Man charged in death of boy, 2

Hassan Clark, 30, was arraigned Sunday on a felony murder charge for the Jan. 14 death of 2-year-old Michael Towne. Police said Clark was caring for Towne while the boy's mother, Kimberly Howie, was working.

Police call it a bizarre coincidence that two Westland men within two months have been charged with killing their girlfriends' young sons.

"It's a coincidence, but it's unbelievable," Westland police Lt. Marc Stobbe

Hassan Clark, 30, was arraigned Sunday on a felony murder charge for the Jan. 14 death of 2-year-old Michael

His arrest came as 26-year-old Rayshawn Otis Cobb faces a court hearing today (Thursday) for the Dec. 7 death of Darius Deshawn Conaway, who was beaten at Hines Park Apartments near Warren and Cowan.

Like Clark, Cobb is charged with felony murder amid accusations he killed his girlfriend's son while babysitting. Darius died five days after he was beaten into a coma.

In the latest incident, police said Clark was caring for Michael Towne while the boy's mother, Kimberly Howie, was working. Police received a call that the child had stopped breathing while happing.

"The mother was at work, and she's just hysterical," Stobbe said.

Clark and Howie lived together at The Orchards of Newburgh, an apartment complex near Glenwood and Newburgh where Westland paramedics and police officers found the lifeless child about 2 p.m. Jan. 14.

Two neighbors told police that they had heard noises coming from the apartment.

Paramedics took Michael to Oakwood Hospital/Annapolis Center-Wayne, where it was learned that the boy had chicken pox and minor bruises although doctors didn't see immediate signs of foul play.

"The doctor at the hospital thought it was just the typical bruising that a 2year-old gets from bumping into things," Stobbe said.

2 Westland police officers ticketed in gambling case

Two veteran Westland police officers, ticketed Sunday in a high-stakes gambling party in Royal Oak, won't likely lose their jobs, Police Chief Emery Price said Wednesday.

"From what I know right now, I don't see anybody getting terminated because of this," he said.

Price declined to name the officers but confirmed that they have been with the Westland Police Department for more than 20 years.

"These are two officers who have been here for a long time," he said,

"and they're both good guys." Price placed both officers on desk duty until an internal investigation can be completed, possibly within a week or

Li. Marc Stobbe said.

"We're going to try to charge him as an adult," Stobbe said.

The boy was described as a 225-pound student of John Gian High School, but officials didn't release his name because he hasn't been charged.

The boy, his girlfriend and the mother all shared an apartment on the south end of the complex, Szpara said.

The building where the fire started sustained about $20,000 to $25,000 in damages, much of it from smoke, he said.

Fire officials wouldn't reveal specific details of how the fire started and said the incident remains under investigation.

After the argument erupted, the mother went into a bedroom and closed the door, and the boy soon left the apartment, Szpara said.

County Medical Examiner's Office ruled that Michael's internal injuries were far more serious than had been suspected. The office determined that the boy had been "beaten to death," according to a police report.

The child suffered abdominal bleeding and a liver fracture, and his pancreas had been pushed against his spine, splitting it in two, the report said.

Westland police also are investigating medical examiner reports that the boy may have been previously beaten.

"There may be evidence of prior injuries," Stobbe said. In court Sunday, a not-guilty plea was placed on record for Clark during his arraignment. He was denied bond. He is scheduled for a Jan. 28 hearing in Westland 18th District Court that will determine whether he should face trial for felony murder.

Like Cobb. Clark could face a maximum sentence of life in prison if convicted as charged.

The latest charge against Clark came as he was already awaiting trial in Wayne County Circuit Court for negligent homicide, punishable by two years in prison.

Clark was accused of driving a car that crossed the center line and hit another vehicle head-on on Feb. 7, 1998, on Newburgh Road near Palmer.

year-old passenger in the car Clark was driving, died from massive internal injuries.

Hassan wasn't declared legally drunk but had consumed some alcohol, Westland police Officer Jack McIntosh said.

Officer Julie Alsip also testified during an April 30 hearing that empty beer bottles were found in the car and that she smelled the "strong odor of intoxicants" in the vehicle.

and great-granddaughter Maxine Henderson-Wilson, 7.

"I guess I'm one of the oldest walkers," Wilson said.

Deputy Mayor George Gillies estimated that 70 people marched about a mile from the Wayne-Westland school district's Dyer Center on Marquette to the city's senior citizen Friendship Center on Newburgh. Inside, the crowd swelled to 200 or more as some who didn't march joined the celebration.

It marked the city's second annual event honoring King's birthday. The civil rights leader would be 70 if he hadn't been gunned down in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

Lori Wilson, who marched with her mother in 1963, wanted granddaughter Maxine to have a similar experience.

"I came for my grandchild so that she can know, understand, feel and participate in change," Lori Wilson said.

Student view

Maxine, a Thomas Gist Academy second-grader in Westland, had already written a school report about King.

"He was a good man," she said. "He did things that were good for other people. He wanted white people and black people to be friends and go to school together."

Inside the Friendship Center, black and white, young and old enjoyed an inspiring program of prayer, singing and speeches to honor King.

Westland's celebration continued Monday evening at The Salvation Army chapel on Venoy Road during a stirring program featuring gospel singing, mimes, skits by Adams Middle School students, prayers and a recitation of King's "I Have A Dream" speech by the Rev. George Johnson. About 200 people attended.

"It was very inspirational," Lt. Charles Yockey of The Salvation Army said.

For the first time ever, Westand city offices closed for the holiday.

"I'm happy to say that we have finally done this," Westland City Councilwoman Sharon Scott told the Friendship Center crowd.

Adams Middle School eighthgraders Henry Love and Royce Bankhead greeted marchers as they entered the Friendship Center.

"Martin Luther King stood up for everybody's rights," Love 14,

"He inspired me to stand up for my rights," Bankhead, 13,

Inkster resident Ron Anderson, 60, marched because "this is part of history" and because he believes that more can be done to improve race relations.

"Let's unite and be one," he said. "Everyone should be treated equally."

Wayne-Westland school Superintendent Greg Baracy said the local community reflects racial, religious and political diversity.

"If we are going to be successful as a community, we must come together as one," he said. "Our destiny depends on it."

Musicians Matt Watroba and Bebert B. Jones, who appear on WDET radio, captured the crowd's attention by performing "That Kind of Grace." The piece was part "Amazing Grace" and part folk song, weaving details about the Rodney King incident and other civil rights issues into the lyrics.

Detroit area blues musician Robert Penn performed guitar solos that spontaneously prompted the crowd to clap along.

Westland Mayor Robert Thomas told the crowd to learn from King's willingness to sacrifice for a larger cause and declared that, no matter what people do in their daily lives, "we're all equals."

Sabrina Guyton of Westland brought her 17-year-old daughter, Tameka, and 11-year-old son, Travis, to honor King.

At The Salvation Army chapel, the crowd of 200 heard a rousing recitation of King's "I Have A Dream" speech by Johnson.

"He did a wonderful job," Yockey said. "The common message that Dr. King had is just as applicable today as it was when he gave that speech (in 1963)."

The Salvation Army's Envoy Otis Green & the Bagley Gospel Choir came from Detroit to perform gospel music, and the crowd was visibly moved.

Said Yockey: "The music was just phenomenal."

reprimands or possibly suspensions. He didn't rule out their firing but said it isn't likely.

A veteran Canton police officer ticketed at the same football gambling party already has been suspended with pay as that department conducts an investigation.

Canton Public Safety Director John Santomauro would preside over any disciplinary hearing that the officer might face and would issue a final judgment on punishment, if any.

"We have rules of conduct for our officers that's higher than what's expected from civilians," Santomauro said. "We expect a higher standard of conduct."

Price made a similar statement.

"Some people including myself like to hold us to a higher standard, but we live in the real world," he said, adding later, "I don't condone this."

Some Westland City Council members had heard about the officers being ticketed, but one member said he didn't believe the council would become involved in the matter.

"I believe this is a matter that is going to be investigated and ultimately decided by the police department, specifically Emery Price," Councilman Richard LeBlanc said.

A series of tips to Farmington Hills police led to a raid of the Royal Oak Music Theater on Sunday evening. Officers from Royal Oak, Farmington Hills and the Oakland County Sheriff's Department conducted the raid, making 13 arrests and issuing more than 300 tickets.

Gambling aside, police also arrested three people for cocaine possession and one man for having a handgun. Others were taken into custody for not providing identification, Farmington Hills Assistant Chief Chuck Nebus said.

The raid netted $221,000 in cash in the betting operation. People bet $500 for possible $100,000 payoffs, police said.

South Oakland Narcotics Intelligence Consortium, which includes Farmington Hills and Novi police officers, tracked information that revealed a gambling operation under the ruse of an investment seminar that would take place at the theater. The "seminar" coincided with the NFC and AFC championship games Sunday.

"It was really just a front," Farmington Hills Police Chief Bill Dwyer said.

Those ticketed were cited for frequenting a place of illegal gambling. The citations carry a $500 fine and/or 90 days in jail upon conviction.

Officials say the investigation is continuing and could lead to felony charges against party organizers.

Staff writers Scott Daniel and Larry O'Connor contributed to this report.

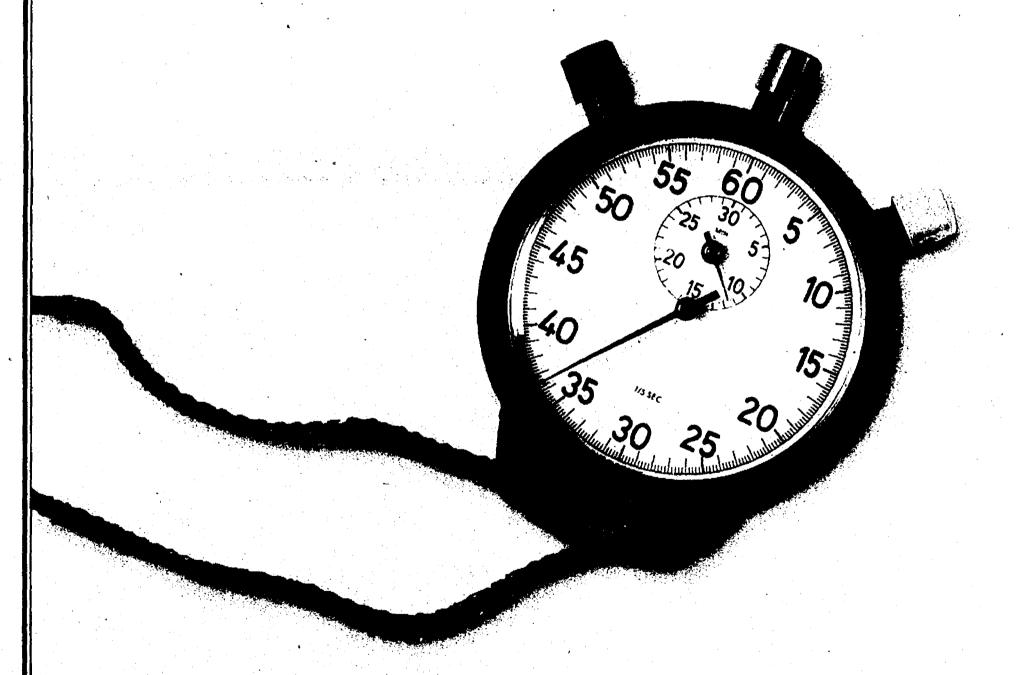

Area landfill seeks expansion

Owners of Sauk Trail Hills landfill in Canton, which serves Westland, are hoping to gain township approval for a vertical expansion by the end of the month.

Allied Waste Systems wants to raise the 165-acre landfill about 100 feet from its current permitted height of 120 feet. The Arizona-based company must get approvals from Canton, Wayne County and the state to make the expansion. "We would like to get all of them in 1999," Allied District General Manager Laurie Kendall said.

Allied Waste Systems began operations at Sauk Hills in 1993. The company consolidated three small landfills on the 200-acre site into one. The landfill, which sits south of Michigan Avenue near Lilley, serves a consortium of area communities.

Rouge group needs volunteers

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Friends of the Rouge need a few good volunteers.

The group needs the volunteers not just for the annual Rouge River cleanup in June, but earlier this spring in March and April to survey amphibians in the river's watershed, a study summarized so succinctly by the executive director of Friends of the Rouge. "The question is when does a young frog's fancy turn to love," Jim Graham said with a smile. Volunteers will be asked to listen for and identify the calls of different male species of frogs and toads, as they indicate their availability to females when the weather warms up in the spring. The survey will be used to identify high-quality wetland wildlife habitats in the Rouge River watershed as amphibians are blocks that were 13 percent sensitive to pollutants and habitat degradation.

"It is such a simple survey to do," said John Bingamon, director of public involvement projects for Friends of the Rouge. "We're looking for anyone who has never done any monitoring before.

"Last year we had a group of elementary students, retirees, families and scout troops. A lot of it was families - getting kids out and learning about nature."

Last year's survey revealed a direct correlation between impervious surfaces — such as parking lots, streets and rooftops that empty directly into rivers and streams instead of infiltrating directly into the ground — and water quality.

The spring peeper was the most frequently observed frog in 172 of approximately 200 quarter mile survey blocks. All four species were found in impervious, while none was found in impervious areas with 21 percent surface cover-

"But it's difficult to assess it on a one-time survey," Graham said. "We know it's a preliminary study. That's one of the important elements of why the project is being done - to identify the areas that should be protected."

Bingamon said a second year will allow for comparisons to last year's results.

Volunteers will be needed along the lower branch of the Rouge in Canton, Superior and Salem townships. That group will listen for four different species.

Volunteers also must survey the middle branch of the Rouge in Northville, Plymouth and Salem townships, and in Novi. That group will be asked to listen for eight different species, expanding on last year's study.

"They have a data form, asking when they were out, what the weather was like and what they heard," Bingamon said. Volunteers will listen to a cassette tape to learn the various calls, then visit one quarter-square mile between one and four times during the spring to survey.

The following sessions have been scheduled to train volun-

Tax checkoff raises funds for children

As hundreds of thousands of Michigan State Income Tax Forms go in the mail, another major campaign to prevent child abuse and neglect across the state begins this month. The income tax season is also the biggest season for donations to the Children's Trust Fund, a nonprofit organization that funds child abuse and neglect prevention in local communities and across the state.

The money raised through the Michigan State Tax Form Check-Off campaign during this tax season will work to continue to fund essential child abuse prevention and neglect services to local program grant funding. In addition, much of the work of CTF is being done locally through the CTF local councils.

