In between tears, a Westland woman in court Monday smiled at the boyfriend accused of killing her 2-year-old son — and admitted that she still cares for him.

Kimberly Howie, 26, testified that she never saw murder defendant Hassan Christopher Clark, 30, abuse her son.

"I believe Hassan was good for my son," she said.

Her statements came during a preliminary hearing in the death of Michael Towne, who died the afternoon of Jan. 14 after he was left in Clark's care.

The boy suffered internal bleeding and a liver fracture, and a police report said his pancreas had been split in two after it was pushed against his spine.

Clark is charged with felony murder involving first-degree child abuse. He could face life in prison if convicted.

Runaway girl, accused of death plot, captured

BY DARRELL CLEM

dcclem@oe.homecomm.net

A runaway Westland girl, accused of plotting to kill the grandmother whose home she shared, was captured Sunday in Nashville, Tenn., police said.

"The grandmother is very upset over this," Westland police Lt. Marc Stobbe said. "She is very distraught and scared. Now she fears what could happen if the girl is returned to her."

The 16-year-old girl ran away Feb.

15 from her grandmother's home in Westland's south end and had been missing for six days, Stobbe said.

"We had been looking for her ever since she ran away," he said.

The girl is accused of stealing her 56-year-old grandmother's 1998 Dodge Neon, which was later found in Detroit.

A 16-year-old boy driving the car told police he found it parked with the keys in the ignition, and he denied knowing the runaway, Stobbe said. The boy was arrested following a police chase.

Meanwhile, some of the runaway girl's friends began calling Westland police, informing them of her alleged plot to kill her grandmother, Stobbe said.

"They let us know that she had been trying to solicit people to murder her grandmother," he said. "She had several people that she was offering cars and money."

Police say it's possible the girl was trying to give away her grandmother's Dodge Neon in exchange for a killing.

Stobbe said authorities don't know of anyone who has made any attempts to kill the grandmother.

On Sunday, the runaway teen phoned relatives in Nashville and asked them to bring money to her at that city's Greyhound bus depot, Stobbe said.

"The relatives called the grandmother, and she called us," the lieutenant said.

Stobbe contacted Nashville police.

A Westland bowling alley break-in early Tuesday escalated into high-speed chases, the attempted killing of a police officer and, finally, a two-vehicle crash that ended the dramatic ordeal, authorities said.

Incredibly, no one was reported seriously injured as innocent motorists slammed their brakes and swerved on major roads to avoid hitting suspects, who led Westland and Canton officers at speeds up to 90 mph, police reports said.

A Taylor man faces six felony charges for the incident that started at 5:33 a.m. at Vision Lanes bowling alley, on Ford Road east of Hix in Westland.

Police arrested but later released a female companion and a Redford man who was initially believed to have been with the Taylor pair. Instead, he was in an area where police closed in on

City hall options face study

dcclem@oe.homecomm.net

A split Westland City Council has hired a Bloomfield Hills firm to study proposals for renovating City Hall or building a new administration complex.

Some city leaders say they will eventually face a crucial decision to build new administration offices or renovate a deteriorating City Hall, built in the mid-1960s on Ford Road.

Officials also will face key issues such as the best way to use taxpayer dollars to pay the tab — whichever plan they pursue.

"I think it's long past due that we make these decisions, and I'm looking forward to making them," Councilman Charles "Trav" Griffin said.

During a meeting Monday, council members split 5-2 in hiring TMP Associates Inc. for $24,800 to study the feasibility of new construction or renova-

Mail carrier cares about people

BY LILLY A. EVANS

Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night keeps John Prowse from delivering mail with a smile on his face and a spring in his step.

Prowse has been a Canton mail carrier in Carriage Hills subdivision for 10 years and loves his job every day. And it doesn't go without notice.

Observer reader Janet Hammons nominated Prowse for excellent customer service recognition due to his disposition.

"It can be the worst weather, icy, snowy and the wind blowing and he is always smiling," Hammons said. "The world would be a better place if we had more people like him."

Prowse attests that he enjoys life and cares about people.

"If I am alive, I am happy," he said. "I like all the customers on my route and I want to do a good job for them," explained Prowse.

He says he takes special care in making sure his customers get checks and parcels in a timely manner.

"I do everything on my end to follow up if a customer asks me about a delivery they are expecting," Prowse said.

During the holiday season if he knows a customer is waiting for a gift, he personalizes his service by knocking on the door and wishing them a Merry

Westland residents rake in auto awards

Westland auto buffs drove away with a load of awards at the recent 47th annual Big Kmart Autorama at Cobo Center in Detroit.

Billed as "America's Greatest Hot Rod Show," Autorama drew a record 161,710 people to see 800 exhibits of hot rods, custom cars, trucks, vans and motorcycles. The event was held at Cobo Feb. 19-21.

Robert Duzak of Westland, who owns a 1950 Mercury, won first place in the radical post-war hardtop 1949-54 category, outstanding full/ radical/handbuilt custom car and a $1,000 cash award for The Alexander Brothers Award of Excellence.

The Alexander Brothers award, which was added last year to Autorama, is judged on styling, design, bodywork and paint. It was established by the Detroit customizers, the Alexander Brothers, who still live in the area and came to the show and selected Duzak's car as the winner.

AUTORAMA

Duzak built the car himself with the help of friends over 6 1/2 years. The Mercury was a wreck when designs were drawn up, according to Duzak. He was helped in his efforts by Jim Urban of Detroit and Joe Danko of Lincoln Park.

Other Westland winners at Autorama include:

■ John Kielbowicz, first-place street machine custom rod 1935-48 and outstanding interior street machine, for a 1941 Willy's Coupe.

■ Chris Aton, outstanding contemporary vehicle, for a 1998 Dodge.

■ Joe St. Pierre, first-place bracket racer 1973 to current and street achievement - engine, for a 1997 Ford Mustang Cobra.

■ Paul Klein, second-place custom rod sedan, for a 1936 Nash.

■ Freddie Williams, second-place current street machine truck/van, for a 1983 Ford F-100 Pickup.

■ Joshua Parker, third-place compact custom, for a 1995 Saturn SL2.

■ Mark Cisney, fourth-place late current hardtop 1990-95, for a 1995 Pontiac Grand Am GT.

■ Kris Ryan Kropinski, third-place late current hardtop 1990-95, for a 1995 Mustang GT.

■ Keith Dahlka, third-place road bike, for a 1981 Harley Davidson.

■ Caryn and George Bugla, street achievement - rod, for a 1932 Ford.

Testimony from page A1

Clark could learn as early as March 15 whether he will face trial. Part of his hearing was delayed until then because a medical examiner wasn't available to testify Monday.

Clark lived with Howie and her son at The Orchards of Newburgh, an apartment complex on Westland's southwest side where paramedics and police officers found the lifeless child about 2 p.m. Jan. 14.

In court Monday, Judge Gail McKnight had to warn Clark to stop signaling to Howie during her testimony. McKnight threatened to hold Clark in contempt.

Woman testifies

Under questioning, Howie admitted that she still cared for Clark, whom she had known for 18 months. She said she had no fears of letting Clark care for her son while she was working.

"He had been taking care of him for quite awhile - months," she said.

Two neighbors testified that they heard loud noises on the day Towne was found dead, and one man said the sounds came from the apartment shared by Clark and Howie.

"It was like a hammering sound - a few thuds, very loud," next-door neighbor Kenneth Burns testified, saying "a succession of thuds" shook a wall in his apartment.

"I thought I heard a male voice. I thought it was coming from the apartment next door," he said. "It was loud, but I couldn't understand what he was saying. I would judge it to be angry."

Neighbor Barbara Huff said she heard "a lot of banging noises" and thought it was roof workers.

A little later, Westland paramedics rushed to The Orchards of Newburgh after police dispatcher Gail Lazosky got a 911 call from the apartment where Clark had been caring for Towne.

The caller, who didn't identify himself, told Lazosky that a child had stopped breathing while napping, and Lazosky tried to lead him through efforts to save the boy.

The caller's voice could be heard on a tape-recording played in court.

"Blood's coming out of his nose," the man's voice said.

"He's lifeless," he said at another point.

"It looks like he's dying," the man said on the phone. "Come on, Mike. Come on, buddy."

Howie testified that she knew something was wrong when she came home from work around 2:45 p.m. No one was at home, she said, even though her son's coat and shoes were there.

"Hassan would never take my baby out of the house without his shoes on," she said.

Hospital call

Howie learned the whereabouts of her son and her boyfriend after she called Oakwood Hospital/Annapolis in Wayne.

Westland police have said findings of a medical examiner raised questions about whether Towne may have been previously injured - prior to Jan. 14.

In court Monday, Howie's testimony indicated that her son was accident-prone. Wearing the boy's picture on a button pinned to her clothing, she said the child:

■ Had recently fallen off of a bed and hit the back of his head, causing a large bruise while visiting his grandmother (Clark's mother).

■ Had recently walked into a door, suffering a bruise above his eyebrows.

■ Had broken his left arm when he fell off of a bed in September.

When she last bathed the boy on Jan. 13, Howie said, "he had maybe a little bruise here, a little bruise there."

The child also had been suffering from chicken pox.

Howie testified Monday that Clark had seemed depressed and withdrawn since he was involved in a fatal car accident on Feb. 7, 1998.

Clark was accused of driving a car that crossed a center line and hit another vehicle head-on, killing Jessie Dwayne Ridner, a passenger in Clark's car.

Clark is awaiting trial on a charge of negligent homicide stemming from the accident.

On Monday, Howie conceded that she knew Clark's defense attorney, Steve Bullock, before she came to court. She conceded under questioning that she had previously asked for Bullock's advice about the fatal car accident.

suspects.

"He just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time," Westland police Lt. Marc Stobbe said Wednesday afternoon.

Only one suspect now faces charges for allegations of breaking into the bowling alley and stealing $200 from a cash register. A custodian heard the break-in and fled the building, police reports said.

Alerted to the break-in, Westland officers began trailing a stolen, 1988 Plymouth Voyager that pulled from the bowling alley parking lot and headed west on Ford at a high rate of speed, swerving through traffic and turning north on I-275, the reports said.

Some I-275 motorists "slammed to a sudden stop" to avoid hitting the van, which passed one semitruck on the left shoulder and - with headlights shut off - drove across a grassy median and headed south on the interstate, police said.

Briefly eluding police, the van was soon spotted by Canton officers at an I-275 rest stop near Palmer Road, where the Taylor pair got out of the vehicle, police reports said.

Using police dogs, Canton officers tracked suspects through a wooded area toward Lotz Road about the time that Westland Sgt. Jeff Trzybinski was hot on their trail in a residential area along Blue Springs Court, police reports said.

Officers eventually arrested two people nearby, including the Redford man and the Taylor woman who now have been released, police said.

As Trzybinski was outside of his vehicle, however, the remaining suspect managed to get inside of the police Explorer and flee in it, authorities said.

"As the Westland officer was attempting to arrest one of the (initial) suspects, a second suspect drove off in his patrol vehicle," a Canton press release said. "The suspect attempted to run over the Westland officer, who fired one shot at the suspect inside the vehicle."

In his own account, Trzybinski noted, "I was in fear in fear for my life as the vehicle was coming at a very dangerous rate (of speed) and I had no options to retreat ..."

As Trzybinski fired the shot, the suspect swerved and began driving through back yards along Blue Springs Court until reaching Palmer, where he headed west, reports said.

Officers at this point estimated that the suspect was driving at 90 mph.

Another pursuit began with officers chasing the suspect along Palmer, over the I-275 overpass and to Haggerty, where the suspect narrowly missed hitting several vehicles that swerved out of his way, police said.

The suspect then drove south on Haggerty, but one of the vehicle's front tires "began falling apart," reports said. The suspect then swerved off the road and across a field.

One police car in pursuit then intentionally hit the getaway vehicle, causing it to spin, and the suspect was arrested after officers struggled to bring him under control, the reports said.

One report said the man was "swinging his arms wildly." Officers eventually used pepper spray to control him.

On Wednesday, Byrl Green, 28, of Taylor was arraigned in front of Westland 18th District Judge C. Charles Bokos on charges of assault with intent to murder, breaking and entering; receiving and concealing the stolen van; felony fleeing and eluding; and motor vehicle theft.

A not-guilty plea was entered for Green, who was jailed in lieu of a $1 million cash bond as he awaits a March 11 hearing.

He could face life in prison if convicted as charged.

Mayor, city council to see pay raises this year, next

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER
dclem@oe.homecomm.net

New pay increases for Westland Mayor Robert Thomas will push his salary over the $90,000 mark by next year.

His current salary will climb from $84,452 to $90,465 when raises of 4 percent this year and 3 percent in 2000 are compounded.

That's not all he will receive, though.

Thomas, a former public services department worker, also gets longevity pay of $100 for each year he has been a city employee, amounting to $2,900 this year.

Thomas on Monday called his salary increases fair, saying they are in line with wage-hike percentages received by other city employees in the latest round of contract negotiations.

Westland City Council members also will receive pay raises of 4 percent and 3 percent, respectively, during the two-year period, although their earnings will remain below $13,000.

Mayoral and council pay levels are established by an independent, seven-member Local Officers Compensation Commission, which issues new recommendations every other year.

LOCC-proposed raises become automatic unless the council votes not to accept them.

Council members two years ago rejected pay raises for themselves, but didn't try to block mayoral salary increases.

On Monday, council members discussed pay increases even though they could've chosen to publicly ignore the issue.

Councilman Glenn Anderson said he wanted pay raises mentioned publicly so that city residents could see how their elected officials are dealing with the issue.

"I do think the increases are reasonable," he said, joining other council members in a 7-0 vote of support.

Councilman Richard LeBlanc also said he wanted a public airing of the pay plans, although he considered them fair.

"In my opinion, what is happening here is OK," he said, but added, "I didn't want (the raises) to take effect without us having authority over it."

Mayoral salary increases will boost that office's pay above the $129,000 mark for the first time ever.

Council pay levels climb more slowly because those positions are considered part time, although some council members say they work virtually full time at their elected jobs.

During the next two years, the council president's position will increase in pay from $12,107 to $12,968. Sandra Cicirelli currently occupies the seat.

The second-in-command president pro tem post will increase in pay from $11,560 to $12,382. Sharon Scott now holds the position.

Five other council seats will have pay levels climb from $11,012 to $11,795. Currently occupying those seats are Anderson, LeBlanc, Justine Barns, Charles "Trav" Griffin and Charles Pickering.

tion. Councilmen Glenn Anderson and Richard LeBlanc voted against the measure, saying its timing was questionable because the council hadn't earlier agreed to start a study.

"I don't think we had convincingly reached a decision as a body that this is where we wanted to go right now," Anderson said.

Just one month ago, Mayor Robert Thomas announced that he was abandoning his vision for a new city complex and recreation center near the northwest corner of Ford Road and Central City Parkway, behind the Kroger store.

He blamed stalled talks on a huge gap in what the city was willing to pay for the land and what property owners demanded.

But Thomas said Monday that city leaders still are considering other sites for the two buildings, along with possible plans to renovate City Hall or tear it down and rebuild on the same site.

TMP's study is expected to take 10 to 12 weeks, and Thomas said the company will likely issue a report saying whether new construction or renovation would be most feasible.

LeBlanc said, "I believe we are jumping the gun on this a little bit."

TMP will perform an analysis of City Hall to determine what renovations would be necessary for the building to meet long-term city needs.

The company also will study whether it would be better and more cost-effective to renovate the building or consider new construction.

"This building is over 30 years old," Thomas said, adding that it has many deficiencies that could be costly to address.

The study will be paid from revenues in a special taxing district, or Tax Increment Finance Authority area, north of Ford Road.

Some council members said the study may be an improper use of TIFA dollars if the city ends up constructing new buildings south of Ford Road.

LeBlanc said he also is concerned about how the public will perceive the latest study.

Thomas last month had indicated that the TIFA district didn't appear to contain a piece of property large enough to accommodate a new administration building and recreation center.

Bidders on auction items boost scholarship funds

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER

How much are you willing to pay for a weekend getaway at the historic Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island? How about a Florida vacation? Dinner for 40? Madonna University is hoping to get people's competitive juices flowing at its 11th annual "Around the World Scholarship Dinner Auction" at 5:30 p.m. Friday, April 16 in Laurel Manor, 39000 Schoolcraft.

The highest bidders will get to take home retired Beanie Babies, tickets for vacations, autographed sports memorabilia and more. The proceeds help provide scholarship funding for approximately 160 Madonna University students, according to Andrea Nodge, Madonna's director of marketing and public relations.

This year, part of the funding also will go toward making the residence hall handicapped-accessible, she said.

One auction-goer will become the owner of a brand-new Cadillac Sedan DeVille. No more than 750 raffle tickets will be sold at $200 each. If all 750 tickets are sold, $150,000 will be generated from the raffle alone.

Nodge said people go to the fund-raising auction for a variety of reasons but end up coming back for the entertainment.

"I think that when people come to a Madonna University auction it's for a higher purpose," Nodge said, referring to the fund-raising aspect. "But when they do come, they have some fun. It's a fun event with good camaraderie and a nice meal."

Proceeds from the auction will provide scholarship funding for Madonna University students and will support other projects, making higher education accessible to a diverse student body. The event will begin 5:30 p.m. with a silent auction followed by dinner and a live auction. The goal for this year's auction is $280,000.

MADONNA UNIVERSITY

The general admission ticket price is $75 and includes dinner, open bar and the live and silent auction. Gold Inner Circle Seating tickets are available for $125 and allow special seating near the center stage.

Auctioneer Dan Stall Jr. of Birmingham will field the bids. A sampling of the items up for bid include Northwest Airlines tickets to Hawaii and other destinations throughout the continental U.S., weekend getaways to the Stratford Festival in Ontario and the "Somewhere in Time Weekend" on Mackinac Island at the Grand Hotel; a weekend sailing trip on the award winning "Charisma" from Mackinac Island to Beaver Island; a cruise aboard the new "Infinity" yacht and several Florida vacations.

Also auctioned will be dinner for 40 at Under the Eagle Restaurant, $2,000 worth of advertising from the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, a 20-person suite with food and drinks for a Red Wings playoff game, and signed sports memorabilia from Ted Lindsay, Alex Delvecchio, Adam Oates and John Salley, among others. The auction will also include a wide selection of retired Beanie Babies.

Laura Frances Welling of Livonia, the reigning 1998 Miss Michigan and Ladywood High School graduate, will attend the auction.

