The four-day outdoor family movie festival concludes tonight in the Nankin Mills picnic area of Hines Park in Westland, with the big-screen Disney movie "First Kid."

The event is sponsored by the Wayne County Parks department and the Disney Channel. In addition to the movie, which begins at 7 p.m., there will also be family games and prizes and costumed Disney characters will be on hand to entertain.

Festival-goers are encouraged to bring canned food donations to the event site, which will go to the American ned Cross and other local charities and help benefit storm victims.

Discussion began in earnest last week, as two of the candidates running for Westland mayor debated issues on the city's south side. The Sept. 9 mayoral primary will narrow the field to two.

By DARRELL CLEM

In a heated political forum Thursday, Westland mayoral challenger Kenneth Mehl accused incumbent Robert Thomas of using public tax dollars to fatten his own wallet with bonuses and pension benefits.

Thomas, meanwhile, touted new programs that his administration has launched to improve the quality of life in Westland — and he pledged to continue to deliver top-notch ser-

Longtime political enemies, Mehl and Thomas clashed on several issues — and agreed on some — as they sought votes during a political forum sponsored by the Southeast Homeowners Association, a highly active group in Westland's southeast Precinct 28.

Mayoral hopeful Dixie Johnson McNa missed the event due to a family emergency.

The three competitors will square off in a Sept. 9 primary that will narrow the field to two candidates for the November general election.

Campaign begins

Mehl, a 50-year-old General Motors Corp. engineer and former councilman of 12 years, launched an unsuccessful primary bid for mayor four years ago, but he has said he views the incumbent as more vulnerable in 1997.

Thomas, a 46-year-old incumbent seeking his third four-year term, hopes to repeat his landslide victory of 1993, when he defeat-Councilman Charles Pickering in the general election.

Nearly 30 people attended Thursday's forum, which fueled probing questions from a predominantly African-American community known for its political involvement. Mehl accused Thomas of being greedy for accepting longevity pay for himself that amounts to $2,800 this year, or $100 for each year he has worked for the city. Thomas is a

Families, activists call for 'lifer law' reform

By MATT JACHMAN STAFF WRITER

Saying Michigan's prison sentences for drug offenders are harsh and ineffective, advocates of sentencing reform took their case to state legislators at Livonia City Hall Thursday.

"This law does not work," said Linda Fannon of Westland, who led a successful campaign for the release of her son, Gary, who was serving life in prison for a drug conviction. "You're not going to catch the big guys doing what you're doing now."

"Whatever, mistakes Bob made ... we feel he has paid his dues," said Mary Ellen Peters of Livonia, whose brother was also convicted under the so-called "650 lifer law."

The occasion was a hearing by the Senate Judiciary Committee on a fourbill package of legislation supporters say would give prosecutors more power to reach high-level drug dealers.

One of its chief features is that people convicted of delivering or conspiring to deliver 650 or more grams of heroin or cocaine — who now face life in prison with no chance of parole — could become eligible for parole after 15 years if they cooperate with authorities.

But for a coalition of activists, the changes aren't enough.

"We believe the sentences should be closer to the federal ranges, which nobody argues are soft on crime," said

Athletic survey prompts discussion about needs

"What we have here is a failure to communicate." That classic line from the movie.

Cool Hand Luke could describe the split in perception that exists between the four groups recently queried by Livonia Public Schools in a school sports survey.

The purpose of the survey is to determine what changes should be made in the district's high school athletic programs.

Three of the groups say the district's athletic coaches don't do a good job of either communicating with them or the news media.

On the other hand, the district's coaches say they do a fine job of communicating. Not one coach responding didn't agree fully with the value of keeping open lines of communica-tion between those involved in the school's athletic programs.

The four groups surveyed included: athletes, parents of athletes, parents of non-athletes, and coaches.

Medical records training on tap at Radcliff

The Garden City campus offers certificate programs in Medical Assisting and Medical Transcription, along with associate degrees in Health Information Technology and Occupational Therapy Assistant.

"Allied Health fields are all growth areas," said Patricia Rubio, director of the Health Information Technology Program.

Formerly known as Medical Records Technology, the HIT program is designed to prepare students to work in health care facilities performing medical record functions.

"Any area that requires health data to get reimbursed (for medical services), we can tap into that area," said Rubio. "There are so many companies like insurance companies and medical billing companies. There are variety of other areas where the students can work."

The two certificate programs can be attractive to different students depending on their preferences.

"With medical assisting students, the majority of graduates want patient contact. They could do that or office management," said Rubio.

his career in the military.

"Our students could also be recent grads. They could be working, parents and students," Rubio said. "We recommend they come parttime rather than overloading with classes and being too stressed out."

Schoolcraft can also be an economical choice for students wanting to train for a new career. Rubio said a one year certificate program costs around $2,000 for tuition and fees compared to $6,000-8,000 for a ninemonth program at a proprietary school.

"Schoolcraft has a career planning and placement center," said Rubio. "We as program coordinators work closely with the outside to get jobs."

If authorized by the student, Rubio said she passes along job opening information from hospitals or other organizations to students who are seeking employment.

"We will also network if one of our students wants to make a move," she said.

Potential students can still register for the fall semester.

Schoolcraft offers a one-credit class called Introduction to Health Care which helps students decide if they are interested in the Allied Health field.

can't satisfy everyone. They make happy as many as they upset. In some sports such as basketball and volleyball, where there are tryouts and cuts, coaches are in a 'can't win' situation."

Better communication among all those involved in athletic programs is one of the goals that could be set as school administrators scrutinize the results of a high school athletic survey administered to the four groups this spring.

Come September, members of the district's athletic council will sit down, analyze the responses, and put together a list of recommendations to take to the Livonia Board of Education.

List of concerns

Several concerns emerged in the survey, taken before voters approved a one-year tax increase in June to renovate the swimming pools at Franklin and Stevenson high schools.

A prime concern, of course, was the condition of the two pools, a condition which will be rectified when both pools are fixed by the start of the 1998 school year.

Other concerns named by athletes and parents are:

The condition of the softball and baseball diamonds at the three high schools.

■ The need for additional gym space, especially during winter months when sports are played inside. But the gyms won high praise in the Burvey.

Expansion of the middle school athletic program. which could include more competition, more practice sessions, or additional instruction. But athletes and parents back the basic philosophy of the middle school program, which is less competitive and gives all students a chance to play.

Adding another sport to the high school program. The survey showed a high interest in girls gymnastics. Concerns cited by coaches

Keeping equipment repaired.

■ Increasing the number of coaching assistants.

Making athletic trainers more available for games, meets or practices.

Downplaying the requirement that coaches attend Michigan High School Athletic Association rules meetings.

Expanding the middle school athletic program. making it more competitive.

Livonia's middle school program has been criticized for not being competitive enough. Every student plays, not just the best players.

Price sticks to his belief that participation and involvement by all should be the primary thrust of ninthgrade teams, not participation just by those who are the most skilled in the sport.

"Should we cut these kids out because they might be slow in developing?" he asked.

Thomas said his administration is trying to work with unions to make King's birthday a municipal holiday. Mehl also supported such efforts,

"It probably should have been done some time ago," he said.

On crime, Thomas said he is moving to implement a community police program on a citywide basis. Moreover, he noted that serious crimes have declined in recent years in Westland. Mehl said he didn't have the statistics necessary to comment on the issue.

Thomas listed numerous new programs and services launched by himself and city council members during his tenure, including: Advanced Life Support; a new public library; community police; leaf pickup; Youth Assistance; and a task force on drugs and alcohol, among others.

Mehl said more money could be spent to help residents if Thomas wouldn't engage in wasteful government spending. If elected, he said, "I will change things for the better."

When Mehl addressed city spending, Precinct 28 resident Ralph S. Rowan spoke up to say that he believes taxpayer money should be spent on residents.

"I like to see money spent on the people - that's their money," he said.

"I'm not worried about the police because I don't do anything wrong," he said.

Seeking independence

His first jobs outside of prison were delivering pizzas and running errands for McQueeney. the attorney who won his release.

Fannon met his 26-year-old girlfriend, Tanya Burgess of Canton, after she saw him in television news reports and decided to write to him. Her sisfer had known Fannon in high school.

"I thought he was cute," Burgess said, smiling as she stood beside him on his apartment balcony.

The couple met last September, and they've been seeing each other since then. Burgess has a 2 1/2-year-old son, Justin, whom she said "already calls Gary daddy."

"They do everything together,"

Burgess said. "Justin really likes him."

Burgess has had problems of her own; she said she was a former crack cocaine addict.

"Gary has been a great help to me," she said, while Fannon briefly left the balcony. "I like him because he's straight, and he's honest. He's good to my little boy. And he's smart, He's a very strong person."

Supporting others

Fannon is trying to be strong for others who are still imprisoned because of a Michigan law that carries a mandatory life prison sentence for the sale of more than 650 grams of cocaine. He believes the law is too harsh, and he is lobbying to change it.

Nankin Lake will be restocked with fish

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

Wayne County's Department of Environment has offered to restock Nankin Lake with fish.

The county made the offer in a report to the state, according to Mark Oemke, project manager for the Department of Natural Resources of the Newburgh Lake restoration.

"What they have proposed is a way of remediation," Oemke said. A fish kill in June intended for Newburgh Lake accidentally eradicated fish downstream in Nankin Lake, but that incident was not interpreted as an overkill by Wayne County.

"We had always envisioned going down to Nankin Lake with the fish kill," said Jim Murray, director of the Wayne County Department of Environment. "We'll do a second kill at both Newburgh Lake and Nankin Lake next year, then we can eliminate the fish advisory in the Rouge River from Westland to Novi.

"State officials have always known our intentions for the kill and to restock the river."

A natural pesticide—rotenone— was applied at Newburgh Lake June 18 and 19 to kill several species of fish contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls. The PCBs lie in the sediment at Newburgh Lake and had bioaccumulated in fish there, creating a fish advisory

The lake is an impoundment of the Rouge River and borders Livonia and Plymouth.

The rotenone application was one phase of several to remediate and restore Newburgh Lake. This $10 million project will remove the PCB sediment, deepen the lake and restore it with vegetation along the shore and restock the waters with game fish in June 1998.

The application killed the fish in Newburgh Lake, but the rotenone was applied near the dam and flowed downstream before it could be neutralized with potassium permanganate.

That rotenone application created a fish kill that extended to Nankin Lake with dead fish found along the Rouge River as far east as Telegraph Road.

Fish totalling 22,240 pounds were killed in Newburgh, a majority of which (17,360 pounds) were carp. Only 4.5 percent were game fish, such as large-mouth bass, northern pike and sunfish.

Downstream in Nankin, a total of 5,200 fish were pulled, but less than 1 percent at Nankin were game fish. That application was not included in the permit pulled by the Wayne County Department of Environment, which only called for a fish kill at Newburgh Lake.

Oemke wanted to discuss the county's proposal and fish kill report with officials there before commenting on possible penalties, but said it was "possible" the county may not be fined with their offer to restock Nankin and Newburgh lakes.

No meeting was scheduled yet, Oemke said.

The fish kill at Newburgh Lake appeared to have done the intended job on the lake itself, Oemke said.

"That's not to say that the fish can't swim upstream," Oemke said, implying that PCB contaminated fish could have avoided the kill by swimming upstream from the lake up to Wilcox Dam.

For that reason, a second fish kill will be conducted next summer once the PCB-contaminated soil is removed. Contractors have started that process this summer.

donations had been counted from Wednesday's Christmas in July benefit for the Westland Community* Foundation, organizers said.

Donations already had reached the $40,000 to $50,000 mark estimated by foundation president Glenn Shaw, and money was still coming in.

The money will be used to provide scholarships for Westland students, to pay for Salvation Army summer camp programs: and to pay for a summer children's program at the Westland library, among other activities, Shaw said.

"We're trying to bring the community together in the spirit of giving," Shaw said Wednesday as the third annual Christmas in July event got under way at the Hellenic Cultural Center on Joy

The foundation currently has about $25,000, but Shaw said he would like to see the foundation reach the level where it provides $100,000 per year for programs.

Scholarships help students enter programs that often don't bring in other financial aid. For example, Shaw said, the foundation might help a student who is s of Friday, $41,160 in good at mechanics but not at they entered the Hellenic Culalgebra.

About 250 people attended Wednesday's event, enjoying a comedian, a magician, a Motown-type group and a reggae/blues band.

Santa Claus and a Salvation Army band greeted guests as tural Center. Participants also brought food donations to help the needy.

Shaw said he is excited not only about what the foundation has accomplished in three years, but also about what it can do in coming years.

If the foundation reaches the point where it can provide as much as $100,000 a year for programs, he said, "we could do a lot of great things for this community."

Oil leaks again into Newburgh Lake

More oil from General Motors Delphi Chassis plant has leaked into Newburgh Lake, and Wayne County environmental officials aren't pleased with the automak-

"General Motors was supposed to make sure their retention basin and storm sewer were cleaned up last Friday (July 18) so this wouldn't happen again," said Jim Murray, director of the Wayne County Department of Environment. "It didn't get cleaned up and more oil leaked into the lake during storms last Monday. This is pretty upset-

Murray said General Motors was to stop mixing its waste oil in the retention basin and cleanup the storm sewer. He said neither happened, so when it rained more oil seeped into the storm sewer and into the lake.

"We never promised that we would have the sewer system cleaned-up by last Friday," said Marcia McGee, General Motors spokeswoman. "We had been working on it continuously, however when the rains came it slowed down the clean-up. We immediately sent crews to the lake to catch the oil residue as it came down the storm sewer. We have now completed the cleanup of the storm sewer leading to Newburgh Lake."

the lining around the retention basin has allowed PCB-laden oil to leak into Newburgh Lake for 18 months. The oil leaks into the ground water, goes down the storm sewer and then into Newburgh Lake. Murray believes that revelation is the "smoking gun" needed to prove GM is a contributor to the demise of the lake, which has been drained to no dangerous contaminants.

GM's idea of the story is a bit extract dangerous PCBs from the soil.

"There shouldn't be any leaks," said Murray. "The oil in the retention basin was supposed to be eliminated."

"We did have a crack in the diversion dam, however there is no oil in it," responded McGee. "The claim we have been dumping oil into Newburgh Lake for the past year-and-a-half is simply false."

General Motors has been under fire for dumping more than 1,000 gallons of oil down County officials say a crack in the storm sewer into Newburgh Lake, July 9. State and county officials immediately began investigating the possibility the automaker was a source of contamination in Newburgh Lake.

The automaker admitted to the July 9 oil spill - calling it accidental - and said it would pay for the 10-day cleanup. However, GM says its tests showed

FOR THE LOVE OF FOOD

RICK HALBERG

Slow down, make time to enjoy food

eing a small business owner, I get lots of mail and solicitations from all sorts of orga-nizations, most of it ends up in the circular file. Just the other night as we were hosting our third annual Italian wine dinner at Emily's, my friend Chip Delsner from AHD Vintners showed me something very interesting. It was called "The Slow Food Manifesto," a statement of passion from Italy.

There in 1986 on the eve of the opening of a McDonald's at the Spanish Steps, a member of the Italian gastronomic society Arcigola was offended at the thought of McDonald's in Rome. So Arcigola formed the International Movement for the Defense of, and the Right to Pleasure.

Manifesto

Other countries learned of this, and were quick to follow. In 1989, at the Opera Comique in Paris, representatives from each country involved endorsed the Slow Food Manifesto, which reads:

Slow Food Manifesto International Movement for the Defense of and the Right to Pleasure

"Our century, which began, and has developed. under the sign of industrial civilization, first invented the machine, and then took it as its life

"We are enslaved by speed, and all have succumbed to the same corrupting virus: Fast Life, which disrupts our habits, pervades the privacy of our homes and forces us to eat Fast Foods. To be worthy of the name, Homo Sapiens should rid themselves of speed before it reduces them to a species in danger of extinction. A firm defense of quiet material pleasure is the only way to oppose the universal folly of Fast Life. May suitable doses of guaranteed sensual pleasure and slow enjoyment preserve us from the disease of the multitude who mistake frenzy for efficiency.