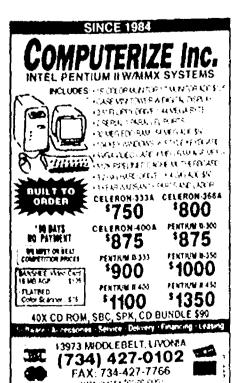

"Over the years, CTF has provided funding to programs that have touched the lives of over 2.7 million children and 600.000 families. So much has been accomplished, yet so much needs to be done," said Candace Sorensen, Children's Trust Fund chairwoman.

According to Sorensen, there are three ways that you can make a difference for children with CTF:

- Donations through the Michigan State Income Tax Form Check-Off.
- By making a direct check or money order donation to CTF at P.O. Box 30037, Lansing, MI
- By participating in CTF's local fund-raising activities.

Ruling may spur future suits on tax vs. user fee

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER tricharden home

Tax foes hailed a Michigan Supreme Court decision that declared Lansing's storm water service charge is really a tax that violates the Headlee amendment to the state constitution.

"Because Lansing did not submit Ordinance 925 to a vote of the people as required by the Headlee amendment, the storm water service charge is unconstitutional and, therefore, null and void," said Justice Elizabeth, Weaver in a 4-3 decision.

"We've been watching this case for three years," said a pleased Bill McMaster, Birminghamarea public relations man and chair (voluntary) of Taxpayers

McMaster did the p.r. work in 1978 when Richard Headlee, then a Farmington Hills insurance executive, led the committee that won voter approval of a tax limitation amendment. The six-section package now is commonly called the "Headlee amendment." Headlee is now retired in Utah.

Weaver was joined by Justices James Brickley, Clifford Taylor and Marilyn Kelly.

The legal question was whether the charge was a "user fée" or a "tax" that is subject to the Headlee amendment. Headlee's Sec. 31 prohibits local units from increasing a tax rate not authorized by the charter "without the approval of a majority of the qualified electors."

Dissenters said Weaver's opinion "subjects these (other) cities to future legal challenges and wreaks havoc with the state's water sewage and water disposal

B Justice Elizabeth Weaver said the Headlee amendment has no clear line or test to distinguish a tax from a user fee. She urged the Legislature to write one. Dissenters agreed that the distinction is murky.

Weaver said the charge is not a fee because there is no regulatory purpose and wasn't proportionate to the costs of the service. Lansing sought to fund 50 percent of a $176 million program to control combined (storm and sanitary) sewer overflows over 30 years.

Because 63 percent of the cost was a capital expenditure, she wrote, "This constitutes an investment in infrastructure as opposed to a fee designed simply to defray the costs of a regulatory activity."

Weaver added that "the charges imposed do not correspond to the benefits conferred," hence the charge wasn't a fee. The program assessed all property owners, but only 25 percent would get the benefit of the CSO program. "A true 'fee,' however, is not designed to confer benefits on the general public, but rather to benefit the particular person on whom it is imposed."

Weaver said the Headlee amendment has no clear line or test to distinguish a tax from a user fee. She urged the Legislature to write one. Dissenters agreed that the distinction is murky.

Lansing's council passed Ordinance 925 in 1995 to abate pollution of the Grand and Red Cedar

The suit was brought by Lansing resident Alexander Bolt in the Court of Appeals, where Judges Henry Saad of Birmingham and the late Myron Wahls of Detroit ruled against him. Bolt then appealed to the Supreme Court.

Dissenting were Justices Patricia Boyle, Michael Cavanagh and Chief Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. They agreed with the Court of Appeals that the charge is a fee.

They noted that Lansing was required under the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination Standards program to obtain a federal permit. They found the city had power under the state Revenue Bond Act to make public improvements, including sew-

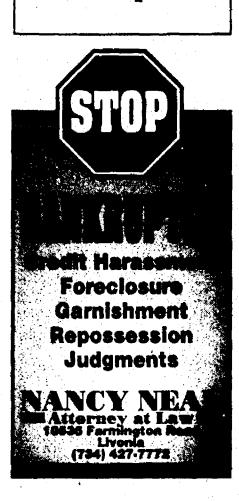

Boyle said the charge doesn't raise general fund revenue and is based on parcel size and "hydraulic area." She quoted the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in saying "cities deserve some flexibility and leniency when courts define 'user' to compensate for the storm water systems." And she noted that the city granted . 100 percent credits to some landowners who showed they contributed no rainwater to the CSO system. The court split across party lines. The majority included, Republican nominees Weaver, Brickley and Taylor and Democratic nominee Kelly. Dissenters Boyle, Cavanagh and Mallet are all Democratic nominees.

The Michigan Municipal League and city of Ann Arbor contributed amicus briefs on behalf of Lansing. Bolt's view was supported by Citizens to Abolish the Rain Tax Ordinance.

Revenue sharing is top issue for Livonia mayor

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey realizes suburban mayors and township supervisors don't always agree on changes to the state's revenue sharing formula - money distributed to Michigan cities, villages and townships generated by the state sales tax.

Even though state lawmakers revised the formula in December, that issue remains a top priority this year for the Conference of Western Wayne, an 18member legislative consortium which Kirksey now chairs after he was chosen Friday by CWW board members to lead the group for the next two years. He replaces Westland Mayor Robert Thomas.

"We want to look for ways to improve the formula or something that would create a better flow of dollars to local governments," Kirksey said.

The CWW includes the cities of Belleville, Dearborn, Dearborn Heights, Garden City, Inkster, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, Romulus, Wayne and Westland, and the townships of Canton, Huron, Northville, Plymouth, Redford, Sumpter and Van Buren.

Kirksey wants to let the CWW's 650,000 constituents become informed of the CWW's positions on issues and what the conference is doing. Kirksey hopes the CWW "speaks as a single voice on issues affecting Wayne County."

On revenue sharing, Livonia realizes less than 3 percent revenue increase in the new formula, less than the 4 or 5 percent increase in the "cost to do business," Kirksey said.

"It's not locked in the constitution, so it is subject to change by a simple majority. We might not see some changes for the next two or three years. Unless we make it known, no changes will occur."

CWW members worry state lawmakers will look at phasing out personal property taxes, a significant source of income for local governmental units.

Kirksey also expected the CWW will continue to work for an accurate count of billable access lines from Ameritech this year and study legislation concerning wireless telephones.

Last year, the Michigan Senate considered legislation that would tack a 47-cent-a-month surcharge onto cellular users' bills to pay for the implementation of the new technology required to grid the calls. The bills died, but a revised version should resurface this year, which the CWW will be watching, Kirksey said.

"Our executive director (Marsha Bianconi) does an outstanding job, and she is particularly knowledgeable and skillful on this issue."

The CWW also will continue to become well-versed on the issues concerning the year 2000 and how communities may coordinate activities to prevent any bugs, Kirksey said. "I think it's going to pay dividends by enlisting the help of utilities and agencies."

Representatives from CWW communities will travel to Lansing Feb. 11 to talk with representatives and senators about these issues and listen to presentations from selected state department heads and others involved with state politics.

The Michigan Municipal League, a consortium of Michigan cities, and the Michigan Township Association, a consortium of townships, also will meet that day, which Kirksey believes will help the CWW develop a strategy.

"It's unusual to bring those organizations together. That's a good beginning. The CWW cannot proceed on any type of plan that is disadvantageous to townships or cities.

-"As an organization, we have to strike compromises."

New leader: The Conference of Western Wayne elected Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey to a two-year term as chairman of the regional consortium. Kirksey wants CWW to "speak as a single voice on issues affecting Wayne County."

Kirksey heads area consortium

Jack Kirksey, 70, has served as mayor of Livonia since 1996, serving as the Conference of Western Wayne's vice chair for the past two years.

Kirksey served four terms as a state representative for the 35th District from 1977 to 1985. During that period, he served on the Education, Judiciary, Military and Veterans' Affairs Committees and was vice chair of the Labor Committee.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Old business

Gov. John Engler has signed: A "leased lemon" bill sponsored by Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township. It expands Michigan's 11-year-old "lemon law" to cover people whose new leased vehicles have consistent problems or continual breakdowns. For a continued defect, the leaser can demand a suitable replacement or a full refund. The Secretary of State is required to provide leasers a written statement of their options. The Senate passed it 37-0 and the House

■ Amendments to the Recreational Trespass Act sponsored by Sens. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, and Loren Bennett, R-Canton. SB 767 and 768 allow property owners the option of suing a trespasser for civil damages. Courts may revoke hunting, fishing and trapping licenses for up to three years, confiscate property brought onto private land during a violation and force trespassers to reimburse the state for animals and fish taken during a violation.

Dead: The Religious Freedom Restoration act, House Bill 4376, in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Supported by conservative Protestant, Catholic and Jewish groups as well as the American Civil Liberties Union, the bill would have limited state and local governments' ability to place zoning and building burdens on places of worship. Sponsor was Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, who has left office.

New business

Michigan's 2000 presidential primary would be pushed up to Feb. 8 (second Tuesday) from the current March 15 under a bicameral package sponsored by two Republicans, Ken Sikkema of Grandville and Rep. Mickey Mortimer of Jackson. Sikkema said it would give Michigan voters more decision-making voice. In 1996, he said, 26 states had earlier primaries or caucuses than Michigan. Democrats boycotted their primary because it couldn't be confined to declared Democrats and ran caucuses instead.

First Senate bills to be introduced in the 1999-2000 session would cut the state personal income tax rate from the current 4.4 percent to 3.9 percent over five years. Areas sponsors of two of the bills are Loren Bennett, R-Canton, and Bill Bullard Jr., R-Milford. Republican senators passed the same bills in 1998, but they died in the Democratcontrolled House.

House Democratic leader Michael Hanley of Saginaw urged Republicans to help match state money with $6.4 billion sought by President Bill Clinton for local police officers. The federal program requires communities to put up 25 percent, and Hanley says many can't.

Medicaid money

The governor's office awarded $7.4 million to local hospitals and agencies to assure children and their parents don't lose Medicaid coverage as a result of federal welfare reform.

"These grants will not only let people know that health insurance is available through the Medicaid program, but will help individuals apply and file the necessary application materials with the state," said James K. SEMCOG to study mobile home governance, tax issues

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER trichard@oe.homecomm.net

Ears were probably burning at the Michigan Manufactured Housing Association office in Okemos last weekend as a Novi theater group staged a hilarious parody called "Trailer Park Broadcasting Scandals."

The play features such Florida cracker characters as Vesta. Dixie, Missy and Alveeta in a setting where the propensity to Protestant fundamentalism is exceeded only by the pregnancy MMHA abhors the term "trailer park." It prefers "manufactured home communities." And it is protective of an agency under hot attack from local governments - the Michigan Manufactured Home Commission.

The issue will come to the fore in 1999.

This Friday, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments executive committee is due to vote on a softly worded resolution to "study" manufactured housing, its state governance, its lack of local control. and the way it's taxed.

The meeting, open to the public, will begin at 1.p.m. in SEM- room of the Edison Plaza Building, 600 Plaza Drive, Detroit.

Guest speaker will be state Rep. Judie Scranton, R-Brighton, a member of a 1998 bipartisan House Task Force on Mobile Home Parks. It held public hearings in Howell, Warren, Monroe, Flint and Lansing.

There's a lot of bad blood between MH park owners and local government.

Gaining share

Manufactured housing is gaining market share, the House panel found:

"More than 720,000 Michigan residents live in manufactured homes" - one person in every 13. "About 25 percent of new home buyers in Michigan choose a manufactured home." Average size of a multisection home is 1,600 square feet, and 70 percent of the state market are multisection units.

"In urban areas, about 80 percent of manufactured homes are located in manufactured home communities" - and herein lies the problem.

Except for the first plan, local units of government have no control over MH park developments. That's up to the Michigan Manu-COG's 19th floor conference factured Home Commission (MMHC), a body firmly under control of the industry since it was established in 1977.

Five of the 11 members represent the industry - the trade group, park operators and manufacturers. One represents financial institutions. Two represent residents, and one represents local government.

The House panel on which Scranton served found little contact between the state agency and local units of government.

Critics say the commission is like a fox guarding a chicken

Taxes, costs

Standard homes generate money to local government cities, townships, schools, counties. The local officials in SEM-COG complain that MH parks generate too little.

The industry says it generates its share and more, citing:

■ Businesses that own MH parks pay school taxes of 24 mills, the commercial rate, while homeowners pay just six mills on a primary homestead.

■ Businesses that own MH parks pay the state single business tax of about 2.3 percent.

MH sales are taxed as personal property like cars, not as real estate. So every time a MH changes hands, the state collects a 6 percent sales tax. That yields $1,800 in revenue on a MH worth $30,000. And a MH changes hands about every 7.35 years, the industry says.

■ MH owners pay a $3 per month tax. But the House panel notes: "This tax has not been raised since 1956."

There is much disagreement, largely inconclusive, about whether MH parks generate as much municipal cost as standard

Local units say they need more control to plan for streets, water, sewerage and schools. They want school boards represented on the state commission.

The industry cites a Lapeer study where a MH park holds 11 percent of the city's population but generates just 1.5 percent of the police complaints and 1.5 percent of the fire runs. The flaw is that it compares the MH park to the city as a whole, including the business section, instead of to a standard subdivision.

'Substantial bias'

The industry says SEMCOG, whose voting is controlled by local elected officials from seven counties, has "substantial bias" against MH parks and can't be trusted to regulate them. It cites three horror stories:

Wixom, in western Oakland County - where the only property zoned for MHs is a 40-acre site, "mostly wetlands, adjacent to an identified ACT 307 toxic waste site ...'

Holly, in northern Oakland County - where the only MH site MH was zoned under court order, and 16 other townships have no buildable vacant land "voluntarily zoned for MH use."

Tyrone Township, in Livingston County - an ordinance says a MH park must be on a paved road. The state commission and a circuit court struck it down. "The only piece of property zoned for MH use is accessible only by two miles of unpaved road. That property was zoned 28 years ago by court order," says the industry.

The industry pictures biased local officials as trying to force low- and moderate-income folks into $154,000 houses they can't

The industry insists that "parks" is a derogatory term and prefers "communities." Except for parks owned by the residents, however, they are not communities. They are businesses, taxed as businesses, and operated as businesses.