The official sponsors of the 1999 auction are Don Massey Cadillac Inc., Northwest Airlines, Kimcraft Printers Inc. and Al Long Ford Inc.

Friends of Rouge seek groups to help with promotion of rivers, environment

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER

The Friends of the Rouge want everyone to think about rivers on June 5.

The 14-year-old organization is looking for groups interested in initiating environment-oriented activities on that date, dubbed "Rouge River Day."

The Friends of the Rouge will sponsor its annual Rouge River cleanup, but this year that group and other volunteer organizations will expand the day's focus to include other Southeast Michigan rivers such as the Clinton, Detroit and Huron.

"We want to increase the number of opportunities to participate in activities on Rouge River Day," said Jim Graham, executive director of Friends of the Rouge. "Everything that might be remotely related to rivers or the environment is fair game."

Expanding the scope to include other watersheds was a positive step, he said.

"The fact that we're working together for the first time is very, very promising," Graham said. "There are ways we can share resources, not only on our own watershed."

Increased attention to the Rouge over the years has resulted in decreased fecal coliform bacteria caused by raw sewage and increased oxygen levels.

"The most dramatic improvement is that it looks a lot better," Graham said.

Upgraded separated sewer systems have also improved the river's health by ensuring that less sewage goes into it, he added.

Other local river communities are invited to sponsor a local event anytime on that date. Local community groups, businesses, scout troops, church groups, school groups, environmental clubs and others can organize a variety of community events to focus attention on water resources.

Ideas include nature hikes, storm drain stenciling, school yard cleanups, water quality monitoring, canoe trips, fishing events, park cleanup, invasive plant removal and photo contests.

Friends of the Rouge can provide support by matching groups with potential volunteers, donated materials and supplies.

Organizational meetings are planned for 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 24, and 10 a.m. Wednesday, April 14, at Henry Ford Community College's Dearborn Heights campus, 22586 Ann Arbor Trail, between Outer Drive and Warren. For more information, call (313) 792-9900.

High school students eligible for exchange program

High school students in grades nine, 10 and 11 are invited to apply to a statewide student exchange program that would take them to Shiga, Japan, for two weeks this summer.

The program is the Michigan-Shiga Student Exchange Program, sponsored by the Michigan Department of Education. Twenty Michigan students are selected to participate each year, and then paired with 20 Japanese students with similar interests.

The Michigan students will live with host families and attend school with the Shiga exchange students from July 1-17. Then, Sept. 11-26, the Japanese students will come here and spend two weeks with the Michigan families, attending school with their exchange students.

The cost of the program is approximately $1,600, which is based mainly on the cost of the round-trip tickets. Any student who is adventurous, likes to meet new people and is open-minded qualifies for the program. Knowledge of the Japanese language is helpful but not necessary. There is an orientation in early May to acquaint students and parents with Japanese customs and basic language.

Students interested in applying can receive an application and descriptive brochure from their high school counselor. For more information, call John Chapman at (517) 373-1262 or Jan Ridenour at (517) 224-6831.

Airport reorganization calls for parking oversight

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabr@comcast.net

David Katz, director of Detroit Wayne County Metropolitan Airport, has proposed an airport reorganization plan that will include a concessions and quality assurance division to oversee parking and food concessions.

He also has submitted a new airport parking contract to the county commission using the same operator whose practices were questioned in an audit released in December.

The new division is Katz's plan to resolve some of the problems with airport operations detailed in an audit released by Wayne County Auditor General Brendan Dunleavy.

Dunleavy said Wayne County should have received $1 million more in taxes for valet parking from 1992-97 from airport parking operator APCOA. Dunleavy also questioned the lack of competitive bidding or management approval of several expense items and the costs of lease agreements and parking machine maintenance. The audit report was approved Feb. 18 by county commissioners with an expected follow-up to be completed at a later date.

In an interview last week, Katz said the report brings up some "excellent" points and the airport is making "significant adjustments" since it was first released in December.

The report found certain practices in the airport parking operation could be reducing revenue to Wayne County's general fund.

Dunleavy said $1.1 million in parking taxes for Wayne County was underreported and $300,000 for the city of Romulus due to airport parking operator APCOA's practice of deducting labor costs from the valet parking receipts before calculating the parking tax.

Not only were parking taxes underreported, but interest revenue on parking tax receipts were not credited back to the airport and fees to parking operator APCOA were overpaid.

Under state law the parking operator is to collect a 30 percent airport parking tax on each vehicle using the service. "Our audit revealed that the operator was only paying taxes on about 25 percent of the total charge for valet parking," Dunleavy reported.

Airport officials told auditors they have begun to calculate the tax on the full charge of valet parking, but also want a formal determination from the Michigan Department of Treasury before commit-

APCOA has nationwide experience

APCOA is based in Cleveland and has 46 years experience in the operation of airport automobile parking facilities.

It was formerly known as Airport Parking Company of America, but changed its name to APCOA in 1960. The company is a subsidiary of Holberg Industries Inc., a private, diversified service company.

APCOA currently operates nine airport facilities in a city or county with a population of over 1 million, including airports in the metropolitan areas or cities of Cleveland, Columbus, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Sacramento and San Jose. In the past five years, it has operated the Baltimore-Washington International, New Orleans International and Honolulu International airports.

It also manages more than 600 parking facilities serving downtown areas, shopping centers, sports complexes and stadiums and sports complexes. Currently its airport division manages more than 60 airport parking facilities in more than 35 states and Canada, ranging from small regional airports to large facilities.

It has operated at Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport since 1982. Williford Enterprises joined APCOA in 1996 as APCOA's joint venture partner in providing parking services at Metro with a percentage interest split 80 percent for APCOA and 20 percent for Williford.

Since the APCOA's contract expiration in 1991, the operator has continued to operate on an extension of the expired contract on a month-to-month basis. Wayne County entered into a three-year agreement on Oct. 1, 1988, with APCOA to manage and operate all on-site parking facilities at Detroit Metro.

David Katz, director of Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport, said he has sent to the Wayne County Commission a new contract with APCOA, after the airport accepted bids from companies. Katz said APCOA was the low bidder, but the contract has not been acted on yet by the commission.

Farmers facing tough markets sell out to developers

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER
trichard@oe.homecomm.net

They're usually optimists, but Michigan farmers may be facing a crisis due to low corn prices and suburban sprawl, a legislative committee was told.

"They're close to very, very difficult times," Ron Nelson of the Michigan Farm Bureau told the House Economic Development Committee March 2.

"Corn is selling at $1.75 a bushel, and it costs $2.50 to produce. Milk costs as much to produce as it sells for. It's going to be hard for farmers to pay interest on their loans," Nelson said.

He said "coffee house" chats indicate some are going out of business as pressure for development mounts, though they always expect this year will be good. "Assume farmland sells for $1,000 an acre - that's reasonable. For development, it may bring $10,000. Many farmers are deciding to cash out and try something else."

Committee chair Valde Garcia, R-St. Johns, raised the subject when he said he had heard two-thirds of farmers aren't making a profit and that agribusiness is "a year away from crisis."

Rep. Patricia Lockwood, D-Fenton, said, "Urban sprawl is a thread going through many communities." Urban sprawl means the eating up of open land, particularly farmland, at rates faster than justified by population growth.

Nelson cited an unidentified farm of 160 acres that was a "cow-calf" beef operation, but now is the site of 700 manufactured houses. "It won't be long before the rest (of surrounding farms) find it's too expensive to operate (as farms)," he said.

"For them, development makes perfect sense. It's two miles from the expressway. From the standpoint of agriculture, it makes no sense. Assessments will go up."

Proposal A of 1994 gives farmers some protection: Assessments can't rise faster than the rate of consumer price inflation. But if an aging farmer transfers the property to his children, they'll pay the higher assessments dictated by the real estate market.

Nelson said the concept of governmental purchase of development rights (PDR) has potential for saving farmland, but "can we purchase PDR for the entire state? There's not enough money."

Grand Traverse and Leelanau counties have inaugurated PDR programs to save farms, but Washtenaw County voters last year rejected the idea.

Nelson was asked what the state Jobs Commission, succes-or to the Department of Commerce, has done for farming. "The Jobs Commission is locked into new jobs," Nelson replied, but is doing less for in-state job transfers.

In other testimony before the House panel:

■ Kristi Clemens of the Grand Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce said there's a shortage of skilled workers for a "technology-driven global marketplace," and a need for government to ease business expansion in "brownfields" of older cities.

2 seats open on SC board

Nominating petitions are available for two seats, each for six-year terms, on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees for the upcoming biennial election of trustees on June 14.

Candidates must live in the Schoolcraft College district, which includes the school districts of Clarenceville, Garden City, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth-Canton and part of Novi. They also must be registered voters.

Petitions are available in the office of Schoolcraft President Richard McDowell in the Grote Administration Center and must be returned to the secretary by 4 p.m. Monday, April 12. The office is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

The signatures of not less than 50 nor more than 200 qualified voters are required for nominations. Candidates are asked to circulate petitions so that those signing any one petition are residents of a single school district. There is no charge for filing petitions.

The seats are currently held by Patricia Watson, who is board president and a Northville resident, and Greg Stempien, also of Northville and a Livonia attorney, who was appointed in January 1998 to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of John Walsh.

Trustees do not receive compensation.

Seminar to focus on study of Japan

Madonna University is one of eight U.S. colleges and universities chosen to participate in a yearlong seminar focused on Japan.

The seminar is offered through the Association of American Colleges and Universities to assist education centers in their efforts to become more global in their orientation and programs.

Twenty-four faculty members, three each from eight institutions, first attended a two-day orientation meeting in San Francisco in January.

Next, they will receive five months of on-campus study, followed by a three-week summer visit to Japan and a fall semester.

Madonna faculty participating are Kathleen O'Dowd, Ph.D., professor, literature; Denise St. Arnault, Ph.D., assistant professor, nursing; Dennis Bozyk, associate professor, history; Betty Jean Hebel, Ph.D., professor, marketing and chair, business graduate program, will serve as an alternate.

Each of the Madonna professors will concentrate on their particular discipline to learn how they can incorporate Japan-related content into the curriculum, O'Dowd said.

In July, when the faculty go to Japan, they will visit three or four major areas including Kyoto, Hiroshima and Tokyo and explore traditional, industrial, political-economic and regional aspects of Japan. They will also meet as a group with a variety of academic colleagues and other leaders in Japan.

By the end of 1999, each team will be expected to develop and share plans for the wider inclusion of Japan-related topics in curriculum. The work will be featured nationally through publications, web-site and conferences.

Others participating in the project are Baruch College-CUNY, Catholic University of America, Davidson College, Gustavus Adolphus College, Lincoln University, Swarthmore College and Wichita State University.

ting to pay the underreported amount.

Katz said the state treasurer, county commissioners and governor agreed with the airport in 1987 to levy the parking tax at a lesser amount. "The airport) did it because we wanted to minimize the impact to the citizens," Katz said.

"I'm not sure Brendan's right, he may be right. It depends on your interpretation of statute."

The money was collected for the parking tax, sent to Lansing and then sent to Wayne County.

Katz said APCOA acted properly with the tax.

"It's not some skullduggery. The money stayed here at the airport. The new (commission) wants us to tax the whole thing. The policy is to tax the whole $20."

Agreement questioned

Dunleavy questioned APCOA's 18-month lease agreements for which the firm is reimbursed by the airport. These agreements cost an average of $28,000 per vehicle, based on unlimited mileage. The auditor general's office discussed these leases with an independent dealer and obtained a quote for similar vehicle leases for comparison purposes.

"Based on the quote, it appears the airport could have leased the majority of these vehicles for an average of about $17,000 per vehicle. At this rate, the airport could be paying as much as $400,000 too much to lease the 37 vehicles."

The dealer also said the majority of these vehicles could have been purchased outright for an average price of about $21,000 each. Based on the auditor's work, the operator said they had begun replacing these leases for 16 of the 37 vehicles. New vehicle lease averages about $13,500 over the term of the agreement.

Dunleavy said the operator could not provide evidence that the leases were competitively bid. Katz said he has sent a letter asking for competitive bids from the airport operators.

"We also sent some equipment guys to Ford Motor Company to give us their assessment," Katz said. "We asked them 'Were they priced reasonably?'"

The lease agreement was priced high because liability costs are so high and so many miles are put on the vehicles, Katz said.

Practices conflict

During the audit, Dunleavy's staff identified several practices that conflict with county policies and ordinances.

"These practices include failure to employ sound business practices, including failure to obtain competitive bids and failure to adhere to the county's appropriations ordinance by extending an expired contract on a month-to-month basis over the last several years without notifying the commission."

Not obtaining competitive bids for significant purchases has several implications, Dunleavy said.

"We believe this contributed to the excessive cost reimbursed by the airport for airport parking operations, denied small and minority business owners an opportunity to compete for contracts and raises concern about the integrity of the contracting process employed by county vendors at the airport."

Katz said he recently issued a directive stating that contractors are to comply with all county procurement policies. He also will reorganize his department to ensure those policies are followed.

Under the county charter, County Executive Edward McNamara must propose to the county commission a reorganization plan at the beginning of his term. Katz said McNamara agrees with Katz's reorganization proposal and will present it soon to the commission, which has 60 days to approve or reject it.

Katz has proposed the reorganization to oversee third-party concessions, where contracted companies at the airport subcontracts with other firms for purchases or services.

"We'll have a parking director to take care of customer service and a management initiative," Katz said.

Since the APCOA's contract expiration in 1991, the operator has continued to operate on an extension of the expired contract on a month-to-month basis. Wayne County entered into a three-year agreement on Oct. 1, 1988, with APCOA Inc. to manage and operate all on-site parking facilities at Detroit Metro.

Katz said his office had the parking contract ready for bid "months and months ago."

"We held it back and waited until the audit was completed. We didn't want to jam it down their throats, and we wanted to wait, out of respect for the commission and the auditor general."

Once again, APCOA has submitted the lowest bid, at about one-third the price of the other bidders, Katz said. That bid has been submitted to the commissioners. "That shouldn't surprise anyone. They know the business."

Katz admitted he needs to be more timely with his contracts to the commission, and he also informed the contractors he wanted subcontracts competitively bid.

"When in doubt, bid it out.

There were a lot of contracts that expired (23 or 24) or are going to lapse. There's just a couple left."

High maintenance

Dunleavy's review of the separate maintenance agreement also revealed what appears to be excessive charges for the maintenance of four of the 18 machines used to collect parking fees from customers.

For those four machines, maintenance and repair costs are estimated to be at least $168,000 annually, or $42,000 for each machine. For $40,000, a new machine can be purchased.

Katz said new machines were not purchased because officials were uncertain of the final location of the proposed South Access Road, which is being constructed as part of the airport expansion. One machine has been replaced; three others will be within 60 days.

Next week: Katz reviews his first year at the helm and expansion plans.

reading classes. REAP uses a "whole language" approach, said Sister Mary Duane, director of the Learning Center.

"We create a language-rich environment where the children are encouraged to explore, to experiment and to take risks," Sister Duane said. "Children are encouraged to engage in activities that use language in meaningful and purposeful ways."

The hourlong after-school sessions are held Monday through Thursday. Each student attends one per week. Summer sessions also are available.

Parents or guardians pay $14 per hour for 2-1 sessions and $17 per hour for one-on-one sessions, which are taught in small cubicles. Initial informal reading tests cost $85. Madonna University is privately funded, so scholarships are not available, according to Sister Duane.

The costs, which basically only cover overhead expenses, are very reasonable compared to other tutoring programs, she said.

Parent and volunteer Margaret Hakun of Canton saw a big difference with her son, Michael, 11. When he was 7, he was struggling with reading. He spent about four years in the program.

"It was a wonderful experience," Hakun said. "He started feeling much more self-confident about his reading. He became more comfortable with it."

Now Hakun is working toward an education degree at Eastern Michigan University.

Parental involvement like Hakun's is very important, according to Sister Duane.

"Any time parents are involved in school programs and projects, those programs will be successful," she said.

"Our purpose is really to allow (children) to gain faculty in word recognition, vocabulary development, reading comprehension and writing."

Madonna advertises the program at area schools. REAP students come from public and parochial schools from across metro Detroit.

Hearing success stories from the parents is the most rewarding part.

"The big joy of the program is when we have parents come back to tell us how much their child has improved in reading and writing," she said.

People interested in volunteering as tutors should call Madonna's Learning Center at (734) 432-5586.

Mom, co-worker ready to walk for Abby

BY HEATHER NEEDHAM
STAFF WRITER

Compared to aggressive chemotherapy treatments, hair loss, kidney failure, strokes and numerous drug therapies, walking 26.2 miles is a cinch.

That's according to Gisele St. Louis-Woolsey, whose daughter Abby, 8, was diagnosed with leukemia in October 1997.

St. Louis-Woolsey is training about five days a week for the Leukemia Society of America Team in Training Marathon in May.

"I know this marathon will probably be the most physically challenging event of my lifetime and yet it seems so small a feat in comparison to the challenges that Abby has faced," St. Louis-Woolsey wrote in a fund-raising letter to friends and family.

After watching her daughter endure the numerous trials of leukemia, she decided the marathon was the thing to do. Though she has always been fitness-minded, preparing for the 26.2 mile walk was new territory.

"It's a real commitment," she said. "If you don't follow the training schedule, you're not ready for it."

For the past four weeks, she has been gradually adding mileage to her walks with co-worker Diane Miller, who will walk the marathon with her. Their goal is to complete a 20-mile hike by the time they head out to San Diego.

Together they trek through Hines Park, Kensington Metropark near Milford and numerous spots in Livonia.

"It just makes you feel good," Miller said of the walks. "We've met a lot of new people."

At first the women dreaded taking outdoor walks in frigid winter conditions.

"Now we don't want to walk inside," St. Louis-Woolsey said.

Leukemia Society trainers have been coaching the women about diet, clothing, footwear and the training.

Miller said she had to return one pair of shoes because they hurt her feet. Running Fit, a Northville Township store, was helpful in finding shoes to fit her hard to fit size-5 feet.

work at Parisian at Laurel Park Place. St. Louis-Woolsey's co-workers have been helping spearhead fund-raising drives for the pair.

A fund-raiser a week ago generated $3,180. They each need to raise $3,600 by May 6. They have been sending out pledge cards to family and friends asking for contributions.

Right now Abby has no leukemia symptoms. She has been receiving aggressive treatment since her diagnosis.

