PLACES & FACES

Jam in the park

Kids ages 11-16 who live in the Livonia school district can enjoy Jammin' in the Park every Saturday night through Aug. 23 at Veteran's Park in Livonia.

They are invited to hang out at the free event with friends, listen to music from a Silver Sounds deejay and play volleyball or soccer. Bring your own in-line skates, favorite games or participate in other activities. It is sponsored by the Livonia Parks and Recreation Department, the Livonia Family Y and the mayor's Task Force on Families and Youth.

The program runs from 8-10 p.m. at Veteran's Park at Stark and Lyndon next to the Livonia YMCA. In case of bad weather the event will be moved to Eddie Edgar Arena.

Kroger opens

Starting Sunday, Westland residents can drive through at a new Kroger store to get their prescriptions filled.

The Kroger Co. will host a Grand Opening for its newest store this Sunday, which will include the company's first drive-through pharmacy in the state. The store, at 31300 Michigan Ave., is on Westland's south side.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held at 8 a.m. July 27 at the new 63,511-square-foot store, which will feature a full-service pharmacy, deli and floral department, a cosmetic and fragrance center, a full-service First Federal of Michigan bank branch, pet care center, PageTec cellular phone and pager center and Kroger's first fullservice drive-through pharmacy in Michigan.

There are 175 people employed at the store.

Hearing Tuesday

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality will hold its final hearing at 7 p.m. July 29 at Inkster High School, concerning the air pollution permit for the expansion of the Central Wayne County Sanitation Authority's incinerator in Dearborn Heights.

The incinerator, located just north of Van Born Road on Inkster. It burns trash from the cities of Dearborn Heights, Westland, Garden City, Inkster and Wayne, which are also the five member communities of the sanitation authority. The proposal for expanding the current facility and update the facility for a waste-to-energy use has drawn criticism from some, who are opposed for air quality reasons. Proponents say that strict lederal air quality rules will make this a cleanburning facility.

Cellular tower plan is halted

Booming telecommunications networks. have prompted one company to propose a tower for the city's northeast side. But council sided with residents this week by calling for regulation of such towers.

By DARRELL CLEM

Shrugging off opposition from Sprint, a united Westland City Council on Monday declared a 90day moratorium on new cellular phone towers.

Companies hoping to build facilities in Westland will have to wait until City Attorney Angelo Plakas drafts a proposed ordinance to regulate cellular towers.

Council members bowed to concerns raised by residents who oppose a 150-foot tower that Sprint PCS wants to build close to a residential neighborhood near Inkster and Joy roads.

Residents such as Michaeline Ward, a mother of five, strongly oppose a cellular tower that they fear will pose health hazards and reduce property values.

"Ultimately, we don't want these towers in our neighborhoods," Ward has told the Observer.

Sprint fired back Monday by urging council members not to implement a moratorium. Sprint attorney John Fuleras also questioned the legality of a councilapproved moratorium. 'We believe they (moratoriums) are disfavored by (Michigan) law," Fuleras said. He provided council members with a Sprint letter noting that Michigan court cases related to construction of cellular phone towers haven't been tried at the appellate court level.

The letter did note that a lower court allowed the city of Medina to impose a moratorium, but Sprint maintains that the circumstances are different with the proposed Westland tower.

The Medina moratorium was enacted just five days after a federal telecommunications act was signed into law on February 8, 1996. The city had little time to study and understand the law before enacting

5-year-old bitten by caged bear

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A 5-year-old Westland boy who was bitten by a caged bear while visiting the Cheboygan area is recovering at U-M Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor, a hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Sean Patrick McAuliffe suffered a broken arm and severe lacerations Saturday when he tried to pet a 7-year-old caged black bear, said Sgt. Don Hawver of the Michigan State Police post in Chebovgan.

The boy was listed in good condition Tuesday.

The bear, owned by Robert Dean Blaskowski of Dotski Road, was killed Monday to test for rabies, state police Sgt. Larry R. Miller said Tuesday.

"The head was removed and shipped to a lab to test for rabies," he said, adding that the procedure is routine in such cases.

No criminal charges will be filed against the owner, according to state police and Michigan Department of Natural Resources officials.

"There won't be any prosecution brought against the owner, who had the bear under a legal permit," DNR Lt. Jeff Pendergraff said Tuesday. "Basically the whole thing is over now."

■ The bear grabbed onto McAuliffe's lower left arm and bit the boy, breaking his arm and cutting him with its teeth before releasing him, police said.

McAuliffe was bitten by the bear at 5 p.m. Saturday when he approached the animal and tried to pet it. Hawver said.

The bear grabbed onto McAuliffe's lower left arm and bit the boy, breaking his arm and cutting him with its teeth before releasing him, police

Troopers from the Michigan State Police post in Cheboygan responded to the incident after being notified that the boy had been rushed to Cheboygan Memorial Hospital for treatment, Hawver said.

McAuliffe was transferred to Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey before being moved, again, to Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor which is closer to the boy's home, police said.

The boy's condition has been steadily improving, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Subcontractors at a construction site for the new Sears store at the Westland Shopping Center are concerned that the duck — who one has dubbed "Waddles" — may be run over by a subcontractor doing excavating on site who has threatened to bulldoze over the nest.

"I just don't want to see her get hurt," said Tammy Smith, an apprentice electrician who, with several other workers on site, has been feeding the mallard duck cracked corn and bread.

"I'm not a Greenpeace activist or anything," said Fred Vergona, who is a subcontracted iron worker installing fire exits for the new store. "There's no reason for this to happen."

"It would be a sad day in hell if this happens." Smith and Vergona say they and others on site have had mixed success in alerting state and federal officials about the situation, and feel their hands are tied by the situation.

Department of Natural Resources officials from the regional Livonia office have told them that it is a federal offense to touch the duck, which means not only must the contractors protect her, but that no one can move her from the site, Smith said.

Active area will keep 'Precinct 28' moniker

A predominantly African-American neighborhood which historically has one of Westland's highest election turnouts will remain in Precinct 28, city council members decided Monday.

Despite rain, annual show brings out auto buffs eather problems cut into the bottom line of the fifth annual Burger Center Car Show benefit Monday, July 14, at the Garden City High School parking lot.

Chairman Don Nicholson, a Westland business owner, said that the number of specialty cars entered for the show was reduced drastically from the traditional 350 to 400 down to 50.

Despite a smaller display of cars, many in the top three places in various categories were entered by Westland residents.

In the past four years, many car owners registered in advance for the show, which raises money for the Garden City-based Burger Center for Autistic Students.

This summer, many owners waited until the day of the show to register and were scared off by the threat of storms, Nicholson said.

"There was rain at the start of the show and downpours later," he said. The show closed at 8:30 p.m., or 90 minutes earlier than planned, because another "bad weather front" that was coming in, he said.

Lack of visibility was another factor in this year's show. Nicholson said.

He closed his Prism Photo business on Middlebelt near Ann Arbor Trail last year and now operates out of his Westland home.

Over the years, he had promoted the car show in his business window and through customers.

Despite the drop in the number of cars entered, the annual benefit still managed to raise $3,500, a small drop from the previous year's $4,000, he

Woman cleared in fire which injured her young son

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A Westland woman has been cleared of charges that she intentionally started a house fire that injured her 4-year-old son.

Canine cops

Council approves dollars for police dogs

Dog-gone it! Westland's finally getting a police canine unit.

Westland City Council members Monday agreed to spend $13,700 to buy and train two German shepherds for a police dog program to be launched in coming months.

The dogs will be paired with police officers Grant Allen and Thaddeus Nelson for a program that officials hope will take a big enough bite out of crime to make McGruff envious.

Westland Deputy Police Chief Lennis Hayes cited several reasons why the police dogs will improve crime-fighting efforts:

• They can track suspects "immediately" from crime scenes, helping to capture criminals who might otherwise escape.

• They can aid an investigation early on, before a crime scene becomes "contaminated" by other people.

• They will prove invaluable in detecting drugs. "We will have much more drug enforcement by having the dogs on the road," Hayes said.

• They will be available to help Westland's Special Investigations Unit and to assist the Metro Street Enforcement Team, which combines officers from Westland, Garden City, Wayne and Inkster.

• They will serve as a public relations tool in such places as local schools, allowing officers to interact with youngsters in nonthreatening situations.

Police officials may choose to buy two dogs as early as Friday from an Ohio man who imports them from Europe. But officials could choose to wait if they don't sense that the dogs are right for ! the Westland program.

"We want to find the right. dogs," Deputy Chief Dan Pfannes said. "We want these dogs to be friendly."

The dogs will be trained during the next few months, and they will gradually spend more and more time out of class and on the road with officers Allen and Nelson.

"The dogs will basically acclimate to life as we know it," Pfannes said.

In neighboring Wayne, Deputy Police Chief Kerry Webb said his department's 3-year-old canine unit has proven successful. Wayne officers have used dogs to find an Alzheimer's disease sufferer who was lost; to find guns thrown from cars by criminal suspects; to trail robbery and attempted murder suspects attempting to flee; and to check buildings for criminals hiding out.

"One dog can check a building faster than 15 to 20 officers can," Webb said.

"This has been a really good program for us," he said. "The dogs have become part of the extended family.'

Westland City Councilman Charles "Trav" Griffin said Monday that he believes the police dogs will be the final step to giving Westland residents a "fullservice police department."

Defend yourself: Hobby grows into business

BY LEONARD POGER STAFF WRITER

Kelly Perkins was always known as a tomboy while growing up. When she first took karate classes 11 years ago at a nearby community center with her two sons, she said that "I felt like I belonged.'

What started out as a hobby has now grown into a small home-based business in which Perkins gives safety seminars for working women.

Perkins, 39, said she enjoys martial arts because "It challenges my mind and body and I can still be a lady."

Married and the mother of five children between the ages of 5 and 23, she started her "Safe and Sure Seminars" in January 1995.

So far, her clients have included the General Motors power train plant in Romulus; St. Matthew Lutheran School in Westland (where her family attends church); the school's Parent Teacher League: Steelcase Co.; and the Educational Secretaries of Southfield.

Since taking karate classes at Garden City's Maplewood Community Center nearly 11 years ago, Perkins has gone on to become a Kukkiwon certified black belt and a teacher in civilian

Tips offered for safety and self defense

Kelly Perkins feels that effective selfdefense "begins in the mind."

She advises women to be prepared mentally, act confident, be observant of people around you and your surroundings, and expect trouble. "Rehearse mentally what you might do in different circumstances," she said.

Perkins has developed a color-coded system of mental priorities so women can be prepared to defend themselves.

"Code white" is the lowest level of mental alertness, she said.

"You never want to be in code white anywhere in public or outdoors," she noted. "This is the group that criminals target."

"Code yellow" is a state of alertness in which you are aware of your surroundings.

This level is often that referred to as "scanning," she said.

"Code red" is the point where a woman has recognized potential danger, formulated a plan of reaction and is implementing it before being in great danger and avoiding a major confrontation. "Code black" refers to a woman being under assault.

"You should respond rather than react or do nothing at all. Keep in mind that any situation can go from code white to black in a matter of seconds."

Here are other safety tips:

■ At home, keep doors and windows locked. Don't hide an extra key near the door.

■ In or near your vehicle, keep doors locked and, when approaching the vehicle, have your key in hand ready to

"I needed something that didn't require a degree," she said.

Part of her seminar packet is a wooden key chain baton which she says women can use to defend themselves.

The 5 1/2-inch-long baton, with a leather handle to be wrapped around a woman's wrist, is called a "pervert poker" and is intended to be used to ward off any assailant, Perkins said. The tool was first made some years ago by Barry Beote, a furniture builder and a close friend of her husband who made it for his wife. "I saw one and had to have one,"

Perkins said. She doesn't think that an assailant can use the weapon and turn it against the intended victim.

Usually, guns or knives are used against assailants by their owners, she said.

During her two-hour safety seminars, Perkins said, women are taught practical self-defense. The class includes a discussion covering prevention and "break away and get away techniques," she added.

"The students have the opportunity to practice the techniques so they may feel comfortable if they find themselves in a dangerous situation.

"I also try to make the class fun and relaxed."

County to rename building in honor of Beard's service

STAFF WRITER

It currently stands alone, as Building D. An old, five-story structure on the grounds of Wayne County's Eloise Complex on Michigan Avenue in West-

Soon, it will be a monument to one of the longest-serving members of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

On Friday, county officials will dedicate the building in honor of Kay Beard, D-Westland, who has been serving constituents in Garden City, Inkster and Westland for more than 19years...longer than any current member of the board.

"We haven't always agreed, but you can't deny her dedication," said Ed McNamara Wayne County Executive. "She is a very dedicated public servant, and this was a way to remember her long after she quits politics."

"My jaw literally dropped when Ed told me in January." said Beard. "He wants to renovate the building and use it in a more productive way than it is

The building, constructed in 1931, mainly houses social service programs. However, Beardhas designs for the building that will stand with her name on it.

"I'm hoping it might be possible to have branch offices of the county clerk, treasurer and register of deeds in the building, commented Beard. "It's hard for people in the out-county area to get downtown for those much needed services."

Beard was appointed to serve an unexpired term in April, 1978, and has held the office since. She was elected to her 10th full term last November, and is currently serving her second term as vice chair of the commission.

The District 12 commissioner has a number of honors to her credit. They include chair of the National Association of Counties' Employment Steering Committee, chairperson of the National Advisory Council for School-to-Work Opportunities, and the 1989 Michigan County Commissioner of the Year

At 76, Beard shows no signs of slowing down.

"I have a lot of time and energy for the job," said Beard. "I enjoy being a county commissioner serving my communities and the county, and as long as I do I'll continue."

"It's fun being a county commissioner these days because of the airport expansion, new stadiums downtown, and the proposed casinos," continued Beard. "There are a lot of good things happening throughout Wayne County."

The naming of the building after Beard might just keep it from the wrecking ball.

"We've torn down a number of buildings at Eloise, and there is strong sentiment from some to do the same with this one," said McNamara. "I think the old structure has a gracefulness which represents a past era."

McNamara believes it will take a few million dollars in renovations to upgrade the structure, which then could be used for office space.

"It's an exceptional honor," noted Beard. "I'm overwhelmed and extremely pleased."

until next year.

Motorists can expect to see the resurfacing of Haggerty Road from Joy to Ann Arbor roads in Plymouth Township. But it probably won't happen.

Wayne County commissioners approved a $993,440 contract on July 17 between the county and the Michigan Department of Transportation for reconstruction of Haggerty. The road will be resurfaced and widened to five lanes, including the addition of a right-turn lane at Ann Arbor Road.

Federal funds will pay for $813,130 of the work, while the county will pay the remaining $180.310.

Canton Center Road also will be resurfaced with three lanes wide of concrete payement for a half-mile between Michigan Avenue and Geddes Road in Canton Township.

