The long-awaited results of the federal Environmental Protection Agency's tests of soil samples within a mile radius of the central Wayne County incinerator in Inkster turned up no general contamination problem.

While there were "some differences" in levels of lead in the various soil samples, the EPA said that most of the results were in the normal range.

They attributed the few high levels of lead that were found more to vehicle INCINERATOR emissions and lead from old paint than to incinerator emissions.

Mercury levels were "low or fairly normal for urban areas," the EPA report said. The test was of samples taken from 29 sites within a mile radius of the incinerator, the sites having been picked with input from residents. Sites were at a park, schools and churches as Westland's public library is celebrating its first anniversary boasting the second-highest circulation in a 56-facility network.

What's more, Westland's $12 million facility is closing the gap on Livonia's top-ranked Civic Center Library.

"We're really catching up," Westland library Director Sandra Wilson said. "Every month we keep creeping up and getting closer." A two-month circulation comparison supports Wil-

That comes as little surprise considering that the 33,450-square-foot library - located on Central City Parkway south of Warren - ended its first year on Nov. 4 with a door count of 260,037 patrons.

Library officials had projected 170,000 first-year patrons - far less than the number of visitors who actually came.

Many patrons have shown their appreciation of the library by donating old books that they no longer want. In the past year,

"That's 1.500 items we didn't have to purchase," Wilson said. The remaining donated items had to be discarded because of at the library. Given the first-year success of Westland's library, officials say it's easy to see how it has pulled close to Livonia's Civic Center Library in monthly circulation.

Already, the library has pulled ahead of libraries in Novi, Royal Oak, Wayne, Redford Township and Garden City, among many others. It should be noted, however, that Westland's circulation is below libraries in communities such as Canton Township, Farmington and Plymouth - communities that aren't included in the same library network. A few critics still believe that Westland didn't need its own library. The city used to share a much-smaller facility with Wayne. The building was actually in Wayne, which also has its own library now.

Library employees hope that their success statistics will speak for themselves.

Moreover, they're planning new programs and services for the coming year. Details will be divulged later - in the library's next chapter.

"It's perfectly logical, but very difficult" to accomplish, he said, but if the plaintiffs had been sole winners, "the other districts would have sued."

He praised the effort by Sen. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, the majority floor leader whom Bennett said "did an incredibly good job. "

Nearly double

Wayne-Westland's share is almost twice the $7,891,782 awarded the Waterford district in Oakland County and it's more than twice the $6,396,657 awarded to the Taylor School District in Wayne County.

The largest award in Macomb County was $2,743,571 to the Chippewa district.

Twice, the Legislature put together packages to give $10-12 million additional to districts including Wayne-Westland, said state Rep. Thomas Kelly, D-Wayne, but both were vetoed by the governor.

"Bennett boasted ahead of time that he could get the money. He doesn't know how the system works," Kelly said. "Bennett has no clout with the governor. He talked a good game but he didn't deliver."

Bennett responded: "That's interesting. There's extra money in the budget for Wayne-Westland and obviously Tom doesn't know it's there.

"I couldn't count on the House to do anything so I worked with the Senate. There's $3.5 million in the budget for Wayne-Westland and I'm sorry Tom doesn't even know it's there. It's in the budget and it's in the bills that were passed this week and it's interesting that he says I don't understand the system because I got it in there.

Ed McArdle of Melvindale, conservation chairman of the Sierra Club of Southeast Michigan, said even if the incinerator had zero emissions, "it's still wasting natural

"Recycling saves much more energy than waste energy plants will produce," he said.

While the Central Wayne study did turn up some spots in which the lead contamination range exceeded 400 parts per million the acceptable limit, according to current EPA standards - they were still low compared to other areas of the country, the EPA report said.

For example, the range for southeast Michigan ran as high as 934 ppm, while Illinois had up to 647 ppm, Minneapolis 878 and New Orleans up to 3,960.

One of the places where 440 ppm were found was the parking lot next to the Cooper Temple on John Daly.

Reusch said the concentration was due mostly to gasoline emissions over the years but that he will be talking to the church's pastor about cleanup options.

The EPA said it planned no further soil sampling but said its complete data will be available at public libraries in Westland, Inkster, Wayne, Taylor, Garden City and Dearborn Heights.

Environmental officials from Wayne County's health and environmental departments as well as from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality fielded questions from the audience.

"This event is growing year after year with more lights and more people," said Lisa Brancato-Mauk, special events coordinator for the Zoological Society. "We'll have more than 50 animated animal displays with 350,000 lights.

Be sure to dress warmly.

"The half-mile walk begins at the main entrance, winds through part of the zoo, and then back," said Brancato-Mauk. "It usually takes about 45-minutes to walk. Wild Lights visitors will also be able to visit the new Edward Mardigian Sr. River Otter exhibit and the reptile house."

There will also be singing groups, Santa Claus and costume characters to entertain each night, as well as a hospitality tent with refreshments. Wild Lights at the Detroit Zoo illuminates from Friday, Nov. 21, through Sunday, Jan. 4. The lights will be on Monday through Thursday and Sunday from 5:30-8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, the display will be on until 9 p.m. Wild Lights will be free. "Proceeds from Wild Lights goes to the Detroit Zoological Society to help fund educational programs and for exhibit renovations," said Brancato-Mauk.

In 1994, Wild Lights attracted 25,000 people. This year, zoo officials are expecting nearly 60,000 people through the turnstiles.

"We originally billed Wild Lights as a family event, however, we see a lot of couples attending," said Brancato-Mauk. "It's a nice night out before going out to dinner or a movie." For more information on Wild Lights, call (248) 541-5835.

Domino's Farms

The Christmas Light Display at Domino's Farms in Ann Arbor has attracted more than a million people and raised nearly $500,000 for charity over the past five years.

"Last year 70 charities shared more than $70,000," said Ashley Moran, director of the non-profit group Spirit of Christmas, which sponsors the event.

"We'll have over one million lights this year as we add six new displays, some with animation" said Moran. "We'll have upwards of 30 light displays."

The holiday event costs $5 per car Monday through Thursday, and $7 on the weekend. Buses are asked to pay $50. All the proceeds will benefit children and charities around metro Detroit.

"Last year we had 42,000 cars drive through, with 80,000 people visiting the indoor display. This year we think we'll get 50,000 cars and 100,000 people,"

"We also will be expanding the route to include a drive around the petting farm," added Moran. "Visitors will drive through most of the light display before being able to enter the backside of the building for indoor attractions."

Moran says inside visitors will see 20, 14-foot designer-decorated trees, a "Christmas Around the World" creche exhibit, a miniature electric train, ornament-making for children, and a gingerbread house gift shop.

The focus of our exhibit is children, because Christmas is for kids," said Moran. "We are also looking to broaden our appeal to make this an area event, not just an Ann Arbor experience.'

Officials hope airport expansion creates more development

By Ken Abramczyk

County officials unveiled plans for a "shopping mall" Thursday, but it won't be another a Laurel Park Place or a Westland shopping center.

County Executive Ed McNamara and other county officials unveiled plans for a commercial/industrial center with Detroit Metro and Willow Run airports serving as the anchors at a University of Michigan Real Estate Forum at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn.

"A terrific opportunity for economic development lies north of Metro Airport and west to Willow Run," McNamara said.

County officials and planners hope to capitalize on the $1.6 billion expansion of the airport with distribution and warehouse centers and manufacturing facilities. Officials hope to create 90,000 new jobs that will disburse a $2.25 billion annual payroll into the local economy and $115 million in property tax rev-

"This zone, we believe, is perfect for creating a major commercial-industrial center and corridor," McNamara said. "We envision creating an industrial airport 'shopping center.' "

The area is bounded by Inkster, Eureka, I-275, I-94 and Ecorse Road. It includes stretches of Belleville, Haggerty, Inkster, Merriman and Wayne roads, between I-94 and Ecorse

Land of opportunity

McNamara also said the increased globalization of the auto industry was creating opportunities for the local economy as 25 percent of all trade between the United States and Canada travels through Wayne County.

The airport's expansion will allow the county and southeast Michigan to capitalize on economic opportunities, McNamara

"There are three reasons for the lack of major development around Metro," McNamara said. "The first is that, historically, our land-use plans off the airport have been incompatible with what optimum zoning around an airport should be. I'm happy to report that we're working with our local communities to address possible zoning changes that are market-sensitive.

"Another reason is that while it is important for businesses to locate close to the airport, 'close' can mean Livonia, Novi or Troy, because of our great freeway sys-

"Finally, our airport area lacks adequate infrastructure to service economic development."

Alliance will help

Dewey Henry, director of Wayne County's Jobs and Economic Development, told the audience of about 400 people he hoped the I-94 International Trade Alliance could obtain a special designation.

"If we get this designation, there will be a whole new pot of money for what we want to do," Henry said. Henry hopes Congress can pass legislation to allow the designation next year.

Henry hoped the move would connect not just Detroit with Chicago and Indiana, but run a route of commerce all the way to Texas and Mexico.

Henry said airport and airline officials were looking to add 20 more foreign cities to Metro's list of 18 international destinations.

A new marketing and advertising campaign is expected to begin in January. Henry said the Wayne County website receives 30,000 "hits" or connections a month. Many are from European countries, such as Sweden, Ireland and Germany.

County officials were optimistic over the expansion and the development area between airports.

Henry said: "Someone once said, 'you have to look at the airports as being one, it's just that runways are seven miles apart.'

FOR THE LOVE OF FOOD

RICK HALBERG

Memories linger with seasonal aromas

his is one of those times a year when there are so many smells I associate with specific holidays and activities. We're getting into the time when there are great family feasts - Thanksgiving, Hanukkah, and Christmas.

What could be better than the smells of roasting meats, sweet potatoes and cranberries? For most holidays that require it, I am given the task of roasting the turkey.

Even though I am a chef, my mother-in-law insists that I not do any work, except for making the turkey. She has always felt that the turkey comes out best when it is roasted in my restaurant ovens. The truth is I almost always roast the turkey at home, and it comes out the same. The best part of this is the delicious smell that fills our house as the turkey

Hanukkah

During Hanukkah my family always goes to a potato latke party at a relative's house. Walking in is a treat. There is something special about the earthy, heavy smell of fried potato pancakes mixed with the sweet smells of sour cream and applesauce. Every year there is always a debate about how people eat their latke.

Some eat them with salt, some with sugar, some dio them in sour cream. It's always the same debate, and always funny. That's one of the great things about family meals, sitting around a big table with people you love and sharing the same wonderful memories.

Another one of my favorite aromas is hot chocolate or hot spiced cider after coming in from an afternoon of ice skating when your fingers are almost too numb to hold the mug.

Manhattan memories

I just returned from a whirlwind trip to Manhattan and had forgotten about the mix of food smells in that great city. There's something different on every street corner, and the smells seem to mingle together, yet you can separate them out - kosher hot dogs, Polish sausage, Indonesian grilled meats, shish kebab, Chinese and Japanese noodle shops. There's so much variety, and because it's so hard to stay in one place in New York City, it's easy, and exciting to eat on

The main purpose of my trip to New York was to visit the James Beard House. James Beard is recognized as the father of American gastronomy. After his death in 1985, Julia Child had the idea to preserve his home. It was always a gathering place for top culinarians, and Child thought it should remain that way.

Today, the James Beard Foundation celebrates this country's culinary artists, provides scholarship and educational opportunities, serves as a resource for the industry, and offers members the opportunity to enjoy dinners there, which are prepared by top chefs from around the world.

Craig Common of the Common Grill in Chelsea was preparing a dinner there during my visit, so I offered to give him a hand. It was quite an experience, and Craig's dinner was great.

I have been invited to prepare a dinner at the James Beard House next year and am looking forward to it. Once I have the date I'll be sure to let you know. I'm going to attempt to put together a group travel package for those who might like to attend the dinner and be my hometown rooting section.

Parade leads our Thanksgiving traditions

Sweet: The "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" float makes its way down Woodward in America's Thanksgiving Parade, 9:15 a.m. to noon Thanksgiving morning, Thursday, Nov. 27. The parade begins on Woodward at Mack and proceeds to Jefferson et the feasting begin! Thanksgiving Day officially ushers in the start of the holiday

In our family the celebration began early in the morning when my brothers and I woke my dad up at the crack of dawn and asked - "is it time to go to the parade yet?"

I don't know how he managed to look after me, and my younger brothers, Mike and Greg, carry a ladder for us to sit on, blankets, and a thermos full of hot chocolate.