Abby's problems came to light with a simple trip to the pediatrician.

"I thought she had the flu," St.

Louis-Woolsey said. Her symptoms included achy joints and fever, which are both common flu symptoms.

But the doctor noticed her spleen and liver were enlarged, which caused them to rule out influenza. Several blood tests ruled out other diseases, such as mononucleosis.

"A CBC (complete blood count) test pretty much told them what they needed to know," she said.

St. Louis-Woolsey said Abby started receiving treatment at Beaumont Hospital the next day. Along the way she has experienced strokes, kidney failure, hair loss, side effects from chemotherapy and medication and more. She has already missed a whole year of school and still periodically misses days here and there.

Last week, she was sidelined by a day-long doctor's appointment.

But she is in good spirits and recently went sledding, skiing and snowboarding in Colorado. She attends St. Michael Catholic School in Livonia.

"She's a strong kid, very strong," St. Louis-Woolsey said.

Facts about leukemia

Leukemia is a chronic or acute disease characterized by the rapid growth of mutated white blood cells. The mutated cells crowd out red blood cells and disease-fighting white blood cells, causing anemia and frequent infection.

It strikes people of all ages, but acute lymphocytic leukemia most commonly strikes children.

Some suspected factors in leukemia include benzene, which is used as a solvent and in making plastics, insecticides, detergents, paints and dyes; viruses, radiation and X-rays.

The main symptoms include anemia, weakness, chronic fatigue, high fever, bleeding without clotting, bruising easily, recurrent infection, joint aches and swollen lymph nodes, spleen and liver.

The main treatment for leukemia is chemotherapy and drugs. The main goal of treatment is to bring about complete remission, which means there is no evidence of the disease. A remission lasting five years or more after treatment is considered to indicate cure.

Another common treatment is a bone marrow transplant, where healthy bone marrow is injected into the bloodstream.

Other facts about leukemia:

■ Five-year childhood leukemia survival rates have increased from 4 percent in 1963 to 80 percent in 1993.

■ Childhood leukemia death rates have declined 57 percent over the past 20 years, but it still causes more U.S. deaths than any other disease in persons under 15.

■ Approximately 1,000 new leukemia cases were diagnosed in 1998 in Michigan and an estimated 800 died.

Sassafras snafu

Workers deserve recognition

A decision to cancel a ceremony honoring Sassafras Trails volunteers only serves to hurt the wrong people.

Wayne-Westland schools had planned to honor the people who worked to save Sassafras Trails, a wooded nature area northeast of Wildwood and Palmer in Westland, at a March 8 board ceremony.

But those plans veered off the trail late last month in what seems to be petty anger on the part of schools officials.

The district, which owns Sassafras Trails, worked with the Friends of Sassafras a couple of years ago. In 1997 the board agreed to protect about 51 acres of the nature preserve in return for receiving $520,000 from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

The plan also allowed for limited residential development adjacent to Sassafras Trails on the site of the former Wilson School.

About 35 invitations had been mailed out in February to citizen volunteers, state legislators, city leaders and local judges, asking them to attend the board ceremony. Included were Republican state Sen. Loren Bennett and Democrat state Reps. Eileen DeHart and Thomas Kelly.

But those plans abruptly changed when school board President David Cox canceled plans for the ceremony because of fears of a lawsuit from Sassafras Trails activist, Charles Johnson.

District officials in early February received a letter from an environmental attorney hired by Johnson, who believes the district has violated portions of its agreement to protect Sassafras Trails.

Issues concerning that agreement and whether the district held up its end of the bargain have been questioned by Johnson. He has raised several issues concerning the division of the property and the loss of what he considers key parts of Sassafras Trails to the part of the property sold to developers.

All that aside, though, Johnson has publicly announced his withdrawal from Friends of Sassafras Trails to raise these issues on his own.

While Cox has said the board shouldn't honor select Sassafras Trails volunteers while these issues are out there, we can't see why Johnson's actions are being used to punish the others who worked to save the trails.

Johnson is clearly acting on his own in pursuing issues that the members of Friends of Sassafras don't necessarily support.

It's 1999 and the Sassafras Trails workers haven't been honored by the district yet for a deal that was agreed to in 1997.

For the good image of the district, that ceremony should be held, despite Johnson's actions. Yes, Johnson and his issues are probably sticking the proverbial thorn in district officials' sides, but his actions don't change the good work of the rest of the people involved.

On the trails: In 1997 the Wayne-Westland school board agreed to protect about 51 acres of the Sassafras Trails nature preserve in Westland in return for receiving $520,000 from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

Rouge permits a great start

If western Wayne officials were to develop a slogan for the Rouge River, the motto should be "Let's work together."

Canton, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Redford Township are among 41 of 48 Rouge basin communities that have applied to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality for a voluntary stormwater permit. If approved by the DEQ, the communities have agreed to work to control illicit sewer connections and encourage public participation and public education programs. Communities remain concerned about the threats of federal mandates, while Wayne County officials and some communities are concerned over who oversees the project, but overall the regulatory agencies, the federal court and local communities have all worked well together.

The permit process was developed from the "bottom up" - a voluntary process for communities to address the stormwater runoff in cleaning the Rouge. Those permits were outlined and examined locally last year with input from communities and subwatershed groups of representatives of these local communities. Of course, U.S. District Judge John Feikens has prodded the communities along through the process with his threat of an authority to oversee the process, but the permits have shown that the communities are serious about cleaning the Rouge. At this point, the EPA and DEQ have not raised any serious objections about the permit applications.

The subwatershed groups have a long way to go to clean the river, but if this local, yet regional, approach continues with the same seriousness shown during the subwatershed meetings, then the stormwater runoff of road salt and chemicals that plague the Rouge can be controlled with enough time, effort and money.

The permit process is a great start to control the stormwater runoff and has helped snowball the local momentum behind the $1.3 billion Rouge River Wet Weather Demonstration Project.

We hope it continues.

Tobacco prevention dollars

Communities must sound off now on our tobacco settlement dollars. Yes, it is true. Gov. John Engler plans to use our tobacco settlement dollars for other than tobacco control that could protect our children from the addictive drug of nicotine.

Advocates, over the past eight years, have campaigned for the protection of our children from the tobacco industry through policy and law changes only to find out that when the payoff is at hand, no tobacco prevention and cessation are included in the distribution of tobacco settlement dollars.

We need at least $75 million per year allocated for tobacco control.

As taxpayers, we pay dearly for tobacco-related illness/disabilities for smokers who perhaps did not have access to cessation opportunities in order to quit the habit.

Our youth are still being subjected to secondhand smoke in restaurants and other places they seek employment.

There is so much work to be done in Wayne County in tobacco prevention. The community needs to be heard as we attempt to protect our children from starting to become addicted and encourage others to quit. We should all be outraged enough to say so.

Perpetual motion

Can Fed chairman Alan Greenspan keep the global economy and the U.S. stock market afloat simply by stuffing money into them? It's worked so far. Here's how:

The liquidity lessons that Greenspan learned during the 1987 crash were used successfully again last fall to keep the financial markets afloat. But, how long can Greenspan go on printing money?

Amazingly, the excess global capacity that all that new money has created is causing deflation in the real economy. And, of course, deflation is a darn good reason to keep printing even more money.

So, the more money that Greenspan prints, the more overbuilding of capacity takes place, and the lower prices go. Therefore, printing money causes deflation. Classical economics was wrong.

Of course, if prices go too low, businesses won't want to expand anymore. And the only ones wanting to borrow will be the poor who can't repay. That's called a liquidity trap.

But wait. The extra money could reasonably go into stock market speculation, causing a financial asset bubble. So, the more money Greenspan prints the higher stock prices go.

Eureka - a perpetual motion machine. Prosperity forever.

Religion is our culture

Your article on "Religion has a role in our culture" is right on target, Phil Power. It's good to have you say this with your voice of authority and your background and please don't give up on the subject. You're absolutely correct. We've just gone over the hill with trying to appease everybody when really we're missing the whole point of our whole culture, which is based, particularly in this country, on the whole Judeo-Christian ethic.

And you're right, children are learning the wrong kinds of things in the wrong kinds of places and at least in the schools we do have a role to play and religion, as you well know, is not excluded from the schools and our teaching. It is part of our culture.

OUR MISSION: "Because we publish community newspapers, we think about community journalism in a fundamentally different way than our bigger competition. They consider themselves to be independent from the stories and communities they cover, swooping in to write the unusual or sensational and then dashing off to cover something else. We regard ourselves as both accurate journalists and as caring citizens of the communities where we work."

POINTS OF VIEW

Standards need to apply to all people in our society

Admittedly, today times have changed. How often we hear that phrase. Those words are supposed to explain all the various actions people engage in that might seem difficult to explain to a reasoning mind. We pick and choose at a moment's whim to justify a particular behavior.

One of the loudest cries consistently heard is this is a country with "Freedom of Speech." We guard this freedom unquestionably, and use its "guidelines" to allow an extreme broad and at times immoral interpretation of what constitutes art.

But then, we challenge a person's right to utter personal opinions when we choose to expand our own feelings of being put upon. In a recent case - well-publicized - a man was ticketed for shouting some explicit bad language when he fell out of a canoe. It didn't matter that he was in the wide open spaces and had just experienced an embarrassing and at first instance a frightening accident.

He was judged violating the freedom of speech theory because a child was in the vicinity at the time. While this is judged immoral and unlawful due to an outdated, antiquated law still on the books, our television shows which are readily available for many young minds to see and accept, constantly use not only bad, offensive language, but expound immoral ideas, are allowed to broadcast on the basis of free speech.

We protect our freedom of speech and demand that that freedom must allow for anyone who chooses to say or defame our flag in any way they want, in the name of art or freedom, and yet, there have been numerous incidents when sports figures have uttered words that were unpopular with various groups, which resulted with those celebrities being forced to vacate prestigious jobs or positions or having their reputations challenged and ruined because they had a slip of the tongue at an unguarded moment.

Our judges and prosecutors will uphold obsolete laws they personally choose to, while picking out the silliness and modern inappropriate meaning in other laws. In Michigan recently, while one judge was fining the man for his vulgar words in the open air, citing the old law, another judge throws out of court another old law that cited adultery as unlawful because of the modern attitude toward affairs of the heart.

Our politicians use their offices and standing to back their own party and back their own constituents just because they belong to a political group. We have recently seen that in our own country. Whatever the facts or interpretation of the wording, our Constitution was founded as a guide and principle for all to live by, and each situation should be judged on the merits or weakness of the act, and not by whether a Whig, Democrat or Republican committed the act.

We see our state and national representatives challenging the wisdom and advisability of raising the minimum wages, on the basis that it might not be the feasible thing for the economy, but at the same time, they vote a substantial wage hike for themselves.

The time has come for there to be a uniform interpretation of matters for the common good. If language is wrong, it is wrong. If we are insisting to pursue and demand abiding to a law regarding speech that is on the books, we must also uphold other laws regarding extramarital affairs, and any other outdated law that still exists.

Deceptive business practices good reason to slam Ameritech

My knuckles are still raw from the last beating inflicted on Ameritech Michigan, the unfriendly telephone company that loves to fire people and tie them up in court with interminable appeals.

Duty calls, however, because Ameritech is still at it, this time losing before the Michigan Public Service Commission and the state Court of Appeals. The court opinion is 10 pages of legalisms. In sum, the terms "misleading," "false," "deceptive" and "anticompetitive" pop up with frightening frequency.

The unanimous, bipartisan Feb. 12 opinion is signed by Stephen Markman and Robert Young Jr. (Engler appointees) and Helene White (Clinton's designee for a federal slot). It finds that "Ameritech sent a misleading and anti-competitive bill insert to its customers in violation of the Michigan Telecommunications Act." That's fascinating because insiders say Ameritech's lobbyists drafted the act. In December 1995, we all received an insert in our Ameritech bills headlined "DON'T GET SLAMMED." Slamming is the practice of some long-distance providers of billing you for services you never ordered. The insert invited us to fill out a form to avoid slamming for "long-distance or other telecommunications services."

Here the plot thickens. The notice doesn't differentiate between inter-LATA (long distance) and intra-LATA (local area code calls for which we pay long-distance rates).

Sprint complained to the MPSC. It seems that on Jan. 1, 1996, competition was to be allowed for intra-LATA calls. The bill insert "does not remind customers that Ameritech Michigan was required to implement intra-LATA to dialing parity for 10 percent of its customers on Jan. 1, 1996, and that local service would soon be available from other providers," MPSC said.

TIM RICHARD

Here's the trick: If you signed the slammer protection notice, you couldn't authorize Sprint, MCI or AT&T to be your short long-distance provider. The competitors would be unable to inform Ameritech that you wanted a change. You would have to notify Ameritech yourself to make a change.

MPSC ruled that the competitors feared Ameritech "will delay requests from customers to change providers and that it will use the contact as an opportunity to try to dissuade the customers from leaving Ameritech ... (There's ample evidence that Ameritech Michigan understood the bill insert to be anticompetitive and intended it to have that effect.)

MPSC ordered Ameritech to make remedies, including a corrective bill insert and easier changes in service providers. MPSC also sought to send the case file to the attorney general "for review of possible action under the Michigan Consumer Protection Act." (It will be fun to see if Attorney General Jennifer Granholm remembers her "I'll take your case" political speech and prosecutes Ameritech vigorously.)

Ameritech's lawyers threw up all sorts of arguments, every one of which was shot down by the Court of Appeals. One was Ameritech's customer survey purporting to show that customers correctly understood the insert. MPSC found the survey "self-serving and unrealistic," having "fundamental flaws due to the nature of the questions, the tone of the interviews and people excluded from the sample." The court agreed.

The court also rejected Ameritech's defense of "free speech," saying, "False, deceptive or misleading advertising is subject to restraint ..."

Will Ameritech fold its tent like a good corporate citizen, stop the appeals, obey the MPSC order and take its punishment from the attorney general like a man? Its behavior in other cases suggests Ameritech will appeal forever.

If Ameritech appeals, then I propose the stockholders not be stuck with the legal bill. The lawyers' costs should come from President Bob Cooper's bonus and salary.

Misleading. Deceptive. False. Anticompetitive. Ameritech.

Comerica does Michigan proud as a first-rate corporate citizen

For those of us with long memories and sentimental hearts, the last quarter century has been a rough time for Michigan institutions.

Remember Vernors ginger ale? In my memory, Vernors was the essential ingredient for a proper ginger ale float. I still recall being driven by my parents to the big green and yellow plant on Woodward, while being instructed about just why Vernors was so much better than Canada Dry.

Sadly, Vernors has been gone for a long time. More recently, Stroh's got sold to Heileman and Miller. My childhood memories of beer and Ernie Harwell announcing the ball games on the radio run from Goebel (also disappeared) to Stroh's. I don't listen to baseball much any more, but I always bought Stroh for sentiment's sake and because Peter Stroh and his family were exemplars of what good, decent, locally responsible people ought to be.

And by now everybody who isn't taking intensive German lessons knows full well that what we used to know as Chrysler is now something called DaimlerChrysler.

The old names, very often associated with old families, aren't much with us any longer.

Which is why it's nice to celebrate a business with a solid name that's intensely focused on Michigan, that looks like it'll be around for a while and that has helped countless local businesses. I'm referring to Comerica, the oldest and largest bank in Michigan, that will celebrate its 150th anniversary on Friday.

Originally chartered in 1849 as the Detroit Savings Fund Institute and then better known as the Detroit Bank & Trust, Comerica assumed its present name in 1982. In 1992, Comerica merged with Manufacturers National Corp.

The merger was difficult. The "reds" (old Comerica employees) were interlarded with the "blues" (ex-Manufacturers staffers) in such a way as to perpetuate for years the competition between the two.

The stock price fell, and for a time Comerica looked as though it would be taken over and move out of Michigan in just the same way that the National Bank of Detroit got taken over and moved to Chicago by First Chicago-NBD Bank Corp.

But CEO Eugene Miller (a "red") and President Mike Monahan (a "blue") moved quickly. They eliminated poor risk loans, expanded branches throughout the region and redeployed their capital. The stock responded and has now appreciated so much as to make Comerica nearly takeover-proof.

Having an independent, well-managed bank with a solid focus on providing banking services to Michigan businesses and households is vitally important to the future of our state. Though the folks at First Chicago-NBD will deny it till the cows come home, that bank has no more particular interest in Michigan than it has in any other state.

It's too bad. But that's life, and that's what happens when a big local company gets merged with a bigger nonlocal company and moves away.

But not (so far) at Comerica. The bank has been one of the most civic-minded corporations in the entire southeastern Michigan region, generous in its donations to charities and forthcoming in its willingness to assign top executives to worthwhile causes. Coupled with its excellent business performance, that's an outstanding record for any company, locally based or not.

Here's tall, cold one (a Stroh's, of course) hoisted to Comerica's 150th. I hope they'll be a solid, Michigan-oriented company for many, many years to come.

Griffith, SC dean, cited for leadership in continuing ed

Ronald Griffith, dean of educational services, will be honored by the National Council for Continuing Education and Training, receiving its Regional Leadership Award for the North Central Region. He will receive the award at the NCCET national conference in Milwaukee, Wis., in October.

Griffith will receive the award for his "contributions to continuing education in your region and because you exemplify the qualities of leadership that NCCET hopes to promote among continuing education professionals," wrote Ruth L. Prather, president of the NCCET Board of Directors.

"No one has done more to strengthen the bond between the colleges within a region and the Council than you have. Your ability to raise awareness of the value of continuing education professionals, their place in the community college organization, and their contribution to their community in your region is appreciated."

Griffith, a Plymouth Township resident, came to Schoolcraft in 1971 as director of community services and was named dean of the department in 1975. He was named dean of continuing education and community services in 1977 and dean of educational services in 1984. In 1997-98, the student unduplicated head count for CES and the Business Development Center enrollment, all of which report to him, was more than 17,000. The programs serve students from infants through senior citizens.

The NCCET, the oldest affiliate of the American Association for Community Colleges, provides leadership for continuing education, workforce development and community services professionals within community, technical and junior colleges.

Former dean honored by S'craft board

Sirkka Gudan, former assistant dean for academic and assessment services at Schoolcraft College, received emeritus status from the Schoolcraft Board of Trustees.

A West Bloomfield resident, Gudan initiated, organized and developed the Learning Assistance/Assessment Center at Schoolcraft and has been a leader in the field of student assessment; publishing research and conducting presentations statewide and nationally.

