Baracy gets nod to lead district

Greg Baracy will lead the Wayne-Westland school district after trustees voted 6-1 Monday to hire him as superintendent. He started in the district as a vice principal.

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON

District administrators bid farewell to resigning superintendent Duane Moore and simultaneously welcomed his successor, Greg Baracy, following a 6-1 decision by trustees to hire Baracy.

Baracy, a district employee since 1988, was first hired as the vice principal of the William D. Ford Vocational Technical Center followed by promotion to principal, before he made the transition to the central administrative offices as assistant superintendent in

"I'm delighted by the board's action," said Baracy. "It will be a privilege to serve the district and the community in this capacity." While all of the Wayne-Westland trustees verbally expressed their support of Baracy as the natural replacement for Moore, board member Ed Turner prefaced his "no" vote with the statement that his opposing vote was not "directed toward Greg Baracy but in the manner of which this selection was made."

Turner said he battled for a long time with whether or not the board should have conducted a national search in spite of Baracy's knowledge and experience he will bring to the job. Turner said trustees would be wise to search to "guarantee the best candidate was appointed to the position."

Trustee David Cox said he believed "Greg Baracy has been on a four-year job interview for the district" since he accepted the post as assistant superintendent of general administration in

Cox said he was more than satisfied with Baracy's track record and put faith in Moore's recommendation, knowing Moore had "his house in order" before his departure and recommend a replacement worthy of the

Firefighters learn water rescue at Bailey pool

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

When firefighters respond to a diving or drowning accident, they must react quickly to save a person from losing his or her life in the water.

However, they can't be too eager and actually dive into the water to save the victim. Firefighters receive special training for such accidents.

They instead learn to slowly enter the water and use an "in-line stabilization" technique learned from the city's water safety instructors which is designed to prevent spinal nerve damage in diving accidents. Westland officials believe the training of the firefighters by the water safety instructors is the only program of its kind in the state. About 70 Westland firefighters receive annual training for 90 minutes to two hours on the stabilization technique, according to Mark Neal, assistant fire chief.

"We have a lot of rescues in water for young people who dive into water too shallow," Neal said. "We have to make sure we handle it just right because of the potential for spine spine. damage."

Unique training

Rescue operations do not call for firefighters to dive in the water after a victim. In-line stabilization calls for firefighters to enter the water slowly, so they do not disturb the water and create a wave that might move a victim and further injure their nerves or

Monroe, Wilson elementary schools sold for $750,000

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON STAFF WRITER

The Wayne-Westland school board approved the sale Monday of the former Monroe and Wilson elementary schools for $750,000.

Both properties were sold to real estate developers.

The properties, referred to as "surplus," were closed by district officials in an effort to consolidate aging buildings where enrollment was steadily decreasof the properties. Based on the "net present value method," the district's finance subcommittee made determinations to accept both offers, said Patricia Brand, assistant superintendent of business.

Monroe Elementary School, located at 5021 Biddle St. in the city of Wayne and closed in 1995, was purchased by Real Estate Concepts L.L.C., for $250,000, said Brand.

The subcommittee, under the guidance of the finance director, also recommended the school board accept $500,000 from Westland-based Galaxy

Builders for the site of the former Wilson Elementary School. Both purchases were approved.

Located at 1255 S. Wildwood and adjacent to the 65-acre woodlands known as Sassafras Trails, Wilson was closed nearly 15 years ago as a fully operational elementary school but remained opened to house an Indian education learning center, Wilson Preschool Special Education and Wilson-Sparkey Head Start program. Outside contractors have occupied various classrooms and portions of the building in the last few years, including a private day care center that currently operates inside the vacant build-

Superintendent Greg Baracy said the buyer, Galaxy Builders, has plans to "construct homes on the property."

Galaxy spokesman Brian Kallen said plans for the development cannot be confirmed at this time until they receive the appropriate executed documents from the school district validating the acceptance of their offer.

Fatal Ohio crash involved van from Spectrum

By TONY BRUSCATO

Ohio Highway Patrol Lt. Gabriel Ferencz called a Tuesday accident "the worst multiple vehicle accident I've seen in my 22 years with the Highway

He was describing a deadly scene where a Livonia-based social services program van was crushed in a four-vehicle wreck Four Detroit teens and the van's driver were thrown from the Spectrum Human Services van and killed. Five others were critically injured.

The teens were just 35 miles from their destination, the Cedar Point amusement park, when the accident occurred.

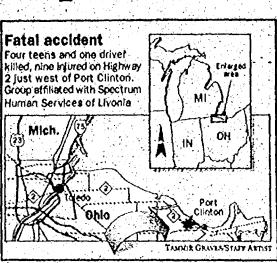

"It was the worst, not only because of the five deaths, but also seeing the victims thrown from the vehicle, clinging to life," added Lt. Ferencz. "Knowing they were all just teenagers makes it especially tough."

There wasn't anything the Spectrum The semi clipped the left rear corner of van driver could do to avoid the accident. As Ferencz put it, "they were just in the wrong place at the wrong time."

According to the Ohio Highway Patrol report, a westbound tanker truck was stopped on Ohio state Highway 2 behind a car that was waiting to turn left. After the car turned, the tanker attempted to accelerate and continue. A semitrailer came from behind at a high rate of speed and swerved to avoid hitting the tanker.

Baracy said the same outcome is expected for the school property in Wayne with the probable demolition of both facilities to make way for future development.

"The money from the sale of the properties will be directed to offset the district's deficit." said

Board of education member Ed Turner said in light of the slashes public education funding has suffered, across the board,

"there's no way of explaining how badly the money is needed.

"With all the recent vetoes and so forth the money is needed now more than before," said Turner.

Trustees unanimously approved the sale of the Wilson school property, however, school board vice president Mathew McCusker was the sole opponent of the Monroe proposal in a 6-1 vote, based on the developer's offer of a land contract.

"I'll be voting no because I have a strong aversion to land contracts," said McCusker.

The Spectrum van was smashed, reeling to a stop in a nearby soybean field. The semi also hit a second van that also landed in the field.

Lt. Ferencz told the Observer the passenger side of the Spectrum van was sheared off, exposing the entire inside of the "Five of the ten passengers in the van were ejected from the vehicle," recalled Ferencz. "Being thrown from the van certainly contributed to the fatality count and severity of the injuries."

The drivers of the tanker and semi, as well as passengers in the second van, were all treated at local hospitals. None suffered life-threatening injuries. Ferencz, the Sandusky post commander, says an accident of this magnitude was inevitable.

"Our statistics show the most dangerous state road in Ottawa County is this part of Route 2, which downgrades from four lanes to two at a high rate of speed," said Ferencz. "It's very difficult for drivers to adjust their speed on this stretch. causing numerous accidents."

The Spectrum program victims are from Detroit. The driver of the van, also from Detroit, and a relative of his died at the scene. The driver's two children were also injured. The van was one of four Spectrum vehicles that was on its way to Cedar Point on Tuesday.

The trip was reportedly a reward for teens doing well in the Milestone program.

The non-profit social services agency also provides foster care, family preservation programs, employment training programs and group homes for young adults, among its many ser-

Roger Swaninger, president of Spectrum Human Services, said Wednesday the primary focus is now on providing therapists, clergy and staff to work with the survivors and their families.

"Our prayers are with all of those involved in the accident as well as all of their families, friends and staff who have been impacted by this horrible tragedy," said Swaninger. "If you have kids of your own, it just makes you want to go home and hug them."

Spectrum has been in the news recently for the agency's effort to move their offices and a medium-security youth facility into the former 53,000square-foot Montgomery Hospital on Joy Road between Inkster and Middlebelt, on the Westland-Livonia border - an effort opposed by residents in both Livonia and Westland. The facility is a former psychiatric hospital.

The city of Westland moved to block the youth facility portion of the plan. The city's action was recently upheld in Wayne County Circuit Court.

Other board members said they felt Baracy's appointment would ensure a smooth transition following Moore's two-year stint in district at a time when Wayne-Westland finds itself facing an uphill financial battle and an impending deficit.

"I believe we're doing the best thing for the district at this time," said Debra Fowlkes, school board president. "We don't need a breakdown at this time and Greg can offer the necessary continuity we are hoping side, instead of forward, so you don't create as much of a wave." Neal said.

On a positive note, the Westland administrator said he's looking forward to the upcoming school year and has prepared himself educationally and professionally for this moment.

Once the firefighter reaches the victim, the firefighter uses his forearms like splints on the victim's neck and back and hold them steady along the victim's torso. The firefighter places one hand on the back of the victim's head and the other on the victim's chin.

The victim's head and neck are kept parallel to keep the body "in-line" or stable. A floatable, heavy foam tube is used to keep the victim and firefighter afloat until the firefighter can swim to a backboard.

The backboard is made of plastic and helps with stabilization. It is used for auto accidents where a back and spinal injury occurs. It contains head blocks for each side of the head, to keep it in place.

The water actually gives firefighters support. "In the water you have a three-dimensional aspect, in using the water, forearms and walking with victims," Neal said. "It creates a special kind of rescue, a technique you couldn't do on land."

The training is important during a time where nerves could be damaged if the victim is moved. "A person may have a fractured vertebrae that isn't displaced, or paralysis may be temporary,' Neal said. "If you don't stabilize the victim, the potential is there to sever the spine."

'If you don't stabilize the victim, the potential is there to sever the spine.'

Stabilization is used

Debbie Lindquist, supervisor at the Bailey pool for the city of Westland, said Westland's lifeguards have received cardiopulmonary resuscitation training from firefighters, so the in-line stabilization sometimes "intimidates" the water safety instruc-

"During the firefighters training for backboarding and the stabilization, we work well together," Lindquist said.

In fact, instructors used the inline stabilization on Saturday when a swimmer dove into the shallow end of Bailey pool. The victim was OK, Lindquist said.

Rescuers would rather err on the side of safety, Lindquist said.

"You just don't know. We would prefer to stabilize them and backboard them up. You don't know until they get to the hospital and they get checked at a hospital."

Expect the unexpected

Firefighters must prepare for the unexpected in fighting fires.

The water training teaches them that some of their 90 pounds of equipment, namely their air tanks, float. Sometimes shipping docks can fill with water and create a problem for firefighters when battling a blaze.

That happened at the Textron fire two weeks ago when a firefighter fell into water collected from fire hoses in a shipping dock area. But that firefighter was prepared from his training and used his air tanks for a flotation device, Neal said.

The training also reminds firefighters to use their air tanks while underwater to breathe. They may not remember that or to kick off or remove their boots after falling into a dock area filled with water, Neal said, and the training teaches them not to panic.

"We have a lot of (manufacturers') shipping docks in town, and some may fill from sprinkler systems (during fires) or fire hoses, and a lot of that water can be collected," Neal said. "But you can also get that next to the Rouge River or at construction sites or swimming pools. We need to know that that equipment floats."

manders and captains receive the training. "You never know who will have to apply the (in-line stabilization) technique," Neal said. "Everybody has to work togeth-

Firefighters respond to about six or seven water rescue runs a year, so they never know when they may need to apply this training, Neal said.

The firefighters began the training three years ago. They are certified paramedics and receive Advanced Life Support training.

We would prefer to stabilize them and backboard them up.'

> Debbie Lindquist -pool supervisor

Use caution

While firefighters are receiving professional training and encourage the public to rescue drowning victims, rescuers should exercise caution when pulling victims up from below the surface.

They should try to at least bring them to the surface, then call 9-1-1, Neal said. "It's best to dive to bring (the victim) to the surface, but they should attempt to stabilize head and neck areas," Neal said. "They should look at the depth of the water and the size of that person and try to assess the accident. If they're in the water, it's not a good idea to leave them there."

Neal was appreciative of the city's lifeguards who gave the firefighters training, particularly Lindquist. "Debbie is extremely. cooperative. She's always at the forefront to give us training."

Lindquist said Westland's water safety instructors trained firefighters from departments in six other communities this year.

Lawmaker hopes $21 million can be restored for schools

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON

State Sen. Loren Bennett pledged to Wayne-Westland school board members he will present "nothing less than the original proposal" to state legislators in an effort to restore the original $20.8 million in special allocation funding vetoed by Governor John Engler.

Bennett, who appeared before trustees Monday evening, said the "governor did not veto the bill because he was opposed to the funding," but in light of the recent judgment in the Durant case that led Engler to veto all new categorical funding for districts, including Wayne-Westland's special allocation.

"Based on your needs and past history, this district is in the worst position financially in the state of Michigan," said Bennett.

The senator encouraged the board and the superintendent to remain optimistic as he will continue to rally for the necessary funding the district needs to avoid serious deficit problems.

Bennett said before Oct. 1, he hopes to present a new bill to the House that would earmark $20.8 million in allocations over an eight year period.

"I'm not sure I'll have the support in the House, but I won't settle for anything less than the original proposal. Other districts have needs too, but no district in the state was hurt more than Wayne-Westland." The bill that was slashed by Engler earlier this month would have provided $6 million over three years to help Wayne-Westland avoid a budget deficit for the coming school year. The district has been unable to completely recover from difficulties created by the 1994 passage of Proposal A.

"We've got work to do," said Duane Moore. Moore, who is leaving his Wayne-Westland superintendent position, made his comments after Bennett asked for the board's full support in presenting a new proposal to Legislators.

The senator agreed, adding Wayne-Westland would be in competition with other schools, who will become aware of their efforts, and try and compete for the same dollars.

"It's going to be a battle," said Debra Fowlkes, school board president. "But you've given us a ray of hope.'

Bennett urged the board not to have "false hope" but holds a "great deal of optimism we'll succeed at this." "I'm just not sure at what level."

Patricia Brand, assistant superintendent of business, said it's too early for the district to gauge how the veto will affect the deficit until they know for certain whether at-risk funding will be restored.

Without crunching the numbers, Brand estimated the deficit could rise by more than $1.2 million.

Bennett said the Legislature will return to session Sept. 23 and is hopeful the special funding will be recovered as a result. "Negotiations are ongoing as we speak as to at-risk funding, the Durant settlement and Wayne-Westland funding."

Athena winners strive to lend a helping hand

BY KIM MORTSON STAFF WRITER

he international Athena Award, presented to area residents who outwardly strive to promote the growth of women and their accomplishments, is awarded locally in Livonia, Canton and Garden City.

The Athena Award, endorsed by area Chambers of Commerce, originated in Lansing in 1980 after Realtor Martha Mayhood-Mertz found herself to be the only working woman serving as a director for the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Mertz was also dismayed to learn that in the 75year history of the chamber, only once had a woman been the recipient of a community award.

Seventeen years later, service organizations and local businesses select individuals, from communities such as Livonia, Canton and Garden City, not only for their professional achievements and community service, but also for actively and generously assisting others with their quest for professional excellence and leadership.

The Livonia Chamber of Commerce started presenting the Athena in 1988 thanks to the support of Action-Oldsmobile Nissan of Livonia who passed over sponsorship in 1994 to First of America Bank.

This spring, Athena award winners from Livonia gathered together in honor of the closing ceremonies of the International Athena Convention in Arranged by state Rep. Lyn Bankes, past Athena recipients in attendance included Laura Toy (1989), Livonia city treasurer; Jeanne Hildebrandt (1990), Livonia Mall manager; Joan McCotter (1991), Livonia city clerk; Alberta Muzzin (1992), owner. Dynamic People and executive director of the South Lyon Chamber of Commerce: Sister Francilene (1993), president, Madonna University; Bankes (1995), state representative; and 1996 winner Patricia Smith, law firm partner of Brashear, Tangora & Spence.

Saundra Florek, dean of marketing and development at Schoolcraft College and the 1994 winner did not attend the convention's closing ceremonies.

From Canton, 1997 winner Nicki Wilson, owner of the Decorating Den, participated in the program, said Carleigh Flaharty, Canton Chamber of Commerce.

Past Canton recipients have included Maria Holmes (1991). Media One: Frankie Middleton (1992), Better Built Fence; Janet Volante (1993), First of America Bank-Ford Road; Carol Felker, (1994) Keyline Services; Phyllis Wordhouse (1995), Wordhouse Financial Planning/Education; Bonnie Berg (1996) Bart's Rustic Lawn Furniture.

Amelia Oliverio, president of the Garden City Business & Professional Women (BPW) said the chamber, in partnership with the BPW, began recognizing the achievements of local women in 1996. Most recent winners were Susan (Pepere) McGraw (1996), Radio AAHS; and Kay Paupore, (1997) Garden City High School art instructor.

"I thought the Athena was an excellent award to honor the many women who don't get the recognition they deserve," said Oliverio.

According to Dynamic People owner, Alberta Muzzin of Livonia, the closing ceremonies of the international convention was an opportunity for past winners to gather together and share in the celebration of the convention.

The evening included a dinner at the Golden Rose Restaurant in Okemos hosted by Shelley M. Stahl of Karoub Associates of Livonia.

The caravan of local winners then traveled to the Wharton Center in Lansing to participate in the conclusion of the international conference established by Athena founder, Martha Mayhood-Mertz.