"Our defense should begin at the table with Slow Food. Let us rediscover the flavors and savors of regional cooking, and banish the degrading effects of Fast Food.

"In the name of productivity, Fast Life has changed our way of living and threatens our environment and landscape. Slow Food is now the only true and progressive answer. That is what real culture is about: developing taste rather than demeaning it. And what better way to set about this than an international exchange of experiences, knowledge and projects.

"Slow Food guarantees a better future. Slow Food is an idea that needs many qualified supporters who can help turn this (slow) motion into an international movement, with the little snail as its symbol,"

Slowing down

I share this passion, as I'm sure many others do, and am in the process of starting a local chapter of the Slow Food Movement. Here at home we are all guilty of forgetting the pleasure of time, what it means to "slow down."

I suggest we take a few moments each day, and try to bring back to our lives a sense of what this lake a gamble this summer, roll or toss flavorful grilled meats, grains, or beans with fresh picked vegetables and greens to make summer salad and sandwiches we bet your family will enjoy.

"It's the way we like to eat," said Andrea Chesman author of "Salad Suppers: Fresh Inspirations for Satisfying One-Dish Meals," (Chapters Publishing, 1997). "People are eating more vegetables. Salad suppers are easy, quick to make and ideal for when the weather is hot. I really love salad greens, and making a meal around that."

Rollup sandwiches - salads wrapped in tortillas, pita or lawash bread are very popular, and another option for people game to try something new.

Those trendy Californians were the first to wrap meat, grains and vegetables in flat bread, and the trend spread like wildfire. Like salads, the filling can be just about any type of meat such as grilled steak or deli turkey, and/or grain and vegetable combination.

"People think these rollup sandwiches are like health food, but they're not," cautions Juliane Steenkamer a registered dietitian biggest problem is their size, they're huge, some can be 16 ounces. They can also be high in fat and calories. One on the market is 560 calories."

"For the person who eats lunch out occasionally they're fine," she said. "But some people eat out every day!"

Lawash is a nutritious wrapper. "It's very low in fat, only 2.5 grams of fat per slice, and if you cut it in half, you're getting even less fat," said Steenkamer. It's easy to ruin a perfectly healthful salad or sandwich with cheese, meat, and dressing.

"Use low-fat cheese, low-fat or fat-free dressings and dips," suggests Steenkamer.

"Load up on extra vegetables for color and texture. Use lean meats such as turkey. A little crumbled feta or sharp cheese goes a long way. It adds a lot of flavor. Shredded cheese disperses the flavor throughout."

Thinly slice vegetables for rollups, try cucumbers, tomatoes, red onion, chopped green onion, alfalfa and bean sprouts. "Don't put dressing on your sandwich, use it like a dip, and that way you can control the amount," said Steenkamer. Toss the greens and vegetables lightly with dressing before topping with meat, "You can always add more dressing, but it's hard to take it away," said Muster. "Put the grilled meat on top of the greens and vegetables. It's visually appealing, and something people enjoy. The juices from the meat blend with the greens."

In the summer Chesman enjoys preparing salads with vegetables and greens harvested from her garden. "Once you start tasting really fresh lettuce, you'll taste a lot of flavor," she said.

Her "Salad Suppers" range from "Simply Vegetables" to "Hearty greens, and making dressings.

"I watch what I eat," she said. "You don't want the dressing to overwhelm everything. I use a light hand. I prefer to start with a high-quality, high-flavor oil, such as extra virgin olive oil, and extend it with chicken broth or white wine, adding moisture but not fat. Creamy dressing can be made with nonfat buttermilk or yogurt."

Be sure to serve crusty bread with your main dish salad to sop up those flavorful juices. For those who hate to do dishes, Saint Louis Bread Executive Chef Michael O'Donovan has a tasty solution - "slice the top off of a freshly baked sourdough round and hollow out the center. Prepare or purchase a medley of summertime salads and serve in the bread bowl. Guests will have fun scooping out their favorite salads and piling them high on slices of freshly-baked sourdough and French breads or croissants.'

Jams, spreads preserve raspberries

BY KEELY WYGONIK STAFF WRITER

. Our raspberry bushes are flourishing, and every morning I pick some for my cereal. Our bushes aren't producing enough to make jam, so I'm planning to go to a u-pick farm this weekend. Raspberries are delicate, and expensive, except in July when they're in season.

Making jam seems like a lot of trouble, but it's not nearly as difficult as you might think. Freezer jams are easy. Low- and no-sugar fruit spreads are other flavorful options.

"Jam is one of the simpler things you can make," said Sylvia Treitman of West Bloomfield, a home economist for the Michigan State University Extension, Oakland County. "The flavor is superior to store bought jam, and there's the satisfaction of making something yourself." Pick up a Ball Blue Book for the latest up to date canning information.

It's important to follow directions to achieve good results. "Don't cut down on sugar. Don't double the recipe, measure accurately, and cook for the prescribed amount of time," said

With the exception of freezer jam, all jams, jellies and spreads need to be processed in a boiling water bath.

"The old time methods of using paraffin and the inversion method are no longer recommended," said Treitman. "The problem with using paraffin is that mold can easily grow and the inversion method does nothing to destroy bacteria. The jars may seal - but the jam may still become moldy. If jams are processed in a boiling water bath then the molds are destroyed. Jams, jellies and spreads can be made ahead for Christmas gifts. They can remain safe on the shelf for about 1 to 2 years with relatively good quality. They start to lose flavor after a year."

Here are some tips for making jam, jelly and spreads safe and mold free:

- Buy fresh lids each year.
- Use canning jars, not mayonnaise or commercial food jars.
- Sterilize all jars 10 minutes in boiling water after washing well.
- Use U.S.D.A recommended processing times and methods.
- Start timing processing once water returns
- to a boil. Store jars with bands removed in a cool area.

Wipe jars clean before storing.

Banish picnic boredom with nutritious couscous

If you're looking for a quick, nutritious summer side dish beyond the usual rice, potatoes and pasta, consider the many advantages of couscous. Couscous is an excellent choice for adding low-fat complex carbohydrates to your diet. Made from refined wheat or semolina, this versatile grain offers the convenience of pasta with the light and fluffy texture of

Because it's made with minimal effort in just minutes. couscous is ideal for hot summer months. Just bring the cooking liquid and seasonings to a boil, stir in the couscous and remove from heat. Let stand, covered, for five minutes and fluff when ready to serve.

Regular couscous is not a good-source of fiber, so be sure to look for a whole grain variety or pair it with a variety of fiber-rich fruits and vegetables.

As an alternative to oatmeal or grits, try couscous as a breakfast cereal. Heat 1-1/4 cups apple juice, 1/4 cup chopped, dried apricots, 1/4 cup chopped prunes and 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon to a boil over medium-high heat. Remove from the heat and stir in 3/4 cup couscous and 2 tablespoons chopped walnuts. Cover and let stand for 5 minutes. Fluff the couscous and serve topped with 1/4 cup non-fat Change the boiling liquid and spices and you can create endless varieties of couscous dishes. "South-of-the-Border" green chili couscous uses chicken broth as the boiling liquid and is seasoned with sliced green onion, diced green chili peppers and ground turmeric. For a side dish on the sweeter side that brings out the best in baked chicken or turkey, use apple juice as the boiling liquid for couscous and stir in sliced green onion, dried cherries or raisins, and ground cinnamon.

Couscous can even make a refreshing, chilled dessert. Start by stirring 1/4 cup lemonade concentrate into cooked couscous and refrigerate one hour. Meanwhile, combine 2 cups plain non-fat yogurt, 1/2 cup sugar and 1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla.

Mix half of the yogurt mixture into the couscous, along with 1/2 cup each fresh blueberries, raspberries, strawberry halves and chopped peaches (or any combination of fresh fruit totaling 2-1/2 cups). Distribute the remaining vogurt mixture among the individual servings and garnish with mint

Peachy crisp with berries a delicious summer dessert

AP - The Marion blackberry, or Marionberry as it is known by consumers and marketers, is a distinctly American berry. A cross between the Chehalem and Olallie blackberries, the Marionberry captures the best attributes of both berries and yields an aromatic bouquet and an intense blackberry flavor for which it has become known. The Marionberry, grown almost exclusively in western Oregon, is available fresh from mid-July to mid-August and is sold frozen the rest of the year. Traditionally used in pies, jams and jellies, Marionberries also add value to baked goods, frozen desserts and beverages.

While Marionberries are preferred for the following recipes for Berry-Reach Crisp and Berry Ice Cream, other blackberries can be substituted with satisfactory results.

Studying Einstein: Einstein, a blue front Amazon parrot, helps Holly Calderwood teach these students in a summer science class about the physics of flight during the Kids on Campus program at Schoolcraft College.

Einstein has been seen teaching rocket science on the Schoolcraft College Livonia campus. Not Albert Einstein the physicist. Einstein the parrot.

"We look at his wing structure, what allows him to fly, his aero-dynamic shape and the lift created by his wings," said Calderwood, who is also a teacher at St. Michael's Catholic School in Livonia.

Calderwood says studying birds is really nothing new when it comes to flying.

Scientists studied birds to figure out how to fly," continued Calderwood. "In the beginning, they used to strap feathers on their man-made wings to try and fly like a bird."

Einstein can fly a short span to show off his teaching skills.

"His wings are clipped, so he can't fly up, but he can glide

"He will out-live me, so I'll have to put him in my will," chuckles Calderwood. "My kids are fighting over him already."

Calderwood says she got Einstein with the idea that she would use him in the classroom—along with her other pets.

"At school we have a rabbit, chameleons, lizards, snakes, fish, snails, frogs and gerbils," noted Calderwood, "At home I have two dogs, a cat, tortoise, and gerbils."

"I was the one who would bring worms home in my pocket to show mom," remembers

Calderwood. "I wanted to be a veterinarian as a kid."

Just like his namesake, Einstein is a bit adventuresome.

"He sleeps in a cage at night; but during the day I put him in a tree I built in my living room," said Calderwood. "While we're gone he plays with his toys, eats and sleeps most of the day. But, I do know he gets down from his tree and goes exploring around; the house because I find bird droppings."

Einstein is also a chatterbox:
"He knows about 30 different phrases, with the latest being 'I can fly';" Calderwood said: "And he loves to talk non-stop when we get home. In fact, when we're trying to relax and watch television he just keeps on talking."

Calderwood says she uses Einstein, and her other animals, as a way of making science interesting for her students.

"I try to bring science to the children in a fun way, to show them its part of their everyday lives." said Calderwood. "Everytime they see a bird they'll think of the principles of flight."

Focus:HOPE continues the work of its founder

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

For the first time since 1969, Focus: HOPE will hold its annual walk for civil and human rights without Father William Cunningham.

However, the founder of the civil rights organization won't be forgotten as this year's theme is "Making his Work Live On." It's in keeping with Father Cunningham's wish that his work at Focus: HOPE continue after his death

"Father lectured me continuously not to name a building or boulevard after him when he died, but to continue his work," said Eleanor Josaitis, executive director of Focus: HOPE. "This walk is a symbol of a man who worked hard to erase racism and inspire justice."

"It certainly will be a much different walk without him," said Josaitis. "He loved this walk something fierce, and we will continue his work with that same intensity."

Organizers believe this year's 8-mile walk will draw more than the nearly 10,000 walkers who annually participate, as many want to show continued support for the ideals and programs of Focus: HOPE after Father Cunningham's death.

The Sunday, October 12, Focus: HOPE WALK '97 will start in front of the organization's complex at 1400 Oakman Boulevard at LaSalle, on Detroit's west side, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Proceeds from the walk support Focus: HOPE technical education, food programs, childhood education, community arts, and special community projects.

Justice should be equal, Ficano says

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano endorsed the end to disparate sentencing for persons convicted of crack cocaine offenses versus persons convicted of powder cocaine offenses.

A recent letter from Attorney General Janet Reno and Drug Czar Gen. Barry McCastrey calling for Congressional action to end such discrepancies was released. Under current sentencing, a person convicted with an amount of crack cocaine faces a penalty 100 times as severe as a person with the identical amount of powder cocaine.

"Our system of justice should treat all persons equally," said. Ficano, "We must not only arrest the drug dealer — whether it is crack or powder cocaine, but we must also put resources into treatment and prevention programs to have a long-term effect."

The Wayne County Sheriffs Department arrests over 1,000 people for narcotics violations each year.

Don't give up on summer make-up

Last month I wrote about taking care of your skin during the summer. The other half of the equation is addressing your make-up needs.

There are a lot of women who let out a collective sigh and declare a mini-vacation for the entire summer. God bless them. Others continue their usual make-up routine regardless of the season. They've found a look and they are going to stick with it come hell or high water. The vast majority are in the middle.

BEAUTY AND

The chances are that you are going to be in the sun at least some of the time. Hence, you will probably get a little to a lot of color on your face. You will probably assume that one product you can put on hold for a while is foundation.

If you are going to wear any make-up at all, then this is an incorrect assumption. You still need to set up a barrier between your skin and the make-up to stop absorption. So, compromise and place the foundation where you are going to wear the makeup. For example under only your blusher.

Make-up companies are constantly changing their color palettes, and usually bring out special summer offerings. Words like pearlised, shimmery, citrus, silver and gold hints are being bandled about at the moment. This may be great if you are very young, experimental or have a tendency towards the dramatic. For most of us back here on earth, the answer is more moderate. Look instead for neutrals, peaches, bronzes, malts.

Stick with translucent colors for the daytime. Save the drama for the night time. Ironically, to achieve a simple sheer finish, it can take a lot of work. This will test your skills working with good brushes and applicators. Instead of wearing a lot of make-up at night, try highlighting the eyes. It will bring attention to them and away from the rest of the face.

Lipstick lores

Women and their lipstick colors are always a contentious issue. We can all spot women who wear colors that are patently wrong. You can find them because the lipstick is the first thing that you notice. Some of you may be tired of the Evita colors that came out last fall and winter, but don't over-compensate by diving into pastel pinks, bright corals or extremes like white and black. Lighter lipsticks are out there with hints of color - in my line for example we have one called Barely There with just a touch of plum. The rule is not to go lighter with the lipstick the darker the skin becomes. Most women do not want to bring attention to this area, in order to avoid emphasizing any lines or wrinkles around the mouth. Frosted lipsticks are especially to be avoided for they reflect light into areas better

For those who don't want to go in the sun, but still want some bronzing, there are a number of good tanning lotions available. These are vastly improved over the old orange streaky results of years gone by. Nivea, Clarins, and Bain de Soleil all produce great results. More expensive products do not necessarily mean better coverage — a lesson that you should keep in mind with wrinkle softeners, and night creams.

Finally a couple of hints. Brown has become the "new black" according to some of the fashion magazines. If you confine your make-up to earth colors you may become too monochromatic and turn into a poster child for fudge popsicles

Instead, introduce complementary shades soft plums, taupes, wine and perhaps even a muted pink. If you are not wearing lipstick during the day, don't forget your Chapstick. Drying of the mouth can make application of lipstick more difficult later on. And, as I've said before, if nothing else, wear mascara. It will give you an alive, brighter line. And that is what summer is all about.

In closing, be wary of what the magazines tell you about how you should look. Do you look like the models that they use? If not, what is right for you is probably something entirely different.

Custom classes

This last statement leads me to my dates at the Townsend in Birmingham in September. These are private sessions where I do all of the work myself: make-up application, lesson, skincare instruction and hair advice.

The minimum purchase for a three hour session; which includes four other women, is $125, which is applicable to any Jeffrey Bruce aloebased products used on you that day. For those who prefer a salon atmosphere, I will be in Livonia, Grosse Pointe, Romeo, Ann Arbor, Lansing and Northville in September as well.

Megaplex theaters spur sales

The film supply is increasing and the Age of the Megaplex is at hand. People want a new form of theater experience and retailers can cash-in on their Big Night Out.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

The key to revitalizing both downtowns and aging malls is simple. just add a multiplex theater to the center.