Dad found our spot on Woodward Avenue, in Foundation, which produces the parade. front of the marquee of an all night theater, by accident. It happened the one and only time my mom joined us.

"We were running late, and traffic was getting heavy," he recalled. "Instead of trying to head all the way downtown near Hudson's, I pulled off along the route, and looked for a space to park."

We walked a couple of blocks to Woodward and found "our spot." There was even a White Castle down the street, a good thing in case one of us "had to go," and the theater marquee offered shelter from unexpected sprinkles and flurries. For a father with three small children it was heaven.

While we were at the parade, mom was home getting dinner ready, usually with the help of my grandma. I remember one Thanksgiving when we had to wait for the turkey to be done. Everybody has a favorite Thanksgiving Day memory, and if you live in metro Detroit, chances are very good the parade is one of "My parents were from South America, and we moved here in 1961," said Annabel Cohen of Bloomfield Hills. "We lived downtown, and I remember being three or four and sitting on my dad's shoulders watching the parade. For some reason it seems a lot colder now. The parade initiated them into the Thanksgiving tradition."

Cohen, a chef, writer, and cooking instructor, with Linda Hayman, a parade foundation trustee, compiled "Traditions: America's Thanksgiving Parade Cookbook," a collection of favorite recipes from Detroit's personalities. It ties in with this year's parade theme - "America's Thanksgiving Parade . . . Everyone's Favorite Family Tradition!"

'All of the proceeds from the sale of the book benefit the Michigan Thanksgiving Parade

> "Everything for the cookbook was donated - we don't have to pay anybody back," said Hayman who shared her Cranberry Quick Bread

"The parade is a huge volunteer effort," said Cohen who also contributed some of her favorite recipes including Root Vegetable and Apple Puree and Apple Cider Glazed Roast Turkey. Parade supporters were invited to share their favorite recipes for the book, not all of them are for Thanksgiving din-

There are recipes for appetizers, soups and salads, vegetables and side dishes, entrees, desserts, and even "Carmen's Classic French Toast," contributed by Carmen Harlan. "It's interesting to see the traditions, and how different ethnic groups relate to Thanksgiving," said Cohen. "We even have two stuffed cabbage recipes in the book. People celebrate the whole weekend. Paul W. Smith doesn't cook on Thanksgiving, he eats out, and shared a recipe from the 'Beruit Restaurant' in Toledo." Vintage parade photos, comments from recipe contributors, cook's tips, and sayings to share are part of this culinary treasure.

Thanksgiving Tidbits

- After the colonists' first bountiful harvest, Pilgrim Governor William Bradford declared a day of Thanksgiving. Indian Chief Massasoit attended along with 90 braves.
- The first Thanksgiving feast lasted three days.
- indian braves presented the Pilgrims with a gift of five deer for the first Thanksgiving dinner.
- Venison, roasted or stewed partridges, ducks, geese and turkeys, common game along the Cape Cod shore, were probably served at the first Thanksgiving dinner. Cranberries were boiled to make a sauce for the meat - perhaps sweetened with a little wild honey. 🥳
- Pumpkins and corn were abundant in the New World, but since there was no flour or molasses, there was no Thanksgiving pumpkin pie – just plain, boiled pumpkin.
- Desserts for the first Thanksgiving dinner consisted of wild fruits and Go Portside for your Thanksgiving feast

Port wines are seeing a new age and rising popularity in the U.S. Thanksgiving is a perfect time to serve them - before and after the traditional_ Thanksgiving relives our history. If you take our suggestion and serve port, or more properly Porto, here's relate. Port was first created almost by accident, in the 17th century. British traders, cut off from France by wars, took fancy to the red wines of the Douro Valley, near Oporto in Northern Portugal. To preserve the wine for their long journey back to England, they added brandy to it. The combination created an extraordinary flavor. No one we know relates port tales and explanations of the many port wine styles like Adrian Bridge, director of the port house Taylor Fladgate &

Yeatman and its sister company Fonseca Guimaraens. Taylor (as it's commonly known) is one of the oldest and most prestigious of port wine companies, dating its founding to 1692. In 1744, the son of the company's founder became the first British wine shipper to purchase property in Portugal's Upper Douro Valley, the most famous port wine growing region.

This purchase became the cornerstone of a series of Taylor vineyard acquisitions including the most famous Quinta de Vargellas. Quinta is Por-tuguese for vineyard. Additionally, through the years, Taylor has become a recognized leader in wood-aged and vintage port production. It also pioneered Chip Dry white port and Late Bottled Vintage port styles.

"The port wine region is the only one in the world that uses dynamite to plant grapes," Bridge noted. "The soil is so rocky that it takes one ton of dynamite to plant two and one-half acres of vineyard." Might we say a big bang for the buck!

Chip Dry white port was a Richard Yeatman invention in 1934. He was the first to depart from the traditional ly sweeter white aperitif port consumed in Portugal, but rarely exported:

Lew Weidergann, Maitre d' of Big Rock Chop and Brew House's specialty bar Got Rocks, Pays Chip Dry should be served slightly chilled neat or on the rocks. He also suggests it 50/50 with tonic and a lemon twist as a "longer" aperitif. As such, it makes a good Thanksgiving Day pre-meal opener.

After the feast, there are a number of port styles from which to choose. An older (20+ years) vintage port would be

The 1980 Taylor, about $52, is drinking well, but is still a baby.

"Even in non-vintage years, we try to make a wine of the vintage," Adrian Bridge said. "Vintage character ports are soft, velvety and a good value. They are much better than a young ruby or tawny port. Pay $2 to $3 more and get something better." Taylor Fladgate First Estate $17 is a vintage character port filling the bill with its lively rich, blackfruit flavors and mellow oaktoned finish.

But if you like tawny port with all its nuttiness, then Fonseca's 10-year $28 is excellent. Its vanilla-caramel character is like eating ice cream topping.

chairman and majority share holder of both Taylor and Fonseca, invented LBV in the late 1960s. The convenience of serving an LBV over a vintage port cannot be overstated. Bottled at six years old, it needs no decanting and is ready to drink. The 1991 sports sophisticated berry fruit and the complexity of a vintage year.

From the flagship and renowned vineyard, 1986 Taylor Fladgate Quinta de Vargellas Porto $31 has mature aromas and complex flavors. Depthful and structured, it is a perfect after-dinner, fireside sipper showcasing the merits of bottling a single vineyard port.

Cohen and Hayman are already thinking about a cookbook for next year - "Generations," that would include some children's drawings, and favorite family recipes, handed down generation to generation.

Dishes have 'history' of popularity

Here are some recipes from the chefs at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village in Dearborn. The village and museum will be decorated for the holidays beginning Nov. 28. For more information, call (313) 271-1620.

Greenfield Village/ Henry Ford Museum Pastry Chef Tom Preniczky shared these tips:

■ Rub butter and a mixture of fresh herbs such as thyme and sage under the skin of the turkey breast. "The flavor bakes right into the meat," he said.

Don't toss the turkey carcass. Make soup by putting the carcass in a pot of cold water with vegetables such as celery and onion. Simmer it for an hour or so. Strain and skim off the fat. Cook longer to reduce. Add fresh carrots and other vegetables, and leftover turkey. Season to

SAUERKRAUT DRESSING

- 1/2 cup butter 4 tablespoons flour
- 5 cups sauerkraut 2 large apples, chopped fine
- 1/2 cup vinegar
- 6 whole cloves

4 tablespoons brown sugar

To make dressing, melt butter in pan. Add flour and stir until smooth. Add sauerkraut, apples, vinegar, cloves and brown sugar. Mix well and use for stuffing

Stuff the turkey with sauerkraut dressing, and sew it up with trussing needles. Rub with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Baste frequently. Roast until done depending on the size of the turkey. Follow manufacturer's instructions on the bag.

Facial fallacies are unmasked

'I've received a number of letters from readers asking for information about skin care – facials in particular.

So, I decided to interview an expert I have known for years who has her own salon in Birmingham, Mary Glancz. Like so many other aestheticians, she's from Hungary. She learned the craft at the feet of her parents who were also in the same field.

JB: How do you select the proper

Mary: Referral is always best. Tour not only the premises, but the surrounding neighborhood as well. In the salon, look for good lighting, an immaculate atmosphere, and state of the art equipment. Be sure to ask lots of quesunderstood and met.

JB: What are the

Mary: The two biggest rip-offs that are fashionable at the moment are cellulite removal and bandaged body wraps. I feel they are fraudulent, and they don't work.

JB: What is new to the field?

Mary: Glycolic acid peels for dry/tired skin, as well as sun-damaged skin. We prefer to take a slow approach, and it should take between two and three weeks for the face to heal properly. Results have been particularly good for women who have the common problem of feather lines around the eyes and the mouth.

JB: I have oily skin, and have been having facials for a number of years. But one procedure that I am not fond of is the steaming and then squeezing of pores. Is there a good reason for doing this?

Mary: Squeezing can be good as long as the skin is moist, and also that gloves are worn by the practitioner. Disposable instruments should also be used if the best results are to be achieved. If you break out after a professional facial, then in all likelihood they did not "deep pore cleanse." That would mean that some of the impurities were not removed. Steaming is not for everybody. If your skin is sensitive, if you have rosacea or broken capillaries, then you should be very careful about subjecting your skin to extremes of temperature. If steaming is used, then it must be placed far enough away from the face so that the skin does not react angrily. I like to finish by adding chamomile tea to the steam, mainly for its soothing qualities.

JB: Is there a standard facial?

Mary: No. Everyone is different. The most important part of a facial is the consultation. That way there are no surprises for the client. Men as well as women should have them. With men the main objective is to get those pores cleaned. Many men who may not have had a facial before may need a couple of sessions before the pores get used to being opened up and cleaned. Follow up work at home, taking time to get the skin clean every day is imperative. Otherw se it's like only vacuuming the house once a year.

JB: How old should you be to go for your first facial?

Mary: Ideally 12 or 13, or when you hit puberty.

JB: How much should you expect to pay for a good facial?

Mary: Most facials start at $65 and go up from there, depending on what is included. Make sure to discuss this beforehand.

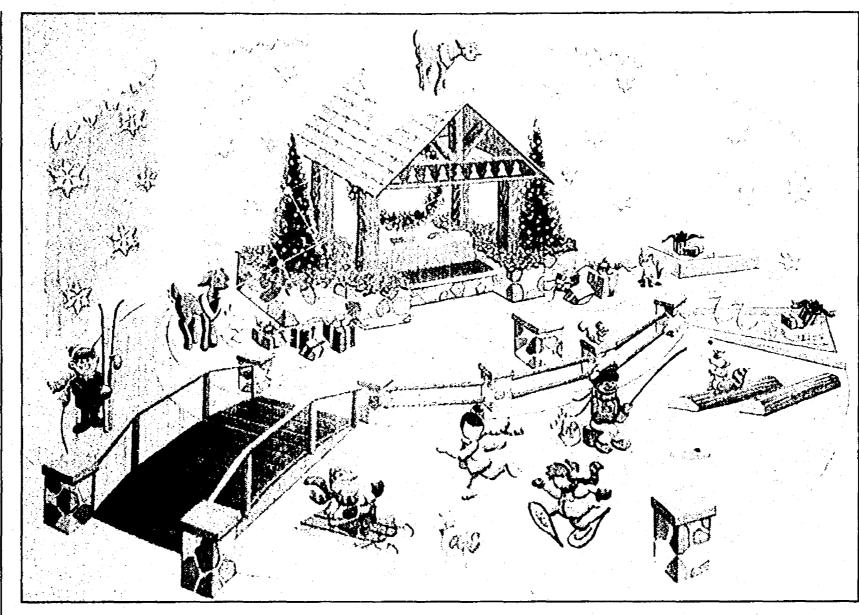

JB: Do you final words of advice? Mary: Winter is approaching, and we are most concerned about complexions that have broken capillaries. It is most important to protect those skins from the elements. If proper care is utilized, along with the soothing aloe plant, we feel that a man or a woman can make it through our frigid winters with a minimuni of problems.

If you would like to contact Mary Glancz, you can reach her at (248) 642. 6787, Her salon is at 102 Pierce Street, Birmingham.

I will be taking appointments for beauty consultations at the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham for the first week of December. These sessions last three hours and are limited to five women, I apply your make-up, teaching you to replicate the look yourself. We also discuss skin care, and make recommendations about hair. The minimum purchase is $125 which is applied towards products that have been used on you. For information call 1-800-944-6588. My salon visits resume in February.