"It was kind of a coming home celebration for Mertz who first established the Athena award in Lansing," said Muzzin. "The whole evening was wonderful and everyone really enjoyed them-

Muzzin said the Wharton Center program brought together thousands of past and present Athena recipients from around the world including renowned author, Maya Angelou and veteran actor Harry Belafonte, who shared conversation with each other before the convention audience.

Fish restocking is possible for next year

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

An agreement between. Wavne County and Michigan environmental officials clears the way for Newburgh and Nankin lakes to be restocked with fish next

The pact between the Wayne County Department of Environment and the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality means the two lakes will be restocked with $25,000 worth of small-mouthed bass, northern pike and other game fish.

The agreement also calls for Environmental Consulting & Technology, the restoration project manager, to pay $3,000 to the Friends of the Rouge for educational programs.

The deal comes after thousands of fish were accidentally killed in Nankin Lake during an eradication designed to remove fish contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from Newburgh Lake:

A natural pesticide, rotenone, was sprayed onto the middle branch of the Rouge River downstream from Wilcox Dam, then onto Newburgh Lake to kill the fish. Potassium permanganate was applied as a neutralizer to detoxify the rotenone near Newburgh Dam.

That was a violation of the contractor's permit allowed under the Department of Environmental Quality guidelines.

"We had always intended to do another fish kill and restock when the work at Newburgh Lake was finished," said Jim Murray, director of the Wayne County Department of Environment. "We're going to fill the lakes with game fish after completing the PCB cleanup of New-

Murray said the kills resulted in approximately 15,000 pounds of fish being removed from Newburgh Lake and another 6,000 pounds downstream from Nankin Lake.

"The reality is that 95 percent of the fish killed were suckers and carp," said Murray. "Even if we didn't have the contamination problem in Newburgh Lake the game fish couldn't have endured. With the restocking, the game fish will have a chance to reestablish themselves."

"The fact that the northern pike, small-mouthed bass and bluegill were able to survive in that environment shows they will do well if we remove the other stress in the lake," said

Officials from the Michigan DEQ declined comment on a settlement, noting a final agreement will be signed in the near future.

However, the restocking of the lakes will be delayed as a result of the entire cleanup being

Murray said he'll talk with biologists to determine if the fish can be put into the lakes before winter, or if that part of the project will have to be deferred until spring 1999. Meanwhile, the Friends of the Rouge group is elated over money it can use to further improve the river.

· The Wayne County Taxpayers Association is set to file a lawsuit against the State of Michigan to stop the collection of the 4-cent gas tax recently approved. by the legislature for road improve-

"We are seeking a restraining order to stop the collection of the increase until at least April first," says Rose Bogaert, chair of the tax group. "It is our belief the immediate collection of the tax is in violation of the state constitution.'

provides for bills to be enacted at the end of the legislative session, unless legislators override the provision with a two-thirds vote.

Bogaert, from Dearborn Heights, also says the gas tax violates the provisions of the Headlee amendment.

"If we allow the state to continue collecting the gas tax, and then a court. rules it violated Headlee, no doubt state officials will tell us they can't pay it back because it's already spent," said Bogaert.

Keith Kaye, 55, of Westland and a Bogaert says the state constitution member of the taxpayers association, agrees the roads need to be fixed. However, he believes the state already has the money to do the job.

> "The state is always using an emotional issue like roads, the elderly and disadvantaged children to increase taxes," said Kaye. "This is just another

> Bogaert is hoping to stall the increase to at least April first, thereby giving the tax opponents time to work on rescinding the legislation.

> State Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Redford Township, says many times immediate implementation of a bill is done with a drop of the gavel. Bankes says it's pretty much standard procedure, unless someone calls for a roll call vote to delay a bill's start date. She agrees there may be merit for "court interpretation" on that aspect. However, Bankes says she sees no violation of the Headlee Amendment in the gas tax hike.

State Sen. Loren Bennett, R. Canton, says the Senate did take an immediateeffect vote on the gas tax issue, which passed by the required two-thirds margin. Bennett says the roll call vote is: standard procedure in the Senate, however he does note that House procedures are sometimes dictated by the "fast gavel." Considering the close House vote on the gas tax, Bennett says he would be surprised an immediateeffect measure by two-thirds vote could have passed in the House. He notes that could be cause for a lawsuit if the rules of the House are broken.

Like Bankes, Bennett doesn't see any violations of the Headlee Amendment.

Stadium progress 'smooth'

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

Deputy Wayne County Executive Mike Duggan suggests you may want to plan now for the Detroit Tigers' home opener in the year 2000.

"Call now, there are a few seats left," quipped

Duggan is feeling good as county officials this week are "just about there" with the acquisition of 99 percent of the property east of Woodward Avenue for new baseball and football stadiums in downtown Detroit.

"It's gone extremely smooth," said Duggan of the property acquisitions. We had some court fights, but we won them because we were prepared."

"We made a deal with the 10 largest business owners ... no litigation," said Duggan. "We sat down and appraised their businesses, made a fair offer and settled. We had a couple of guys who thought they could jerk us around in court with legal maneuvering, hoping we'd pay them a premium to get them out. The great majority of the people were happy to get a check and get out."

Duggan was looking for the Tigers to break ground this month, however the baseball club is not committing to any timetable.

"We have not set a date for ground breaking." said Tyler Barnes, Tigers director of public relations. "We are looking at late summer, which certainly doesn't rule out September."

Duggan has been privy to the designs of the new Tiger Stadium, but isn't giving away any secrets.

"They've shown us some of the drawings, and it's going to be a beautiful, old-time classic park like Camden Yards (Baltimore) and Jacobs Field (Cleveland)," said Duggan. "There are a lot of difCOUNTY NEWS

ferent features the club is talking about adding.

I'm pleased with the plans.' Tyler, in keeping with the company line, will only tell the Observer design work is continuing, and will for several months. While ground breaking is expected soon, Duggan says "it will be December when they start doing serious digging and pouring the foundations," The year 2000 is going to be twice as big, if Duggan has his way. "I believe the Lions will also open their stadium in the fall of 2000," said Duggan. "The Lions can't tell you that because they have a lease until the year 2004 with the Pontiac Silverdome. However, there is time. They don't need to break ground fall." "We're moving on land acquisition and on design to be on a 2000 timetable," Duggan said. The Lions have not given us a commitment they'll be wrapped up with Pontiac. They'll time the stadium construction with what's occurring there."

until next spring because their opening isn't until

Duggan is positive the two new stadiums will thrive, unlike the Pontiac Silverdome.

"The Silverdome is so isolated by a sea of parking that it had no potential of business spinoff," said Duggan. "In our case, we're sticking two stadiums right into the fabric of downtown where it will be close to restaurants and entertainment life. There are 12,000 parking spaces within walking distance in a business district which all goes home at night and weekends."

Court ruling upholds school constitutionality

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Public school academies - also known as charter schools - may borrow at lower interest rates in the wake of a Michigan Supreme Court opinion upholding their constitutionality.

The U.S. Internal Revenue Service ruling paves the way for better credit ratings, said Gov. John Engler, a champion of the 1993 charter school law.

"This ruling eliminates one of the financial disadvantages charter schools face. All schools - traditional and charter - will enjoy short-term financial flexibility and cost savings available through tax-exempt notes," said the governor.

The Supreme Court on July 30 held 5-1 that charter academies are public schools under the state constitution, even though their boards aren't elected by voters, because they are governed by valid chartering authorities, mostly universities.

Justice Patricia Boyle issued a sharp dissent, saying charter school boards are privately selected. exempt from much of the school code, and unsupervised by the State Board of Education.

Justice Marilyn Kelly took no part in the ruling. She was on the Court of Appeals panel which last year ruled the charter act unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court reversed both the Court of Appeals and Ingham Circuit Judge William Collette, who had blocked state aid payments to the charter schools.

The case was brought by an anti-parochiaid group, two Democratic members of the State Board of Education and others. Joining the state in defense were Central Michigan University, the Noah Webster Academy (which was denied funds by the Department of Education), Northlane Math and Science Academy and New Branches School.

No definition

The majority opinion was written by Justice James Brickley, signed by Conrad Mallett Jr., Dorothy Comstock Riley and Elizabeth Weaver, with a largely concurring opinion by Michael Cavanagh. Main points;

■ Are academies true public schools? Yes.

"The 1963 Michigan Constitution does not define the term 'public schools," but merely states the Legislature must "maintain and support a system of free public education."

"Our constitution does not mandate exclusive (state) control," said Brickley. A school is public if it is "established and maintained at public expense, primarily from moneys raised by general

■ Is a private board of directors defective? No. "(T)he Legislature has mandated the board of directors' selection process. The Legislature has this control ... Additionally, the board of the authorizing bodies is public elected or appointed by public bodies ... However, we do not have a requirement in our state constitution that mandates that the school be under the control of the voters of the school district."

■ Is the charter law "parochiaid" (state aid to parochial schools) and a violation of the constitu-

"(P)ublic school academies are not parochial schools. The statute specifically prohibits a religious organization from organizing a public school academy and further prohibits any organizational or contractual affiliations with churches or other religious organizations,'

■ Is the act unconstitutional for forbidding the State Board of Education from exercise its duty to supervise and lead? No.

"Thus, it is clear that the board retains its constitutional authority over public school academies ... through the State School Aid Act. This is evidenced by the power of the board to deny funding, as it did to Noah Webster ... (A)cademy board members are public officials and are subject to all applicable law pertaining to public officials."

'Invalid on face'

Dissenting, Boyle called the charter law "invalid on its face" because it:

■ "Derogates the constitutional prohibition against the application of public funding to private schools.

"Usurps the authority of the State Board of Education to oversee and supervise public education."

"Public school academies are controlled by privately selected, rather than public elected, board of directors and are subject only to limited oversight by the authorizing bodies and the State Board of Education." She called the majority's idea that there is public control an "illusion."

"The authorizing body only has the authority to establish the 'method of selection, length of term' and number of members of the board of directors" - an authority Boyle called "nebulous." She added the state board has neither an opportunity to review an academy's application or contract before it is issued not power to revoke the contract.

"Academy schools are not subject to large portions of the public School Code," said Boyle, citing no express requirement to use certified teachers and disagreement over whether they must comply with the core curriculum.

Court: Educators' records public

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Two area lawyers were part of the celebration after the Michigan Supreme Court ruled the public may see the personnel records of teachers and public school administrators.

The high court threw out 4-3 the unusual "reverse FOIA" suits brought by the public school employees, who sought to block parental inspection of their records under the Freedom of Information Act, and ordered their release

Dawn Phillips-Herz, a Bloomfield Hills attorney representing the Michigan Press Association, filed an amicus (friendly) brief arguing the records were public property.

So did Michael R. Shpiece, a Farmington Hills resident practicing in Bloomfield Hills, on behalf of the Michigan Freedom of Information Committee Inc., of which he is chair-

"We conclude that the Freedom of Information Act compels the disclosure of the appellants' personnel records," said the court majority. "Because the requested information consisted of information related to the appellants' public employment, we hold that the appellants' personnel records are not within the privacy subsection."

It was signed by Justices James H. Brickley, Dorothy Comstock Riley, Elizabeth Weaver and Chief Justice Conrad Mallett Jr.

Losers were Saranac teacher Christine Bradley, whose records were sought by a parent of one of her pupils, and the Lansing Association of School Administrators, whose records were sought by the Parents Support Group. Saranac and Lansing administrators intended to release edited copies of the records until Bradley and LASA filed suit.

No privacy right

The high court rejected their arguments that releasing the records "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of an individual's privacy."

That exemption, in sec. 13(a) of the FOIA, applies only to "intimate or embarrassing details of an individual's private life," said the court. Bradley's file contained documents "pertaining to corrective or disciplinary actions, complaints filed, and performance evaluations. As for the administrators, their requested records contained administrative performance reviews.

"Significantly, none of the documents contain information of an embarrassing, intimate, private, or confidential nature, such as medical records or information relating to the plaintiffs' private lives."

The court noted the employees didn't even allege there was personal information – they sought to block their performance records in public jobs.

Next, Bradley and LASA argued that "communications and notes" of an advisory nature could be exempted. Not so, said the "First, the complaints from parents are not communications and notes within a public body or between public bodies' because the documents were created by parents, not by the school district."

Second, the court said only the school districts – not the employees – could raise that argument.

Law above contract

LASA argued that the law exempts "medical, counseling or psychological facts or evaluations." It said their performance evaluations are "counseling evaluations."

No again, said the court, because " 'counseling' does not appear to include an employment relationship."

The Supreme Court said the Court of Appeals erred in trying to exempt the records under the common-law rule of privacy "because an applicable statute always surmounts a conflicting common-law rule."

Finally, LASA argued the performance records were exempt under its collective bargaining agreement with the district. Wrong, said the court. The school district cannot "eliminate its statutory obligations to the public merely by contracting to do so with plaintiff LASA ... No exemption provides for a public body to bargain away the requirements of the FOIA."

The court told the Saranac district it went too far in redacting (blocking out) a memo from the principal to Bradley. The copy Saranac proposed to release said:

"You must (blank). There are (blank) and (blank) all (blank) on (blank) and (blank). You were given several (blank) by other teachers plus the (blank) you already have. You have lent of (blank) to (blank) these (blank) in. Take care of the situation."

In a minority opinion, Justices Patricia Boyle, Michael Cavanagh and Marilyn Kelly agreed that performance evaluations, disciplinary actions and complaints must be disclosed under FOIA.

But they disagreed that those documents weren't "personal in nature." They said, however, that releasing them was "not a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy."

Seefelt said he believes the key to helping students succeed is "coordinating lessons with students' individuality. Teachers must be sensitive to the varied learning styles of students. I give my utmost, and expect my students to give their utmost to achieve success."

Seefelt stressed the need for parents and the community to

Cooper School

Keep area residents informed

Although no promises have — or can be made at this time, we are pleased to see the issue of Cooper Elementary School being revisited by officials from both the Livonia schools and the city of Westland.

It's an issue which continues to be of concern for everyone, especially for residents of the immediate area. The closed school is on Ann Arbor Trail east of Middlebelt.

The new Brownfield Redevelopment Authority, allowed by a 1996 state law, offers an opportunity for the community to earmark some money for sites like Cooper, contaminated years ago from trash dump landfilling.

Still in its infancy, a Brownfield Authority is an unknown. We have yet to see whether enough money can be generated from a Brownfield tax increment financing plan to clean up all the necessary sites.

And Westland has a variety of areas that need to be reviewed by such a Brownfield Authority — the Cooper school is only one of these. That group was formed earlier this year and has yet to meet, but all sites will be reviewed and a cleanup plan eventually developed.

But this school represents an area of special focus: The health of children and families and that of the many children who attended Cooper and the staff who worked there.

For years elementary school children attended classes at Cooper until June of 1991 when Livonia school officials closed the school and moved children across the street after soil tests showed high levels of lead, mercury PCBs and other contaminants left from a former landfill on the site, which operated in the 1940s.

It's a little bit darker in the morning and a little bit cooler at night, which means school buses will be rolling soon. In fact, classes

Residents should be informed of the cleanup of the Cooper School site via newsletters and meetings and should be allowed to be a part of any future development process, so they can have a say.

Resources, which regulated such sites until that state agency was split last year, decided not to pursue the district for financial cleanup costs.

An eight-foot fence surrounds the school as a testament to the problem that has not gone away. A current Department of Environmental Quality site manager said in January 1996 that the property might be considered for a commercial site, but not for future residential development. He recommended that it be capped with fresh soil and used for recreational purposes.

We would support a non-residential use of the property with several considerations:

■ That the cleanup is done thoroughly and without any cost-cutting to ensure public safety if the property is used again.

■ That residents of the area be kept informed throughout the cleanup process via newsletter and meetings.

That any commercial building, including a possible office site, be done tastefully with much planning input as to enhance the character of the neighborhood.

■ That residents of the area be allowed to be part of any future development process, so they can have a say.

We hope that negotiations for a Cooper cleanup are fruitful.

Concerned about Mehl

I'm concerned about Ken Mehl's problem with our cable system. I'm sure anyone can get time on cable, if they wish. As far as our Mayor's time on cable, he's been conducting these programs for quite a time. It's not an election gimmick. The people enjoy the Townhall Meetings. It gives them a chance to bring their problems face to face with the Mayor.

As Mayor, Ken, I'm sure you could do the same, if you wished. You and I have enjoyed our city for many years and worked together on campaigns. We didn't choose to make them nasty. Let's not do it now. Just tell the people what you choose to do if you're elected. That's what they want to hear - not what your opponent's are - wrong or right. Let's have a clean and wholesome election go on with our city no matter who wins.

Thomas criticized

If Robert Thomas is re-elected, the citizens have a lot to look forward to. He'll give away more tax dollars to private enterprise. Our roads will continue to crumble. He'll promote more pals. He'll excuse his living arrangements by saying everyone does it. He may open a branch library which the citizens also don't want and can't pay for. His salary will increase. His sewer contractors may flood more basements with raw sewage and he can abandon the victims. On TV, he can insult more citizens. He may whine some more about his ulcers. He will continue to insult, disregard and claim powerlessness in the face of complaints. He will brag about opening another strip mall while the one across the street

Just when I thought people were beginning to recognize what a raw deal the Wayne-Westland Community School District got on the Proposal "A" school funding legislation, and some bit of relief was coming down the pipeline from Lansing, along comes the governor, the most bitter and mean-spirited leader ever, and scratches it off the budget. I've seen the great days (with Democrats like Carter and Blanchard) and now I'm seeing the lean, tragic days (with the anti-education, anti-union, anti-working man Republicans like John "I hate welfare" Engler and Clark "You're no good unless you're born again" Durant).