That's the word from AMC Theater's president Charles Stilley, in his keynote address to 480 retail developers at The Michigan Idea Exchange, July 17 at the Westin Hotel in Detroit.

Attendance at the annual meeting, sponsored by the Michigan Chapter of the International Council of Shopping Centers, was up from 409 in 1996, signaling things are "hot" in the metro-market, according to Linda Brown, state chairman of the public relations committee.

The big question of the day was: How to restore mall traffic?

Stilley said marketers should take a clue from lifestyles.

"Today's couples out for the night. have five hours of baby sitter time," he said. "They want to see a movie. get something to eat, do some shopping, browse through a bookstore. They're looking for themed retail/food environments. They save time and travel if all these destinations are under one roof."

He showed slides of the AMC Theater megaplex at Century City. California where sales in the adjoining shopping center jumped from $250/per foot to $500/per foot, following the opening of the remodeled theater. The mall's book stores and restaurants remain open until 1 a.m. to serve the movie crowds.

Stilley took his hat off to the new Star Theater megaplex in Southfield, calling it "a great example of where the industry is going.'

He said last year Detroiters spent $80 million going to films so AMC is hoping to build five multiplex theaters in the area. One is on the drawing board near Laurel Park Place in Livonia, the others he said "remain secret weapons."

Stilley recalled AMC's plans to build megaplexes in Detroit in the mid-80's.

"We came into town, mapped Detroit out, but we ran out of money," he sighed. "We made some mistakes. Lost this market to another group."

AMC Theaters (American Multi-Cinemas, Inc.,) are the largest theater circuit in the world in terms of gross revenue, earning $800-million in 1996, according to Stilley. United Artists follows. AMC is the biggest house for Disney films, and either number one or two, with the rest of the studios.

They have multiplex theaters in Japan, Portugal, Brazil, and Hong Kong and more are on the way.

Dandy destination: Shoppers like the small town charm of Gabriala's in Plymouth.

Gabriala's: a Main Street success story just celebrated five years on Main Street with an announcement that it's expanding.

Since relocating from a small store on Penniman in 1992, good things have happened to Gabriala's. Through an aggressive and committed direct mail marketing program, the store continues to

"I remember how scary the risk was," said owner Larry Bird. "When we moved in on Main, there were only two businesses that had been in business for more than five years. Things weren't looking too good.

Joint efforts

Bird credits the Plymouth community and Downtown Development Authority for the town's retail turnaround.

Gabriala's market share in Plymouth has increased from 12 percent in 1992 to over 30-percent in Gabriala's gift shop in Plymouth 1997. Bird attributes this to his staff "They're the best!"

> "I have six staff who are former corporate level employees with experience in administration, accounting, marketing, franchising and systems information systems."

Gabriala's has also won several awards since moving to Main Street - a national design award for the shop created by Jon Greenberg and Associates, Southfield; a 1995 Michigan Private 100 Company, named the 86th fastest growing company in Michigan; a 1996 proclamation by the City of Plymouth for being an "Ambassador of Plymouth."

Valuable statistics

During the five years on Main, Gabriala's has attained over $5.5 million in sales, paid out over $1 million in payroll, served more than 175,000 customers, added 2,200 square feet of administrative, shipping and mailing space; increased the mailing list from 10,000 to over 38,000 customers, and completely automated their inventory and history of customer purchases.

"We're very happy on Main Street and in the Plymouth community. It's a great feeling to know that a small entrepreneur can start small and be successful in a small downtown," Bird said.

Onward and upward

What's next? Gabriala's will take on their sixth expansion to be complete by late summer, adding 1,000 more square feet of retail space in the new lower level, "Gabriala's Hidden Secret for the Home."

The store's best selling items include Yankee candles, hand therapy products, Cat's Meow buildings and Lang calendars and paper products.

Developers bemoan growth issues

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO EDITOR

Sophisticated homeowners' organizations make it wough to be a developer these days, agreed a panel of experts at The Michigan Idea Exchange.

Leading a roundtable discussion on "New Trends in Shopping Center Architecture," Tom Litzler of Farmer Jack/A&P, William Hiotaky of The Taubman Co., and James Ryan of JPRA Architects/Peterhansrea Design, advised developers to take a common sense approach to their plans and make sure their structures "fit in with what's already there."

"You may have to relax your prototype," Litzler said. "And put in landscaped islands to break up that 'Sea of Asphalt' known as the parking lot."

He pointed out that even small towns now employ traffic consultants, planning consultants and wetlands specialists who make winning site plan approvals more complicated than ever before.

Litzler said homeowners concerned about noise and aesthetics, demand screen walls, walls around delivery areas, and restrictions on delivery days and times. They want stores with shingled roofs not the standard metal. They want brick buildings with low heights.

"Some groups have lawyers living in their subdivisions and those guys know how to stop a deal," Hiotaky said. "You may even have to sue to get a piece of

Ryan said strip centers especially, need to fight "architectural sameness." They need to "blend" not clash with the surrounding neighborhoods - even if it means reworking universal designs that save money need to be reworked.

The outsourcing trend

The next discussion turned to corporate out-sourcing. National retailers faced with the task of opening 100plus stores across the country each year, now use third party brokers, construction managers, and local tax attorneys to do the jobs they used to do in-house.

Art Kainz of OfficeMax and James Kilberg of The Pep Boys relayed their experiences with out-sourcing, concluding it's not a fad of the moment, but a trend that's here to stay as companies look to global futures.

Discussion chair, Jim Stokas of CB Commercial Real Estate Services, Inc., advised local entrepreneurs cashing-in on the out-sourcing phenomenon, not to put their fee in front of the deal, go all out to service clients, and "Be willing to negotiate your fee for each contract."

Talbots offers tips to ease back-to-school shopping

Kids clothes may be showing up in plush fabrics and bright colors this fall, but the look is primarily driven by great fashion basics, clothes that have always been indispensable to a child's wardrobe.

Essential basics for boys and girls alike include items designed to mix, match and layer as the season gets cooler, such as corduroy or flannel shirts, cotton twill pants, jeans with a classic fit, cotton tees, turtlenecks and sweaters.

According to Talbots Kids, a leading retailer and cataloger of children's clothing, the basics are far from boring in colors ranging from pumpkin and lime to cobalt and crimson, and in comfortable, durable fabrics like corduroy, denim, fleece and stretch twill.

Designed for children's active lifestyles and growing bodies, the silhouettes are generally classic, with girls preferring styles that are cut slightly slimmer or closer to the body and boys continuing to favor a looser fit and rugged details.

For girls, the best back-toschool styles include:

 A-line jumpers and dresses in plush fabrics like cotton velveteen and velour.

• Soft stretch velour twinset worn with a pair of comfortable pants in moleskin, a fabric that looks and feels like suede, yet is actually an easy-care synthetic.

 Versatile ribbed turtleneck that goes with anything, anywhere.

"People enjoy the show because the carvers are friendly and the carving is artistic," said Orr of Dearborn Heights. "Some of the shows are more crafts, but these are all hand carved with a knife."

Carver camaraderie

For Bender, a Livonia carver, the camaraderie between carvers is the reason that she keeps creating and exhibiting. Bender will show several wood canes. One titled "Rainy Day" features carvings of dogs and cats.

"At the shows, I like to see the other people who are involved with carving," said Bender, "and also to interest others in wood carving."

Carvers will stock a supply table with knives, books, wood blanks, and friendly advice for visitors choosing to take a stab at the craft.

"People who might be interested in carving should come," said Bernard Borowski, a member of the Livonia Wood Carvers board of directors. "It's

Art of survival challenges newcomers

n school students focus on making art. When they graduate with their bachelor of fine arts degree, they are unprepared for the real world challenge of making a living as a fine artist.

Galleries generally don't represent unknown artists. Art fairs, group exhibitions, and competitions are ways emerging and young artists can get exposure, but these venues don't provide a steady income.

"Once students graduate, to make it as a fine artist is almost impossible," said Doug Semivan, a Madonna University art professor, sculptor and printmaker with work in the Detroit Institute of Arts collection. "It's very difficult because it takes so much time. You have to work the odd jobs here and there and be dedicated to your goals."

It has taken Semivan 25 years of hard work since graduating with a master of fine arts degree from Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills to achieve success' as a fine artist. His work is represented by the Bunting Gallery in Royal Oak and Gremillion & Company Fine Art in Houston,

For Semiyan, practical experience speaks volumes. He survived as a studio artist for five years between teaching positions at Wayne State and Madonna Universities.

To help prepare students for the future, Semivan requires them to visit art galleries and interview an art dealer as part of a portfolio and presentation course.

Not all art school graduates become practicing artists. Despite all of his instruction, Semivan can: not prepare students to be artists. That takes ambition, dedication, discipline and the ability to survive the stress and anxiety of rejection, among other challenges such as paying the bills.

"The young artist needs time to mature before they can be qualified or accepted just as any other practice like a doctor who serves an internship," said Semivan. "Where are you going to go for ideas without a history or life experience. You don't become an artist by going to art school. They need a mentor relationship with an older artist. You have to look into people's eyes and soul, to do and see a lot of different things, and look at a lot of art."

Emerging artists

Chris Niemiec worked odd jobs such as construction and painting backgrounds for car advertisements while working toward a bachelor of fine arts degree at Hillsdale College. The 21-year-old Canton resident is unsure of where his future lies as an artist but will work at jobs not necessarily related to art.

As far as Niemiec's fine art, watercolor is primary for relaying ideas and concepts like those found in an introspective self portrait. Textures, trips to museums and visual objects serve as inspiration for his paintings. Landscape and variety of subject matter lead to dramatic black and white photography.

"I'd like to incorporate fine art into a business setting, or find a job where I can incorporate a creative approach," said Niemiec, a graduate of Detroit Catholic Central where he competed on the track and ski teams.

A month spent in Italy last summer with art majors from Hillsdale was an awakening experience for Niemiec.

"Seeing how the Renaissance masters dealt with color and technique made me realize I'd like to go into large scale oil paintings, exhibit my work and do commissions," said Niemiec, who is currently working on three commissions, one featuring Florence architecture.

Beth Newman-Banerjee graduated with a bachelor of arts in studio art and bachelor of fine arts in art history from the University of Texas in 1987. Over the years, Newman-Banerjee has worked at a number of different jobs, from illustrating archaeological finds for the University of Texas to her

Photographs reveal Andrew Wyeth's shining light

By Frank Provenzano

Upon hearing the knock on the screen door of her converted house-office near downtown Birmingham, photo-journalist Linda Solomon yells, "Come on

It's a humid mid-summer afternoon, and she's prepared lemonade and chocolate chip cookies, which she offers as regularly as a well-timed camera-

The spontaneous, informal hospitality is simply part of Solomon's high-energy style. It's hardly a coincidence that most of her memorable shots reflect her subject at a casual yet telling moment.

Several weeks ago, ABC News presented Solomon with one of those once-in-a-lifetime assignments: photograph the most famous artist in America, Andrew Wyeth, in commemoration of his 80th birthday.

The piece, which aired on Friday, July 18, honored Wyeth as Wyeth: The famous painter in the rustic surroundings his art made famous.

ABC's "Person of the Week" for his contribution to American painting. A distinction not without controversy.

Not since 1985, when it was revealed that Wyeth had over 200 works featuring a German immigrant housekeeper named Helga, has the realist painter of Puritan-wistful compositions gained such wide attention.

Some critics noted that the Helga disclosure was high-art huckstering. In the modern art world filled with self-promoters that hardly seems offensive.

Working in the tradition of 19th-century painter Winslow Homer but with a peculiar 20thcentury sensual immediacy, Wyeth's paintings reflect an ominous sentimentality of reclusive New Englanders:

It's far from the realistic urban scenes of Edward Hopper. Or even the abstract expressionistic visions of breakthrough painters like Jackson Pollock and Willem de Kooning.

Yet based on mainstream sensibilities, Wyeth's naturalistic style has struck a deep chord with the American public.

Today, the academic criticism seems rather petty. Meanwhile, Wyeth's popularity continues to rise along with the value of his

Revealing the heart

Since her days as a freelance photographer for community and local newspapers in the mid 1970s, Solomon has risen in the free-lance ranks to become a well-known celebrity photogra-

Her work has appeared in Time, Newsweek, People, The New York Times and numerous regional publications. She's also a regular contributor to ABC's "Good Morning America," and a spokesperson for Kodak, promoting photography as a tool of expression for young children.

"I like to make people feel comfortable," she said, tossing her long-brown hair over her shoul-

"It's just me and my camera and I try to find the most natural light that complements them. Once you start complicating things, you get further from revealing (the subject's) natural expressions."

A self-described natural-light photographer, Solomon travels just about anywhere to capture her subjects in a "meaningful environment.'

She may travel to Hollywood to photograph glamourous movie stars at the Oscars, or to Francis Ford Coppola's vineyards in northern California. Or to the streets of Bloomfield Hills to document the route of a 39-year postal delivery veteran on his last day of work.

To capture Wyeth's inner revelations, Solomon traveled to Cushing, Maine, the site of Wyeth's former studio, and the place where he painted his indelible 1948 work, "Christina's World."

Make room on the wall

The idea to photograph Wyeth came from an unlikely news source, but familiar confidante, her husband, Barry Solomon, a local attorney. He noticed in a U.S. News & World Report brief that Wyeth's landmark birthday was coming up. Shortly after, she contacted assignment editors at ABC.

When Solomon received approval, she was on the next three planes that got her as close as a three-hour drive to Cushing. The day before the photo session with Wyeth, Solomon arrived at the old farmhouse.

The next morning she arrived two hours before the scheduled early morning shoot to study how the natural light filtered through the house.

It's not all spontaneity, she said. "I do my homework so it looks natural." When the tall and weatheredskinned Wyeth showed up, he had a few ideas about Solomon's photographic composition. "He knew exactly what would look good," said Solomon. "If Andrew Wyeth wanted to tell me what he thought would work, I was willing to try it."

At one point, Wyeth posed in front of a mirror in the identical manner of his 1940s self-portrait. "He told me that a portrait doesn't have to include a person. I never thought about it like that." It was a moment of insight into Wyeth's style of implied gesture, which distinguishes his works.

"There's a tremendous interest in famous people," she said. "Certain personalities reflect our times. Andrew Wyeth is one of them.'

Last year's auction raised $41,000 for the preservation of Meadow Brook Hall.

The Invitational Art Exhibition held during Concours Sunday, Aug. 3, on the 1,400-acre Meadow Brook Hall estate on the grounds of Oakland University will feature nearly 300 classic cars and appearances by legendary Ferrari coach builder Sergio Pininfarina of Italy and Phil Hill, the first American world race car driving champion. Many of the paintings and bronzes by the 15 artists celebrate the beauty and sleekness of the Ferrari. That's because 70 of the Italian sports cars will be on view, including the oldest known surviving Ferrari, a 1947 166 Spyder Corsa, to honor Ferrari's 50th anniversary.

Oregon artist Dennis Hoyt created the art work spotlighting the vintage Ferrari for the 1997 Concours poster, which will go on the auction block along with a wood sculpture of a Ferrari at the annual Concours Art Auc-ceremonies at the Sunday Coucours.

"This year we have four artists from outside the country. There are people who come to Meadow Brook just to see the art which indicates how integrated and important the art is. It's so much more than a car show, although the greatest cars in the world are there."

Hale began painting classic cars in the late 1970s. In 1982, car collector Richard Teague asked Hale to create the Concours first automotive art exhibition/auction featuring 10 artists. The show's format remains the same today except for the increase in exhibiting artists.

"At that time, there were few people doing automotive paintings," said Hale, chair of the Concours for the first 10 years. "Auto art started with Meadow Brook. It was a complete, serious auto art show before Pebble Beach."

wants Meadow Brook to have an international feel. If it was a local show that would eliminate a part of the audience."