Malls decked out for the holidays

By Susan DeMaggio

An informal survey of area mall managers reveals that most holiday exhibits cost shopping centers about $250,000 and are kept for three years.

They are designed and built by a handful of display companies across the U.S. and Canada, and magically appear overnight at your neighborhood mall, assembled by "elves" and "fairies," as one jovial manager insisted.

This year, shoppers and their children will delight to winter wonderland exhibits in center courts that include giant Polar Bears - Westland Center, Reindeer - Livonia Mall, 'A Crystal Forest - Twelve Oaks, A Dept. 56 Christmas Village - Oakland Mall, A Renaissance Holiday - Somerset Collection, Snow Scenes - Northland Center, and A Charlie Brown Christmas -Lakeside Center.

Native-costumed "children" celebrate Holidays Around The World - Tel-Twelve Mall, Teddy Bears - Wonderland Mall, Flights of Fancy - Fairlane Town Center, Santa's Magical Topiary Garden - Laurel Park Place, Mother Goose - Summit Place.

The Hudson's store at Summit Place hosts the retailer's stunning 8th annual holiday exhibit portraying Charles Dickens holiday classic A Christmas Carol in 23 animated theatrical vignettes, up now through Dec. 31 - and complimentary!

MeadowBrook Village Mall in Rochester Hills debuts a turn of the century skating pond scene this year, featuring a frozen creek with "animated children skiing, skating and ice fishing near the creek's wooden bridge, observed by animated woodland creatures," according to manager Jim Westcott. Santa will be waiting for children who want pictures in the center of the winter village in a snow-covered pavilion.

Lakeside in Sterling Heights also premiers a new exhibit this season with Charlie Brown, Lucy, Linus, Pig Pen. Peppermint Patty and Scroeder featured in a variety of holiday settings throughout the center. The highlight of the exhibit is an 18-foot high Snoopy doghouse, complete with 36-foot tree exploding through the roof!

Laurel Park Place is the third center with a new holiday decor package, animated elves prepare Santa's hot air balloon, with garden animals shaped from topiarys. There is an interactive children's play area nearby.

Franklin hosts a Holly Day for families 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.. Saturday, Dec. 6 with raffles, refreshments, dreidel demonstrations, Santa photos, food sampling, crafts for kids, ice carvings and a Light up A Life Sweater Drive.

Rochester kicks off the season with the annual Lagniappe, Monday, Dec 1 from 6 p.m. featuring carriage rides, gifts for Birmingham welcomes the season with the annual Christmas Tree Lighting 7 p.m. in Shain Park. The Salvation Army Band performs, the Village Players lead carols. On Dec. 12 the annual Midnight Shopping Spree begins at 6 p.,m. with marching bands, carriage rides and Santa photos.

Plymouth invites shoppers to Come Home to Plymouth with an Open House throughout the retail district, Nov. 21-23. Merchants will serve refreshments, welcome Santa to Kellogg Park where he will be available for photos weekends through Dec. 24. From Dec. 6-8 volunteers will decorate 50 trees in Kellogg Park which will be lit to the tunes of carolers, Sunday, Dec. 8 at 6 p.m. Street corners will host carolers Friday, Dec. 12 from 7-10 p.m. and shops will stay open until 10 p.m. providing discounts to customers who stop in with a canned food for The Salvation Army Food Bank.

Farmington celebrates Holidays Around The World, Saturday, Dec. 6 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Scrooge with Albert Finney will be shown, free, at the Civic Theater 12:30 and 3:30 p.m. Carolers will fill the streets along with a holiday trolley and fire truck. The tree lighting is at 6 p.m. at Warner Mansion, 33805 Grand River.

Parade leads benefit

Sunday, November 16, 1997

By Susan Demaggio

"This year our Christmas has a purpose," said Livonia Mall marketer Jim Gray.

"We're hosting a special holiday promotion themed with selfless giving and the joys that come of true friendship. Our Annabelle's Wish Christmas brings a message of music and magic to benefit The Make-A-Wish Foundation.'

On Sunday, Nov. 30 at 7 p.m. the Fox Network airs an hour-long animated holiday film, Annabelle's Wish, which many agree will become an instant classic. Proceeds from the sale of the film, CD soundtrack, and plush toys, will benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation which serves children with life-threatening illnesses.

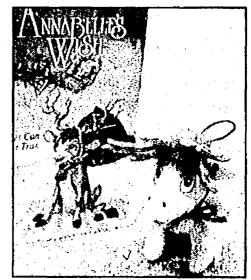

Livonia Mall is one of 145 select shopping centers in the country to support the holiday fund-raiser, using as a springboard, its 15th annual Christmas parade, Saturday, Nov. 22 beginning at 9 a.m. at Six Mile and Middlebelt, titled Wishes Can Come True.

"This parade is our biggest and best ever," Gray pronounced. "We've got 2,000 kids walking in it, hundreds of clowns, dozens of bands. police, fire, the Pistons Mascot and cheerleaders, and 18 floats - our own features Annabelle and a Make A Wish Child."

Annabelle is a big-eyed calf who gives up her fondest dream to save Billy, the little farm boy she loves. The movie, from Ralph Edwards films, stars the voices of Randy Travis, Dolly Parton, Jerry Van Dyke, Rue McClanahan, Jim Varney, and Cloris Leachman.

The film company is donating $1 million to kick off the fund drive, and Livonia Mall will donate $2 from every film/plush toy combination sold ($16.98) to the Foundation.

"It costs the Foundation about $4,000 per wish to help a seriously ill child," said Gray. "With this promotion, kids will get merchandise they love while helping other children less fortunate."

News of special events for shoppers is included in this calendar. Send information to: Malls & Mainstreets, c/o The Observer & Eccentric 805 East Maple, 48009; or fax (248) 644-1314. Deadline: Wednesday 5 p.m. for publication on Sunday.

Kroger hosts Food Drive

The demand for food for the needy is up 23-percent this year heading into the holidays, according to Gleaners Food Bank. To help, all 82 Michigan Kroger stores will offer prepackaged bags of Kroger-brand food in $5 and $10 increments for purchase. Shoppers simply pick the bag of their choice and pay for it when they cash out, depositing the bag in a collection bin for distribution to the food bank. For their donation, customers will be given a coupon for $5 off a deli party tray. The drive runs through Dec. 23.

Safety tips can help hunters stay healthy

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON

Two days into deer camp for the 1997 hunting season and one can't help but be reminded of the tragic outcomes that often result from overindulgent men and women who don't take a few extra minutes to be "on the look-out" for more than just deer, but warning signs their health is in jeopardy.

A few simple suggestions can help you ward off a potential disaster or worse - death.

First and foremost, say health care providers, if you already have a diagnosed heart condition, extra care must be taken in and out of the woods.

■ Remember your medication. Heart problems don't take the weekend off for a venture into the woods.

If you are on prescription drugs, avoid or limit your intake of alcoholic beverages that may cause hazardous interactions and side effects.

■ Eat in moderation. Hunters have a reputation for "over-indulging" throughout the three weeks that encompass firearm deer season. However, don't completely avoid eating all together especially if you plan on being in the woods from sun up to sun down or you are a diabetic.

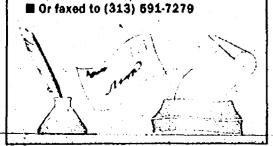

■ Bring along a sack lunch or foods that will keep your energy level up. Granola, dried-fruit and cheese are convenient sources of nutrients that can be easily stored and light-weight.

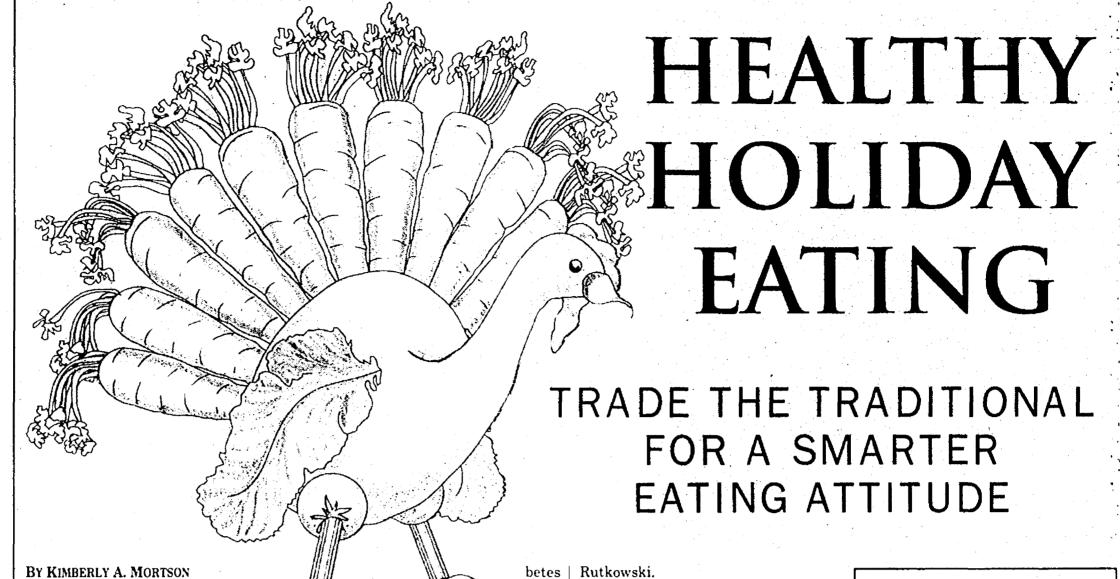

■ Make an attempt to hunt with a partner. If you face an emergency sit-plod is to balance your intake during the weeks you know you have business and social occasions where food is involved.

"If you know that you're going to a party in the evening where heavy foods and sweets are being served, don't have a big breakfast or lunch. Plan to eat lighter throughout the day or find out if the person responsible for the party will be accommodating people watching their health such as low-fat, salt-free or low-calorie dishes," suggested Rutkowski.

MaryLynn England, 56, of Redford Township, who underwent triple bypass surgery in the fall of 1996, has altered her eating habits since suffering a massive heart attack and learning she has diabetes.

The surgical procedure unclogs arteries that limit the flow of blood to an organ such as the heart, in England's case.

"I never gave much thought to what I ate or how I prepared foods in the kitchen," said England. "I had to learn my lesson the hard way.'

Since the heart attack, England's cardiac therapist has encouraged her to alter her diet because of her dia-

England says she eats cakes and cookies in moderation but does enjoy

"I never thought sugar-free candies would be very good," said England, "but I put some out last Christmas and nobody knew the difference. Not even my grandkids."

The Redford Township grandmother says she also eats smaller portions, especially around the holidays, and has found many food substitutes to be very tasty including fat-free mayonnaise, cheese made with skim milk rather than whole, prune butter and apple sauce as a replacement for milk in cakes and breads.

"Try things to see what you like best. I have a few recipes I'll be bringing to a Christmas party this December using many substitute ingredients. I'm sure no one will notice the difference."

Aches more serious?

Overeating is a holiday habit and all too often we see people loafing around after a meal feeling overly full and complaining of a stomach ache. Rutkowski said the images of people doubled-over from a full stomach may paint a more serious picture of food contamination or a food-borne illness. One of the biggest culprits around the holidays is bacteria bred inside the cavities of turkeys stuffed with dress-

"Although it's not the most popular alternative, because the stuffing doesn't absorb the fats and juices from the turkey, cook your dressing in a separate dish from the turkey or around the outside rather than packing in the stuffing in the neck or body cavity. Densely packed stuffing doesn't allow the heat to circulate and kill off any germs that may exist inside the bird." Watching what you eat doesn't have to hamper your enjoyment of the holi-

"Enjoy food but don't take out the stress and frustrations of the holidays on your eating habits," said Rutkowski. "Fill up on companionship, a beautiful table setting and a moderate meal. It's all about the way you look at things."

Plan of action

Cinde Rutkowski, an Oakwood dietitian, said following the "Four P-Plan" may help you avoid putting on pounds and making a New Year resolution you can't keep.

■ Plan: Balance intake and be prepared for occasions when you can't avoid eating foods prepared by someone else.

■ Purchase: Look at ingredients. Read labels and substitute where you can to "lighten" up a recipe such as using an egg substitute or egg whites in place of eggs or plain yogurt in place of sour cream with just as much texture and flavor. Cut back on salt and saturated fats.

■ Prepare: Don't neglect hygiene and sanitation in your rush to cook for the holidays. Regular and thorough handwashing is a must. Cutting boards, sponges and dish towels are, breeding grounds for food-borne illness and germs. Wash your hands, dishes and cooking utensils (especially when working with raw meat) with hot and soapy water - making sure you rinse with hot water as well.