Let's return to the good days by returning control of the State to the Democrats.

Why the flag?

If one wishes to protest a war, why does heburn the American flag? Why not break an egg, cross the street to the other side, or watch a rerun of "I Love Lucy"?

If one insists on a war and flag connection, you would think a demonstrator of any disposition would esteem the flag, fly the flag, sew another and display it. Burning makes no sense at all for one who honors his country and his flag.

It is easy to conclude that a flag burner is not a patriot but one who wishes to deny the greatness of the Country, the importance of representative government and the free market system. Let anyone prove his dementia as he espouses his socialist preferences.

All of us believe that even cretins can voice objections and incant their denials of America's goodness. But burn the flag? Burning the flag is not speech; it is an act of cowardice that intends the insult of those who believe our Country is a very special place.

POINTS OF VIEW

The origins of School-to-Work merit a close watch

im Richard's column on July 3 addressed the issue of School-to-Work reform currently being debated in educational circles in Lansing.

Richard established his support for the program by citing the success of Heinz Prechter, who went through a similar program in his native Germany. Richard also touted the support of the program by members of the Republican Party (Gov. John Engler and Lyn Bankes, R-Redford).

Hopefully, the following information will help to clarify the position of School-to-Work opponents.

School-to-Work is a state-level administered, federal program, signed into law by President Clinton in 1994. The plan was drawn up by Bill and Hillary Clinton, Ira Magaziner, and Marc Tucker, president of the National Center of Education & Economy, funded by the Carnegie Foundation. After studying the Goals 2000 Act.

Representative Henry Hyde, R-Ill., concluded that the plan "... moves away from an academically intensive curriculum to one that is integrated with vocational training, producing skilled manpower for the labor market. The economy will be controlled by the federal government by controlling our workforce and our schools."

States are now busily complying with Goals 2000 and School-to-Work mandates, Statewide Workforce Development boards have formed to study which labor skills are needed in each state to determine "human resources" training requirements.

Perhaps a few quotes from a letter that Marc Tucker wrote to Hillary Clinton on Nov. 11, 1992, will shed some light on the real agenda behind School-to-Work: "The subject we (David Rockefeller, John Sculley, Dave Barram and David Haselkorn) were discussing was what you and Bill should do not about education, training, and labor market policy ... We think the great opportunity you have is to remold the entire American system for human resource development, almost all of the current components of which were put into place before World War II." The last sentence is revealing in that most experts agree that the "socialization" of America began in earnest in the 1930s under the Roosevelt adminis-

Tucker next outlined the following points to "implement this vision."

A national "apprenticeship system" to serve as "the keystone of a strategy for putting a whole new postsecondary training system in place."

A national "employment service and a new system of labor market boards" to control all education, jobs, and job training.

Legislation "to advance the elementary and secondary reform agen-

Educational researcher Shirley Correll, and others, have been pointing out that many of Tucker's educational "reform" efforts have been drawn directly from the Soviet Union. The Goals 2000/School-to-Work/Careers/Workforce scheme has clearly been fashioned from the Soviet Communist Manifesto. The framework for the Goals 2000 reforms was established by the Bush administration with the help of Lamar Alexander and William Bennett, It was George Shultz of the Reagan Administration who signed the Carnegie-drafted U.S.-Soviet education agreements with Gorbachev in 1985. That same year, Marc Tucker was brought on board by the Carnegie Foundation. Conservatives shouldn't feel relieved when various high-ranking Republicans attach themselves to legislative initiatives.

The Republican leadership walks toward socialism; Democratic leadership jogs. School-to-Work is simply another step toward the big-brother vision of America sculpted by Washington's elite, and the state-level bureaucrats who wish to join them by playing their prescribed roles in the game.

Union endorsement has roots in 'Save the Jobs' party here is more than a personality choice behind the United Auto Workers union's endorsement of Larry Owen as the 1998 Democratic candidate for governor.

Why Owen? Political columnists don't have the answer. Instead, try "Locked in the Cabinet" (Knopf 1997) by Robert Reich, secretary of Labor in President Clinton's first term. He

"There are only two real parties in America, and they aren't the Democrats and Republicans. One is the 'Save the Jobs' party. The other is the 'Let 'Em Drown' Party." Both are wrong, he says.

The "Save the Jobs" party includes Lane Kirkland, past president of the AFL-CIO labor federation, and Bill Ford, who spent 30 years in Congress representing unions rather than people in western Wayne County, and boasted about it.

"Save the Jobs" politicians from both political parties vote for defense contracts, farm price supports, tax breaks for oil, cash for shipbuilders and ethanol producers, tariff protection for garment makers and steel makers. They fought expansion of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Essentially, they're fighting a rear guard action.

"The 'Let 'Em Drown' party wants to move instantly to an idealized free market economy in which everyone's job is at risk, but none more than the blue-collar workers and the poor. This party wants to open all borders

... and privatize Social Security, health care, and anything else left over," Reich says.

It's fair to say UAW leaders belong to the "Save the Jobs" party.

Reich and many others want to "ease the transition of Americans from old jobs to new." He finds their median wages are dropping as executive bonuses and the stock market enter the stratosphere. Their answer is job training - by government, by community colleges, by mandated corporate investment in job training.

Most readers here know that companies spend a lot training managers,

TIM RICHARD

But Reich and others argue the companies are derelict in not training workers on the line.

Outside government, a group called the National Center on Education and the Economy preaches this message. NCEE is responsible for the line that 70 percent of jobs by the year 2000. won't require a four-year college degree, but will require training beyond high school. If you haven't read NCEE's report, you heard Republicans like Gov. John Engler repeat it.

NCEE has a lot of interesting names, such as Bill Brock, a former Republican secretary of Labor; Ray Marshall, a former Democratic secretary of Labor; Mario Cuomo, David Rockefeller Jr. and Philip H. Power, the same fellow whose column will resume in this space the week of Aug.

Reich has enlightening interviews with Lane Kirkland and Bill Ford. Reich suggested a deal: If labor and its congressional delegation would withdraw their objection to NAFTA, they perhaps could achieve a $2 billion federal program for job retrain-

Their responses aren't printable in a household newspaper, but they basically said nuts, forget it. So they lost on both NAFTA and job retraining.

Now who should be Larry Owen's chief rival for governor but Doug Ross, Reich's former assistant secretary of Labor. Ross confesses he has a foot in the "Save the Jobs" party, but in practice I find he spends most of his breath talking about preparing Michigan for the 21st century and job retraining.

Bottom line: Ross isn't swallowing the union line 100 percent.

The fact that the UAW endorsed so early looks good for Owen, because whomever the UAW and AFL-CIO endorse has always won the Democratic nomination, though not the election.

Can Ross prevail anyway? He will try. He continues to collect money and endorsements.

Meanwhile, Reich noted that 40 percent of union people deserted the Democrats in the 1994 election that turned over Congress to the Republicans. People on the lower half of the job ladder also turned against Democ-

Computers have their limits

t was with a considerable amount of mixed emotions that I recently purchased a computer system. I've long thought that computers fell into the same category as the bug zapper and the Salad Shooter; things that seem clever and useful, but you could still get by OK without them.

I might never have actually purchased a computer if it wasn't absolutely essential to how I make a living. So, like most other decisions in my life, I did this because I was forced to.

Once I resigned myself to the necessity, I figured I should learn as much as I could so I could make a smart purchase. I talked to experts, I read magazines, and I scoured all the ads and brochures. Ultimately, what I learned is that you should buy a computer with as big of numbers as possible. If you lay out the big bucks to get as many rams, gigs and megaherzes as available, it may be several weeks before your new system is totally obsolete.

I've got to admit that I am astonished at what these things can do. The sheer power and speed with which information can be found and moved is both amazing and troubling. In a matter of a few minutes, I can locate an old friend, get his address and phone number, print a map to his house, and even check the public records to see how much he paid for it. It is the electronic equivalent of rooting around in someone's garbage without leaving home or getting your hands dirty. Of course, if I can do this to them, they can do this to me.

One of the many features that came on my computer is a free trial of an online service. With just a few clicks of the mouse, I would be ready to "surf the Net." The "few clicks" only took me about two hours.

After finally getting connected, I ventured into the "web" like a stupid, unsuspecting housefly. Once ensuared in this sticky trap, the spiders began moving in on me, and much to my horror, they were covered with advertising. It was like watching 90 minutes of commercials. gave up without ever finding all the cool stuff that's supposed to be out there.

Even though this online stuff has been a dud so far, I'll give it a few more tries to see if I can get something worthwhile out of it. I'm sure it'll be better once I get the hang of it, but it will be a while before I stop believing that the Emperor of Cyberspace has no clothes.

At the risk of being labeled a heretic, I believe America's fascination with computers borders on the absurd. Granted, every day brings new developments to the field, and the implications of expanding technologies are inescapable, Still, it seems foolish and misguided to treat technology as The Holy Grail, Computers fit well alongside the car, jet, electric light, telephone and indoor plumbing as significant developments which have changed our world, but they certainly don't rank any higher. Look at it this way: If you had to carry a candle with you on a quick trot to the outhouse in the middle of the night, would you be thinking about how much space is left on your hard drive?

E-mail, chat rooms and news groups all serve important purposes, but this should augment personal contact, not replace it.

I am also quite bugged by how much emphasis is being placed on technology in schools

At a recent school board meeting I attended, a board member sternly intoned that "Our children will not be able to enter the 21st century if they don't know enough about computers." I guess on the day that century begins, someone will identify the techno-dunces in the schools, hand them each a case of 1999 calendars, and ship them off to a virtual reality leper colony.

If I had been taught the technology of the day when I was in school, I would now be qualified to work in a museum. Do we really want our children so steeped in technology that the admonition to appreciate life will be "Stop and scan the roses"?

In many ways, we have paid for convenience with the erosion of privacy and intimacy. Computers can store, retrieve, organize and analyze data far better than humans can, but they cannot dream, feel, imagine or wonder. Letting them take over our brains is one thing, but letting them take over our souls is another. After all, life without computers might be inconvenient, but life without soul stinks.

Author and financial consultant Ron Blue relates a story about visiting a small, rural village in Africa where he was able to have a talk with one of the natives. Ron reports that he was quite taken aback when he asked a native what was the biggest problem facing his village. The man told Ron it was not the lack of food or medical attention, but "materialism." It's not like these villages have the amenities that we have come to expect like TV, microwaves, computers, cell phones and VCRs.

The villager went on to tell him, "If a man has a mud hut, he wants one made of cow manure. If he has a cow manure hut, he wants a stone hut. If he has a thatched roof, he wants a tin roof. If he has one acre, he wants two. Materialism is a disease of the heart. It has nothing to do with where you live. "(From "Home With a Heart" by Jas. C. Ballet company readies for audition

■ Dawn Greene and daughter June Smith are looking for a few good boys and girls to share their love of dance with. The duo is once again holding auditions for their ballet troupe which will perform "The Nutcracker Ballet" in December.'

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

For Dawn Greene, dancing has become a family business.

The Canton woman is the artistic director of the Plymouth-Canton Ballet Company with her daughter June Smith of Canton, as assistant director. Greene and her husband Beck are also the owners of the Grosse Ile Academy. Their other daughter and her husband, Dawnelle and Mark Nash, are dancers with the Cincinnati Ballet.

Once again this fall, Greene is hoping to share her family's love of dance with a new group of children as the Plymouth-Canton Ballet Company holds auditions this weekend.

"I think that ballet in itself gives them confidence, discipline and a knowledge of the arts," Greene said. "For ballet, it gives them experience of dancing with a live orchestra."

The Plymouth-Canton Ballet Company will audition children ages 9-12 from noon-1 p.m., and dancers ages 13 and older from 1:30-3 p.m. at Joanne's Dance Extension, 9282 General Dr., Suites 180-190, in Plymouth.

"The auditions are open to any student in the area," Greene said. "We usually have 50 members. We've had dancers from Port Huron, Grosse Ile, Dearborn, Wayne, Westland, Livonia and Brighton. It's our goal to bring dancers of this area together."

All girls auditioning for the Plymouth-Canton Ballet Company must wear black leotard and pink tights, and must wear their hair up in a bun or French braid. Ponytails are not allowed. Boys are required to wear appropriate dance attire and ballet shoes. Scholarships are available for male dancers. Dancers ages 13 and older must also wear pointe shoes.

It probably didn't happen to you, but it may have happened to people you know. The undergraduate degree taken because of a business requirement...or in preparation for medical school...or law school. Doesn't anyone take a degree for the joy of learning? For the thrill of academic discovery! That's what education used to be about. Well, now it still can be. The degree is a Master of Arts in Liberal Studies.

We won't say it will be easy. After all, this is the University of Michigan-Dearborn. But it will be fascinating. The interdisciplinary courses will develop your critical thinking skills and intellectual flexibility. You will be ready to consider career changes or just be happily more aware of subjects you were always curious about. Offered primarily during the evening, with individualized programs if that's the way you want to go.

Western world's influences are contaminating their cultures. Some of the happiest people he saw were in India where poverty is the worst. Does that speak well for the United States?

It's sad that the country with the most wealth and easiest access to all the riches anyone could possibly want is also the country that threatens to destroy less affluent places. And are we happier because of all we have? No. Are our kids growing up with these expectations? Most definitely, but they, too, will not be happier because of them.

Nancy admits that she almost got sucked into the frenzy to buy-and-stash. When she found out she could buy five "Beanie Babies" at a time from a particular store, her head was spinning. "Wow, I could buy five each day and keep them for the kids." But as she was driving over to the store, she realized how foolish this was going to be. Was stockpiling them for her kids the way to happiness? She thought not and bought only two. And, I might add, only to be given out as a precious reward for accomplishment.

Alcoholics Anonymous has a slogan that seems to ring true for more than just the recovering community. "When you want, there's never enough." That is to say that the desires we have will always be for more than what we already possess.

When Steve earned enough money, he bought himself a small powerboat. But it wasn't long before the boat just didn't seem large enough to "have some fun on." So he stepped up to a 30-foot boat with a small cabin. But it just didn't seem large enough to "eat a meal on." So he proceeded to move from a 30-foot to a 40-foot boat and is now purchasing a 45-foot boat with a queen-sized bed, a microwave and TV/VCR combo unit.

And, yet, Steve doesn't appear one else.

of your home's most vital, most essential connections. It's the way the future will find its way to your house. When water, gas and electricity came to our homes, they fundamentally changed the way we lived. Our lives were made easier. We had more time to pursue our dreams, to take that next step. We believe Broadband will have that kind of impact. This one connection will fundamentally change the way you use your television, your computer, your telephone. Broadband will give your computer the power to be as entertaining as your TV. Your TV will become as smart as your computer. And you will be able to communicate in ways you never thought you could. Broadband is simply a wire with enormous capacity, a wire with two-way capabilities. The wire you now think of as bringing you cable TV is being transformed into something that can literally bring you the future. Right now Broadband is allowing people to download from the Internet up to 50 times faster than ordinary telephone wire.

Broadband's unique two-way capabilities make the word "interactive" take on an entirely new meaning. You will no longer simply receive the world's greatest movies. Broadband gives you the power to send your own home movies through your computer. Broadband will not only connect your family to the world of ideas, Our digital TV service will give you the best connection to the world of entertainment. Program marks anniversary of women getting right to vote

Next month men and women exercise their right to vote in primary elections, elections that will come two weeks after a very important anniversary: 77 years ago, on Aug. 26, 1920, women won the right to vote.

In recognition of the anniversary, "Votes for Women," will premiere at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 26, in Room 200 of the Liberal Arts Building on the campus of Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty Road, Livonia.

The free presentation is being sponsored by the American Association of University Women, the Greater Detroit section of the National Council of Jewish Women and the college's Women's Resource Center.

The award-winning video, which includes actual footage of suffragists at work, will be screened along with a video of last year's reenactment of Ernestine Rose's 1846 speech before the Michigan House of Representatives, urging the legislators to grant women the right to vote.

The program will serve as a kickoff of a campaign to honor Rose with a U.S. postage stamp. The AAUW of Michigan spearheaded reenactment on the 150th anniversary of Rose's speech March 26, 1996.

NCJW president Marta Rosenthal portrayed Rose and wore a hoop-skirted costume provided by Oakland University's Meadowbrook Theater. The Michigan Women's Hall of Fame helped with the reenactment.

Born in Poland in 1810, the daughter of a rabbi, Rose sailed for the United States as a newlywed in 1836 and immediately began 33 years of seeking women's rights, the abolition of slavery, free public schools and other reforms before ill health forced her into retirement.

Known as the queen of the platform in an era when women speaking in public anywhere was deemed unseemly, Rose spoke to Michigan audiences on other occasions, appearing in Adrian, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, Detroit and Ypsilanti.

Last October, she was inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame in Seneca Falls, N.Y., because of her Michigan connection.