The 11 member art committee, directed by Larry Smith, selected the 15 premier automotive artists for the show this year. Smith collects art and classic cars. This year, the Bloomfield Township collector will show his 1960 Ferrari 250 PF Cabriolet Series 2 at Meadow Brook. Smith's art collection can be viewed year-round at his six restoration shops in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

"It's probably the best display of Ferraris ever," said Smith. "In the past 19 years, the Meadow Brook Hall Concours has grown from a local art show to an international event. In relative terms, automotive art is still in its infancy. As recently as 20 years ago, few people would think of putting a "car" painting in their home. With the great quality and beauty offered today, it hard not to at least consider it.

A beautiful painting of a Bugatti won't need garage space, "The Concours committee leak oil or cost half a million dollars, but will still offer the beauty and pleasure of the real thing. I try to buy a new piece every year. I enjoy the art and it brings a bit of sophistication to my busi-

Styling drawings from the 1950s by Dave Holls, former director of design at General Motors and co-founder of the Concours, will be shown for the first time in the art tent on Sunday only. In the late 1950s, automotive design was inspired by the jet age and cars reflected their times with bigger and bigger fins. Holls is often referred to as the man who put the ultimate fins on the 1959 Cadillac.

"There's many styling cues in these drawings that you can see in the cars of the '60s," said Smith. "These guys were ahead of their times.'

Hale designed cars for 25 years for General Motors, Chrysler and American before deciding to pursue painting full time in 1985. An award-winning artist, Hale achieved international recognition when Lee Iacocca on a trip to the People's Republic of China gave three of his paintings as gifts to highranking government officials and business leaders. Hale is noted for his wildly colored paintings like the blues and purples, swirling across the front of end of a 1936 DeSoto. Another painting of a 1937 Lincoln Zephyr, using a similar palette, features a white calla lily. The sensual flower strongly reflects in the body of the car luring the viewer to seek out its curvaceous lines. Hale began incorporating flowers into his classic car paintings about four years ago. His newest body of work deals boldly with

"Why flowers and cars," said Hale. "I paint this in a surreal way. Over the years, I've noticed all of the reflections in my paintings were organic and free flowing. It seemed a natural. The sensuous qualities of flowers are the same as cars."

Saundra Weed has taught hundreds of students like Newman-Banerjee and Niemiec how to sell their art. The Westland artist will teach a "Marketing Your Art" workshop 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays, Sept. 20 and 27, at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Self exploration is the first step in finding the direction in which to market art. Her advice to young artists is to assess what type of art they do and their background before embarking on the road to sales.

Weed covers the entire spectrum of marketing in her workshop, from creating a business plan to finding sales outlets and tax deductions, writing press releases and developing a reputation and a name.

"Being a fine artist is a tough career choice, unlike a commercial artist who could find employment at an advertising agency or studio," said Weed. "As a fine artist, street fairs and galleries are your only way to go, but free-lancing is also an option. There are endless possibilities from illustrating children's books to creating paintings for interior decorators."

'Magic City' story of riot weaves powerful spells

Magic City

By Jewell Parker Rhodes (HarperCollins, $23)

BY MARY KLEMIC STAFF WRITER

In June 1921, a race riot engulfed the city of Tulsa, Okla, in violence and terror.

Tulsa's Deep Greenwood, a prosperous black neighborhood, was destroyed. An estimated 250 people were killed, many black families were herded into cattle pens, and more than 1.000 businesses and homes were burned to the ground. During the riot, Tulsa became the only U.S. city bombed from the air.

It was the horrific result of a trivial incident. A 19year old black shoeshine boy got on an elevator to use a restroom designated for blacks. A woman, the 17-yearold white elevator operator, screamed.

The man was arrested and charged with assault. After an inflammatory front page newspaper article. almost 2,000 whites began gathering outside the jail where he was being held. Armed black men showed up in the wake of rumors of an impending lynching. Tempers flared and violence erupted, spreading into Deep Greenwood like a tidal wave of fire and blood.

(The woman refused to testify, and the man was released two weeks after the rioting.):

The shameful tragedy, which remained a secret for decades, is the basis of Jewell Parker Rhodes' second novel, "Magic City."

Tulsa was called the "magic city" during the 1920s because of its oil wealth. The moniker is a fitting title for the book, as the novel has an air of magic, a nightmarish sense of "this can't be happening" and of time alternately freezing and rushing on. It conveys the power of transformation, of "ordinary" citizens revealing extraordinary courage.

Joe Samuels, soon to be 18, is a black shoeshine boy from Greenwood. Mary Keane is a poor white elevator operator. Both long to escape from stifling, smothering Joe's father owns a bank and wants his son to work in the business. Mary's lonely life on the family farm is compounded by her unfeeling father. Joe dreams of being a magician like Houdini, Mary of being loved.

Other similarities between Joe and Mary are spelled out. Both are urged to stay in their "place." For Joe, that means to put up with racism and condescension. For Mary, that means to keep quiet even about pain and loss. Ghosts from both families - Joe's brother, killed in the war, and Mary's mother, who died giving birth to a son - are among the phantoms that make appearances.

Mary goes to the city - never to return, she vows after she is raped by the farm hand and refuses to marry him, ignoring her father's order. Joe gets in her elevator instead of taking the stairs as blacks are "supposed to."

As the elevator with the descends, Mary suddenly screams and Joe flees the angry crowd in the lobby.

Mary tries to clear his name, but events are out of control. Joe's frequent nightmare.

in which he is set on fire and the flames leap to Greenwood, is apparently coming true. "Magic City" is at its best describing the tension and terror of the rioting, such as the scenes of the bombing by the planes and Joe hiding in the river. "Silence. Ten seconds, ten minutes, ten hours... Birds had disappeared; wind didn't stir... Even the flowers scents had dulled." When a plane suddenly appears, goggled men inside dropping dynamite, "Mary thought of running beneath the plane's wing, snatching dynamite as it fell. Or else rising like an angel to battle the demon."

"He heard shouts in the distance... He pushed on, ignoring his tired legs... He felt weightless; comforted by the riverbed. Time slowed. It was quiet inside the water. He reminded himself to breathe. His pursuers could be

You can empathize with Joe and Mary, wanting to rebel with them as you visit their worlds of racism and

As Joe rushes through Tulsa to get home to Greenwood before the "Negro curfew" of 10 p.m., a clerk tells the "boy" to hurry home but then orders him to stop and repeat a magic trick. Joe keeps his eyes on the sidewalk as elegantly dressed men and women leave the opera house ("he was still in Tulsa, not Greenwood").

Women are objects to use and aren't encouraged to have aspirations beyond marriage. The female operators in gilded elevators are called canaries by the man who owns the building. Women in the families make the meals, prepare the bodies for funeral services.

"Magic City" weaves spells, each of which has many sides. The dead can come alive, to help rather than frighten. Freedom can come through standing rather than running. Truth must be heard as well as spoken.

Sassy book has fun with Maes

Cuttin' the Rug Under the Moonlit women have also been Maes, Sky: Stories and Drawings About a Bunch of Women Named Mae By Sharony Andrews Green (Doùbleday, $16.95)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

This is a book with attitude. In fact, it's a book with 40 attitudes, and sass to spare.

Sharony Andrews Green is a former Detroit Free Press reporter who has written this slim volume for that hot new segment of the book-buying market - black women. For them, the book will have special meaning as it explores the many aspects of being a black woman in America. But, for others as well, Green has concocted an often amusing, sometimes biting little volume that combines her writing and drawing talents.

Green begins by telling us that the addition of the name Mae (or May) to a name immediately gives it a special bite, an attitude that a plain Lili or Lucy or Dorothy doesn't have. She writes that especially among Southern black women, this second name is ubiquitous. But many white including Mae West and Maybelle Carter, and Green believes they also prove her point. Green renewed an interest in drawing by doing naive color. marker drawings of "Maes," black women of different ages. dresses, classes and styles. She decided to combine these colorful and often inspired drawings with sharp one page profiles of each Mae. The profiles are done in a streetwise voice and the comments might be just what you'd hear at a hairdressers on a Saturday afternoon.

Green is generally promoting a positive view of life and "sista hood" but not without some sharp, even abrasive, observations of lives that take wrong turns. But most of these Maes, even those with the most hard luck, find a way to muddle through and even triumph over life's adversities. Green would argue that their very "Maeness" helps them cope.

Who are some of these Maes. There is Lorraine Mae who wants to open her own restaurant one day and serve "buttery sweet potato pie"; Ella Mae left with three children and forced to work as a dancer to take care of them; Odessa Mae who is all bound in a big coat but who longs for romantic attention despite all the warnings; Lucy Mae who moves to Vermont and meets the other 10 blacks in the state; and Mae Dean with her tight hair in her loft apartment talking of revolution.

Green brings her skills as a perceptive reporter to tell these mini stories. They might remind you of Edward Arlington Robinson's "Spoon River." Though not written as poetry, many of the profiles are poetic and some are even done in rhymes and other bits of word play.

Green obviously had a lot of fun drawing and writing these portraits and it carries over for the reader.

Green will be signing copies 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 29, at Birmingham Borders Books and Music, 31150 Southfield Road, Birmingham and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 30, at the Dearborn Borders Books and Music, 5601 Mercury Drive, Dearborn.

Workshops team young dancers with professionals

Jean Gloria Newell knows that breaking into the dance world is never easy. At age 18, Newell was studying dance and performing in New York on Broad-

Now, Newell and the Livonia Civic Ballet Company are giving young dancers the opportunity to benefit from the experience of professional dancers without leaving the state by hosting a four-day dance workshop Thursday, July 31 through Sunday, Aug. 3 at Miss Jean's Dance Arts, 15619 Farmington Road in Livonia. The workshop features guest teachers Alain DuBreuil of the Sadler Wells Royal Ballet in London, Ana Lobe of the Cleveland San Jose Ballet, and John Anzalone who has performed on Broadway in "Cats."

Classes for advanced and intermediate level dancers 10 years of age or older will include ballet, pointe, jazz, and variation as well as master classes for teachers. Workshop classes will be held 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and until 4 p.m. Sunday.

Class size is limited. To register for the workshop, call (313) a lot of parents can't afford it," said Newell, owner of Miss Jean's Dance Arts in Livonia and founder of the Livonia Civic Ballet Company.

"We want to introduce students to different teachers and to dancers teach, are expensive and let the students be seen by these teachers because they're connected to companies like the Cleveland San Jose Ballet." said Newell.

Alain DuBreuil, a native of Monte Carlo, joined the London Festival Ballet at age 18, where he rose to principal. In 1973, DuBreuil joined the Sadler Wells Royal Ballet where he created many roles in addition to dancing leading roles in most the company's repertory. He had made guest appearances with companies all over the world, both dancing and teaching. His partners have included Margot Fonteyn and Natalia Makarova. DuBreuil was appointed ballet master in 1989 and still appears in character roles.

Ana Lobe began her early training in her native home of Havana, Cuba at the National School of Ballet, under the direction of Alicia Alonso. She joined the National Ballet of Cuba where she developed her extensive classical repertoire. As principal dancer, she has performed with the English National Ballet in London and Ballet Mississippi, where she danced with Fernando Bujones. Lobe has been principal dancer with the Cleveland San Jose Ballet since 1994 where her roles included the lead in the company's highly regarded "Blue Suede Shoes."

John Anzalone has performed on Broadway in "Cats" and "A Broadway Tribute to Agnes DeMille" and toured in "La Cage Aux Folles" and "West Side Story." Extensive dance and musical theater experience has kept him in demand as both a performer and instructor. Anzalone has taught at Southeastern Louisiana University, Eglevesky Ballet, and the American Theatre Dance Workshop. He is currently working on a master of arts degree in musical theater at New York University:

"When dancers go to audition they're asked for good Broadway jazz," said Newell. "John's a wonderful jazz dancer and he has a lot to offer. That's why we limited class size, we want students to get individual atten-

The Livonia Civic Ballet Company is dedicated to serving its members and its community as a resource to learn and perform the art of ballet through workshops, education and public performances. Founded more than 30 years ago, the Livonia Civic Ballet Company was recognized as the official ballet company of the city of Livonia in 1991 by former Mayor Robert Bennett. Members of company come from throughout southeastern Michigan and are selected through annual open auditions. Newell, owner of Miss Jean's Dance Arts in Livonia, was honored by her students at a recent recital for 50 years of teaching dance. A performing artist since age 10, Newell began teaching dance in 1947 at the Tucci School of Music in Hamtramek where she created the school's dance department.

After dancing in New York and touring with national dance companies, Newell returned to Detroit to teach at the Tabor School of Dance in Detroit and then at Homer Babb Studio in Dearborn where she created the studio's ballet curriculum. Nine years later, Newell took over the studio from the retiring Babb. She moved the studio to Livonia in 1961 and renamed it Miss Jean's Dance Arts.

Throughout her 50 years of teaching, Newell has shared her talent and expertise with thousands of young dancers. Her students have gone on to perform professionally in New York, California and Florida. Newell's commitment to dance goes beyond the daily operations of her stu-

TRAVEL

Yellowstone's vistas can still inspire awe

BY DOUG JOHNSON STAFF WRITER

We stand along the fast-running Madison River in Yellowstone Park. It's a deep blue-black because of the late sunlight streaming in from the west.

The motorhomes and cars with campers are either exiting the park for the gateway towns or have found their way to campsites in the park.

A lone bison moves up the river's edge, heading for who knows where.

To the frequent or even firsttime visitor, all is as it should

It is still the park of our childhood, despite the warnings about overcrowding, behind schedule building maintenance, rough roads, and, of course, the damage from the fires of 1988.

The overwhelming impression is that none of this matters. The power and the glory of the park and its ability to inspire are intact.

We were in the park last summer during the July 4th weekend. Yes, it was busy, but we never waited for gasoline, nor meals, nor did we wait for traffic jams except when wildlife crossed the roads.

In many locations we were alone, especially early in the morning and late in the afternoon

One day as the sun was setting and we returned to Gardiner (northern entrance) on the road alongside the Gibbon River, it was us and one other vehicle, a pickup truck with Wyoming plates pulling a horse trailer. We can see elk feeding along the river's bank.

Even if you go in July or August, think about seeing some of the sights before 10 a.m. and after 4 p.m.

Many roads in the park are new; others, like the road in from Cody, Wyo., are under construction. Rumors of long delays through the east gate out of Cody are greatly exaggerated, according to the Cody Chamber of Commerce. Two paving projects, one outside of the park and one inside, can cause short delays up to 30 minutes. Also, they are working on the road from Madison to Old Faithful inside the park.

Road crews are about halfway through an eight-year paving project.

Currently, the east gate closes at night, but I still think it is the prettiest way to enter the park, driving through Shoshone Canyon and up over the mountains down into Yellowstone Lake.

If you visit Cody stop at the Buffalo Bill Historical Center. In addition to the Cody memorabilia there is a superb collection of western art, an almost unbelievable collection of small firearms, and the Plains Indian Museum. Even small children should be fascinated by a stop at this place.

One footnote: Bill Cody wanted to be buried in the hills above his town but instead is buried above Denver, where he died; his burial was part of a deal his penniless widow made with one of the owners of the Denver Post.

Cody has plenty of motels and places to eat as does West Yellowstone and Jackson Hole. Gardiner and Cooke City are very small towns and have less to offer.

When you enter the park the fire damage is clear. About a third of the park's land was burned in forest fires that were so intense they affected the weather. Nine summers have passed and the burned areas have been replaced in many cases with a green carpet of seedlings.

The so called "let burn" policy that President Reagan said he never heard of was widely mis-understood. When the fire threatened the historic Old Faithful Inn the news story got international play with at least one headline talking about "total destruction."

trying to stop the fires fueled by aging lodgepole pines and severe drought. Only a September snow storm stopped the blazes; some fires were not declared out until early December.

age is hidden in the northwest quadrant of the park in back country.

The geothermal features, while everychanging, still are key to Yellowstone's appeal. At the Norris Geyser Basin we walk one of the big loops and stop at Echinus Geyser. A tiny crowd gathers and the geyser erupts after a short wait. We return hike to the parking lot and again are essentially alone.

The popular spots like Old Faithful and the two spectacular waterfalls on the Yellowstone River are busy, but there are still plenty of spaces to park.