"Canton Center will be realigned with how it connects with Belleville Road," said John Roach, public information manager of the Wayne County Department of Public Services. "It is slightly out of alignment. (Construction workers) will add a short curve south of Ged-

The Haggerty work was "questionable" for this year, while Canton Center may be worked on in September, Roach said.

Crack may account for PCB leak

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

A possible crack in the retention basin lining at the General Motors Delphi Chassis Plant in Livonia is the main reason Wayne County environmental officials believe the giant automaker may be responsible for dumping contaminated PCBs into Newburgh Lake.

"We've been smelling oil for the past year-and-a-half at Newburgh Lake but haven't been able to come up with the smoking gun," said Jim Murray. Director of the Wayne County Department of Environment. "We couldn't find signs of illegal dumping, but the leak at the basin appears to be one of the sources of PCBs."

Murray says the leak through the crack in the retention basin lining allowed some oil to spill into the storm sewer.

"It appears to be a small amount of leakage into Newburgh Lake over a period of time." Murray said.

Murray called the leaking, plus the inadequate size of the basin which allowed for it to overflow, "unacceptable circumstances," and says he is "concerned about the storm water management and how General Motors handles the separation of oil and the basin."

Currently, the oil is mixed with the water in the retention basin and filtered through facilities at General Motors. However, because of recent heavy rains the basin overflowed into the storm sewer and into Newburgh Lake...carrying with it oil the state says is contaminated.

General Motors has admitted it accidentally dumped at least 1,000 gallons into the storm sewer July 9 during maintenance and cleaning when the plant was closed for summer shutdown. While county officials have said tests showed dangerous PCBs in the oil, a spokeswoman for the automaker denies the car company is using oil with PCBs.

General Motors claims its spilled oil mixed with PCBs that have already been found in the lake. Murray says additional tests are being conducted to confirm preliminary results.

"We believe the contaminated oil is saturated in the storm sewer pipes and groundwater," noted Murray. "Everytime water passes through the pipes it picks up and transports the PCBs to the lake. General Motors needs to clean the storm sewer and contaminated soil around the Delphi plant."

County officials have all along said GM has been responsive to the spill and has agreed to pay any clean-up costs. Both sides are meeting to discuss ways to make certain this type of spill doesn't occur again.

Murray says the site is secured, meaning the size of the basin and the storage storage issues are being addressed.

"General Motors has been responsible, but at the same time we need to look at the faults and deal with it," said Murray. "We will talk about fines and penalties, which could reach tens of thousands of dol-

Murray says county officials are working on the most recent spill and the long-term leakage in concurrent investigations which he hopes to have wrapped up in a couple of weeks. "We no doubt had a large overflow in an event July 9 and have had small amounts of PCBs over a long period of time, " said Mur-

Inland Waters of Detroit responded to the clean-up, working from July 9 through July 18, much of that time 24-hours a day. Murray says it will be at least a week before final costs are determined and a bill sent to

For the long-term PCB problem which forced the closing and clean-up of Newburgh Lake, Murray says $2.5-million of the $10-million project cost was used for clean-up of toxic waste. He notes General Motors could be liable for costs associated with their portion of the PCB removal.

Currently, federal funds are being used for the clean-up because the only known illegal dumping came from Evans Products, which went bankrupt.

That committee also may discuss a resolution proposed by Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R.Canton, to require signs be displayed along roads and highways in Wayne County. Patterson also sits on the committee.

The signs would identify who for particular conditions, Patter-

"There are many reasons being put forth by the experts as to why the roads are in the condition we find them," Patterson said. "However, as a member of the monitoring public, I want to know who is responsible for specific stretches of roadway which seem to be crumbling long before they should.

"The way the system is curto contact and hold responsible rently designed, with federal highways, private roads, local roads, city streets, county primary roads and state trunk lines. most of us can't tell who is responsible. The question of road jurisdiction is mind-boggling and I want some additional clarity so that we can attach responsibility and accountability."

Commissioner Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, who represents Redford Township and part of Livonia and chairs the Committee on Roads, Airports and Public Services, said she had questions about Patterson's request, particularly about the cost of installing such signs and county liability.

Under the recent road package, Michigan counties and local communities will maintain control of 23,000 miles of roads. Gov. John Engler wanted the state Department of Transportation to take over these roads, but Engler scaled back that request to less than 9,000 miles.

Mention summer school to many teenagers and the reaction is most likely the same as taking away the car keys.

However, for a group of 120 Wayne County high school students, spending two weeks at Madonna University's Summer Institute for the Arts and Sciences is both a learning experience and summer vacation.

Students get intensive studies in class sessions like Chemistry and Biology of the Rouge River; World Wide Web; Molecular Genetics and Genetic Engineering; Sign Language and Artistic Expression for the Deaf; and Music Video Production.

"The program is sponsored by the Michigan Department of Education for gifted and talented students," said Sister Nancy Marie Jamroz, vice-president for student life at Madonna, and organizer of the Summer Institute at the university.

"We believe in the philosophy that many students have talents, and want to increase their knowledge and learn new techniques. It's a chance for the students to get immersed in subjects they don't have in high school.

It's that last part that entices many students to Madonna for two weeks out of the summer.

"I picked the session on genetics because I want to get into the medical field someday," said Mary Crofts, 17, from Westland John Glenn High School. "It's been great getting hands-on experience in subjects that would just be too expensive for the high school to do."

That was echoed by classmate Christopher Tatman, 17, of Westland.

"We've done a water analysis of the Rouge River and are doing preliminary tests to determine the water quality," noted Tat-

"I've been working on the Rouge River project for several years, and it's rewarding to find out if it's actually working to clean-up the river. We also visited a waste water treatment facility."

All work and no play makes for a very dull student. And the

Madonna University

Auto quality institute a benefit to local suppliers

Frank E. and Bessie Angileri of Livonia have established the Angileri Quality Institute at Madonna University.

Institute organizers hope to foster quality in the automotive industry at the suppliers level. The institute will be operated by the University's School of Business and funded by the Angileris who will also serve in an advisory capacity.

"My wife and I chose Madonna University for this institute because of its quality programs and excellent faculty," said Frank Angileri.

"We feel that Madonna's School of Business, which already offers a master's degree in quality and operations management, has the capability to develop this institute into a nationally recognized entity since it is the only one of its kind established by an independent liberal arts university."

A symposium will be held annually with the first slated for Monday, Jan. 26, 1998. This initial symposium will explore and discuss problems related to quality issues, especially among small- and medium-sized companies in the automotive industry.

As the institute continues to develop, it will incorporate training of company personnel, primarily automotive, in costeffective programs to improve organizational performance which will include quality improvements.

"Madonna University will appoint an executive director and two co-directors to develop and run the institute, and the Angileris will select two co-directors from the local business community," said Stuart Arends, dean of the School of Business.

"This unique quality institute will be a tremendous opportunity for suppliers in the automotive industry," said Frank Angileri. "They will not have to pay travel expenses and exorbitant prices to obtain practical knowledge and assistance which will improve performance in the workplace. There is a need for this type of program as you can always strengthen the quality component of an organization."

Frank Angileri worked as a quality assurance engineer at the Ford Motor Co. for 34 years. After retiring in 1988, he started his own quality management consulting business, Quality Concepts and Strategies, Inc. in Livonia.

In 1996, Angileri established the Angileri Quality Award at Madonna University. It is available to a student pursuing a master's degree in Quality and Operations Management.

The recipient must have contributed significantly to quality improvements in the American automotive industry.

tories of crime, especially those which involve families, are particularly touching to readers and newspaper professionals alike.

On Sunday, we wrote about an anonymous Westland woman who was hospitalized in critical condition following several apparent instances of spousal abuse — this one particularly brutal.

This incident involved a kitchen knife and involved a stab wound which punctured this 25-year-old woman's lung. She was hospitalized in critical condition.

Luckily, the story we wrote was not the final chapter of this victim's life. For many victims, years of abuse become a death knell; their final hours are plagued with horror and violence. As she held her back against a door, bracing to keep an out-of-control spouse from entering, the knife was reportedly plunged through the door and into her back, puncturing a lung.

Some may believe that this type of reporting is intrusive into the lives of people, an airing of dirty laundry which should remain a "secret" and stay behind closed doors.

We disagree.

If this young woman's story helps just one other victim come forward to a shelter, family member or friend to ask for help, then it has done more than inform a community about a crime: It could have possibly saved a life.

It is the hiding of such crimes, those who

According to counselors who handle such, cases, such abuse often begins with a verbal, or psychological abuse, which can be as simple as constant put-downs about personal attributes such as weight.

It can continue into physical threats directed at things around the person, designed to intimidate. Breaking prized possessions or harming a beloved pet can leave a victim in a state of terror, with little self esteem.

Finally, the perpetrator's anger can be directed at the person, injuring them as in this recent case or even eventually killing them.

The cycle of abuse is repeated when the victim's self esteem is battered and beleaguered to the point that she cannot make a decision without fear as a constant companion. She lies about what happened or refuses to press charges, and the cycle begins again.

My colleagues and I, both Democratic and Republican, wanted to ensure we did not have another disaster similar to the Lafayette closing a few years ago. That is why we funded these hospitals. Since 1990, the department has closed approximately 12 hospitals throughout the state. There is a great need for these three facilities. To Mr. Ken Mehl: We thank you, sir, for your support and for putting our son on at the Westland Summer Festival. After his performance, many residents were asking where he would perform next; without your support they would not know of his talent. You, too, are truly an asset to this city and to the Westland Summer Festival.

To the Sidekicks Band: You are great musicians and great young men. It takes a great musician to recognize talent in others and to support that talent and encourage it the way you did by helping our son the night he performed makes you number one in our book.

We would also like to thank Mr. Ed Turner. The cities of Wayne and Westland did a truly tremendous job by voting in Mr. Turner for the school board. He truly has an interest in our young people and has been a great encouragement for our son in his quest. We know he will do a great job in supporting our school system and our young people.

Changing behavior

There is a proposed state bill to ban unescorted teenagers from malls on Friday and Saturday evenings. The action is being taken because teens have been unruly and intimidating at the malls at those particular times, making shopping difficult.

A ban for a limited time may be sufficient message to intelligent teens to bring about the change in behavior. State Rep. Debbie Whyman indicates she will vote against the proposal because it discriminates against teens; the Bill would really discriminate against the gang behavior of unruly teens.

Action should be taken to correct the situation as it now stands. Suggest other action than the proposed bill if you will.

Taking no action guarantees the chaos and intimidation will continue, and the miscreant teens will continue to call the shots.

POINTS OF VIEW

Incinerator passes analysis with high marks hen making complex public policy decisions, the most productive evaluation often involves a cost/benefit analysis.

Hopefully, such an approach to the Central Wayne Air Quality and Energy Recovery Project will be more productive than simply responding to the claims of those who oppose it.

Economic benefits of the project include:

- Addition of about 300 construction jobs, preservation of existing operating jobs, and training for new positions.
- Sale of electricity to Detroit Edison under a 35-year contract, creating new revenues.
- Waste-to-energy offers longterm waste disposal at stable and affordable rates.
- Significant tax revenues plus the pumping of millions of dollars into the local economy.

Environmental benefits include:

■ Enhanced pollution control — The incinerator will be equipped with state-of-the-art pollution control equipment including an acid-gas scrubber and a fabric filter baghouse to remove particulates. A mercury removal system will be added along with a nitrogen oxide reduction system. This meets stringent Environmental Protection Agency standards.

■ Avoiding landfilling — Every week more than 2,000 tons of municipal solid waste is generated. Even after recycling, the only viable disposal alternatives for that kind of volume are waste-to-energy and landfilling. Until recently, landfilling was an acceptable option; fortunately, we now know better. The potential damage to our environment from uncontrolled dumping of garbage is enormous — a conclusion consistent with the position taken by both Wayne County and the State of Michigan.

■ Clean electricity generation —

STEVEN R. AYNES

Generating electricity by burning municipal solid waste, with proper air pollution control equipment, is cleaner than the fossil fuel alternatives.

■ Compatibility with recycling — Many recyclable materials, including metal and glass, are not combustible so their removal improves combustion.

Now let's look at the anticipated costs of this joint public/private effort. Funding is entirely privately arranged with the partnership paying for development, financing and construction of the new pollution control system at no cost to the authority. The partnership will place more than $20 million in equity directly into the plant while the bulk of the remainder of the cost will be financed through bonds supported by the project's revenues. Less than 5 percent will come from a grant from the state. No public credit support is involved.

Of greater importance to the authority is the environmental impact of the project on not only our own citizens, but those of neighboring communities as well.

Authority board members and staff have spent thousands of hours over several years studying and discussing environmental issues.

We have held the partnership to the highest standard not only in terms of information provided, but also its capability and experience in ensuring the project's success.

Can we guarantee that there will be no emissions from the plant? No, that isn't possible. I can say, however, that with the new control equipment, emissions will be so low that only the most sensitive monitoring instruments will be able to measure them,

The incinerator has served the authority's communities well, performing cleanly and reliably. With the installation of the most effective pollution control technology available, the facility will be one of the cleanest in the country. These benefits, when combined with the expected economic results, enable the project to pass the test of a cost/benefit analysis with high marks.

Today's kindergarten isn't for babies anymore move's afoot in the Michigan Legislature to make kids more grown-up when they attend kindergarten. Currently, children who turn age 5 by Dec. 1 start public school in the fall of that year. The bill, introduced by a group of state representatives, would move the eligibility up over three years, until children entering kindergarten are 5 years old by Sept. 1.

That's probably a good thing, considering that kindergarten has become more academic and that some school districts are offering optional extended day kindergarten.

Now schools incorporate social skills into academic exercises, such as working with a partner on an art project or science experiment. Curriculum stresses specific academic objectives, including counting, graphing and writing short sentences; students also learn social studies; and there is an emphasis on learning centers or stations.

A recent news story quoted some local educators who say the increased emphasis on academics in kindergarten is to prepare students to achieve higher scores when they take the fourth grade statewide assessment test.

That would be too bad. A more solid rationale is that many children are ready to learn more than was previously taught. They enter kindergarten with more knowledge via television, computers and maybe even big book stores. And with both mothers and fathers working, children at all socio-economic levels have extensive pre-kindergarten experiences such as day care, preschool nursery and/or camp and Head Start.

"There probably are a number of reasons (for introducing more skills into kindergarten)," says Marlynn Levin, a Birmingham resident who is work and family program director for Merrill-Palmer Institute of Wayne State University.

Levin oversees Merrill-Palmerdirected child care both in suburb and inner city. "For many years we have underestimated the potential of young children," she says. "Now that we're working with 6-week-old infants, we find that the curriculum can be more sophisticated because the children have more capabilities than we

West Bloomfield kindergarten teacher Kay Gilmer maintains that kindergarten is still play-centered, but likes the curriculum changes that have occurred since she first began teaching in the early '60s.