Her national hall medallion is on permanent display at the Michigan Women's Hall of Fame in Lansing, where a rare picture of her, discovered in the attic of Susan B. Anthony's home, will soon join the display.

> The seven-mile walk will be held in Edward Hines Park. Registration will be at 8 a.m., followed by the walk at 9 a.m. Walkers are asked to collect pledges. Those with $150 or more on or before the walk day will receive a free T-shirt. People also can make donations to sponsor the walk.

Participants can preregister through Aug. 29 by sending their completed form and pledges to CHHCS, 32932 Warren Road,

"Our dream is to create a residence that offers a program of skilled, professional services, in the comfort of a warm, relaxed setting," said Maureen Butrico, CHHCS executive director.

For more than 16 years, CHHCS has been offering comprehensive and compassionate care for incurably ill patients offers care in the home or an extended care facility, the organization has recognized the need to provide a "home like" setting for those patients who have limited or no care givers or a place to call home, said Mary Letters, CHHCS marketing and development specialist.

CHHCS also needs help in other ways to make the project a reality - property on which to construct the facility.

The organizations is hoping a company, individual or organization will donate at least three acres of land in its service area

Proceeds from the walk will be and their families. While it of western Wayne, southern Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties.

> "We are interested in a site with good visibility, but one that will allow our patients the ability to share quiet and peaceful times with family and friends," said Butrico. "Once complete, the facility will allow us to meet the needs of those people who want the unique care offered by hospice, but can't spend their final days at home."

Spartans ready to defend crown

SOCCER PREVIEW

Throw in whatever detergent you want, the same result generally comes out of the wash for the Livonia Stevenson boys soccer team, a program that's been on spin cycle for nearly two decades.

The record is nearly spotless and normally the tide gets rolling come state tournament time.

Eighth-year coach Walt Barrett has carried on the winning tradition established by Pete Scerri, who retired in

During his tenure, Scerri won four state titles and had a pair of runner-up finishes.

Barrett, meanwhile, has guided the Spartans to the promise land twice (1991 and 1996), along with a secondplace finish (1993).

The Spartans, 19-2-1 a year ago, took the Class A crown last year with a 2-1 overtime victory over Troy.

Stevenson, however, was hard hit by graduation, losing four first-team All-Observer picks including leading scorer Mark Dietrich, defender Scott Babinski (Michigan State), goalkeeper Eric O'Neil (Schoolcraft College) and Jason Roy (Madonna University).

Second-teamer Paul Tokarsky (Schoolcraft) also graduated along with three other seniors. So maybe this is the year the Spartans are hung out to dry?

Not so fast Observerland. "Some of the people we have coming back didn't get a lions' share of the playing time, but those returning were definitely an element of last year's championship team," the 36-year-old Barrett said. "By the 80th minute of every game, we want to become the hardest hardest working group in the year. We want to repeat." Third-year varsity performer Steve Roy, Jason's brother, will lead the defense, while Thomas Eller, a member of the under-16 U.S. National team which toured Italy this summer, will

Third-year coach Chad Campau, whose team is expected to battle defending Western Lakes Activities Association champion Plymouth Canton and veteran Northville for the WLAA's Western Division crown, has a team loaded with veterans.

"We haven't won a division (title) since I've been coach and that's a goal to get to the (WLAA) championship game," said Campau, who has eight returning starters. "I could see by the

Clarenceville 1997 line play pivotal

FOOTBALL PREVIEW

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Chuck Donaldson has good reason to be optimistic about his Livonia Clarenceville football team.

The Trojans, coming off a 4-5 season, have some important pieces to the puzzle in place for 1997. Four key players, however, were lost to graduation — second-team All-Area tailback Donahue Fulton, who is red-shirting this fall at Ferris State; along with Jason Dillaha, Chris Lakner and quarterback Paulo Hernandez, the latter whom was pressed into duty after starter Craig Rose was injured in a season-opening 21-19 loss to Grosse Pointe University-Liggett.

"He (Rose) was about nine for 11 (passing) for about 140 yards at the half and then he broke his thumb and was out the rest of the year," Donaldson recalls. "Obviously it set us back passing, but we were fortunate Paulo could step in and perform the way he did because he had the ability to scramble and run."

Rose, a 6-foot-2, 165-pound senior, is healthy and ready for his second debut. He has looked sharp during the preseason.

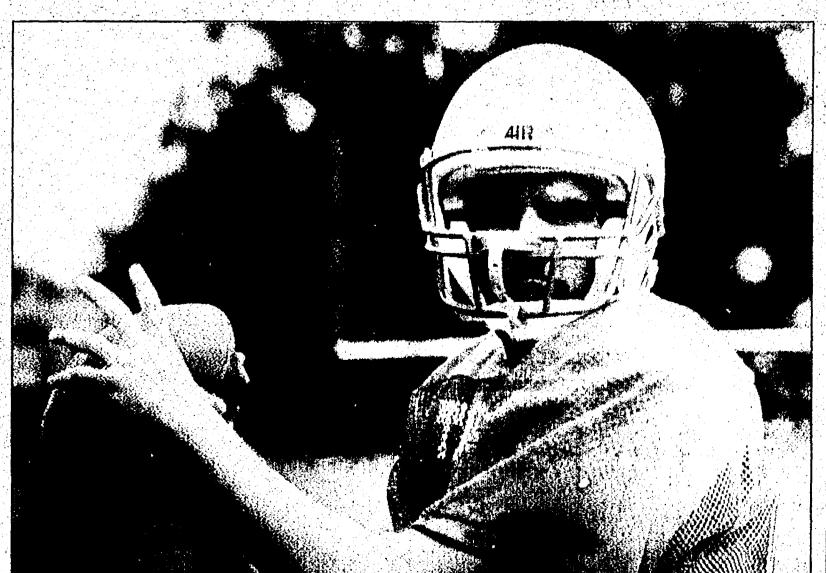

"He's been throwing well so far and has a good arm," Donaldson said. "He's a good athlete. He's like a real coach on the field. He picks up things quickly, very smart.

"He can also run, rollout, throw the sprint-out or sit back in the pocket."

Rose also had a garden of running backs to chose from including thirdyear varsity performer Walter Ragland, a 6-1, 185-pound junior tail-

"Walter's going to be tough," Donaldson said. "It's his time to step into the spotlight."

Complementing Ragland in the backfield will be junior John Wallace reminds some of former Clarenceville ball carrier Bryan DeCaire. Senior Kris Krolcyzk (5-10, 165) will also see time at tailback.

Strong arm: Senior Craig Rose, who broke his thumb in last year's opene and missed the rest of the seasonr, returns as the starting quarterback for the Livonia Clarenceville Trojans.

Standout basketball player Justin Villanueva (6-3, 200) gives Rose a big target at split end or tight end.

"Justin is a very good athlete, a guy who can jump," Donaldson said. "We can throw it up and let him go get it." When Villanueva plays tight end, 11,195) will step in at wide-out.

The offense, however, won't click unless its interior line provides the necessary protection and blocking.

"We're going to establish the run game," Donaldson said. "And if that doesn't happen, we can throw it, but it all depends on the offensive line.

. "Like every year, if we get some le. decent line play, we can be competitive. But without the guys producing (5-8, 160), a speedy runner who senior returnee Ed Kibitlewski (5- up front, you can have Barry Sanders back there and you won't do much."

Junior center Josh Fritch (6-1, 185) and senior guard Tim Atkins (5-11, 195) give the Trojans experience on the line. Sean McAllister, a 6-2, 220-pound sophomore who started late last season on defense, will open at left tack-conditioning that these guys worked harder than they have in the past. They (the seniors) want to win it and they know it's their last chance.

"They're hungry and they want it badly. We haven't beaten Stevenson in awhile. They want to do well.".

Three Churchill standouts - first-team All-Area defender David George, Rob Bartoletti and George Kithas played on Barrett's club team this summer, the under-17 Birmingham Blazers, which reached the semifinals of the Snickers U.S. Youth Soccer Championships in Phoenix,

The Chargers also have an experienced goalkeeper back in Mike Skolnik.

"This team came together well at the end of the year." Campau said. "It's going to be a tough run this year in the conference (WLAA).

"With Stevenson, you want and see who they have, but they're always tough."

Another state Class A quarterfinalist was Redford Catholic Central (13-7-2), which lost two standout midfielders to graduation in Mike Martin and Tony Moucoulis.

The Shamrocks, however. return second-team All-Area goalkeeper Matt Kessler, who played for Barrett's Birmingham Blazers' summer squad.

Livonia Franklin (8-10-2) might be hard pressed to finish among the top three teams in the Western Division of the WLAA, but Patriot third-year coach Dave Hebestreit, who -led his team to its first-ever district crown in 1995, likes what he sees in his young i team.

With only four seniors, Hebestreit is counting on four freshman to help erase last year's 10-0 district debacle Lagainst Churchill.

Both Churchill and Northville will be very good, but I think in time we can compete with everyone else." said Hebestreit, whose team officially opened the season Wednesday against Dearborn

In the Metro Conference, Lutheran High Westland coach Rich Block shored up his defense during preseason with some instructional help from his niece, Michelle Block, a Stevenson grad who now plays for Michigan State.

The Warriors (12-8) could move up a few rungs on the Metro ladder after finishing fourth with a 6-6 record in the Metro.

Livonia Clarenceville (2-10-2), in only its second varsity season, will compete in the Metro this season.

Richard McCoy, a Utica Ford High and Michigan State University graduate, takes over for Rick Larson this season.

"Actually I was a member of the marching band in high school," said McCoy, a fifthyear math and history teacher. "But I started playing in youth leagues and went right through from high school to intramurals in college.

"I still play in adult rec leagues. Coaching soccer is something that always interested me."

The Trojans have 22 players out, including three females.

The top returnee is junior striker Adam King, who hopes to put off surgery for an injured thigh.

And last, but not least is Westland Huron Valley Lutheran (7-11), a team which lost only one senior (Curt Guiles) to graduation.

The Hawks, under the direction of second-year coach Matt Henzi, hope to unseat Taylor Baptist Park as champions of the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference.

Laramore golf outing to benefit foundation

For the third straight year, varsity hockey players from the three Livonia high schools will be the benficiaries of the annual Rick Laramore Memorial Fund Golf Outing Sunday, Sept. 14 at Idyl Wyld Golf Course.

A majority of the proceeds for this year's outing will support Leukemia Research, Life, Inc., which is a non-profit organization that raises funds for the pediatric cancer at Children's Hospital of Detroit and the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan (where designated funds will go to the Special Days Camp for children with cancer).

The outing is in memory of Rick Laramore, the former Churchill hockey player who earned a varsity letter as a sophomore.

Laramore entered Children's Hospital in Jan. of 1995 after being diagnosed with lymphoma.

After putting up a valiant fight, Laramore died on March 27, 1995 at age 17.

Born in 1977, Rick was the only son of longtime Livonia residents Dick and Judy Laramore. (They also have two daughters.)

Rick attended Roosevelt Elementary, Riley Middle School and Churchill High where he enjoyed music and sports.

Michigan team returns triumphant from USA InLine national tourney

An explosive offense coupled with solid goaltending helped the 10-and-under Michigan All-Stars win the USA InLine national hockey tournament Aug. 6-10 at the Darien Sportsplex in suburban Chicago.

The Michigan team (based in West Bloomfield at the U.S. Blades Rollerblading facility) won seven games without a loss while outscoring its opponents, Michigan began its title run Aug. 6 against the Lafayette (Louisiana) Storm. The All-Stars built a four-goal, first-period lead and scored five unanswered goals in the second period en route to a 9-2 victory.

Steve Balint (Wyandotte) had a hat trick while Will Carpenter (Canton) and Brian Giosa (Plymouth) netted two apiece. Ryan Bond (Northville) and Matt Rodeghier (Farmington) also scored a goal.

The All-Stars faced the pretournament favorite Slapshot All-Stars from Dallas in their next game.

Michigan scored early and never looked back while routing the Three Rivers Phantoms from Pittsburgh, Pa., in their third game, 15-4.

Balint led the attack with three goals and seven assists, and Carpenter added his second straight six-goal performance.

Jacob Repokis (Bloomfield Hills) notched his first two goals, and Giosa also had a pair. Harrell rounded out the scoring.

The final divisional roundrobin game was played later the same day against a suburban Chicago all-star team, the Burning Blades. The game ended in a rout as Michigan coasted to an 18-1 victory. Harrell was the offensive sparkplug with four goals and four helpers. Repokis, Balint and Giosa added hat tricks. Carpenter and Rodeghier burned the Blades for two apiece and Bond one goal.

The championship round began with a quarterfinal game Aug. 9. The All-Stars continued their offensive barrage with a 16-2 drubbing of the Tinley Park nament team.

It was Balint's turn to score six as he paced the Michigan attack. Giosa had a hat trick, and Carpenter, Repokis and Harrell buried two apiece. Rodeghier had his best game of the tournament with a goal and five assists.

In the semifinal game, the Dry Ice X-Treme of Illinois nearly upset the All-Stars by playing a disciplined defensive style even though they were outshot by a wide margin.

Lubanski made three big saves late in the game to preserve a 6-6 tie and allow Balint to score the winning goal with 15.6 seconds remaining.

It was Balint's fourth goal of the game. Repokis had two goals and Harrell one.

In the championship game, the Vail (Colo.) Dynamite kept it close for 15 minutes, but the All-Stars rolled to a 15-5 victory.

Twisters blank Cougars, 6-0

An air tight defense, coupled with five interceptions, carried the Wayne County Twisters to a 6-0 Lake Shore Football League victory Saturday over the Motor City Cougars at the Downriver Community Center in South-

The Twisters, who improved to 3-2 overall, limited the Cougars to only five completions for less than a total of 50 yards.

"This is something we have worked very hard to accomplish and it does indeed appear we are starting to see the light at the end of the tunnel," Twisters coach Kevin Bradford said.

Ken Kroll and Chuck Lauber, both of Garden City, along with Westland's Bob James and Pensari Hagelthorn, along with Scott Harris of Livonia, each had pickoffs in the victory.

Kroll's interception and 73yard return to the Cougars' 11-yard line set up the gamewinning score by Wayne's Patrick Bowie.

The former Plymouth Salem High standout ran 6 yards for the touchdown with only 25 seconds to go in the game. Bowie had 91 yards in 15

"The offensive line was solid and punishing," Bradford said. "It takes time to get 11 athletes working together as a unit, and our young men are beginning to bind as one."

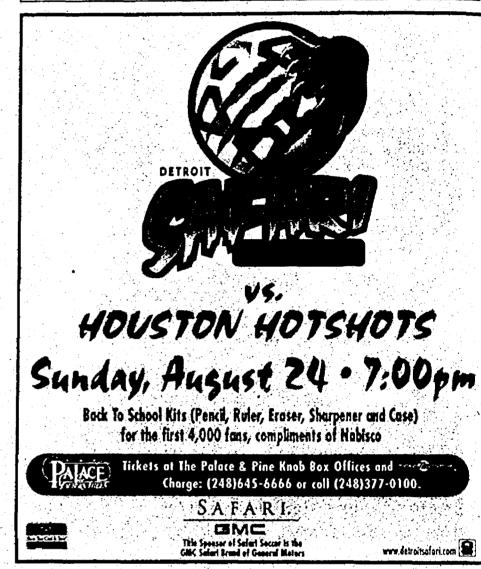

Bradford said. The defensive line was led by Inkster's Aaron Brothers, who had eight tackles and two sacks. Westland's Jeff Thompson added five tackles and two sacks. Other solid performances were turned in by Jason Hagelthorn, Mark Bennetts, Derrick Young, Matt Graca and Mark Wetmore, all of Westland, along with Kenyachta Rucker and Robert Bell, both of Inkster; Damon Frendo, Garden City; Chris Simpson, Browstown; and Robert Berry, Madison Heights.

The Twisters travel Saturday to East Detroit to meet the Detroit Renegades at McCabe Field. Kick-off is at 8

New kid on block

Salter takes over head coaching duties at GC

By Steve Kowalski Stapp Writer

The first week of football practice at Garden City High School is done and all the players want to be like Mike.

Only their imitation is about respect, not here worshiping.

· Mike Salter, a varsity assistant football coach the last four years at Garden City High School, has been promoted to head coach of the Cougars.

Salter, 26, replaces Bob Eisiminger, who resigned last month after recording a 24-57 record in nine seasons. Eisiminger took a job as defensive coordinator at Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Salter's enthusiasm and dedication is contagious, senior tailback Mike Wrobel said. Practices this week have been an enthusiastic experience right to the end when they are ended with a huddle called "Break it down."

"I think everyone is excited to play, the team's a lot more fired up, we have a new start." Wrobel said. "He's closer with the team and everything. He gets excited when we do good and brings us in to 'Break it down.' Last year, the players would 'Break it down' at the end of practice, now he does, I think we're going to win some games, surprise people."

Salter makes no predictions other than to assure the Cougars' faithful they'll be prepared for the season opener against Dearborn Heights Crestwood.

"We have one goal in mind and that's to beat Crestwood, get the parents involved and go from there," Salter said. "All we look for is to play hard and win some games. We're going to work hard at this and do whatever it takes. Already we've put in some long hours." Salter is a teacher in the Garden City school system at the Burger Center. He formerly was a substitute science teacher at the high school, where he hopes to return someday as a full-time teacher.