The Learning Assistance Center offers academic support to students and community members through tutoring and study skills instruction. The Assessment Center offers comprehensive testing for students, faculty, businesses, groups and individuals.

In the L A C, G u d a n established collaborative programs among departments to support at-risk students, pairing reading and study courses with content courses such as English, biology and electronics, often using students who successfully completed a course to tutor students currently taking the

It's about time to have a 'Get It Right' Day

What do Dr. Seuss, a recipe for rye bread, a Southfield man with a tattoo and the Texas state song have in common?

They all represent reasons why we need to observe something that I'd call "National Get It Right Day." Let me explain.

A couple of weeks ago, The Boss asked if I would write an editorial page piece on March being "National Reading Month."

"And could you tie it in with Dr. Seuss?" she asked. I gave her a funny look and said, "Uh, yeah, sure."

So I got on the Internet and do a search on "National Reading Month." I got a few hits, but most of them were from 1998 or earlier and they were mostly references on elementary school Web sites. I did find a press release on Michigan Gov. John Engler's Web site in which he proclaimed March 1998 to be "National Reading Month" in Michigan. But nothing for 1999.

"I can't find anything about March being 'National Reading Month,'" I told The Boss.

"Well, it is in Livonia," one editor said.

"And it is in Westland," said another.

The sources of this information turned out to be press releases from various elementary schools which made reference to Dr. Seuss and to March being "Reading Month." Nothing about it being "National" and no indication of who decided that March should get this designation.

Another press release from a local university made the Dr. Seuss connection. March 2 would have been his 95th birthday and the university had some events planned to commemorate that date in connection with the "America Reads Program."

So I got back on the Net. A little bit better luck this time. A search brought me to the National Education Association's home page, where I learned that the NEA was promoting Dr. Seuss celebrations on March 2 as part of its "Read Across America" program.

This must be it

This had to be what all those press releases were talking about, even though the one from the university had the name of the program wrong and the NEA site made no mention of March being "Reading Month," national or otherwise. But at least now I had something to work with.

I decided to do a bit more Internet research on Dr. Seuss to help with the piece I was supposed to write. It was fascinating.

According to the Associated Press' obituary, Dr. Seuss "wrote and illustrated" 47 books that were translated into 18 languages. The Grolier Encyclopedia Web site placed the number of books at 48 and the number of languages at 20. Another site hedged and just said that he wrote more than 45 children's books.

A frequently told anecdote is the one about Dr. Seuss' first book being rejected by numerous publishers before it was finally accepted. The number of publishers who rejected the book was either 28, 29 or 43, depending on whose information you accept. And he started writing children's books in either the 1930s, '40s

Gathering together

STAFF PHOTOS BY TOM HAWLEY

Come on in: Brenda Hoffman of Northville (center) meets Suburban West Community Center director Bill Hart and Alice Ming, director of rehabilitation services, at the front door of The Gathering Place Clubhouse in Livonia.

Mentally ill find 'community'

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER
smason@oe.homecomm.net

Like Judy Collins' 1968 hit song, Brenda Hoffman has looked at life from both sides now. Sitting in the Suburban West Community Center in Redford, she speaks openly about her life before and after being diagnosed with chronic depression.

The Northville resident had depressive tendencies when she was young, but shrugged them off as being a teenager. But she couldn't do that after having a baby. For more than a year, she stayed in her house, with the drapes closed, and didn't get dressed. On the verge of committing suicide, she was committed to a hospital.

When she lost her insurance, she turned to Suburban West for help. The staff at its Canton office sent her to the "clubhouse." Hoffman admits she didn't like it at first, but today is an ardent supporter.

"I've seen a great change," she said. "That might be why when I first came to Suburban West I felt funny. After about two weeks, I realized it (the clubhouse) was a godsend."

"If it weren't for the caring calls, I might lay in bed until my husband takes me in or something happens. It's why I consider them my family."

Suburban West provides services to mentally ill people like Hoffman in Redford, Livonia, Plymouth, Canton and Northville as a contractual agency for the Detroit-Wayne County Mental Health Board. The Gathering Place Clubhouse is its psychosocial rehabilitation program and is modeled after Fountain House in New York.

The clubhouse offers it 85 members experiences that help them function in their communities and decrease the need for hospitalization. Members take an active role in its operation, cooking food for the coffee shop, doing clerical work, helping in the library or doing maintenance.

Known as Robert J to his friends - clubhouse members only use an initial in lieu of their last name - Robert Johnson was "looking for a better opportunity" when he walked into the clubhouse. Six years later, the Plymouth resident is a leader in the drop-in center and like Hoffman sits on Suburban West's Board of Directors.

"I was looking to better myself," said Johnson, who also suffers from mental illness. "I try to take advantage of the opportunities presented to me and help my fellow members. As time has gone on, things have blossomed for me at the center."

Good things to hear

Bill Hart smiles when he hears what Hoffman and Johnson have to say. They are a testimonial to the 20 years of service Suburban West has been providing to its consumers.

"The clubhouse is one of our service programs where the consumers and staff work together," said Hart, Suburban West's executive director. "Every member contributes to its continuing development and growth."

"When this program started, it was a very structured partial day program; the staff determined the program and they were the professionals," added Alice Ming, director of rehabilitation services. "Now it's staff and member-run. The consumers have a part in every decision that is made. The staff and the consumers work together, even in hiring new staff."

"There are no closed meetings. The consumers are a part of everything."

Originally affiliated with Northville Psychiatric Hospital as an aftercare clinic, Suburban West currently has 621 consumers in its outpatient. Assertive Community Treatment, psychosocial rehabilitation and case man-

Suburban West focuses on its consumers

Incorporated as a private nonprofit community mental health agency in 1978, Suburban West Community Center provides consumers living in the Redford, Livonia, Canton, Plymouth and Northville areas with:

■ Outpatient treatment of psychiatric disorders. Treatment is geared toward prevention of rehospitalization, elimination of symptoms, reduction of negative personal and social effects of hospitalization and enhancement of personal skills and growth.

■ Assertive Community Treatment - The program's primary goals are to prevent rehospitalization and to maximize the consumer's community adjustment while decreasing dependency. Services include around-the-clock crisis intervention, training in daily living skills, mental health education, advocacy with landlords and other community resources, chemotherapy and individual counseling.

■ Case Management/Hospital Liaison Program - The program has two components. The hospital liaison program is designed to offer a more continuous flow of treatment to people being discharged to Suburban West from community and state hospitals.

The case management component is designed to facilitate access to community services like housing, medical services and vocational rehabilitation to help the consumer achieve a maximum level of independence while reducing the likelihood of rehospitalization.

■ Psychosocial Rehabilitation Program - The Gathering Place Clubhouse in Livonia is a psychosocial rehabilitation program that provides experiences that help members function in their community and decrease the need for hospitalization. Members are encouraged assume productive roles in the program through the Clerical, Food Service and Member Services units.

■ Counseling Center West - The program provides services to adult consumers who have never been hospitalized and who aren't currently at risk for hospitalization. Individual, couples and family counseling are available for emotional, behavioral and stress-related problems.

■ Suburban Nights - A consumer-run drop-in center in Livonia, Suburban Nights is operated by a consumer advisory council and Suburban West. It's open 4:30-9 p.m. Monday-Friday and 12:30-9 p.m. Saturday at the

You can raise helpful, cooperative children

PARENTING
AWARENESS MONTH

JANET TROST

For many parents, one of the most exciting victories in raising children is getting them to cooperate.

On the flip side, one of the most frustrating experiences is when they don't. Most parents feel like "drill sergeants" at one time or another, simply barking orders and listening to children complain or resist helping. There is hope, however, if a few simple suggestions are followed.

■ Create a cooperative environment: Parents set the tone for behavior in every home. By showing children what is expected, cooperative behavior is easier to achieve. When your child asks for help, be willing to provide the help with a positive attitude. It's very important to demonstrate cooperation with your spouse or other adults in your home. This will be the example that children will follow. We all work harder for people who inspire the best in us.

■ Use humor whenever possible: Parents who are fun, who are caring and who show respect, motivate children. Joking around with your children to get their cooperation can create a lighter atmosphere, one more apt to yield a positive response.

Amidst chuckles, school-aged children to teens are more likely to acknowledge your cleverly worded and cleverly placed requests.

■ Understand normal development in children: All children go through various stages as they grow. At times children may appear to be uncooperative when, in fact, they are simply acting their age.

No one expects an infant to put his arms through the sleeves of a T-shirt because they are simply incapable of doing so. The same may be said of expecting a 2-year-old to follow a request that has multiple steps.

The challenge comes as children get older and we know they are capable of following directions, but they choose not to. This is a common problem with 9- and 10-year-olds who don't want to brush their hair, let alone their teeth!

Teenagers may prefer to spend time alone in their room rather than politely visit with their grandparents. Although these behaviors don't have to be accepted by parents, it is helpful to know that they are normal and special consideration needs to occur to ensure cooperation.

Perhaps you'll shorten the visit to grandma's house by an hour so your teen can meet her friends at the movies. Talking to other parents with children of similar age or reading about child development helps to prepare parents for difficult stages.

■ Put it in writing: Many parents avoid the feeling of constantly pleading for help by putting their expectations in writing. Even small children can understand job lists or house rules, if they are illustrated with pictures as well as words. This will be even agement programs. It has offices and facilities in Redford, Livonia and Canton and has earned a reputation in the mental health system as a provider of quality services, a distinction buoyed by an accreditation with commendation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Mental Health Organizations.

In its early years, Suburban West provided general outpatient treatment, primarily for people who had been in psychiatric hospitals in the past, and crisis intervention. In 1985, it added ACT, taking treatment to consumers in their homes and other settings.

In 1986, case management was added to link consumers who had been hospitalized more than once with needed services in their communities.

The partial day program started 12 years ago, when consumers were receiving more passive activities. Its evolution to the clubhouse started in 1987. Open 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday-Friday, members like Hoffman and Johnson provide the talent to keep it running smoothly.

The drop-in center picks up after the clubhouse closes. Open 4-9 p.m. Monday-Friday and noon to 9 p.m. Saturday, it's staffed completely by the consumers and clubhouse membership isn't a prerequisite for dropping in.

"Some members are here from 8 in the morning to 9 at night," said Ming. "The old program couldn't operate without the staff; this one can't run without the consumers."

Suits their needs

While Johnson helps out in finances before switching over to a waiter at lunchtime, Kimberly B and Marty B, both Redford residents, are part of the kitchen staff on a regular basis.

Kimberly has been a member for 5 1/2 years, Marty for 10. A bit on the shy side, both admit they like the program, with Marty adding that it suits his needs.

"It was a partial day program when I first came," he said. "I like this better."

Hart points out that a lot has changed in the 20 years Suburban West has been in business. Back then, it wasn't unusual for a hospital stay to span months or years. Now, it's evolved into a contract with private hospital for a stay of eight-12 days.

And the change goes beyond the treatment. Twenty years ago, the mentally ill were called patients because of the hospital-based treatment. Then they became clients and 10 years ago, they became consumers "when clients started speaking out to remove the stigma," Hart said.

"It reflects the consumer voice in the services," he added. "They are now consumers of mental health services."

Now, Suburban West is positioning itself for more changes in the mental health arena. The implementation of managed care and discussions about reducing the number of catchment (service) areas to keep costs under control may be viewed as threats by some, but Hart sees them as an opportunity.

The agency recently developed a semi-independent living program to offer apartments (16 in all) with support services to people leaving adult foster care or their parents' homes and making the transition to independent living.

Its Counseling Center West in Canton offers individual, couple and group therapy for people with less serious problems and the agency is looking for a partnership to provide a residential program.

"I like to think that we do it better than the others," Hart said. "The one thing about Suburban West is that it always has been very consumer-oriented and people-oriented."

or '50s.

Dr. Seuss was a pseudonym, of course. His real name was Theodor Seuss Geisel, except in "Carol Hurst's Children's Literature Newsletter," in which she devotes three pages to an essay on the man, yet misspells his first name as "Theodore," the common spelling, but not the way he spelled it.

There was much more misinformation out there, on sites thrown together by fervent, if careless, Seuss fans to an official Random House site, not to mention that Grolier Online page.

As for the rye bread

Now you can cluck your tongue and blame it on the vagaries of the Internet, but that doesn't explain those errant press releases or the rye bread recipe.

That came out of the new edition of Bernard Clayton's "Complete Book of Breads." I was whipping up a batch of Old Milwaukee Rye, when I realized that yeast was not listed as an ingredient. I still had the original edition, with the stained pages and ripped cover, so I dug it out of the bookcase and checked the recipe there. Yep, it called for yeast. Somehow that ingredient got left out in the revision.

And the Texas state song? It's "Texas, Our Texas." But a booklet being sold by McDonald's restaurants to commemorate Black History Month incorrectly states that the Texas state "anthem" is "The Yellow Rose of Texas." The booklet also contains other inaccurate information about the history of the state.

From press releases to booklets to books to Internet sites, it's getting more and more dangerous to believe what you read. People throw things together carelessly, without checking their facts, and absolutely without double- or triple-checking. And all of this occurred to me as I was looking for information on the man who has been picked to encourage kids to read.

So where does the tattooed man fit into this picture? The ex-Marine walked into a Roseville tattoo parlor to get the word "villain" tattooed on his forearm. But since neither he nor the tattoo artist knew how to spell it, it came out "villian." When his friends saw it they laughed and started making fun of him. He wore long-sleeve shirts to cover up the artwork until he had plastic surgery to remove it altogether. He's suing the tattoo parlor for $25,000.

But there may be a lesson here. Those tattoo artists and all the other purveyors of misinformation should get tattoos on the backs of their hands, so that when they sit down at a keyboard or take up a tattoo needle, the message stares up at them: "Get It Right!"

more effective if the children help develop the list with their parents.

The key is to be consistent in enforcing rules and consequences. If a child violates a rule, parents can save the nagging and simply point to the rule list. Everyone will understand the message, and no one will have to listen to an unwanted lecture.

Allow natural and logical consequences: Allowing children to make their own choices helps them to learn from consequences. Some children need to learn from their mistakes. By the same token, they also learn from their successes.

Parents can help children by asking them to think through a choice and imagine what the outcome will be before they act. They can also look for opportunities to point out how the choice to cooperate can have positive results.

For example, point out that the extra time the child saved you by helping you rake leaves means the two of you are free to do a fun activity that your child enjoys.

Encourage team play: Enrolling children in group activities, such as sports or scouting, will also reinforce the concept of working together for a common goal. They'll learn that cooperation is part of everyday life and not just an expectation found at home.

Teaching children to cooperate is an important lesson. It helps children now and throughout their lives. Cooperation also helps make your home a happier, more loving place to live.

Garden City BPW benefit helps fund scholarships

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

Wonder where the money raised at this year's sixth annual Garden City Business and Professional Women "Parade of Fashion" fashion show and luncheon goes?

Back into community causes like scholarships that are awarded to local people and the First Step shelter.

The $30-a-ticket benefit will begin with registration at 12:15 p.m. Sunday, March 14, at the Plymouth Manor in Plymouth.

BPW members and their families will model fashions from Talbots of Laurel Park; Talbots Kids of Laurel Park Place and "I Do." Two! Consignment Bridal Salon in Plymouth.

Talbots carries a complete line of women's fashions in sizes ranging from petite to size 18. Talbots Kids carries children's clothing for infants and boys and girls up to size 14.

"I Do" Two! Consignment Bridal Salon carries a complete line of gently used bridal fashions. The store's inventory includes designer labels and gowns in petite to plus sizes, discounted 30-60 percent.

Orin Jewelers and Talbots will also have display tables.

Money raised from a raffle at the fashion show also goes to the Rose Schilawske Scholarship, presented annually by the Garden City BPW to one woman who is returning to the work force or is furthering her education. Last year, Garden City resident Colleen Spano received $500. Spano and her daughter will be modeling at the fashion show.

At 35, Spano has worked at Garden City Hospital for 18 years and is currently director of surgical services. She's working toward her bachelor's degree in health care administration at the Detroit College of Business.

Married and the mother of two children, Caitlyn, 9, and Michael, 11, Spano said the money helped defray the costs of going to college.

"My classes run, with books and all, usually around $800 a class, so it did help quite a bit," said Spano who along with her husband, Joseph, was raised in Garden City. "I was fortunate to get it."

Raffle tickets cost $1 each. Prizes include a day trip for two to Atlantic City, sponsored by Steve Kuhlman of Travel Desk in Garden City; a basic estate planning package, donated by attorney Sandra Larson; a $100 gift certificate from Orin Jewelers; and a Waterford sweetheart bowl, donated by Hudson's of Westland.

Door prizes include gift certificates to DeLuca's, New Peking and East Side Mario's restaurants, as well as gift baskets from Mary Denning's Cake Shoppe in Westland and Dearborn Florist.

The Garden City BPW is also supported by John Santeiu & Sons Funeral Home.

"We're hoping to raise enough money to fund our scholarships and the money we have left over is used to operate our budget," said Rebecca Viola, Garden City BPW fashion show chairwoman.

The professional women's organization also sponsors an honors scholarship that is awarded to a high school senior from Garden City to help defray costs of attending a community college. Students must be recommended by school officials, have at least a 3.0 grade point average, leadership qualities and provide service to the student body and the community.

The BPW also supports the Garden City Library, First Step and Sea Camp, a program that sends school-aged children to Florida to study environmental issues.

"The fashion show will be nice and I'm sure the women will enjoy the afternoon," Spano said. "The organization supports a lot of local causes and please come out and support us."

To order tickets to the fashion show and lunch, featuring chicken kabobs and rice pilaf, call Beth Csicsila at (734) 458-4331 or (313) 277-7742. The deadline to buy tickets is Wednesday, March 10. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Organizers recruit riders for parade

There will be some recruiting going on when horse lovers and enthusiasts converge on Michigan State University next month for the Michigan Horse Council's Horse Expo and 16th annual International Stallion and Trade Show.

Representatives of the Michigan Parades into the 21st Century will be at the show, slated for Friday-Sunday, March 12-14, in East Lansing.

Parade participants will staff a booth at the expo and show to answer questions about the parade, provide application forms and show videos from past parades. There also will be a mini Michigan parade at 9:45 a.m. March 13, featuring past parade participants.

This year's Michigan Parades into the 21st Century Parade is scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday, May 15, in Lansing. The parade features more than 40 equine units as well as other animal units, bands and a Canine Hero Unit, featuring such groups as Leader Dogs for the Blind, Paws with a Cause and Canine Companions.

