have at least one can. Some of the other uses for WD-40 provided by customers over the years, and listed in The WD-40 Book include:

 Spray on concrete driveways to remove unsightly oil spots.

• Removes super strong glue from fingers and other unwanted surfaces.

Waterproofs, shines and softens leather

· Removes cat paw marks from furniture and the hood of your car.

Lubricates playground equipment - swings, teeter-totters, slides, etc. • Shoppers: Stuck with a wobbly, stickywheeled shopping cart? Spray wheels with WD-40 to reduce wobbling and friction - less friction means faster shopping!

- Prevents cracks in rubber garden hoses. · Works as a spot remover on stubborn
- Cleans tile and protects grout.
- · Removes crayon and indelible markers
- from a variety of surfaces. Keeps mud from sticking to bike or ATV.

The American Dream, owning your own home. Their's a lot to be said for a tree lined street, kids playine on the sidewalks and the elementary school (Kettering) only two blocks

This pride of ownership neighborhood is the delight of the community (Birch Run Subdivision). This 1400 square foot brick and aluminum ranch offers a maintenance free exterior and a pretty perennial garden. The rear yard is fenced with a patio. (The yard is 50 by 154).

The interior is perfect for active lifestyles and entertaining with a generously sized living room and family room. The formal living (15x12) has a large window and provides ample space for formal gatherings. The kitchen (10x10) overlooks: the dining area (13x8) which offers an abundance of cuphoards and counters. All kitchen appliances remain.

The (25x14) family room with a natural fireplace and built in bookcases is perfect for a cozy evening, TV or for the children to play. The doorwall leads to the rear patio.

This home is complete with three bedrooms, one bath and a basement. Hardwood floors are under most carpets, and wet plaster walls. The style of construction that is considered (custom) with today's housing market. Westlands population is 82,000 and growing. The downtown central parkway is alive with shopping and restaurants. Summertime enjoy the community pool at Bailey Park.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

'DON'T HIRE A COMMITTEE"

When people begin looking for the right home, they often find themselves working with a number of real estate sales associates. This is usually the result of going to open houses and calling REALTORS® in response to ads.

It may seem at first glance that it is to your advantage to have numerous salespeople helping you find a home. I refer to this approach as the committee method. Actually, it is better to work exclusively with only one REALTOR®. Here are some facts to consider:

KNOWING YOUR TASTES

In order to find the home best suited to your needs, your REALTOR® will need to evaluate potential homes as you would. This is only possible if one REALTOR® has spent enough time with you to understand your tastes. After seeing your reactions to a variety of homes, a picture of your ideal home begins to take shape in the mind of your REALTOR. This process is not as successful if you spend a little time with a number of different sales associates.

YOUR MARKET KNOWLEDGE

If you have an exclusive arrangement with one REALTOR®, he or she knows all the homes you have seen. This person also is aware of other available homes and the reasons why you decided not to see them. This permits the search for the right home to continue in an orderly fashion while wasting a minimum of your personal time. Each new home that comes on the market is evaluated in terms of your previous responses to other homes.

YOUR PERSONALITY

Searching for the right home can be a tiresome task. It can become even more aggravating if you don't feel comfortable with your REALTOR®. This is another reason why it is to your advantage to work with one agent who is compatible with your own personality. Because you may spend considerable time with this person until the final closing, choose someone you can relate to so that your house hunting experience may be as pleasant as possible.

SUGGESTION: If you hire a committee, no one is responsible for finding the home you want. Designate one REALTOR® to conduct the search for your next home.

College students welcome as summer temporaries

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Summer's just around the corner and if you're a college student or new graduate looking to earn some money, you might consider working on temporary assignments. Staffing companies say they're eager to recruit stu-

Robyn Horton, manager of the Westwood, California office of Team One Staffing Services, says, "We love college students. I sometimes try to recruit them off the sidewalk since we're right across from the camous of UCLA."