Getting to Yellowstone from here would take three days hard drive. A flight to Billings, Mont., or other places in Wyoming can get expensive. We flew to Denver last year for $250 round trip

Yellowstone is surrounded by other attractions: Grand Teton National Park (great half-day whitewater and float trips are available along the Snake River), and numerous scenic drives in Montana (north out of West Yellowstone, out of Gardiner, and out of Cooke City).

Take plenty of pictures. It was, after all, pictures (William Henry Jackson) and paintings (Thomas Moran) that convinced Congress to make this place the world's first national park exactly 125 years ago.

Polanski reaches match-play

By Brad Emons Staff Writer

Steve Polanski has played in a number of important golf tournaments, but none bigger than last week's U.S. Junior Amateur held at the Aronimick Golf Club in Newtown Square, Pa.

The event has a storied history.
Previous winners have included
Tiger Woods and David Duval.

The 16-year-old Polanski, who will be a junior this fall at Livonia Stevenson High School, reached the second round of match-play before falling to Kris Mikkelsen of Woodstock, Ga., 5-and-3, on Thursday afternoon.

Polanski earned a spot in the 64man match-play field (out of 154 competitors) with a two-round total of 2-over 142, putting him in a three-way tie for second.

In Tuesday's opening round, Polanski carded a 1-under 69, tied for third overall.

On Wednesday, he added a 73 on the soaked suburban Philadelphia course, which absorbed nearly two inches of rain from Hurricane

Danny. (Aronimick is PGA pro Jay Sigel's home course.)

In his first match Thursday morning, Polanski ousted Eric Clancy of Kansas City, Mo., 6-and-

Although somewhat disappointed to be eliminated in the afternoon round, Polanski felt he gave it his best effort against Mikkelsen.

"He (Mikkelsen) was 3-under after 14 holes," Polanski said. "He definitely played well. He's won a couple of AAGA national tourneys. He's a very good player. He drained a couple of 30-foot putts.

"I drove the ball well and hit a lot of narrow fairways. The course (6,955 yards) was very long. But it played like it was 7,500 because it was really wet. You really couldn't get a lot of rolls."

for third overall.

The course, being considered for .On Wednesday, he added a 73 on future U.S. Opens, proved to be a the soaked suburban Philadelphia stern test.

"The greens were the fastest I've ever putted," Polanski said. "And they were still very quick after all the rain. The first day (on Tuesday) greens were very hard. They read 11.6 on the stimpmeter, which is PGA Tour-quick. And the rough was about five inches high."

Polanski wants another opportunity to play in the 17-and-under national tournament.

"Match-play is a lot of fun because anything can happen from shot-to-shot," he said. "I'll be back next year."

And if he keeps improving, Polanski could find himself among upper echelon of juniors.

"I've worked on my game really hard and I'm a lot more consistent," he said. "Before, on a badday, I was shooting 75 and 77, but now on an off-day, I'm around 72 or 73. Cutting those three or four strokes helps in national tournaments. I'd consider myself a conventional player. My putting has improved and my overall game in general has improved."

Using a new Scotty Cameron putter, Polanski has made strides with his short game. He spends time taking lessons from teaching pro Lee Houtteman, who plays out of the Grand Traverse Resort and Grand Cypress in Orlando, Fla.

Polanski, who lists Fred Couples as his favorite PGA player, will compete this week in the Golf Association of Michigan Junior at the Quest near Houghton Lake. He will travel Aug. 7-13 to Colorado Springs for the National Independents Insurance Agents tournament and will be part of Team Michigan for an AAGA event Aug. 25-28.

This fall he'll return the Stevenson varsity golf team.

"I really enjoy the all travelling," Polanski said. "I owe it all to my parents. "My mom (Kathy) and dad (John) have really supported me."

GOLF NOTE: In the Ashworth Midwest Collegiate Amateur Series Thursday at Eaglesticks Golf Club in Zanesville, Ohio, Livonian Dave Higham shot 71-75 for a 146 total to finish fourth.

Gary Kraus, also of Livonia, carded 77-74 to finish tied for 12th with a 151 total. Bill White of Wickliffe, Ohio won the Ashworth Classic with a 68-73/141 total.

Stefanski looking toward future

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Mike Stefanski considers himself caught in professional baseball purgatory.

As a catcher for the Triple-A Louisville Redbirds of the American Association, he's only one step away from the Major Leagues.

But the Gateway to the West, the famous Arch and adjacent Busch Stadium, home of the St. Louis Cardinals, seems thousands of miles away for the 27-year-old minor leaguer, who starred at Redford Union High School and the University of Detroit.

"I really don't have any future in this organization," Stefanski said. "Plus, I'll be a free agent next year anyway."

Despite limited playing time this season, Stefanski continues to put up good offensive numbers. Through 43 games he is hitting .322 with 47 hits in 146 at-bats with six homers and 21 RBI.

But he is lodged behind the Cardinals' future catcher, 23-year-old Eliseser Marrero, a Cuban-born player from Miami, Fla.

"He'll be in the majors next year," Stefanski said. "The kid is legit, just awesome. The best arm I've ever seen. Just a cannon for an arm. And he has tremendous bat speed and power."

In 82 games, Marrero is hitting 276 with 13 homers, a team-high 17 doubles and team-best 49 RBI.

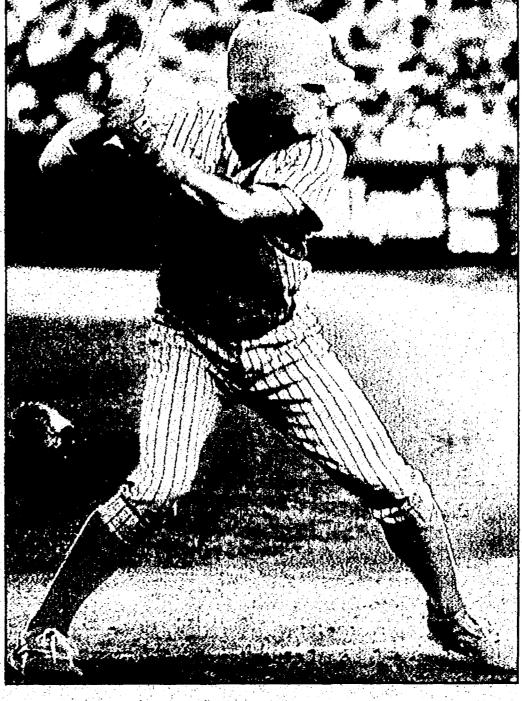

Stefanski, who was drafted by the Milwaukee Brewers in the 40th round in 1991, has hit well at nearly every level during his minor league career.

He batted .364 his first year in Arizona; .273 with Beloit, Wis. in 1992; .322 with 10 homers and 22 doubles at Stockton, Calif. in 1993; .263 with El Paso (Double-A) in 1994 and .407 with El Paso again (in just six games).

On Oct. 19, 1995, Stefanski was traded by Milwaukee to the Cardinals for Marc Ronan, a Triple-A player with Louisville.

His troubles began when the Cardinals put him on the 40-man Major League roster.

"The strike year just put me

Swinging the bat: Redford Union High product Mike Stefans ki is one step away from the Majors, but he's hoping to leave the St. Louis Cardinals organization.

behind the eight-ball," Stefanski said of the 1995 Major League Players Association walkout. "I had to honor the picket line. I just sat around at home when I should have been working down in the minors because I wasn't going to be playing that year in the Majors anyway. I was really disappointed with the whole situation.

"The last two spring trainings were really a joke. I was sent down before I got a chance to play. Then last year I was thrown right into Triple-A. I lost my confidence and it put me behind. Things came tumbling down."

The numbers reflected Stefanski's year away from the game. He batted just .208 with only 125 plate appearances in 53 games.

"I was just miserable when they brought me over here (to Louisville)," he said. "(Tony) LaRussa (the Cardinals' manager) brought in his own coaches and catchers. I was told I would play every day. Plus, I'm not an organization guy, somebody they drafted and brought along.

"I was bitter all last year. This year it's nice to play a little bit and do well. It's been fun, but it's been a battle. I'm battling for every at-bat. I'm not getting much exposure, but I'm fortunate I'm still having a pretty good season. Given the amount of playing time, which is about every fourth game, I'm swinging the bat well."

Stefanski hopes he can become the ultimate utilityman. He occasionally plays first base and sometimes comes off the bench as a designated hitter.

"I'd like to do what John Wockenfuss did with the Tigers," he said. "Be able to go out there and play first base or outfield. I can still swing the bat and I'm a legitimate catcher."

Stefanski harbors hopes that the Tigers might express some interest. He'd be willing to spend more time at the Triple-A level in Toledo.

"It would be a dream of mine to play someday for your hometown team," he said. "I believe they're still looking for somebody like me."

With Louisville out of contention in the American Association with a 43-60 record (as of July 22), Stefanski is just trying to play out the season. His family visits when the team plays in Indianapolis. Last weekend his mother Sandy paid a visit to Louisville.

"We're completely out of it (the pennant race), so it's kind of a salary drive right now," he said. "I like the town of Louisville a lot. I wouldn't mind settling there. But right now everything depends on playing time.

Second baseman Chris Karney (Redford Catholic Central/U-D Mercy), shortstop Bill Styles (Plymouth Salem/Henry Ford CC), catcher Carlos Fernandez (MSU) and third baseman Jeff Wozniak (Garden City) each had two hits and an RBI for the winners.

Tom Biljan went 3-for-3 in a losing cause.

Schuyler Doakes added two hits, including a double, and a stolen base for the Rams.

Hines Park, which started the season 0-8, has won 13 of its last 20 games.

"We played terribly, like a high school team, for the first part of the season," Carroll said. "We couldn't catch it, pick it up, throw it or hit it. "A lot of our guys were red-shirted in college and did not play during the spring, so it took them awhile."

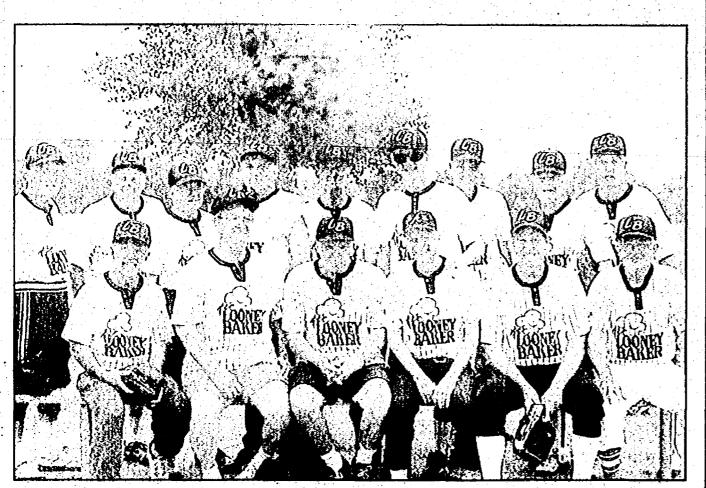

After Carroll juggled a few positions, Hines Park began to take off.

"We started to hit the ball and it took pressure off our defense," the Hines Park manager said. "We started to get good pitching and played good defense. It got contagious and we had fun. Things started to go our way. We learned how to

Gridder drowns in accident

By Dan O'MEARA LARRY O'CONNOR STAFF WRITERS

Shawn Mayberry sights were on the upcoming Harrison High football season, which makes his drowning death all the more tragic and puzzling to friends and family.

Mayberry, 17, died Wednesday after he had gone underwater while swimming with:

"Football was everything to him," said his mother Anita. "We have all his plaques on the wall. He was so easy going.

"He'd won first place in weightlifting for three years straight. He told me, 'Well mom I'm going to win it four years straight.' He was conditioning, he was lifting weights."

On Thursday, teammates and friends went to the site. Some left flowers.

His mother found notes and letters of support on her door when she returned to her Farmington Hills home Friday.

Senior players Jared Hopkins and Brian Lewis organized a team meeting Thursday morning after hearing about their teammate's death. Football players met again Thursday afternoon on the football field with about 30 of Shawn's other friends. A total of 70 were in attendance.

A school psychologist was brought in to help.

"They just wanted to be together," Harrison High football coach John Herrington said. "We all tried to help each other deal with the grief.

"Shawn had tremendous heart. He was a relentless player. Football meant more to him than anything, and it's probably what kept him in school. He really had Hawk blood. He was liked by everyone on the team because of his toughness on the field."

Mayberry was also a member of the Harrison wrestling team and was an avid fisherman. "

Shawn's mother asked for his football jersey No. 72 to be placed in his casket. All the players signed the shirt. He was to be buried in his varsity jacket.

Every player will have a decal with the No. 72 on his helmet in the coming season.

Mayberry and his friends were swimming in 20-feet deep water, a parks official said. Water conditions were normal.

Drugs and alcohol were not believed to be involved, a Green Oaks Township sergeant said.

"It just seems he got tired and got into trouble and went under water," said Joanne Stritmatter, park manager.

His mother said he was a good physical condition.

"I don't know if he got tired or he got cramps," she said. "All I've heard is that he was swimming and he got a little bit tired and the kids thought he'd be OK. When they looked back, he'd gone under the water."

Memorial contributions to assist the family can be made in Shawn's name: Harrison High School, 29995 W. 12 Mile, Farmington Hills 48334. Mayberry remembered by friends

His coaches and teammates remembered Shawn Mayberry as being tough, dedicated, intense, passionate about the game of football but also compassionate away from it.

Harrison High School's football program, as well as the greater school community, is still in mourning today following funeral services Saturday for Mayberry.

With the start of practice less than a month away, the 17-yearold gridder was looking forward to his senior year and third season on the varsity team at the time of his drowning death last

"I never met anyone who loved the game more," senior teammate Brian Lewis said. "He would look you in the eye, as if to say 'Let's go,' and that would have you pumped up for the rest of the game. We'll really miss

Mayberry wasn't big by football standards at 5-foot-7 and 185 pounds, but he was strong, quick and aggressive attributes that lent themselves well to the position he played.

Harrison has a tradition of small, quick noseguards at the center of its defense, and Mayberry ranked with the best and continued that tradition.

"Obviously, he'll be missed as a great football player and the heart of our defense," Harrison head coach John Herrington said. "The other players admired his toughness. He always gave everything he had and was very spirited.'

Mayberry had a lot of playing time as a sophomore and earned a starting role on defense last

He was one of assistant coach Bob Sutter's Grubbers — the Harrison linemen who labor in the trenches and relish their relative obscurity.

Though he wasn't one of the better known players because of the position he played, Mayberry was a key contributor during an 11-2 season last fall in which the Hawks were state runners-up.

Mayberry would have been the leading tackler among returning players this year. He ranked third on the team in total tackles with 84 last season, behind only Ed Hight and Francis Gojcaj.

"He played with a great deal of enthusiasm," Sutter said. "He was quick and strong; he ran to the ball exceptionally well. He was like a wild man on the field, and the other kids drew a lot of energy from the way he played.

"He'll be missed because of his enthusiasm. He had a fun-loving approach to the game. We'll miss his ability out there. He wasn't just wild; he could make plays.'

Mayberry's aggressiveness and intensity earned him the nickname Mad Dog from his teammates, which in the tough world of football was really an endearing term.

"After the Silverdome loss, he was crying and crying; we couldn't get him to stop crying," Herrington said. "He said he was never going to play football again, because he didn't want to

Livonia bass angler Ferguson able to find right spots

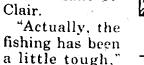

Bass angler Art Ferguson is on been finding unpressured fish.

After winning the Red Man Michigan Division qualifier July

12 on Saginaw Bay, Ferguson, a Livonia resident, turned around and teamed up with his partner Ed Dietrich to win the Oakland Bass Master's Open last weekend on Lake St. Clair.

said Ferguson, who grew up in Rochester and runs a local guide service during the summer. "The water is a little cooler than normal and the May Fly hatch is still going on. The fish are about two weeks behind where they normally are."

The secret for Ferguson has Marathon Oil, Jan's Sport Shop,

"We've been fishing where everyone else isn't," he said. "Basically I've been getting away from other people and finding some secluded fish."