This year, each equine participant will receive a red, white and blue parade ribbon to wear during the parade and a new peppermint treat, provided by Buckeye Feeds, according to Nancy Harm, who helps recruit equine units.

Members of the Canine Hero unit will have parade medals to wear and receive doggie treats, while human participants will receive lunch and an embroidered commemorative parade patch.

State champions!

S'craft rips Mott for 1st-ever crown

BY BRAD EMONS
SPORTS WRITER
bemons@oe.homecomm.net

COLLEGE HOOPS

The Schoolcraft College men's basketball team cut the nets down Saturday.

The Ocelots avenged two regular season losses to Eastern Conference champion Flint Mott to post a resounding 104-83 victory in the championship game of the Michigan Community College Athletic Association tournament held at Kalamazoo Valley CC.

Second-year coach Carlos Briggs, the former SC All-America who has led an amazing turnaround in the school's fortunes in men's basketball, called it "probably biggest in school history."

Longtime Schoolcraft administrator and ex-athletic director Marv Gans verified it was the first-ever state basketball title for the Livonia school.

"There wasn't a state tournament for awhile, but even when we had it we never even came close," Gans said.

This Schoolcraft team, which improved to 25-4 with the 21-point win, left little doubt who is playing the best basketball down the stretch among Michigan junior colleges.

After losing 78-75 and 81-70 to the Bears within a span of a week last month, SC led from start to finish.

Derek McKelvey, the 6-foot-3 sophomore guard from Adrian headed to Tennessee-Martin, continued his torrid late season shooting with a career-high 33 points, including nine of 14 from three-point range.

Point-guard Dave McGlown (Pontiac Notre Dame Prep) added 17 points and seven assists. Lamar Bigby, the 6-5 forward from Detroit Northern who missed the second Mott game due to an eligibility issue, made his presence known with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Dashawn Williams added a team-high 12 rebounds and 14 points, while Quentin Mitchell came off the bench to score 12 points.

Larry Patrick had 13 for Mott, which trailed 54-36 at intermission. Richard Bryant and Renardo Brown each added 10 for the Bears, who fell to 25-5 overall.

One of the keys to beating Mott was containing 6-6 guard Daniel Lawson.

"It was our defensive intensity and we played well as a team," said Briggs, who is 49-11 in two years and was named NJCAA Region 12 Coach of the Year. "This time we put a quicker guy, Dave McGlown, on Lawson."

"Before we had used Dashawn (Williams) on him, but it kept him away from the basket to rebound. The switch worked out well."

Schoolcraft made 67.4 percent of its shots from the floor (39 of 68) and 16 of 21 free throws. Mott was 29 of 72 from the field (40.3 percent) and 18 of 22 from the line.

The Ocelots also held a 39-35 edge in rebounds.

"The difference was our defensive rebounding and we knocked down shots," Briggs said.

Also giving Schoolcraft a boost was the recent post-season awards handed out and voted upon in the Eastern Conference by the coaches.

Mott had two players selected the first team (MVP Lawson and Patrick), while SC had two named the second team, McKelvey and Williams, along with Mott's Sigfried Hodge.

"We're the second place team and I thought we deserved one or two spots on the first team," Briggs said. "They didn't really respect our players. That gave us some incentive."

And how about that first-ever state crown?

"It's a great accomplishment for our kids because many of these guys haven't won any kind of a title before," Briggs said.

Shamrocks fend off Churchill, 5-4

District title goes to CC

PREP HOCKEY

There were more than a few anxious moments Wednesday night for the state's No. 1-ranked Class A hockey team.

Redford Catholic Central, however, remained on its lofty perch as the Shamrocks ran their overall record to 25-1-1 with a 5-4 win over upset-minded Livonia Churchill in the district championship game before a large turnout at Edgar Arena.

The Shamrocks now move into the regional championship round against Dearborn Unified, a 5-3 upset winner Wednesday over defending state champion Trenton.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Trenton's Kennedy Arena.

Churchill, which bowed out a 14-8-4 overall, hung around for much of the game and actually led 2-1 at one point of the second period.

It was also 3-3 after two periods.

But that's when the Shamrocks turned up their game a notch and gave themselves some breathing room with goals at the 2:13 and 7:06 marks of the final period.

Todd Bentley, winning the draw at the left circle, regained the puck and scored unassisted to make it 4-3. David Moss then added what appeared to be an insurance goal from Jim Spiewak and John Bowers, giving CC a two-goal cushion.

But with just two minutes remaining, Bentley was whistled and sent to the penalty box for elbowing.

The Chargers pulled netminder Ryan McBroom, giving them two extra attackers, and they capitalized as crafty forward Adam Krug scored a power-play goal with just 44 seconds to go — Ed Rossetto and Nathan Jakubowski assisting — cutting the deficit to one.

Rossetto then threw a decent backhand chance at CC goaltender Ben Dunne with 19 seconds left, but time ran out as the Shamrocks held on for the victory.

"It was typical playoff hockey," CC coach Gordie St. John said. "Everybody was at their peak performance. Churchill did an excellent job and had a good game plan."

Between the second and third periods, St. John made sure his team understood what needed to be done.

"We had to be more responsible in our defensive zone, lock up a little higher on defense and take advantage of our offensive opportunities," he said. "It was important to get the first goal because we didn't want to play catch-up."

CC, outshooting the Chargers 9-7 in the opening period, led 1-0 on Brandon Kaleniecki's rebound goal from Matt Van Heest and Keith Rowe.

Churchill's Dan Cook tied it with a wrap-around goal from Jakubowski at 6:01 of the second.

Just 48 seconds later, Jason Turri went top shelf from what appeared to be an impossible angle from the corner. Derek Martin and Adam Rourke got credit for the assists.

But CC stormed back with goals at 8:47 and 9:41.

Spiewak tied it at 2-all from Moss and Bentley followed by Bentley's steal and unassisted goal to make it 3-2.

"They (CC) have four lines and it doesn't matter who it is because you know they're going to have three good players out there," Churchill coach Jeff Hatley said.

Cook then scored his second of the night with 3:11 to go in the third period from Krug and Tom Sherman, knotting the count at 3.

For the game, CC outshot the Chargers, 22-17, including a 6-3 margin in the third period.

"I thought our kids came out and executed the game plan, but they were a little nervous to start," Hatley said. "CC is a great offensive team and I thought we kept their chances down."

That's what we wanted to do and I couldn't ask for anything more.

"By the third period we were down to two lines and I think we got a little rubber legged. But we had given it our all and when it was 5-4 we were pushing for overtime."

Although the Chargers lost the district final, they did gain some respect.

"Nobody was giving us a chance to win this game," Hatley said. "People were saying the only way we could win this game is if our goalie Ryan McBroom stood on his head."

"But what I saw tonight was the whole Churchill hockey team playing hard."

Stevenson holds off Franklin; Warriors handcuff Northwest

They didn't win, but they didn't give up, either.

Livonia Stevenson was pushed right to the end by Livonia Franklin, which has won just one game this season, and the visiting Spartans went home Tuesday night with a 66-45 victory.

The Patriots will take a 1-17 record into Thursday's game at Livonia Chubbuck while the Spartans, 6-13, go to Farmington.

Sophomore guard Joe Ruggiero hit a three-point shot for Franklin with less than 15 seconds to play to tie the score at 45.

Stevenson came down and Kenay McChristian was fouled while shooting with eight seconds left. He missed his first free throw but made the second to push the Spartans up by one.

A last-second shot to win by the Patriots came up short.

McChristian led Stevenson with 18 points and Mike Leonard added eight.

Sophomore guard Jamie Kyras led Franklin with 18 points and Ruggiero had nine.

Stevenson held a 9-3 lead after one quarter and was up 24-18 at the half. Franklin shaved a point off the margin after three periods, trailing 36-31 entering the fourth.

CHUBBUCK 66, FARMINGTON 66: Coach Rick Austin must have lifted his voice and his team's spirits at half-time.

An 19-4 second quarter gave visiting Farmington a 32-17 lead at the intermission.

"It was a rather spirited halftime, to say the least," Austin said of the visit he had with his Chargers, who came out with a 22-9 third period and a 26-18 fourth.

"Our kids just made up their minds they weren't going to repeat that scenario," Austin said after Churchill lifted its record to 6-13. Farmington dropped to 7-12. "We made some adjustments in the second half, going to an up-tempo game to get back into it."

Ryan Yickers led Churchill with 21 points, eight in the fourth quarter, including four triples. Devin White had 15, including three clutch free throws in the final period.

Josh Odum had nine points and Ryan Cousino scored six of his in the final period.

Justin Mifus led Farmington with 17 points and Chad Seeborn had seven.

REDFORD CC 72, DETROIT CITY 48: Redford Catholic Central, a loser in the Catholic League A-B division semifinals, bounced back with an impressive non-league win Tuesday over a strong Detroit Public School League team.

The Shamrocks outscored City, a PSL playoff qualifier, 45-20 in the second half after leading only 27-25 at half-time.

Senior guard Dan Jans scored eight of his 20 points in the third quarter for CC (14-8 overall). Junior guard Rob Sparks added 17 points and senior guard Nick Moore scored six of his 15 in the fourth. Senior forward Chuck Cash also finished in double figures with 12 points.

Darvis Hollis and Cecil Hood had 13 points each for City, which trailed 47-42 after being outscored 20-7 in the third quarter.

BELLEVILLE 61, WAYNE 53: Belleville pulled away in the final three minutes to win the Michigan Mega Conference Red Division game.

Wayne Memorial (7-12) trailed by only two, 51-49, with three minutes to play but missed a three-point shot and was outscored 10-4 the rest of the way to fall to 5-6 in the Mega Red.

Belleville (13-6) improved to 9-2 in the conference with three players netting 15 points or better. Kevin Harrison had 19, C.J. Grantam 16 and John Edwards 15.

Robert Price paced Wayne with 17 points, Jamer Davis had 14 and Shane Howak 12.

LUTHERAN WESTLAND 67, LUTHERAN N'WEST 53: The Warriors won the second game of a back-to-back by winning every quarter.

"It was a good last game for our four seniors," Coach Dan Ramthun said Tuesday night. "A nice finish for them."

Forward Ryan Ollinger scored 18 points, guard Gordie Engel hit a season high 15, forward Tom Habitz reached 13 and junior guard Charlie Hoeft 11.

Engel also contributed a season best 11 rebounds while Ollinger grabbed 10.

Host Lutheran High Westland finished its season 13-7, including an 11-5 Metro Conference mark. Lutheran Northwest dropped to 2-17 overall, 2-13 in the Metro.

Junior guard Aaron Bishart scored 12 for Lutheran Northwest while forward Willie Wilson and junior forward Nathan Lowe had 10 each.

The Warriors started out 15-12 and were up 36-28 at the half and 53-42 after three periods.

Lutheran Westland is idle until beginning state tournament play Tuesday at Bishop Borgess, when it meets Dearborn St. Alphonsus.

HAMTRAMCK 62, LUTHERAN WESTLAND 53: There's was no stopping the Metro Conference champion Cosmos Monday.

Junior guard Aaron Brock scored a game-high 23 points as Hamtramck (18-3, 15-1) rolled to the victory over host Lutheran High Westland (12-7, 10-5).

Senior guard Jason Gorny and sophomore guard Ryan Richard each added 13 points for the winners.

"They just had too many horses," said Lutheran Westland coach Dan Ramthun, whose team couldn't overcome a 21-11 first-quarter deficit. "They're quick inside and outside."

Three Warriors scored 13 points apiece — junior guard Charlie Hoeft, along with senior forward Tom Habitz and Ryan Ollinger.

Ollinger and freshman forward Brent Habitz each grabbed 10 rebounds.

The Warriors made 19 of 23 free throws, while Hamtramck was 13 of 18.

WARREN INDEPENDS 71, HURON VALLEY 52: Westland Huron Valley Lutheran scored just seven points in three of the four quarters to remain winless in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference.

It was 19-7 after the first quarter and 41-18 at the half as Huron Valley (2-17) dropped to 0-8 in the MIAC. Visiting Warren Independs (13-6) is now 8-2 in the league.

Bethesda got 19 points from Gabe Wordell, 12 from Frank Malcolm, 11 from Phil Ewegbemi and 10 from David Smith.

Huron Valley, which made just 8-of-22 free throws, had no players in double figures.

Glenn ousted in semifinals

BY BILL PARKER
STAFF WRITER
bparker@oe.homecomm.net

Walled Lake Western basketball coach Rex Stanczak was worried about Tuesday's showdown with Westland John Glenn in the semifinals of the Western Lakes Activities Association tournament.

He feared his team had lost its concentration. He was concerned the Warriors might be looking ahead to Monday's district tournament opener with rival Walled Lake Central.

"On Sunday I told my assistant coach (Josh Tropae) I was worried the team had lost its focus," Stanczak said. "He faxed me a letter today and basically said we don't have time to not be ready to play."

"We don't have time not to be focused. We have to play these two games so we might as well go out and win them."

"I read the letter to the guys about 10 minutes before the game it really woke them up."

Did it ever.

The Warriors exploded for 23 first-quarter points en route to its first berth ever in the WLAAs championship game with a 64-46 victory over the Rockets.

Western, 18-1 on the season, meets North Farmington, 16-3, in the conference championship game, 7 p.m. Friday at Livonia Franklin.

Glenn, 11-7, meets Plymouth Salem, 15-4, in the consolation game at 5:30 p.m. at Franklin.

"At the beginning of the season our number-one goal as to be the best ever at Western," Stanczak said. "This is the best record we've ever had. We've never won the regular season championship before this year, and we've never played for the league championship before."

"I think we've accomplished that goal, but we won't be satisfied unless we make it out of districts."

Defensive execution keyed Western's transition game early in Tuesday's contest. Ben Dewar nailed a pair of triples and scored eight of his game-high 18 points in the first quarter as Western opened a 23-9 lead.

Genero Dawood also had a hot touch and scored seven of his 10 in sparking the run.

"I thought we had a tremendous defensive performance tonight. In my opinion John Glenn is the best team in the league from an offensive standpoint," Stanczak said. "To hold them in the 40s is testament to a good defensive game."

Glenn closed the gap in the second quarter as Ty Haygood and Reggie Spearmon heated up for the Rockets and dumped in six points each.

But Dawood nailed a huge triple at the buzzer to end the first half to put the Warriors on top 35-22.

"Western just came out and played great basketball," Glenn coach Mike Schuette said. "We missed a couple put-backs and if they would have fallen maybe it would have been closer."

The Rockets made one more dent in Western's lead with a 10-0 run in the third. When Haygood returned a rebound to the net with 0:40 left in the third, he pulled Glenn to within eight, 35-43.

Eagle came up with the buzzer-beater for Western at the end of the third as the Warriors maintained a double-digit lead, 47-36.

Dewar finished strong and meshed in seven more in the fourth as Western wrapped up the win with a 17-10 advantage in the final eight minutes.

"In the fourth quarter the kids did a tremendous job of pulling the ball out and spreading the floor and taking nothing but lay-ups," Stanczak said. "It's not always easy for a fast-breaking team to slow it down but I thought we did a nice job of that in the fourth."

Eric Jones scored 16 points and Haygood finished with 14 for the Rockets, who managed just 14 of 27 shots from the free throw line.

"That's probably as well as we've shot in a while because we were over 50 percent," Schuette said. "We've been struggling at the line all year."

"The good thing is that as poorly as we played tonight can only make us better down the road."

Carter's undefeated campaign ends prematurely

The Division I individual wrestling regional at South Lyon turned out to be a bittersweet experience for Livonia Churchill coach Marty Altounian.

The Chargers took only two district qualifiers — 145-pounder Mike Carter, unbeaten in 33 matches and the Observerland champion along with 162-pounder Brandon LaPointe.

In his opening match tangling with Temperance Bedford's Justin Zink, Carter suffered an apparent torn anterior cruciate ligament and was forced to withdraw from the tournament, ending his dream season.

Meanwhile, LaPointe captured three matches in a row to win his bracket and advance to the individual finals, March 11-13 at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

"The guy (Zink) was pulling Mike's ankle one way and his knee went the other," Churchill coach Marty Altounian said. "He couldn't even stand on it after we got him off the mat."

"It's tough when your first loss is because of an injury, not because of your ability. I really didn't see anyone beating him because everyone who placed (at the regional) Mike beat."

"I guess it's one of those things about sports."

LaPointe, who enters the state finals at 34-6, opened with a 9-2 win over Josh Braden of Monroe followed by an exciting 6-4 overtime decision against Mike Alvarado of Dearborn.

In the finals, LaPointe took the title with an 8-4 decision over Alec Hance of Romulus.

But it was the win over Alvarado, a sixth-place finisher in Division I a year ago and a 9-1 winner over the Churchill wrestler earlier in the year, which boosted LaPointe's confidence.

"Brandon scored a point with one second left to tie it and then in overtime put him (Alvarado) on his back," Altounian said. "It was a huge win confidence-wise. It's shown how far he's come. Brandon wrestled a tough schedule this year and it's paid off."

"He's excited and it's the highest I've jumped myself in awhile."

Troy regional results

Both Livonia Stevenson and Redford Catholic Central will each send a contingent of five to Joe Louis.

The Spartans will take two at 103 as Josh Gunterman (35-10) and Joe Moreau (45-4) finished one-two at Saturday's Division I regional at Troy High.

Gunterman decided Moreau in the finals, 9-5.

Brian Barker added a third at 160 for the Spartans, while teammates Dustin Obeid (125) and Imad Kharbush (135) each took fourths.

CC had a trio of regional champions led by defending heavyweight champion Casey Rogowski, now 42-0 on the year and unbeaten in two seasons. Rogowski repeated as regional champ by pinning Aaron Lambert of Utica in 2:22.

Mitch Hancock raised his season record to 44-3 overall by winning the 152-pound title. He pinned Kevin Harrington of rival Birmingham Brother Rice in 3:22.

Brocc Naysmith, meanwhile, took the 215-pound title with an 8-2 decision over Steve Hendershot of Roseville. Naysmith heads to Detroit with a 31-3 record.

Two other Shamrocks also qualified — third-place finisher Mike Zajdel at 145 and fourth-place finisher Sean Bell.

Zajdel is 37-16 and Bell is 16-13.

Trojans qualify pair

Livonia Clarenceville will send Walter Ragland, who finished second at 189, and 130-pounder Dave Lemmon, who gained fourth, at Saturday's Bellevue regional meet.