■ Partake: The holidays are traditionally a time when we eat appetizers, entrees and desserts in celebration of the season. Eat in moderation and avoid piling on foods you can eatanytime with those special holiday

"If mom gets her Christmas cookie: recipe out and bakes only for the month of December - it's not necessary to eat her cookies and Oreos when you can eat those anytime." said Rutkowski.

Reckless consumption of fatty, sugary, high cholesterol foods can lead to more serious problems besides obesity, including high blood pressure, heart attack, clogged arteries? and digestive problems. "The choice" is yours," said Rutkowski. "Going to a friend's house - find out what's onthe menu. Ask if you can bring something low-fat or prepare a dish. you can eat that others may find just as. appetizing but with less calories."

Controlling acne helps physically, mentally

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI

Getting a pimple can be upsetting, but having a face full of acne can be emotionally devastating, especially to teenagers.

At 18 and with a clear complexion, Amy LaGrow, said she often felt self-conscious and distracted by her acne. "It was a big part of my life for a long time," said LaGrow, now a freshman at Michigan State Uni-

Her first outbreak was when she was 13 or 14. "It did a lot to my self esteem - always worrying about how much my face was breaking out," the Canton resident said. LaGrow went to Dr. Ann LaFond, of Canton Dermatology, P.C., who said she often sees patients transform not only physically, but mentally during the course of treatment.

"When you get their acne under control they have a happier personality and are more outgoing," LaFond said. Not all teens with acne need professional help. LaFond tells teens to follow a basic routine of washing their faces gently twice a day with a mild or acne soap and to use a benzyl peroxide based cream or gel, once or twice a day. And don't scrub your skin.

"If that doesn't clear them up they should see their pediatrician or dermatologist," LaFond said. A lot of factors play a role in who gets pimples and how severe they are. But, like most other concerns, heredity plays the biggest part. "Skin is very sensitive to a lot of things that go on in our bodies, changes in hormones and stress," according to Dr. Sandy Goldman, of the Skin and Vein Center in Garden City.

"In the teenage years our bodies are doing some changes and our skin is not used to the changes." Our bodies naturally produce oils that go through the pores and onto the skin keeping the skin moist and from drying out. The pore gets plugged up and the oil can't get out. This oil gets trapped and the bacteria that lives naturally on our bodies breaks the oil down into a fatty acid. That's irritating to the body, which sees it as a foreign element and tries to get rid of it. The area gets inflamed and sometimes if the pore is plugged-up, on the surface you get white and black heads. If it's really deep you get a cyst, which are the big red angry looking pimples.

"Everyone gets a pimple now and then," Goldman said. "When it's chronic it's acne." Environmental factors, like hot sweaty climates, can make it worse. While acne can begin before puberty, normally doctors start seeing it in patients around 12 years old. Close to 100 percent of people, regardless of ethnicity, between 12 and 17 have at least an occasional pimple, according to Acnenet, which provides basic facts about acne on the Internet.

Also, more than 40 percent of adolescents have ache severe enough to require some treatment by a physician. Usually it goes away when patients are in their early twenties. However, for some people, the acne can last a couple of more decades. Keep in mind that pimples are unavoidable, but you can lessen the results of flare-ups and sears or pot mocks caused by

"You don't see as many of the teens now with deep scars, because most people will see a family doctor or dermatologist." LaFond said. "One reason to control acne is to avoid scarring and pigmented marks on your face. If you've inherited a tendency toward acre. you'll still go through your teen years with the tendency, but if you keep it under control you won't have scarring and pigmentation."

Teens who get the deeper cysts are treated with oral and topical antibiotics or a medication like the pill, Accutane, which is a vitamin A derivative that dries up oil glands. About 80 percent of patients who go on it are cured even when they discontinue use, Goldman said. Patients are on it for 20 weeks. However there are side effects, including a drying effect on the body, occasionally feeling achy, a temporary rise in triglycerides and cholesterol levels; it can cause severe birth defects if it is taken while prognant and it can affect liver enzymes.

Close supervision is necessary when Accutane is prescribed. Still, the results of Accutane to someone who was burdened emotionally by acue are amazing

"I'm glad I had a chance to use Accutane," LaGrow said. "I see people and I think why don't they know about this treatment, because it does help out a lot It changed my life. I think I became more outgoing, because I wasn't worried about people looking at my face."

Precautions can help guard against food contamination

A touch of the flu?

Don't be so quick to assume that stomach pain, fever, and headache is influenza. It may be the result of a foodborne illness, what we usually call food poisoning. Approximately 80 million Americans suffer from it each year. Don't be one of them. By following a few simple tips you can practically eliminate the risk of foodborne illness, keeping yourself, and your dinner guests safe.

With How to Help Avoid Foodborne Illness in the Home, a free publication developed by Lysol and reviewed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, you'll learn how to safely handle, prepare and serve foods to prevent the spread of illness-causing bacteria. There are also tips for keeping your kitchen clean and bacteria-free.

Bacteria accidentally spreading among foods is one of the biggest causes of foodborne illness, with raw meat often to blame. But it's easy enough to prevent by following a few commons sense rules of thought:

■ After grilling your burgers, for example, don't put them back on the same plate you used when they were

■ Another no-no: preparing vegetables on the same cutting board you used for raw chicken without thoroughly cleaning it in between.

Proper cleaning means more than merely rinsing or wiping the board off. Soap and hot water, followed by an antibacterial cleaner or bleach and water mixture, is the way to kill bacteria before it ends up in your salad.

Speaking of cutting boards, plastic is better than wood. Why? Because wood is more likely to absorb and hold bacteria. And since bacteria can also lurk in kitchen sponges, towels, and dishcloths, make sure to wash them frequently. Better yet, use paper towels when possible.

Hands spread bacteria, too. Not only between foods, but also to doorknobs, refrigerator handles, and kitchen counters. Always wash with soap and water then dry your hands with a clean towel or paper towel, before and after handling food.

Acne is even more traumatic to people who never had acne and developed it in their late teens and early 20s, Goldman said. "We've had some severe cases where people won't go to school," he said. "If you have that severe acne and you get it cured it's a dramatic impact on their lives, especially among teenagers who can be made fun

There are more than 100 medications prescribed for various degrees of acne. "I have some patients with super dry sensitive skin with acne and some patients with oily skin with acne," LaFond said.

Also, some over the counter medications that include falicylic acid and benzyl peroxide can be helpful, LaFond said. She tells girls using make-up or moisturizers to consider non-conedogenic products. It's no coincidence, LaFond said, that acne seems to flair-up at the worse times, like before the prom, or a date.

Stress can aggravate outbreaks. There are also some myths about acne. For instance, it's a myth that chocolate and french fries cause acne. No direct link has been found between acne and diet. However, a good balanced diet will improve the circulation of your skin, according to Acnenet. Another myth is that acne is caused by dirt. In fact, professionals find that people with acne wash their faces more often than others, because they're trying to get rid of the oily presence often found on their faces. Teens and their parents should understand, LaFond said, that seeing a doctor or dermatologist for acne doesn't mean they're signing up for a lifetime weekly regime and a bag full of creams and pills.

"Some people just need one topical at night," she said. "Not everyone has to go in frequently. You may only need one medication, or several, but there are lots of medications you can use."

Carry a first-aid kit with you in your vest or pack that could take care of minor cuts or scrapes. Nothing elaborate, just a few items that could get you by until you reach a hospital or medical center.

Gauze, a prepackaged alcohol swab, band-aid and something that could be used as a tourniquet in the event you need to stop the bleeding from a limb.

■ Stay hydrated. Carry a water bottle or thermos with warms fluids or juice. If you do shoot a deer and find yourself deep in the woods, far away from your vehicle remember that a dressed deer has an average weight of 150 pounds. That's a lot of dead weight to be dragging through heavy brush, snow and over rough terrain whether you're in good health or not.

Surprisingly, some of the heart attacks suffered by hunters are the result of the adrenaline "rush" and excitement they experience after the kill. Pace yourself. Don't try and drag the animal the entire way without stopping. Here's another example of the benefits of hunting with a second person.

Use these suggestions to safe-guard your hunting experience rather than letting a medical emergency hamper your hobby. A well-planned trip can insure you'll be back "on the look-out" for your four-legged friends for years to come.

Attorney at Lau AN ATTORNEY ON YOUR SIDE

Sometimes, those injured in an autoaccident of a slip and fall choose to deal directly with the other party's insurance company in pursuit of a settlemene. Some, however, find the negotiation process distasteful to the point that they retain the services of a lawyer. For others, the decision to use an attorney may be more compelling. In general, it is a good idea to seek the services of a lawyer if the injuries appear serious.

Insurance adjusters sometimes tell people they don't need a lawyer or ask why let the lawyer take a share of your money?" What the insurance adjusters don't tell people is that their claim may typically be worth five to ten times more money than is being offered. At

Cyber families

Households use Internet to improve life

he neat thing about the Internet is it has no boundaries. I get e-mail from people all across the country and, as research for a new book that the Zondervan Publishing Company (www.zondervan.com) will publish early next year (The Complete No-Geek-Speak Guide to the Internet), I've been collecting stories about how real people really cyberspace.

That's how I came to meet Pat Hawn, who calls herself "Cybermom." In fact, she says, her family could be called a "Cyberfamily" because from sunrise to bedtime the family computer is almost always in use and someone is always online. Pat is a marketing representative at public opinion company in Indianapolis and before she heads out the door each day, she sips her coffee while catching up on the morning news with CNN Interactive (www.cnn.com).

Then, it's A Word a Day, a mailing list that sends out a different vocabulary word to subscribers every day. She also is an avid cook and, more mornings than not, checks in on a site about bread making (www.bbga.org) operated by the Bread Bakers Guild of America.

No sooner is Pat off the computer and out the door then her husband, David, a counselor and substitute teacher, usually logs on and e-mails a homework assignment to his Indiana University instructor. David is taking some graduate education courses and the Internet is a key resource.

The couple has two children. Eddie, 14, is a hoops fanatic. Remember, this family lives in Indiana, the Mecca for basketball fans. During the season, he's always on the Net, usually at the National Basketball Association's home page (www.nba.com). Daughter Laura, 11, has several pen pals, including a former favorite teacher, who moved to Ohio.

"My kids do homework research on the Net." says Pat. "One time last year we downloaded pictures of Civil War soldiers the Library of Congress (www.loc.gov).

The Hawns got their computer in early 1995 and were introduced to the online world through commercial online services. Both America Online and CompuServe were offering new users 10 free hours of use during the first month. The Hawns took both services up on the deal.

"This was before they started offering a flat fee of $19.95 a month. We started out using the 10 free hours from AOL and CIS. They were too addicting. We ran up a bill of about $100 on each," Pat says. Because being charged by the hour was too expensive for a family that uses the Net so heavily, Pat made some calls and found an Indianapolis-based ISP that gave 120 hours of Net access for just $15 a month.

"We are on the Internet all the time and have never reached that amount of time," she says of her decision today. "Besides, they only charge 50 cents per hour over 120 hours, so if we did go overboard, it certainly wouldn't cost as much as it did that first month with AOL.

When they first received full Internet access through the local ISP, the Hawns were worried about what their kids would be exposed to online. They had seen the media stories about X-rated materials and cyberstalkers preying on children and decided they better investigate themselves before letting the kids go online.

"I have found that if you want information on a particular subject, you have to go looking for it," she says. "Therefore, you are not likely to come across any pornography without actually doing a search." Pat and David made sure they understood the Internet themselves. They then taught the kids. "We sat down with the kids and set some ground rules such as no computer until homework and chores are done. We also discussed safety issues such as not giving out our address or phone number."

It's hard to find an area of the family's life that has not been affected by the Internet, "I have a sister in Baltimore, Maryland," says Pat. "We have never been very close, but ever since I got her e-mail address I write her at least once a week."

She says the Net is also a great way to cut family expenses. "My Saturday mornings are spent filling out online forms for free samples (www.auraland.com/free) and newsletters. I have received erasers in the shape of sushi from Japan, free vitamins. free pet food, free samples of soap, free bottles of Gatorade and lots more stuff."

And it's helped Pat emotionally, during what she thought was a serious health crisis. "One time I had an abnormal mammogram. My first instinct was to check out the various breast cancer sites on the Net. There was so much information there it was mind boggling. One of the best sites is OncoLink (www.oncolink.upenn.edu/) They have information about cancer prevention, symptoms, diagnoses and treatment. This is not only from a conventional viewpoint but also includes alternative medicine information."