Berkley Power Grubs and Spider Grubs and spinner baits have been the productive baits.

In the Red Man qualifier Ferguson topped a field of 144 anglers with a five-fish limit that weighed 16 pounds, six ounces. He earned $2,377 and 50 points in the race to qualify for the Red Man Regional where the top prize is a Chevy Truck and a fully-rigged Ranger bass boat.

In the Oakland Bass Master Open Ferguson and Dietrich, a Red Man Regional qualifier last yéar, teamed up to catch an eight-bass limit that weighed 24.41 pounds. They pocketed $1,082 for their efforts.

Ferguson has managed to land corporate sponsorship from

Hamilton Chevrolet, Mercury Outboards, Astro Boats and Berkley and plans to compete in the B.A.S.S. Masters Tournament Trail beginning in Septem-

"I'll probably fish four tournaments between September and May starting with a smallmouth tournament in New York," said Ferguson. "I'm looking forward to it, but I couldn't possibly do it without my sponsors."

Ferguson and Dietrich will compete in a Tri-State tournament Saturday in western Michigan and the Red Man Qualifier Sunday on Lake St. Clair.

"I'd like to get two Red Man wins in a row. That would almost clinch a spot in the regional," added Ferguson.

Deadline reminder

August 1 is rapidly approaching. That's the deadline to apply for an antlerless deer permit for the upcoming Michigan deer hunting seasons.

The traditional September 24th deadline has been moved ahead this year so archers can utilize the antlerless permits during the early archery season (Oct. 1-Nov. 14).

The antierless licenses are stand alone licenses this year and can be used during all deer seasons.

Peregrine chicks fly

Nine eregrine falcon chicks recently fledged their four nests in Southeastern Michigan and are exploring the skies surrounding Detroit and Monroe, One of the chicks, Lord Stanley Red Wings, was named in honor of the Detroit Red Wing's recent Stanley Cup Championship.

"The Detroit area has been the lead nesting site for peregrines in Michigan for the last few years," said Tim Payne, DNR wildlife biologist stationed at the district Livonia office, Eight peregrine chicks hatched last year in southeast Michigan.

The peregrines chicks still rely on their parents for food, but are exploring their ability to fly. The general aerobatics of a peregrine is exciting to witness and when mature peregrine can reach speeds of up to 200 mph in a stoop (dive).

The chicks hatched this spring at three nesting sites in Detroit (Fisher, Ameritech, and Whittier buildings) and one in Monroe.

Peregrins are on the endangered species list and protected. by law. The chicks normally leave their nests when they are approximately six weeks old. The birds begin feeding on their own when they are 10 to 12 weeks old and are expected to leave their nests and set out on their own in August.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Ml. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-2573

According to a 1991 survey done by the Fish and Wildlife Service, 63 million people in the United States watch and feed birds. Together these bird watchers spent $5.2 billion dollars and generated almost $900 million dollars in Spending time in the natural world is a very enjoyable pastime and these figures reflect the commitment people have to enjoy this kind of recreation. The American Birding Association just signed its 20,000th member. Their membership has doubled since 1992. According to the National Survey on Recreation and the Environment conducted by the University of Georgia Survey Research Center, bird watching is one of the fastest growing recreational activities in the United States. It has shown more rapid growth than hiking, downhill skiing and golf.

In fact, Steve Murdock in "An America Challenged" states that "between now and 2050, the only major outdoor pastime that will grow faster than the national population is . . . bird watch-

Traveling to visit new birding areas, or to see an unusual bird that is far out of its normal range, or just watching birds as you travel can be very satisfying and relaxing. This attitude was reflected in a survey published in Fortune magazine. Participants were asked if they would prefer golf or birding to unwind on a vacation. they chose birding. A study of the Eastern Shore Birding Festival showed that 46 percent of the participants came from outside the county.

Residents of Michigan know that travel is big business. According to the Southwick Association, birding in Michigan supports, 7,620 jobs.

Though the numbers above are big and surprising, individuals who want to start birding or nature watching do not have to spend a lot of money. But many individuals spending a little, adds up to a lot of money.

By recognizing how many people value natural areas in which to recreate, preserving or establishing such areas is valuable to both wildlife and to people.

TEN PIN ALLEY

Do you remember what you were doing at the age of eight? Neither do I, for that matter, but for Andy Jones, an 8-year-old, he just rolled his first 200 game in league play at Merri Bowl in Livonia.

While Andy was busy shooting the 200 score in the Wednesday Morning All-Stars, a youth league, AL his mom, Pam was bowling in her HARRISON Wednesday morning Wake Up league, just a few lanes away. Pam only shot a mere 196, so it was a day to remember for both mother and son. Andy's previous high was 159, so he has reached a new plateau and is now aiming at the 250 level. Even at the tender age of eight, Andy has aspirations to one day be a good enough bowler to make it to the pro tour.

For now, he will concentrate on his schooling at Tyler Elementary in Livonia.

Meanwhile his mother, Pam, will see to it that he gets all the proper coaching it takes to get him to be the best that he can be.

Pam herself is one of the local Lady All Stars, bowling in the Cloverlanes Bowlerettes and several other leagues. One of the elements of her own coaching is to instill the "Power of Positive Thinking" into the training she has given to Andy, and that is very good advice for anyone looking to improve their game, whether you are 8

ROAD WARRIORS

Great Lakes Relay tests runners' endurance

BY BRAD EMONS

hat keeps us coming back to the Great Lakes Toyota Relay? What would possess someone to spend three days up north. weaving and bobbing through 282 miles of backwoods trails, manuevering support vehicles through off-the-beaten path roads, and four-wheeling through sand dunes?

The love of running, of course, along with the camaraderie, not to mention the dust?

Yes, besides awakening each morning at 4, breaking down the tents and driving to the first leg of the day, this event, now in its sixth year to benefit Michigan Special Olympics, definitely builds character and a little running backbone.

A record 50 teams, consisting of 10 members each, signed up for this year's race (July 18-20). Forty-eight teams showed up and 45 finished.

This is not only a cross country race, but it's beginning to attract runners from other states. License plates revealed teams from Ohio, Ontario, Runners came as far away as West Virginia, California and Hawaii.

The long and short course divisions were combined this The short course used to be 255 miles, while the long course was 325 miles. The event is the brainchild of Bob Baril and Nick Papas, with help from Bob Winkler.

This trio mapped out the complicated course, which winds from Glennie, over to Millersburg, on through to Higgins Lake State Park, and finishing on the shores of Lake Michigan in Empire.

Last-minute changes had to be made. And this year's course had to be circumvented around National Guard military exercises Saturday at Camp Grayling.

There were 19 designated legs during the first-day (101 miles). 20 during the second (103.5 miles) and 17 the final day (77.05 miles).

Each runner is required to complete a minimum of 23 miles over three days.

But some go beyond the call of Southfield's Dave Chomet, a member of four-time winner and still defending champion Roadkill squad, which dedicated this year's win to former team member John Rogucki (who died of brain cancer last spring), came through with a whopping 19 miles on the middle day.

Injuries and fatigue take its toll, so guys like Chomet definitely wear a badge of honor.

My own team, Biermeister, once again completed its journey without a full squad for the third straight year (it's always something, isn't it?).

When a 10th member (Phil West) dropped out after the first day because of a blown-out hamstring, somebody crazy has to step up to the plate.

pick up the slack. Anybody who runs back-to-back marathons on successive days has a screw loose somewhere up there.

On Saturday, Meisner completed 17 miles for his team and then got upset when he was pulled from running the successive back-to-back four-mile legs. Meisner, 43, also was disappointed with the 8-mile swamp run on Day No. 2.

"No swamp this year, it was all dried up," he complained.

Too bad, Dave, the dusty roads (kicked up by the 150 or so vehicles on the route), made up for the lack of swamp water.

I was penciled in for 27 miles and completed my three-day quest without a major catastro-

I have to give credit to my teammates, Larry Wojcik and Mike Whoolery, for mapping out a nice variety of legs.

I was given short legs (3.4 miles), medium legs (4.9) and one long leg (7.0).

My long legs traversed uphill over blacktop, sand dunes, downed trees, and thick white gravel stones. There were a few severe hills, but nothing like the 9.4-mile Tommy Toyota (on Day No. 1), which takes its toll on the feet, along with the killer C-15 hill climb.

4.9-mile route around Mud Lake, zig-zagging through He was a prime candidate to remote sections of Pere Marquette State Forest.

It was a beautiful leg to be sure, but without directions in hand, you're totally lost. Somehow, some way, I made it through.

Passing only one runner at the outset, and never seeing another the rest of the route, I was convinced they needed to send out a search party for me. As it turned out, with only less than a mile to the next exchange, I saw two runners ambling toward me.

"I've got to be lost" were my first words to the two oncoming

"No, you're not," they said. "You're less than a mile down this road."

Apparently these two were out searching, trying to find a wayward teammate.

It was my final leg on the final day. And there was no greater relief (or satisfaction) to complete this race and not screw things for my team.

Thirty-one teams competed in the open division and 14 in the mixed division.

Roadkill took 28 hours, 43 minutes and 21 seconds, averaging 6:07 per mile pace. Their adjusted time (with handicap) was 26:25:38. This year's Roadkill team, con-

The scariest leg came on Day Tim Emmett, Pat McGuinnes, coming back.

Kory Kramer, Doug Goodhue, Sue Parks, Sue Tatigian-Gembis, Chuck and Rob Block, beat the M-10 squad by 12 minutes in actual time.

The winning team in the mixed division, which requires at least four women, was the Sea Cows, a team from the western side of the state which covered the 282-mile course in 29:32:45.

(Women get a 13 percent handicap right off the top. Anybody from 40-50 years-old receives one percent off their time for each year. Those 51 and up get a 12 percent handicap for each year).

Although the dust was flying, the weather cooperated for the most part. Cooler temperatures prevailed (unlike the near 100degree scorcher in 1995), A midday rain couldn't have come at a better time midway through Day No. 3, clearing the air.

By the time the third day had concluded, the Biermeister team consisting of Meisner, Whoolery, Wojcik, Dennis Berry, Shari Thompson, Kim Kompoltowicz, John Bagley and yours truly, had finished a respectable 12th overall (10th actual) in 34:29:51 (averaging 7:21 per mile).

The team certainly had its fill of direction sheets, maps, bagels, powerbars, Gatorade, water, fruit and sweaty running clothes.

The event ended with a postrace pasta dinner and awards ceremony held at Benzie Central High School.

Many teams, however, remained on the course.

The Hash House Harriers of Ann Arbor finished the course in 41:40:25, nearly 13 hours behind the winners.

Fatigue and sore bones had definitely settled in for all the teams. Many of the vehicles gassed up for home, while others spent the night recovering in nearby Traverse City.

And many began to discuss how to fine-tune things for next year. Obviously you learn from your mistakes and you learn from experience.

Our team wholeheartedly agreed, no more camping at Hoeft State Park (near Rogers City) or at Higgins Lake State Park. Nice parks, but not what you need when you're only getting four or five hours sleep per

We decided to try something like Motel 6 for 1997. (They'll leave the light on for us.)

My goal is to try to finish with a full team somewhere down the road, and perhaps beat that 7minute pace. Rumor has it that the course will be scaled back to 260 to 265 miles next year. More auto detours will be planned. But the beauty of the Toyota

Great Lakes Relay is that there's alway something new thrown at the teams. And that never gets old. I sisting of Chomet, John Hunt, guess that's what keeps you

Make no mistake about it: This GMC Savana is huge. It can seat up to 15 people in five rows of seats. That's how big it is.

Take out all of the seats except the front, silly and there's a whopping 267.3 cubic feet of cargo area.

I'd almost bet an Eagle Talon would fit inside nicely, thank you very much.

And you'd also bet this van would be clunky. underpowered, clip a lot of corners (especially if you just traded it for a sports car), be hard to handle and just suck up your gas.

Well, it does that. Its EPA rating is a measly 14 mpg city, 18 mpg highway. But that's still not bad for a van this big. And it's got a 31-gallon fuel tank, so you won't run out any time soon. And it's surprising how easy it is to handle. This is not Miata-type handling, of course, but I never just as well as any minivan and highway driving and handling was superb. This rear-wheel drive Savana gives you a lot of get up and go, even with the Vortec 5000 V8 with 230 horsepower. That's not the standard engine, felt put out by the Savana. It handled city driving horses. I think the extra 30 horses are worth it. ic automatics. The choices include a Vortec 5700 he loves his vehicles so pristine and perfect.

however. Standard is the Vortec 4300 V6 with 200

The GMC Savana with the Vortec 5000 V-8 starts at $22,334. And for that price, there's a lot of standard equipment.

V8 (245 horses), Vortec 7400 V8 (with 290 horses) and the gotta-have-it 6.5-liter Turbo-Diesel V8 with 180 horsepower. By the way, the 4300 to 7400 designation is the liter size of the engine - 4.3 liter, 7.4 liter, etc. Didn't want to be called stupid for not pointing that out.

The Savana, of course, has a high step-in something you really don't want to wear a short skirt in. Especially you guys with short skirts. All kidding aside, this is definitely a man's vehicle.

Unless you've got a ton of kids or drive a tourbus or use it as a conversion van. Hmmmm. GMC sure sells a lot of these — about 35,000 a year.

I've got a neighbor who has a badly rusting yet quite durable - 1983 GMC Vandura, the model the Savana replaced this year, and he won't But you've got plenty of other choices to make. give it up. Joe's an electrician and stores all of his trailering equipment, locking rear differential, All of the powertrains come with 4-speed electron- electric things in there. That shocks me because

But Joe took a look at the Savana and said, "Nah, I'll keep mine." When he looked at the sticker price, he whistled. This from a guy who just bought a loaded Tahoe.

I don't know what a utility Savana would cost, but Joe said it was the same with or without the seats as a shell. For the sake of argument, I told him I believed him,

But still, the price isn't really bad. A Savana with the Vortec 5000 V-8 starts at $22,334. And for that price, there's a lot of standard equipment. And even with an option package that included power everything, air and heat (both front and rear), tinted glass, remote keyless entry and illuminated visors, the cost rose another $3,152.

aluminum wheels, 6-way power seats in front, leather-wrapped steering wheel and 8-person seating and the bottom line soared to $27,975. (Yes, I am doing a Mazda ad parody.)

About the cost of a loaded minivan, but you've got a much more substantial vehicle. And a much more versatile vehicle, as well.

The seats are relatively easy to remove, but you do need two people to get them but because they're so big and bulky. Also included are seat track hiders if you want the seats out and the inside of the van to look nice and pretty.

Safety stuff is all there including dual air bags, daytime running lamps, sidedoor guard beams on the front and side doors, center high-mounted stop lamp, child locks for the rear doors, ABS and brake/transmission interlock.

Did I mention styling? The rear treatment is real futuristic-looking, which is kinda neat and clean looking. The front of the Savana is smartly designed and the rounded corners make a lot of that new "GMC" statement. Could it be that a little bit of Pontiac excitement is creeping into GMC? Yes, I already know Pontiac and GMC are married now. My effort at being cute.

Technology is really in the forefront of the Savana. The power assist and speed-sensitive steering allows power that varies with speed. What that means to you and me is that steering effort is minimum while parking and much higher at cruising speeds to better give you a better feel of the road.

Cooling and climate control has been improved. The fan is deactivated during high speeds (because it's no longer needed). The fan switches on when the ignition is turned off to avoid radiator boil over. And if the cooling temps get out of control, the vehicle control module shuts down the air-conditioning compressor to avoid damage.

I even like the hinged rear doors. They open a full 165 degrees to let you have full access to the cargo area. Youdon't need to have a gorilla with you to open them — the doors give you a minimum opening and closing effort.

The Savana is a large, full-size van. If you need something that big, this is your first stop. You could also use it to transport your little sports car inside, at the very least.

Franklin Forest: Luxury housing, big lots

The extension of a municipal sewer line has made possible the creation of Franklin Forest, large, detached condominiums on large lots in Franklin.

A third of the 21 lots off 13 Mile between Telegraph and Franklin roads sold before the community's cul-de-sac road had been paved.