Another former Eisiminger assistant, Erol Selamet, will remain on Salter's staff as offensive coordinator.

Salter, who graduated in 1988 from Garden City and 1993 from Ferris State, will double as defensive coordina-

"What I really like about him is he has a good relationship with kids, he taught in my building two years," Garden City principal Jerry Perttunen said. "He's extremely eager about being the head coach. One thing that I was pleased about is that when Bob resigned, Mike and Erol took over the program, made sure all the kids were notified, that there's a change.

"They kept the 'Passing Camp' going, kids were notified as far as physicals. They didn't know either would get the (head coaching) job, but both were very professional and made sure there was a smooth transition. Mike will do a very good job. I see good relationships built with parents and students and we're very open to that."

Salter has added former Garden City standout Kevin Curtis, who played for Albion College's NCAA Division III national champion team in 1994, and Craig Stylvester to the varsity coaching staff.

All of the varsity coaches either played for Garden City High School or East or West High Schools.

"It's great," said Salter, a former offensive and defensive lineman who captained the Garden City football team 10 years ago. "We have the dedication, pride going, all dressed in same locker room, been on the same field. It's exciting and a little overwhelming, there is a a lot to go with it. Erol and I have worked together the last four years. He is a very dedicated coach."

Salter said Eisiminger's resignation "came as a shock to

"It's exciting for me, busy would be the hest way to describe it," he said. "The attitudes have been real positive, the kids are really up. We're going to build on this, work hard and build a program. We have 16 returning varsity members from last year, a good nucleus.

"It's a different program now. We'll still run the Wing-T. It's too late in the year to start any full-scale stuff. I think it's going to come with working hard, kids playing up to their ability. We knew we had a good bunch of kids coming back."

Perttunen said Eisiminger will remain as head coach of the baseball team, a job he has held five years.

"We appreciate the efforts he put into the program, it's unfortunate things happened at such a late date." Perttunen said. "We wish him the best of luck (at Pioneer)."

Schwartzburg overcomes diabetes to be an Ironman

By JOE KYRIAKOZA STAFF WRITER

Instead of being concerned with the norm while competing in a triathlon — the undercurrent of the stretch of water he must conquer, or the condition of the final stretch of road — Eric Schwartzburg's chief concern is monitoring his blood-sugar level. A diabetic, Schwartzburg must constantly monitor his bloodsugar level and if it gets too low, as it sometimes does during such strenuous competition as a triathlon, he must to give himself a shot of insulin between

For seven years, Schwartzburg has competed in over 40 triathlons.

For 22 years, diabetes has inhabited his system. Imagine entering the 12th mile on foot when the conditions of diabetes begin to take effect. Schwartzburg is afflicted with diabetes mellitus, a form which causes the level of glucose in the blood to become abnormally high, leading to excessive urination and constant thirst and hunger. For a triathlete to fight through repercussions such as these and compete at a remarkably high level is truly unbelievåble.

Schwartzburg has never won a triathlon. Diabetes, though, he has prevailed over throughout his life.

"It's never stopped me," Schwartzburg said. "I've been competing in athletics my whole life. I've never really looked at it as a handicap. I just kind of took it in stride.'

Schwartzburg, originally from West Bloomfield and now living in Atlanta, faces maybe the second-biggest challenge of his life next week - The Ironman Canada Triathlon.

The Ironman Canada, which takes place in Penticton, British Columbia on August 24, is one of the most prestigious triathlons in the world, fielding 1,600 competitors from around the globe. It's also a qualifier for the Ironman Hawaii, the grandaddy of triathlons.

The race involves a 2.4-mile swim in what is described as a sometimes choppy, windy and cold Okanagan Lake. Also, a 112-mile bike route consisting of 40 flat miles, followed by a seven-mile climb and a technical and hilly course for the final 65 miles. The run portion, a full 26.1-mile marathon, is described as an out-and-back rolling course through the town of Penticton, which can be windy on the Schwartzburg's best finish in a triathlon is 250th (800 competitors), and occurred at the Buffalo Springs Half Ironman, June 29 in Lubbock, Texas.

In the Ironman Canada, the longest race he will have ever participated in, Schwartzburg, a West Bloomfield High School graduate, just hopes to finish.

"I just want to finish because I've never done a race this long,' he said.

Competing in triathlons is simply a hobby Schwartzburg, who has "no ultimate goal" and admits "I just do it for fun."

One would wonder how triathlons could be deemed 'fun,' considering the amount of training that goes into it and the level of stamina that must be attained. to remain competitive.

Ironman Canada has been on Schwartzburg's agenda since January. He describes his training regimen before a competition almost like climbing a mountain, then hiking back down.

"You have to keep building during your training," Schwartzburg explained. "I might run 40 miles one week, 50 miles the next, or go 80 miles on the bike one week and 90 the next. But about two and a half weeks before the event you have to gradually decrease your miles of training so your body can

"I work out twice a day and about 20-22 hours a week," he

During a typical week, though. Schwartzburg's plan includes an incredible 10,000 meters of swimming, 250 miles of biking and 35 miles running - quite a Schwartzburg is currently studying to be a chiropractor at Life Chiropractic College in Atlanta, GA and earned a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Wisconsin.

Surprisingly, Schwartzburg never ran track in high school or in college. Baseball and wrestling were the only prop sports he partook in, and organized sports were not part of his college itinerary.

Instead, becoming a triathlete was something he picked up from friends at Wisconsin.

"I got into it in college." Schwartzburg said. "I always ran and biked with my friends who were triathletes. I enjoyed it, so they said, 'Why don't you try a triathlon?"

So seven years ago Schwartzburg entered his first meet — the Chicago Sun-Times Triathlon - with 3,999 others and, like his plan for Ironman Canada, he just wanted to finish

As far as Schwartzburg is concerned, finishing is winning.

Use fun to ease transition back to school

It always seems as though school is just dismissed for the summer, and within a few weeks the stores are promoting back-toschool merchandise. By mid-August, the children are bored and the parents are frazzled.

There is no time like the present to start thinking about how to make the new school year transition as smooth as possible. Regardless of what school your child will be attending, preparations are quite similar. You and your child:

- Spend time taking inventory of back-to-school clothes, hoping he or she hasn't outgrown or worn out everything from the previous school year.
- Brainstorm new ways to streamline bedtime and morning routines.
- Venture out to the mall, specialty store or uniform shop for the initial run at a new wardrobe, holding off on buying everything until your child sees what the other kids are wearing.

• Try to cram in all those activities you planned to do over the summer that you haven't yet accomplished (Rollerblading through the Metropark, sailing with friends, a three-day weekend on Mackinac Island).

Try to avoid the added pressure associated with waiting to the last minute to accomplish these tasks.

 Make going back to school fun by creating your own family activities that prepare everyone for the transition.

Create a calendar. Most every calendar begins with the onset of the new year. Why not shake conventional wisdom and start with the first month of the school year, ending your calendar year the following summer month before the next school year commences?

Select a favorite family photograph you wish to use as your photo page. Take it to a local copy store to be transferred onto one of the stock calendar formats that feature spiral-bound, tear-off monthly pages.

■ There is no time like the present to start thinking about how to make the new school year transition as smooth as possible. Regardless of what school your child will be attending, preparations are quite similar

If you have the right home computer equipment and a calendar graphics program to create your own, you can often get real creative by scanning your own photographs into each individual

Once your calendar format is in place, set aside one evening each week when everyone in the family is available to sit down and write in their upcoming scheduled activities.

If it makes things easier to read, desrignate a different color pen or fine-tip marker for each family member. This makes spotting someone's activities at a glance much easier.

Pack a 'pack/ Preschool and early grade school children will often suffer from separation anxiety when school starts. In most cases, separation anxiety only lasts a few weeks. But there is something you can do to help ease your child's transition back to school.

Because your child will probably be taking a backpack or book bag of some sort to school, now is a good time to pack it with a few objects that help cast your child's anxieties aside.

Include a small photo album your family fills with your child's favorite family photographs. When your child experiences a rough time at school. pulling the album out is likely to help put his or her mind at ease.

A small favorite toy, a child's wallet filled with loose change for a phone call to Mom or Dad, or a favorite book your child can pull out and read during a latchkey program or while waiting for a ride home are all helpful reminders to soothe the anxiety your child may experience during his or her time away from Stack a survival basket. Does your college student prefer to shop for campus trends with friends? Quite possibly. But when it comes to stacking up crucial everyday survival items inside a decorative basket your daughter can use in her dorm room, or a handy wastebasket your son can use for basketball practice, you just might capture their attention.

Ask your child to help you fill the survival basket with the everyday essentials you bought,

Include personal hygiene items, several prepaid calling cards, notepaper, pens, pencils, instant coffee or hot chocolate, a mug, a travel-size heating plate, a large tin of favorite cookies, carry-out restaurant gift certificates, batteries, a flashlight, a can opener, a bottle opener, snack bars and a few favorite music cassettes or compact discs.

Of course, you will want to tailor the survival basket to your child's individual needs. It is an activity the whole family can have fun with, particularly younger siblings who will greatly miss an older brother or sister going away to school.

focus on photography

Creative image: Think of yourself as an artist

MONTE NAGLER

Even though photography has been around for about 150 years, only within the past decade has it been accepted as a true art form with collections found in major museums throughout the world.

Its acceptance is revealed not only by public appreciation of a photograph but also by the economic impact of photography in the market-place.

Photographs that today sell for many thousands of dollars commanded only $100 to $200 just over a decade ago. People today appreciate fine photography and are willing to pay for it.

Obviously, not all photographs are considered great works of art and are worth little except to the person who shot them.

But the important thing is to develop a state of mind that presumes your photography can be important, that taking photographs can be an art and that as a person deeply interested in photography, you are an artist.

You paint with light and your subject is life itself. What a wonderful opportunity to create!

How can you begin to think of your-self as an artist?

First, by likening yourself to a sculptor. A sculptor begins with a block of marble – his whole. By chipping away with a chisel, he produces his finished work. Thus, by process of elimination and "zeroing in," a sculptor derives his completed art.

A photographer, too, derives his completed work by process of elimination and by "zeroing in" on his subject.

An initial look at the subject is the photographer's "whole." Then, by proper lens selection, camera angle, light direction, time of day, selective focusing, etc., the photographer "chips away" like the sculptor and ends up with his finished art.

re important for the photographer to express himself artistically. Remember, also, that it isn't the chisel carving the stone – it's the sculptor. Similarly, keep in mind that it's not the camera making the photograph – it's really you!

Learning to visualize in advance is very important in your photography and will help you think in terms of an artist.

When you are composing a scene in the viewfinder, try to visualize the image of a finished print. This is especially true in working with black and white where an interpretation of tones and contrasts is necessary.

Even when you don't have your camera with you, train yourself to look at things as if you were seeing through a viewfinder. You'll be amazed at what you will see.

Yet another way to bring out the artist in you is to try to say in your photography how you feel about your subjects, remembering that you and your subject are the two most important ingredients in making a photograph.

If you love trees, for example, communicate this love through your photographs. Try to make a meaningful statement about trees in your pictures.

The idea of a photograph, as in any art medium, is to create a visual interpretation of what you saw and felt and then to share your vision with others.

Evening Primrose works wonders at dusk

MARTY FIGLEY

One evening in July I was visiting my daughter, Lynnette, and she said, "You've got to see what happens to these flowers."

Around 9:15 p.m., just at dusk, we gathered around a bed of flowers and watched a miracle

The flower pods on the plants were light green and cone-shaped on the end of a single stem that grew from a small clump of dandelion-like foliage. A white vein ran down the center of some of the leaves.

Rather than one single stem as is on a dandelion, several stems were present on each plant.

Soon the bottom of the pods, nearest to the stem, began to change color, becoming white then turning luminous yellow.

Ever so slowly each flower unfurled from its one-inch pod and in about 30 seconds a cup-shaped, yellow flower appeared! They were about two inches across in size.

The evening we watched, three or four flowers opened.

The next day, Lynnette said, all that is left is a small withered flower, but by the next generally several flowers are ready to perform again on their own

We were watching a true Evening Primrose, Oenothera odorata. William Robinson called it the most interesting flower he had ever seen in a garden at night, and H.E. Bates, another famous. gardener, gave it great praise.

MARTY FIGLEY

Amazing appearance: The tiny pod of O odorata turns a lighter color to indicate it's going to bloom (left). The flower unfurls (center). The flower appears in all its glory and lasts for only a few hours (right).

Although some people discern a lemony fragrance, my daughter and her friends were reminded of citronella. My olfactory senses don't work well, so I detected nothing.

About two years ago a friend gave Lynnette three or four tiny divisions and she set them four inches apart in a south-facing garden where they have grown into clumps about six to eight inches across.

Her plants died back last fall and "looked like weeds" in the spring, but they rallied 'round and have been a source of much fascination this summer.

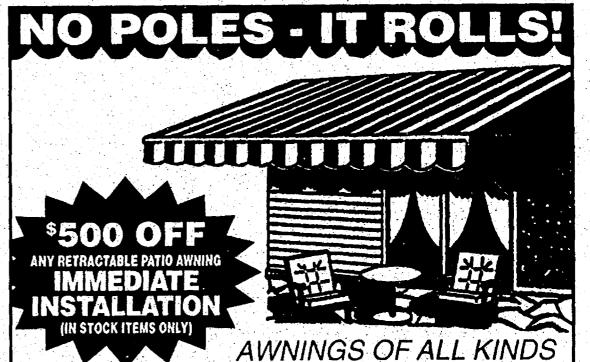

The common Evening Primrose, Oenothera biennis, can still be seen occasionally along roadsides and does also bloom at nighttime, while another primrose in the genus, called Sundrops, blooms during the day.

There are many "cousins," both night- and day-bloomers; originally all were native to America. Of the 124 species, some are annuals, others are biennials or perennials.

My daughter found her plants easy to grow. Because flowering may diminish when they are about 3 years old, they'll need to be divided soon. My research says that O. odorata will reseed itself, but hers behaved like a perennial,

If you are interested in growing Evening Primroses, to find the plants you wish to grow, check with your local nursery, a wildflower group or a botanical garden. What a great way to interest children in gardening.

Inside, outside: Garden, home hold interest

BY MARTY FIGLEY Special Writer

The plantings of Purple Coneflower on one side of the driveway of Jim and Patsy Carlson's house in Clarkston, and the display of bright Purple Wave Petunias on the

This is the introduction to much color in Patsy's back garden, and works beautifully against the greens of the pine trees, dog wood, rhododendrons and green ground covers in the front garden.

The rhodies bloom in bright fuchsia in the spring. The site was a former Christmas tree farm, and the needles make a perfect base for the other plants. Oaks and maple trees have come up oluntarily and acid-loving ferns are quite at home

Before I entered the oack garden, a Scaveola 'Blue Wonder" caught my eye, as did a white-bloomng ground cover that Patsy called Barcopa.

In the corner, a Spinyleafed Bear's Breeches, Acanthus spinosus, with large, dark green foliage has pink blossoms that turn to cream. A purpleveined leaf with spines underneath cups over the blossom. This unusual plant is really a "Southern Belle," but Patsy mulches it heavily with 12 inches of straw and lays pine boughs over it for winter rotection.

In the center of the bed s a Katsura Tree, a twisted weeping variety, eight feet tall, which she said "is the best-kept secret in

"It has a long tap root, no diseases and is insect free - and hardy."

Background beauty

Behind this scene, a bittersweet vine and several ornamental grasses provide a good screen for the back gardens that consist of several free-form beds around the perimeter of the yard. Antique tiles from Toledo provide a path that leads to these gardens.

Other beds circle out from the low deck and contain shade-lovers such as hostas, terns and specimen trees. One is an Oriental Spruce with yellow-green foliage. One of the hostas, identified as B-3 Krosso, measures 10 feet in diameter.

An area that is shady until afternoon contains Impatiens, Coral Bells, Veronica and Another interesting tree is Harry Lauder's Walking Stick, which produces long catkins before the leaves appear in the spring. This Corylus avellana "Contorta" lives up to its name, with the contorted branches.

Annuals are mixed in with perennials everywhere. One, Osterspemum, has white blooms with a purple center and ray flowers, blue on the underside. Other annuals Patsy has used include orange upright Fuchsias and the pink variety, and a Moon Flower, a member of the Morning Glory family, which "is just spectacular," Patsy said.

Patsy has used the same plants in several places, which provided continuity to the Tree hydrangeas bloom in late fall, as do the ground cover Astilbe and Toad Lilv. another late bloomer that she said "look like orchids up the stem; I love this plant."

Tall Monardas add height and color in several places as do the golden blooms of Ligulana "Rocket" that work perfectly.

Two other tall plants - Joe Pye weed, which adds a soft, deep rosy-purple note, and Angelica, with its architectural form – are right at home.

Two fragrant Buddleia, a blue "Nanho" and a purple "Black Night" are strategically placed. Several Clematis vines are being trained up posts and trees in several spots.