In Pat's case, the scare was only that. Her problem turned out to be some routine cysts. But the way the Net gave her solid, reliable information made her even more devoted to spreading what she calls, the "good cybernews."

"The Internet has changed my life in many ways. All of the ways are good. It's changed the way we do business and communicate with each other. And I'm very excited about the way it will improve in the Plan ahead before holiday shopping puts you in the red

Everyone plans for a hearty Ho! Ho! Ho! type of holiday season but few welcome that Oh, Oh, Oh! feeling after it's all over. This year, retail merchants are forecasting higher sales than last year.

As with any other major expense, planning ahead makes a big difference in the outcome of any purchase, especially for the holidays. Saving in advance can be a tremendous help if you can set aside some money. Shopping early and catching special or true sales helps with many large-ticket items. • Making your shopping trips short.

■ Don't buy on impulse because you are tired or stressed out.

Keeping checking that shopping list to help you monitor purchases and expenditures.

■ Keep your receipts and compare what you've spent against what you have budget-

Loyalty is supposed to be a two-way street.

After 20 years of loyal service, Lorie Walls is locked out of her job as a circulation clerk at Detroit Newspapers. Why? Because she's a member of a union — one of six unions whose sacrifices helped make the Detroit News and the Free Press profitable.

But once the papers started making money, they turned their backs on decent people like Lorie. The papers caused and prolonged a labor dispute that's now more than two years old. The newspaper bosses are stonewalling a judge's order to get the workers back to their jobs right away.

Lorie and more than 1,500 other union workers have been told by the papers to retire or find new jobs.

Help them get their jobs back.

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

Artists reflect on club's history

fteen years ago, Joanne Blacker and Dallas McKennon were tired of traveling to share their experiences with artists in a distant club so they formed the Garden City Fine Arts Association. On Wednesday, Nov. 19, they will celebrate and remember the club's history by honoring six charter members and the past four presidents at a dinner in the Hawthorne Valley Country Club.

"We were looking for a gathering of like-minded people to get together and discuss painting," said McKennon, the club's first president. "After taking a survey, we asked artists at a craft show to sign up if they were interested in starting a club. We had so few to start with that everybody was doing every job/We were painting our brains out to have enough art because nobody wants to come to an art show where there's hardly any paintings."

Blacker kept the minutes during that first meeting in September of 1982 at the Maplewood Community Center in Garden City. "We started with the goal to introdude fine arts to the community and we've done that," said Blacker, who served as the club's second president. "Each meeting was exciting. In the early years, the Palette Pals met weekly to paint for exhibits held in

Besides providing a meeting place over the years, members have helped each other survive illness and even the deaths of spouses. Blacker contributed the reason for the club's continued popularity with artists from as far away as Dearborn Heights and Inkster.

On the prowl: Redford art teacher Debra Graham (left) and Pearson Education Center principal Karen Moran were instrumental in producing this brightly colored mural, focusing on plains and rain forest animals, for students.

Monkeying around:

The chimps in the mural below are symbolic of Debra Graham's daughters Lauren, 10 and Angela, 8.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

African animals parade down the hall of the Pearson Education Center in Redford Township. Debra Graham created the 20- by 10-foot animalscape to brighten the environment during the year she taught art at the center. A labor of love, the mural took from February to June to complete. Four months later the toucans, macaws, zebra, mother and baby giraffe, mir cats, and an alligator still turn heads.

"Everyone in the district knows about it," said Sandra North, director of hearing impaired programs in the Redford Union School district. "My deaf children absolutely loved it. The younger ones like all the animals. The older kids like how the eyes follow you."

Graham began the project by involving her ninth through 12th grade art students. With barely a budget, she went to work soliciting donations of house paint from parents. The center paid for the remaining miscellaneous supplies.

"I like to get in there and improve my environment," said Graham, who now teaches art at Pierce Middle School in the South Redford district. "It was great fun. The students helped block in the color. Some of the things we discussed were planning. They saw my preliminary sketches and my research. They leaned about building color and how to add shading and highlighting to add three dimensions and because it was all latex house paint, they learned to mix color."

The first animal added to the beige wall only served to fire enthusiasm for the mural. The large-scale gray elephant stands majestically amongst a mixture of plains and rain forest animals, all of which are bordered by a pattern of Kenta cloth.

"I was pulling resources together and then came up with a sketch," said Graham. "As the project went along, we kept on adding more and more. When you're in an enriched atmosphere it makes everyone produce more. I don't do these for a commission or because I'm being reimbursed. Detroit has so little public art. I believe in brightening the corner where you're at, make it a better place for being there. Cherish what's around you. A lot of people could have vandalized it but no one did. The kids have a sense of ownership." Graham credits Pearson Education Center principal Karen Moran for making the project possible. Without Moran's support, Graham doubts she could have produced the brightly colored mural for students and

"Have you ever seen anything so beautiful; how the eyes come out at you," said Moran. "I knew when we hired Debra that she would leave her mark of ability in the building."

From adults working on their diplomas to students enrolled in Head Start, alternative education, and the 40-year-old hearing impaired oral program for preschoolers, everyone loves the mural. In fact, Graham's students enjoyed the project so much they painted reproductions of masters works on the walls of their art classroom, afterward.

"It's garnered a great respect for art," said Moran. "It has promoted a ton of enthusiasm for doing something that will become a permanent part of the building. Since Debra finished it, the mural's brought a great deal of cheerfulness. It will never be duplicated, the energy, the commitment that went into it. It taught students the importance of seeing a project through to the finality." The mural was not Graham's first public art project. She painted the math lab at Jefferson Elementary with imagery ranging from geometric forms to tropical fish. At Monnier Elementary in Detroit, Graham and students, as part of the Picture Lady program, created a mosaic while studying Byzantine art. In the future, Graham hopes to paint a mural at Jefferson Elementary after the completion of renovations sometime next year. "I can't wait for her to do another one," said Graham's son Nicholas, a 13-year-old student at Pierce Middle School. "In the evenings, she was always on the computer looking up new animals. She always had new ideas to add. The monkeys and gorilla are symbolic of my sisters Lauren (10) and Angela (8), and I."

Gloria Craig and 17-month-old daughter Madelyn pass the mural mornings and afternoons on their way to the day care room.

"Although she calls it a rhino instead of a hippopotamus, she likes the birds and the kitty (cheetah) "What's the kitty say?"

Madelyn answered "meow." And the Lion?"

"Grrrr."

"She knows all of the sounds, the animals make," said Craig. "And in the morning, it relaxes her before I drop her off for the day."

In many people's minds, the word Vodou conjures up a shadowy world of evil spirits and priestesses who stick pins in dolls to cast spells of illness or death. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The exhibit "Sacred Arts of Haitian Vodou" was created by the UCLA Fowler Museum of Cultural History to de-mystify Vodou by showing more than 500 objects and art used during rituals and in the practice of the religion. The exhibition, which continues through Sunday, Dec. 28, at the Museum of African American History, features sequined flags bearing images of saints, sacred bottles and painted calabashes to hold offerings, drums, spirit repositories, a Vodou temple, and votive altars reassembled after altars' in Port au Prince.

"Vodou is more misunderstood in this country than in any other country in the world," said Rita Organ, curator of exhibitions at the Museum of African American History. "We fear what we don't understand. Hollywood has presented it in a negative way - such as curses used to get back at people. The use of curses to wish evil or death on someone is all myth."

Never before presented in the context of religion, exhibit objects refer to the worship of a supreme God and powerful spirits (Iwa) who serve as intermediaries.

Vodou is rooted in African spiritual' tradition, and was preserved by slaves on their passage to the Caribbean.

Vodou borrows from Roman Catholiand Free Masonry, Spirits, often made in the images of saints such as Isidore and Patrick, link humans with the divine. Vodou practitioners summon spirits when they're in need of rain, wisdom, fertility, a good.

crop, or to protect ships.

There are hundreds of lwa from the Rada (benign spirits from West Africa) to Petwo (fiery spirits from Central African and Kreyol traditions) to Gede who personify ancestral dead.

Devotion to Gede is carried out during the month of November, but especially the Days of the Dead (Nov. 1) and All Souls Day (Nov. 2).

"It's actually controversial," said Organ. "A day doesn't go by that I don't get a call that it's blasphemy, superstition. Because it's been confined to Haiti for so long, the exhibit is an opportunity for us to educate. Just seeing the beauty of the objects. It's ancient African tradition, Catholicism and elements of Free Masonry and they made their own religion out of it."

Ninety percent of the calls that Organ receives are from people who have not viewed the exhibit.

"Many people don't want to respect it as (they would) any religion of the world," said Organ. "We had to do a lot of education around this exhibit even with our own staff. The museum invited in clergy from different congregations to preview the exhibit. The museum's taking a positive approach."

Rooted in Africa

The first comprehensive exhibit ever to explore the arts produced for the African-Caribbean religion of Vodou, "Sacred Arts of Haitian Vodou" is divided into

The first section traces the history of persecution of Vodou followers.

Columbus discovered the island of Hispaniola in 1492 when it was inhabited by the Taino Indians. Within a generation, the Taino were nearly exterminated by Spanish colonizers who began importing was the only slave revolt in the world ever to create a nation.

In the 20th century, Vodou survived and prospered despite U.S. Marine occupation, persecution by clergy from 1915 to 1934, and the despotic rule of Francois (Papa Doc) and Jean Claude (Baby Doc) Duvalier from 1957 to 1986.

Items in the first few sections are representative of those likely to be placed on altars or sold as popular art. Still others are used during ceremonies. Many of the objects, collected during campaigns against Vodou from the 1940s to 1980s, were borrowed from museums, private collections and key Vodou temples in

"Once they understand the history of Haiti and Vodou, there is no problem accepting Vodou as a religion," said Organ. "Many people find Vodou interesting because it's extended beyond the bounds of Haiti. There is a Haitian society or 'Espoir' in Detroit and Vodou is practiced in New York, Miami and New Orleans."

Guerin Montilus, a Wayne State University anthropology professor and native of Haiti. estimates there are 5,000 Haitians living in the metropolitan Detroit area. Montilus gave a lecture at the museum in mid-October about the transformation of Haitian and West African Vodou over the last five centuries. He has conducted extensive research in Benin and neighboring West African countries since 1969 and studied Vodou in Africa and Cuba. Montilus is currently writing a book on the religion.

"Vodou is wrongly understood in American society (where) it refers to sorcery, magic, witchcraft, human sacrifice, all kinds of negative connotations," said Montilus. "It is based on hearsay, gossip. As a religion, it's as valuable as any other religion. There is an aesthetic especially in Vodou and other African religions of beauty and harmony."

Summoning Spirits

Objects used daily such as calabashes painted with the image or sacred sign of lwa (spirit) hold daily offerings. Ceremonial drums and rattles summon spirits through prayer. Dolls are used as healing tools. So, where did the notion of sticking Vodou dolls with pins to cast spells come from?

"I don't know where they find this," said Montilus. "It's not what I've observed. In Haiti, Vodou is a way of life. It touches the life of people. Everything is in everything. In Vodou, you find politics, education; it's a microcosm."

After the initial sections explain the rituals and belief of Vodou, the visitor walks into a recreated temple and altar chambers devoted to the three major rites of the religion. Julio Bateau, a loyal volunteer at the museum and a member of the board of directors of Espoir Haitian-American Organization, hopes to eliminate misconceptions about the religion and culture by opening the Espoir Center for Caribbean Arts and Culture on East Ferry in early December. The Center will disseminate information aimed at preserving and promoting the African history and culture of Caribbean life. The 12-year-old nonprofit organization co-sponsored the educational and cultural events for the exhibit.

"I think the exhibit is a wonderful medium to clarify whatever's mistaken about the Haitian culture or Vodou," said Bateau, a native of Haiti.

Summoning Spirits: Ceremonialdrums such as this one crafted of wood, paint, animal hide, and rope are used to call spirits.

BOOKS

Missouri takes center stage in this family conflict novel

South of Resurrection

By Jonis Agee (Viking, $24.95, 353 pp.) Moline Bed-

VICTORIA

up and gone, the typical suburban life they led together in Minnesota is over. Her hard-drinking sister. Paris. is dead, too. For Moline, it seems only right and proper that she should come "home" in order to dispose of the only thing that well

returned home

to Resurrection,

Missouri (pop.