"Pre-sales before building speaks well of the subdivision, the location, qualities and features of the site itself," said Andrew Milia, the developer.

"I think that speaks well for the quality of the builder," Milia added. "We really like Hometowne (Building) because of the product they offer and their ability to work well with clients, the customer. They share our ideals of quality and the kind of product to go into this sub."

Lot sizes at Franklin Forest range from a half-acre to 1-1/2 acres. Buyers can build a plan already designed by Hometowne, customize a plan or start from scratch.

It will cost at least $450,000 to build in the sub, speculated Patrick O'Leary, Hometowne partner. But most homes probably will run at least $500,000 when all is said and done, Milia said.

Architectural controls include minimum size of 3,450 square feet, all-brick front, side-entry garage, dimensional or cedar shingles and sod lawns with underground sprinkler system.

Vinyl and aluminum siding aren't allowed.

Standard features in all plans presented by Hometowne include fireplace, air conditioning, double oven, cooktop, microwave and dishwasher, three-car garage, first-floor laundry and basement. "All (plans) have the same features," O'Leary said. "We do changes is size.

"What else will change is specs, marble, granite, versus laminate counter tops or standard ceramic tile," he said. "You can easily spend $100,000 in features or specs as we call it."

O'Leary's smallest plan, a colonial of just under 3,500 square feet, showcases a two-story foyer and two staircases.

The main living area contains a living room, dining room, library, family room with sloped ceiling, and kitchen/ nook with island and walk-in pantry.

Four bedrooms and and three full baths are upstairs.

The master, with cathedral ceiling, has a separate tub and shower, two walk-in closets, dualsink vanity and compartmentalized toilet.

Two bedrooms share a jackand-jill bath, while the fourth bedroom has its own full bath.

Base price is about $470,000. There's plenty to bring buyers into Franklin Forest. "All 21 lots either look out on a protected wetland area or a wooded area," Milia said of the 25-acre parcel. "We will build an minutes from Southfield, 10 to here a long time because they acre-and-a-half pond on site. It will always have some water ineverything the same. What it and be a very attractive fea-

Sample product: Custom work like this by Hometowne Building in Franklin Farms also will occur in Franklin Forest.

"Franklin has a charm that ulation." would be unique to northern Michigan, let alone in the 696, Telegraph, Northwestern corridor," O'Leary said.

"Franklin still has a very rural character," Milia added. "It's not a curb-and-gutter community.

"Geographically, it's one of the best areas," Milia said. "You're 15 minutes from Birmingham and Troy, 10 from Farmington Hills. You're minutes away from the work base of an affluent pop-

"Birmingham schools is another great draw," O'Leary added.

Milia anticipates a typical buyer as an auto executive or entrepreneur, 35 to 50 years of age who has owned two or three houses previously and probably has built before.

"I think a lot of people will be are making a significant investment," he said.

Each home in Franklin Forest will have its own well. There won't be sidewalks.

The property tax rate currently is $36.40 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $500,000 home in the site condo community would pay about $9,100 the first year.

An annual association fee of $1,200 is projected.

Robert and Diane Strager ordered a colonial from O'Leary for themselves and children Hunter and Sam.

"I had been looking for a long (810) 831-2550.

time," Robert said. "I happen to like the Franklin area. It's very pretty, very picturesque, densely treed. It has some character to it.

"I've been watching Pat build homes a couple of years," Robert said. "He's aggressive and builds a nice home. We tweaked the plan considerably. My wife had ideas she wanted to change, and he was very receptive. He's very flexible."

Anyone interested in Franklin Forest should contact O'Leary at Medicine cabinets have changed

(NAPS) - A glance at this brief history of medicine cabinets may be just what the doctor ordered.

The earliest recorded "medicine chest," found in Egypt, was a woven palm fiber case on a bamboo stand that fits into a wooden box.

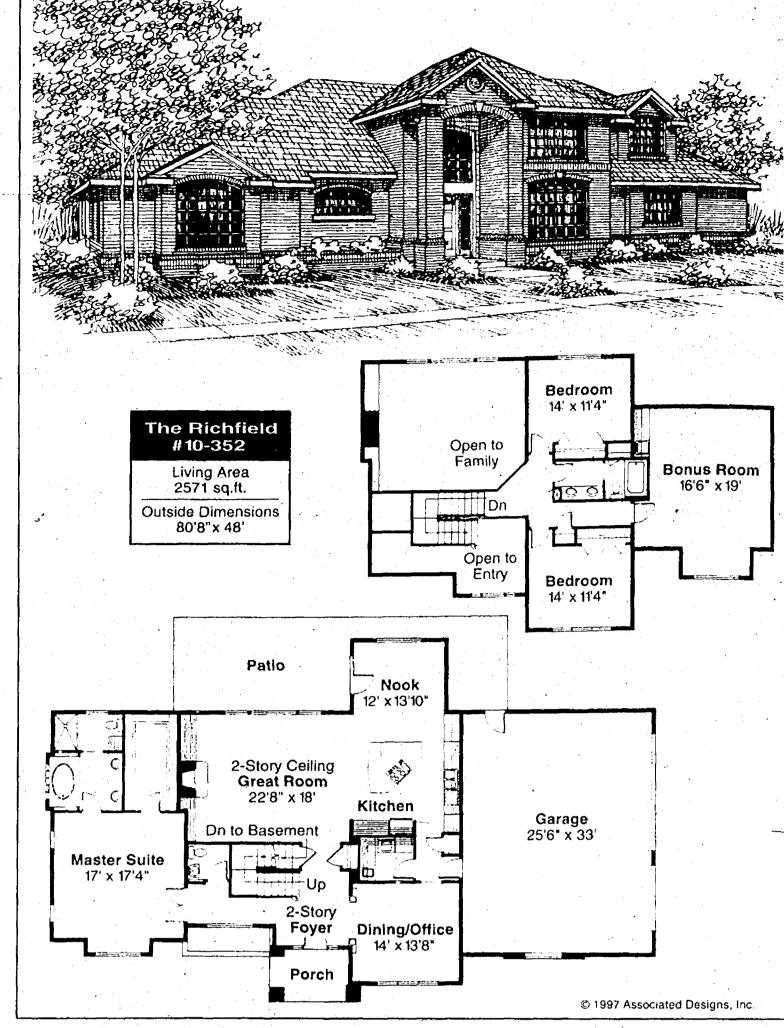

When bathrooms as we know them first came into being around the turn of the century, the old swing-door medicine cabinet with a framed mirror, placed above the lavatory to hold medicines and shaving equipment, was popular.

Today, there's a lot more out there than the typical medicine cabinet. Bathroom cabinets have evolved into multidoor storage with lighted mirrors. .

Some important features to consider when choosing a mirrored storage system for the bathroom (few call them medicine cabinets anymore), are aluminum construction which prevents rusting, quality mirrors both outside and inside the cabinet and seal tight closure which greatly reduces dust and moisture in the cabinet.

The Weekly Do-It-Yourselfer Building safely for children

By Reader's Digest Books FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

An important aim for every doit-vourselfer is to avoid building anything that might be hazardous for children. .

Here are some of the areas recognized as posing risks to chil-

A child's head can become entrapped in openings between slats, railings and other spaces that young children are likely to peek through. To avoid that hazard, keep those spaces to less than 3 1/2 inches wide.

■ Small parts can be a choking hazard for children under age 3. Make sure that no toy or removable part of furniture (such as a knob) is less than 1 3/4 inches in

■ Sharp corners and thin, sharp edges on drawers, coffee tables and other furniture can cause more than scratches and bruises. Remember that children are short - a hazard that might jab you in the thigh is at a child's head and eye level. Round all exposed corners and edges that children may encounter - or pad and tape them.

■ Pinch and crush points can cause painful injuries. These are tricky to assess because adults don't have tiny fingers and wouldn't think of grabbing things the way children often do. To prevent finger pinching, enlarge any opening that might admit a three-sixteenths diameter rod so that it is enough for a one-half-inch rod. Example of a pinch point to avoid: a wagon with wheels mounted close to the wagon bed, where tiny fingers could be caught when the rider grabs the side of the wagon.

■ The leading causes of child injury from toy chests and boxes are falling lids, pinching hinges and entrapment leading to suffocation. Always equip a lid with a positive support mechanism and never with an automatic locking device. Drill ventilation holes so that a trapped child can breathe. Make the gap between the front edges of the box and the lid at least one-half-inch wide, so small fingers can't be crushed by a closing lid.

■ Children can pull a large piece of furniture over on top of themselves. A child, for example, may try to climb up the front of a dresser using the drawers as steps. Bolt large pieces such as dressers, chest of drawers and bunk beds to the baseboard or the studs in the wall.

■ Unstable large toys are also dangerous. Keep the design of wagons, hobby horses and the like relatively wide and low, to reduce tipability. Test such toys on their "worst case", positions. You may decide to add stops to rockers, or outrigger supports at the side of a toy to eliminate instability.

■ Children might strangle if a collar, drawstring or hood on their clothing becomes entangled. Make sure that cribs, bunk beds, railings, outdoor play equipment and similar items are free of projections that clothing might catch on. Also avoid dressing children in clothing that is oversized or has a drawstring.

■ Because children place toys in their mouths, make sure the finish on a toy is nontoxic. On wooden toys, no finish is safest, are also considered safe. In non-" toxic paints, the safest choices" are those sold in arts and crafts stores. Look for the label of the Arts and Crafts Materials Institute or the words, "Conforms to ASTM D-4236" on the label.

Vision treatment

Using a revolutionary new procedure, Henry Ford Health System ophthalmologists can quickly and painlessly correct severe nearsightedness.

During Laser In-Situ Keratomileusis (LASIK), an ophthalmologist uses a small mechanical scalpel to raise a flap of the cornea. Then the surface of the eye is reshaped with a excimer laser so that light focuses correctly on the retina.

This technique is a significant advance over older methods, including radial keratotomy (RK) and photo refractive keratectomy (PRK). "RK can weaken the cornea and only works on mild cases of nearsightedness," said Dr. David Bogorad, M.D., director of Refractive Surgery Services at Henry Ford. This new method is effective even on severe cases of near sightedness, he Nearsightedness and farsightedness result when the eye improperly focuses light on the retina. According to Bogorad, PRK heals slowly. Patients require a special contact lens for approximately three days and eye drops for up to four months. LASIK patients don't require the contact lens and generally require only one week of eye drops.

"The primary advantage of LASIK is the faster recovery time," said Bogorad. "Patients usually return to work within two days."

There are risks associated with LASIK, as is true with any surgical procedure. Those interested in the procedure should discuss the risks with a specialist in refractive surgery.

A patient will spend only five minutes under the laser and in approximately 10 minutes, the operation will be complete. Additional time is spent planning the surgery in advance and in followup care.

The procedure itself is painless. Needles are not used, only freezing drops. Patients may experience some discomfort in the first 12 hours after the operation.

LASIK should only be performed by an ophthalmologic surgeon well-acquainted with the Henry Ford Health System Eye Care Services began using LASIK in March. The procedure is new to the United States, but has been used in. Europe since 1991.

Lab update

Quicker turn-around times and cost savings are just two of the benefits that will be passed on to patients thanks to the renovation of Botsford General Hospital's Catherization Lab/Special Procedure Room.

The combined lab, which houses state-of-theart imaging equipment, now enables skilled, cross-trained personnel to perform more invasive procedures in a shorter amount of time. Procedures performed at the lab include cardiac catherizations, invasive angiographies and vascular interventions.

A member of the Botsford Health Care Continuum, Botsford General Hospital is a 336-bed teaching facility serving Farmington Hills and its surrounding communities. It is affiliated with the Michigan State University College of Osteopathic Medicine.

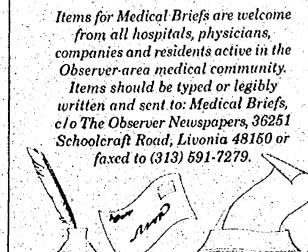

Women's health study

Henry Ford Health Care System-West Bloomfield Department of Obstetrics/Gynecology has been awarded a grant from the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research to study the treatment of dysfunctional uterine bleeding in premenopausal women.

This two-year study will compare health outcomes and relative costs of hysterectomy as compared to endometrial ablation or medical management including oral contraceptive use and other treatment.

Each participant will be randomly assigned to one of three treatment arms. The study population will be women seen for dysfunctional uterine bleeding who have failed therapy with oral contraceptives, progestins or non-steroidal antiinflammatory agents and who no longer wish to bear children.

To be eligible, a woman must have completed childbearing, be premenopausal, not smoke, have failed previous treatment and be willing to commit to 24 months of followup. For more information on the DUBIT study, contact Dr. Brent N. Davidson, division head, Oakland Region, at Henry Ford Medical Center-West Bloomfield. Information is also available from study coordinator Linda A. Robarge at (248) 661-7006 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays. (You may leave a message at any time.)

Head injury patient travels road to recovery

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI SPECIAL WRITER

David Lyall not only survived a devastating accident that led to brain surgery, but his recovery spawned new goals and released inner reflections that may have been forever búried.

In the wake of the tragic injuries suffered by the Detroit Red Wings, Lyall is proof that recovery is possible. But not everyone is as lucky. It's estimated that 100,000 people die annually from head injuries and more than 700,000 have injuries severe enough to require hospitalization. Of those people, between 50,000 and 90,000, have intellectual or behavioral problems that keep them from returning to a regular life, according to the Michigan Head Injury Alliance.

Lyall was standing on the back of a pit cart, which is a modified golf cart, when the driver swerved and Lyall was knocked off. He was taken to a hospital in Ohio, treated and released. Lyall said he doesn't remember driving back to Michigan, but when he started acting odd and appeared delirious his girlfriend rushed him to St. Mary Hospital in Livonia.

"I was conscious and talking, but I don't recall much of it," he said. "They rushed me to surgery to remove the dried blood and damaged tissue." There was hemorrhaging and Lyall doesn't remember much of the two weeks he was in the hospital, but it was the beginning of a long road to recovery. The biggest strides came during the first two months. He struggled to regain his balance by doing simple things like sitting up in bed, standing, and light housework.

"As soon as I was able, without getting sick to my stomach, I started exercising," said Lyall, 39. He bicycles a minimum of 50 miles weekly and exercises at least one hour every morning. This rigorous routine strengthened his mind, body and will.

Secting goals

"I had to have a focus," he said. In high school. Lyall was an athlete and he raced cars as a teen-ager and young adult. Then he started driving a truck and, "I let myself go (physically)," he explained. In his 30s, he went back to being a race car crew member, but hadn't raced since those early years. Lyall planned to start again with a 1995 Mustang he was building when the accident happened. He hopes to race it next year.

About going into a dangerous sport after such a close encounter with death, Lyall said, his ambition has strengthened his determination to get well. "I sat home for three months wondering 'What am I going to do?' " he said. "I set my goals and so far I've conquered everything I set out to do. I'm probably in as good a shape as I was when I was an athlete in high school."

Another dream was to build a home, Lyall said during a phone interview from his new home in Lyon Township. "Getting myself back to normal is my main objective," he said. "My doctor believes I'm 110 percent.'

In December, he was well enough to go back to work as a senior technician on prototype development at Roush Industries in Livonia. Now he's working six days a week.

"I was supposed to be off for six months or longer, but the doctor and I thought I was ready to go back," he said. Another positive outcome from the accident, Lyall said, has been a renewed relationship with his sister, Pam Canfield, with whom he was close until high school when they launched their different lives.

"She's been very helpful to me through all this - she's a saint," he said, adding that many close friends have been constant sources of support, too.

His doctor, Dr. Arturo Paz, a neurosurgeon with St. Mary Hospital, said he was delighted. with Lyall's progress. But there was no telling initially how well he would do. "Our nervous system controls pretty much everything in the body and if any part of the nervous system is injured something will be disturbed," Paz said, adding that six months after an accident doctors have an idea how extensive the recovery will be. The patient, can however, continue to improve after that time. "The idea is to remove clots surgically and to give more room to the brain so there won't be swelling," Paz said. "You want the brain to have a lot of room so it can recover."