"It is more directed," said Gilmer, a Farmington Hills resident. "We might have more goals for the children to reach through their play than there used to be." But, she emphasized, "play is still very important. Play teaches children to get along, respect and care about one another. It is still utmost in our minds."

Both educators endorse the proposal to move kindergarten eligibility up to Sept. 1 to increase the numbers of youngsters who are developmentally ready. The legislative bill does allow parents to petition a school district if they think their almost 5-year-old is kindergarten material. They also consider the move of some school districts to optional all-day kindergarten appropriate.

"It's almost impossible for a working parent to cope with a half-day." Levin said. In fact some children start with a latchkey program, attend halfday kindergarten, then are shuttled to another program for the afternoon until they can be picked up.

"I'm very excited about it," seconds Gilmer. "For the kids who stay all day, it's one less caregiver, one less set of rules." And probably even more opportunities for play.

Judith Doner Berne, a West Bloomfield resident, is former managing editor of the Eccentric Newspapers.

Don't bet on fair play at Indian-run casinos

It has long been apparent that casinos are for suckers. The lone gambler can't beat the house's odds. Some casinos pump in extra oxygen so that the gambler won't feel fatigue and will gamble longer. If the sucker runs short of cash, there are automatic teller machines, or the house will accept your credit card and mount your debt.

Now we learn that the situation is worse than we thought it was. State Rep. David Jaye, the maverick Republican from northern Macomb County, tried to curb some of the wrongs of Indian-run casinos with an amendment to the casino bill that sailed 107-4 through the House of Representatives July 1. Speaker Curtis Hertel, D-Detroit, ruled Jaye's amendment was "not germane" to the bill, so no vote was taken.

In sum, Jaye argued the Indian tribes have the best of two worlds. They are Michigan residents in terms of benefits but a separate nation if a non-Indian wants the same rights on an Indian reservation.

Jaye gives me credit for pointing out certain abuses about Indian courts to him. I take the cub's share and give him the lion's share of the credit for following up with more research.

"The Michigan and U.S. constitutions which protect our civil liberties are tossed aside as soon as you walk through the door of an Indian casino," he said.

Items:

Judges - "Indians can vote to elect Michigan local, county and state judges and all other Michigan politicians, but Michigan citizens cannot vote to elect Indian tribal judges."

■ Trial - The gambler who is hurt, has his civil rights violated, is sexually harassed or gets into a dispute on Indian grounds, including casinos, has his case tried by an Indian tribal council - with no appeal.

■ Attorney – If you are charged in a Michigan court and can't afford an attorney, the court will appoint one. You have no such right in an Indian court.

■ Secrecy - Michigan government is subject to the "sunshine" laws - the Open Meetings and Freedom of Information acts. "All Indian trials, Indian political meetings, Indian bureaucrat rule-making and all other Indian government operations are exempt" from state sunshine

Journalists in Mount Pleasant told me they have tried to learn how much the Indian casino there pays in taxes. Big secret. The press had to find out from the state Treasury Department in Lansing.

■ Other taxes – Indians are exempt from property taxes that run schools and municipal services, the single business tax and transportation fund taxes. Jaye thinks they should either "pay the same state taxes or only sell to members of the Indian tribes and their dependents, like the military PX stores." ■ Scholarships – Indians get preference for $12 million in free college scholarships, regardless of wealth. Most Michiganians can get scholarships based only on need. "Indians don't have to maintain attendance, passing grade point averages nor progress toward a degree like everyone else," Jaye found.

To his credit, Gov. John Engler has tried to end this boondoggle. His attitude, quite correctly, is that the needy and able should get student aid regardless of whether their ancestors arrived via Ellis Island or the Bering Strait.

Meanwhile, a non-Indian couple is trying to sue the Chippewa Tribe over a 1996 crash in which tribal officer Chad Smith ran a red light en route to a non-emergency situation and piled into their car. Smith wasn't operating his siren or emergency lights. The injured folks charge negligence. The tribe contends that as a sovereign nation, it is immune from the lawsuit, and state courts have no jurisdiction over matters involving the tribe.

The matter is pending in Isabella Circuit Court. The plaintiffs haven't lost yet, but one should be stunned by the tribe's arrogance.

Keep that in mind when you watch Ted Turner's dishonest, bleeding heart movies about Tecumseh on the TNT channel.

And keep it mind, sucker, if you are tempted to try your luck in an Indian casino.

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and regional events.

Just like industry, many working engineers need to "re-tool" to help them tackle global competition and changes in industry. An innovative "certificate" program at the University of Michigan-Dearborn School of Engineering has been designed with these people in mind.

The School's Engineering Professional Development office has developed certificate programs in most of the currently "hot' fields in the engineering profession, including software engineering, CAD/CAM, quality engineering, vehicle electronics and intelligent control.

The programs were developed in response to clearly identified needs of people and industries in southeastern Michigan, according to Subrata Sengupta, dean of the UM-Dearborn School of Engineering.

"Very senior guys in industry came to us and suggested that we make our traditional educational programs more 'modular,'

"Re-tooling" is the word indus- " said Sengupta. "It's pretty clear that people will need to develop new skills throughout their careers to keep pace with changes in industry. And it will be cheaper for industry to 'retool' their human capital than to hire a new work force."

The certificate programs are ideally suited for engineers and managers who want to develop greater knowledge in specialized areas because of job or career changes, according to M. Jeanne Girard, director of the Engineering Professional Development program at UM-Dearborn.

"Almost every industry person that I have come into contact with has given the school very high marks for our emphasis on soliciting industrial input in designing educational programs," Girard said.

JACQUE MARTIN-DOWNS

Spare the rod, spare the child: which is right?

o spank or not to spank ... the age-old question. Spare the rod or spare the child? If this question hasn't come up between parents, we'd be surprised because people's opinions about spanking are usually firm.

Some parents say that they could never justify spanking because they remember so vividly how it was to be spanked as a child. "I'll never put my child through that humiliation."

Others remember their spankings a little differently and fell strongly that spankings WERE justified because "I really wasn't a very good kid and deserved them."

A recent piece of research put some meat behind the controversy. This research from the University of New Hampshire studied 6-to 9year-olds and found a strong correlation between anti-social behaviors and three or more spankings per week. In fact, they conclude that "the more spankings kids endure, the more often they lie, bully, destroy and disobey."

If you are the spanking type, this research business is probably hogwash to you, and further, research psychologists are not the 'experts." No matter what the studies show, you are going to continue to spank as you always have. Just know this: Hitting, in any fashion, is the cheap narcotic of the discipline continuum. It works as a quick fix because it intimidates, but cannot sustain itself over time.

Is spanking effective in changing behavior? No, and further, client after client has reported to me that they feared spankings in the beginning, but later came to hate the person who spanked them and retaliated by showing no emotion, but rebelled in many ways.

When should you do it

So, if you are going to spank anyway, when should you do it? Spankings have to come from your most mature and calm side. In other words, from your most disciplined side comes your spanking. If you hit out of your own anger, the point you are trying to make will be lost when the child only remembers that "mommy sure can act like a mad woman."

Johnny runs out into the street in front of a car ... some would justify a spanking because the child was putting himself in danger. But certainly, a child doesn't put himself or herself in extreme danger more than a handful of times in their lives. So a handful of spankings would be all it takes for Johnny to understand the severity of what he did.

One Monday morning, Joe arrived at the therapist's office looking rather depressed and remorseful. It seems that Joe and his 4-year-old daughter, Amanda, had a large altercation over the weekend. Apparently, Amanda had come down to the kitchen early Saturday morning to get herself a bowl of cereal. Although she did a spectacular job of pouring the cereal into her bowl, she wasn't so skillful with the milk

A large jug of milk can be fairly overwhelming for a preschooler, so you can imagine how she felt as she saw the milk splashing over the bowl and onto the floor, making its way under the dishwasher and refrigerator. But the little one didn't cry over spilled milk (!), she found hot pads to sop all it up.

Joe admitted that when he arrived on the scene, he went ballistic, paddling her over and over and sending her to her room for the rest of the morning. And who was stuck with the problem of the spilled milk? Yes, Joe was stuck mopping and swearing.

What did Amanda learn? Dads go crazy when you mess up, so watch out!

Window of opportunity

The therapist explained to him that there was still a window of opportunity to redeem himself and teach a lesson in responsibility and resourcefulness. She gave him a few tips and he was on his way.

That afternoon, he sat Amanda down on his knee and told her he wanted to talk about what had happened on Saturday. He felt her freeze up as he began, but soften when she explained her reason for why she was pouring milk. "Daddy." she said, "I just wanted to be able to get my own cereal so you and mom could sleep longer."

It was then that he taught her the best lesson of all ... how to problem-solve the dilemma.

"Honey, I appreciate your thinking about us and we'd like it if you could come down and get your cereal before we get up. So I've been wondering and wondering how we could make it easy for you to get your own milk."

And with that, she popped out of his lap, ran

Group collects signatures for ballot proposal

Carol Poenisch and a few friends are looking for a few more friends to help gather signatures for a physician assistance in dying proposal on the statewide ballot in 1998.

BY RICHARD PEARL STAFF WRITER

Carol Poenisch says it's simply about having the right to choose.

"I want the right, I want to decide at the time" whether to use a physician's aid in dying - should the need ever arise, she says.

Toward that end, the marathonrunning Northville homemaker and mother of two youngsters is working as a full-time volunteer to help Merian's Friends put its "right to physician aid in dying" proposal on the ballot for Michigan's citizens to decide.

It is an uphill battle. Besides the basic assisted suicide controversy. the group is far short of both the funds and the required signatures. But Poenisch, who is the co-founder and treasurer, has a special interest: the group's namesake was her moth-

In 1992 at age 71, Merian Frederick, a lively, socially conscious and politically active Ann Arbor mother of five and grandmother of 10, was diagnosed with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease. There was no hope: the disease would make her bedridden, unable to breathe normally or swallow or even communicate and it would kill her.

Frederick had always been a communicator, campaign worker, Vietnam War protester, even candidate for state legislature. She had seen others suffer fatal illnesses and she refused to become a mind without a body.

She decided to raise one last social issue that would outlive her - she would die with a physician's assis-

"She knew it was a political move to do that," said her daughter. "She could have gotten a gun and blown her brains out, but that wouldn't have made the papers.

"This was the kind of thing she lived for. She really believed in both peace and human rights."

Speechless much of her final year, Merian spent a day with each of her children and then, with the aid of Royal Oak pathologist Dr. Jack Kevorkian, she died She had gone to Kevorkian because, under Michigan law, her own doctor risked prosecution, if he assisted her.

A different way

Kevorkian and Merian's Friends aren't connected. In fact, its proposal would ban his methods.

Basically, it offers physician aid in dying only to terminally ill, mentally competent adults. The patient must request it, two physicians must certify the illness is terminal and that the patient likely will die in six months - and the patient must be examined by a psychiatrist to rule out reversible mental conditions.

The patient must be fully. informed of other available care, such as hospices, and the patient

Getting started: Merian's Friends used a picnic in the park to kick off their campaign to collect some 350,000 signatures to get a "right to physician aid in dying" proposal on the November 1998 state ballot. The group takes its name from Merian Frederick who ended her life with the help of Dr. Jack Kevorkian after being diagnosed with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease.

Project Life provides alternatives

Cardinal Adam Maida of the Archdiocese of Detroit has taken the wraps off a new program, Project Life, designed to provide alternatives to abortion and assisted suicide.

Unveiled on July 9, Project Life is designed as a one-on-one referral hotline. Project Life has handled more than 700 telephone calls, helping expectant mothers choose to bring their babies to term, often through assistance in obtaining housing and other material needs.

network of care-givers, offering a new direction for persons left seemingly hopeless due to lifethreatening illness or disabilities, according to organizers.

The Project Life network provides physician referral, hospice care, respite assistance, pain management, counseling and assistance in a variety of other needs.

One caller suffering chronic pain, who also was unemployed and uninsurable, was referred to

At the same time, it provides a a physician experienced in pain management, the archdiocese said. That person now is controlling pain and is able to work and obtain medical benefits.

Plans to expand Project Life are under way, with new initiatives and educational materials to be offered jointly this fall by the Archdiocese and the Michigan Catholic Conference.

must wait seven days between the initial request and dispensation of the lethal prescription. Physicians who violate the regulations will be disciplined.

"A lot of people are confused" by the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding state bans on physician-assisted suicide, said Poenisch. What the court did was leave the door open to constitutional claims by dying patients in the future.

In support of her position, Poenisch notes some physicians have acknowledged hastening death at some time in their careers. And she adds that even Michigan Gov. John Engler's 1992 ban on assisted suicide acknowledged that hastening death was lawful when the intent is to relieve pain and suffer-

Merian's Friends hopes to begin gathering 350,000 signatures this month. Some 247,127 - 8 percent of the 3,089,077 votes cast in the last gubernatorial election - must be valid to put the issue on the November 1998 ballot.

Roz Fink, a retired Novi grade school teacher, says those who sign petitions to put physician aid in dying on Michigan's ballot aren't voting on the issue. They are merely saying "Yes, I believe in the democ-

"I believe it's a basic fundamental right on how you want to die," said Fink, a volunteer for Merian's Friends, which is seeking to put the issue before Michigan's voters. "It's tied in with how we each perceive our end. You never know how it's going to happen and you should have choices.

She recalls how her mother, Sally Radner, died of cancer - "For three weeks, she was hallucinating and screaming from pain." By contrast, her father and her first husband went peacefully - she and her husband even sang songs.

Fashion with a flair will be the theme of the 1997 Zonta Club Fall Fashion Show Thursday, Sept. 25, to benefit Schoolcraft College's Women's Resource Center scholarship program.

For the fifth year, the Northwest Wayne County chapter of Zonta will host an evening fashion show highlighting the latest fall apparel at the Parisian Store in Laurel Park Place in Livonia. The annual event brings women from the community together to benefit service projects dedicated to improving the stature of women.

"Anything we undertake as a club is for the benefit of women," said fashion show co-chairwoman Sally Randall.

Zonta International, a worldwide service organization, is comprised of women executives in business and the professions who work collaboratively to improve the legal, political, economic and professional status of women.

In the past, recipients of Zonta Club's charity have included Greenmead Historical Village of Livonia, Zonta Leadership Academy, The Seedlings Program, YWCA, Matthaei Botanical

Skin cancer and suntans: what you need to know

Thinking about a suntan this summer? Before you head out for some serious rays, the American Dancer Society has some information about skin cancer, you should know about.

An estimated 50 percent of all people who live to age 65 will have at least one form of skin cancer.

• There are several different kinds of skin cancer, distinguished by the types of cells the tumors resemble. The three most common types of skin cancer are basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma and malignant melanoma.