1.523), after an absence of 23

years. Her husband is dead.

her son is grown

has remains of Paris - her ashes. As Moline pulls into Resurrection and parks her red Toyota 4-Runner across from the courthouse square, she spots a familiar figure. It may have been 23 years since she last saw him, but she would know this down-atthe-heels hillbilly anywhere, anytime. Surprise, surprise it's her old boyfriend, Dayrell Bell. Turns out, Dayrell is not just any old boyfriend, though. For one thing, he's done time in prison - for something that happened 23 years ago and involved Moline in some mysterious way. For another thing, he's got a brother who's meaner than a copperhead diamondback (in fact, he kills rattlers with his bare hands). For still another, Dayrell seems headed for some mighty big problems soon. To say he's irresponsible in all kinds of ways is putting it mild-in one of those Ozarkian caves. Other things have changed, though. To begin with, Resurrection and environs seem to be going to pot. Big Business - in the form of something called the Heart Hog Corporation - seems bent on delivering the final blow. They want to move in, buy up all the land for miles around and turn the area into pork "factory farms," which will, in turn, create huge amounts of waste and pollution. In the meantime, this commercialism will also wipe out the small, independent farmer. who has no chance of matching the low prices offered to customers by Big Business. Not surprisingly, the small farmers (and some others in town) balk at Heart Hog's attempts and a kind of small-scale "war" breaks out within this fictional community, providing a contemporary sub-plot throughout the novel. In addition to the aforementioned Modine Bedwell and Dayrell Bell, characters (most of them resembling caricatures) with names like Marjean Tyrell and Odell Meachum hash all of this out at some length.

Many readers may find "South of Resurrection" bogging down in several spots. I found it slowgoing - not just because of it predictability, but because of its sheer repetitiveness. By about the time the one-millionth longnecker cap is popped, for example, surely any reader is yearning for something just a little different, something that will inject some freshness into these characters, these actions, this story (repeated whiskey chasers and blood-and-guts fights don't seem

By far, the most engaging facet of this story is Missouri, itself. Not many novels are set in this "gateway" state that is not the East or the West, not the North or the South. Perhaps more them should be, and let's hope Ann Arbor writer Agee Will be consulted on all of the background material. Here, depicting the state's mythology, history, caves, backwoods, farms, churches, yards, gardens, hopeful little towns, Agee (who spent childhood summers in the Ozarks) is at her very best: "Lewis and Clark set out from here, the Pony Express began here, the wagon trains launched from here ... Even after it passed us by, we never lost that sense of being at important." But, despite the show-me state's strong characters on these pages, "South of Resurrection" is still strongly hampered by its human characters, some of whom seem difficult to know. Or too flat to grab hold of, or too distant to want to identify with, as they utter unconvincing dialogue or play out what too often feels like a highly-stereotypical role. More than that, the "heroes" of this work of fiction seem to possess for brains some of the stuff they're hauling out of old, smell barns. Consequently, they're not only hard to identify or empathize with, but hard to like

Why not meet someone in St. Louis?

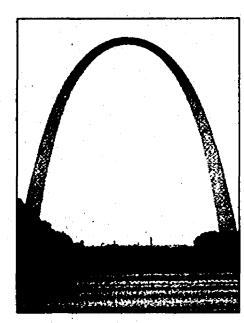

By Julie Brown STAFF WRITER

If you've always wanted to "Meet Me in St. Louis," now's a perfect time to travel there.

My busband, Mark Rembacki, and I visited St. Louis Oct. 6-13, enjoying weather warm enough for shorts. We took the train from Ann Arbor and then another train from Chicago to St. Louis.

We spent considerable time in Forest Park, visiting the zoo twice, along with the Science Center and the History Museum. The museum had a fascinating exhibit on the history of the 1904 World's Fair, held at the site. The exhibit was told through the eyes of fair participants from varied backgrounds.

The MetroLink trains, and connecting Shuttle Bug buses, Westward ho: The St. Louis Gateway is the symbol of the city and an invitation to travel west.

made getting around without a car easy. We stayed at the Holiday Inn Downtown/ Riverfront and found that location near the famous Arch ideal.

A trip to the top of the Arch is a must, as is a visit to the Museum of Westward Expansion at the base of the Arch. A movie tells the story of the construction of the Arch in the 1960s. Amazingly enough, not a single workman was killed during construction of the project, which was designed by Michigan-based architect Eero Sarinen.

We took a riverboat cruise along the Mississippi River, learning a great deal about the industry along the river. Many of the attractions - the zoo, History Museum and Science Center were free, and others had minimal charges. We paid $6 each to ride to the top of the Arch, and were allowed a leisurely stay.

Another must is the Old Courthouse near the Arch, the site where the Dred Scott slavery case was decided.

We visited nearby Busch Stadium, but weren't able to see the Cardinals play as the regular season had ended. We posed for pictures by the statue of Stan Musial, described by my husband as the St. Louis equivalent of Al Kaline in terms of being both a super ballplayer and a nice guy.

Just across the street from the stadium is the International Bowling Museum and Hall of Fame. We didn't make it there on this trip, but plan to next time. We also didn't get to the Museum of Transportation, nor to Forest Park's Art Museum.

We took a side trip to Columbia, an easy drive in the rental car about 125 miles west along I-70. It's home to the University of Missouri-Columbia, along with Columbia College and Stephens College.

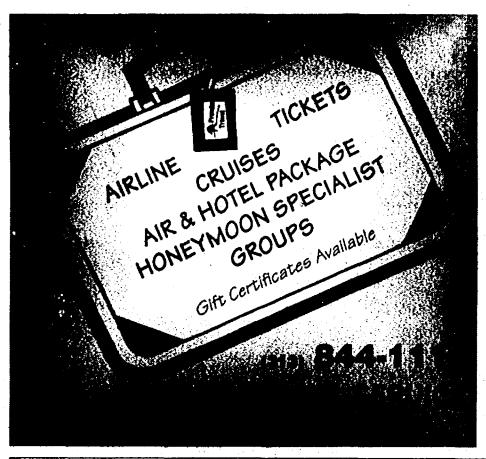

The only difficulty we encountered was with the trains. The southbound train to St. Louis was delayed by a broken-down freight train, necessitating a wait of several hours and an eventual ride by cab to down-

All in all, St. Louis is a good travel value. It has plenty to offer for families, including museum exhibits designed to challenge young minds.

Crosby named All-State

Livonia Stevenson senior Whitney Crosby was named first-team All-State in Division I girls tennis by the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association.

Crosby finished her senior year with a 22-4 overall record, winning the No. 1 singles title in the Western Lakes Activities Association and finishing runner-up in the Division I regional. She reached the quarterfinals of the state tournament posting a 1-1 record.

WLAA No. 1 singles runner-up Carla Shade of Farmington Hills Harrison earned All-State honors in Division III. 🗸

Collegiate note

Michigan State University senior defender Aimee Cousino (Livonia Churchill) was the lone Spartan women's soccer player to garner conference postseason accolades, landing a second-team berth to the All-Big Ten Team.

Cousino was the anchor of an MSU backfield that steadily improved throughout the course of the yar. Career-wise, Cousino played in a total of 74 matches, registering six points with one goal and four assists.

MSU finished 9-10-1 overall this season, losing 2-0 to Minnesota in the first round of the Big Ten tourna-

STAFF WRITER The high school hockey season will feature several new wrinkles this sea-

For starters, the Suburban High School Hockey League will be split into two divisions because of expansion. Livonia schools Churchill, Stevenson and Franklin will compete in the South Division along with holdovers Walled Lake Central, Walled Lake Western and Redford Union. They will be joined by newcomers Dearborn and

With the addition of a district round, which will extend the Michigan High School Athletic Association's state tournament to three weeks instead of two, the prep season gets underway a week earlier.

Four newcomers at forward should help — Jeff Lang, Dan Cieslak, Willie Wilson and Mike Walsh.

"Walsh is a clone of Domzalski in every phase of the game," Harris said. "Lang is a leader on the ice and in the classroom. He displays a lot of character. He played on the Midget AA state champs from Plymouth.

"Cieslak is a big, powerful, strong right winger, and Wilson comes from the good Livonia Bantam AA program." Harris believes the league has improved with its new alignment. "It's going to be a battle," said Harris, who has guided the Spartans to two titles in three years. "It's wide open. We're the defending champs. We're Stevenson, so we expect to be in the race, but we expect it to go right

Churchill, which slipped to 11-9-2 last year, should also contend with the return of first-team All-Area defenseman Brandon Martoia.

Exchange students Antti Kervinen (Finland) and Felix Jentzmik (Germany) should give coach Jeff Hatley a boost along with newcomers Frank Fundero (not eligible until Jan.), Ryan Strzempek and Adam Krug.

"All the kids were disappointed how we finished last year," Churchill coach Jeff Hatley said. "Everybody's priority now is to win. "This is the first time we've had three lines that can score. They're all capable. There's no question we have a good team. But we know every game is tough and nothing will come easy."

Franklin, featuring the dean of Observerland coaches Terry Jobbitt, now in his 16th year, boasts one of the state's premier players in three-year letter winner Greg Job.

The senior was the SHSHL's leading scorer last year despite missing the final two weeks of the season with a broken arm. The All-Stater finished with 21 goals and 16 assists as a junior, raising his career totals to 65 goals and 67 assists.

"Greg hasn't missed a step and he's our leader," Jobbitt said.

Job's younger brother Jeff, a sophomore left winger, should also give the Patriots reason to believe they should improve on last year's 7-14-1 overall Defending state Class A champion Redford Catholic Central (25-1-1) was gutted by graduation.

Michigan's Mr. Hockey, defenseman Scot Curtin, is gone along with firstteam All-Observer picks Eric Bratcher. Dan McLellan and Mike Porter.

Second-team All-Area goaltender Rick Marnon, however, returns along with senior winger Ian Devlin.

The Shamrocks, who belted perennial state power Trenton, 7-0, in last year's championship final in Flint, will be relying on a host of newcomers.

"Until someone knocks us out, they'll all be shooting for us," CC coach Gordie St. John said. "Ricky (Marnon) had a tremendous defense in front of him last year and he's going to be seeing a lot more rubber this year than last.

"He told me he's looking forward to it. He wants people to see he's really talented - and he is."

Tough opponent

Mercer ousts Schoolcraft in NJCAA

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS WRITER

No doubting this was a step in the right direction.

Okay, so Schoolcraft College's men's soccer team won't get the chance to play for the NJCAA national title today in Trenton, N.J. Instead, the Ocelots (now 17-6-1) will have to settle for a battle for third place in the consolation final, against Mount Ida (Mass.).

But the Ocelots still had a superb run to end the season, capping it with their first victory at nationals since Van Dimitriou has been coaching them (15 years).

That victory came in last Thursday's opening round, and it came against an old nemesis: College of DuPage (from Glen Ellyn, Ill.). SC got a goal 10 minutes into the match and made it stand up, winning 1-0.

"Our defense played a phenomenal game," said Dimitriou. "(DuPage) really did not get a serious shot on goal.

"In all my years of coaching, I've never had a team play defense like this one. They allowed one goal in their last five games."

That was before Friday's semifinal match against Mercer (N.J.) CC, the host team. SC took an early lead, but couldn't sustain it against an extremely talented group, losing 5-2.

MEN'S COLLEGE SOCCER

"It was like playing the U.S. Olympic team," said Dimitriou of Mercer. "It was that level of play.'

Mercer, which improved to 17-1-1 with the win, advanced to play Yavapai (Ariz.) CC in today's final. Yavapai (20-0-1) defeated Mount Ida (18-1-1) 3-0 in Friday's other semifinal.

Garrett Maki (Canton) scored the only goal of the match against DuPage, beating the keeper from the left 18 yards out to the short side. He was assisted by David York. Eric O'Neil (Livonia Stevenson) was in goal for the

For years, DuPage and SC were in the same NJCAA Inter-regional Tournament, with DuPage often serving as the host team. The winner advanced to nationals; DuPage often gained that honor, while SC only once got to that point.

This season, the two schools were put in different inter-regionals, with SC hosting its own — and winning it.

And then beating DuPage (17-2-1) in the opening round.

Mercer proved to be more of a challenge for SC. Darin Lewis put the host team ahead early, but the Ocelots bounced back to tie it on a goal by Matthew Nyholm. Matt Keller assist-

SC took a 2-1 lead midway through the first half when Ryan Konley (Plymouth Salem) scored, assisted by Paul Graves. But with five minutes left in the half, Mercer re-tied it.

"Part of the difficulty was, we tried to play the whole field on this team," said Dimitriou. "And they were too talented for that. When we took the lead we tried to play defensively and protect it.