Staffing firms in other parts of the country are equally enthusiastic. Bernadette Gilson, vice president of Temporary Staffing inc. (TSI), a Washington, D.C. based staffing firm, says. "We've typically been able to keep college students busy all summer long," says Gibson. "Particularly now, with unemployment so low, college students will be a very valuable commodity."

As to the type of assignments students and new grads are qualified for, Horton says, "We can definitely use them for general office and administrative assistant assignments. Today's college students are a lot more technologically advanced than students used to be and we're anxious to tap their computer skills." As to the computer skills in greatest demand, Horton says for word processing, Microsoft Word and WordPerfect for Windows says, "Lotus is still being used but Excel is in greater demand." Gilson agrees and notes that for desktop publishing, "PowerPoint and Pagemaker are most requested." She also says those able to use the Internet are increasingly in demand.

According to Sharon Meister, manager of client services for the Falls Church, Virginia office of Advantage Staffing Services, those adept with the Internet may also qualify for temporary assignments involving Web design and support. Meister says her office also uses college students and new graduates for technical writing g, copywriting, and graphic design assignments, as long as they have the needed technical skills and prior experience doing similar work. That experience, notes Meister, can come from as internship or work on a school newspaper as well as a previous

If computer skills aren't your strength, don't despair. Horton says there are also temporary assignments for proofreaders, for telephone sales and for telemarketing that don't require computer skills. Firms that specialize in legal placement also say that during the summer, they use college graduates for temporary paralegal assignments in law firms, and undergraduates as clerks and receptionists. Actually, Horton says receptionists positions in a wide variety of industries are accescomes in well-groomed, with good communication skills, the ability to interact with different personalities and to do multiple tasks, can qualify for these jobs," she says.

Besides immediate earning power, students can upgrade their skills while working as temporaries. Temporary employees are frequently exposed to new programs while on assignment at companies. Many staffing firms also make computer-based tutorials in different software packages available to their temporary employees. Horton says her company has tutorials in such popular programs as Word for Windows, Excel and Lotus. "We encourage our temporaries to use the tutorials during their free time," she says. "And people add to their skill set, they can qualify for more opportunities and higher hourly rates."

Horton says firsthand exposure to the world of work is another valuable benefit of temporary assignments. "Students get a taste of the work world and the culture of various industries by working in temporary jobs,: she says. Horton, who was a corporate human resources manager before joining the temporary industry, says that exposure can pay big dividends when students are looking to land their first full time jobs. When they graduate, they're going to need something on their resumes that shows experience working are the most popular. For spreadsheets, she sible to college students. "Someone who in a professional environment," she says. Temporary assignments can provide that."

They can also provide valuable contacts for a future job search. "You don't know who you're going to connect with while temping says Horton. "The executive you temp for might be a great contact to call when you see a full time job from that same company advertised."

For new graduates, ready to commit to full time jobs, assignments can even eliminate the need for a job search altogether. It's not uncommon for top performing temporaries to get job offers from the organizations where they are on assignment. Gilson says the potential for converting temporary positions into full time jobs is very high today. Horton concurs. "A lot of companies use temporary assignments to source candidates for full time positions," she says.

Even if an assignment isn't in a person's preferred career field, it can lead to their ideal job. "I recall a journalism grad who couldn't find a job in her field," says Gilson. "She worked on an assignment for someone who was really impressed with her and who asked what kind of job she was looking for It turned out he was able to refer her to a colleague who had a job for a writer."

Sheryl Silver may be contacted by writing to her at Career Source, P.O. Box 65754, Washington, D.C. 200035-5744.

The Business Travel Report - Singapore Solutions Singapore an counterpart will probably not get it. By Jane Lasky And if he or she does, that person is likely to Chronicle Features As Singapore's status as one of Asia's top think twice about whatever you have to say, categonzing you as a prankster even if you aren't business centers grows, there are important > *Avoid jargon and idioms, Although English is the language of record for business negotiations, steer clear of American English as it is hardly recognizable to the typical Singaporean. Instead, stick as closely to the Queen's English as you can.