• In 1997, 40,300 (up from 38,300 in 1996) will develop malignant melanoma, the most serious skin cancer, and 7,300 people will die from melanoma. In Michigan, an estimated 1,200 new cases of melanoma will be diagnosed and 220 patients will die. That's up from 980 new cases and 190 melanoma deaths in 1996.

• There will be more than 900,000 (up from 800,000 in 1996) new cases of basal cell or squamous cell skin cancers nationwide in 1997. Although highly curable, about 90 percent of these cancers could have been prevented.

• A suntan is not healthy. It's the body's defense against skin damage cause by the dangerous ultraviolet rays of the sun.

• The sun's ultraviolet rays are strongest between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Exposure at these times should be avoided and protective clothing should be worn.

• Maximum protection from the sun's harmful rays is offered by a sunscreen with a sun protective factor (SPF) of 15 or higher.

SPF works like this:

A person using a sunscreen with a SPF value of 15 can stay in the sun 15 times longer than without the sunscreen before obtaining the same degree of sunburn. The higher the SPF, the better.

 Sunscreen should be applied 15 to 30 minutes before going outdoors. It should be reapplied if you perspire heavily or swim no sunscreen will last all day.

• You don't have to be hot to suffer sunburn. Snow reflects as much as 85 percent of the sun's • Don't count on being safe on a cloudy day or under water. Seventy to 80 percent of the destructive ultraviolet rays, which are responsible for sunburns, penetrate clouds and water.

• Individuals should practice regular skin self-examination and request skin examinations from their health care providers as part of their cancer-related checkups.

 Radiation from tanning beds is as dangerous as the rays from the sun and can contribute to skin cancer and skin aging.

Tanning parlor radiation also may cause additional damage to your eyes and immune system.

For more information, contact the American Cancer Society's at (810) 557-5353 or visit its South. eastern Region office at 29350 Southfield Road, Suite 110. Southfield.

"Cancers that are painful and have reached the limits of medication, those people should have that choice," she said.

Dr. Ronald C. Bishop, the group's vice chairman and professor emeritus of internal medicine at the University of Michigan, believes "we need to have compassionate care for the dying patient and they should have something to say about how things go on.

"But we don't want to encourage suicide," he said. "The patient should get everything they want from patient care. They should have the best in comfort care, usually hospicetype care, counseling, spiritual counseling, pain control, family support."

Dr. Edward C. Pierce, chairman of Merian's Friends and a retired Ann Arbor general practitioner, said the group is supporting a bill on assisted suicide. introduced on July 2 by State Sen. Gary Peters (D-Bloomfield Township).

"We are very pleased, of course that Sen. Peters is proposing a law that meets the objectives of Merian's Friends," said Pierce, "However, we think the chances of this bill ever getting out of committee are zilch, since Right to Life of Michigan has the Michigan State Senate in its hip pocket.

"We admire Sen. Peters' courage in standing up for the 66 percent of Michigan voters who are in favor having physician aid in dying."

Costly effort

To get the proposal on the ballot, Merian's Friends needs 5,000 volunteers to raise $500,000 for professional pollsters, who have six months to work.

As of June, however, Merian's Friends had only 2,700 volunteers and $140,000 in donations, most of it in small gifts, plus a 1,000 members volunteering as pollsters.

Poenisch is proud of what's been done, but "there's no money to be gained by giving you the right to vote on how you want to die." In contrast, the Detroit casino question got on the ballot "really fast, there was so much money" involved, she said.

"That's tough on a campaign like ours; we're grassroots - 'of the people, by the people,' Poenisch said. "We rely on contributions from people who feel they should have the right to vote on this."

To compound things, one national retail chain (Home Depot) has denied the group access to its properties for signature gathering, apparently due to the controversy, she said.

But Poenisch, a dedicated distance runner who's competed in 10 marathons – she owns a 28thplace, 2:51 finish in the 1993 Boston Marathon - is equally dedicated to the proposal.

"I'm just a mom and a housewife," she said, "and I want this one thing to pass, and I'll work my whole life on it."

She's already battled for patients' rights - her own. When she tried to have her second child by natural birth after doing it with her first in Denmark, she had to fight Henry Ford Hospital over its restrictions.

"I think hospitals have too much control; I couldn't believe I didn't have any rights over my child," she said. "All I want is to expose the problems. Certainly, legalizing physician aid in dying is a small solution for a general problem we're having in this country of patients not being heard, of patients' rights.

but we can't give nurturing support people need. We're too big. too cold, too sterile."

But she frankly says that if she had been her mother, "I may or may not have wanted to die. I might have wanted to live."

And she does spend a lot of time thinking about the other (pro-life) side to the issue" of assisted suicide.

But she feels her group's proposal has "good safeguards against the slippery slope" that some fear.

"We encourage life, we really do," she said. "We encourage people to go out and find other options before this final option."

Children's artwork reflects church's pioneer spirit

Five-year-old Joshua Smith has one of his paintings hanging in a Salt Lake City art gallery.

The gallery featuring the Redford resident's work is the Museum of Church History and Art of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City, Utah.

As part of the 150th anniversary of the arrival of Latter-day Saint (Mormon) pioneers in the Salt Lake Valley, the museum held a contest, "Pioneering: Past, Present, and Future," aimed at helping young children across the world develop a pioneering

According to museum director Glen Leonard, the contest was designed to help the children cultivate an appreciation for their pioneer forefathers, whatever country they're from, and understand how they can be pioneers in their respective coun-

Joshua entitled his piece, "My Family Are Pioneers." He said his family are pioneers because they are the only Latter-day Saints in their neighborhood.

"We always try to be good examples and share the Book of Mormon," he said.

Leonard was pleased with the diversity of theme and culture found in the entries. About onethird of the 300 images on display were from outside the United States.

"They gave us the perspective of their own cultures, families and church," he said. "I can see in the art that the children have faith in the future, feel the strength of families, and respect their ancestors and those who have sacrificed in the past to make their lives better.

The children's works share common features that transcend cultural differences. The church art museum wanted the children's contribution to the 150th anniversary because children are full of hope and they teach people what is most important in life.

"You laugh with children; you cry with children; you smile with children, because their imaginations see things in a fresh way," Leonard said.

In judging the pieces, the museum considered the creative aspects of the children's works more heavily than the technical aspects.

Exhibit organizer Marilyn Clark said that "through their art, the children express their creativity, their faith in God, their love and gratitude for their heritage, and their hopes for the future."

The drawings were submitted by children ages 5-11 in 43 states and in 27 countries. The museum received 1,900 entries, and the top 300 chosen for the display which opened Jan. 18 and runs through Oct. 12, 1997.

Work of art: Redford resident Joshua Smith's crayon drawing, entitled "My Family Are Pioneers," is among 300 works by children hanging in the Museum of Church of History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Panthers, Lasers sweep twinbills

What's in a name when you're playing good softball?

Although listed on the Incredible Girls Fastpitch League schedule as the Redford Rangers, they're called the Your Better Market Panthers.

On Tuesday, the YBM Panthers continued their hot streak by sweeping the host Plymouth Lightning in a double-header at Salem High School, 4-1 and 7-3.

Winning pitcher Emily Williams had six outouts and allowed just two walks and one hit in the opener. She struck out four.

In the nightcap, Debbie Christensen pitched a one-hitter and struck out seven as the Panthers improved to 14-3.

April Martell, Carli McManamon, Rachel Hoffman, Kristina Boynton and Kasie Mathena each contributed RBI singles.

Krista Donfried caught both ends of the double-header.

•LASERS 6-8, ORIOLES 0-4: The Livonia Lasers (15-4) received another strong pitching performance from Lori Jendrusik to beat the Northville Orioles in a twinbill Tuesday at Franklin High School.

Jendrusik struck out 13 and tossed a seven-inning no-hitter in the opener. She walked just three.

In the second game, Jendrusik allowed just one hit, walked five and struck out seven over five innings (time limit) to lift the

In the opener, Jenny Fisher stopped the Lancers — composed of mostly Ladywood players - on two hits and one walk through seven innings. She struck out six.

The semi-professional Wayne County Twisters, packed with former Observerland players, will kick off their 1997 home season at 8 p.m. Saturday at Downriver Community Conference Center (formerly known as Schafer High School and also Basketball City) against the North Coast Rebels of Vermillion, Ohio.

Coached by team owner David Domonko, the Rebels were 1996 champions of the Lake Shore Football League and reached the quarter finals of the National Association of American Football playoffs.

Admission is $4 for adults and $2 for students (children under-12 are free).

In the season opener last Saturday at Inkster High School, the Motor City Cougars downed the Twisters, 11.6.

Eric Harris scored the lone touchdown for the Twisters when he recovered a fumbled punt in the end zone.

The Twisters, 5-5 a year ago, currently have a 45-man roster. The team practices two times per week.

Four Twisters earned All-America honors last year including Garden City's Chuck Lauber, Scott Harris, Aaron Brothers and Wayne's Pat Bowie (who played at Plymouth Salem). Twisters owner Glenn Brothers thought he had another potential All-America in the fold when former Westland John Glenn High All-Stater and twotime All-Big Ten running back Tony Boles, who played at Michigan, showed up for a practice.

But Boles, once an 11th-round draft pick of the Dallas Cowboys. did not return.

Briggs back on Ocelot turf

BY C.J. RIBAK SPORTS WRITER

A variety of methods have been tried to rejuvenate the men's basketball program at Schoolcraft College.

Nothing's worked.

The closest the administration came to turning around a program that has become a perennial loser was two years ago, when longtime coaching veteran Glen Donahue was brought in.

It seemed Donahue had a handle on the situation, although the team struggled through its first season under his direction. But then, just before the start of his second year on the job, he resigned to become an assistant coach at Central Michigan.

And it was back to square one. Perhaps that's why SC athletic director Ed Kavanaugh opted to explore his avenues more completely this time. He didn't want short-term filler for the job.

It took a while to meet that requirement - so long that the 1997-98 season could almost be considered a wash. It wasn't until last week that the decision was made:

Bring back Carlos Briggs.

All sorts of hopes ride with that name. And with good reason - the last time SC was any good at all at men's hoop, Briggs was the reason why. He led the NJCAA in scoring and was an NJCAA All-American.

After earning his associate's degree at SC in 1984, Briggs got a scholarship to Baylor. He led the Southwest Conference in scoring as a junior, and was eventually drafted in the fourth round by the San Antonio Spurs. For the past two years, Briggs has been teaching and coaching in a suburban Dallas high school. As an assistant coach two years ago at Waxahachie HS, the team reached the No. 1 ranking in Class 4A, the state's secondbiggest division, and compiled a 34-5 record.

Briggs switched to Cedar Hill HS last year, another Class 4A team, helping it to a 26-6 mark and a No. 4 ranking.

So what brings him back to a seemingly hopeless situation outside Detroit?

"You don't always get a chance to coach at your alma mater," Briggs said. "It's a challenge whenever you go into a situation like this.

"I don't expect to go in and turn things around overnight. But one thing I want to do is be competitive.'

The obstacles facing Briggs are imposing, to say the least. Reaching double-figures in wins for a season was a goal-for the past dozen years, and it was not often reached (if at all).

Even when a promising team was put together, academic casualties decimated it at the semester break in early January.

Finding players who can play and still stay academically eligible will be Briggs' task. And he has to start immediately.

"I'm going down to St. Cecelia's as soon as I get into town," the new SC coach said, referring to the gym where many of the city's best players congreban talent is what Briggs wants to piece together. To do it, he's going to have to get his message through - I know people. I can hook you up with a Division I team or a good Division II.

Of course, it's the same message Briggs pretty much ignored when he graduated from Detroit Benedictine and headed to California to junior college, before returning to the Detroit-area to play at SC.

One thing Briggs hopes will help him turn the program around is his commitment to the school. When he interviewed with Kavanaugh and assistant dean Midge Carleton, he told them he plans to be on campus.

He does not have a teaching job anywhere yet, but Briggs will teach a basketball class and a physical education class at SC, and hopefully he'll be able to pick up something else on cam-

"I understand the situation." he said. "I'm going to be there as much as possible for (the play-

"One thing I stressed was that I don't want to be one of those coaches who works somewhere else and just coaches there parttime. I want to be on campus all the time."

Although Kavanaugh and Carleton both hope Briggs will be at SC for a long time, they must know success has a price. And if Briggs does turn it around at SC quickly, he'll be moving up to another program.

"It's just like anything else," he admitted. "You're always. looking to improve yourself."

Baker steps down from Mercy

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

One of Observerland's longest and most successful coaching tenures ended with the sudden resignation of Larry Baker as Mercy High School's girls basketball coach.

Baker, who compiled a 381-143 record in 22 seasons, opted for retirement to spend more time with his family while his chil-

Larry Baker dren are still in 22 seasons school.

"I've asked my family to make sacrifices along the way, but it really struck me that I was really making a mistake," Baker said. "I wanted to fulfill my role as a parent as much as I could in such critical years."

The 43-year-old Baker and his wife, Barb, have a son, Chris, who will be a sophomore at Farmington High School, and a daughter, Andrea, who will be a freshman at Mercy.

"I've never attended an open house, because it always conflicted with a basketball game," Baker said, "We've never gone away on Labor Day weekend, because basketball season was always starting then.

"(His children) won't be here forever to enjoy those things as a family. I just started being resentful of some of the conflicts, and it's not fair to a great group basketball players (currently at Mercy) to give them less than my

Baker, who had already begun preparing the Marlins for the upcoming season, said he regretted the timing of his resignation, which comes less than a month before the start of preseason practices

He called Mercy Athletic Director Nancy Malinowski on Saturday to inform her of his decision, and he met with the team Sunday to tell his players.

"I felt as though I was being cruel, because I was coming out of the blue with this," Baker said. "And I wasn't able to offer (the players) an idea of what the next step would be, because I had only told the athletic director. But I think they understand."

Baker said that point was brought home to him last week when he left a basketball scrimmage briefly to drive his daughter to her softball game.

"I came back to the scrimmage and saw the players' parents there supporting them," he said. "It was a striking illustration that I'm not performing the right

Baker said he wanted to emphasize his decision was not a reflection on the current group of Mercy players or done in response to any individual play-

"The advent of the season is really what it took for me to realize how deeply I feel about this,"

"I talked about it with my wife, and we felt I owed it to Nancy to tell her at once. It wasn't right to go through the season less than wholeheartedly."

Malinowski said she was shocked by Baker's decision but, after listening to him explain, understood his reasons behind it.

"He's built a great tradition here; it's going to very hard to replace him," she said. "His record and success speak for themselves.

"Anywhere you go, everybody knows who Larry Baker is. I had a gentleman tell me 'Basketball and Mercy go hand-in-hand, don't they?' I said, 'Well, that's Larry; he's built this program.'"

While the timing might be inconvenient, Malinowski said she wasn't upset by it.

"After all his contributions and all he's done, when he says he just can't do this again, what can you say?" she said. "At least we have a few weeks. It's not like it's the last day (before practice starts).