"Always before we could spread things out on the other team, knowing we only had to mark two or three players. But (Mercer) had no weaknesses. They-were-all-good.-And-it's-hard-to cover 11 guys."

Lewis scored his third goal of the match 15 minutes into the second half to put Mercer ahead to stay. Omari Murray's two goals made certain of the

"Every kid they had was quick, every kid had complete mastery over the ball," said Dimitriou of Mercer.

Even though he allowed five goals in the game, the SC coach was impressed with O'Neil's play in goal, which included stopping a penalty kick. Indeed, he was pleased with the play of all his players.

"I take my hat off to these kids," Dimitriou said.

Springfield rolls to 8-2 victory over Crusaders

To think: Madonna University actually was ahead in its NAIA Great Lakes Regional soccer semifinal against Illinois-Springfield, played Friday at the University of Rio Grande (Rio Grande, OH).

The Fighting Crusaders put two goals on the board in the first 17 minutes of play. But then . . .

Well, the roof caved in. Springfield tied it with 11:46 left in the half and, less than six minutes later, took the lead for good en route to an 8-2 thrashing of Madonna.

The Crusaders finish their season at 15-5. Springfield (17-3) advanced to the regional final against host Rio Grande (16-5-1) which defeated Dominican University (Ill.) 2-1 in Friday's other semifinal.

Springfield's Beny Buidel converted a pass from Craig Schneer less than four minutes into Friday's match to put Madonna in a

Males leads Ocelots' win

Garden City High product Pete Males continued his ateady play at point-guard Friday, leading Schoolcraft Com-munity College to a 102-76 men's basketball win over Muskegon in the Macomb CC Hoops Classic.

Schoolcraft, off to a 3.0 start under first-year coach Carlos Briggs, broke open a tight game at halftime (42-38) with a 60-38 second-half run.

Males finished with six assists and six points, but more importantly he committed just one turnover. Pete gets us into our offense and we wouldn't be where we're at if it wasn't for him," Briggs said.

-- Kevin Melson, a 6-foot-6 swingman, led Schoolcraft and all scorers with a game-high 27 points. He also snared nine rebounds.

Shooting guard Derek McK-elvey (Adrian) came off the beach to score 23 points, while Enjeka Okonkwo and Jimar Eddins added 15 and 10, respectively.

David Jarrett (Westland John Glenn), who came off the bench to score six points and grab six rebounds, helped apply the second-half defensive pressure. "We started slowly, but we picked up the defensive pressure and it opened things up fer us," Briggs said. "We were able to get some easy baskets."

Schoolcraft shot 52 percent from the floor (40 of 75), including 35 percent from three-point range. The Ocelots outrebounded Muskegon 44-

The Ocelots were 16 of 22 from the line and committed just 11 turnovers.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

Stevenson turns tables, 52-41

The serious stuff is over, now the girls high school basketball season gets down to the real serious stuff.

The Michigan High School Athletic Association tournament begins Monday all over the state - and even if teams aren't ready, they're ready.

They have to be.

Livonia Stevenson is no exception. The Western Lakes Activities Association tournament out of the way, the Spartans are eyeing the district phase of the state tournament.

"We had three good games to get ready for the district," coach Wayne Henry of Stevenson said Thursday after his Spartans drubbed Livonia Churchill, 52-41. "This was a big win for our kids. We lost to Churchill in a close game early in the year."

Stephanie Dulz came up big in the regularseason finale, which saw host Stevenson put an 11-9 record into the books. Churchill ended the exact opposite.

Dulz scored 11 points and had 12 rebounds for the Spartans. Sophomore Kate LaBlanc also scored 11 and added eight rebounds while Melissa Backus scored nine points. Point guard Carolyn Courtright had four points, 10 rebounds and six assists. Stevenson held a 22-17 halftime lead. added a point to the margin after three quarters and closed with an 18-13 fourth period.

The Spartans sank 12-of-17 free throws. Visiting Churchill got 12 points from Andrea Galindo and 11 from Kersten Conklin. The Chargers had 13 free throw attempts and made six.

Sailors provide fall aerial ballet Each autumn I look forward to leaf first to the east and then to

While St. John didn't think of St. John hopes to bolster the an aerial ballet of sailors in my backyard.

Best performers are the red maple leaves. As they sail through the air they look like experienced and novice sailors or ballet dancers.

I've watched oak and black cherry leaves. but they do not have the design for being an autumn dancer like the red maple.

NOWICKI

NOTES

One morning leave their branch mooring and sail to the ground.

Some of would tack back and forth several times as they glided downward. There were short tacks and long tacks, zig-zags and slides.

The blade of the leaf would direct the gradually descending the west, depending on the currents of air it encountered.

Some of the falling leaves were reluctant to reach their destination. First they would slide downward. Then just as quickly, they would gracefully slide upward, never retracing their path, always searching for a route that would keep them in the air.

Watching some of these reluctant leaves occupied many more moments than most of the other leaves I watched. Maybe they didn't want to "leaf" their lofty location and lower themselves to such a firm foundation.

In contrast to the reluctant last week I had the time to sit leaf were those that just and watch the red maple leaves dropped. They did nothing but fall to the ground and land in the crowd.

Their arrival was anticipated but not outstanding. While moving through the air they did not position themselves to attract my attention or swing intentionally into my view. They just fell.

Maybe these leaves came from a new branch and thus were a novice in this seasonal ritual. Though each leaf grows new every year, those that fall with class may be those that grew from older, more seasoned branches.

Those that drop are the antithesis of those that pirouette. Leaves pirouetting can be the more delightful to watch. Their long petiole points down and their blade rotates around its axis.

Even though the path they follow may be gently sliding to the side, they maintain their perfect pointed position as they pirouette among the zig-zaggers, the tumblers, the sliders, the droppers and the reluctants.

It is remarkable to see such expertise in a performance that is only done once with no preceding practice.

Leaves definitely deserve our attention and respect for all the things they do, from photosynthesis, to shade, to food for animals, to a palette of color, to a ballet in the backyard.

We're living in the "Good Ol" Days" right now.

With an estimated 1.8 millidn deer in Michigan before the start of the archery season (Oct. 1) hunters can expect another banner year. But be sure to enjoy the liberal bag limits available to us right now because they won't last forever. These are the Good Of Days we'll undoubtedly tell our grandchildren about.

In an effort to significantly reduce the size of the Michigan whitetail population the Department of Natural Resources has handed out a record 456,000 antlerless deer permits this year, 50,000 more than last year. In some areas, particularly here in Zone III (southern Lower Peninsula), leftover antlerless permits were sold over-the-counter with a one-per-day limit.

The ultimate goal of the DNR is to reduce the fall herd to approximately 1.3 million animals by 1999. That's a reduction of a half-million animals, over 25-percent of the entire herd. So while the numbers are up statewide be sure to enjoy the action while it lasts. The liberal bag limits won't be here forever.

Following back-to-back severe winters in Zone I (Upper Peninsula) deer numbers are about 50-percent lower than they were two years ago. Winter losses have been estimated at 110,000 animals. The hardest hit areas are at the western end of the UP.

Zone II (northern Lower) hunters can expect to see approximately the same numbers of bucks and does as last year, although the DNR estimates that the Zone II herd is down approximately six-percent from last year.

Zone III (southern Lower) hunters can expect a terrific season as deer numbers are at record levels down here. With much of the area consumed by private land the trick is to lock into an area you can hunt. Private land hunters will have the best luck, but public lands in Zone III also hold good numbers of deer. The secret to successfully hunting public lands down here is to get away from the crowds.

Stay in the woods

The firearms season begins one-half-hour before sunrise on Saturday. With the opener on a Saturday, rest assured the woods will be full of hunters all weekend. If you're serious about filling a tag, pack a lunch and stay in the woods all day on the opener, and even on Sunday if you can. You'll increase your chances of suc-

Opening day is by far the best day of hunting during the entire season. Once the lead starts to fly most deer, particularly the bigger bucks, will become more nocturnal and will tend to lay low during the day. On opening day you can still get the jump on them.

On top of that, if you can sit still while everyone else is leaving and returning to the woods at midday the deer they're jumping and pushing around may just come your

Nothing but excuses

Perched precariously in a choke cherry tree - northeast of a couple hot intersecting deer trails - for the better part of the last month, I've had plenty of time to think. When the deer weren't around, I had time to ponder some of the bigger problems of the world such as homelessness, unrest in the Middle East, the recent historical plunge of the stock market and many other worldly prob-

More importantly, however,

I remembered some excuses I've heard from other people as to why they return home from the annual trip to deer camp without any venison for the freezer. If you find yourself facing this dilemma here are some tested excuses that are sure to get you off the hook.

•The DNR was conducting a study and wouldn't let anyone shoot a deer in our area.

- •I left my compass back at camp and didn't know where I was so I didn't want to shoot a deer and drag it the wrong
- •I lost my license and the local sport shop was out (don't let on about the new computer-
- ized license system.) •I couldn't sleep the night before because I was home sick and I fell asleep in my blind. (Never, ever, under any circumstances admit that it was a poker game that kept you up all night.)
- I saw a deer walk through camp one afternoon, but I couldn't get out of bed fast enough to get off a shot.

 The buck was heading right for (insert hunting partner's name here) blind and I wanted him to finally get a deer. How was I supposed to know he left his blind at prime time to answer nature's call.

Well there you have it. Nothing to worry about if you forget to hunt and return home empty handed.

Better yet, get out and spend some serious time in the woods and make an honest effort to fill the freezer.

Be safe and good luck! And be sure to report your success at the number below.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-

Some places are better than others, offering a wide range of soups, salads and sandwiches for their customers, but this is about to change, and change for the better through the means of a program offered through McVety and Associates of Farmington Hills.

They have developed a program with HDS Services to improve standards and quality of food served in any bowling establishment.

They are offering a manual, which according to Jerry McVety provides hands-on step by step guidance that can help virtually all bowling centers large or small.

BCA Executive Director Scott Bennett endorses the plan and suggests, "all bowling centers that will be competitive in the year 2000 will be those who are continually researching how to provide better quality customer service."

Doesn't it make sense that good nutrition will result in higher scores on the lanes? Or which is better, to be well-fed or just fed up?

■ The generosity of bowlers is a well-known fact when it comes to raising money for various charities. Evergreen Children's Services have had their "Bowl-a-Thon to Strike Out Child Abuse" on Saturday at Cloverlanes and last week the "Tail-Waggers Bowl" took place at Woodland Lanes in Livonia and Milford Bowl in that growing community.

Apparently a lot of bowlers were concerned about cruelty to animals enough to bring in over $50,000, most of which came out of Woodland.

Woodland Proprietor Al Winkel said "It was just an incredible turnout and show of support. This is an annual event, and according to director Laura Zain, "It gets bigger and better

■ The Les Stanford Chevrolet All-Stars were in action as usual last Tuesday night at Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park and LaRue Distributing had a field day with a new high team series of 3,590 led by Dearbornite Mike Lee on a pair of 300 games with a 234 sandwiched

His 834 contributed toward the new high totals, with Quinton Greene of Dearborn adding a 722, Kevin Frederick of Clinton Township a 670; Will Woolnough of Wyandotte kicked in a 697 and Craig Bosco of St. Clair Shores added

Oddly enough, they did not win every game as Baranski Insurance, with Captain Dan Ottman of Troy, took the second game 1,225-1,190.

The Tuesday night All-Stars are probably the strongest league talent-wise in the nation.

FIRST MARATHON

Brings out the Jekyll and Hyde in me

STAFF WRITER

Maybe I owe it to the Heart & Sole Running Club, which meets every Monday night at the Livonia YMCA. They certainly provide great camaraderie, plus they're a great group of people who give you lots of support.

Same goes for the Downriver Runners, who meet every Wednesday night behind the Allen Park Theater.

Running was only an obligatory thing to do when I played high school basketball and college tennis.

I'm not a great runner by any stretch, but I'm proud to say I've worked my way up in the top 20 percent for most big races. Prior to that, my claim to fame was breaking a sixminute mile to make the varsity basketball team at Franklin High School, but then again, it took me three tries.

I wasn't the running type anyhow — asthma attacks, a hay fever and allergy sufferer as a kid. Breathe fresh air? Give me some Kleenex.

But somewhere along in my athletic career, I got tired of paying for court time, finding suitable partners, and got tired of playing hoops against guys who knew little about the fundamentals and trash-talked at the same

Convenient sport

Running is cheap. You can make your own schedule. I can't say how it all evolved, but somewhere along the line I got a crazy idea that my first marathon would be the Big Enchilada — New York City.