Nancy Dingledey, an Oakland County commissioner from Wixom, testified on SEMCOG's behalf before the House panel in mid-1998. "Michigan's unique treatment of manufactured housing parks has created some obvious inequalities that are detrimental to communities with which these MH parks are located," she said.

Dingledey, in a later interview, told her own horror stories about being unable to distribute campaign literature or even address audiences in MH parks. Her description makes MH parks rules sound like decrees from Czar Nicholas I to keep unruly peasants under thumb rather than democratic republics under the Bill of Rights.

WinterFest needs some help estland's WinterFest is experiencing a meltdown and seems to need an infusion of new inspiration and ideas. Dating back to 1995, WinterFest was once a weekend-long festival. This year, however,

WinterFest has shrunk to just five hours on a Saturday. This year's festival includes an afternoon of activities for children and will be held at the Bailey Recreation Center located behind City Hall in Westland, from noon to 5 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 6.

A far cry from the sleigh rides, dances, ice sculpture displays, pancake breakfasts, musical performances and running competitions that were among the activities featured in past festivals, this year's festival is but a groundhog's shadow of its former self.

But last year's attendance was disappointing at about 800 to 1,000 people, and some events drew extremely small crowds.

That caused this year's festival to be reduced to children's activities, which are often a big draw during other events in the city during the year.

The festival has suffered from a lack of interest and also bad luck with the weather in the past. What WinterFest needs, if it's going to survive, is some help with people and ideas.

Most of WinterFest's responsibilities have fallen each year on the same organizers. WinterFest Co-chairwoman Sharon Scott has said the involvement of new people in planning and putting on the festival would be welcomed.

The success or failure of this year's festival will help decide whether there will be future festivals.

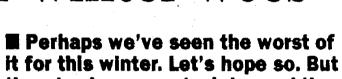

Among this year's attractions are:

- Large, inflatable slides and other playthings in the Bailey Center gymnasium.
- Max the Moose puppets leading children in a sing-along.
 - A yo-yo exhibition.
 - Skits performed by Westland All Stars. A performance by magician Randy Shaw.
- A show featuring live birds, snakes and other living things.
- An arts and crafts show where kids can create their own keepsakes.

Food such as pizza and popcorn. Those who would like to see Westland's WinterFest continue should consider bringing their children to the festivities on Saturday, Feb. 6, as a show of support.

Also, those who have an interest in seeing the festival go forward and even expand in the future, should consider lending their ideas and their labors to making the event a suc-

Perhaps we've seen the worst of it for this winter. Let's hope so. But there's always next winter and the winter after that, and the winter after that. Since winter's always going to be around, isn't it time the people who serve in the city and township halls and the county building at 600 Randolph in Detroit start thinking creatively about how to handle a big storm? Perhaps they could come up with some ways to help us truly cope with winter.

Granted, 2-4 inches is hardly the same as 12-20 when it comes to plowing streets, freeways and sidewalks near schools. But it doesn't hurt to be prepared. There are ways to handle winter - it's called planning, preparation, cooperation and yes, some patience.

Perhaps, the sting of the recent winter storm has been how uneven snow removal appeared to be across western Wayne and southern Oakland counties.

County officials say they underestimated the amount of work needed to be done to clear the freeways and that was the primary reason plows were late getting to main roads in Canton and other parts of western Wayne.

Area officials are seeking a meeting with county officials to discuss the issue. Everyone has agreed to meet but as yet no meeting date has been scheduled.

Then there is the failure of Detroit to meet

Rec center needs vote

Westland residents, I have a question for you ... When was the last time you went to the Bailey Rec center? Or the city owned skate rink?

I've been a Westland resident for 32 years and have never been there. Yet Mayor Robert Thomas wants to build a new bigger and improved recreation area. They have polled 600 residents of Westland to ask them questions. Where do the 600 residents live? Are they in apartments? Are the people they call on the property tax roll? And if we build a recreation area ... will skills be learned there that can help the taxpayers of Westland to get higher paying jobs so they can afford the increase in taxes they claim won't happen?

While I'm at it ... why are we paying for Wayne County Community College on our property taxes? We have no representation from them. When was the last time you received a schedule of their classes?

We need to vote for what college we can attend, just like we need to vote for Mayor Thomas' recreation center. It's our tax money.

very time I hear a 20-something hyperven-Lilating about the Internet and E-commerce, I have to wonder: Has this kid ever heard of the Sears Catalog?

Around 1900, Sears Roebuck revolutionized, and indeed may have created, the modern consumer economy with its amazing new

By 1900, virtually every city, town and cross roads village in America had its own railroad station. So national distribution of consumer goods was inevitable.

Sears did it best. The catalog sold everything - clothes, tools, gadgets of all kinds, stoves, washing machines – and even pre-fab houses. All delivered conveniently right to your doorstep. Even today, a well-maintained 1920s style pre-fab Sears bungalow is still highly prized by real estate buyers, Sears was truly the Amazon.com of its day and then some.

But, Sears abolished its big catalog department several years ago when malls and expressways made in-store shopping available to almost everyone.

So, I have to wonder, have these Internet kids ever studied history in school? Those who are ignorant of history seem to be doomed to reinvent the wheel.

Or, maybe, are we soon going to see a

Contraception or abortion?

his is in reply to your article in the Health ■ & Fitness section of the Sunday Observer of Nov. 29. The first title line states: "contraceptive prevents unintended pregnancies."

The article is about "Preven Emergency Contraceptive Kit." The following statement was made: "It is believed the special dose of progestin and estrogen found in PREVEN prevents/delays ovulation or effects changes to the lining of the uterus that could prevent implantation of a fertilized egg."

The last part of that sentence is misleading and needs to be corrected. When we speak of an action that effects changes to the lining of the uterus that could prevent implantation of a fertilized egg, this is no longer a contraceptive but an abortifacient. In other words, this is an abortion (destruction) of a new life not allowed to develop to the point of delivery.

Unfortunately, because of misleading information like this, many people, I am sure, are not even aware of this possibility of destroying life at this very early stage.

POINTS OF VIEW

Winter month's weather makes it less than perfect

anuary's usually a time to relax after the hubbub of the holidays, but this month has been anything but relaxing.

It all started Jan. 2 with the snowstorm and has continued day after day. One appointment on my calendar, a Landmarks meeting for the Plymouth branch, American Association of University Women, had me as a no-show. That day, Wednesday, Jan. 6, the power went out at the Observer office at Schoolcraft and Levan in Livonia. We got the paper out, but I had to miss the meeting.

More recently, Thursday, Jan. 14, Landmarks member Gerry Dugan and I were able to interview Bill and Coni Gray at their Penniman home, just across the street from Our Lady of Good Counsel Church and School. Last night, Contemporary Books discussion of "Stones From the River" by Ursula Hegi was scheduled at the Plymouth District Library. The book's over 500 pages and I read them all, so I was hoping the meeting would be a

It's interesting to see what activities stay and go when the snow falls. Of course, school was out many a day, requiring parents to find interesting things for their progeny to do. We adults mostly made it to work, and got through our appointed tasks.

There's something about this weather, however, that makes carrying out even mundane duties difficult. It may be the effect of shoveling snow, or of all that stressful driving, but it seems many of us just want to sleep.

I've always liked winter, but it seems we've had enough for this year already. I thought last week I'd like to see a healthy foot or so of this snow melt gradually (to avoid flooding), leaving enough for skiers and other winter sports enthusiasts. I prefer, as do other drivers, to have clean, dry road surfaces and good visibility. Of course, the weather did warm up Saturday and later, melting some of the snow and ice.

Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular organizers had to cope with weather woes this year, as in previous years. Organizers of the North American International Auto Show in Detroit worried about the weather, too, although my husband and I were determined to make it to Cobo this past weekend with Pam Young of Redford and two other friends, and we did. We stopped in Greektown for dessert afterward, and three of us stopped in after at the 24-hour Redford post office for 33-cent stamps.

February's on the horizon, and husband Mark Rembacki and I have our tickets for the Valentine's Dinner-Dance at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. I'm hoping I won't have to wear clunky boots under my dress.

I'm not ready for spring just yet, but a milder winter is nice, and I'm all for sunshine. In the meantime, keep your chin up and try to keep moving – safely.

Counselors and parents should warn collegians of dangers wonder whether high school counselors will read the case of People vs. Ivers and, if they do, whether they'll pass the lesson onto female students.

A.C. is a young woman who was interested in attending Michigan State University. She visited a girl-friend at the friend's dorm room. They partied with a couple of young men, drinking beer. In the early morning hours of Aug. 24, 1994, A.C. awoke to find Mike Ivers on top of her, having intercourse. She called it rape.

An Ingham County jury convicted Ivers of third-degree criminal sexual conduct. Judge Peter Houk sentenced the young man to two-15 years.

Ivers appealed and won 2-1 in the Court of Appeals and 4-3 in the state Supreme Court. His case gets bounced back to circuit court. Ivers has a good chance of going free.

Ivers' defense was consent. He said they kissed, that she said "yes" to going into the bedroom, and that they undressed and that she was entirely willing. He said, she said.

Michigan has a relatively new law called "rape shield." It prevents a defense lawyer from ripping apart a complainant on the witness stand by going into her past loves and reputation – unless the judge finds the proposed evidence is material and that its value outweighs its inflammatory or prejudicial nature. Citing the rape shield law, Judge Houk prohibited some testimony from A.C.'s girlfriend.

Both the Court of Appeals and Supreme Court disagreed. They said Houk should have admitted the testimony, which would have bolstered Ivers' defense. In an earlier hearing, the girlfriend had testified:

"We had talked about having sex, and she told me that she had talked to her mom about being on the pill and that she knew she was going to college and that she – that she was ready to have sex, and she knew that it would probably happen her freshman year at college."

At another point, the girlfriend said A.C. wanted the girlfriend to "get her a guy."

At the risk of being inflammatory myself, I point out that the four justices who said the testimony should be admitted were males: Michael Cavanagh, Conrad Mallett Jr., James Brickley and Clifford Taylor. The three female justices – Patricia Boyle, Elizabeth Weaver and Marilyn Kelly – would have prohibited the testimony as "hearsay."

That's how close these decisions

My question is: Didn't anyone ever tell A.C. that it's dangerous, even foolhardy, to drink when you are underage and away from home with guys who were previously strangers?

McNamara simply gets job done ayne County Executive Ed McNamara was sworn into office for the fourth time last Friday. Newly elected Attorney General Jennifer Granholm and U. S. Court of Appeals Judge Damon Keith administered the oath in front of some 400 supporters gathered at McNamara's old school, Redford High.

The event didn't get much coverage in the local news media. It should have.

McNamara, 72 and likely to retire from office when his term ends in 2002, is without a doubt the most effective Democratic politician in the state.

He isn't drop-dead handsome; in fact, he's balding and sports a bit of a paunch. He's not a thundering orator; in fact, he's much more comfortable visiting with small groups. He's not an ideologue and he's no liberal; in fact, he's an unreconstructed moderate, a Democrat whose political career began in GOP-leaning Livonia.

McNamara's political career offers a number of oddities.

A member of a political party usually in thrall to organized labor, McNamara has made no secret of his often-strained relationships with the UAW and other unions. A product of the "all-white suburbs," he gets rave reviews from Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer. No particular favorite of the political reporters who dote on good looks and snappy one-liners, McNamara regularly cleans up when it comes to newspaper endorsements.

How come? Simple. Ed McNamara gets things done.

He built a new morgue for Wayne County and a new juvenile detention facility in Detroit, together with a jail in Hamtramck and a golf course in Inkster. He put together an innovative health insurance scheme for small businesses in Wayne County that helps provide inexpensive health care for firms unable to afford it.

The only negative is Metropolitan Airport. It's still a mess. But McNamara is building a new midfield terminal that should eventually resolve the problems faced regularly by air travelers. He boasts that economic development in Wayne County spawned by his administration has increased property valuations by $7 billion.

. How does Ed McNamara get things done? Simple. He has built a political machine, one that rivals John Engler's.

He picks good people, people like Mike Duggan, Charlie Williams, Larry Tukarski, Vickie Hertell and David Katz. Over the years, McNamara has placed something like 200 appointees in offices in Detroit and Wayne County. Assisted by Ron Thayer, the best Democratic fundraiser in Michigan who got his start when Jim Blanchard was a congressman, McNamara raises tons of money.

You can't name more than 10 prominent Michigan business people who are Democrats, but McNamara's fund-raising list is 90 percent business.

What's his style in getting things done? Simple. He's effective because he's practical.

Last fall, Geoffrey Fieger's doomed campaign for governor threatened to bring down the entire Democratic Party. Frank Kelley, the "eternal general," had finally decided to retire, leaving no firewall between the Engler-led GOP and the rest of the Democratic ticket.

McNamara first identified one of his appointees as a prospect for attorney general, bright and personable Jennifer Granholm, a Northville Township resident and at that time the chief lawyer for Wayne County. He sent around to hundreds of Democratic leaders a letter and a video featuring Granholm. Unlike most other Democratic power bosses, he agreed to help Fieger's flailing campaign, assigning staffers to bring some order to chaos.

McNamara then called in his chips. He "persuaded" Fieger to back Granholm as his candidate for attorney general. A political newcomer, Granholm was elected by a wide margin. Of course, her election campaign was managed by another McNamara appointee, Trish Stein.

A lot of do-gooder types don't like McNamara because he's an old-fashioned politician who raises tons of money, has appointees scattered all over and cuts deals in the back room.

That's precisely why I like and admire McNa mara. He's an unabashed pro at what he is, a politician.

We should take time to note and admire his performance in office over the next four years. We're not likely to see the job of effective politician ever done much better than by McNamara

JACK GLADDEN

It's man vs. machine in breadmaking

he Other Feminist has ruined my image. Not to mention my ego, my psyche and my sense of self-worth. I'm not talking Monicagate or anything like that. I'm talking bread.

I've been baking bread for years. I even consider myself something of an amateur baker - heavy emphasis on the word "amateur."

There were some early disasters, like the time I tried to make Dutch Roggebrood, an unleavened loaf made with potatoes, brewers yeast, molasses and rye flour. It was supposed to "bake" in a 250-degree over for three hours, rest and steam for an hour and dry for another hour.

When I took it out of the loaf pan it looked like a red brick. It felt like a red brick. It tasted like a red brick. It ended up in the trash can.

There were a few successes. I've produced some braided loaves that looked like they come from a boulangerie. I once made a Polish egg bread that even pleased the mother-in-law and when I tried a new rye recipe a few weeks ago, The Feminist said:

"This is just like the rye we used to get in Hamtramck."