"I told Larry I'll do everything I can to see the Mercy tradition continues."

Baker's teams won two Class A championships (1977 and 1982) and were runners-up on three occasions — the last time in 1991. The Marlins also won 19 district and 11 regional titles.

The come-from-behind victory over four-time defending state champion Flint Northern in the '82 finals ranks as one of Mercy's greatest accomplishments during Baker's tenure.

"That was an unbelievable experience - the very epitome of achievement," Baker said, adding the Marlins overcame a 19-point fourth-quarter deficit in that game. "It's a wonderful, wonderful memory.'

world record.)

"Usually you'll see 10 to 15 amateurs and six to 10 pros at a meet," Cumming said. "You see a lot of top track and field athletes compete in this games. A lot of these guys have competed for years. I was fortunate I had some natural ability. but I have a lot of catching up to do. One thing in my favor is that I don't have a lot of wear of tear on the body (which on Cumming's frame is only seven percent fat)."

When he was in high school, Cumming never played football or competed in track and field. He lifted weights, but was a mere 6-3, 200 pounds back then.

"I went out and played baseball." he said. "I was an outfielder and infielder. I was in the Air Force six years (where he was a helicopter pilot) and travelled a little playing baseball." Cumming's girlfriend, Shannon Hartnett, will also compete at Greenmead. The Santa Rosa, Calif. native is the No. 1-ranked pro women in the world.

"Eventually I'm looking to turn pro," Cumming said. "Right now I'm just trying to get known. You can win $1,000 to $2,000 in a weekend. It's expensive for me because it costs a couple hundred dollars each weekend to travel to a meet. I'm in the process of looking to get sponsored. I going trying to promote myself and promote the sport to see how far it can go."

(Cumming recently won a challenge caber against the pros and donated his prize money to the Special Olympics.)

Following his trip to Livonia, Cumming will travel to Kalamazoo and then he's headed to the North American Championships in Fergus, Ontario. The American Championships are later in the month in California. "I just happen to be Scottish, but the competition is open to anybody," said Cumming, a former police officer who now works as a private investigator. "There's a lot of history and ancestry to these events. It's a more information, call (313) 832festive atmosphere. I have two 1849.

small kids and they really enjoy it. It's good for families to be around and be involved with."

Cumming, who resides in Thomasville, N.C., trains in his own backyard.

"I've got a couple of acres back there where I have it all set up,' he said. "One day I'll lift weights, and then the next day I'll throw. I've been able to put some distance on my throws by doing some Olympic-type lifting. In the off-season I train at Wake Forest University."

And he loves what he's doing. "I guess I'm an old has been jock who can't give it up," said Cumming.

Gates will open at 9 a.m. for the 148th Highland Games, presented by the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit, Saturday, Aug. 2 at Greenmead, located at Newburgh and Eight Mile roads, in Livonia. Admission is $5 in advance or $8 at the gate. For Greg Rogers and Bob Hamp each went 4-for-5 in the victory, while Schuyler Doakes contributed three hits, two stolen bases and three runs. Tom Biljan added two hits, while Rick Miller and Brian Issitt each scored twice.

DCI's Bob Mason, who held the Rams to one run over five innings, took the loss. He gave up seven runs. Reliever Art Hoffmeyer was charged with three runs in the sixth and four in the seventh.

Andrew Maki led DCl with three hits, while Jason Carano, Pete Quinn and Delano Voletti added two apiece. Mike Brusseau added a 2-run single.

DCI, which is battling Hines Park for second place and a trip to Rome, Ga. for the National Amateur Baseball Federation 22-and-under tourney (Aug. 7), bounced back to win the nightcap, 10-6.

Each team collected 10 hits, but former Redford Thurston star and Madonna University outfielder Quinn had five RBI on a 2-run homer in the first Maki added a solo homer as the Rams' Tom Willerer, who pitched 3 innings, suffered the loss.

THE ART OF PROPER PLACEMENT

Just as many medical practitioners in the West have grown to appreciate the value of acupuncture, many designers are learning the benefits of "feng shui". Translated to mean the wind and the water, feng shullis the Chinese art of proper placement. Practitioners of the philosophy believe that simply by arranging our decor so that it is in keeping with the natural order, we can bring health and harmony to our lives. According to the principles of feng shui, the careful placement of everything from our front door to our favorite plant assures us a life of good fortune and prosperity. As an ancient Chinese proverb points out, when there is harmony in the house, there is harmony in the universe. A harmonious life begins at home.

The interior designers of SCOTT SHUPTRINE can review your personal tastes and objectives in order to advise you on furniture selection, space planning, and accessorization. With our vast inventory of furniture and use of professional drawings, our designers make the furniture shopping process enjoyable and rewarding. Visit us at 977 E. 14 Mile Rd., Troy, (248-616-3585) or 43606 W. Oaks Drive, Novi (248-349-0044) for the best in design and merchandise. Business hours are M, T, Th, & F 10-9, W & Sat 10-6, and by appointment.

What you can do during brownout

JOE GAGNON

I had just returned from a five day vacation in California and had sat down to read my collected newspapers when the headlines jumped out and caught my attention.

Detroit Edison does not have enough energy to pass out to every home and is therefore cutting back on the amount of voltage they're sending across the wires.

This is an old problem going back to the 1970s, which now resurfaces with some brand new admissions.

Back in the old days it was very hard for Edison to admit that any home was not being supplied with the correct amount of voltage. It was also a very common occurrence that a refrigerator compressor was burnt up because of a low voltage condition and be darned if anyone would accept responsibility.

The consumer usually had to foot the bill and it wasn't cheap to have a compressor replaced.

I have read the stories and the many numerous comments made about deregulation and new energy sources becoming available, and quite honestly I don't give a darn.

I am interested only in the fact that the proper voltage be supplied to my home and I don't care where it comes from

I admire Edison for being up front with their information and for admitting their shortcomings. I would rather see them shut off the power completely to any given neighborhood in order to maintain enough voltage to most homes.

Better still, I would ask that every homeowner where no one is home during the day, shut off the air conditioning until someone gets home at the end of the day.

As you well know, that figure could amount to several hundred thousand homes.

It only takes a short while before the comfort of air conditioning is realized by the homeowner.

Low voltage conditions to a home can cause some serious and costly prob-

When you see light bulbs which are suddenly not bright enough and television pictures which are changed from the norm, it is time for you to shut off these products.

Motors, compressors and electronics are designed to operate on 110 volts and even a simple drop of 10 volts can damage these products beyond reasonable repairs.

I would even bet you that the compressors of the 1970s could better take the brunt of a brownout compared to the compressors being made today.

If your compressor failed today, will you be able to prove that it was a low voltage condition that caused it, or was it just a plain part failure that occurred naturally? Will Detroit Edison participate in the cost of replacement?

Detroit Edison admits in front page headlines that they are having a problem. It is now up to you to respond in such a fashion as to prevent damage to your appliances.

Shut off these appliances until voltage conditions to your home have returned to normal.

And let every person who reads this column shut off their central air conditioning while they are at work, and, guess what?

Edison won't have a problem and neither will we.

Help put bite on dogwood dangers

MARTY FIGLEY

It won't be very long before trees begin to change color, then we will know that another season has come and gone, all too soon. One of the prettiest trees in the fandscapes is the flowering dogwood (Cornus florida).

You might say, "Why is she writing about this subject at this time of year?"

I recently received a letter from Dr. Gerard Adams of the Department of Botany and Plant Pathology at Michigan State University about his concern of possible dogwood anthracnose and severe powdery mildew problems that threaten these trees.

Dogwood anthracnose (Discula destructiva) is very destructive, as is powdery mildew, which entered Michigan last year in Berrien County and "is causing damage on dogwood in both woodlands and ornamental plantings," he writes.

Accordingly, nurserymen and landscapers, as well as people like you and me, are concerned.

Dr. Adams is conducting a survey to provide information to monitor where these diseases may be in our state and what damage has or hasn't been done.

A minimum of four locations will be surveyed per county, and surveys will be conducted in commercial nurseries growing or importing these trees and in urban settings where groups of at least 10 dogwoods occur together. Dr. Adams needs our help.

If you know of a location in any county of natural stands or plantings of flowering dogwoods in Michigan, please contact Dr. Adams with the following information: the nearest crossroads, property descriptions, highway mile or exit numbers, or even longitude and latitude of known quantities of the trees.

His address is 166 Plant Biology Building, Department of Botany and Plant Biology, Michigan State University, East Lansing 48824-1312. His telephone number is (517) 355-0202.

You can also call my number at the end of this column and I will pass the information on to him.

Dogwood delights

Dogwood trees grow on shady northand east-facing slopes or near the edge of wooded areas in their native habitats, so be on the lookout for stands of these trees.

These slow-growing trees are quite spectacular in the spring with their colorful blossoms. The blooms of C. florida are white.

Cultivars bloom in red-tinted shades and some are tragrant or double-flowered, some have variegated leaves, others are dwarf or weeping.

Family teaches kids to help others

LISA LUCKOW-HEALY

Catherine Boyle is a very lucky, brave girl. At the age of 10, she has already traveled by from airplane Belfast to New York to Detroit - without her family - to live with an American family for six weeks.

On the Fourth of July - a day we celebrate our nation's independence -Catherine left the violence of Northern Ireland to spend six weeks of her summer with an American host family. She was greeted with open arms by the Lynch family of West Bloomfield.

Tom, Kate, Shannon and Liam Lynch are Catherine's American family. They are all participants in Project Children, a program that provides Northern Ireland's children between the ages of 10 and 13 with the opportunity to take a six-week vacation from their homeland's violence.

Project Children began in 1975 when the first six children were brought to the United States by a small group of neighbors in Greenwood Lake, N.Y. Denis Mulcahy, a member of the NYPD bomb squad, and his brother, Pat, organized the group.

Over the past 22 years, thousands of children have made the trip. Project Children has expanded from its base in New York to some 16 states.

"The Irish children are selected to participate in Project Children by school teachers, priests, ministers and social workers," Kate Lynch said. "These people try to identify the children who will benefit most from a trip to the States."

Project Children volunteers feel it is important to get the children out of Northern Ireland during the summer months when school is out and they have a lot of idle time on their hands.

... Large marches are staged in July and August commemorating various events in the centuries-old Protestant/Catholic conflict.

This is a time when tensions in Northern Ireland are especially high and recruitment by the paramilitary group is at its peak.

Project Children encourages host parents to be sensitive to the children's defensiveness for their homeland, particularly in the face of the material wealth we may take for granted in the United States.

More than 19 years ago, Catherine's mother participated in the program, spending her summer in New York. The Boyles, who have three other children, ages 8, 6 and 3, believed it was Catherine's turn to experience something different.

Tom and Kate Lynch developed an immediate interest in the program after acquaintances of Tom's hosted two

"Tom and I have always been interested in hosting an exchange student, but didn't feel our children were old enough to associate with a high school student. Catherine is a perfect fit."

Both the Lynches and Catherine are learning a great deal about each other's culture.

"There aren't too many differences in our everyday cultures, although Catherine's never had Pop Tarts or waffles... until she came to visit us. And she's very excited to go camping and travel to New York with us for a family baptism.

"If it's possible, we hope to take her to Massachusetts to meet her great-aunt for the first time."

The Lynch family is exposing Catherine to a peaceful environment away from the guns and bombing. Both sides are benefiting from their learning experience.

Landscape lighting - less is better

Q: We would like to install landscape lighting around our property and wondered if you had any suggestions on how to design the layout.

A: Landscape lighting has become very popular, but I always tell my customers that less is better when it comes to outdoor lighting. Here are a few ideas to consider in designing a pleasing impression.

1. Silhouetting: The silhouette of a dramatically shaped tree or object can be created by reflecting light off a surface behind it. The light should be concealed, usually behind and below the object to be silhouetted. In silhouetting, an object is seen standing out from a lighted background.

2. Spotlighting – is an effective technique for getting an object of architectural interest noticed. A statue, a dramatically shaped tree or entranceway can all be focal points through the use of spotlighting. Smaller fixtures can also be use to call attention to individual plants or garden elements. Be selective in how often you use spotlighting.

3. Grazing – Light is placed to shine across a textured surface such as brick or stucco walls or a natural surface like tree bark. The light catches the high points of the surface while creating shadows in the low points.

4. Cross lighting – This lighting variation uses two or more light sources from above or below to illuminate an object from different directions. The result is a tree, large plant, or art object that is more three-dimensionally revealed than when lit from only one direction.

. 5. Downlighting/Moonlighting -

This soft, diffused technique simulates the effect of moonlight. Several fixtures are placed high in trees or on buildings to create a soft downlight and cast attractive patterns through branches and leaves.

6. Shadowing – Shining a light directly on an object can create interesting shadows on the vertical surface behind it. The light fixture is placed in front of and below the object. By changing the intensity of the light and the distance from the object, the size and shape of the shadows can be varied.

7. Uplighting – Although this light doesn't normally appear in nature, it can provide dramatic effect when used sparingly. The light source is surface mounted or recessed in the ground and angled up to display a tree, artwork or structure.

8. Background lighting – Background lighting provides a visual backdrop for the garden, or a small part of it. You can do this perspective lighting or you light a stone wall, other structures, or tall dense planting at the back of the garden.

Both background lighting and perspective lighting provide effective vistas for viewing from indoors.

9. Perspective – this gives a subtle sense of drama and dimension to the garden by emphasizing a line of sight (called an axis). A garden axis may be a natural view through a group of trees, the open corridor through plantings formed by a path for a long narrow patio. Frequently, perspective lighting is used to make a garden feel larger than it actually is by suggesting to the viewer's eye that the other end of the visual axis is at some distance.

Keep in mind the surfaces which are black or dark-colored, have a dull finish and are heavily textured will absorb the most light. Good luck!

Living in the past:

Past perfect: Rosemary LaBorde put antique elements and accents to elegant effect in designing and building her Plymouth house.

BY MARY KLEMIC At Home Editor

From out of the past, Rosemary LaBorde has made a modern classic.

Designing and building her Plymouth house, which she completed this year, she used antique elements and accents to elegant and inviting effect.

The antique pieces came from a variety of sources, including old mansions; contemporary workmanship from skilled crafters continued the style inside and out.

"I wanted it to be like 1910," said LaBorde, a licensed builder.

LaBorde wanted design elements to fit with the Tudor style she likes.

"I really put a lot of pieces together."

An air of graciousness fills the house, which is large (including 4-1/2 baths and four bedrooms). Every part of the residence catches your eye and suggests it can tell or inspire a story.

This begins at first sight of the house from outside. The chimney is shaped like giant chess pieces, which regally look out over the neighborhood. The chimney is from England and is approximately 120 years old.

Cedar shingles cover the roof. Copper features adorn the structure, among them the frieze board, fascia board and overhang. The limestone baluster is from the Fisher mansion.