•Watch your mouth. Do not include religion, bureaucracy, politics or sex in idle conversation. Don't talk about personal success either, as that is considered tantamount to impolite boasting. Instead, safe subjects to talk about include tourism, travel, plans for the future, organizational successes and food...

*Keep you calm. Whatever happens, always remember: you cannot lose your temper if you want to get ahead. Go ahead, feel what you have to feel, just keep it to yourself or share it with colleagues from your side of the Pacific. If something seems temble wrong, act like you can stay in control no matter what.

*Keep your promises. When you set a deadline, be practical about the time to which you commit. Decide what you can and can't do in that period of time and that way you won't have to ask for extensions, a request that simply wouldn't fly with your super-efficient Singaporean

 Practice diplomacy. A big step toward cementing a successful business relationship in Singapore is creating a personal rapport with the company's executives. So, be polite, don't be crass, leave your temper back in the U.S. and mind your manners. In short, don't be an Ugly •Formality is key. The best way to act is with an air of grace and formality.

 Maintain modesty. Even if you have done a perfect job, be sure to play that down when a singaporean sings your praises. He or she will be more in awe if you don't act too proud of your accomplishments or too sure of yourself no matter how difficult the task you have conquered:

Never criticize and don't complain. Under no circumstances should you correct anyone in the presence of your Singaporean colleagues. If a blatant mistake has been made, discretely approach the person in private and tactfully try to set the situation straight. If you don't, you'll cause your colleagues to lose face-a lose-lose situation for all concerned.

Why can't U.S. be more like U.K.

By Lindsey Novak, Tribune Media

There's been a surge of letters recently having to do with the "sweatshop" conditions in the workplace - readers complaining about too much work for too little money and, even more discouraging for some, the lack of benefits.

One reader writes that his company gives them only two sick days per year, insurance that covers only 50 percent of expenses, only five paid holidays and a one-week vacation each yean

Another reader complains that her company gives only two weeks of vacation until employees have worked more than 10 · years, while a third says that her ed in statutory benefits for workemployer took away all employee benefits, leaving workers with no health or dental insurance, no sick days and no vacation days.

"What's happening in America?" asks Joan. "Why can't companies give a month off as the British do?" In fact, another reader who recently returned from a business trip to England said his colleagues there were shocked when he told them his company allowed only a twoweek vacation each year.

According to Ella Krucoff, a spokesperson for the European Commission Delegation in Washington, D.C., "There's a social consciousness in the European Union that has result-ers that go far beyond anything in U.S. legislation or practice." If it seems like the Europeans care more about their workers' welfare, we only need to look at their legislation to see that it's

According to Paul Cornish, assistant information officer of British Information Services (which explains developments in British government policies), nearly 77 percent of the British workforce receives 16 to 30 vacation days annually, eight paid public holidays and an average of 12 sick says (and even more sick days if you work for the government). These minimum benefits are required by law.

The reader who just returned from England writes, "I'm a professional. I have to get the same amount of work done regardless of my time off, so my employer would lose nothing by giving me an additional two weeks of vacation each year. I'd be more satisfied, which would probably increase my productivity. It would also make me less likely to leave my current employer for greener pastures."

From the letters I receive, it does seem as though workers are burning out at a much faster rate these days. Many of them relate having to work 12- to 16hour days. They have no time for relaxation, their tempers are short, more and more bosses seem abusive, and work problems seem magnified.

It's ironic that the downsizing of corporations in America increases their bottom lines while burning out their workforces. The question is, how long will it take before the bottom drops out? How bad will conditions in the workplace have to be before legislation is put in place to cure the cause rather than deal with the consequences? It isn't likely that corporate America will suddenly develop the social consciousness that Europe has known, but we can do more than just dream.

Countless letters to me end with, "Thank you for letting me vent." "Thank you for listening." "I just needed someone to complain to." Well, keep those letters coming, and perhaps send copies to your state and federal representatives, because maybe. one day, your elected officials will take note of what's happening to people in the workplace and do something about it.