"Steam," I said. "That's the secret. You have to put a pan of water in the oven to keep the crust moist when it starts rising. Then it rises better and gets nice and crusty."

She rolled her eyes. "All I know is that it tastes good."

Process vs. results

And that of course is the difference. She cares about the end result. How does it taste? I care about the process. How is it created?

It's an ego thing. You start out with some flour and water and yeast, mix it and stir it and beat it and pound it, let it rise a couple of times, shape it into loaves, let it rise again, pop it in the oven and - if you haven't screwed anything up - you're rewarded with a gastronomical work of art. Or maybe a red brick, if you did mess up.

But it's the process that makes the end result work. And that's the chal-

That's why, when somebody invented a gadget called a "bread machine" a few years ago, I said: "Never in my Bread machine, indeed. Why not just buy a loaf of frozen Pillsbury bread dough, let it thaw on the counter and toss it in the oven for half an hour or so? At least it looks like a real loaf of bread, not one of those funky little boxes that you get out of a bread machine. Besides a machine takes the creativity out of the process.

So the day after Christmas, the Other Feminist shows up bearing gifts. A cappuccino maker and a bread machine. An infernal bread machine!

"I know, Jack's always said he didn't want one," she said. "But I just thought that for some of those times when you can't spend all day in the kitchen, it might come in handy."

The Feminist had to work the next day. "You can play with your bread machine," she said as she was leaving. "Figure out how it works." "Yeah, maybe," I grumbled. Infernal contraption.

A love of gadgets

Now the thing is, I love gadgets as much as I love baking bread. Especially kitchen gadgets. Might as well check this beast out. I took it out of the box and put it on the kitchen

Hmm. Looks impressive. Big. Heavy. I started reading the instruction manual.

Yeah, right. "Pour liquids into the container first. Then add the flour and other dry ingredients. Add the yeast last. Make a hole in the flour and place the yeast in the hole so it doesn't come in contact with any liquid."

Uh-huh. "Select the setting for the type of bread you are making and press 'Start.' The display will indicate the total amount of time required and will count down in one minute inter arleen Bush, Monica Housey and Gale Owens are grandmother-wannabes. They look forward to the day their children have children, but decline to pressure their children to have offspring.

Bush thinks the box of things she has made for her grandbabies might be construed as pressure and her once-in-a-while comment about a cute baby, draws an "Oh, Mom," from her 30-year-old unmarried daughter.

Owens' children know she and husband James are looking forward to one day having grandchildren, but for now they joke about buying hats and coats for their youngest daughter's dog, fondly known as the "granddog.

Housey thinks it will be a long time before her 18-year-old son marries and has children. Shy and introverted, he's very career-minded and has a lot of things he wants to do before settling down.

"I don't even want to push him into that," Housey said. "A friend of his just became a a father - he wasn't Barber, who is with the U-M Institute for Social Research, believes parents have a lot of influence on different areas of their children's lives over their lifetimes. And her analysis of a study that followed 835 mother/child pairs for 31 years shows that "mothers' preferences have a strong impact on the birth of grandchil-

"All across the board, mothers, on average, tend to prefer for their children what they prefer for themselves," she said. "The children of mothers who wanted them to go to school, have a career and have children, responded to what their mothers wanted. In families where mothers had their children sooner, the children had children sooner.

"It didn't matter what the children wanted, even if what they wanted was different."

Mothers know best

In the study, presented at the recent annual meeting of the American Sociological Association, Barber compared the children's stated preferences for themselves, their mothers' preferences for them and their actual behavior, taking into account factors like the mother's marital and childbearing history, family incomes at different stages, parents' education, mother's religion and whether the mother worked when the children were younger. "There's an intergenerational trend in first births," said Barber. "Women who delay having their first child will have children who will delay having their first child."

There also are shifts in thinking. In the early '60s, people married when they were younger. Today, age 22, 23, even 25 are consider early, and wedding bells at age 18 is "really early," according to Barber.

Likewise, there's a change in thinking about family size. Mothers of big families prefer their children have big families and their children prefer to have big families, but a large family by today's standards is three kids as opposed to eight when the study started in 1961, Barber said.

In the beginning

Bush had her first child, which she gave up for adoption, and married the father, both at age 19. They had two more children before the marriage ended in divorce. A second marriage also ended in divorce after three years.

divorce. "It doesn't pay to pressure them. They have enough other things to worry about," she said. "I want to have a grandchild before I die, but I have nieces and nephews with babies and I tell them to bring them over and I'll take care of them."

Owens' message to her children isn't that much different than Bush's. Her preferences for her children, ages 25, 23 and 20, are to get their education and experience life on their own before marriage. Owens married at age 22 and had her first child at age 24. Her mother married at age 26 and had her at age 27. Her oldest daughter has been married more than a year and, at age 25, is considering the possibility of a starting a family this year.

Survey says ...

Using a unique set of data, the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research followed 835 mother-child pairs from the Detroit area for 31 years.

Since the data included multiple interviews with the children, the researchers were able to compare their attitudes and actual behavior to the hopes their mothers had for them.

The study found that:

- Mothers preferred an average age for 25 for sons and 24 for daughters to marry.
- Mothers preferred that both sons and daughters have an average of two children.
- The mothers of daughters whose mothers preferred that they marry at age 20 in fact married and had their first child more than seven time faster than young women whose mothers preferred that -they mary at age 30.
- Sons whose mothers preferred that they mary at age 20 in fact married and had their first child more than twice as fast as young men whose mothers preferred that they marry at age 30.
- Among young men only, those whose mothers preferred family-oriented behavior also had premarital first births sooner than their peers.

Teens find more than cookies in Scouting

Scout's honor: Kellie Tamme (left) and her sister, Kimberly, have been teased about being Girl Scouts, but it hasn't deterred the Canton teens from staying involved in their troop.

The teenage years can be traumatic. Kids get teased for being unhip, having the wrong hairstyle, wearing the wrong

But outgoing teens Kimberly and Kellie Tamme have been teased for another reason - being Girl Scouts. But the Tamme sisters don't complain about it. They're proud.

"I used to take a lot of flak for it; people used to make fun of me," said Kimberly, a 16-year-old junior at Plymouth Salem High School: "When people think of the Girl Scouts, the first thing they think of is cookies. But there's a lot more to it.

"We took computer classes at Comp USA. They taught us how to program computers. We went to Miss Katie's (Plymouth College of Beauty) and they taught us better techniques for putting on makeup.

That's just the tip of the iceberg. Last summer, the two went on a whitewater rafting trip, defying the Girl Scout stereotype. On the trip, the sisters and the rest of their troop had whitewater rafting lessons and then took on the waves. And they had their fair share of adventure.

"We got on a fairly large rapid. One of our guides fell right off and the next thing I knew, he was in the water and pulling on my oar," Kimberly said, "I hate it when a lot of guys say you don't hear about a lot of Girl Scouts going whitewater rafting. But our guides who were men - actually cooked for us.

"It was funny to see all these men cooking."

Kellie, a 14-year-old freshman at Salem High School, added enthusiastically: "They made us steak and potatoes and we ate dinner on the side of the river."

Wider opportunities

The whitewater rafting trip was part of the Wider Opportunities program that allows the girls just that - more opportunities to explore the world. Girls also can sign up for Girl Sports, which expesses the participants April, Scouting for Food in conto awimming, golf, crew team and other sports.

But if it weren't for the money raised during the annual cookie sale, the girls wouldn't be able to expand their horizons.

"We've done little trips and activities. We had 'Mall Madness where we stayed overnight at a mall. Some of the stores stayed open all night so we could shop. There were all kinds of activities and a movie theater. We could watch movies at 3 in the morning," Kimberly explained.

The Girl Scouts also participate in Adopt-A-Family through the Salvation Army, Stepping Out for a New Beginning in junction with the Boy Scouts, give the food to the Salvation Army and collect telephone books for recycling.

The troop, which is planning on going to Discover Card Stars on Ice at The Palace of Auburn Hills, also stayed overnight in a caboose at an encampment to learn the value of teamwork. They are hoping to return there this summer.

"(It promotes) a lot of team building which actually the troop needs right now," Kimberly said "It's hard. As you get older, girls lose interest so easily. There's new girls coming in. We try to do as many activities as we can to get to know each other."

Duggan puts finishing touches on annual First Step dance

By Sue Mason Staff Writer smason@oe.homecomm.net

Remember those word problems you loved to hate in elementary school? The ones that went something like: If each table seats 10 people and 160 tables are sold, how much money will be raised for First Step?

Just like in school, it's a hard one to answer. But Brian Duggan hopes his ninth annual charity dance for First Step will raise $20,000 for the agency which helps the victims of domestic and sexual violence.

"I'd like to have 1,400-1,500 people there," said Duggan. "We raised around $16,000 last year and I'd like to raise $20,000 this year."

That's a far cry from the first year when 300 people paid $5 a ticket and helped raise some $2,000-3,000 for First Step.

This year's dance will be 7:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday, Feb. 5, at Burton Manor, 27777 Schoolcraft, west of Inkster Road, Livonia.

The evening will include complimentary hot and cold hors d'oeuvres 7:30-9:30 p.m., pizza served later in the evening and cash bar.

Steve King and the Dittilies will provided the music and Miss Michigan 1998 Laura Frances Welling will make a special

"Every time I hear Neil Diamond, I think of Jamie," said Duggan. "Jamie's been with us from the beginning."

There also will be more than 60 door prizes, ranging from dinners at area restaurants to overnight stays at hotels and a

To help defray expenses, Duggan is looking for corporate sponsors - diamond ($5,000), platinum ($1,000), gold ($500) and silver ($200). New to the platinum list this year is Wal-Mart, which will be opening its Livonia store later this month.

Duggan, a Livonia city councilman, first heard about First Step as a Livonia Jaycee. He thought it was a good cause, and after leaving the Jaycees, he decided to do something for the agency.

Among the services provided by First Step are a 24-hour residential shelter, 24-hour Help Line, 24-hour crisis intervention services, counseling, group-support, children's programs, incourt advocacy and 24-hour domestic violence and sexual assault response teams.

It also provides training on domestic violence and sexual assault for mental health, criminal justice, medical and legal professionals and education and prevention programs for the community at large and schools.

"Someone from First Step came out and spoke at a meeting able at TicketMaster outlets at and I though it was a good cause," Duggan said. "I think it's a wonderful shelter they have out there for women and chil-

Originally, the benefit was going to be a beach party at Camp Dearborn, but when he missed putting down a deposit, itbecame a dance on the third Friday in January at what was then Roma's of Livenia, which donate: ed the facility.

Duggan has moved it to the first Friday in February, giving organizers an extra 1 1/2 weeks to sell tickets and line up sponsors and door prizes.

Work on the dance starts as soon as the latest one ends. Duggan books the hall and the band "Steve King and the Dittilies are always pack in a good crowd; they're a good draw." - and picks the date. By September, the program is sent out and organizers "go public" with details in December.

"It's hard on our end because it's something that can get lost in the Christmas shuffle because we mail out the information two weeks before Christmas," Duggan said. "January is a tough month, but right now we're on target with ticket sales; we have 65 sold. Last year, we sold 130 tables, so if I sell at least one more table than last year, I'll be happy."

Livonia natives return with 'Revenge'

By Christina Fuoco STAFF WRITER

cfuoco@oe.homecomm.net Dan Edwards, a 1989 Stevenson High School graduate, had one thing in mind when he moved to Chicago. "I moved with the intention of joining the band The Krinkles and it took me a little while to weasel my way in," said Edwards with a laugh. He set his mind to it and persuaded his hometown friends drummer/vocalist Matt Favazza, bassist/vocalist Jerry Overmyer and guitarist/vocalist Henry guitarist and vocalist. "Adding another vocalist has given us a fuller sound. We trade off on lead vocals. Matt the drummer does a couple of songs, Henry and I split the rest of it."

brating the release of their second album, "Revenge of The Krinkles" (Mordorlorff Music). The band will return to the area on Saturday, Jan. 23, to play songs off "Revenge" at Lili's in Hamtramck. Sent to stores in July, "Revenge of The Krinkles" was recorded from February through April 1998 at Attica Studios in Chicago with producer Chuck Uchida.

"It's kind of a punk rock studio. It's called Attica because it's in an attic," explained Edwards, who also played acoustic guitar on "Pink One" on The Krinkles' first album "Three Ringos." "It's kind of trashed, kind of run down. It's a real rock 'n ' roll atmosphere. The guy's really talented. He gave us a lot of time."

The 10-song album, inspired by the Beatles and 1980s metal

Now The Krinkles are cele-bands, features three of Edwards' songs - "Working Girl," "Innerspace," and "Carnival," a reference to the Livonia

> "It's about the Livonia Spree in an abstract way; people always crack up when I tell them that." he said.

> Edwards earned a degree in advertising from Western Michigan University and had a hand in the design of the CD's packaging. Unfolding the CD insert reveals a comic strip about the

"We wanted to try and do something a little bit extra with our packaging," he said. "I'm a big Kiss fan and they always did something a little bit fun with their albums. There were stickers in there, cartoons, always something fun. (The Krinkles' CD) reminds me of the days of vinyl albums, when the packaging was a little more important."

Edwards said recording an album was a dream of his.

"You have your little fantasies and dreams; it was pretty much the way I thought it would be," Edwards said. "A lot of people don't really like it but it's definitely one of my favorite things to do. We're looking forward to going in again and spending more time.

"We felt like we did the best we could with the amount of time we had."

Edwards has been playing guitar since he was 14 and joined bands soon thereafter. He was a fan of "a lot of rock 'n' roll stuff." "Speaking for myself, Lorrew up in the '80s. I listened to a lot of what they call 'hair metal' now - Motley Crue, Iron Maiden. Ratt. I always liked a lot of the pop stuff when I was younger all the Beatles kind of stuff."

The Krinkles formed after Matt Favazza, a 1989 Stevenson graduate, Overmyer, a 1988 Franklin High School graduate, and Klotkowski, a 1989 Franklin graduate, met while working at Bill Knapp's in Livonia.

"We're just nice boys from Livonia. Maybe we should come up with a better story," Edwards said. "It's our little joke."

Edwards said he hopes that it works for awhile.

"I'm really happy with my situation now. Not just because we've all been friends for so long. but the fact that we finally got it together."