"I just dug the lawn up and amended it with Canadian Peat and compost (to create these beds). I don't know why, but I have just a few weeds, so he gardens aren't much

The weeds are absent also from a large perennial bed, an area that was filled with bottom pond soil and some Canadian Peat to lighten the soil. It is stuffed full of perennials and a few annuals. I also spotted some tomatoes.

Stately Hollyhocks (some 12 feet tall) in shades of pink, salmon and black tower over the other lovely plants here - among them white Phlox, blue Globe Thistle, Rudbeckia, Lythrum ("in the garden it seems to stay") and Spiderwort. Many of them self-sow.

Very large antique birdhouses center several of the beds, while other pieces of art are strategically placed. A pair of rabbits, a large deer, and a fox have been created from old farm equipment by sculptor Robert Cumpston, Patsy believes that waiting until spring to clean the beds helps promote lush growth. Very early in the spring she tosses Glorious Garden Plant Food from Bordines in the beds and lets the rain soak it into the ground. That's it!

Patsy designed all the gardens and does all the work - except when she needs some "grunt work," which Jim is happy to provide.

Live animals of all types are encouraged in the garden. There is a pet crow (which is fed bacon), a family of woodchucks, rabbits and more. Eight feeders are scattered about the gardens and food is provided for ground feeders. Many butterflies visit, as do hummingbirds.

"I love bright colors and I don't want just one. I want them all, and it works!"

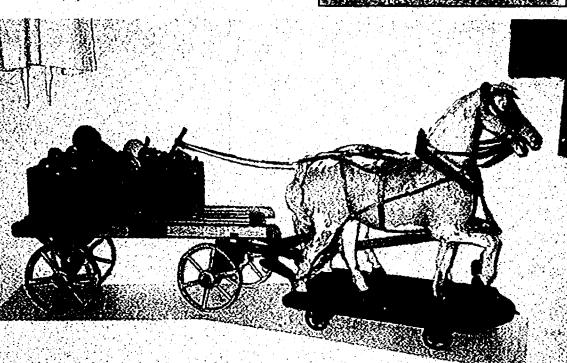

For the butterflies, Patsy has put sand in a plastic pot saucer and added water. When the water evaporates and the sand leaves "fingerprints," like footprints in sand at the beach, the texture is perfect for the butterflies and they will

New life for antiques: An antique birdhouse centers a garden bed (top). The Carlson home is filled with folk art and toys (above and below).

Collection welcome to take up residence

BY MARY KLEMIC At Home Editor

To Jim and Patsy Carlson, collecting antiques is almost child's

Many of the antiques that fill the couple's Clarkston house are

And you feel that the friendly, cheery Carlsons - who have published price guides for antiques, have been featured in a magazine, and are hosting a convention of the Antique Toy Collectors. of America in May at the Kingsley Inn in Bloomfield Hills - enjoy as well as appreciate the items. They are as comfortable living with them as caring for them.

"We live here. This isn't any kind of sanctuary," Jim said. "Our house has always been a lived-in house."

"When I clean house it isn't a chore," Patsy said.

The collection also includes folk art and paintings. All of the pieces are at home in the residence, where the family has lived for 23 years. It's as if the rooms were designed for the objects. Different types go together smoothly.

An old teeter-totter makes an unusual architectural element over a doorway. In that room is a corner cupboard in its original bittersweet color, and an assortment of Putz sheep in an old feed box on the wall. Throw pillows were made up to match the Oriental rug in another room.

"Patsy has a real good knack to put things together," Jim said. A room featuring pine floors and matching window trim houses Early American portraits of children. Among the works is one from the Prior/Hamblin school.

On one wall here is a 19th century Noah's Ark set from Germany, consisting of about 200 tiny figures. This is an example of what was called Sunday toys, Jim explained; something with religious significance played with on Sundays. The pairs of animals line a zigzag shelf made by a friend.

It's a special pleasure going through the room, the Carlsons

"I think you have to buy things that you appreciate," Jim said. Folk art covers the walls in a cozy square room. Details on the pieces offer delights, such as the shading in the fruit of a stenciled theorem and the drum-like frame around a military patch. Rectangular signs with one side cut like a profile advise "Follow Your Nose And Let George Do It" (for car sales) and "Follow Your Nose To The Wawataw Inn In Mackinaw City."

In the kitchen, a weather vane in the shape of a bull, its worn gold leaf making a pattern, now serves as a centerpiece on a table ("We like surfaces"), and bunting gathered in the center forms drapes at windows. A bathroom is festooned with political convention paraphernalia.

The Carlsons started their collection with carousel pieces. They are especially fond of a handsome, noble Looff prancer from the early 1880s. The carousel objects led to toys, such as the Schoenhut circus figures arranged under a little big top on a table. Schoenhut made works from the late 1880s to 1933.

Almost everywhere you look are items that make you think you are in an ageless toy shop. Bliss blocks, little cylinders covered with a short story and illustrations and bearing a letter of the alphabet. Pull toys. Rocking horses. Pipsqueaks that move when the underside of the base is pushed. Sheep that seem alive - covered with real goat hair, or emitting soft baas when their bobbing head is tapped. A glider in which a youngster could pull the reins to set a horse springing and take off on an imaginary ride.

The Carlsons are interested in the messages found on items. "To Carl, Xmas 1876" is on a rocking horse. A wooden stand featuring Popeye was made for a Cub Scout event in 1947, according to an inscription.

"These all belonged to somebody," Patsy said.

Take action on hot oven danger

JOE GAGNON

The little boy named Larry was 2 years old with black curly hair and a face fitting a beauty contest. His mother was cooking pies for the Christmas season in her new electric range as he scampered around the kitchen dashing from chair to chair.

She opened the door and left it in the down position so she could remove the four pans and place them on the kitchen sink.

While working at the sink she did not see her baby quickly dash for the open oven door. The heat emanating from the warm oven made the baby step back a few feet but not before he noticed a bright red object at the bottom of the oven. Curious about the bright color and thinking it might be a new toy, he ran back, reached in and grabbed the red item in his little hand.

I was only 10 years old doing homework in my bedroom when I heard screams of both my brother and my mother. I ran into the kitchen to see my mother holding and rocking the little guy trying to add some comfort to his terror and easing his pain.

I thought of this story as I was reading an article which points out that more than 37,000 children age 14 and under are treated for burns by hot liquids, hot food and hot tap water. This annual figure prompted me to get up and walk over to the electric range in my kitchen and turn it on. I let it warm up until the bottom element was red hot and then I opened the door and let it rest wide open. The element stayed on bright red and I must have stared at it for a good two minutes. I thought about how attractive it is inside my oven as it glows, how it stands out inside the dark oven cavity and how easy it is to reach even for a little child. It reminded me of the many times I've sat in front of an open fire on a beach setting and just stared at the flames. It is no mystery why a child can be attracted to such a glowing piece of unsuspected danger, but I'll tell you what the real mystery is.

The story described above happened in the year 1951, some 47 years ago. From then until now, I wonder how many times it has happened with other children. Every year in cold weather climates, there are people who run their ovens full time to heat their homes because of certain conditions. We know that in this country there are 107,900 house fires annually caused by cooking equipment. The figures for people who have suffered burns and been treated by hospitals is more than 5000 per year. You can not tell me that what happened to my little brother 47 years ago doesn't occur today. I'm sure it does and that bothers me to no end.

Install a door switch similar to the light switch on a refrigerator and when the door is open all the way on the range, the element goes off. We'll save a lot of house fires from occurring and we will prevent little children from burning themselves. It didn't take the U.S. Product Safety Commission or Underwriter's Laboratories to figure this out, it took a simple man who writes a column. Let's you and me see if the power of this press can do some good for others in this country. Make a copy of this article and send it to the manufacturer of the range in your kitchen. Ask for a reply and send it to me. I will guarantee they install a shut-off switch and you can tell the world that you made a difference in this world – stay tuned.

Many improvements bring happy returns

Q. My older home has a great view of a lake and we hate the idea of moving. However, we really need another bathroom. We have been told that this is likely to be an expensive venture, and are wondering what the cost vs. value will be at the point we sell the house.

A. One of the concerns that consumers most frequently voice when remodeling is that costs of the improvement might not be recovered if the house is old within a few years.

Remodeling Magazine, the industry's leading publication, addresses these concerns with its annual "Cost vs. Value" report.

It is interesting to note that for the past couple of years many improvements are likely to recover more than their costs, even if the home is sold within the first year, and of course, the return becomes greater as time passes.

Here are some of the figures for Michigan.

Major kitchen remodels average 113 percent return, while minor kitchen remodels average 109 percent return within the first year.

A remodel of an existing bath can return 96 percent of invested cost, while adding another bath within the existing floor plan of the house averages 104 percent

A 12-by-16 foot, custom-built sunroom averages 105 percent, while a 16by-25 foot family room averages 97 percent and a 16-by-20 foot deck can return 110 percent of costs.

The study notes that replacing windows and siding tends to return less than 80 percent of cost.

The study doesn't include values for complex projects such as whole house remodels, since these projects vary widely in cost and scope. One valuable resource for identifying the value of projects is the professional appraiser.

These are good general guidelines for this area. However, each situation is different and should be approached on an individual basis.

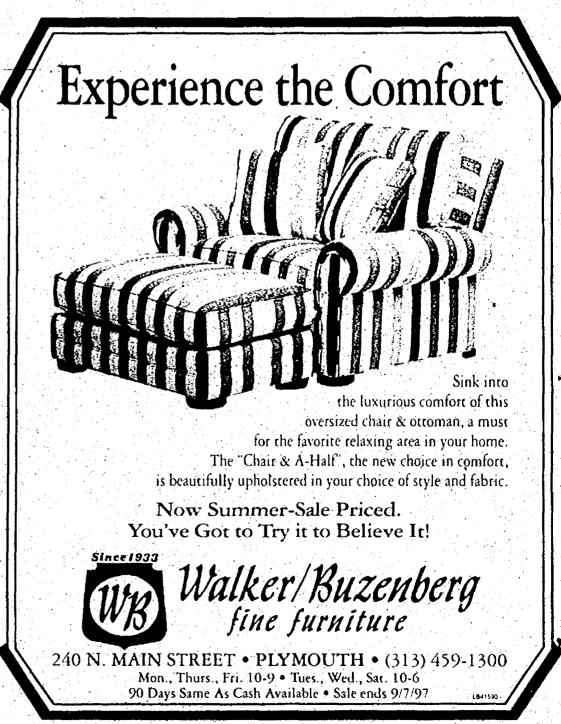

For instance, a well-planned skylight might dramatically brighten a dark room and thus return more than double its cost, while a poorly situated bathroom might return much less than the study indicates. One less tangible, but no less important, factor in the value question is that a product's value has everything to do with one's use and enjoyment of it.

It is important to be well informed when making an investment such as this. Using industry professionals, such as members of the Michigan Remodeling Association, will help prevent costly mistakes.

We all have heroes - here's to Julia

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

We all have to have heroes, someone to look up to besides my father, Joe Mossok - who comes in first, Julia Child came in a close second. The early '60s for me were filled with The Beatles and Julia what a combination for a teenager! I may have been watching John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr on Ed Sullivan during prime time, but I was tuned into "The French Chef" by day (or at least during its weekly half hour programming).

Julia Child was for me, the "missing ingredient" of role modeling. Estelle Mossok had etiquette down to perfection – food handling was a specialty – the skill of food preparation, was left to the restaurant chefs. Julia became my teacher, mentor and food icon, and still remains so. After having taken Master Classes with the Master, Julia Child, I count my blessings that she is still here at 85 years old for us all to admire and adore. And adore, they do – chefs, food writers, and "foodies" (people who love food) hold her in the highest esteem. Julia Child is the pillar of culinary knowledge, topped off with a load of wit and graciousness.

Julia in her 85th year is still making memories ... and I'm still watching PBS on Saturdays!

Celebrate Julia Child – read her books, watch her shows, revel in her knowledge, and Master the Art of Cooking (French or otherwise), or at Jeast, attempt to.

(Veal Shanks Braised with Wine and Herbs and Flavored with Lemon and Orange)

For 4 people Browning the Veal 3 to 4 yeal hind shanks (6 to 8 pounds), or 2 foreshanks (9 pounds including knuckles), sawed into crosswise pieces 1 1/2 to 2 inches thick

Salt and pepper

1 cup all-purpose flour

Olive oil or cooking oil

1 or 2 heavy skillets

A heavy casserole (Dutch oven)just large enough, if possible, to hold meat in one layer

1/2 cup each of sliced carrots and onions

A cover for the casserole

Lay the meat on a tray or a large sheet of waxed paper. Salt and pepper all sides, dredge in flour, and shake off excess. Pour a 1/8 inch layer of oil into the skillet or skillets and set over a moderately high heat. When oil is almost smoking, brown the meat on all sides. (Do not crowd the meat or it will not brown properly; you may have to brown in several batches.)

While meat is browning, pour 2 tablespoons of oil into the casserole, stir in sliced carrots and onions, cover, and cook over moderate heat for 5 to 6 minutes, until vegetables are tender.

Adding the Braising Ingredients

1 cup dry white wine or 3/4 cup dry white vermouth

About 2 cups excellent yeal stock, or half and half canned chicken broth and canned beef bouillon

2 to 3 firm, ripe red tomatoes

1 to 2 cloves garlic, crushed

1 teaspoon basil

Torange

Llemon

When the meat is brown, arrange it in the casserole with the cooked carrots and onions; the meat should fit in one layer, but this is not always possible, especially with foreshanks. Pour browning oil out of skillets and deglaze by pouring in the wine, setting over heat, and scraping coagulated juices into wine with a wooden spoon; pour the wine over the meat. Add stock, or broth and bouillon, to come halfway up the meat.

A QUESTION OF VALANCE

The stationary window-topping treatment known as a valance is quite versatile. It can be either elaborate or minimal, from flat lengths of tailored fabric to yards of gathered or plealed fabric. Regardless of the style chosen, a valance can provide several benefits: For one, it is short and blocks a minimum of light, making it perfect for windows with views or window sills laden with plants. A valance also can camouflage the minimal space above a window frame, thereby making the panes appear to be taller than they actually are. On the other hand, if privacy or energy efficiency are of concern, valances can neatly cover a stack of mini blinds or cellular shades when they are drawn. This paining allows a sleek look in combination with an unobstructed view, with the option of raising or lowering shades as

Drop the tomatoes for 10 seconds in boiling water, cut out stems, and peel. Cut tomatoes in half crosswise, squeeze out the juice and seeds, chop the pulp roughly, and add to the casserole. Stir in the garlic and basil. Cut the colored part of the peel off the orange and lemon, then cut peel into very fine julienne strips 1/16 inch wide.

To remove bitterness from peel, simmer for 10 minutes in 1 quart of water, drain and add to casserole. (Recipe may be prepared ahead to this point; bring to simmer before proceeding.)

Braising

Cover the casserole and either simmer over low heat on top of the stove, or set in lower middle of a preheated 325 degree oven. (Oven is preferable because of its more even heat.) Maintain liquid at a slow simmer for about 1 1/4 hours (usually 1 1/2 hours for foreshanks), or until meat is tender when pierced with a fork. Do nor overcook; the meat should not fall from the bone.

Finishing The Sauce

When the meat is tender, remove it from the casserole to a side dish. Tip casserole and skin off cooking fat. Set casserole over high heat and boil down braising liquid rapidly to concentrate its flavor and to thicken it slightly; you should end up with about 2 cups. Taste carefully for seasoning, adding salt and pepper if necessary. If you are not serving immediately, return meat to casserole and set aside, uncovered. To reheat, cover and simmer for 3 or 4 minutes.

Serving

Either serve from casserole or arrange the meat on a hot platter surrounded by rice, noodles, or boiled potatoes. Pour the sauce over the meat.

The 18th annual jazz festival features a dozen national headliners, more than 40 Detroit and Michigan artists and almost two dozen high school and college bands. It offers everything from Dixie and swing to the modern big band sounds of the McCoy Tyner Big Band and the Mingus Big Band to the rich Latin rhythms of Manny Oquendo and Libre.

It's all jazz and all differ-

"I don't think about themes," Dulzo said. "I think about quality. I try to get whoever's best at what they do. I try to get balance. Not too far modern, not too far old-fashioned, too far young lions, too far same old names. I want some surprises."

Dulzo said some people like

Charles Mingus would have been delighted to have had a big band playing his music, but according to Sue Mingus, widow of the great bass player/composer/band leader, the economics of the times just didn't allow it.

Sinead O'Connor focuses on soothing

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO

Thanks to the birth of her daughter, Roison, Irish pop singer Sinead O'Connor has a new focus in life - comforting troubled souls.

Her latest EP "Gospel Oak" (Chrysalis/EMI Records) is a reflection of that. In the lullaby-like lead-off track "This Is. To Mother You," the 29-year-old O'Connor sings "This is to mother you/To comfort you and get you through/Through when your nights are lonely/Through when your dreams are only blue/This is to mother you."

The lyrics "4 my love this night I have/Your baby in my belly/All my life I'll love you for/The life you've given me/So love no longer be frightened/I will never leave you" are wrapped around rolling drum beats in "4 My Love."