Having problems on the job? Write to Lindsey Novak in care of Tribune Media Services, Inc., 435 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 1500, Chicago, Ill. 60611. She can also be contacted at AtWorkbyLN@AOL.com

1997 Jaguar XK8 Coupe: Wow!!!

By Anne Fracassa Avanti NewsFeatures

Now this is luxury. Everywhere you touch you'll find fine Connolly leather, polished wood veneers and soft, supple textures. And, oooooooooh, the styling.

The XK8 Coupe is Jaguar's first new sports car in 21 years. Well worth the wait, I'd say.

Let's start with the outside. It's so unique, so different, that a middle-aged fellow zipping his Jaguar XJ6 down I-696 the other day slowed down to take a gander.

The XK8 Coupe is classic Jaguar styling, but with more sporty lines and curves that sets it apart from anything on the road today. The front of the car, with its classic Jaguar stance and oval grille opening, makes a definite statement: Get outta my way. Fast.

And fast it is. This is the first V8 designed by Jaguar. It's also exclusive to the XK8. The 4.0-liter V8 is an all-aluminum DOHC 4-valve-per-cylinder that outputs 290 horsepower. More than enough, in fact. And fuel economy is so great that it doesn't qualify for the gas-guzzler tax.

This thing moves when you ask it to. Yet, it's so quiet, you almost have to check the instrumentation to make sure the engine has turned over. Top speed on the speedometer suggests you could take feel is certainly unique: it to the max: 170 mph. Not real practical in Michigan, however, with our top highway speed of seconds. The XK8 took it in stride and it felt more like I was traveling at 35. So smooth is the ride that you'd not take much notice at the higher speeds. In short, this one has to be a favorite with the state troopers.

The XK8 replaces the XJS, which retired at the end of last year. It was Jaguar's best-selling sports car ever with 115,413 built. Its reign was also Jaguar's longest with 21 years of production.

Lot's of classic Jaguar design is here, including the round analog gauges and the J-gate transmission shifter. The shifter, by the way, is also in wood. The steering wheel is constructed of a fine

The XK8 has a smart 5-speed automatic transmission, newly designed front and rear suspension systems and a variable assist/variable-ratio power

But I took a chance. Took it up to 85 for a few steering system. Let's just say ride comforties superb and the steering and handling are effortless.

> As with most automakers, safety hasn't taken a back seat here. There are dual airbags and seat belt pretensioners that hold you to the seat during impact. High-strength steel is incorporated throughout the car, lending itself to a rigid body structure, front and rear crumple zones and stiff door frames and windshield frame.

> There are active safety features as well, including 4-wheel disc brakes, anti-lock brakes, automatic stability control, optional traction control, independent suspension and rack and pinton

Test driven was the coupe, but the XK8 is also available as a convertible, Jaguar projects sales of the XK8 will total about 12,000 this year worldwide, with 6,700 slated for import to the U.S. The convertible is expected to account for about 80 percent of those sales.

JAGUAR from previous page

The convertible top features a onebutton operation with automatic power latching and it can be raised of lowered while the car is traveling under 10 miles per hour.

As can be expected, the standard equipment list is quite extensive. About the only options you can choose from are chrome wheels, heated front seats, headlamp power wash, Harman Kardon 240-watt sound system with compact disc autochanger and traction control.

The only thing missing from this Jaguar is the chrome leaper hood ornament. Sorry, it's not an option. It's also the only Jaguar without it. But it does stare at you from the center of the steering wheel and on the key.

This is a really great car and it's got a grand price: $64,900 for the coupe, $69,900 for the convertible.

And after 21 years, it was well worth the wait.

Write Anne Fracassa online at avanti1054@aol.com.

1997 Jaguar XK8 Vehicle class: 2-door coupe. Engine: 4.0-liter 32-valve DOHC V8.

Mileage: 17 city / 25 highway. Where built: Coventry, England. Price: $64,900.