The outlook for people with head injuries is getting better. Treatments, like removing blood clots, lessening the pressure in the head and making sure all the chemicals, like oxygen and other natural gases, are in order provide a healthy environment for the brain to recover. Paz said. The type of impact to the head will determine the outcome, he added, stressing the importance of taking precau-

He recommends against ever diving head first. Always use helmets, Paz said, when you ride a bicycle or motorcycle and avoid sports that could injure the head, like boxing.

Variety of patients

In his Livonia practice, Paz said, he sees people injured in accidents caused by elderly people who don't have proper reflexes or sight. "The responsibility is on the adults who are with these elderly people to say 'This guy is not a safe driver.' Paz also sees patients injured by drivers under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Lisa Bechard, a physical therapist at St. Mary Hospital, said in her 15 years experience she's seen a full range of recovery - from patients who return to their normal activities to others who remain in a vegetative state. And many of the accidents may have been prevented if, for instance, seat belts were worn or other safety measures were taken, she said.

"One woman was riding her bike with her kids, she hit a bump in the road, fell off and hit her head and now she can't care for her children," Bechard said, adding that a lot of people still aren't wearing helmets. "Don't be too embarrassed to wear them."

Susan Nacci, an occupational therapist at St. Mary Hospital, works with patients who have head injuries and can't remember how to do basic daily functions, like brushing their teeth. "The earlier we can uncover deficits and identify problems the better the chances are for the person being discharged earlier and getting appropriate help," Nacci said, adding that therapists and doctors have to work as a team helping one another understand patients' needs.

Her patients have been varied, too. One man, for instance, made an extension for his ladder to prune trees. It broke as soon he stepped on it. It's not uncommon, Nacci said, to see construction people falling off beams. roofers slipping off buildings and people injured from boxing, football and hockey. Some patients are lucky, like Lyall, and the accident becomes a catalyst for change.

"I've been from the bottom to the top," he said. "I think I'm probably farther ahead than I ever was as far as looking at things. There's no limitation after something like this."

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"WHICH IMPROVEMENTS ADD RESALE VALUE"

From an investment point of view, money is wasted when improvements are made that will not add to the resale value of your home when you decide to sell. Here is a partial list of the items that add to resale value somewhat commensurate with their cost:

Bedroom

Adding a third bedroom to a two bedroom home is usually a good investment. Enlarging from a four to a five bedroom house may actually diminish its resale value because their is a larger number of potential buyers for a four bedroom. Bedroom additions must be accomplished in a manner that does not disrupt the existing floor plan. Don't, as an example, add a bedroom that can only be entered by passing through another bedroom.

Bath

An extra full or half bath almost always adds greater value than its initial cost. Like bedrooms, however, the location of this improvement will determine its actual value to a potential buyer. A new bath in the basement will bring very little or no extra dollars upon resale. A new bath off the master bedroom could have a major positive effect upon the selling price.

Kitchen

Improvements in the kitchen usually pay off. New appliances, flooring, counter tops and cupboards are worthwhile. A great kitchen can be the deciding factor in choosing your home over that of a competitor.

ADVICE: Deciding to buy or sell or improve your home are big decisions with big consequences. Remember to use the services of a Realtor when making big decisions regarding real estate. They know the market.

Writing a classified ad that gets results-whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise-is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifleds. What would you like to know about the Item, service or Job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading Information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

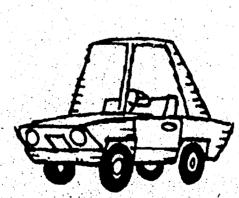

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buver's time. If you advertise the price of the Item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys Indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in-kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

Are we having fun yet?

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Are you a supervisor or manager looking for a way to boost productivity in your department? Management consultant Mat Weinstein, author of the book "Managing to Have Fun," would suggest you find ways to inject a big dose of fun into your work environment. Weinstein, founder of Playfair Inc. in Berkeley, California, contends that introducing more fun into a work setting can benefit the bottom line by boosting employee morale, lovalty, and productivity.

"What keeps people motivated, in large part, is a nurturing environment," says Weinstein. Before we ask employees to deliver service with a smile, we first have to ask ourselves, 'Are we giving them something to smile about?"

Weinstein contends that employee who have more fun at work convey their enthusiasm to customers, creating better service and customer relationships, and more sales as a result. "People like to do business with people who like to do business," he asserts.

Karen Donnalley, inside sales executive/general business for IBM's North America Sales Center in Atlanta, agrees. Donnalley, who has such activities as Crazy Sock Day, Crazy Hat Day, and a recent 'Ocho de Mayo' Celebration, says, "I believe happy employees project their job satisfaction on the telephone to customers. I see a direct correlation between the fun activities we do and the production and revenues that are subsequently produced."

The telecommunications company Sprint has firsthand experience with the bottom line benefits of fun too. 3,000 employees of Sprints Business Division participated in "National Fun at Work Day," an event sponsored by Weinstein's Playfair Inc. For the event, Sprint employees formed 12-25 person teams, each of which was given a disposable camera. Each team then had to pick 10-15 cliches from a list of 20, and create photographic representations of those phrases in just 90 minutes.

Commenting on this 'Photo Safari' activity, Margery Tippen, vice president of small business marketing for Spring Business, said its purpose was, "to renew our associates' commitment to the strength of teamwork, as well as the use of creativity to increase their producinjected fun into her sales environment with number of team building exercises that incorporance and encourage fun, Edith Esquenazi, public relations program manager for Sprint Business said, "Since implementing them, we have noticed that employee attention, retention, morale and most importantly, productivity, are up."

Weinstein believes reduced health care costs can also be a byproduct for companies whose employees have more fun at work. "Dr. Lee Berk at Loma Linda University Medical Center in Loma Linda, California has done cutting edge research which has proven that spontaneous lymphocyte blastogenesis occurs during laughter and play," says Weinstein. That means that during ties of prolonged laughter, T cells, which are an important part of your immune system, are produced in much greater numbers." Happier employees, assets Weinstein, are likely to be healthier employ-

When asked if any of his clients have seen laughter produce a measurable impact on their health expenditures, Weinstein pointed to an incident involving the Bank of America. "After the bank initiated a 'Laugh a Day Challenge' to its Northern California employees, the human resource department received the 'Challenge' was a waste of employees' time and company resources," recounted Weinstein. The bank's vice president of compensation and benefits responded to the letter by writing, The monthly Be Your Best Challenges are no joke. They are specifically designed to help bank profitability by improving employee health, productivity, and morale... More and more health research now shows that laughter is one of the best stress releases, and stress is our fastest-growing workers' compensation

If you're not a supervisor or manager, can you be a catalyst for fun without getting yourself in trouble? Weinstein says "yes," and illustrates with the story of an employee who worked on the line at Morton Thiokol. The employee, says Weinstein, proposed various fun activities to his boss, making each a reward for meeting a specific production goal. Although the boss was initially skeptical, Weinstein says he ended up cooperating enthusiastically after seeing each proposed incentive produce the desired result.

Leave policy pays off for ad firm

By Carol Kleiman, Tribune Media In the late 1970s, when Chris Pulleyn's two kids were youngsters, she sometimes had to miss work if one of them got sick.

"It wasn't that often, but for little things, like bad cold and ear infections -- you know, the things they don't go to school for -- I was the one who stayed home," says Pulleyn.

And what excuse did she give her employer? *For a longer, serious illness, I was upfront, but for smaller things, well, frankly, sometimes I would prevaricate," said Pulleyn, who has been in advertising since 1966. I would say I was sick, under the weather. I would sound pathetic.

I felt guilty about having to stay home with a sick child because my bosses were always so good to me, so understanding. Even though I never left things undone at work, I felt giving my real reason would have been an admission of weakness.

"But I hated to lie."

own advertising agency in 1982, she vowed that her employees would never have to go through the same unpleasant machinations.

Today, Pulleyn, 48, is CEO and chairwoman of the Buck & Pullen advertising agency, based in Rochester, N.Y. Her annual billings are $25 million; among her accounts are Eastman Kodak Co., Xerox Corp. and Bausch & Lomb Pulleyn has a staff of 42, eight fewer employees than the minimum number of 50 that would make the agency subject that the federal Family and Medical Leave Act.

But Pulleyn's progressive personnel policy of letting employees decide how much time they need to be absent for such personal matters as a birth or illness, child care, elder care or a death far exceed any governmental regulations.

"Our philosophy is that families come first," she said. "After all, we require a great deal of our people, especially in times of pressure. We And that's why, when Pulleyn started her save money by retaining good people and get great work done because we understand about families."

"At Buck & Pulleyn, she says, "If you're sick, you stay home. If your kid is sick and you can't find a sitter, you stay home. If you have a baby, you decide how much time you'll need. If your parents need you in an emergency, if there's a death, you handle your work like a professional but you take care of your family responsibilities. Any you never feel you have to lie about it."

Karen McCredy, an assistant account executive, is one of Pulleyn's happy employees. "I had originally worked out a three-month maternity leave with the company when I was pregnant with my son," said McCey, mother of two. "But when Scott came early, I was told to take as much time a I needed, no questions asked. I came back after six months and was reminded that if I needed more time, I could have it."

Here's how other employees have benefited from the policy:

•When Valerie Tyrrel's friend was dying of AIDS, the desktop publisher took "two-to-three hour lunches every day so I could tend to him."

 Chris Lyons, creative supervisor, asked about the firm's paternity leave when his daughter was born. He was told to come back to work when his wife was "strong enough to go it ·alone." He did.

•When copy editor Jennifer Potter Schwartz's father was dying, "they allowed me a lot of time off without question or complaint.'

Though Pulleyn doesn't "count the hours or days someone is gone," she says the policy works because it's based on the honor system "Everyone wants it to work."

Occasionally, people have taken advantage, but not more than once. "It's like the immune system that rejects the foreign body," Pulleyn said. The few people who were irresponsible

At Work

Foreman's lax attitude should be reported

By Lindsey Novak Tribune Media

Q: Our department foreman has fooled management into thinking he is qualified and in control of his workers. In reality, he surrounds himself with people who kiss up to him, but are lacking in skills. He also allows a few of his people to drink on the premises, which, because of the machinery, could easily cause someone to be injured.

It was one reported to his supervisor, who initially acted with great concern; but with only five years to retirement, he doesn't want to deal with the problem. If I quit because of the situation, I will have thrown away all the time I have put into this company. What can be done?

A: I understand not wanting to be put in a dangerous position, but don't quit because of someone else' incompetence. Drinking on the job while working with machinery is too serous to ignore. And five years to retirement is no excuse or your boss not to get involved. He's being paid as a supervisor and should act like one.

- Because the drinking continued after it was reported, make sure it gets reported again (either directly or anonymously), but during a time when the top managers can catch their employees in the act. They will certainly take it seriously, since the company will be held legally responsible for any injuries that occur. If that happens, your boss may be out of a job before his retirement date.

LIVING A LIE IS NO WAY TO START A NEW JOB

Q: When my parents died together five years ago, I left the work force and lived on the money I was left. I'm in my 30s, have an excellent education and work record, but how will I explain my leaving the workforce. I'm afraid employers will think I'm flanky for what I

My friends say to make up some story about being divorced with children that now live with their father, or having a failed business. I'd like to be honest, because the truth comes out easier. Any advice?

A: Not only would the truth serve you better, but more importantly, could you continue living a lie? If you feel better telling the truth, your sincerity will come through in an interview. But remember, being honest doesn't mean reporting all the personal details of the situation. In short, be open while using good judgement.

Taking time off to grieve is understandable, especially after losing both your parents at once. Living off inherited money until it runs out is a bit short-sighted.

Depending on how you present the situation, some interviewers may still feel that you acted irresponsibly. But if you persist in your job search no matter how people respond, chances are you'll find someone who is willing to give you a chance.

NEW JOB SEEKER CRIES OUT, GIVE ME A CHANCE

Q: I graduated from high school in 1993 and could only afford one semester of college. Since then, I've been looking for jobs at airports, retail stores and data entry, but no one will hire me. I have filled out many application, but everyone wants experienced workers and I haven't worked in two years. How do I get a job with no experience?

A: There are many jobs available for people who did not attend college - waitresses, telemarketers, retail store sales clerks, and cashiers at grocery stores, gas stations, movie houses, etc.

If you have not been hired by anyone for two years, the reason is probably not due to lack of experience. It might be the way you show AtWorkbyLN@AOL.com up for interviews. Even if a job does not require that you dress up, applicants should arrive neatly dressed and clean when they are interviewing. This does not mean you have to buy a designer suit, but you are going to be judged on how you present yourself, physically and verbally.

Also, don't chew gun, don't carry food with you to much on as you go from one employer to the next and don't walk in listing to music on headphones.

Having problems on the job? Write to Lindsey Novak in care of Tribute Media Services, Inc., 435 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 1500, Chicago, Ill. 60611. She can also be contacted

Keep Out: Separate private life from office space

By Alice Bredin. Tribune Media

I have been slipping into bad habits in my home office recently. Namely, going back to my desk at about 8:30 or 9 p.m. and working until midnight or 1 a.m.

Nothing is wrong with putting in some nighttime hours when you work at home. One of the pleasures of working at home is having a flexible schedule that enables you to work when it suits your time frame. Summer is a particularly great time for this kind of schedule, if it frees you up to enjoy being outside on beautiful summer days.

The kind of pattern I have slipped into, however, is not so positive. The dangerous thing is that I am starting to count on the nighttime hours to stay up to date with my work. I am semiproductive during the day, but often save proposal writing and other work for nighttime.

The downside of this habit is that it gradually trains you to be less productive during your weekdays because you count on the night or weekend to get loads of work done.

If you find yourself slipping into the same kind of pattern, you need to reclaim your workdays for your own. If you doubt the feasibility of cutting out your nighttime work, keep in mind that you usually finished most of your work before a vacation, a long weekend when you will be out of town or your honeymoon.

The following steps are my plans for taking back my private time. I hope they help you do the same.

•Sketch out your day. Nighttime work is often a result of bad planning. Before you know it, the day has evaporated and you still have important items to complete. Each morning, make a short list of the items you must accomplish that day. Start on those first.

• Take control of interruptions. If you let phone calls, staff or other distractions keep you from completing tasks during the day, start to control when they impinge on your work time. For example, tell staff that you are unavailable for the morning and ask them to save all questions for later in the day. Turn off the ringer on your phone and return calls every few hours.

• Ignore your house. Taking care of errands during the day is fine, but if they have become a larger and larger part of your work day, you need to curtail for a few weeks without doing and personal errands or tasks during the day. This will break you of the habit. Once you have learned to handle these chore again, you can slowly reintroduce then into your routine.

•Start earlier. The problem with working late is that then you sleep late and a vicious cycle is created. I broke it this week by forcing myself up early. Day one was tough, but it gets a little easier each day.

•Pull your personal life out of your office. If you keep your flight reservation for your weekend away, your personal phone numbers and items you are likely to need in the evening in your office, you will be lured back to your work area and may start burning the midnight oil.

Instead, have a place for writing thank-you notes, storing personal phone numbers and keeping other personal items organized that is separate from your office.

• Put e-mail in its place. Email is a great productivity tool, and I rely heavily on it. However, it can also be a time sink if you let it run you, rather than the other way around.

Have a few times of the day when you check e-mail, rather than logging on every hour to see who is trying to reach you. Answer only essential e-mails during work hours, save social messages for the end of the day when you are winding down.

•Check your priorities. If you simply cannot accomplish all of your work without regularly

No, this isn't a joke. And yes, the decimal is in the right place.

We don't blame people for being skeptical. But you really do get things like dual airbags, dent-resistant bodyside panels, a steel timing chain and a stainless steel exhaust. All for an M.S.R.P. of about $12,000. (Which is probably why the SL was rated "The Best Overall Value" by IntelliChoice .*) Now, if you still have questions, just come by and we'll do our best to answer them. Oh, and for the record, our math skills are actually pretty good. SATURN. SATURN of ANN ARBOR 313-769-3991.