The Krinkles open for Mr. Tidy at 10 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 23, at Lili's 21, 2930 Jacob, Hamtramck. Cover charge is $5 for the 21 and older show. For more information, call (313) 875-6555, email the band at krinkles@cyberconnect.com or their Web site at http://www.cyberconnect.com/k

Back In town: The Krinkles - guitarist / vocalist Dan Edwards, drummer/vocalist Matt Favazza, bassist/ vocalist Jerry Overmyer and guitarist/vocalist Henry Klotkowski – will perform at Lili's in Hamtramck on Saturday, Jan. 23.

Dueling duo: Richard Hartle as George Hay and Mary Jolliffe, Charlotte Hay, in a scene from St. Dunstan's Theatre Guild of Cranbrook's production of "Moon Over Buffalo."

is a pretty newlangled invention when compared to something as ancient as live theater. In 1953 some people were worried that TV and movies would replace live theater, but it didn't.

Still, the idea of theater being replaced intrigued playing her Ludwig who wrote Moon Over Buffalo" opening Friday at St. Dunstan's Theatre Guild of Cranbrook and now playing at the Dearborn Player's Guild.

"It's been done before - well and not well - I think we'll have a lot of people laughing," said Richard Hartle who stars as George Hay. "The play celebrates live theater and the fun of seeing it."

Director Amy Lynn Smith sets the scene. It's 1953 and TY is killing live theater. George and Charlotte Hay are veteran actors who are quickly headed toward has-been status when opportunity knocks on their repertory theater Movie director Frank Capra is seeking leading actors for his new film, and is planning to attend the repertory theater's matinee performance in Buffalo, N.Y.

Chaos is everywhere. George gets roaring drunk when he realizes his wife Charlotte (Mary Jolliffe) knows about his philandering. The Hays' daughter Rosalind has just returned home with her new (and somewhat confused) finance, Howard, much to the chagrin of her former boyfriend, Paul,

"Add Charlotte's deaf mother, a high-strung ingenue and the couple's dashing but slimy lawyer and stir briskly for fast-paced comedy of errors, slamming of doors and unabashed admiration for live theater," said Smith. Hartle and Jolliffe are longtime St. Dunstan's members who performed together on stage as a married couple in the group's 1983 production of "Tribute."

They are longtime friends and enjoy sharing the stage. "We play off of each other well," said Hartle. "I love working with him," said Jolliffe about her leading man. "He's solid, he's good and has such a marvelous manner with the char-

Hartle says the play is a funny look at a group of traveling actors. "We all have great hopes, and we've done some movies before," he said. "I'm the philandering husband, and she's the irate wife, but getting a part in the movie becomes more important to her."

Playing the drunk is hard, said Hartle. "You have to give this illusion of being drunk, but it has to be humorous. They're trying to sober me up for the play, (which is only a half hour away), but they give me Irish coffee instead of regular coffee by mistake."

For Hartle, performing in community theater is a great escape. "You are in another world," he said. You forget all your cares and woes. It's a form of creativity, it's fun. I enjoy making a character come to life, and making people care about them."

Jolliffe really likes her character. "She has a wacky life, yet she's a very loving person. She's dramatic and really has a nice personality. It's a very funny play. When I first read it, I laughed out loud."

A member of St. Dunstan's since 1959, Jolliffe "just loves the theater. It transports you to another world," she said. "There's a wonderful sense of teamwork when you're working on a show. You become almost like a family, and can count on each other. It's very supportive."

"In many ways Moon Over Buffalo, depicts life at a theater that is very similar to St. Dunstan's," said Smith. "Like most community theater groups we don't have a lot of money and we work very hard to get ourselves noticed. We may encounter hurdles or challenges while producing our shows - but we are connected by our mutual love of theater and our desire to put on the very best productions we can, for the entertainment and enlightenment of our audiences."

Starlight Drifters swing to a western beat

A perfectionist, Chris Casello is never quite satisfied with any of his band's accomplishments.

The Starlight Drifters' stellar debut, "Introducing ... The Starlight Drifters" is OK if he puts it down for a while and then listens to it.

"That's the curse of never being satisfied when you're an artist. You know you can always do better. If I don't hear it for six months, then I think 'Man, that's really good,' " the guitarist said with a laugh.

Sure, the Ann Arbor-based band has played a few top-notch gigs but Casello is modest about naming them. With some prob-

Need some humor to chase away the winter blues? Head over to the Players Guild of Dearborn where the fast-paced, rollicking comedy, "Moon Over Buffalo" is warming up the house with a hearty dose of laughter. Set in 1953, "Moon Over Buffalo" is the story of a repertory theater company in Buffalo, N.Y., struggling for survival in the movies and TV. Tempers are short, and the troupe is in danger of dissolving when their big break appears - Frank Capra is considering the company's founders, George and Charlotte Hay, for his next movie. He's flying in to catch their next matinee. What follows is madcap mayhem and side-splitting laughter as everything that could go wrong does.

From the moment Lindel Salow and Nancy Wolter as leads George and Charlotte Hay leapt on stage amidst fierce swordplay, the stage was set for their physical and verbal repartee generating much of the show's laughter and even its tenderest moment.

Salow drew peals of laughter during his drunk scene. He avoided the stereotypical portrayal and instead rocked the audience with laughter with his hysterically confused expressions, and his physical missteps.

Director Kirk Haas skillfully directed a difficult scene which must seem full of random clumsiness to successfully pull-off the scene's most comic potential.

Wolter's comic timing and dry sense of humor served her character well and completed the chemistry between leads.

Debbie Pletzer as Rosalind, the couple's grown daughter, proved her own comic ability during the play within a play. As a Noel Coward newlywed in "Private Lives," she was thrown into a frenzied round of side-splitting ad-libbing when her drunken father took to the stage dressed as Cyrano and started spouting the other show's lines.

Tony Lawry of Garden City made the most of his role as Howard, Rosalind's fiancé and a stage-struck weathercaster. Brimming with enthusiasm, his physical humor and earnestness nailed down the part.

Michael Falzon as Paul, Ros-alind's former beau, also helped maintain the show's quick comic pace and captured his own share of laughter by endearingly portraying his character's jealously single-minded determination.

Leonore Forsythe as Ethel, Charlotte's hard-of-hearing mother, made even the deaf jokes seem funny. Paul Helmstetter of Canton as Charlotte's ardent paramour, and indiscretion, completed the cast.

The stage crew hit some rough spots opening night, but should smooth out their performance as the show progresses. The set was intentionally bland and somewhat cramped, but it did accommodate the numerous exits and entrances needed to pull off much of the "cat and mouse" humor. The Cyrano and Patton costumes deserve special notice among a sea of functional but not particularly notable costumes.

Witnesses to history: Sylvia Carter (left) and Audrey Morgan perform as the Delany sisters in "Having Our Say."

Endearing acting breathes life into 'Having Our Say'

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER fprovenzano@oe.homecomm.net

"Having Our Say" by Emily Mann through Sunday, Jan. 31 at Meadow Brook Theatre, Wilson Hall, Oakland University. Rochester Hills, Tuesday-Sunday. Tickets $24 - $35, available at Ticketmaster locations (248) 645-6666, or (248) 377-3300.

No one can accuse the Delany sisters of not sharing their opinions. Age, their inquiring minds and an audience guarantee an airing of their barrel full of unabridged sentiments.

Indeed, in Meadow Brook Theatre's latest production, "Having Our Say," the Delany sisters have their say again and again on nearly every subject under the sun - from the Civil War to Martin Luther King, Jr.'s plea for racial equality to Dan Qualye's rise to mediocrity to the haunting shadow of David Duke.

In their front and center role as co-hosts of a rambling talk through American history, both Bessie and Sadie Delany reveal the bitterness, humor and wisdom of growing up black in a white society, and growing old in a world that worships youth.

In the early 1990s, the octogenarians broke the century mark, and gained popularity for their surprising lucidness as much as their longevity. As centerpieces of "Having Our Say," Bessie and Sadie Delany represent distinct character studies.

As the anecdotal play unfolds, it's clear that the operative word is storytelling. (If you're looking for action, look someplace else. You're in for a good talking to.)

While the play suffers from a lack of dramatic action and a sense of impending conflict, there's no mistaking that the strength of "Having Our Say" lies in the literal recreation of the indefatigable Delany sisters.

Bessie, the younger Delany, born in Raleigh in 1891 – two years after her sister - is a selfdescribed "good Christian woman and a naughty, little darkie."

At every turn, Audrey Moran as Bessie is up to the challenge of balancing righteousness with indignation for being considered a second-class citizen because of her skin color and gender.

Moran's transformation to Bessie is complete, including a slight hitch in her tentative gait and a glowing pride burned into her countenance. Her fire can also turn to rage when she describes how she was almost lynched for standing up to a belligerent white man.

But Moran's emotional fire is tempered by the constraints of Bessie's age and her warehouse of memories of pain and regret. All in all, Moran offers a remarkably refreshing portrayal that is engaging and inspired.

As Bessie's lifelong sister sidekick, Sadie, Sylvia Carter has a wide-eyed sweetness that never slips to the level of predictable stereotype.

Perhaps it's "easier" to play the less volatile Delany sister, but like Moran, Carter's seamless portrayal is built upon layers of emotional travails.

Together, the Delany sisters describe themselves as "molasses and vinegar." In reality, they seem like two sides of one indelible, archetypal historical character - a vibrant, black woman, who never gave in to prejudice, and made the most of the opportunities she had.

Appropriately, Moran and Carter mix their molasses and vinegar into a tasteful rendition of what it must be like to live long enough so that time appears like an illusion and death merely a lost parcel that has yet to be delivered. As a play that appears more like side-by-side character studies, "Having Our Say" could easily become static and preachy.

But director Debra Wicks has managed to blend storytelling and on-screen visuals from a Delany family album with the proper warmth. Yet, "Having Our Say" also delivers a reminder. Two old, loveable women talking about family memories along with racism and injustice could gloss over the ugly face of hatred.

Ultimately, the "final say" rests with contemporary audiences, who still have time to stand up and have their own say about right and wrong.

Starlight

"That's how we played originally - without drums for the first year," Casello explained. It was never a problem unless The Starlight Drifters played "a big stage" like, for example, at Clutch Cargo's in Pontiac.

"The sound guys didn't know what to do with us," Casello said. To fill out its sound soon after the release of "Introducing ... The Starlight Drifters," the band singer Bill Alton of Livonia, stand-up bassist Rudy Varner of West Bloomfield, and Casello of Ann Arbor – found drummer and Toledo resident Marc Gray.

"The drummers we auditioned always wanted to rock out or really liven it up and I hated that. We got a guy who can do that, but he plays with brushes a lot more," he added. "Our goal for this year is to have a multiinstrumentalist or a piano player for the honky-tonk or western swing music that's a big part of our sound."

On stage Casello plays a rare 10-string Alkire E Harp, or for the average Joe on the street, a "big steel guitar with lots of strings."

"Strangely enough, I was playing at Joe Louis Arena before a Rockers game and this guy walks up to me and says, 'Oh, an E Harp.' They had those things back in the '50s. Nobody's ever heard of this thing," he said. The Starlight Drifters is often dubbed "western swing," but the dreaded "s" word misleads potential fans, Casello explained. "The swing thing has gotten us a lot of work. We're often booked as a swing band, but when we show up, people aren't disappointed. Without trying we're educating people to some great music."

Rockabilly band

"When you say 'hillbilly' or 'country' it scares people away. We're a rockabilly band, we're into the Americana scene. We swing. We have an upright bass. They still think we're swing. I've never misrepresented us. People are always happy." Casello is a veteran of the Detroit music scene. For seven years he played in the Prodigals, a surf band. His resume also includes the Urbations, the Watusis, the blues band CC and the Bad Luck Boys, Soul Plumbers, and the country act Driving Sideways.

"I'm just all over the place. I haven't had a job in 10 years, maybe longer. I'm lucky to be able to teach music, play gigs and do some session work. For the longest time. I was in four or five different bands. I trimmed it down to one."

An Ann Arbor resident, Casello was turned on to the music after watching the "Glen Campbell Good Time Hour."

"Those are my earliest memories. I got a guitar in 1968 and Elvis Live in Vegas.' I didn't get serious (about music) for two or three years. But I've always been into it. The whole family is."

He's a fan of "hillbilly music" and jazz. But taking the attention away from himself, he concentrates on his bandmates.

"Bill the singer, he's just got this phenomenal voice. He has been accused of being a doo-wop singer. The local grease-and-ink crowd say that being a doo-wop singer (isn't talent). But the fact of the matter is Bill is a country. music expert."

Those two imbibe on WSDS-AM 1480, a classic country radio station.

"Nothing's going on on FM. You've got to listen to AM, WJR at midnight, and the other one is WSDS classic country 1480. They play the classic songs that you've never heard. That's kind of interesting. Bill really knows his country stuff. He's a rockabilly singer but his roots are gospel. He's a good Southern Baptist boy."

For the next few months, in between gigs, The Starlight Drifters are spending time in Big Sky Studios to work on its sophomore release.

"This one's gonna be terrific. We're putting a lot more work into it. There's going to be horns,. piano, lots more steel guitar, a lot; more western swings. I like the. swing beat but to me it's all the same thing. Music is music."

what you can put in their brain. Children learn best when they're having fun."

Titled "Animal Portraits," the Tiny Tots concert is a multimedia event featuring the orchestra led by assistant conductor Ya-Hui Wang, narration by Rheda Becker, and computer illustrations of animals designed. by students and faculty from the Graphic Communications Department of the Center for Creative Studies.

Exciting, fast moving pieces were chosen for the program including "Flight of the Bumblebee" by Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, Camille Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals," and Leroy Anderson's "The Waltzing Cat."

It's not MTV, but pretty close music that little kids can relate to. "You basically show people music," said Lucas about the concert. "As orchestral musicians we have to catch up with the curve."

"Sunny days, chasing clouds away," wishful thinking for January, but a good reason to spend some time on Sesame Street.

Elmo, Cookie Monster, Oscar and the gang are at the Fox Theatre in Detroit until Sunday, Jan. 31 performing in "Elmo's Coloring Book," presented by Sesame Street Live!

"It's mostly singing and dancing," said Elmo's friend Tricia Engleman who has been with the show for the past five years. "I've always wanted to dance, and working with children is very rewarding. They're the best audience you can imagine," said Engleman.

"Elmo's Coloring Book," is targeted for children ages 2 to 7. but what adult hasn't been tickled by Elmo. "The adults are enjoying the show as much as the kids," said Engleman. There are lots of fun special effects.