Around the side are broad garage doors, which came from an old carriage house in Grosse Pointe Park.

Inside the front door, the foyer sings with sophistication, conjuring images of flowing gowns and black tails.

A chandelier hangs from the high ceiling. Recessed lighting softly glows from behind molding. The newel post at the bottom of the curved staircase is topped with glass that contains a gentle light.

"It's great for a night light."

The staircase is made of rich cherry wood, as are the wood floors throughout the house. The floor in the foyer is Italian marble.

Bed and Bath magazine gave an award to the roomy kitchen. The kitchen has a special warmth. From here, you have a view of the sloping, sweeping grounds that surround the house. Along one wall are clear "storage bin" areas above the counter level.

Stylish ingredients: The roomy kitchen has a special warmth, with large windows, "storage bins" above the counters and a cozy table set.

An antique table with a marble top, marble countertops and a cozy table set are among other features. The decor includes a grape motif, and narrow yellow stripes on the wall.

The exquisite dining room is like a luscious dessert. Its walls are adorned with a yellow stripe pattern broader than that in the kitchen.

White French doors lead to another room. By coincidence, the room depicted in an old painting on one wall features doors resembling these; this is like a voice from the past telling her she was on the right track, LaBorde says with a smile.

A fireplace is nestled in a stone wall in the refined great room, which also contains a soaring ceiling and large leaded glass window. A bird's-eye view of the room is offered from a circular balcony on the second floor.

The upstairs is full of treasures, including bathtubs with slipper feet, and doors of different sizes that offer an Alice in Wonderland-type excitement.

As an example of how LaBorde makes extra space in the house, an upstairs room features drawers that extend into the wall.

Brick work and stone work were by David Gibons and Don Goodfellow respectively. Ralph Toreson was the roughing-in carpenter who did the actual skeleton. LaBorde's father, Charles LaBorde, and uncle, Jess Elkins, and Phil Brooks did much of the fine work.

Spaciousness: Looks from the past met contemporary work-manship throughout the house, upstairs as well as downstairs.

Michigan are generally more cold-tolerant than some of the cultivars, which are often grafted with plants that originated in warmer climates.

Leaves can grow up to six inches long, and the bright red fall color makes it an important tree for the fall landscape. The fruit is a glossy, bright red, grows in clusters and provides food for migrating and over wintering birds.

It's best to plant a flowering dogwood in the spring and set it a little high in the planting hole in soil with good drainage. Incorporate organic material that is high in phosphorus and potassium when you plant the tree, to encourage new roots.

It won't like to be out in the open such as the middle of the lawn, so try to provide a place where the roots can be shady with the canopy of the tree in the Dogwoods have both male and female organs on the same flower, so you only need to plant one to get the flowers and fruiting. It's always a good idea to have a soil analysis before planting a tree or shrub. If the soil is too acidic, add slowacting dolomite lime.

Healthy trees are less susceptible to insects and diseases so it's wise to practice good maintenance. Providing sufficient air circulation and soil moisture will go a long way to ensure your tree will be around for many years to give pleasure in the garden.

Don't outgrow spirit of childhood

MONTE NAGLER

When we are born, we all share something in common: the innocence, imagination—and free spirit of a child and the impulse to make our mark on the world.

We all carved initials on a tree or buried a "treasure" in a secret place and wondered if through the ages they would still be there.

We hoped that our actions as children would make life a little more pleasant, and as we grew and entered new worlds, we hoped to leave the message that "I was here."

Isn't it a shame that the price of growing up often includes having smothered out of us the spontaneity, imagination and clear vision of the child? People and social pressures begin to tell us what to think and how to feel. We begin to question our judgments and motivations.

Wouldn't it be truly refreshing if we could hang on to the child in all of us? Not only would our lives be enriched, but the creative part of us would be stimulated. After all, the most valuable part of ourselves is the region of the mind where creativity and imagination reside

This applies directly to your photography, which, of course, can be highly creative. Begin by looking through your viewfinder with feeling and imagination. Reach back to the innocence of childhood and draw from the well of creativity inside you.

Try to communicate with your subject as we did with things when we were children. Let your photographs speak for you and about you.

When your emotions are stirred by a certain image in your viewfinder, nourish these feelings, don't stifle them.

Don't be afraid to let people learn about you through your photography and don't fear their judgments and opinions. Learn to trust your creative impulses as we did when we were children.

Experiment and welcome change. The tree you photograph today will have changed by tomorrow.

Remember that as children we used to build personal relationships with things important in our lives. Build the same personal relationship with your subjects.

A photographer with the clear vision of a child is saying, "This is what I saw, this is what I felt, this is what I wish to share with you."

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then his mailbox number, 1873. His fax number is (248) 644-1314.

Barbecue or BAR-B-Q it's delicious

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

"Barbecue" is considered by some, an outdoor cooking technique – to others, a type of food – verb or noun, it's delicious!!

Grilling which is commonly synonymous with BAR-B-Q is food cooked over a smoky fire made of charcoal or wood. Barbecue on the other hand, is meat (often pork) usually basted or served with some type of tangy sauce.

Traditional barbecue in North Carolina is done specifically with pork and cooked slowly over hickory. The sauce is tangy and has a cider-vinegar and crushed red pepper base. While this type of sauce can be used on any type of meat - my dear friend Sandra Giachino's Burlington-Graham childhood memories include those delicious shredded barbecue pork sandwiches. To this day in her softened southern cadence, she still calls it "barbecue!"

Regional variations of barbecue play on flavors and spices - some tomato based, some hot and sweet, some just hot!!

Jamaican barbecue is called JERK (a cooking method employed by the Arawak Amerindians in Jamaica) a pungent medley of Jamaican pimento (allspice), scallions, onions, cinnamon, hot peppers (usually Scotch bonnets), thyme, salt and black pepper used as seasoning or marinade on pork, seafood, chicken and beef cooked over a fire pit.

Now, let's talk doing a Bar-B-Q - the past few years, we have seen the outdoor grilling of trendy multi-ingredient pizzas, whole vegetables and Kabobs of typical or atypical ingredients. This grilling season we are seeing a turn back to grilling the old favorites - meat (as in thick juicy steaks), chicken (whole chickens, not just skinless and boneless breasts) and fish (cleaned, but left whole).

The National Pork Producers Council

offers a free brochure, "Puttin' On The Grill," with grilling tips and recipes. To get a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped business-sized envelope to: Puttin' On The Grill, P.O. Box 10383, Des Moines, Iowa 50306.

The NPPC is also hosting a Top Pop (as in Dad) Recipe Contest - this contest is open to children and young adults, under 18 years old with Dads who can grill. To enter the contest, send the National Pork Producers Council your Dad's favorite grilled pork recipe and a one-page essay telling why your dad should be named Top Pop. All entries may be hand-written or typed - you must include your name, address, age, father's name, father's address and recipe name at the top of your entry. Entries will be judged for; taste, appeal, creativity and ease of preparation. Deadline for entries is Aug. 15, 1997 (must be postmarked by the 15th). The winners will selected by September 30, 1997 with the Top Grand Prize being a Weber Grill for Dad and $100 for the child, and tree runners up winning accessories for dads and $50.00 for the children. You can Mail, Fax or E-mail entries respectively: Top Pop Recipe Contest, c/o NPPC, P.O. Box 10383, Des Moines, IA 50306. Top Pop Recipe Contest 515-223-2646, pork@nppc.org

Keep in mind that this fish has little internal fat, so an oil based marinade and oiling the grill is necessary. Turn fish only once – frequent turning will break the flesh into pieces. Make sure your fire is not too het – wait approximately 40-45 minutes after your fire is lit to cook your fish. Red meat requires more heat – fish is delicate and requires less heat to cook through.

inside the fish and add the rosemary sprigs. Tie the fish gently with kitchen twine.

Make three shallow cuts in each side of the blue fish and brush with 1/4 of the rosemary-garlic mixture.

Grill the fish for approximately 20 minutes, brushing occasionally with the remaining rosemary-garlic mixture (don't use all of it). At this point, the skin of the fish should be nicely browned.

Gently turn the fish over, using large spatulas, and continue to baste for 10-15 minutes more.

Carefully remove the whole bluefish from the grill and place on a large platter. Cut away twine and garnish with lemon slices.

Serve the bluefish with warm crusty bread and a crisp Caesar salad. A medley of tropical fruit with lemon yogurt dressing topped with sprinkles of sweetened coconut would be a terrific end to a delicious meal!

Skeptic Tank no joke

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

The hard rock band Skeptic Tank vows to make rock 'n' roll fun again.

"Other bands try their hardest to act like they're (so miserable) and the worst thing they ever did to themselves in their life was to pick up a guitar," singer Rob Schaeffer

"We'll take endorsements and free stuff - anything. It's gonna be fun again to trash the backstage area, get free drinks, and have chicks hollering at us. We're not going to pretend like we hate it because we don't hate it. We love it."

Injecting fun into rock 'n' roll is a logical goal for Skeptic Tank which was founded by Schaeffer, the producer of Drew Lane and Mike Clark's morning show on WRIF. The Ferndale resident also writes and performs some of the "Looney Tunes" parody songs on the show.

Schaeffer explained that Skeptic Tank's first incarnation took place between 1992 and 1993.

"They were just a few losers who funny anymore." are all in prison now or selling used cars or something like that. This was: a band that never made it out of the basement or the garage," Schaefer

Earlier this year, Lane insisted that Schaefer get all the original members back together for a "Drew and Mike" party in November 1996 at The Palladium in Roseville. About. a week later, Schaefer met former Ted Nugent drummer Gunner Ross of Southfield at an Ozzy Osbourne

"Gunner asked me how serious I was about it. I didn't know how I was until he started calling me."

As Schaefer talked about Skeptic Tank on the air, "every musician in Detroit was calling me wanting to be a part of Skeptic Tank. I had guys from some of the best bands in Detroit calling me, and others who thought they were in the best band in Detroit."

"When Gunner and I met, although it's kind of a rock 'n' roll cliche, we just knew."

To round out the group, Ross recruited bassist Paul Anthony of Flint, and guitarist Scott Anderson of West Bloomfield.

The Skeptic Tank reunion was only supposed to be one show but things quickly changed.

"We were going to be as funny as possible but still try to sound halfway decent so we were respected as musicians. Once (Gunner) got in here and started playing, it wasn't

"I truly think we're doing something different, We're '80s influenced but it's funny. You can only play what you know. Your influences are going to be basically what you're used to listening to or playing. We're not ashamed to admit that we come from that '80s glam big hair Cinderella, Poison' (era); We're part of all that."

Schaeffer admitted that there's "nothing pretty or profound about what we're doing. Half the songs we write we write in about three min-

"As far as the lyrics go I write most of the lyrics," Schaeffer said. "Most of the songs are kind of dark, kind of mean, kind of angry. But I'm not a dark, mean angry person. We write a lot about the end of the world, the end of relationships, and The band is working on a CD that the end of life as we know. We write > Once, the band was described as a "Spinal Tap-come-Chili Peppers joke fest." Schaefer agreed somewhat with that comparison.

> "I think we're more Spinal Tap than the Chili Peppers. Paul and I tend to be very animated on stage."

"I think we take ourselves lightly. It's part of our charm. We look funny, but you walk away crying."

Local comedians 'Laugh, Make a Difference'

When he "gets older, starts losing his hair, many years from now..." comedian Elliott Branch would like to think there will be someone there to help him, and others. That's why this funny man from Royal Oak is hosting a July 28 benefit at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle for Caring Together, a network of volunteers serving the elderly in Detroit.

"These are volunteer caregivers who assist senior citizens," explained Branch. "A lot of people would be in nursing homes if it wasn't for this help."

Over the past four years Branch has hosted benefits for Caring Together at Porter Street Station in Detroit, but he needed a bigger venue, and Mark Ridley was glad to oblige. "Elliott's great to work with," said Ridley.

Romantic show tunes are real stars of Guild's summer revue

The Players Guild of Dearborn presents "Lovers, Liars & Loonies," a musical revue featuring familiar and not so familiar romantic Broadway show tunes: 8 v.m. The cast and crew of the Players Guild of Dearborn have been bitten by the love bug, and boy do they have it bad!

For those not feeling too romantic these hot and sweaty days of summer, a sure-fire remedy requires attending the Guild's summer musical review,

"Lover, Liars & Loonies."

After doing it all with last summer's "Let Freedom Ring-(And Dance)," the team of Valerie Mangrum and Brian Townsend have returned to the Guild. They have put together a compilation of love songs that chronicles the five phases of love: "First Impressions," "Significant Otherhood," "The Break Up," "Love and Marriage," and "And Love Goes On."

Valerie and Brian pool their assets, serving as directors, writers, choreographers, as well as performing a great many of the songs themselves.

Valerie and Brian have also managed to snag many of the same talented singers that consistently grace the Guild's stage. One major difference between this show and last year's is the song selection. While "Freedom" contained mostly familiar songs, many will only recognize a fraction of the 42 songs in "Lovers, Liars & Loonies."

Even for those who frequent musicals, you will be surprised at the many touching and humorous love songs that have never delighted your ears. The show also presents a variety of difference musical styles. You'll hear vaudeville to calypso style, from classic to contemporarysounding songs.

If you like a quintessential toetapping show tune, listen for: "You've Got Possibilities" and "I'll Never Be Jealous Again." Sung nicely by Karen Groves, I still can't get "I'm Not At All In Love" out of my head.

For humor, I don't believe I ever stopped laughing at the suggestive humor of "Everybody Ought to Have a Maid."

Lend your eyes and ears to Brian Townsend's Groucho impersonation in "Natasha," and Diana Reynolds as the master of sarcasm in "The Little Things You Do Together."

If you prefer something to sing along with, then there's "There Is Nothing Like a Dame" and "Just in Time."

And Keith Lamarre sings "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." Who knew it was a show tune?

By far, my favorite tear-jerking ballad was "Moon in My Window," sung beautifully by Anna Gleichauf, Diana Reynolds, and Saundrea Sanborn. Also listen for "Too Much In Love To Care," "With Every Breath I Take," and "What More Can I

The show's finale, "The Human Heart," adds contemporary flair. Annette Hissong of Westland flawlessly leads the company through this uplifting song, accompanied by Tim Meade playing an electric guitar, and demonstrated in sign language by Keith Lamarre.

The show also includes Michael Falzon of Westland, Tony Lawry of Garden City, Megan Meade-Higgins of Southfield, Joanne Duckman of Birmingham and Leonard Poma of Plymouth

This show requires no fancy sets or costumes. The set is merely a series of platforms with only a few hand props. The singers are all dressed in black and white, with a splash of red in act two. All that's required is an appreciation for the trials and tribulations of love, as well as a fondness for music.

So why not make a date for romance? Grab your best guy or gal, relish a candlelight dinner and then head to the Player's Guild for "Lovers, Liars & Loonies."

This is a date that could thaw even the most unromantic of hearts.