Rick Frees of Hudson, who pinned Ragland a week earlier at the district tourney, beat the Clarenceville for the second consecutive week, 9-1. Frees took fourth in his weight class a year ago.

Ragland, who missed qualifying for the state meet last year by one point, is now 46-12 overall. He decided Travis Beaman of Leslie, 10-2, and pinned Dicky Robinson of Blissfield in 50 seconds en route to his rematch with Frees.

Lemmon, 51-6 on the year, was battling the flu, but managed to qualify. He lost his opening-round match to Adam Olney of Leslie, 10-4, and won by injury default over Jesse Wendorf of Olivet in the second round. Jeff Easnmacher of Concord beat Lemmon in the consolation final, 4-2.

"Our goal is not to make it there, but place," Clarenceville coach Todd Skinner said. "The whole team is going to practice until those two guys make it there. This is what we've been working for all year long."

Last week, Clarenceville was defeated by host Capac in the semifinals of the Division IV team dual regional, 41-32. The Trojans finished 18-8 on the year.

"We had our opportunities," Skinner said. "We were winning three matches and ended up losing."

"But overall we had a great season."

Capac defeated Harper Woods in the regional final, 41-26.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

Warriors top C'ville in tournament clash

Lutheran High Westland and Livonia Clarenceville each got a little satisfaction following Saturday's Metro Conference girls volleyball tournament held at Macomb Lutheran North.

Lutheran Westland won the conference tourney for the second time in school history with a 15-13, 15-8 win over the Trojans.

Clarenceville, however, the regular season champion at 7-1 in dual matches, captured the overall conference title based on both the tourney and the regular season.

"We had a successful season and we look forward to the district, regional and even the state tournament," said Clarenceville coach Alisha Love, whose team is 32-12-3 overall. "We didn't fall apart, even with a key player basically out."

"We played hard and with some heart. We stuck together and I'm proud of this team."

Lutheran Westland advanced to the final with victories over Rochester Hills Lutheran North-west (15-5, 15-1) and host Lutheran North (15-7, 15-11).

"We played well offensively and defensively — it was one of our best days," Lutheran Westland coach Joan Ollinger said. "We put it all together. The girls are happy."

"The only bad thing is that we're tourney champs, not the conference champs."

The last outright title for the Warriors was 1995.

Lutheran Westland, 5-2 during the Metro dual-match season, was led by trio of Bekah Hoffmeier, Stephanie Lynceh and Anna Schewecke.

Hoffmeier served 25 points and added 14 kills for the tournament, while Lynch contributed 19 serving points, 15 kills and 10 digs.

Schewecke was the team's top attacker with 17 kills. Sarah Marody added 12 kills and nine digs.

Azzopardi and Heather Haller also stood out for the Warriors.

Clarenceville reached the championship final with wins over Grosse Pointe Woods University-Liggett (15-12, 15-10) and Harper Woods Lutheran East (15-11, 15-3).

Senior Danielle Sledz had 15 kills, three solo blocks, four aces and 47 digs on the day to lead the Trojans.

Rachael Koerneke contributed 52 digs, 10 kills and one ace.

The team's other tri-captain, Kristina Skrela, who twisted her knee earlier in the week in a loss to Lutheran Westland, saw limited action with three kills, two solo blocks and one ace.

Setter Nicole Kasparian collected 33 assist-to-kills along with eight kills and 28 digs.

Jessica Kennedy came off the bench to serve three aces.

Love also praised the play of Vera Skrela, Faye Croteau and Michelle Moore.

Vikings wear crown

Walled Lake Central spikes Salem in championship match

BY CHRIS MATER
STAFF WRITER
cmater@oea.homes.com.net

Walled Lake Central entered Saturday's Western Lakes Activities Association volleyball tournament on a roll. The Vikings left celebrating a championship.

Central continued its superior play, downing defending league champ Plymouth Salem in two games in the championship final at Northville High School, and now the focus shifts to the upcoming Class A state tournament where the Vikings seek an eighth straight district crown.

But coach Mike Lindstrom and his Vikings took the time to enjoy last weekend's accomplishments, punctuated by an impressive 15-6, 15-11 victory over Salem in the final.

Central lost Leah Douglas to a broken ankle during last year's league tournament and wound up falling to Livonia Stevenson in the semifinals.

The Vikings and Rocks, arguably the conference's top two teams, staged an entertaining championship match. Salem, which defeated Central twice at the Temperance-Bedford Invitational in mid-February by scores of 15-11, 15-12 and 15-8, 15-11, came in ranked No. 6 in the Michigan High School Volleyball Coaches Class A poll and Central held down the No. 7 spot.

"That was our best volleyball of the day. It really was," Lindstrom said of match with Salem. "We kind of cruised in the early part of the day and kind of saved it, and I think we were as strong at the end of the day as we'd been all day long."

"And I think it kind of showed; Salem kind of fell down a little bit at the end there as far as being able to push a little bit."

Central (44-8-1) led 8-5 in the opening game when seniors Amanda Mendenhall and Douglas and junior Christina Tudor sparked a seven-point run.

Douglas then served an ace to make it 13-6, Tudor followed with a cross-court kill and Mendenhall ended the game with a well-placed tip kill that fell softly between two Salem defenders.

Salem (43-10-1) regrouped in the second game and managed an 11-10 lead thanks to the dominant flat play of Angie Sillmon, who has committed to play volleyball at Western Michigan University.

But Central, the league's regular-season champion and tournament's top seed, used another decisive run to seal the title, Douglas served two aces as the Vikings forged ahead 14-11 and junior Colleen Saldana closed it out with a kill off a set from senior Sarah Schreiber.

"We gave it a good run, but we didn't find our hitting zones very well at times," Salem coach Tom Teeters said. "But that's how it goes in volleyball sometimes."

"I have seven seniors and three of them have been to the (state semifinals), so they know not to let up," Lindstrom said. "We have lots of good leaders out there and that's all I can tell you. They're all picking it up right now and communicating well with each other."

Central held off pesky Livonia Franklin 15-10, 15-11 in one semifinal, while Salem easily disposed of Stevenson 15-3, 15-7 in the other. Northville and Livonia Churchill were also among the six teams to emerge from pool play.

Central senior Becca Saldana was 237-of-242 setting in the tournament with 194 assists and 38-of-36 serving with three aces. Douglas was 50-of-60 attacking with 38 kills and 19 blocks and 35-of-41 serving with four aces. Mendenhall was 90-of-112 attacking with 55 kills and 40-of-43 serving with eight aces, and senior defensive specialist Amanda Yaklin was 45-of-51 serving with six aces and 27 digs.

Sillmon posted a team-high seven kills and two solo blocks in Salem's semifinal win over Stevenson and teammate Amanda Suder had three kills and was 15-of-15 serving with six aces.

Sillmon collected seven more kills against Central, Andrea Pruett added five kills and three block assists, Laine Sterling racked up 18 assists and Suder had 15 digs.

Class A district play is up next for the WLAJ's 12 teams. See district draws on C7.

Franklin receives WLAJ good sports honor

Livonia Franklin finished third in the Western Lakes Activities Association volleyball tournament and seven of its players were honored.

But the honor that impressed rookie Coach Mary Helen Diegel the most was a team award — the Patriots were voted the Sportsmanship Award for the third year in a row.

"Not only did we have several players recognized with conference honors," Diegel said, "I think it was important the team won the sportsmanship award."

"Not that it makes you feel good, but it's a total team thing and a level of class they exude. It's one of the things that makes it fun to play in this league."

The award was voted to Franklin by its opponents.

"We played hard, and our opponents played hard," she said. "It's nice to know we can still shake hands and smile after we play hard, knowing we played tough competition."

"That says positive things about the sport and about the players.

"To play your best and do your best in school and have the correct behavior, that kind of makes the coaches feel like we're doing something right."

"It says something about the parents, too. That they're raising their daughters right."

During the weekend WLAJ tournament, Franklin lost (again) to Walled Lake Central in the semifinals to finish in a third-place tie with Livonia Stevenson. The Patriots ended the regular season 36-12-1.

In the WLAJ tournament, Franklin beat Westland John Glenn, 15-2, 15-1 in pool play. It also defeated Plymouth Canton 15-6, 15-10, before losing to Stevenson, 15-8, 15-10.

In the playoffs, Franklin knocked off Livonia Churchill, 15-12, 15-7, before losing to Walled Lake Central, 15-10, 15-11.

Diegel is in her first season as Franklin's volleyball coaching. She succeeded Ann Hutchins.

Region 12 from page C1

with that kind of intensity."

Cincinnati, which eliminated NJCAA power Vincennes a night earlier for the first time since 1981 in Region 12, proved to be more than Ocelots could handle.

Schoolcraft trailed 34-28 at halftime, and after a 10-2 Surge run in the first three minutes of the second half, the Ocelots never got closer than nine.

Lonnie Berry, name Region 12 MVP, led Cincinnati State with 25 points. Point-guard Maurice Williams scored 18 of his 20 in the second half.

Schoolcraft got 18 points from Lamar Bigby. Dave McGlown and Dwayne Holmes chipped in with 16 and 10, respectively.

Dashawn Williams, who had 33 points the night before in an 103-95 win over host Lansing, was saddled with early foul trouble. He was limited to eight points. SC's top three-point shooting threat, Derek McKelvey, finished with six.

"They (Cincinnati State) earned it," SC coach Carlos Briggs said. "We just couldn't get into our offense. They played a good, hard, pressure man-to-man (defense)."

"They got up on us and we could never get back in it."

Although Schoolcraft shot a respectable 18 of 23 from the foul line. Meanwhile, Cincy State was even better — 29 of 32.

SCHOOLCRAFT 103, LANSING CC 95: Dashawn Williams turned in a monster performance in Tuesday's semifinals with a career-high 33 points and 16 rebounds.

Schoolcraft overcame a 12-point deficit in the first half to lead 52-51 at intermission.

The Ocelots used a full-court press to get back in the game.

"We were a little relaxed at the start, but then we stepped up our intensity and turned up our defense," Williams said. "It was our 'Black Press' where we trap underneath the basket."

Williams scored 19 second-half points, including a shot inside with 18 seconds left to seal the victory.

"Today they found me in the paint inside going to the basket," Williams said. "It was a dogfight throughout the game."

Lamar Bigby added 23 points, including four triples, while point-guard Dave McGlown played a superb floor game with 17 points. David Jarrett (Westland John Glenn) came off the bench to score 11.

Chris Colley snared three key rebounds down the stretch to help secure the win.

Lansing, which bowed out at 17-11 overall, got a team-high 28 points from 6-5 swingman Nile Watson.

Randy Burton contributed 20, while Eric Parsons had 13.

Donald Otis, a 6-10 center who was averaging six blocks per game, got into first-half foul trouble and finished with 12 points along with Ben Spitzley.

"We only struggled with the press with our guys on the bench," Lansing coach Mike Ingram said. "We also had some bad plays down in the second half and we didn't get some key rebounds off missed free throws. Not getting those rebounds was inexcusable."

Schoolcraft's depth may have told the story.

"We didn't have enough players and they kept throwing guys at us," Ingram said.

Cincinnati State (24-6) took a 39-37 halftime lead and held off a late charge by Vincennes, Ind. (23-8) to earn a 78-72 win in the opening game.

Quentin Smith led the winners with 22 points, while Scott Clark led the Trail Blazers with 18.

Lady Ocelots win opener

The Schoolcraft College women's basketball team broke open a close game during the final five minutes to gain an opening-round 76-60 victory Wednesday over Eastern Conference foe Henry Ford Community College in the 13-team NCJAA Division II Region 12 tournament at Sinclair CC in Dayton, Ohio.

The Lady Ocelots, seeded fourth, improved to 26-4 overall with the win. They will meet Lakland, Ohio (19-8) today in the second round.

Henry Ford bows out at 17-13 overall.

Samantha Theisen, one of five Lady Ocelots in double figures, led the way with 20 points. She also had seven rebounds and seven steals.

Other SC standouts included Antone Watson, 14 points and three assists; Jackie Kocis, 12 points and five rebounds; Stacy Cavin, 10 points, 10 rebounds, three blocks; Esther Ross, 10 points, four assists and three steals.

WOMEN'S HOOPS

Zeinab Mroueh led Henry Ford with 20 points and 12 rebounds. Erika Rammler chipped in with 16, while Julie Wechter and Christine Marek had 11 and 10, respectively.

Schoolcraft led 31-30 at intermission and by only four, 58-54, with 5:32 remaining before pulling away.

Semifinal action in Dayton continues at 5 and 7 p.m. Friday. The championship game is set for 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

The winner moves on to the Division II nationals.

Lady Crusaders finish 17-14

And so it ends.

Madonna University's women's basketball team had started the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference with high hopes. A 5-9 conference season dimmed those hopes, but then the Lady Crusaders made a short run in the WHAC Tournament, beating third-seeded Siena Heights to reach Saturday's semifinals.

Unfortunately, their opponent was Spring Arbor, the ninth-ranked team in the NAIA. Madonna kept it close for a half, but could not keep pace with the host Cougars, who clawed their way into the WHAC finals with a 78-67 victory.

Madonna finishes with a 17-14 overall record. Spring Arbor improved to 27-4.

Poor shooting in the second half doomed the Crusaders. After converting 12-of-25 floor shots in the first half (48 percent), they managed to make just 10-of-37 in the second (27 percent). In contrast, the Cougars were 18-of-32 in the opening half (56.3 percent) and 15-of-29 in the second (51.7 percent).

Madonna trailed 42-37 at the intermission, then got outscored 36-30 in the final 20 minutes.

The Crusaders were paced by Kathy Paganis with 17 points and 11 rebounds. Katie Cushman added 17 points and two steals, and Chris Dietrich totaled 15 points, six assists and two steals.

Spring Arbor was led by the one-two punch of Andrea VanderHorst with 24 points, seven assists, five rebounds and three steals, and the inside power of Courtney Thompson, who collected 20 points, 10 boards, nine blocked shots, four assists and three steals. Kristin Dankert contributed 13 points.

Rocks remain solid in WLAA

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER
cjrisk@oc.hometown.net

BOYS SWIMMING

And this was the year everything was going to be different. "The king is dead! Long live the king!"

An old refrain, it's true — but one that certainly seemed suitable as the Western Lakes Activities Association Swim Championships approached. Long-time league kingpin Plymouth Salem was stumbling; the Rocks, who had relied on superior depth fueled by superior numbers to win six consecutive WLAA titles, had a smaller roster this season (only 36 swimmers).

A crack in the defending champions once seemingly impregnable armor? That seemed to be the case when Salem lost a pair of WLAA dual meets, first to North Farmington and then to Livonia Stevenson.

Which meant there wasn't just one legitimate challenger to Salem's supremacy, but two. And Plymouth Canton, which the Rocks had beaten early in the dual-meet season by a mere 13 points, wasn't far behind.

So there was more than a little trepidation for the Rocks and their coach, Chuck Olson. "We knew they were good," said Olson of the opposition. "Obviously, we were going to have to step it up."

Such challenges are not swept aside at Salem. Last Saturday, the Rocks proved just that by capturing yet another WLAA championship, beating runner-up Livonia Stevenson by 21 points (498 to 477). North Farmington placed third (411) and Canton was fourth (317). See statistical summary.

"Everything's right in the world," said Olson. Despite its supposed lack of numbers — at least compared to its previous first-place teams — Salem won using that tried-and-true formula: more depth. The Rocks had just one first-place finish, their 200-yard freestyle relay team of Dan Jones, Mike Johnson, Mark Witthoff and Matt Casillas (1:30.61). By comparison, Stevenson had four firsts and North got three.

But Salem finished in the top three in all three relays and had at least one individual in the top six in every event but the 100 breaststroke. Indeed, the Rocks averaged more than three scorers in each individual event.

Their best performances came in the four freestyle events. "You've got to swim to your strengths," said Olson. "We've got good freestylers. We out-freestyled everybody."

Indeed, the Rocks were outscored in just one freestyle individual event (the 500, by Stevenson). They ended up scoring 208 points in the four individual free events, compared to North's 193 and Stevenson's 154.

"He's good," said Stevenson coach Doug Buckler of Olson. "He does a great job. And his boys worked hard. It probably sounds funny, but these two teams see so much of each other during the season (five times, including mutual invitationals) that, even though they're both very, very competitive and both want to win badly, they still cheer for each other and congratulate each other on good swims."

Considering the size of the meet, the final point spread wasn't large. "It was very small for a meet this size," agreed Buckler.

So could he have done anything different to change the outcome? "I really don't think so," he answered. "I thought our boys swam real well."

Atop that list for Stevenson was Keith Falk, who successfully defended his WLAA title in the 500 free (4:45.03) and added a first in the 200 free (1:44.71). The Spartans also got wins from Joe Bublitz in the 200 individual medley (1:59.22) and their 400 free relay team of Bublitz, Mike Malik, Brad Ruckler and Falk (3:18.60).

North actually beat Stevenson in the 400 free relay in what would have been a league-record time, but the Raiders were disqualified when one of their swimmers jumped into the pool in celebration before the other relay teams had finished. The DQ did not alter the final standings, but it cost the North swimmers a place in the record book — and a medal.

The meet's only other double-winner in individual events was the Raiders' Matt Zald, who was first in both the 50 (21.81) and 100 (48.50) free. North's Jim Gabriel, Adam Farber, Mark Wachsborg and Zald combined to win the 200 medley relay (1:40.37).

Walled Lake had two wins, by Chris Gawronski in diving (422.05 points) and Derek Zerber in the 100 backstroke (54.46). Other individual firsts went to Westland John Glenn's James McPartlin in the 100 butterfly (54.57) and Northville's Mark Kowalski in the 100 breast (1:01.46).

All that remains now is the big show: the Class A state finals, March 12-13 at Oakland University in Rochester. Salem will send three relay teams, plus Andrew Locke in the 50 and 100 free, Matt Casillas in the 200 free and Brian Mertens in the 500 free.

Stevenson has its 200 medley relay and 400 free relays qualified, as well as Falk in the 100, 200 and 500 free, the 200 individual medley, the 100 fly and the 100 breast; and Bublitz in the 200 IM, 100 fly and 100 back.

Glenn will send McPartlin in the 100 fly and Canton has its 200 and 400 free relays qualified, as well as Kurtis Hornick in the 50 free and Aaron Reeder in the 100 back.