In this show, Professor Art's Guzzinta 2000 machine makes the pages of Elmo's Coloring Book come alive.

Telly Monster wants to visit the pyramids in Egypt. Through the magic of Professor Art's machine, Telly is able to wear King Tut's crown, and get inside the coloring book picture of pyramids to explore them with his pals. Prairie Dawn becomes Cleopatra, but a pesky polar bear, Blanche, borrows the color gold so the treasure is white. Blanche wants the colors, and grabs them whenever she can. Pretty soon the cast figures out that Blanche is making Sesame Street lose its color, and try to of dinosaurs, and Oscar the Grouch temporarily takes on the role of a nice and friendly monster, and takes the audience to his junk yard.

"It's a story about friendship and caring," said Engleman. "It's very colorful, and very fun. All your favorite Sesame Street characters are in the show."

Like other Sesame Street Live shows, "Elmo's Coloring Book" stresses the importance of education, and diversity. For kids, the lesson is that friends like you best when you just be yourself.

"All friends come in all shapes, sizes and colors, we shouldn't judge people," said performance director Jerry DuMars. "Oscar the Grouch changes in the middle of the show, and nobody likes Bert and Ernie visit the land it. The lesson is it's OK to be grouchy, to get up on the wrong side of the bed."

Sing along with Oscar who explains why "I Love Trash." Besides recognizable Sesame Street songs, there's a contemporary mix of music and even some doo-wop girls - the Palettes, three new characters - yellow, red and blue.

The show is 90 minutes long with a 15 minute intermission. DuMars said the music is very upbeat and catchy. A lot of the music is familiar, and there are some brand new songs too.

"Elmo loves kids and being in the show," said Engleman. "He visits the audience. He's very young and very playful, and likes running around. Children relate to him."

For DuMars, who has been with Sesame Street Live for the past 10 years, the rewarding part is knowing that "when I'm on stage, I'm making a difference in a child's life. We're educating children."

"It's a great thing for families to see together," said DuMars, about the show. "They're making memories."

'A Simple Plan' succeeds brilliantly, repeatedly

BY JON KATZ SPECIAL WRITER

"What would I do?" Virtually every story, play, book and movie in history has been written with the goal of having the listener/ reader/viewer ask that question. More often than not, the question asked is "Who Cares?"

The thriller "A Simple Plan" succeeds brilliantly and repeatedly in placing us in the desperate situations of its characters. because it does one thing so right: the bad guys are all good guys. Like us.

Bill Paxton is Hank, a nice accountant in rural Minnesota with a nice, pregnant wife Sarah (Bridget Fonda) and a nice, dimwitted brother Jacob (Billy Bob Thornton). When Hank, Jacob and nice, redneck friend Lou (Brent Briscoe) discover a small plane buried beneath the snow, they go inside to investigate. Finding the pilot dead, they also find a duffel bag with $4.4 million. Drug money, they assume. Let's keep it, they decide. Who'll know, they figure.

Not so fast, Paxton warns. "You work for the American Dream, you don't steal it."

"There's no risk...we'll always be in control," they assure him. Right. Wondering what you would do so far? Now get out the shovel and dig a hole for yourself, as you soon become a liar, a blackmailer and a murderer. And remember, you're the good guy...or.were.

Sam Raimi, who was graduated from Birmingham Groves High School and directed the cult horror classic "The Evil Dead," puts down his penchant for quick camera moves and a case of ketchup in every scene, and directs "A Simple Plan" with a deft, Hitchcockian touch that nails you to your seat. The camera is invisible, save for a few too many rack-focus shots, and the special effects are tucked away for another time. Mike Nichols and Ben Stiller were two of many directors considered during the six years it took to make the film. Fate chose wisely. Based on his own best-selling book of the same name, Scott B. Smith's thriller is for people who don't generally like thrillers. His characters don't slowly go mad amidst the snow like Jack ("Hee-e-r-e's Johnny!") Nicholson in "The Shining." Each new "simple plan" to cover up the disastrous and deadly result of their previous plan seems logical enough, but instead spirals them even more out of control.

"You're a sweet, normal guy," reasons Sarah to husband Hank. "No one would believe that you were capable of doing what you've done."

And Paxton is oh so sweet and normal. Had he played Hank just a few degrees off to one side or the other, the film might have crashed and burned. Instead, it soars. Thornton is nothing less than terrific as the brother in constant need of coaching to get the latest story right.

"Do you understand what we have to say?" says Hank to Jacob in a running gag. Fonda's little wife turns out to be the anchor in this hopeless charade; she sees 4 million reasons why they should keep the money and will push the men in whatever direction she has to to get out of her librarian's rut.

"A Simple Plan" dares you to disagree with these nice folks. It also dares you to unclench your knocks. You'll have a good time hands when the next door trying.

Jackie, persistently burdened by her monumental talent and fame, eventually found her own marriage to pianist/conductor Daniel Barenboim (James Frain) in serious trouble, and suffered an emotional breakdown. Ultimately, she contracted multiple sclerosis, which not only ended her dazzling career and silenced touch upon something else. Did Jacqueline du Pré really hate the cello, as she claims here? Did she then, feel no real passion for the music? Did she feel enslaved by her talent? Did she really feel unloved by her parents, unless she was winning awards for her music? Were these feelings really justified? Did her husband leave her when she became ill to start another life - and family - with someone else? Why does Hilary feel that she should give her sister everything, including her husband? ("She just needs proof that somebody loves her," she says, in Frank Cottrell Boyce's screenplay, but this seems downright laughable.) Who is Kiffer Finzi that he appears to be so agree-

This is not, by the way, an easy movie to watch. In fact, it's one of the grimmest, darkest movies I've seen in a long time. And Emily Watson's "death scene" which, in itself, may earn her an Academy Award nomination - is especially harrowing.

Tucker, up to now a documentary filmmaker, adds special visual interest to "Hilary and Jackie" by interspersing grainy, homemade "takes," plus moodenhancing shots, especially as the movie progresses, that seem almost physically weighted with dark, inky colors and shadows.

Though the story moves to such far-flung locales as Israel, France and Russia, all of the movie was shot in Liverpool, due to budget constrictions.

Production designer Alice Normington's "costuming" of interior shots work exactly right, though. The music is eloquent, of course, and one keeps hoping more emphasis had been given to it. Much of it has been rerecorded from original performances given by Jacqueline du able to this rather unorthodox Pré at the height of her career.

'Hi-Lo' is edge-of-seat drama

BY KEELY WYGONIK STAPP WRITER kwygonik@oe.homecomm.net

They were cowboys who fought

World War II, and came home ready to resume the life they left in "The Hi-Lo Country" of New Mexico. But it was not to be. Small ranches were being bought up, putting an end to many a cowboy's dreams of owning a little land, running cattle. getting married and having a family.

"The Hi-Lo Country," based on the novel by Max Evans, takes place against a Big Sky backdrop during this little known era of American history.

Pete Calder (Billy Crudup), home from the war, wants to raise cattle and work his small plot of land. He learns Mona (Patricia Arquette), the woman he can't get out of his system, a woman with nothing in her cards, is married to another man. With Mona married, he returns to the arms of his steady girlfriend Josepha U'Neil (l'enclope Cruz).

As life begins settling down, a masked man approaches Pete's ranch at a gallop. Pete's alarm changes to joy when he recognizes his best friend, Big Boy Matson (Woody Harrelson), someone he'd die for.

Big Boy is also in love with Mona, but doesn't let her marriage stop their heated affair. Torn by guilt and his ever-present desire for Mona, Pete fights the yearnings for something he knows he'll never have.

"The Hi-Lo Country" has all the elements of a classic western - dusty prairie, good guys, villains, lots of whiskey, fights, horses, a cattle drive, poker and blinding blizzard. But it's also about a friendship that's tested and a lost way of life.

Harrelson's Big Boy Matson is loud and crazy, the opposite of his friend Pete, whom he tries to protect. Matson has a lot of rage, and anger; he's fearless in the face of danger and not afraid of a Big Boy loves his mother (Rosaleen Linehan) and buys her groceries when he wins big at poker. He's tough, but soft underneath, a man who knows what he wants, and understands his responsibilities. There's tension between him and his little brother, Little Boy (Cole Hauser) who works for Jim Ed Love and lives at home with mom but doesn't take care of the place. Directed by British director Stephen Frears, produced by Martin Scorsese and Barbara De Fina, "The Hi-Lo Country" offers edge-of-the-seat drama, tension

But the band, which broke up Dec. 31, 1997, and a host of Detroit acts are putting egos aside to help out Joe LaFata. the former drummer for Tyrone's Power Wheel and the Final Cut. He was diagnosed a year ago with brain tumors called germinomas.

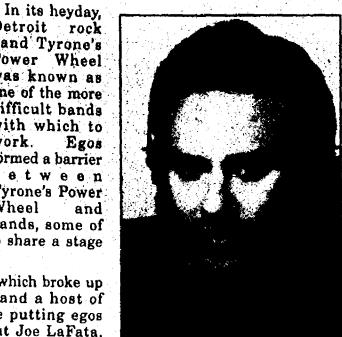

Tyrone's Power Wheel will reform to make a guest appearance during a benefit for LaFata at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 23, at St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Tickets are $10 for the all-ages show.

"They'll play about three songs and start a jam session. (Radio station) 89X, does a club night downstairs. (DJ) Clark Warner approached a friend of mine and he's been talking about wanting to spin," Posegay Give is the new band from former Tyrone's Power Wheel members Ferris George and Ray Echlin.

"It's a Jeff Buckley kind of thing, Ferris always wanted to be Jeff Buckley," Posegay said with a laugh.

The bands were chosen on their ability to bring in fans. The Howling Diablos played at the wedding of LaFata, who is now separated.

"It's not going to be a way to showcase somebody's new band. The key is to get people in the place, StunGun draws people. I asked the Howling Diablos. he explained.

"I don't care who comes to the benefit. I just want to pack this place but at the same time pay tribute to Joe."

Posegay, the promotion and marketing director for the Bingham Farms-based CIMX is organizing the event along with Brad Cousens, general manager of Clutch Cargo's in Pontiac, and his brother Graham Cousens, the former guitarist for Tyrone's Power Wheel.

They had been talking about doing a benefit for about a year.

"When we first found out, we said we've got to do a benefit. But we didn't want it to be pretentious. We didn't want Joe to think that we're putting a nail in his coffin. He's not critical. He's fighting this thing," he explained.

"We're doing this out of love." He's a talented musician, the stuff that he did with the Final Cut and Tyrone's Power Wheel was amazing."

Graham Cousens talked to LaFata and mentioned that they were planning a benefit for him.

"Joe was really touched by it. He's totally moved by it." Posegay explained.

According to the National Academy of Neuropsychology Web site, germinomas are tumors that arise from germ cells and are most common in the region of the pineal gland. They are thought to arise from cells that should have migrated to the gonads during development. Germinomas are highly infiltrative and rapidly growing.

LaFata told Posegay that only 3 percent of cancer patients have the same type of cancer. LaFata has gone through four sets of radiation to shrink the growths that keep returning.

"Forced Air' is actually a prequel to Electricity.' I see it as a part of the same work, with logistics and finances being the biggest obstacles to presenting them together," says Smith.

unforeseen obstacle to the installation of "Forced Air." Can you imagine trying to convince a heating and cooling expert that your exhibit deserves priority with the weather we've been having? Patience and good humor helped Smith deal with delays in completing the furnace and ductwork elements, which will be ready for performances on Jan. 22, 29 and Feb. 2.

In fact, it's not unusual for Smith or his audiences to be amused by something in past performances of his work that wasn't intended to be funny.

"I was surprised to find the audience laughing, although I wasn't really discouraged. After There has been another all, I've been amused when cre-

The installation will be shown at the Center Galleries through Feb. 27, and you can preview it on this week's edition of Backstage Pass.

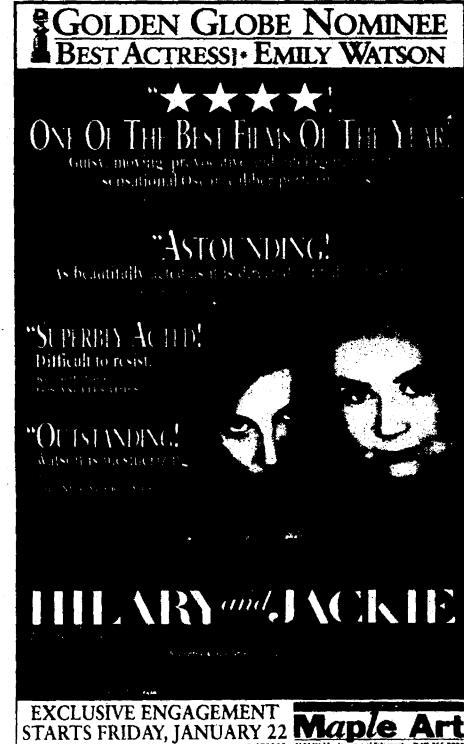

Speaking of combining elements, The Raisin Pickers have been known to throw in a guitar, mandolin, fiddle, string bass, an assortment of banjos, vocal solos and harmonies, and even some Appalachian clogging in their performances. The string quartet is the only local group in the outstanding talent roster of the 22nd Ann Arbor Folk Festival, set for Jan. 30.

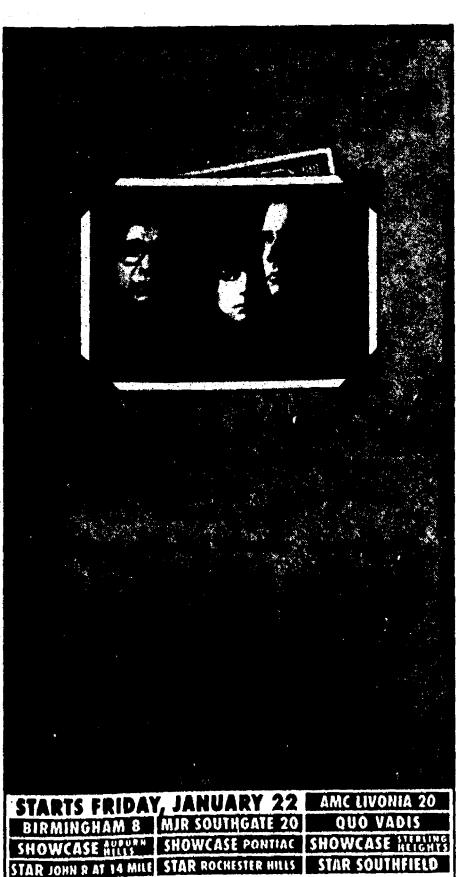

Mark and Carol Palms founded the band in 1989. He'd been a fiddler and banjoist of traditional music, she's a classically trained violist. When you add instrumentalist David Mosher's passion for bluegrass, and violinist James Sneyd and his background in folk rock, jazz and Celtic bands, you've got a mix of the best qualities of bluegrass, old time, and swing.