Or as the cast might say, it's simply a "s'wonderful" evening

Now that a year has passed since singer/songwriter Jamie Walters appeared as the guitarrocking abusive Ray Pruitt on "Beverly Hills 90210," Walters is hoping that that association remains in the farthest reaches of fans minds.

"I feel that that show was one thing out of a group of things that I've done. Unfortunately it's the thing that gave me the most exposure," Walters said via telephone from his Sherman Oaks, Calif., home,

He said that people still walk up to him once or twice a day and ask him to "stop beating up Donna," his "90210" girlfriend played by Tori Spelling.

"Some people are cool. Some aren't," he said with a laugh.

Walters is one of a variety of acts playing the "Q Summer Concert" sponsored by radio station WKQI 95.5, 1-8 p.m. Sunday, July 27, at the Phoenix Plaza

Amphitheatre in Pontiac. Kyle Vincent, 10,000 Maniacs with new singer Mary Ramsey, Blessid Union of Souls, Billy Mann, Night Ranger, The Civilians, the reggae band Immunity and rockabilly cats Twistin' Tarantulas are also show. Walters has spent most of his time since leaving "90210" on the road promoting his music career. He recently celebrated the release of his sophomore effort "Ride" (Atlantic). The album. which hit stores Tuesday, June scheduled to play the all-ages 24, is less slick and carries a

"After having done that first record, I learned so much about how I wanted to do things the next time. It went a lot smoother. It was a lot easier to sort of translate to my producer and the people I worked with how I wanted it to sound. I think this album is a better reflection of me," Walters explained.

For example, the songs on the album, like "Reckless" and "The Other Side" are more personal.

"(The songs) are coming more from me than from being in the studio and working with other people. Even vocally, the range that I wrote them in is really comfortable for me to sing,' Walters said.

"I don't mind singing about that kind of stuff. I write about things that are really personal. I put them in a way that people can definitely identify with and not make it so out there or too don't know what I'm talking about."

Ironically, however, one of Walters favorite songs on his record is his rendition of pop singer Matthew Sweet's "Winona."

"I've been a huge Matthew Sweet fan for years and years, The album 'Girlfriend' was my favorite Matthew Sweet album and 'Winona' was one of my favorite tracks off of that," he said, 'Is it cool if I cover the song?' He was all for it. Then when he heard the recorded version he thought it was great and that made me think, 'Yeah. I gotta put this on the record.'

"When I first started going out and doing acoustic shows, I would play 'Winona' acoustically and I would say, 'Here's a song written by my favorite artist.' Well, more for myself than anyone else, I wanted to record this and see how it turned out."

Right now Walters is so busy promoting "Ride" that he won't have time to think about his acting career until fall.

"I'm hoping that by the end of the summer I have a clearer idea of how I can organize my time. I would like to audition for some movies and see what's out there." His music, he said, will remain first and foremost on his mind.

"It's what gives me more personal pleasure than anything else."

Tickets for the Q Summer Concert are $9.55 and are available at all Ticketmaster outlets or at the box office the day of the show. The Phbenix Plaza Amphitheatre is located at 10 Water St., Pontiac. For more "I had met Matthew Sweet a information, call (248) 645-6666

Pass we continue our summer with first season highlights and never-beforeaired material. Tonight's show, airing at 9:30 on demonstrates the flip side of a couple of performance coins: we juxtapose two acting styles - dramatic versus comedic improvisation - and two bands at different career plateaus - major label platinum sellers versus exciting up-and-

There are certain things that, once you get them, you never have to think about again, like aluminum siding, dental fillings and world-class improvisational comedy theater. Since opening its doors in 1993, Second City's consistent hilarity and social satire have become constants in Detroit.

Four years or continuous, original comedy revues have us taking this venerable institution for granted, an odd but undeniable compliment: it's old reliable, always a great night out, always new and funny. So, for the first segment of the first show of the first season, we decided to explore the process of putting together a Second City revue. Confirming a hunch, we found out that improv involves a lot more than just making it up as you go along. Watching the process of some very talented comedians gave us a glimpse of how seriously they approach the craft of comedy.

George Bournias, Second City's

On Backstage marketing manager (and one of the first two guests we hosted in the Detroit Public Television studio, along with Second City Detroit's head honcho, Lynn Okkerse) gave me an update on the current show." Send in the Clones' is our 10th revue in Detroit. We've had some cast changes since you sent your cameras - some departures, and we've moved some people up, which is always interesting. For instance, Eric Black is on the mainstage now. He's lived in the area for about the last 10 years, but he's originally from London. England. So he adds a British slant to things, which is a good thing." Second City is already developing material for the 11th revue, which George tells me is due in October.

Shifting to the dramatic side of acting, our intrepid theater correspondent, Wayne State University's Blair Anderson, caught up to actor John Glover for an interview we're airing for the first time tonight. Glover was coming through Detroit to promote not one but two very successful (and very different) summer films in which he appears: "Love! Valor! Compassion!" and "Batman and Robin."

Stage actors rarely get a chance to recreate their characters on film. Fortunately, this wasn't true here. In the movie version of "Love! Valor! Compassion!" Glover gets another chance to portray twin brothers - James "the good" and John "the bad" - parts for which he won the 1995 Tony Award for best performance by an actor. His characters go from "bad" to scientist in "Batman and Robin.". you to do. Now get out there!

Also tonight, we're airing new performances form two local bands, one that's already "arrived," and another that looks to be on its way: Sponge and The Articles. Sponge's first album, "Rotting Pinata," went platinum. Their current release, "Waxed Ecstatic," is still in heavy radio rotation.

Currently, Sponge is wrapping up the coast-to-coast ROAR tour with Michigander Iggy Pop and others. They've been on "The Late Show with David Letterman." They've been on "Late Night with Conan O'Brien." And they've been on Backstage Pass! They were the first huge rock and roll set we did, with a towering wall of amplifiers that really moved some air. Vinnie and the boys were great to us and gave killer performances. That show was a great boost because it gave us confidence that our production could showcase any act with aplomb. Tonight we air a live version we capture in the Channel 56 studio of the biggest single off their first album. "Sixteen Candles."

We counterpoint the success of Sponge with an emerging local band, The Articles, whose CD is due out in August. A reviewer for Flipside said The Articles' music was "seriously beautiful ska ... makes me homesick for Miles Dayis and Dizzy Gillespie."

Check out their performance on Backstage Pass, tonight at 9:30 on Detroit Public Television, with a rebroadcast at 1:30 a.m. The great thing about discovering up-and-coming artists is that you frequently catch them performing at great local venues. MOVIES

Disney's cornball approach helps 'George' swing thing straight: "George of the Jungle" never a classic television series. It was an attempt by animator Jay Ward in the late 1960s to come up with a concept half as funny as his ear-MONAGHAN lier "Rocky and Bullwinkle." Even cartoon cultists are more likely to remember its dopey theme song t"Watch out for that tree!") than any of the ape man's antics over three long seasons. Which means that I entered Disney's live-action version of "George" with no expectations whatsoever, no nostalgia to tread on. Surprisingly, what originally ran as a one-joke Tarzan spoof has at least a dozen laughs in the movie version, and a new Let's get one Mickey Mouse cartoon to boot.

The plot sticks pretty close to the old Tarzan saga. When urban sophisticate Ursula (Leslie Mann) embarks on a jungle safari, she hears the legend of a strange "white ape." He lords over the beasts and strikes fear in the hearts of those who enter his jungle domain.

- Meeting him proves a bit different. The white ape is actually a hunky guy (Brendan Fraser) and though he does talk to the animals, he's more or less a lovable dunce. For one thing, he smacks into trees all the time when he swings from vine to Fraser, pumped up considerably since "Encino Man," has the right attitude for the movie, which does its best to create a live-action cartoon with exaggerated situations and sound effects. It even has the same pun-filled narration that were a staple of the Jay Ward cartoons.

The rest of the cast seems game as well. Richard "Shaft" Roundtree plays the sage safari leader, who doesn't lower himself to his men's snide comments about Ursula's fiancee (Thomas Haden Church), whose attempts. to control his environment usually place him face first in elephant dung.

Disney has created a whole jungle-full of creatures for George to play with. Unlike the 1995 summer hit "Congo," where millions were spent to make a talking ape appear genuine, there's never any doubt that we're looking at guys in flea-bitten monkey suits.

John Cleese provides the voice for Tarzan's buddy, simply named "Ape," and the fact that the lips barely move with the words makes his lines all the more funny.

Considerably more effort was: spent on Shep, the elephant that thinks he's a dog. In a marvel of computer animation, the pachydermic pooch chews contentedly on Dino-sized Milk Bones and runs in spastic circles when George shows him attention.

I still have a bad taste in my mouth from Disney's mawkish "Jungle 2 Jungle," so when George made the trek to the big city I grew a little worried. No

The big guy's climb up the Golden Gate Bridge is not only a clever spoof of "Tarzan's New York Adventure," but also of Streisand's "Funny Girl" when Ursula comes after him on the bow of a tugboat.

Overall, its approach to tryanything humor, no matter how corny or obtuse, should give "George of the Jungle" an edge with both kids and their parents. The movie, like its main character (and like most of the Ward cartoons), is much smarter than it looks.

'Designated Mourner' opens challenging DFT season

BY JOHN MONAGHAN SPECIAL WRITER

When "The Designated Mourner" opens the new season at the Detroit Film Theatre on Friday, Aug. 1, it will likely do what every good film should; provoke heated discussion about its merits.

The debate is hardly a new one Wallace Shawn, the actor/playwright/director still hest known as the quieter half of "My Dinner with Andre." Viewers were divided on whether the 1981 film was a cinematic inspiration or the dullest two hours they ever spent in a movie

"The Designated Mourner," based on Shawn's play, stars Mike Nichols and Miranda Richardson. Nichols, a comic * force since his teaming with Elaine May in the 1960s, makes his screen acting debut as more or less the title character, who finds his privileged world turned upside down.

"I hesitate to call it science fiction," says DFT curator Elliot Wilhelm, "but it's about a couple in an unnamed time and place in a country not exactly defined in which the country begins to go fascist. It's about some intellectual, very cultured, and very well-educated characters and how they respond to this in varying ways."

The rest of the season promises to be no less challenging. Among the highlights are: "4 Little Girls," Spike Lee's documentary examination of the racially motivated bombing of a Birmingham, Ala. church in which four school children were killed in 1963.

Control," the latest from director Peter Lorre as a child murderer, Errol Morris ("The Thin Blue while Lang appears as himself in Line"); and "In the Company of Men" a controversial new film about sexual politics that generated the greatest debate at last year's Sundance Festival.

New prints of vintage titles always highlight the DFT sched-

"Woman in the Dunes," a Japanese oddity from 1964, finds a man lured by a woman to the bottom of a sandpit only to find himself similarly trapped.

"M" is Fritz Lang's 1931 "Fast. Cheap, and Out of German masterpiece starring "Contempt" (1963), Jean-Luc Godard's study of a movie and marriage gone bad starring Brigitte Bardot.

Perhaps the biggest event for vintage movie fans is the return of The Alloy Orchestra, the Boston-based ensemble who perform live music to accompany silent classics.

On the schedule Friday. Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 12-14: "Metropolis," "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," the original "The Lost World," and "The Man with the Movie Camera."

Where an institution like the DFT might be threatened by competition from the Main Art -Theatre and Star Southfield, increased interest in alternative films has only enabled curator Wilhelm to book more unique and offbeat titles.

"There are so many movies of value that need to be shown," he :said. "I extended the current: schedule three weeks longer because there are so many good titles out there. The more people who can screen more films, the higher the standards will be raised."

Laid-back Bogey's succeeds former Key Largo

By Judith Doner Berne Special writer

It's been more than two years since we headlined "Key Largo gets serious about food." Now, the same ownership and management has revved down the menu, lowered the prices, and enlarged the bar. This spring they renamed the lakeside restaurant Bogey's Bar & Grille. So today's headline could read "Bogey's gets serious about fun.'

"We're not trying to make a gourmet statement here," said co-owner Bob Kazanowski about the revised menu, and atmosphere now devoted to food "designed for noshing. We're trying to have them (clientele) have fun." Kazanowski is frank that Key Largo's bill of fare was just too expensive to draw people in, unless it was a gorgeous summer day or weekend night.

"We were doing fabulous weekends, but it was too pricey for weekdays. And people would tell us 'See you next summer.' It really didn't fit the market."

The market, he describes is " 'lake people' - from the Orchard Lake people down to the other end of Walled Lake." But although the restaurant is known for its lake vistas, a deck usable only a few months of the year can't be the main attraction.

"Basically we took Key Largo and made it a family, friendly, sports-oriented, popularly-priced dining experience," said Kazanowski. So what are the "hot" items on a menu that is both colorful and fun to read?

General manager Tony Amann calls them off: burgers – from the $4.95 half-pound "Bogey Boyz" to the $6.95 "Big Ed;" seasoned fries ($2.35 in a red basket); pizza (starting at $7.95 for eight slices) and the whitefish Reuben ($5.95). Paper napkins and food served in plastic baskets are

Most of the diners interviewed said they were happy with the change. Carol Pain of Milford and Pam Clancy of Walled Lake, enjoying a late lunch on the deck overlooking a glistening Walled Lake, loved their chicken croissant sandwiches - honey almond chicken salad with lettuce, tomato and dill spear ($4.95).

A menu tip suggests: "Ladies use the overlapping grip to properly hold this great sandwich." Clancy says she comes quite often after playing golf. And, even on a Friday night when it is very busy, she finds the food and service good. Burgers and fries were the choices of a Bloomfield Hills woman and her Commerce Township client who were having a business lunch, also on the deck. Although closed about using their names, they were open in their praise for the "wonderful" food, including the Key Lime Pie – for which they made sure to leave room. The pie, obvi-

Largo, as is the influence of Humphrey Bogart.

The name "Bogey's," says Kazanowski, refers both to Bogart and to the golf theme that now pervades. In fact, "Bogey's" was born during a brainstorming session following a round of golf at nearby Links of Pinewood.

Kazanowski, his brother Roger and Amann asked those sitting around the grill to tell them flat out what was wrong with Key Largo. "It was a throw your soul on the floor and let them jump on it session," Kazanowski describes. "It all came down to one thing - price."

So out went the bright hibiscus-spattered vinyl tablecloths, year-round Christmas lights, and fish which Kazanowski said did not prove an appropriate atmosphere for Michigan's range of weather.

In their place, we see a deliberately conservative color scheme of burgundy and dark green and the addition of slatted blinds that can be drawn when it's appropriate "to take this place and snuggle it up."