The six-song "Gospel Oak," on which she sings the traditional Irish song "He Moved Through the Fair," is dedicated to the people of three war-torn areas - Israel, Rwanda, and Northern Ireland. It is her first album since 1994's "Universal Mother" (Chrysalis/EMI). "It's quite personal things," O'Connor said of the dedication. "I've always had strong feelings about Israel since I was a young child."

Phoning from Los Angeles, O'Connor said she is appalled behind a rich legacy. Many jazz critics place Mingus with Duke Ellington and Thelonious Monk as the greatest jazz composers. In addition to his own meticulously supervised recordings, Mingus left compositions behind for others to arrange, play and interpret. His music encompassed a wide and ever changing palette of innovative sounds.

Sue Mingus has kept that legacy alive, first with a changing group of musicians recording as Mingus Dynasty in five or seven piece combo settings and, for the last seven years, with the Mingus Big Band.

"We have a home at a club here in New York that's a restaurant, cafe, nightclub combination," Sue Mingus said in a telephone interview from New York. The band plays at the Fez club underneath the Time Cafe in Manhattan.

A performance of Mingus' master work "Epitaph" with a 31piece orchestra directed by Gunther Schuller in 1989 convinced Sue Mingus that a big band was needed to play Mingus' music.

"Hearing all those colors, harmonies and textures coming from all those instruments," she said.

Though the compositions are all by Mingus, there are only a few Mingus big band arrangements because he usually worked in small combos. Arrangements have been prepared by former Mingus associates such as Schuller and current band members.

"But he was able to make a five piece group sound larger, that was his genius," Mingus said.

In addition to its regular stint at the club, the band has toured throughout the country and Europe. This is its first performance in Michigan.

Mingus' stature as a composer has only increased with the years.

"Part of it is that it is very difficult music," Sue Mingus said. "He liked that and he felt that other musicians felt the same way. It was not just to be difficult but he was interested in voicing, textures, harmonies and he experimented with rhythmic changes all the time. He would take a 4/4 beat and move into a waltz and then into a Cuban beat and back to something else." She said other musicians enjoy playing Mingus' music because he leaves them a lot of open spaces where they can bring their own playing into the composition, an essential element to preserve jazz improvisation.

Sue Mingus said the band doesn't tightly program their performances and what they'll play is usually "anybody's guess."

"But, they'll probably do 'Little Royal Suite,' a number that Charles originally wrote for (jazz trumpet great) Roy Eldridge," Mingus said.

She said the band has lately been experimenting with some Mingus pieces inspired by Latin percussion music that will be a part of their next album which they hope to record in Septem-

The band features some first rate young musicians, including Ronnie Cuber, Seamus Blake · and John Stubblefield.

"This is a university of experience for young musicians to get their feet wet," she said. "A great musical experience to play this music night after. Charles would have loved to have had the opportunity to compose for a band with this regularity."

The Mingus Big Band performs 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 30. on the Ford/Airtouch Cellular Stage. Also at 3:45 p.m. Saturday, Sue Mingus and band members will meet with young musicians on the Pepsi Jam Academy Stage.

had a chance to meet the "girl from Ipanema" herself, Astrud Gilberto.

At this year's Montreux Festival, Landis, from Rochester, will present a "Brazilian Love Affair."

"When I was a kid, my parents had albums of Stan Getz, Astrud Gilberto and Antonio Joabim," Landis said. "I just thought what nice, cool, liquid sound that was. I also liked the way Astrud wrestled with the English language."

Landis is a popular local performer who sings in various musical configurations and different jazz styles. On Friday, Aug. 21, she and guitarist Rick Matle will complete their summer "Beans Tour" of performances at Coffee Beanery coffee shops with a set at 8:30 p.m. at the Birmingham store. On Saturday Landis will participate in the "Sisters in Jazz" mentoring program with protege Kristin Ward at 1:15 p.m. on the Bop

"Percussion includes bongos, congas, bells, shakers and maybe I can get him to use a nose whistle," Landis joked.

Landis will be playing with performers she has played with for more than 20 years.

"There's a weird, spooky kind of empathy," she said. "You know what they're going to do and they know what you're going to do. It's like a family situation." The band features in addition to Matle, Gary Shunk on piano, Paul Keller on bass, David Taylor on drums and Dennis Sheri-

Jazz Festival. One thing led to another, and in 1979 the first Montreux Jazz Festival was presented in Detroit. College kids were involved in the festival from the get-go, and high school jazzers followed. Three years ago, Montreux Festival director Jim Dulzo invited Pierson, now director of the Michigan School Band & Orchestra Association, and the new Michigan president of the International Association of Jazz Educators, to serve on a jazz education committee. This year, Pierson, and other professional musicians and educators, with help from the Southeastern Michigan Jazz Association, will present two jazz clinics a day, 1 and 5 p.m. Friday, Aug.

29 to Monday, Sept. 1 on the Pepsi Jam Academy Stage. Although the workshops are designed for high school and college musicians, anyone is welcome to bring their horn and participate. Students will receive handouts, and go through a practice session where they'll learn more about jazz and improvisation. At "Meet the Artist," students can meet professional musicians, including Sue Mingus and band members and ask questions.

This year over 20 college and high school big bands and combos will be performing on Hudson's Bop Shop Stage including the Farmington Harrison High School Jazz Ensemble.

"It's a great thing to play in a professional environment, and they have a great audience to play for," said Mark Phillips, band director at Farmington Harrison High School, "It's not like playing for your parents. Montreux is a world-class jazz festival.."

Two of Phillips' students, Chip Chipelli, a bass player who graduated in June, and Derek Lewis, baritone sax, an 11th grader this fall, were chosen to play in the Michigan All Star High School Big Band. Another highlight is "Jazz for a New Generation with Harold McKinney," presented each day at 2:45 p.m. on the Pepsi Academy Stage. "This is for youngsters, it's a nice event," said Pierson." He plays musiclittle kids can relate to."

cal "Carousel."

The Music Theatre of Michigan (formerly Jumpstart the Arts) is a pro-am performance group headed by Michael J. Sawaya and Broadway actor. Daniel Cooney, Cooney, a 1985 alum of Westland John Glenn, has returned home for the last three summers to lead the intensive workshops for aspiring performers, which culminate each year in full-staged musical productions. "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Evita" marked the first two sensons for the group. Currently, MTM is staging the Rodgers and Hammerstein musi-

"Carousel," a musical with a slightly shadowy edge, turns out to be a near-ideal choice for showcasing such generous amounts of area talent. That talent is manifested here in everything from performances to sets to lighting to costumes and beyond.

Director Cooney also stars as the tough carnival barker, Billy Bigelow, who often resorts to violence toward those who displease him. This includes his loving wife, Julie (Natalie Ross), who, in that familiar way of so many musical theater heroines, just loves him to death anyway. Here, Cooney manages to imbue the ne'er-do well Billy with a great amount of appeal. Better yet, his singing talents are well-nigh irresistible, especially when it's his turn with an old favorite like "If I Loved You," or the lesserknown "Soliloguy,

REVIEW

Though her role is not nearly so colorful, Natalie Ross also turns in an engaging performance as the sweet-sad Julie. Much of her appeal lies in her way with tunes like "If I Loved You," and the pensive "What's the Use of Wonderin."

In supporting roles, Jamie Earls is a delight as the irrepressible Carrie Pipperidge, John Sartor is appropriately menacing as the troublemaker Jigger Craigin, and Marsha Rofel as the maternal Nettie Fowler is always fun to watch and listen to (especially when leading this really first-rate chorus in the bubbly "June Is Bustin' Out All Over.")

Other standouts in the large cast include Robert Adamczyk as the stuffy Enoch Snow, Suzanne Celeskey as carnival boss lady Mrs. Mullin and choreographer Lily Tedeschi, who plays the 15year-old Louise Bigelow.

Musicians seem to overwhelm a voice or two along the way, and players' "marks" seem oddly placed at times, as if director Cooney were set on filling this large stage even when he only has a couple of players with which to do it. (Also, all that "fog" moving in from the wings eventually distracts.)

But any flaw pales next to costumes, lighting, sets, backdrops, scenery, all of which are truly extraordinary (you'll not soon forget the dream-like, glittery carousel).

With the music of Rodgers and Hammerstein added in, plus enough are performance talent to utterly warm your heart, how miss?

at the condition of Israel considering "the leaders of the three great religions were born and spent their life there. I was thinking about the young people there also and how it must be for

The young people of Israel must be miserable, she added, being in the middle of conflicts for which they're not responsible.

"We met some people there when we played there a couple years ago. The young people are in a similar situation in Northern Ireland, but in Israel they've only had six months of peace in their whole lives from conception. Children couldn't go to school during the Gulf War. Teenagers were dropping off waiting for the war to finish."

O'Connor, who is also the mother of a son, Jake, with drummer/programmer John Reynolds, said her feelings are the same about Northern Ireland and Rwanda. She explained that the Irish-influenced song "Petit Poulet" is about "the horror and how on earth do you comfort the children and grown ups that have experienced death? It's too horrific to contemplate. I don't think a song can save the world or provide a solution but it can provide some kind of soothing. That's what my intention was with the record in general."

In "Petit Poulet," named for a French term of affection, she sings the passage "There isn't any answer to the question/ You only learn to live with it/There isn't any answer in religion/Don't believe one who says there is.'

'I play nothing off the first album because I feel quite far away from it. I'm interested in providing soothing. (Back then) I was feeling angry. It was very painful to be there. I wouldn't expect even my worst enemy to live with that. I want to make people happy.'

> Sinead O'Connor at Meadow Brook

The question, she said, is, What are we all doing here?"

"Religion claims to have some sort of explanation but religion can't tell you what we're all doing here. It can comfort you like a song."

O'Connor was born Dec. 8, 1967, in Dublin, Ireland, the third of four children. She has described her mother as physically and emotionally abusive. According to "MusicHound Rock: The Essential Album Guide" (Visible Ink Press), O'Connor blames the Catholic Church for the circumstances of her childhood, believing that the religion condones child abuse and has, for several centuries, conspired with the English to take away the rights of the Irish people.

She made her feelings public by ripping up a photo of Pope John Paul II after an appearance on "Saturday Night Live," and reportedly by writing the song "I Am Stretched On Your Grave" on her 1990 sophomore album "I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got" (Chrysalis). The "Saturday Night Live" incident and others for which she's been criticized, has not had an impact on her sales, O'Connor explained.

"It hasn't been very difficult to keep up with my fan base, contrary to what the newspapers would have you believe. I'm a popular and very loved artist in this country. People they say a lot of things that aren't true," O'Connor said speaking quickly and somewhat defensively.

"I'm misrepresented a lot. They say my record sales kind of plummeted once I started to cause trouble. The fact is the album and the single naturally don't stay there (on the charts) forever. ... It's simply a lie for anyone to say my fan base has been affected by those things,' she added about "I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got," the album that is home to the Princepenned "Nothing Compares 2 U."

O'Connor will make a rare appearance at Meadow Brook Music Festival in Rochester on Sunday, Aug. 24. She last performed in this area Aug. 5, 1990, during a sold-out show at Pine Knob Music Theatre. She was scheduled for Lollapalooza 1995 at Pine Knob but she bowed out due to her pregnancy with Roi-

"It just so happens that the best musicians for the job (were women). I also tend to work with friends of mine. That makes touring a much less lonely experience. Touring can be a very; very lonely experience. You're away from home and nothing is familiar. You're away from your loved ones."

O'Connor has been "squealing around the room," however, because her children were coming for a week-long visit on Sunday, Aug. 17.

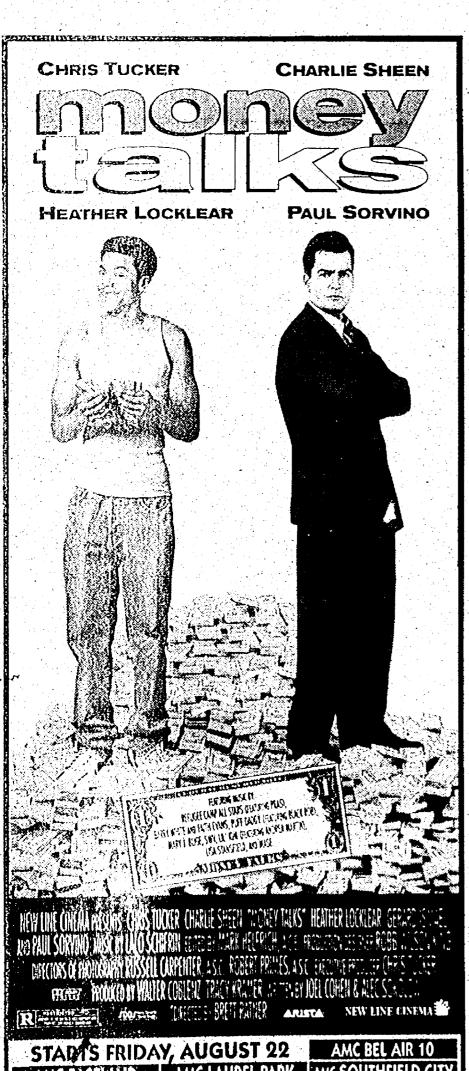

Her Meadow Brook show will include a retrospective of her hits, except those from her 1992 big band album "Am I Not Your Girl?" (Chrysalis/Ensign) ("lt's too different from what I'm doing now," she said), and her 1987. debut, "The Lion and the Cobra" (Chrysalis), which spawned the hits "Mandinka," "I Want Your (Hands on Me)," and "Just Like U Said It Would B."

"I play nothing off the first album because I feel quite far away from it. I'm interested in providing soothing. (Back then) I was feeling angry. It was very painful to be there. I wouldn't expect even my worst enemy to live with that. I want to make people happy."

DINING

The West End Grill, comfortable yet dynamic

BY RENEE SKOGLUND SPECIAL WRITER

If valuable things come in small packages, then The West End Grill in Ann Arbor is a diamond.

It's easy to walk right by this small jewel, tucked away on a busy side street already dotted with a variety of restaurants. But don't. Instead, walk up the steps, open the etched glass door and began savoring one of the nicest restaurant atmospheres in Ann Arbor.

All the details here seem to work: soft green walls with creamy white paneling, paintings and mirrors that adorn rather than dominate, deep rose carpeting, a decorative black tinned ceiling and 17 tables dressed in crisp white and dark green tablecloths.

And, of course, there's candlelight on every table. This place has class. It's definitely worth the two-week wait for weekend reservations.

The West End Grill is open only for dinner, so owners Kaiser Yang, 29, and Roland Pohlman, 30, who met while working on their MBAs at the University of Michigan, have time to concentrate on what's important. Dining at their restaurant is all about service.

"There's three components that make up the perfect dining experience - food, service and atmosphere," said Yang. "We want it to be an intimate experience, where the customers walk away feeling that they have had a very personal dining experi-

That dining experience begins soon after you sit down. Yang and Pohlman, who previously owned a restaurant in St. Louis, have trained their staff to "present" menu items and the evening's specials with a generous portion of adjectives.

There's something about listening to a description of Poulet Montrachet, a boneless breast of chicken rolled and stuffed with spinach, prosciutto ham, montrachet cheese and artichoke hearts that builds anticipation. By the time the waitperson gets to the white wine cream sauce with a

The restaurant's one-page menu refuses to wander. It is disciplined primarily to steaks and fresh seafood, with one or two chicken or pasta entrees. It's classic, but with a Euro-Asian twist. "We call it new American cuisine," said Yang.

Two of the most popular entrees are the Filet Bearnaise at $19.95 and the Asian Salmon at $17.95. No wonder. The filet is stuffed with Chilean langostinos and lobster meat, then grilled and served with the Bearnaise sauce. The salmon is marinated in plum sauce, seared and topped with a Chinese salsa made with shiitake mushrooms. Ah, exotic but accessible.

There's also Chef Siamak Jalali's grilled boneless chicken breast topped with a bourbonmaple syrup glaze, an herbencrusted pork tenderloin with gorgonzola cream sauce, toasted ravioli (actually wonton skins filled with artichoke hearts. fresh basil, goat cheese and sundried tomatoes), and sea scallops served on a bed of spicy Jamaican corn relish.

The restaurant also has a full bar, including almost 80 bottles of wine, mostly California. While most selections of wine must be purchased by the bottle, a representative sampling is served by the glass.

Management company can do better

Q. I am extremely upset with our management company for not advising us of a recent class on community association operation, which I later found out it knew about and ignored. Is this a common occurrence?

A. A good management company will try to apprise its constituent clients of all classes and seminars, as well as other literature that is available for reading by community association officers and directors. I would seriously question why the management company has not chosen to provide you with information that will assist you in that process. Important information should not be left only in the hands of the management company, to the exclusion of its constituent clients. I would seriously consider bringing this to the attention of the management company at your earliest conve-

You gotta believe Could St. Joseph be seller's friend?

By NORMAN PRADY SPECIAL WRITER

Head down? Face up? In the front yard? In the backyard? Looking north? Watching the house? Watching the

The possibilities for the proper burial of the St. Joseph statue seem about as varied as the buriers themselves: those home sellers of many regions, cultures and religions who believe that interment of the icon will hasten the arrival of a customer.

What? Bury a statue to help sell a house? What's this all about?