"The preferences of the individual band members always surface when we're working on original music, with each of us trying to shape the piece in a certain way. It helps the creative process. You're going to play best what you like best," says Carol

The Raisin Pickers bring their distinctive sound to the Detroit Public TV studios of Backstage Pass, airing Sunday at 7:30 p.m. and repeated Thursday at 5:30 p.m. and Friday at midnight.

Partners with good 'Karma' get ready to open club

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER cluoco@oe.homecomm.net

Mark McConnell has a suggestion for visitors to his dueling piano bar Karma.

"Check your shy personality at the coat check," McConnell said.

In late January, the sounds of dueling pianos and rousing singalongs will fill the vibrantly colored Ferndale club.

"It's a Disney-like concept that's been popular for a couple years in Florida. It's a fun way to interact. It's an uplifting experience," McConnell explained.

Karma is the creation of longtime Detroit DJ McConnell, and Rob Potter, a Rochester resident and co-owner of Pontiac's The Velvet Lounge.

The building formerly housed a Rite-Aid and underwent a massive seven-month reconstruction to turn it into a hip. acoustically sound club.

"The atmosphere is through the lighting, not through stuff screwed on the wall," McConnell a Bloomfield Hills native, and Lahser High School graduate said during a tour of the build-

Upon entering Karma, patrons will be greeted with a coat check and cashier. Prisms from wall scones reach up to the funky slanted ceilings of a long hallway that keeps the main room a mystery. A quick turn at the end of the hallway reveals high ceilings, a giant stage on one side of the room, and a raised private area overlooking the club.

Contrasting colors - primarily red with darker hues - provide a comforting atmosphere.

"We tried to pick vibrant colors to create a warmth and make it an inviting atmosphere,"

McConnell said. An entertainment director will oversee the piano players. But the stage will be shared with mainstream, contemporary pop, rock and rhythm and blues bands, as well as comedians.

Although there are other dueling piano bars in the area, McConnell said "there is nothing on this scale." Karma measures in at 11,000 square feet and holds 1,000 people.

"We built this in mind to be a multi-use facility. We want to try to appeal to a different audi-

Trojans pull out 68-65 win in OT

By Richard L. Shook STAFF WRITER

Livonia Clarenceville pulled out an Old West style victory from Lutheran High School Westland - it used a horse and a

The horse was sophomore center Scott Wion, whom the Trojans rode for 25 points, and the pistol was Joe Keough, who had a hot-shooting second quarter Tuesday night to help spark Clarenceville to its 68-65 overtime victory over Lutheran Westland.

"This was a big win for us," rookie coach Bill Dyer of Clarenceville said. They've won a lot of close games, which we haven't.

"Our kids showed a lot of character. We play with a lot of heart."

Each team rode the waves of momentum to keep the issue in doubt right to

"Clarenceville played scrappy and hard," coach Dan Ramthun of Lutheran Westland said after the Metro Conference game. "We didn't play up to our game. But give them the credit for that." The Warriors were ahead 57-52 with 3:39 left, 59-54 with 2:11 to play and 61-56 with 1:37 to go before Mike Muscat swished a three-pointer to make the margin workable.

Sophomore Brent Habitz made a free throw with 1:04 left to put Lutheran Westland up 62-59 but Wion made a putback and was fouled with 22 seconds to play. He made the free throw to tie the score and force overtime.

Wion's layup with 3:03 left countered a Charlie Hoeft basket 18 seconds into the extra period. Hoeft's free throw at 2:41 gave the Warriors a 65-64 lead but Scott Carr hit a fast break layup off a turnover to give the Trojans the lead for good with 2:11 to go.

Tim Riedl made two free throws with 11 seconds showing on the clock to make it 68-65 and Lutheran Westland was unable to get off a clean shot after that.

The Warriors started out like they were going to run away with it, scoring nine unanswered point to take a 16-8 lead on the way to an 18-11 first period advantage.

But the Trojans harried the Warriors into seven straight turnovers early in the second quarter in a 19-4 run that gave them a 30-22 lead. Keough made a layup, a trey and a three-point play in the surge to get eight of his 10 points in the game.

"Joe Keough gave us a big lift in the second quarter," Dyer said. "He was the difference in the game. He made steals, layups and good passes.

"Turnovers are the key for us. When we don't have turnovers, we can win games."

Clarenceville is now 2-5 for the season, 1-2 in the Metro. Lutheran Westland is 3-3 overall, 2-2 in the Metro.

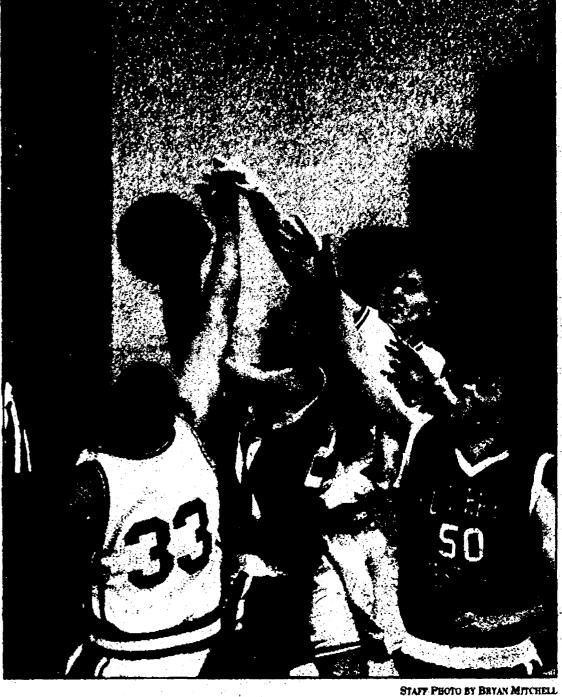

Tom Habitz led Lutheran Westland with 21 points, Hoeft had 17 and Ryan Ollinger and Brent Habitz nine each.

Scott Carr had 16 points for Clarenceville, 14 in the first half, to back Wion and Keough.

The Trojans held off a late second quarter rush to hold a 37-34 lead at the half. They had problems when the Warriors opened the third quarter with a zone but took the ball out to mid-court and eased to a 49-47 lead after three periods.

Wion had 11 rebounds and Scott Hall had six offensive boards.

Clarenceville did an excellent job of lobbing the ball in to Wion for easy layups when he was fronted, not forcing the ball in when the center was doubled and getting him the ball for drop-steps when his defender was behind him.

Wion had 10 of the Trojans' 12 points in the third period and seven in the fourth, much of which he played with

"We don't have the bulk to match up,"

"He can score underneath," Dyer said. "We just had to get him the ball."

From Cloud 9, Brzezinski went to the Duke campus, which only made him feel better about his journey

Duke has arguably the best men's basketball program in the country and a football program that's building from the ground floor. Duke is coming off a 4-7 football season and has a new coach, Carl Franks, who was hired days before Brzezinski's visit in December.

Franks replaces Fred Goldsmith, who was fired after a 17-39 record in five seasons, including an 0-11 season in 1996 and a 2-9 mark in '97.

The program took a nose dive after Goldsmith's first team in 1994 finished with an 8-4 record and a Hall of Fame Bowl berth. Joe DeLamielleure, one of seven assistant coaches left over from the Goldsmith staff, was Brzezinski's primary recruiter. DeLamielleure is a former star offensive lineman at Michigan State and in the NFL.

"I met the new coach and he's a real good guy," Brzezinski said. "He adds a little excitement and change for the program and I really like coach DeLamielleure."

Brzezinski admits it will take some adjusting to a program that's rebuilding, coming from CC, which won Class AA state titles the last two Franks also brings a passing philosophy from Florida, where he was offensive coordinator under head coach Steve Spurrier.

average and scored 28 on his ACT, which should prepare him well for Duke's demanding academics.

"It'll be tougher but I'm ready for the adjustment," said Brzezinski, undecided about a major. "I think Catholic Central prepared me very well."

Digging It: Livonia Churchill's Courtney Lim lays it on the line to save a ball during Monday's Western Lakes Activities Association opener against Livonia Stevenson.

GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

Livonia Churchill girls volleyball coach Mike Hughes called it "our best game of the season."

Meanwhile, Stevenson coach Kelly Graham said, "I don't know what team showed up tonight."

Churchill, a 15-8, 15-5 loser Saturday to Stevenson in the Wayne Memorial Invitational finals, did an aboutface Monday in the Western Lakes opener, defeating the visiting Spartans, 15-4, 15-10.

Stevenson falls to 17-5-2 overall, while Churchill improves to 10-4-2. "We made only one passing error all night," said Hughes, whose team has beaten Stevenson in two of its three meetings. "We just came to play tonight. Everybody played well.

"And we're getting to where we're playing Churchill defense."

Brazilian exchange student Fernanda Leite factored in several areas for the victorious Chargers, She served five points in the opening game and nine in the second as Churchill rallied from an 8-2 deficit to win the match.

Ocelots escape Henry Ford upset bid

It was, in the words of Schoolcraft College men's basketball coach Carlos Briggs, "our worst game of the year."

But the Ocelots managed to stave off defeat Saturday against visiting Henry Ford CC, posting a 79-78 victory. That made SC, the 15th-ranked team in the NJCAA, 13-0 overall and 3-0 in the Michigan Community College Athletic Association's Eastern Conference. The Hawks are 7-6 overall (with four losses to ranked teams), 2.2 in the conference.

"Give Henry Ford credit," said Briggs. "They played well."

Briggs did not feel the same about his team, although he was impressed with the victory.

"We missed 18 free throws (10of-28 for the game) and had 25 turnovers, and we still won," he said. That tells you something about your basketball team."

A Chris Colley basket in the final minute gave SC a fourpoint lead, but Henry Ford battled back to tie it on a layup by Cliff Stewart. It took a free throw by David Jarrett (Westland John Glenn) with 1.65 seconds left to clinch it for the Ocelots.

Henry Ford led 46-38 at the half and was ahead by as many as 11 in the second half. SC rallied in the final minutes behind Colley, who scored 10 of his 12 points, and Derek McKelvey and Lamar Bigby, who scored nine points apiece in the second half. McKelvey finished with a teamhigh 17 points, including five three-pointers; Bigby netted 15.

Dashawn Williams scored 12, and Jarrett had eight points, 13 rebounds and five assists. Mario Montgomery dished out six assists.

Henry Ford got 22 points from Stefan Allen, 17 points from Tom Bellino.

"The key stat was that at the start of the second half, we were not able to get back into our press," said Hawks' coach Gary Nustad. "When we did, it caused problems.

"They had seven huge offensive rebounds. They were backbreakers, but those are things you can't control. You just try to take advantage of your quickness. It was physical inside."

Special Resident Pats winless

Pakubody knows what Dan Robinson and Livenia Franklin schools, impossib, it's Tim Newman and Livenia Stevenson. (1986) And State of State the Pairiots winines in seven tries this season.

The Spartane can erspathise, though, because last year they word the team that was window at this point. In fact Microsov went the whole season without winning a game. It is 4-3 bliss ing the non-league game between league opponents.

Guard Dave Stando played his best game of the season, scoring 13 points and tying junior John Van Buran for high point honors with Stevenson. Junior Mike Lenarden had 11, Brett Kock nine, Ryan Tebin eight, Keshay McChristian seven and Marty Kennedy six. "We only had eight kids," Newman said, "so we played shorthanded. We started out quick.

"Every kid played and every kid contributed." Dustin Kuras scored 19 points for Franklin, including 11-for-15 free throw shooting, and also had nine rebounds.

*DEARBORN 58, WAYNE 55: It took a steal in the final 20 seconds for Dearborn to win its eighth game in nine tries this season. Guard Colin Wilkinson turned the steal into the last two of his 11 points Tuesday night to seal visiting Dearborn's the victory.

Guard Colin O'Donnell accred 15 and sophomore Scott Golern added 12 as Dearborn handed Wayne its seventh loss in nine outlings this season. The Zebras used an 18-11 third period to get back into a game they trailed, 25-18, at the half,

Guard Nathan Wade had 12 points, freshman center Jeff Logwood nine and guard Jamar Davis eight for Wayne. The Zebras went 11-for 15 from the line while Dearborn made 17-of 30 free

* NOW CLENN 65, HOWELL 62: The Rockets led from one end of the game to the other in reising their record to 3-4. Bill Foder had 19 points, seven in the third quarter when Westland John Glenn was outscoring Howell 19:13. Eric Jones added 17 and Ty Haygood 13. Howell, 5-5, had a big outside shooting night from Eric Kappen, who made 15 of his 25 points from beyond the three-point line. Eric Walters had 13 points for the host Highlanders. John Glenn went 11-for 21 from the free throw line, making 7-of 13 in the fourth quarter. •MILFORD 64, CHURCHILL 46: The Chargers stumbled coming out of the locker room for the third quarter and were outscored, 20-8. That allowed Milford to expand its 24-20 halftime margin to a tidy 44-28 as it handed Livonia Churchili its fifth loss in eight games this season.

Mike Tobin scored 21 points for host Milford and Joe Kofahl added 16; John Bennett led Churchill with 11 points, Avery Jessup had 10 and Randalf Boboige eight. Churchill made all but four of its 16 free throws while Milford was 21 of 31.

-ZOE CHRISTIAN 36, HURON VALLEY 35 (OT): Macomb scored the last six points of the game to steel a win from Westland. Craig Tyree's bucket with 1:30 left sliced Huron Valley Lutheran's lead to 35-34 and P.J. Rener followed with a free throw to force overtime.