A new chef, Bob Hoppenrath, has taken over for Pat Dunn who left to join his brother's film catering business in L.A. One fish remains - a large, colorful shark dangling from the ceiling, representing golfer Greg Norman. And the rest rooms have been reconfigured, with stall doors painted as if they were club lockers and a golf course panorama depicted in the space between the tile walls and ceiling. They also downsized by about 40 seats to accommodate: the bigger bar, more than 20 wall-mounted televisions (more and bigger were brought in for the Red Wings march to the Stanley Cup), a billiard table, darts, video games and a machine dispensing knock-off Beanie Babies – for a price.

Although the average diner

Cat owner may have to pay for carpeting

Q. I recently bought a condominium. The previous owner had two cats. As it turns out, the cats repeatedly went to the bathroom on the carpeting to the point of rotting the carpeting.

I have had the carpeting cleaned twice, the padding replaced and the floor beneath the carpet cleaned and sterilized twice and still cannot get rid of the odor.

Is there any way I can get reimbursement from the previous owner for replacement of the carpet?

A. You should refer to your disclosure statement to determine whether in fact there was any disclosure concerning the condition of the carpeting. Obviously, to the extent that you could have observed or otherwise determined the condition of the carpeting prior to the time of your purchase, you would probably be precluded from pursuing the owner if your purchase agreement provided that you were buying "as is" which is usually the case.

However, if the defect was latent and was not disclosed, you hay have a claim. Obviously, if you have to replace your carpeting, that could be significant.

It may be advisable to consult with an attorney and have the attorney write a letter to your seller indicating your situation and requesting reimbursement.

Realtors relate bizarre tales

BY DOUG FUNKE

ime again for another installment of the unusual, humorous and bizarre in the world of real estate Remember, it's always funnier when it happens to someone else. Everyone gets caught sooner or later. And, as the song goes, it only hurts for a little Marilyn Chicorel Megdell, an associate broker with Century 21 Today in Bingham Farms, once fell for a client in unfamiliar house.

"In the sump pump," she recalled. "It was about three years ago. There was no light, no power. It was a vacant house. It was dark and I didn't see where I was going.

"You try to be professional, walk around with high heels, but there I was," Megdell said. "I lost my shoe, the heel was off. I was limping around. Nothing was bruised except my ego. Fortunately, I had sold the man several properties so he knew I wasn't a Chris Knight, a Realtor with Coldwell Banker Schweitzer Bake in Plymouth, describes a "scary-funny" experience during a showing early one Saturday evening.

"We rang the doorbell forever, knocked on the door. We're saying helloooo. We go in the lock box.

"We find kids sleeping in each bedroom. We quietly walk around.

"We get to the family room and older parents or grandparents are sleeping on reclining chairs. We're talking right to them. We're there next to them eight to 10 minutes and they never wake up," Knight said.

"We didn't know what was going on. We thought they were dead. We called the Livonia police and told them something might be wrong."

m 'I 'It's one thing to see a cat unexpectedly, another to have it come out with a banshee cry."

- Michael Judge A Realtor with Real Estate One in

The entourage left before police arrived, but Knight later found out that everyone was fine. Just a little sleepy, apparently.

Then there was the time Knight sold the house of a couple going through a divorce to another young couple, who, themselves, divorced four or five years later. The "new" buyers - the original couple that had broken up. They subsequently remarried.

"That was just a shocker," Knight

Michael Judge, a Realtor with Real Estate One in Livonia, remembers the guard cat he and a couple of prospective buyers came upon during a show-

"All of us thought the house was empty. The cat kind of blended in with the furniture. It must have been an older cat sleeping. Suddenly the cat was there. When it showed itself, it scared the bejabbers out of all of us.

"It's one thing to see a cat unexpectedly, another to have it come out with a banshee cry," Judge said. "It isn't an earthly sound. The lady let out a scream. I think somebody wet their pants."

The bottom line - no offer.

"I think it left kind of a negative impression," Judge said.

Phyllis R. Soper, a Realtor with ERA Country Ridge in Farmington Hills, once had a client who demonstrated an unusual way of detecting tobacco smoke.

"We came in the front door and stopped in the fover," Soper said. "The lady rushed into the living room and ran her hands up and down the wall. She started yelling, 'Someone has been smoking in this house.' She stood there a good five minutes rubbing her hand up and down the wall.

"I was so startled," Soper continued. "I said, 'Why don't you paint over it?' She said, 'No way,' and just rushed out.

"I'm a non-smoker. I never smelled smoke. I never found out how she found it on the wall," Soper said.

In the end, no sale of any kind to that particular client.

Norma Keller, a Realtor with Ralph Manuel Associates in Birmingham, had a bizarre experience of the occult kind.

"I was in a home. It looked kind of like a medieval castle. I was there with three people. They were buyers. I was showing the house. It was in the MLS, in their price range.

"I had shown the first floor. I lost two people. They went outside. The other fellow followed me.

"I noticed paintings with upside down crosses on them. In the lower level, the whole area was set up with black and red tablecloths with candles on the tables."

of the unusual decor. "When we got upstairs, there was a satanic ritual book in the bathroom," she said.

"It was open and highlighted in yellow. The person I was with had taken classes and told me it was devil worshiping. He said, 'It's time for us to leave.'

"When we got outside, he said he would recommend to me never to be in the home alone again," Keller said. "I've never been back. I called the listing agent and she said she didn't believe that was going on. I never did find out what happened to the home."

Financing for home remodeling

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

When considering the choice between moving up to a larger home or remodeling your home, the first and probably most decisive issue is financing. Since you have more options today than ever, it can be an imposing process and a daunting chalfactory decision. MULLY Before settling on a plan of action, take a moment to assess your current situation. Begin by looking at your neighborhood. Observe whether other homeowners are making improvements. If so, they probably are planning to stay in their homes for at least a few more years. What this may mean to you is that a stable neighborhood is an excellent environment in which to raise a family. "If remodeling is the direction you are leaning, determine if making improvements will satisfy your immediate requirements," says Glen Miller. president of Southfield-based Mortgage Institute of Michigan. Will the improvements even meet your longrange needs?

Consider these other questions when factoring your decision to remodel:

 Do you like the neighborhood and your neighbors? ...

 How much equity do you have in your home?

What is the interest rate for your

 What is your home improvement budget?

Naturally, some will have the preference to move up, and if conditions permit, use the equity in their current house to find a larger home. This would be the case when residents have outgrown their "starter home."

Consider these other questions when factoring your decision to move up:

 How much can you afford for a down payment and mortgage payments?

• Is your family growing, stable, or will you soon become "empty nesters"? • Will you be able to afford the taxes and how good is the school system?

"There are advantages to both situations, but perhaps your decision will be more greatly influenced by your borrowing needs," Miller says. "In some instances, a home equity loan requires zero down, some provide you with the ability to borrow up to 100 percent of your equity and often the interest may be tax-deductible."

Miller adds, "A home equity loan allows you to make all your improvements at the same time." If you should decide to move, chances are you will probably want to upgrade various elements in the new house (fixtures, furniture, tile, carpeting, etc.). These will likely have to be spread over time, maybe over the course of a few years.

Whether you choose to remodel or move up, you should comparison shop to locate the best possible financial arrangements. More than ever, lending institutions offer a wide variety of flexible plans to meet the needs of specific

So why should there be any question about remodeling instead of moving

Tips for cleaning up after storm

People facing the enormous task of cleaning up after the recent storm may call the state if they have questions concerning contractors, insurance agents or other state licensed professions and facilities, .

- · Home repair services, builders, or contractors: 1.888-290-4569.
- Structural safety of day care, foster care or adult foater care facilities: 1-517-373-
- A nursing home: 1-517-335-8558.
- Insurance: 1-517-335-2068. Power problems: 1-800-292-9555

Recent studies indicate that more people are injured during the cleanup after a storm than from the actual storms. SIHL Incorporated, the manufacturer of the world's largest-selling brand of chain saws and other outdoor power equipment, offers these tips on the use of chain saws in your cleanup efforts.

■ Before you begin to clean up, analyze your surroundings. If there are downed power lines, you must call in professional utility workers. Do not go near such lines until you have verified that power is cut off.

Do not operate a chain saw when you are overtired. Take frequent breaks. Fatigue may result in loss of control of the saw.

Always use protective apparel such as sturdy footwear, snug-fitting clothing, protective gloves, and eye, ear, and head protection. Make sure the area in which you' are cutting is free of bystanders and

■ Do not start cutting until you have a clear work area, secure footing, and a planned retreat path.

■ Use extreme caution when cutting small-size brush and saplings because slender material may catch the saw chain and be whipped toward you or pull you off balance.

■ When cutting a limb that is under tension, be alert for spring back so that you will not be struck when the tension in the wood fibers is released. Cut in small increments in several places to release such tension slowly.

■ When sawing, be sure that the saw chain does not touch any foreign materials such as rocks, fences, or nails. Such objects can be flung off, damage the saw chain, or cause the saw to kick

Never "drop start" a chain saw. Try to untangle and drag logs into a clear area before cutting. Always thoroughly read and understand your owners manual prior to operating your saw.

Sunrooms are good mood rooms by design

Sunroom owners often think of their cheerful, light-filled rooms as their Good Mood Rooms. That's because just as you feel uplifted when you step outside. on a bright, sunny day, you get the same feeling when you walk into a glass enclosure or solari-

"Sunrooms create an entirely different environment from the rest of the house," says Rick Jones, President of Patio Enclosures, Inc., the nation's largest sunroom manufacturer. "They are actually designed to help put you in a good mood."

It's a combination of the glass, the natural light and view of nature that gives you a feeling of renewal explains Jones. "Homeowners find that they spend much more time in their sunrooms than they ever imagined because they like the way they feel when they are in a glass room full of light."

Scientists have studied this phenomenon and found a scientific explanation for the ability of a sunroom to alter our moods, even improve our health and increase our energy levels. Our bodies physically respond to the sunroom environment. Sunlight has proven to increase our energy level as much as 24%, according to Current Health magazine, It also activates the inactive Vitamin D in our systems. Vitamin D helps keep teeth and bones healthy and is often referred to as the "sunshine vitamin," for its many therapeutic

Furthermore, experts agree that a change in environment and connecting with nature often helps us to reduce our stress level. That's why a vacation, or a simple walk through the woods can be so refreshing. It's no wonder the number one reason for adding a sunroom is for relaxation, reported by 56% of respondents in a national survey of glass enclosure and solarium owners by Patio Enclosures, Inc.

"With the long stretches of inclement weather around the country in the past year, sunrooms have become in even more demand," adds Jones. "People long to get outdoors but unusual amounts of rain and snow have kept them inside." An insulated or non-insulated glass enclosure or solarium can help bridge the . most any style of architecture.

These benefits, natural sunlight, a view of nature and a new environment are combined in a sunroom, thus creating rooms that help enhance your feeling of well-being in any weather.

Whether you opt to enclose an existing porch or deck with glass, or expand your family room by adding a glass enclosure, a sunroom is easy to incorporate into a home's layout and fit with

How you can get the most out of your air conditioner

(NAPS)-How can you get the Cooling Systems dealers most reliable operation and comfort from your central air-conditioner? Don't worry, help is a phone call away.

Just ask your local cooling dealer. Here are a few questions many people have asked,

Q: How often should my home air conditioner be inspected?

A: Your home air conditioner cooling dealer.

A cooling dealer can make sure your system works reliably and efficiently. You should ask your dealer about a seasonal service

Q: Is there anything I should do before I call a dealer for service?

A: First, check the "disconnect" switches on both the indoor and outdoor units of your system. Make sure the circuit breakers are "ON" or that the fuses have not blown.

Make sure the furnace air filters are clean and that supplyair and return-air grilles inside your home aren't blocked by furniture or drapes.

Check the settings on your thermostat. For cooling, make sure the temperature is set below room temperature and the 'System" switch is on the "COOL" or "AUTO" position.

Q: What simple steps can I take to keep my air conditioner in good shape during the cooling season?

A: Clean or replace the furnace's air filters once a month. A dirty filter will make your air conditioner work harder and affect its performance. When changing a filter, be sure to replace it with one that is the same size as the original.

If your system has a reusable filter that can be cleaned with water, make sure it's completely dry before you reinstall it.

Check before you hire

Before hiring a contractor, after the summer storms, the Better Business Bureau advises consumers to:

■ Obtain at least four estimates in writing for materials and labor and a time line for the start and completion of work.

Verify the contractor's license. Call the Michigan Department of Consumer and Industry Services for any home improvement contractor at (900) 555-8374 ($1.50 per minute). Contact the Michigan Bureau of Construction Codes at (517) 322-1739 for electricians, (517) 322-1804 for plumbers and (517) 241-9325 for heating and cooling companies.

Have all promises committed to writing and have the representative sign and date the document.

■ Don't sign any contract with any portion left blank.

■ Be sure that the contractor pulls any necessary permits for repair work.

Often, the emotional investment you've placed into your home is just as extensive as the money needed for physical improvements. For a growing family, an added bedroom. bathroom or addition may be all it takes to satisfy new space requirements.

Other reasons to consider remodeling rather than moving up to a new house are the prices of new construction, which are rising 10 percent annually, and the current seller's market of existing homes. With mortgage lenders providing flexible programs from which to select, remodeling offers the best options.

These questions are intended to make you consider all perspectives when deciding your plan of action. It is a big step, so move cautiously, but confidently. Let your preference be your guide.

WHAT DOES A REALTOR® OFFER?

Consider the following facts when deciding on the feasibility of using a Realtor* in the sale of your home.

OBJECTIVITY - You the homeowner, are emotionally involved in your home. The financial outcome of an upcoming sale is crucial to your security and peace of mind. The decor, furnishings, and care given to your home are all an intimate extension of your own personality. The Realtors can view your home with the experienced eye of a marketing professional. Without your emotional feelings about the home, he or she can weigh its pluses and minuses more objectively. A Realtor® can also serve as a valuable negotiator who can communicate effectively with both buyer and seller.

PRICING - The proper pricing of your home is essential to maximizing your proceeds from the sale. It should be as high as the market will allow, yet not out of touch with reality. It should be reasonable enough to encourage buyers to see your home, yet high enough to leave some room for negotiation. Realtors know how to price your home because they know the marketplace in terms of today's values.

EXPERIENCE - The art of showing, negotiation, and selling a home is learned over a period of time. Selling a home, as in every other aspect of life, is best accomplished by those who do it often.

MARKET EXPOSURE - Most Realtors belong to multiple listing organizations. These groups use computer systems to keep member companies informed of all homes coming into and leaving the market every day. Much like the stock exchange ticker, this computer provides up-to-date information on current listings and also past sales. When your home is listed with one of these companies, the information is broadcast over telephone lines to all cooperating firms. Newspaper advertising and national referral groups also provide the Realtor® with additional promotional tools.

FINANCIAL KNOWLEDGE - Most buyers need financing help to buy your home. Many forms of financing are available today. The great variety of mortgages can be confusing to an inexperienced buyer. The Realtor can give needed advice to both the seller and the buyer regarding the most appropriate financing method to use in each situation.