There will be a last-chance state qualifying meet Monday at Livonia Stevenson. The Class A state diving regional for all Observerland schools is 5 p.m. Tuesday at Grosse Pointe North High School.

Wayne 2nd in Mega-White meet

It just goes to show the importance of teamwork and doing your best.

Wayne Memorial pulled out a second-place finish in the Michigan Mega Conference White Division swim meet Feb. 26, thanks to a seventh-place finish in the final event of the meet.

The Zebras were second going into the 400-yard relay, the last event, and took a seventh to garner 14 points.

Wayne finished with a total of 183 points, far behind Wyandotte's winning total of 240 but one point ahead of third-place finisher Dearborn Edsel Ford.

Garden City wound up fourth with 178, Trenton fifth at 175, followed by Southgate (166), Redford Union (129) and Taylor Truman (56).

The only Wayne swimmer to win an event was Sonny Webber, who captured first in the 200 individual medley with a time of 2:07.0.

Garden City and Redford Union took no firsts in the meet.

"We did fairly well in two of the three relays," Wayne coach Michael Gruber said. We were second in the 200 medley and third in the 200 freestyle relay."

The quartet of Adam Chiason, Webber, Justin Smoes and Greg Sarkozi took second in the 200 medley relay in 1:47.09. Smoes, Webber, Sarkozi and Sam Raub combined for a 1:36.88 in the 200 freestyle, good for third.

"The breaststroke was our big event," Gruber said. "We had 26 points total there.

"But overall, Wyandotte was just too strong. They outscored us everywhere except in the breaststroke."

Webber, Smoes and Sarkozi merited All-League designation.

Wayne, which did not qualify anyone for the state meet, was 10-1 in dual meets during the season.

Its only loss was to Wyandotte, which gave it a 6-1 Mega White mark.

"Webber had the best meet," Gruber said. "He took first in the IM and second in the breaststroke with a time of 1:05.72."

Sarkozi took third in the 50 freestyle with a time of 24.35 and was also fifth in diving.

Smoes was third in the breaststroke at 1:07.52 and fourth in the 100 freestyle in 53.42.

Whalers tuning up for playoffs

Now the real fun begins. It's March Madness time, only in hockey. Which means a lot of that "If the playoffs were to begin tomorrow" stuff is being banded about.

No other Ontario Hockey League team is in a better position than the Plymouth Whalers. They have six games left, and only two of those are on the road. Those road games, next Thursday and March 19, are against Windsor and Brampton.

The Spitfires currently reside in the West Division cellar; the Battalion hold the same position in the Midwest Division, and with 17 points are better than just one other team (the expansion Mississauga Ice Dogs) in the OHL.

Plymouth's two wins last weekend — 10-3 over Kitchener Saturday and 3-2 over Windsor Sunday, both at Compuware Arena — boosted the Whalers to the No. 1 overall spot in the OHL with 97 points.

Of their four remaining home games (Kingston, Sault Ste. Marie, Guelph and Windsor), only Sault Ste. Marie and Guelph will finish their respective OHL seasons with a better than .500 record (Kingston, Friday's opponent at Compuware, owns the basement in the East Division).

It's all there for the taking. And the Whalers' performance last weekend indicates their hungry enough to gobble it up.

In Sunday's win over the Spitfires, Plymouth got first-period goals by Damian Surma and Randy Fitzgerald before Windsor battled back, knotting it at 2-2 on Joey Sewell's goal 3:28 into the second period.

Fitzgerald's second goal of the game, with five seconds left in the second period, proved to be the game-winner. Robert Holsinger replaced Rob Zepp in goal for Plymouth after Sewell's goal and blanked the Spitfires the rest of the way, making 10 saves. Michael Leighton faced 49 shots, making 46 saves for Windsor.

Paul Mara assisted on both Fitzgerald goals.

On Saturday against Kitchener, the Whalers pulled away from a 2-2 tie after one period with a three-goal onslaught in the second. Five more goals in the third iced the triumph.

Adam Colagiaco led the offense with three goals and an assist. Harold Druken added two goals and three assists, Eric Gooldy totaled two goals and two assists, David Legwand netted a goal and two assists, Jason Ward had a goal and two assists, Mara contributed a goal and an assist, and Fitzgerald, Jared Newman and Nikos Tselios each had two assists.

Zepp made 16 saves in goal to earn the win for Plymouth. Reg Bourcier and Mark Aggio split time in goal for the Rangers.

Colagiaco and Druken remain among the OHL leaders in scoring. Colagiaco is fourth with 34 goals and 94 points, and Druken is sixth with a league-leading 62 goals and 92 points.

The Whalers also have the OHL's top defense, with Holsinger leading the league in goals-against average (2.14), save percentage (.917) and shutouts (four, tied with two others). Combined with Zepp (2.61, three shutouts), Plymouth boasts the OHL's best goalkeeping, averaging a league-low 2.34 goals-against average with a .910 save percentage and seven shutouts (tied for first).

Compuware extends lead

Two wins in three road games last weekend helped the Compuware Ambassadors to increase their lead in the nine-team North American Hockey League to seven points.

They improved their record to 32-10-6 with a 2-1 win over the Danville Wings Sunday; Mark Mink's second-period goal was the game-winner. Phil Lewandowski also scored for Compuware.

The Ambassadors lost 2-1 to Danville in a shootout Saturday, after beating the Grand Rapids BearCats 3-1 Friday. Nick Schrader, Josh Bowers and Troy Milam netted goals for Compuware.

Going to state toumey

State toumey-bound: The Westland Panthers Squirt B team (ages 9-11) recently captured the District II championship by beating the Detroit Dragons, two games to one, including a 5-1 victory at Trenton Ice Box II. The Panthers advance to the Michigan Amateur Hockey Association state tournament at 7 tonight where they'll face the District IV winners at the Wayne Civic Arena. Action continues for the Panthers at 7 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Saturday. The championship is 6:30 p.m. Sunday. Members of the Panthers, who finished 19-1-2 in Little Caesars play, include: Chris Allen, John Ballarin V, Jeff Cox, Jon Dean, Matthew Haskell, Paul Litwinczuk, Tommy Lorenz, John Lysko, Joseph Rawson, Ryan Rawson, Jacob Renner, Corey Strauss, D.J. Tracy, Ricky Wyniemo, Daniel Setser and Matthew Byle. The coaching staff includes Pat Rawson, Mike Rawson, John Ballarin IV and Matthew Byle. The team manager is John Dean.

Singer-songwriter: At 68, she continues to be part of "the music."

A FORCE THAT'S 'WHOLLY EARTH'

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

What's a 12-letter name for "60s-'90s jazz singer?"

According to the Feb. 14 New York Times Magazine, the answer is Abbey Lincoln.

The 68-year-old diva laughed when asked if she had seen the puzzle.

"Yes, I was thrilled," she said in a voice slightly lighter than her famous, smoky-rich singing voice.

Lincoln, who will be performing March 12 at Ann Arbor's Michigan Theatre, has just released a new, provocative CD on Verve, "Wholly Earth," that continues a string of albums dating from the late 1980s that display Lincoln's talents as a singer and songwriter. But, as the puzzle notes, Lincoln has been a force in music since the 1950s.

"I met Louis Armstrong when I was 22, around 1952 and I saw Billie Holiday in Honolulu," Lincoln said. "I think people weren't so business oriented then. They weren't looking to be rich with more money. It was like a calling and you just did it, especially the men, they bring the music no matter what."

Lincoln sees herself in a long tradition of "the music."

"Now it's such a business. This is no time for art, no time for a Duke Ellington, Frank Sinatra, Billie Holiday. They didn't call it jazz. It was music. Rosemary Clooney, I sang her songs. Ella..." she said.

WHAT: Abbey Lincoln performs with her trio for the UMS concert series.

WHEN: 8 p.m. Friday, March 12

WHERE: Michigan Theatre, 603, E. Liberty, Ann Arbor.

TICKETS: $20-$32. Call (734) 764-2538.

In 1957, the Kalamazoo native met the great be-bop drummer Max Roach, who was her husband from 1962 to 1970, and started singing with small jazz groups and recording some of her own material. In 1961 she was featured on Roach's famous "Freedom Now Suite," which she said taught her how to use her voice freely as an instrument. She was also introduced to John Coltrane and Thelonious Monk.

It was Monk who encouraged Lincoln to become a composer after she put lyrics to his "Blue Monk."

"I never thought I was going to be a composer," she said. "It was Thelonious Monk who was quoted on the back of an album saying that Abbey Lincoln is not just a great singer but a great composer. I had written lyrics to 'Blue Monk' and he didn't object. ... He came over to the studio and did a little dance and whispered in my ear, 'Don't be so perfect.' I asked Max what he meant, and he said it means you can make a mistake."

That freed Lincoln to experiment and write music that transcends easy categories. The new album displays a strong mystical, spiritual element both in her evocative lyrics and in the multi-textured music. The title tune gives a sense of her concerns: "Places where the folks inhabit/have a geometric grace/Circled, squared, sometimes triangled/ruled with lines and space."

"I'm an older woman and I'm more spiritual," she says with a chuckle. "I don't sing about bad relationships or sex anymore. I'm too old for that, and I don't care about it."

Though usually a lyric comes first, sometimes it's the music.

"It depends, sometimes the music comes first. 'Look to the Stars,' the music came first, I was thinking of Jimmy Scott and the way he holds a note. But 'Conversation with a Baby' came altogether as a piece, music and lyrics," she said.

"Conversation" is an unusual, thought-provoking lullaby dedicated to a child named Gandhi.

"Gandhi is someone's little boy here in the apartment house where I live," she said. "It's for a happy baby."

Lincoln is also a powerful interpreter of songs by others. Her recording of Bob Dylan's "Mr. Tambourine Man" on her last album, "Who Used to Dance," received a lot of air play and rave reviews.

"I saw 'Mr. Tambourine Man' on a piano when I was with these young people in San Francisco, I was sort of the Big Mama there," she said. "I saw the lyrics and I said, 'Yeah, this is what I want to say.' It took me 20 years to record it, but I finally did."

On the new album she performs the Mercer-Hampton-Burke standard "Midnight Sun," Benny Carter's "Another Time, Another Place" and, most notably, the Yip Harburg-Harold Arlen "If I Only Had a Brain" from "The Wizard of Oz." Her version plays with the songs timing and melody while retaining its irony and humor, typical of Lincoln's thoughtful approach.

The album's music is multi-textured. Though on stage she'll be accompanied by just her fine trio, on the album she is supported on vibes and marimba by Bobby Hutcherson, on trumpet by Nicholas Payton and on two songs on vocals by Maggie Brown, whose younger, lighter voice adds a nice contrast.

Lincoln said she'll be performing songs from the Grammy-winning "A Turtle's Dream," "Who Used to Dance" and her new album in Ann Arbor.

She said her long association with Jean-Phillippe Allard has been important in her re-emergence as a singer after quitting music briefly in the early '70s and then recording and performing sporadically.

A reluctant Brian Wilson talks about his music

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER
cfuoco@oe.homecomm.net

Arranging an interview with Brian Wilson is unlike any other. His publicist warns that Wilson is "not chatty." In order for the interview to work, Wilson needs to talk about his music, his album "Imagination" and maybe his favorite song on it. There can be no "yes or no" questions and if the conversation lulls, "it's over."

Sean Lennon, who interviewed Wilson for "Raygun" magazine, even wrote that Wilson's publicist told him, "Now don't be surprised if he gets up after five minutes." Wilson's conversation with Lennon was long and thoughtful.

But when Wilson called two weeks ago, it was short and to the point. He answers the question, "How are you?" with, "I'm good. Let's get the interview going. OK?"

One thing that excites Wilson is his tour to promote the album "Imagination," a very Beach Boys-sounding album which earned rave reviews from critics.

"It'll be the first major tour I've taken in my career. It's pretty exciting. To be able to perform my music in front of people is kind of a thrill for me."

In the song "South American" off "Imagination," Wilson sings "I've been around too long to care what anyone says." But that insecurity is what kept him out of the musical spotlight for 10 years.

"I was so hurt just by the fact that my first record didn't sell in 1988," Wilson said about the album.

Wilson from page E1

"Brian Wilson." "I took some time off, 10 years off. Finally I was convinced that if I did it I would have a hit record. It wasn't a hit. It was a moderate hit."

Wilson wasn't completely away from music. Two albums of his music were released in 1995 - the soundtrack to the Don Was-produced documentary about Wilson's life, "I Just Wasn't Made for These Times," and "Orange Crate Art" with Beach Boys collaborator Van Dyke Parks.

He owes "Imagination" to his producer, Joe Thomas, who gave him the support he needed to create the album.

"At first it was (hard to get motivated) because I really wasn't up for all that work. But I got interested and I got into it. We nailed it pretty fast," he said.

Besides Thomas, Wilson collaborated with a slew of stars to make "Imagination." Songwriter Carole Bayer Sager and "Margaretville" man Jimmy Buffett are included in that list.

"It was a thrill, a pretty big thrill for me," Wilson said of working with Buffett. "I met him through Joe Thomas. He did a lot for my album. He did lots for it."

"Cry" is a 4:56 weeper about a rare argument he had with his wife, Melinda. All Wilson will say about the song is, "That's a pretty good tune. I think it's a pretty good tune. I like it a lot."

According to published reports, Wilson met the former Melinda Ledbetter in 1986 while shopping for a car with his then-psychologist, the controversial Eugene Landy.

Landy was treating Wilson, who had a nervous breakdown in 1964 at age 22, for drug addiction and depression. Wilson's family accused Landy of keeping Wilson doped up on prescription drugs and controlling his life. They sued Landy but, in 1991, before it reached the courtroom, a settlement required Landy to sever ties with the musician.

In the liner notes to "Imagination," Wilson thanks his new psychiatrist, Dr. Stephen Marmer, for giving him "support in my life."

Despite being called "eccentric," Wilson is regarded as one of the most influential bass players in rock history. Upon hearing that, Wilson is thrilled yet guarded.

"I'm honored that people think I can play bass that good. I used to pick. I've been practicing for my four-concert tour," said Wilson who lives in St. Charles, Ill., with his wife and two adopted daughters.

After seven minutes on the phone, Wilson is antsy. His answers become shorter indicating it's time to end the conversation.

"See me next month?" Wilson answers gruffly to the same question. When he is reminded that he is playing Ann Arbor on March 9, he responds, "Oh yeah. Bye babe."

WSU's Bonstelle presents 'Our Country's Good'

Wayne State University offers comedy or drama depending on your mood for its' next two productions.

Timberlake Wertenbaker's "Our Country's Good" opens March 5 at WSU's Bonstelle Theatre, 3424 Woodward in Detroit. Show times are 8 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays through March 14.

Tickets prices are $8-$10, and available by calling (313) 577-2960.

This hilarious and harrowing play illustrates how theater has the potential to change people's lives when a colony of convicts attempt to do comedy. It does contain adult situations and language.

Australia 1798, a young lieutenant (played by Greg James) is directing rehearsals of the first play ever to be staged in that country. With only two copies of the text, a cast of illiterate convicts, and one leading lady who may be hanged (played by Teresa Ann LaFranca), conditions are hardly ideal for what will be this penal colony's premiere of George Farquhar's Restoration comedy, "The Recruiting Officer."

"Our Country's Good" is directed by Blair Vaughn Anderson, professor of theater at Wayne State University. Scenic design is by Charles Moser and costume design is by Kathleen Crosby of Rochester, both members of the Hilberry Theatre company. Lighting design is by theater faculty member Thomas H. Schraeder.

Ireland's finest literary drama, "The Playboy of the Western World," opens March 12 and continues in rotating repertory through May 8 at WSU's Hilberry Theatre, Cass and Hancock, in Detroit.

For tickets, call (313) 577-2972.

primitive area of Ireland - the "western world" as it was called. Having claimed to have killed his father, the young lad quickly becomes the romantic hero of the local peasant people. When the supposedly dead father also shows up at the village, the townspeople find their hero not to be all he claimed. Filled with rich language which was traditionally spoken by the native people, "The Playboy of the Western World" is a true literary masterpiece.

Directed by faculty member Joseph A. Calarco, the play's characters include Matt Troyer as the playboy and Emily N. Miller as Pegeen Mike, his swooning peasant girlfriend.

IMAX Theatre pre-show features DSO

PRNewswire - Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village and The Detroit Symphony Orchestra have teamed up to work on the museum's IMAX Theatre Pre-Show.

During the Orchestra's Pops Series, Broadway Today, Feb. 18-21, a new arrangement of "Don't Rain on My Parade," from the musical Funny Girl, was recorded for the film's "soundtrack."

The IMAX Theatre at Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village, scheduled to open late November, 1999, will show a two to three-minute, multi-media presentation before every IMAX(R) film to introduce to the film-goers the large format experience.

The film short, produced by museum staff with assistance from Academy Award-winning filmmaker Sue Marx, will provide a fast-paced, immersive journey through the first 100 years of sound and film recording/presentation innovation, connecting the spirit of Edison's early work with the cutting edge technology of the IMAX experience.

cally. It was Allard who called her to sign with Polygram (parent company of Verve) and who has produced her string of fine albums.

"He never tells me what to do. I tell him who I want and he goes and gets them. ... I'm really fortunate and I know it. I'm part of the music, but I miss the elders," she said.

She mentioned the death last year of Betty Carter.

"I miss her a lot, if someone told me they played with Betty Carter, I knew they could play," she said.

As the interview was concluding, Lincoln said with a touch of pride, "Hey, you know I'm from Michigan?"

Her first "professional" singing was a $5 a week job in the basement of the A.M.E. Church in Jackson. She said the minister liked her voice, but she never sang in the choir.

"I was no choir singer," she said.

Abbey Lincoln has always gone her own way and the music has benefitted from her independence. But Monk was right, she didn't have to be this perfect!

Disney on Ice producers alert to pleasing little 'story police'

Disney on Ice presents "The Little Mermaid," through Sunday, March 7 at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit. Call (248) 645-6666 or (313) 983-6606 for ticket information.

Ever conscious of the story police in their audience, Feld Entertainment brings the story of "The Little Mermaid" to life on ice through March 7 at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

"Young children know when we're not telling the story accurately," said Cindy Stuart, co-choreographer for "Disney on Ice" presents "The Little Mermaid," and director of skating for Feld Entertainment.

Bringing Disney's blockbuster film, "The Little Mermaid," which first debuted in 1989, to life on ice was not easy. Loosely based on the Hans Christian Andersen fairy-tale, "The Little Mermaid," is the story of Ariel, a fun-loving mermaid princess who longs for a life on land. Her father, King Triton, disapproves.