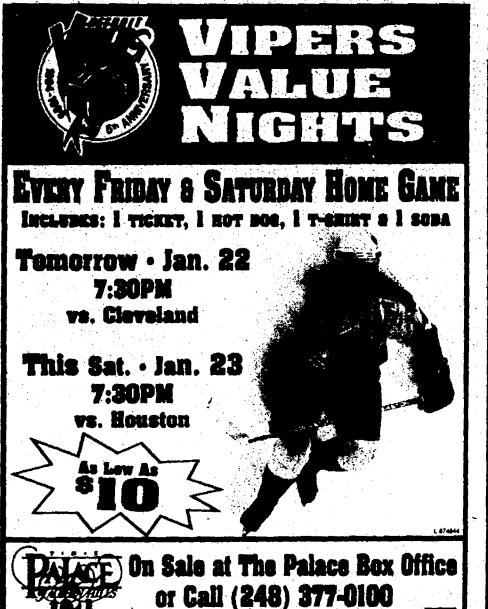

The only points of the overtime were by Zoe Christian, whose Matt Bank made a basket and Rick Thomas added a free throw, Huron Valley Lutheran is now 1-4 overall and 0-1 in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference, Zoe Christian, 45, is 2:1 in the MIAC.

Alan Kleinke had 11 points to lead the Hawks. Rene Arnel scored 10 and Stephen Davidson eight, Leading scorer Brian Johnson missed the game due to a Myree led Zoe with 17 points, including 7 for 9 from the line, with Mett McCormick netting eight.

· LLITHERAN WESTLAND 53, LIGGETT 44: In a Metro Conference makeup game Saturday, host Lutheran High Westland (4-2, 3-1) earned the victory behind Ryan nger s teem-nigh 20 politis. Charite Hoeft added 12 for the winners.

Joel Parrott and C.J. Moultrie scored 22 and 11, respectively, for Liggett. *REDFORD CC 72, DeLEGALLE 57: Nicke Moore scored 20 points and Dan Jess added 17 leading Redford Catholic Central to a victory Friday over host Warren

The Shamrocks improved to 2.1 in the Catholic Langue's Central Division, 63 overell. Del aSelle is 4-4 overell, 1-2 in the Centrel. Paul Anderson led the Pilots with 16 points. Teammate Ryan Cryderman added

Spartans capture Wayne Memorial Invitational tourney

In three tournament appearances this season, Livonia Stevenson had come away with two bronze medals and one sil-

But in Saturday's eight-team Wayne Memorial Invitational girls volleyball tournament, the Lady Spartans took home the gold with a first-place finish.

Stevenson bested rival Livonia Churchill in the championship match, 15-8, 15-5.

"The key was our passing and everybody was aggressive -- it was 110 percent effort," Stevenson coach Kelly Graham said. "We pounded the ball, served well and blocked tough. Everyone played well."

In pool play, the Spartans split with Belleville (15-6, 10-15) and defeated Dearborn Edsel Ford (15-3, 15-5) and Westland John Glenn (15-5, 15-8).

To reach the finals, Stevenson eliminated Dearborn Heights Crestwood (15-10, 15-2) and host Wayne (15-1, 15-0).

Senior Stephanie Dulz, bound for Hillsdale College next fall, was Stevenson's top attacker on the day with a total of 48 kills. She also served 13 aces along with Kristi Copi (13 aces0.

Other top hitters included Kate LeBlanc (20 kills) and Carly Wadsworth (14 kills).

Setter Kelley Hutchins had 62 assists, while Cassie Ehlendt contributed seven solo blocks. Brenda Pedersen made good on 10 of 11 digs.

Churchill, meanwhile, was 1-2 in pool play.

points as Churchill defeated Crestwood (15-3, 15-9), but the Chargers fell to Wayne (12-15. 13-15) and Livonia Franklin (7-15, 14-16). The Chargers beat Edsel Ford 15-9, 15-10 in the quarterfinals as Fernanda Leite served 14 points. The Brazilian exchange student also served game-point as Churchill outlasted rival Franklin (15-8, 10-15, 15-13) in the semifinals.

"We just couldn't serve in the Stevenson match," Churchill coach Mike Hughes said. "We made eight service errors, that was our Achillies heel.

"But our defense is improving and I'm happy about that. We just have to play more consistently instead of so many peaks and valleys."

Lauren Ruprecht led the Chargers in hitting with 30 kills. while Shannon Munn, who added 29, turned in her best allaround performance and played strong defense, according to Hughes.

Luba Steca chipped in with 24 kills.

Courtney Lim added solid defense and serving, while Megan Sheehan passed an an 85 percent clip.

Patriots corral Mustangs

Livonia Franklin opened Western Lakes Activities Association play Monday with a 13-15, 15-8, 15-9 triumph at Northville.

The Patriots (21-9-1 overall) won the match despite squandering a 10-0 lead in the first game Jessica McKay served 15 thanks to six straight service 15-13) and Dearborn Heights

M GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

Leading the Franklin rally in the second and third games were hitters Tera Morrill, Andrea Kmet and Nicole Boyd, along with setter Lyndsay Sopko. The Patriots also got a spark off the bench from Daniela Gapp.

"The kids really responded well," Franklin first-year coach Mary Helen Diegel said. "The parents were excited. I don't know if they can handle any more like that."

In Saturday's Wayne Invitational, Franklin won four straight matches before being ousted by Churchill in the semifinals.

The Patriots defeated Wayne (15-10, 15-3), Crestwood (15-2, 15-0) and Churchill (15-7, 16-14) in pool play. They also defeated John Glenn in the quarterfinals, 15-7, 15-6.

"I give Churchill a lot of credit," Diegel said. "They know when to turn it on. The same goes with Stevenson."

Zebras in Final 4

On Saturday, host Wayne Memorial reached the semifinals of its own tourney before losing to eventual winner Stevenson, 0-15, 1-15. The Zebras are now 5-7-0 on the year.

In pool play, Wayne lost its opener to Livonia Franklin (10-15, 3-15), but bounced back to beat Livonia Churchill (15-12, Crestwood (15-2, 15-10).

In the first-round elimination match, Wayne ousted Belleville, 15-5, 11-15, 15-9, Sophomore setter Amy Paling and senior setter Jenny Wojie, back after and ankle injury, combined for 47 assists.

Senior Kristin Kehrer, also back from a sore ankle, was Wayne's top attacker on the day with 20 kills. Senior Bethany Molitor added 16.

Coach Laura Fisher also praised the serving and passing of Rachel Raines and Bridget O'Rourke, along with the defensive play of Melissa Jones.

"With Kehrer and Wojie back in lineup we're starting to progress and are becoming an more competitive team," Fisher

Blazers block Regina

Erin Bartee had seven kills and two assists Tuesday, leading host Livonia Ladywood (16-8-1, 2-0) to a convincing 15-2, 15-5 Catholic League Central Division victory over Harper Woods Regina.

Deana LaBute added five kills. while Jenny Young and Jenni Gregor each added four. Young also had three aces.

On Saturday, Ladywood reached the finals of the Comstock Invitational before losing to Plymouth Salem in the semifinals, 4-15, 9-15.

Salem went on to win the title with a 16-14, 15-1 win over East Kentwood.

The 6-foot Young, bound for Central Michigan University, had 88 kills and 17 aces on the day. Bartee, a sophomore, added nine solo blocks and 120 assists. Tracey DeWitt contributed 24 digs and served received at an 87 percent clip. Rebekah Thornton had 23 kills and 17 digs.

In pool play, all by raily scoring, Ladywood knocked off Flint Kearsley (15-5, 15-10), Paw Paw (15-4, 15-13) and Comstock (7-15, 15-9, 15-7).

In power-pool play, the Blazers defeated Salem (15-8, 17-15) and lost to Portage Central (13-15, 6-15). Ladywood ousted Kalama-200 Loy Norrix in the quarterfinals, 15-12, 15-11.

sellout crowd Saturday at Redford Arena.

Trenton, the defending Class A champion which came in ranked

No. 5 in the statewide polls, improved to 11-2 overall and 6-1 in the Metro Hockey League

The Trojans have won two of the last three state titles and have appeared in the last four finals, but beating CC (12-1) has proven to be elusive the previous two regular seasons.

"It was a good victory against a very good team," Trenton coach Mike Turner said. "They're extremely fast, a very talented team, and we were happy to get out of there with the two points.

"We didn't focus on one line. I watched them the week before and I could barely tell the difference between the four lines."

Statewide polls don't mean anything in this rivalry.

"I don't put much stock in them, they're just an opinion," Turner said.

Trenton's senior goaltender Ben Rader recorded the shutout, stopping one breakaway among the many shots he faced. The Trojans also were stopped on a breakaway attempt by CC goalie Ben Dunne.

Sophomore defenseman Andy Greene broke the scoreless tie with five minutes left in the second period, rushing up from the blue line and scoring from the top of the circle after a pass from John Nadzam with both teams at full strength.

The two teams will meet again on Feb. 10 at Trenton's Kernedy Arena and possibly again in the state regionals.

"We looked at this as a big game but not anything we were pointing at," Turner said. "We wanted to play well. We just drew first blood."

•STEVENSON 4, DEARBORN UNIFIED 3: Coming off a nine-day layoff Saturday, Suburban High School Hockey League leader Livonia Stevenson (8-1-1, 8-0) fended off upset-minded Dearborn (8-3-2, 6-3-1) at the new Adray Arena.

"We came out flat, we played sloppy and couldn't get the flow going," Stevenson coach Mike Harris said. *But give Dearborn PREP HOCKEY credit, they came out enthusiastic, put a lot of pressure on us and forced us to turn the puck over in our end.

Stevenson led 1-0 after one period on Mark Nebus' goal from Jason Gildersleeve at 1:06.

In the second period, Dearborn's Brent Hojnicki answered with the first of his two goals at 0:48. Nebus then scored at 1:40 from Tim Allen and Chris Williams.

The Spartans' Dan Cieslak made it 3-1 at 5:46 fro, Nebus and Alex Piotrowski, but Dearborn's Dominic Osman cut the deficit to one with a goal at 7:29.

With 7:08 left in the third, Cleslak gave Stevenson a two-ga cushion from Willie Wilson and Mike

The Spartans' Ryan Sinks was then sent off for interference and Hojnicki scored a power-play goal with 3:01 remaining. Kevin Marlowe was in goal for the Spartans. He got defensive help from Williams, Joe Suchara, Mark Nebus, Wilson, Mike Zientarski, Cieslak and Wilson.

•CHURCHILL 6, W.L. WESTERN 0: Livonia Churchill (6-3-4, 5-2-1) broke out of its five-game goal drought Saturday against Walled Lake Western in an SHSHL game Saturday at Lakeland Arena.

Ed Rossetto (power play), Derek Martin, Adam Krug, Aaron Jakubowski, Nathan Jakubowski and Justin Charnock.

Chuck Leight and Charnock each added two assists, while Adam Rourke, Chris Galatis and Tom Sherman added one apiece.

Ryan McBroom, who played the first two periods, and Dwaine Jones, who finished up in the third, combined on the shutout.

"We played with purpose and we came out focused," Churchill coach Jeff Hatley said. "It was a good team effort. The kids worked hard. We're not quite there with all 22 guys, but we're getting there."

Whalers rip Greyhounds, streak hits 6

The streak is over for the Plymouth Whalers.

Not the win streak - that reached six-straight with Sunday's 7-2 bouncing of the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds Sunday in front of 2,886 fans in Sault Ste. Marie.

What ended was the Whalers shutout string. Their previous two opponents, the Brampton Battalion last Thursday (8-0) and the Guelph Storm Saturday (4-0), had both been blanked at Plymouth's Compuware Arena.

The 'Hounds ended that in the opening period Sunday, but it did them no good.

Harold Druken added to his Ontario Hockey League-leading goal total to put the Whalers ahead early (2:54 into the opening period).

Jason Ward then made it 2-0 with a short-handed goal five minutes later.

The Greyhounds countered with first-period goals by John Osborne and Chad Spurr, knotting it at 2-2 after one period.

But that was it for Sault Ste. Marie (22-16-4 record). David Legwand put the Whalers (33-8-3) ahead to stay midway through the second period, and both he and Druken netted their second goals of the game in the third.

Druken, who also had an assist, has 42 goals; Legwand has 22. Legwand's second goal was the Whalers' second shorthanded goal of the game.

Adam Colagiacomo and Damian Surma added thirdperiod goals; Randy Fitzgerald had two assists in the game.

Robert Holsinger made 24 saves in goal in earning the win for Plymouth. Jake McCracken had 45 saves for the Greyhounds.

Saturday's win over the Storm, in front of crowd of 3,878 at Compuware, featured one very unique characteristic: None of the Whalers top scorers scored a point - not Colagiacomo, not Druken, not Legwand. And they still won handily. Julian Smith and Eric Gooldy provided all the goal-scoring, each scoring twice. Gooldy has 13 goals this season, Smith 12. Jared Newman and Ward had two assists apiece. Holsinger turned away 27 shots in shutting out the Midwest Division-leading Storm (27-15-2). Chris Madden had 50 stops for Guelph.

Clarenceville takes 1st-place trophy

Livonia Clarenceville didn't have to go far to bring home a first place trophy.

The host Trojans took two individual titles and had four runner-up finishes Saturday to win its own 31st annual tournament title.

Clarenceville edged Allen Park by six points, 142-136. See complete results.

It was Clarenceville's first wrestling tournament title in 15

"We've missed placing at other tournaments by single digits,' Clarenceville coach Todd Skinner said. "We were hungry and due for a championship trophy.

"We're wrestling well at a pivotal point in the season and this allows us to have something to build on."

Clarenceville's Danny Tondreau (103 pounds) won his third tourney crown in a row by defeating Guy Gibson of East Jackson in the finals, 6-5. Teammate Dave Lemmon (130) also emerged victorious with an 8-3 decision over Don Brockway of Dearborn Divine Child.

Livonia Franklin, third in the eam standings with 106 points. came away with four individual champions led by Steve Myslins-(189), who edged Clarenceville's Walter Ragland for the title, 3-2.

Derek Azzopardi (135) also gave the Patriots a first with a 7-5 overtime decision in the Dan LeClerc of Clarenceville.

Ryan Shiplett (140) of Franklin won his division with a 16-0 victory (technical fall) over Bill Denton of Divine Child.

At 160 pounds, the Patriots' Toska blanked Clarenceville's Tony Rachoza for the crown, 6-0.

Livonia Churchill, fourth in the team standings with 103 points, was led by Steve Vasiloff (119), who pinned Justin Shaffer of Farmington Hills Harrison in "Both Danny and Dave are 4:39 for the title; and Mike Carter (145), who decisioned Tony Spencer of Divine Child, 10-4, for the crown.

Other runner-up finishers from the area include Churchill's Brandon LaPointe (152) and Clarenceville's Adam Marcum (171).