Dr. Kirk Lewis, a star athlete in his day at Garden City West High School who later went on to captain the Michigan football team under Bo Schembechler, did New York.

And he was an offensive guard (whereas I was a shooting guard with a knuckle ball).

I was supposed to do New York in 1996, but six weeks prior to the first Sunday in November, I came up lame, suffering a deep muscle strain while doing an 18-miler, Labor Day 1996 at the Scotty Hanton in Port Huron. To get to New York, you have to go through a lottery. They receive over 50,000 applications for 30,000 spots.

Luckily, my dream (or nightmare?) remained alive. I got to carry over my entry and was guaranteed a spot for 1997.

After a month of rehabilitation and a slow Turkey Trot, I got back on schedule for 1997, although I learned through my injury that 20 minutes of stretching would be required each day to get me through.

Although my hamstrings at times "remained tighter than guitar strings," this 6-foot-3, 180-pound bag of bones got to the point where I could see actually see the top of the Empire State Building.

There wasn't a day that didn't go by when I didn't think about Nov. 2, even during the dog days of June, July and August.

Training a grind

In the 22 weeks leading up to New York, I put in a total of 838 miles (roughly 38 per week), not to mention the obligatory road races and events leading up to NYC - West Bloomfield

I can't explain how I got the run- Half-Marathon, Old Kent 25K, Dex- The 26.2-mile course loops onto to the Wellington Hotel on 57th and ter-Ann Arbor Half-Marathon, Plymouth YMCA 10K, Whitmore Lake 12K, Great Lakes Relays (10-man teams, 291 miles over three days up north), the Roadrunner Classic (a hot one), 10-mile Run Through Hell (not too bad), 10-mile Crim (nice day) and the 8K Rockwood Ramble.

> I did a pair of 20-milers, an 18miler, a 16-miler, a 15-miler, a 14miler, and often made it a point to hit Cass Benton every so often along with trips to Kensington just to get in a few

When I finally arrived three days early to the Big Apple, I was nearly overwhelmed.

Penn Station seemed like Michigan Stadium had just let out on a football Saturday. And let's face it, who wouldn't be unnerved after a ride in one of those Yellow cabs? (Those guys could start their own Winston Cup

I could see the headlines already in the New York Post: "Marathon runner plunges off the East River in Cab."

And although Manhattan can be a little unnerving with all the hub-bub, my hosts (Bob Stebbins and Tonya Howard), along with support from Downriver teammates Greg Everal and Eve Soltesz, kept me entertained and out of harms way. (Eve and Greg were doing their second marathon in as many weeks.)

True confession — it felt funny pay ing $82 to see a Broadway musical when on a normal Friday night I could see the John Glenn-Wayne Memorial football game for free.

My regards to Broadway

But then again, the performance of Jekyll and Hyde was magnificent and proved to be a good diversion from my marathon anxieties.

"Should I or shouldn't I? Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde would ask. Should I take the bus to Staten Island or get a ride from Bob? Race morning was foggy, although mild (temps near 60), but dreary and wet. The start of the New York City marathon is like no other. Thirty-thousand crammed into one place with three different chutes. My colored chute was green (how appropriate for a first-timer). I can't tell you when the gun went off, or where the starting line was. All

I know I was on the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge with runners from all 50 states and 97 different countries.

I was moving, although at a snail's pace. And it was windy on the bridge and about 10 degrees cooler than at the staging area (which featured the world's largest urinal). It was so blustery that I thought my race number was going to get ripped off my shirt.

Under the massive suspension bridge, Europeans serenaded each other with chants of: "Ole-Olay, Olay-Olay, Ole-Lay, O-Lay, O-Lay."

Sounded good, sounded positive, something you hear at a soccer match. And it was exhilarating.

I certainly got a kick out of crowds, who lined the streets through the entire five boroughs. New York is certainly a melting pot of ethnic groups.

Loads of spectators

Fourth Avenue in Brooklyn. You receive words of encouragement in Bedford-Stuyvesant before hitting Queens, and onto the 59 Street Bridge into First Avenue in Manhattan where the spectators are lined three and four deep.

My Great Lakes Relay teammate and sub-3 hour marathoner Larry Wojcik warned me that New York was not a PR course.

"It's your first one, just enjoy it," he urged. But for some reason, I had visions to doing something like 3:30, not unrealistic since I've run 1:09 for 10 miles and done a 42:00 10K. But after a few miles I learned that the Big Enchilada featured gridlock like I had never seen. The crowd of runners never thinned out, not in Harlem (mile 18) and not in the

I felt frustrated, like Barry Sanders trying to maneuver around an eightman front. There was simply no room

When I hit the halfway mark at 2 hours, I decided 3:30 was a pipe dream, just relax and enjoy it, just as Larry suggested even though I was a bit demoralized.

But as the New York Times so aptly titled their special marathon pullout issue: "Brave Efforts on a Beastly Day," things turned ugly as we hit Harlem with about eight miles to go. Thunder, lightning and a monsoon rain hit the course with brute force. Running through ankle deep puddles made a nice, easy run seem arduous.

Hitting the wall

As we hit 138th Street in the Bronx and headed down Fifth Avenue toward Central Park, the rain intensified.

Then, my moment of truth arrived. At 21 1/2 miles I hit the proverbial wall (or was it the Hoover Dam which sprung a huge leak?).

Somehow, those gospel singers (proceeded by some hard rockers) didn't seem as entertaining anymore.

The whole thing became one big blur. I decided to walk 50 yards to regain my faculties, but although my mind was willing, my legs weren't as

I started up again at a pub crawl pace, and to be honest, when I hit Central Park for the final stage I didn't feel any better.

As the rain continued to drench us, I saw the light at the end of the tun-

A huge TV screen awaited the runners as we made the turn for the final I actually picked up a step or two, dent my two most immediate pains cramped toes and hamstrings tighter than guitar strings. Unable to hail a cab to get back to 75th and York on Manhattan's Upper East Side, my two Downriver friends

Along the way I bumped into a sports celebrity and fellow competitor, tennis star Mats Wilander. But somehow I wasn't thinking about serve and volley tactics just then.

We took in valuable some sight-seeing in what seemed to be a death march while chomping on some muchneeded goodies on our way back to the Wellington.

Honoring a Beatle

"There's where John Lennon was shot," as Greg pointed out the Dakota

"Get a gun and shoot me, too," I told

After taking a lukewarm shower at the Wellington, I felt better, but still extremely sore and very fatigued. I walked down Seventh nearly all the way to Third before hailing a cab.

My next destination was to meet my friend Bob at Lexington Station and take the subway down to Madison Square Garden for the Knicks-Pistons

After a 15-minute wait to catch the train, I struck up a conversation with a friendly New York lady who told me, "You look pretty good for having just run a marathon.* "Looks can be deceiving," I told her.

After climbing several flights of stairs to get to our seats, we settled in and watched Grant Hill dismantle the Knicks. The concession food at a game. never tasted better. After Sunday's race I made it back to Metro Airport in one piece-

(although I missed my initial flight, must have been brain dead). To say the least, my legs felt sore for the next two days. I had a quite a bit of trouble walking down flights of stairs, but I was back on the job on

And to my surprise, I drove to Allen Park on Wednesday and ran 5 miles. Didn't feel peppy, but the soreness had pretty much left my body.

I took three more days off and was back at it again last Sunday. Since then I've put in five straight days of running.

Back to normality

It was nice to be back in tranquil, Hines Park again, away from the maddening crowds of New York.

On Wednesday, I ran hard (nearly-7:10 pace for 6 miles) and felt like I: could run another marathon. In fact, I hadn't felt this good in months.

"New York was like a long training run," my friend Dan Martinez said; "now you're ready."

I got weird idea I'd like to try it.

My next target date is Sunday, Dec, 7, either in Memphis, Oklahoma City or Dallas. I have a weekend airfare Post-race was no picnic, but I was waiting to be used. But I have to keep lucky enough to bring a dry T-shirt, reminding myself that's Pearl Harbor

The competitive fires are burning inside of me once again. I know I can do better, just get me out of that Fifth Avenue gridlock.

Of course, that's brings out the Jekyll and Hyde in me.

(Greg and Eve) escorted me all the I'm kind of in a dilemma: "Should I way from 81st and Central Park West or shouldn't I?'

Salem gets revenge on Canton to win title

BY SCOTT DANIEL STAFF WRITER

Score round two a TKO for Plymouth Salem's basketball squad. The Rocks used solid defense and a fundamentally sound offensive effort to punch out a 48-37 victory over cross-campus rival Plymouth Canton Friday in the Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament championship game.

It was a measure of revenge for the Blue and White. The Chiefs won the regular season league title by handing Salem a doubleovertime defeat.

"We did a better job of passing, catching and finding the open player," Rocks coach Fred Thomann said. "Our team is maturing right now. We're a onesenior squad. It takes time for young kids to assert themselves."

·It was that one senior, Amanda Abraham, who asserted herself, though.

With the Rocks down 7-6 after the first quarter, the 6-foot-1 allconference player helped her team take a three-point halftime lead. Abraham, who finished with a game high 19 points, scored five in the frame.

!"She did a nice job," Thomann said.

Canton coach Bob Blohm said Salem's size advantage caught up with his team.

"They just got inside of our defense," he commented, "and finished well. They played well and deserved to win."

Salem (17-3) can't relish the victory for long, however.

EMU baseball signs GC star Cole to letter

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Eastern Michigan University baseball coach Roger Coryell came through with a scholarship for Garden City senior pitcher/shortstop Devin Cole.

Cole's father, Dennis, might have only one more request. How about starting his son on the mound in the second game of weekday double-headers?

It would fit perfectly into Dennis' schedule as a maintenance worker at St. Joseph's Hospital, which is directly across the street from EMU's Oestrike Stadium.

Dennis works 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily, and the best he can do is watch his son's first game on tape delay.

"We've got a security system (cámera) over there that can zero in on the field - you don't even have to leave to watch," he said. "I can read the scoreboard like a newspaper. It's right there."

Technology is nice, but the elder Cole is definitely leaning toward taking vacation time to watch his son pitch.

Cole, a pitcher and shortstop with a 2.8 grade point average, signed a national letter of intent with the Eagles on Friday, the first week high school seniors could sign with the college of théir choice.

Corvell likens him to former Livonia Churchill right-hander Mark Rutherford, who enjoyed a fine rookie season as a pitcher for one of the Pittsburgh Pirates' Class A affiliates after being drafted out of EMU last spring. Rutherford was a pitcher and designated hitter for EMU. He's a pitcher, but capable of playing another position." Odryell said. "I think he's a great athlete, can help us in a couple ways. He just turned 17 (Aug. 8), so he's really quite young for his grade. He's got a great arm, is a a great competitior, wants to win and do whatever it takes. He stems to fit in well with every-very well in the summer." Cole was sold on EMU after belog shown around campus by an assistant coach and All-America candidate Greg Ryan, a junior first baseman from Garden City and Dearborn Divine body he plays with. He's been on quite a few teams that have done

Ryan was Mid-American Conference Player of the Year and a second-team All-Mideast Region choice as a sophomore. He was first in the MAC and seventh in that nation with a batting average of :447 as well as an all-acadendic league selection.

Cole also visited Ohio State and considered Michigan State, Cincinnati and Purdue. None of their offers matched EMU's.

Wednesday at Novi High in the second round of the state district tournament. Rocks' junior Andrea Pruett said her team won't change its game plan

"We're going to stick to what we're doing," she said, "and let all of our talent and skills come through."

Friday's game started out as a typical Canton-Salem showdown: back and forth, scratching and clawing.

Salem took control of the game early in the third quarter.

Canton's Elsie Thornell sank a pair of free throws to make it a 17-16 game at 5:59 of the period. The Rocks followed with a 9-0 run keyed by Abraham, who scored five of the points including a three-pointer.

Salem led 30-23 at the end of the quarter. That lead grew to as many as 14 in the fourth.

The Chiefs tried to battle back as Kristin Lukasik scored five points. But Canton simply couldn't slow down the Rocks on defense.

Blohm said his team will need to play better defense Wednesday and make good on its offensive chances. The Chiefs (16-4) missed numerous shots near the basket in Friday's contest.

"The good news is that we got them," said Blohm. "The bad news is that we didn't finish them. We have to make those shots to compete with Salem."

Besides Abraham's 19 points, Pruett had 10, Phillips nine and Tiffany Grubaugh nine added eight. Lukasik scored 11 for Canton and Melissa Marzolf added 10 points.