When Ariel falls in love with Prince Eric, Ariel makes a bad deal with Ursula, the diabolical diva of the deep, and loses her lovely voice. With help from friends, Ariel must win Eric's heart.

"We had to create the illusion of being undersea," said Stuart who choreographs the show with Gia Guddat. "In the first act Ariel still has fins. Obviously Ariel couldn't move around the ice balanced on her tail. She had to be free to experience the adventure that awaited her."

Costume designer Scott Lane designed a costume that is divided into two fins that allow Ariel, played by Russian figure skating champion Inna Volianskaia, more mobility. Prince Eric is played by Alexei Killakov, who is also Russian.

When Ariel loses her mermaid fin and is transformed into a woman, she is wobbly on the ice, like someone learning to walk for the first time. "She has no skates in her on ice duet 'Kiss the Girl' with Eric," said Stuart. "He carries and whirls her."

Imaginative costumes take the audience to Ariel's world under the sea where there are dancing star fish, and sea horses.

"We really create the feeling of a lagoon," said Stuart. "It's three dimensional. Some of the skaters have puppets. I would call the show multi-media, we're creating an atmosphere. We tried to create the feeling of being underwater."

The 24-foot "puppet" fish are carried on pole units by skaters. "We wanted to have fish at all levels under the sea," said Lane. "You never know what is going to float by."

The fluidity of figure skating lends itself to the show. Ursula, the sea witch, who lost her beauty because she's evil, is portrayed as the glamor-octopus of the deep.

"Little Mermaid has everything," said Stuart. "The music from the movie is fun, and inspiring. A bi-level stage set separates land from sea."

"We wanted to clearly define for the audience the separation between land and sea, between Prince Eric's world and Ariel's world," said director John Dietrich.

On Wednesday, students from the Center for Creative Studies and Wayne State Universities met with show technicians and skaters who shared their theatrical secrets including an elevator in a clam shell, flying skaters, and giant Carmen Miranda fish with an exploding turban.

'The Other Sister' is as cute as a cookie cutter

BY VICTORIA DIAZ
SPECIAL WRITER

You might assume that any movie with Juliette Lewis, Diane Keaton, and Tom Skerritt in the cast would be a fairly good movie. And that's what "The Other Sister" (which stars these three) is — a fairly good movie. It's a touchy-feely film that may leave you feeling warm and fuzzy into next August. It's the kind of picture that prompts some film-goers to murmur approvingly as they leave the theater "That was sweet." Sweet it is. Cute as a cookie most of the time, still, it has its problems. I don't know exactly what director Garry Marshall had in mind when he made this movie. My guess is that he wanted to deliver a message or two: the mentally challenged are real people, and they have the right to take risks, just like everybody whose IQ falls within a "normal" range. Nothing wrong with good intentions, and there's certainly something to be said for such goals. But this can be slippery territory, and Marshall occasionally stumbles. Sometimes, his rather superficial screenplay, written with Bob Brunner, makes us feel as if we are laughing at these disabled characters a little too much, instead of laughing with them. As the story opens, we meet Carla Tate, a slightly retarded young woman who is about to return home from the special education institution where she has spent much of her life. Her father, who calls her "Pumpkin" and obviously adores her, has come to accompany her home to the affluent suburban neighborhood where the family lives near San Francisco. She has two, wouldn't you know it, beautiful sisters, one of whom is about to get married, and one of whom is, wouldn't you know it, gay. She also has a mother. Watch out for this mother. As the story progresses, we will see that she has her own disabilities. Played by Diane Keaton, she's like Annie Hall grown older and turned anal-retentive. Carla has plans, which involve simply making a life for herself. She wants to get a job, maybe as a veterinarian's assistant, try out some college classes, live in her own apartment and maybe even find the right guy. Her mother, who always had trouble accepting her daughter's imperfections, reasons desperately that maybe some tennis lessons at the club would be the thing, or maybe some quiet visits to some quiet museums, while Carla lives quietly at home in her freshly decorated room upstairs in the seclusion of the family home. But absolutely there will be no apartment, no enrolling in college classes and — horror of horrors — no young man. Juliette Lewis makes a super-convincing Carla, seeming stubborn and strong-willed, soft and innocent at once. She gets a chance to display a kind of eccentric comedic talent here and is an absolute riot in a memorable, birds-and-bees scene with Keaton. As Danny, Carla's Mr. Right, a young actor named Giovanni Ribisi holds his own, and then some. Danny's favorite movie is "The Graduate," and we aren't surprised that he identifies so closely with Dustin Hoffman, or a role played by Hoffman. His physical appearance, stuttery speech patterns, and nervous mannerisms seem all highly reminiscent of Hoffman in his younger days, especially when he played Benjamin Braddock. Several similarities exist between this movie and that one, including a big-finish wedding scene. Tom Skerritt as Carla's father acts as if he'd wandered from some 1950s family sit-com. He just pretty much keeps grinning, no matter what happens, like he'd received a mega-dose of something to render him endlessly patient and above the fray, a kind of hyper-clone of Ozzie Nelson himself.

Friendship key to Sebadoh

'We're concentrating really on things that people wouldn't necessarily think is cool, like our friendships.'

Jason Loewenstein
Sebadoh

Sebadoh's Jason Loewenstein is relieved to hear that his band's new album "The Sebadoh" possesses a stripped-down, '60s feel.

"Oh thank God. I appreciate you saying that. Nobody's really said that yet," said Loewenstein, bassist, guitarist and vocalist for the pop band Sebadoh.

"We really admire the recording of really good '60s songs that always made you feel like you were intimate. It wasn't all cuddly necessarily, but you felt you were right there with the situation. Recordings by Neil Young make you feel like you might be sitting in a chair in a practice space."

In the past, Loewenstein explained, Sebadoh has been guilty of producing songs "that have been masked by a bunch of sonic horse crap. I think that has its place as well."

Not on "The Sebadoh," a sonic swirl of stripped-down, guitar-driven, hook-laden pop songs created by Loewenstein, guitarist/bassist/vocalist Lou Barlow and new drummer Russ Pollard. The rocked-out "Colorblind" and the rollicking "Thrive" have huge hit potential.

All three members shared writing duties for "The Sebadoh," an album named after the penchant of rock bands to dub themselves "The" whatever. Loewenstein was inspired by a new situation in his life, his recent marriage.

"The trials and tribulations of my life's longest romantic relationship leads to plenty of fodder for deep, confusing thoughts," Loewenstein said with a laugh.

Ironically, one of his favorite songs on "The Sebadoh" isn't one of his own. Excuse the clichés, but Loewenstein is most impressed with "Break Free," a song penned by Pollard and the first song he ever recorded in the studio.

"Pardon for my calling it this, but for spiritual reasons I'm really into the song that Russ put on there. I'm just so proud, it's really symbolic to me because it's such an amazing song. He wasn't scared to put it on there, considering the situation. That could be really intimidating. But him putting his best foot forward like that, it's like a flag in the moon to me. I really appreciate that one," Loewenstein said.

"The Sebadoh" is the follow-up album to "Harmacy," Sebadoh's top-selling album thus far. "Harmacy" was Sebadoh's reaction to Barlow's success with his side project, Folk Implosion and its hit "Natural One" from the "Kids" soundtrack.

Barlow's 15 minutes put undue pressure on the band, Loewenstein said.

"Around the recording of the last one, Lou was having a hit with Folk Implosion. One of the engineers who was helping with 'Harmacy' was actually the engineer on that stuff. The day we started recording, Lou learned about the hit. It sort of screwed everybody up," he said.

"The engineer was proud. He should have been proud. The other engineer who worked on it was older and as experienced but very jealous I think. He started treating the guy like a whipping boy. It was very bizarre."

To erase those memories, Sebadoh eschewed pressure and let the music take the backseat to their friendship while recording "The Sebadoh."

"I think the process in general was different for us this time. We're all just making sure we all communicate really well. If we're not excited about something we just talk about it, instead of just being like, 'I'm bummed out. I'm not going to bother anyone with it.'"

"We're concentrating really on things that people wouldn't necessarily think is cool, like our friendships. It's more romantic to be a (ticked) off rock guy but that doesn't really make for any longevity."

Sebadoh performs Saturday, March 6, at St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Doors open at 8 p.m. for the all-ages show. Tickets are $12.50 in advance, $14 day of show. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT, or visit <http://www.961melt.com> or <http://www.sebadoh.com>

'Office Space' fun and funny

BY VICTORIA DIAZ
SPECIAL WRITER

In 1990, a fellow named Mike Judge created what would go on to become that infamous TV duo, Beavis and Butthead. After achieving runaway success via the small screen with his witless wonders, Judge gained another measure of notoriety with his full-length, animated movie, "Beavis and Butthead Do America."

Now comes Judge's first feature-length, live-action picture, "Office Space." Going by the Texas filmmaker's past, highly successful efforts, you might anticipate finding new lows here in rude-crude-lewd moviemaking. But life really is full of surprises, and "Office Space" happens to be one of them. While it has no ambition toward being squeaky-clean, neither is it marked by Judge's usual, fetid taste. Parts of it even feel downright wholesome.

It's about a guy named Peter Gibbons, a rather lowly cog in today's high-tech world who absolutely hates his job as a computer programmer. As he sits at his cramped desk, feeling trapped in his tiny cubicle, he grows increasingly frustrated not just with the daily, mind-numbing chores he must perform, but with everything connected to the world of his employer, INITECH Corp. From the receptionist who answers the phone sounding like some kind of demented bird, to his boss who closely resembles a meddlesome robot, to the jammed expressways on the drive to work each morning, he's fed up with it all. Each day is more painful than the day before, prompting Peter to realize "Every day is the worst day of my life."

One night, as part of a group therapy session, Peter seeks the counsel of an "occupational hypnotherapist," who, in one of the film's most nonsensical scenes, "cures" Peter of all his problems and turns him into something of a new man.

As this new man, Peter's first move is simply to do nothing. It's not like he's going to quit his job, he's just going to quit going to his job until he gets himself axed. Imagine his surprise, though, when the powers-that-be, somehow impressed by his super-casual attitude, refuse to let him go. This little turn of events, of course, thickens the plot considerably.

Somewhere in all of this, Peter finds a soulmate in a waitress named Joanna (played with off-hand charm by Jennifer Aniston). The two are on the same wave-length for several reasons, but mainly because she abhors her own job, and shares Peter's enthusiasm for kung fu movies. They're a cute couple and plenty of screen chemistry exists between them, but this movie is something closer to a cartoon than a romance. It soon takes yet another screwy turn when Peter hits upon a scheme to snatch something from the haves and pass it on to the have-nots. His plan will involve the computers at INITECH, and since he's a programmer there, he reasons that everything will be a no-brainer for a guy like him.

Sure it will. Mike Judge has assembled a cast with the abilities to not only make his goofy screenplay animated and lively but make it come to life. Ron Livingston is a highly likable actor who is utterly convincing as the beleaguered Peter Gibbons. If you found him living next door or occupying the next bar stool, or working in the next cubicle, you wouldn't be at all surprised.

A strong supporting cast includes David Herman and Ajay Naidu as Peter's tightly-wired, sympathetic cohorts. In one of the film's funniest scenes the three friends, desperate to free themselves of a jam, decide they'll launder some money. But because they're so clueless about criminal matters they have to frantically search for a dictionary to find out what laundered money is.

Gary Cole is creepy-crawly perfect as Peter's nemesis, an ersatz human being named Lumbergh. Stephen Root, looking and acting quite different from his "I own the place" role in TV's "Radio News," is a cinematic delight as the mealy-mouthed social misfit, Milton. In an abbreviated role, Diedrich Bader makes an impression as Peter's next door neighbor and alter-ego, the long-haired, laid-back Lawrence.

Overall, "Office Space" is an entertaining, well-acted movie that gives us an opportunity to look in on a collection of contemporary characters who could be us, or those around us. Propelled forward by a kind of nervy energy, it moves along smartly and contains a couple of scenes so effectively done that they seem practically inspired.

You could even say that "Office Space" is a movie with warmth and a generous heart, although this is not to imply that it ever spills over and turns sappy, sticky or overly sentimental. Best of all, it's fun and funny. Go for it.

'8mm' is a misguided mess

BY JON KATZ
SPECIAL WRITER

At one point during "Eight Millimeter," Nicholas Cage's new mystery, a can of film is opened and its contents burned. Unfortunately, the torched film isn't "Eight Millimeter" itself.

Did we say mystery? The biggest mystery is how Cage and respected director Joel Schumacher got into this misguided misogynuous mess in the first place.

Mind you, Schumacher ("Batman & Robin") knows how to ply his craft and Cage is an actor of impeccable style. And many of you will be tempted to see it for those reasons alone. On balance, however, you'd probably prefer a two-hour screening of autopsies than be dragged into the nether world of underground pornography, the subject of "Eight Millimeter."

Cage is Tom Welles, a surveillance specialist and family man based in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. When the widow of a Philadelphia industrialist finds a reel of 8mm film in her late husband's safe, she hires Welles to investigate. It appears to be a "buff film," in which a teenage girl is bound and brutally murdered by a large man in full bondage garb while a figure in the shadows looks on. "There's no such thing," Welles assures her; the blood-letting is merely ketchup. "Just tell me the poor girl wasn't killed," she commissions him, offering a blank check to fund the search.

It's a search that's been taken before in films such as George C. Scott's "Hardcore." Off comes the suit and on goes the leather as Welles journeys into this contemporary heart of darkness, aided by adult bookstore clerk Max (Joaquin Phoenix). "You're gonna see things that you can't unsee," Max cautions him. That said, "you name the vice. I'll name the price."

From runaways lining the streets of Sunset Boulevard to the dregs of Brooklyn, the trail leads them to porn filmmakers Dino Velvet (Peter Storemare) and Eddie (James Gandolfini) of HBO's "The Sopranos"), two real sweethearts of humanity.

As he gets closer to the truth (more outrageous than horrifying), Welles is warned to forget the whole thing and go back to raking leaves in Harrisburg. Even his wife (Catherine Keener) sobs on the phone that she and the baby might not be there when he returns, which prompts a line right out of "The Godfather" ("Sometimes it's better if you don't know what I'm doing").

The producers intended "Eight Millimeter" to be about the porn industry but not a porn film, and in that they succeeded. Voyeurs will be disappointed. As in both his "Batman" films, Schumacher shoots almost the entire story in low light to convey, as he puts it, "the even more deadly underbelly of this industry, which is the exploitation of minors."

Noble intentions, but most people won't buy why Welles keeps going once the fate of the girl has been learned. And most people certainly won't buy the big finish.

Better yet, what most people won't buy is a ticket. Score one for most people.

Bailey's Pub & Grille offers 'serious fun' and more

Open since early November, Bailey's Pub & Grille in Canton offers customers "Serious Fun" and good food too. Bailey's, explained general manager Shawn Kelly, is a restaurant, sports bar, pool hall, upscale bar, and gathering place.

Bailey's has nine pool tables, a room with darts and video games, 35 TVs, including two video walls, and two big screens, and nine satellites. It also has a dynamite sound system.

"We like to take care of as many people as possible," said Kelly. "In the burgundy room we play blues and jazz. In the green room we play alternative music, and in the main dining room, oldies to current hits, mainstream music."

Decorated in light woods, open and airy, with forest green and burgundy accents, Bailey's is a sports bar that doesn't feel like one.

"It's a place you can come with your family or a date and have a nice dinner, or with your buddies to watch the game. We like to think we offer something for everyone," said Kelly.

For starters, Kelly recommends the signature Spicy Chicken Billiard Sticks — thin potato wraps filled with tender roasted chicken in a spicy ranchero sauce with Monterey Jack cheese served with ranch dressing. They're also available Italian style with pepperoni and hot marinara sauce for dipping.

The Spinach Artichoke Dip is made with fresh spinach and three cheeses (Parmesan, Romano and Mozzarella) and artichoke hearts blended in a creamy Alfredo sauce with a hint of roasted garlic and nutmeg.

Chicken wings are another popular appetizer. "They're huge," said Kelly. And you can have them anyway you like — mild, medium, or hot with barbecue, hot honey or Teriyaki sauce. All orders are served with celery sticks, ranch or bleu cheese dressing.

"We offer original sandwiches you won't find anywhere else," said Kelly. The Smoke Stack, smoked turkey, smoked bacon, smoked honey, ham, Monterey Jack and Cheddar cheeses, lettuce and tomato, stacked on a Portuguese roll with special hunt sauce is an example.

Black Forest — shaved smoked turkey, pepper bacon, Monterey Jack Cheese, lettuce and tomato on a giant Bavarian pretzel roll with special honey mustard is another specialty sandwich. Teriyaki Steak Wrap — tomato basil flour tortilla stuffed with teriyaki-mustard marinated thinly sliced beef, rice, mixed cheeses and scallions, served with a side salad and your choice of dressing is an often requested item.

Bailey's offers a great burger too — a half pound of ground sirloin topped with your choice of cheese. You can add mushrooms, jalapenos or bacon for a little bit extra. Check out the gourmet burger menu for more choices.

Bailey's tender baby back ribs, available in half or full rack, have won awards across the country. "We slow hickory bake them for four hours and then chargrill to order," said Kelly.

Consider your "Pastabilities" including stuffed shells, the new popular vodka shrimp — ten large shrimp sautéed in garlic and red peppers tossed with mushrooms and onions in a spicy sauce, served over fettuccine, or the Creamy Pasta Carbonara — a mix of garlic, ham, bacon, onions and Parmesan cheese, blended in light cream sauce. Served over ziti pasta. Add chicken for a dollar more.

There's a decent seafood selection — fish & chips shrimp on a skewer and broiled or Cajun salmon. Ask about the daily specials.

"We offer options for the health conscious," said Kelly. "We serve a lot of broiled salmon and shrimp you can even get the fish and chips broiled."

What would a sports bar be without beer? Bailey's has 36 different beers on tap and 80 different bottled beers. They also offer an extensive variety of top shelf liquors including single barrel malts and Scotches, and specialty drinks.

Cigar smokers can enjoy a smoke in a climate controlled room. Bailey's has a humidid and offers a variety of cigars for sale.

Bailey's is operated by the Total Entertainment Restaurant Corp., which operates 35 restaurants in 13 states including Michigan. Kelly said they are looking for restaurant sites in Rochester Hills and Novi.