What it's about is a practice that seems to bloom continuously in a gray, fuzzy field of belief that's fertilized by concepts of faith, magic, folklore, legend and superstition.

It's about the idea that Joseph - St. Joseph - husband of Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ, can and will help you make a deal on your rambling ranch or cozy Cape Cod.

It's about the idea that St. Joseph, a carpenter noted for his work as a family provider and protector, will intercede on the seller's behalf and invoke prompt divine assistance to the commercial cause.

And, it appears, hundreds of local sellers say it's so.

"We sell maybe a thousand or more a year," said Joseph Soboslay, who, with wife Pat, runs Catholic Supply House in Warren. "The ones we do the best with are about three inches high."

He offered a possible clue to the St. Joseph real estate legend, quoting from a pamphlet published by a company named Roman Inc.: "European nuns" of no known time or place, "buried a medal with St Joseph's likeness on some property they hoped to acquire for the convent. Gradually, the medal was replaced with statues and the focus changed from buying to selling."

Okay, but if you hear it told by Dr. Michael Bernacchi, professor of marketing at University of Detroit Mercy, they weren't European nuns; they were New Jersey nuns. And they weren't buying, they were selling.

In the story Bernacchi knows, the need was to raise money to save an impoverished convent by selling off some adjoining land. "They had a big, awesome statue of St. Joseph and they let him be close to the soil to work the wonders they needed."

So is the statue's stature a significant factor? Perhaps not, according to Gloria Sinkler, manager of McDevitt's, a Catholic supply store in Royal Oak, where the statues sell for from about a dollar up to $20 or more. "We have real estate people coming in and buying the 99-cent ones, and they work just as well." Well, how well is well? Sinkler offered a view of the homeowner whose house "has been for sale for a year or six months or whatever, and they bury the statue in the yard and the house goes real fast. It's sold within a week.

Could be a month. "I know for a fact that my daughter's mcther-on-law moved out of state and that house was on the market over a year." Her daughter "kind of poohpoohed it and then decided to do it and the house was gone, I think, in-less than a month."

Marketing expert Bernacchi, however, raises a question. "Without casting aspersions on their faith," said the selfdescribed fervent Catholic, "but it seems that the longer it's for sale, the more likely the sale date is just around the corner."

On the other hand, Bernacchi thinks that in almost any selling situation those who believe in their products. who know their products, and who have a strong desire to sell are likely more empowered to make things happen than are those less determined, less intense."

Bernacchi also has a theory about the upside-down, or head-first posture: It might have come from the pedestal problem, he says. That is, many of the statues are mounted on small stands which, according to the professor, could be seen as inhibiting necessary meaningful contact with the ground. Nancy Austin, a Realtor with Coldwell Banker Preferred, Plymouth, said, "I was tempted to do it myself when I was selling my house. Other real estate agents "keep a supply in their desks," according to Carol S. Frick manager of Ralph Manuel Associates, Birmingham.

Frick thinks many sellers speak of the practice "tongue in cheek," but if the house isn't selling, it's time to bury St. Joseph. "I think a lot of people do it. But I don't think it's confined to Catholics.

"I think everybody does it. I had Jewish customers once who did it. They figured they could use all the help they could get." Did it work? "The house sold eventually, so who knows?"

The house of a Protestant customer also sold after being on the market "a long time." This seller had buried two statues, but Frick could not assess any possible increased potency resulting from double digging.

"I don't know how much is fact and how much is fiction," Frick said. Or, as she allowed, how much fits into another category: faith. "I prefer to think that if they'd reduce the price to a reasonable area, it would help God along."

statue-burying, the Archdiocese of Detroit apparently hasn't noticed. Asked for the Catholic Church's view of it, spokesman Richard Laskos said he had no familiarity with the practice. "I'm trying to think where we'd go

An unscientific survey of some of the world's other major religious groups produced no evidence of an analogous

In Judaism, the mezuzah is a symbol placed on the home by its new owners after the purchase. A small parchment scroll with Biblical passages, rolled into a sometimes-ornate container, the mezuzah is fastened to the doorpost.

"A religious icon that probably has a totem origin" offering "semi-magical or divine protection for the house," said Adam Chalom, rabbinic intern at Birmingham Temple in Farmington. But he knew of no pre-sale rituals.

As for the Presbyterian counterpart, Dr. Murray S. Blackadar said he had never heard of the practice or of anything like it. Blackadar is pastor of Church of Our Savior Presbyterian in West Bloomfield.

"It's about as un-Presbyterian as you can get. You ought to have more faith

"Presbyterians have concern about faith in 'what' and the burying "would be a kind of a superstitious behavior. Faith is focused on God and Jesus Christ and not on symbols or magical

"Catholic people I know don't do that

Told that metro area statue sales might well be in the thousands, Blackadar said, "Poor St. Joseph."

A kit he paid about $8.50 for fascinates Bernacchi. Called "The Home Sale Practice," it's a box with a window that St. Joseph peers through.

burying the statue, and the caption "Can't sell your home? Ask St. Joseph

The kit tells Bernacchi that the legend has evolved into pure marketing; as evidenced by the development of this product as a formalized marketing tool. He's especially taken with the "Made in USA" logo, and assumes the manufacturer means the box and the statue, not St. Joseph himself.

He also likes the recycling symbol and thinks it means, the box, not the statue. Some buriers, many of whom are said to now wrap their statues in plastic bags to keep them clean, dig them up to recycled them into their future house sales. Another practice, apparently minor, is to leave the statue with the home buyers for their own

"One customer," said sales agent Juanita Mallmann, "went to a store to get a statue and they were out and not expecting any for two weeks. They told her they should learn to have more on hand in the spring when so many hous-gift of money from a friend or relative can be used, but only if it's free and clear, with not strings or obligations to the lender. If anyone suggests that you falsely certify that a relative is giving you money, refuse.

Do not list fake co-borrowers on your loan application. While their income might help you qualify, fake coborrowers are not going to give you money to pay the monthly mortgage payments. Also, anyone you list as a coborrower has rights to your property.

Be truthful about your credit problems, past and present. Watch out for people or companies who call themselves credit fixers or credit repair magicians. Often, a written explanation from you may be sufficient to explain a credit problem.

Be honest about your intention to occupy the house. To say that you are planning to live there, when you aren't, violates Federal law and is a crime.

Do not provide false supporting documents, such as fake "gift letters," cash on-hand statements, explanations of prior credit problems, statements that you will perform certain repairs on the property, etc.

Don't be discouraged

If your loan application is rejected, find out what the problem is and how it can be resolved. Maybe you need to look for a less-expensive house or save more money. It is better that you wait and solve your problems instead of committing fraud. But do remember, there are many options available for low-downpayment loans, which we've discussed in recent columns.

You don't want to lose the house and the money you have in it and ruin your credit history. Most important, loan fraud is a serious crime that can result in civil liability, criminal penalties, or

Refinancing up, ARMs down in July

Freddie Mac's snapshot of lending activity in July shows refinances grew. adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) were down and balloon mortgages continued to offer favorable interest rates for borrowers who plan to move within five to seven years.

Refinancing activity continued to pick up in July, rising three percentage points over June figures to 27 percent of applications. Interest rates for fixedrate mortgages (FRMs) trended downward, breaking through the 7.5-percent threshold. In July, the 30-year FRM averaged 7.5 percent, down nearly 0.2 percentage points from June.

Conversely, the ARM share of applications fell further to 20 percent in July, while the spread between FRMs and ARMs narrowed further. June's ARM share was 23 percent.

Lenders who offer seven-year balloons on average charged a little more than half of a percentage point discount in the interest rate than on the 30-year FRM. The seven-year balloon averaged 6.94 percent, compared to 7.46 percent for the 30-year FRM. Lenders offering five-year balloons charged about 0.7 percentage points less in the interest rate than the 30year FRM. The average rate for the five year balloon was 6.75 percent, which is considerably lower than the 30-year FRM.

"By choosing a balloon mortgage, the homeowner is assured of a fixed rate for the dura tion of the loan, while enjoying the benefits of a lower interest rate."

Freddie Mac has polled lenders on a monthly basis for their share of refi nancings since 1987 and on ARM lend ing since 1995. Freddie Mac plans to survey lenders on a variety of other housing finance trends on a monthly basis as well, beginning this month.

Getting the scoop on siding

BY POPULAR MECHANICS FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Siding is a big part of any house, usually occupying more square footage than anything else including roofing, windows and doors. In many ways, it's the face your house presents to your neighborhood and the community beyond.

If you're in the market for new siding, here's a look at three of several materials that are available.

Once, there was only portland cement stucco. But in the past 20 years, a synthetic stucco has come into wide use. Its formula replaces the portland cement with acrylic resins. It's known as Exterior Insulated Finish Systems (EIFS).

Acrylic resins help form a weatherproof surface. The material is troweled over insulated sheathing with mesh fastened to it. EIFS combines durability with good thermal insulation. Its color is blended right into the finish coat, so you don't have to paint them.

Traditional stucco consists of three coats of a mix containing portland cement and sand (also called portland cement plaster). This is applied over wire mesh on sheathing, or the stucco is troweled over concrete block.

Properly installed stucco is incredibly durable, but details, such as coat thickness, have a major effect on its durability (the same is true of EIFS). While a small number of hairline cracks are considered inevitable, even on properly installed stucco, major cracking, flaking and delamination are not typical. With either type of stucco, ask your contractor for references on jobs that were completed more than a year ago, to determine if the jobs have stood up well. Brick is the most durable and the most expensive siding. It's considered to be maintenance-free, but sometimes it needs to have efflorescence (minerals that leach from the mortar and brick) cleaned from its surface.

Thin brick siding is made from full-width brick (not plastic or other materials) that is sliced into thin pieces. This system is useful for brick siding in remodeling jobs where installing regular brick presents structural problems. Thin brick is attached with adhesive or

You have the right to demand good workmanship with any siding, but even more so with brick since it is unforgiving of sloppy installation. Ask your contractor for references where the brick was installed several years ago to determine how the installation has stood up.

Metal siding is made from steel or aluminum sheet formed to look like wood siding. It receives a factory-applied coating, and the surface may be smooth or textured. Aluminum siding is durable and if you don't like exterior painting, it will eliminate the need to paint for many years - 20 years or longer depending on climate.

Its color will fade as it ages, but modern siding has a more durable finish than that installed years ago. It can be dented, however, by careless placement of ladders or bouncing hailstones. And, aluminum siding can buckle during heat waves if it's not properly installed.

Steel siding looks like aluminum siding, but it is more dent- and warp-resistant. It tends to be installed in the Midwest where violent hailstorms are common. A drawback is that it will rust if it is scratched on bare steel. Such spots must be painted.

Second-quarter state resales hold steady

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12 /PRNewswire/ -- Sales of existing single-family homes, condominiums and co-ops stood at nearrecord levels across the country during the second quarter, according to the National Association of Realtors.

Nationally, NAR's latest survey of total existing-home sales showed the volume at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 4.65 million units during the second quarter, which is off a marginal 1.1 percent from the record pace of 4.70 million recorded during the second quarter of 1996. NAR has been tracking the total resale series with state breakouts since 1981_

Twenty-three states and the District of Columbia reported resale increases from the second quarter of 1996. The strongest gains were posted in Nebraska, where activity rose 21.2 percent; Connecticut, which recorded a 21.0-percent improvement; and 'Strong consumer confidence, a good economy and a pent-up demand in the trade-up sector have combined with favorable affordability conditions to keep the momentum going.'

> Russell K. Booth National Association of Realtors president in the District of Columbia, where resale activity rose 19.8

percent. NAR President Russell K. Booth said resales have remained heavier than analysts anticipated earlier this year. "Coming off a sales record in 1996, a slowdown was expected but existing-home sales have shown unusual strength," he said. "Strong consumer confidence, a good economy and a pent-up demand in the trade-up sector have combined with favorable affordability conditions to keep the momentum going," he explained.

Recent enactment of tax legislation providing favorable capital gains tax treatment for home sellers could bolster the already strong market, Booth said. NAR is expecting only a slight impact on sales volume. "We expect more sales will be based on actual need rather than tax consequences, particularly in cases involving home owners who either wish to trade down to smaller homes or who are moving from high-cost areas to lessexpensive ones," Booth added.

According to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., the national average commitment rate for 30-year, conventional. fixed-rate mortgages was 7.92 percent during the second quarter, down from 8.11 percent during the second quarter of 1996.

John A. Tuccillo, NAR's consulting economist, continued to play down the role of interest rates. "We're seeing a market driven more by need and desire," he said. "With good, steady economic conditions, we do expect a slight slowdown, simply because so much housing demand has been filled over the last couple of years, but a strong housing market will continue," he added.

Regionally, the Northeast actually recorded second-quarter resale activity 1.3 percent above the level of one year ago. In additions to the strong gain in Connecticut, existing-home sales rose 15.1 percent in Massachusetts and 13.0 percent in Rhode Island compared to the second quarter of 1996.

In the Midwest, total existing-home sales slipped 0.9 percent from the record pace recorded during last year's second quarter. However, there were pockets of strong activity. Besides Nebraska, Indiana also posted a double- digit increase with resales up 13.5 percent from a year ago: Missouri showed a 2.5 percent gain.

The South experienced a 1.7 percent decline in existing-home sales between the second quarter of 1996 and the second quarter of 1997. The District of Columbia was the only area of the South to record double-digit sales increases. However, Louisiana resales were up 4.9 percent from the second quarter of 1986, while West Virginia recorded a 4.6-percent increase. Existing-home sales in the West dropped 1.9 percent from year-ago levels. Strong performers included Washington, where sales rose 10.7 percent from the second quarter of 1996; and Montana, up 9.0 percent. In Cabifornia, which recorded the highest sales volume, resales rose 3.0; percent from a year ago.

The National Association of Realtors, "The Voice for Real Estate," is the nation's largest professional association, representing nearly 720,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry. The seasonally adjusted anninal rate for a particular quarter represents what the total number of actual sales for a year would be if the relative resale pace for that quarter were maintained for the year's four consecutive quarters.

Seasonally adjusted rates are used in reporting quarterly data to factor out seasonal variations in resale activity. For example, home sales volume normally is higher in the summer and relatively light in winter, primarily because of differences in the weather.

Safely getting into the swim of things

(NAPS) - It's better to be safe than sorry - especially when it comes to enjoying your swimming pool.

Before you enter the water to enjoy another a refreshing splash, refresh your knowledge of poolside safety with these tips:

- Prevent accidents by not running near the pool or engaging in horseplay.
- Wear sneakers or other rubber-soled shoes to avoid slipping on wet pool surfaces.
- Do not swim during thunder or lightening storms. These storms are common as the summer winds down.
- If your child can't swim yet, use life preservers or certified flotation devices.
- Be sure to sanitize your pool to kill harmful bacteria. Besides making it safe to swim in, sanitizing your pool also keeps it sparkling clean and prevents obnoxious odors.

Unpredictable factors such as wind, rain, sunlight, number of swimmers and prolonged periods of warm weather can create varying degrees of chlorine demand.

"Sometimes routine chlorine dosages may not be enough to meet the demand and an 'extra high dose of chlorine must be added. This is known as a shock treatment," said Dave Knoop, educational advisor to National Spa and Pool Institute and technical service expert for the Olin Corporation.

Free child protection

Olin offers a free pail guard to protect toddlers while supplies last. This special insert is snapped into the top of a 3.5, 5, or 6 gallon pail and prevents the possibility of an infant toppling into a big bucket. Bolt against the blue: When Ameritech wanted to have a cellular telephone tower put up at Domino's Pizza's Ann Arbor headquarters at Domino's Farms, Domino's wanted the tower to be a piece of art. So it had the tower designed by an architect and erected by Rudolph / Libbe Michigan Operations of Canton. The Rudolph / Libbe company worked with several other firms to test the proposed design and solve the associated engineering problems. The 165-foot tower is visible for five. miles as you drive along M-14 between Livonia and Ann Arbor.

Let's Talk About Real Estate 2

"LOYALTY PAYS OFF"

Finding the right home is not an easy task. If you are a potential buyer, there are numerous hurdles to be jumped before you finally move into the proper home for you.

Some buyers like to leave their name and needs with four or five salespeople. Although this sounds like it is to the buyer's advantage. I have found it to be very ineffective. This approach assumes that a committee can accomplish more than one person. Like most committee assig ments, however, results are often postponed and somewhat discouraging. Because the buyer is not committed to one salesperson, no one is spending extra effort on the buyer's

My advice is to shop for the sales associate that you feel will get the results you want and then stick with him or her exclusively. In this way you will have a dedicated agent who will take on the personal responsibility of handling all the details of your upcoming home purchase. If you give your loyalty to one person, you will be rewarded with results.

Let's look at the tasks that must be performed on your behalf:

- 1. You will need financing advice on the price range you can qualify for.
- 2. Your family's specific needs must be learned so that you are shown only those homes that will suit your needs.
- 3. Appointments must be set and an itinerary established
- 4. Offers must be prepared, explained, and presented on your behalf.
- 5. You must be represented in the negotiating process.
- 6. Closing documents and final details must be attended to.
- 7. You must be personally represented at the actual closing.

If you want all these services, find one Realtor and stay with him or her!
