Some counts in the lawsuit sought $25,000, and Skene also had demanded back pay for lost earnings. He didn't,

Brian Joseph Rose, 21, faces trial in Wayne County Circuit Court for third-degree criminal sexual conduct following accusations that he gave vodka to the girl and had intercourse with her after she passed out.

Westland 18th District Judge C. Charles Bokos announced his ruling Thursday - three weeks after the girl testified against Rose during a preliminary hearing.

Defense attorney Michael Rex has portrayed the girl as a willing sex partner who lied about being unconscious "because she was too embarrassed" to admit her behavior.

Rose admitted having sex with the girl after she sneaked out of her parents' house early Nov. 26 and rode in Rose's truck to a Westland business owned by his parents, Plymouth Township Detective William Groff has testified.

Rose had initially faced a firstdegree criminal sexual conduct charge, but Bokos reduced it to third degree Thursday after assistant Wayne County prosecutor Thomas Beck conceded that the girl didn't suffer physical injuries.

A doctor testified March 25 that the girl didn't have any obvious signs of injury, but state

"Shaw does not just raise money for the communities' charitable causes; he is always right there making sure that the services are provided to the people who need them," Bokos said in the YMCA announcement. "He also has developed a new generation of volunteers committed to helping the community."

Shaw is the father of seven and grandfather of eight.

Sanders, Adams Middle School principal and former Wayne-Westland teacher, is known for her positive "can-do attitude," Bokos said.

"Celestine has made a difference wherever she has lent a hand, whether it is professionally or as a volunteer," he said.

A member of the YMCA board and the Wayne Rotary, Sanders chaired the city of Wayne's annual Christmas parade for four years and served as chair of Jack and Jill of America Inc. in 1996-98.

"When prizes are needed at the last minute, or a program needs to be set, Celestine is always the first to raise her hand," Bokos said. "She just gets it done.

She also serves on the school Superintendent's Advisory Committee, the Westland Youth Assistance Advisory Board and the Mayor's Advisory Council. Nationally, she is recognized in the list of 2000 Notable American Women and lias been nominated for the National Secondary School Principal of the Year award.

Also April 29, the YMCA will honor Wayne-Westland teachers. This year's honorees include Denise Bateson, Wayne Memorial High School math teacher; Cherie Clark, Taft-Galloway Elementary second-grader teacher; Nancy Schlanser, Stevenson Middle School math teacher, and Bonnie Schram, Jefferson-Barns Elementary learning consultant.

forensic scientist Dorothy Martus said semen was found on the girl's body and on her panties. Bokos, after reviewing the case, ordered Rose to stand trial on a third-degree sex charge that carries a maximum 15-year prison term upon conviction.

"The testimony I've heard satisfies me ... that there was sexual contact," the judge said.

Groff has testified that Rose, in a police statement, said the girl told him that she was 15 years old - an age that still would fuel criminal charges.

Rex tried to argue that Rose's statement shouldn't be admissible in court, but Bokos disagreed in announcing his ruling.

The girl has said she and Rose corresponded for two months by e-mail and by telephone before they arranged to meet.

She said she called Rose about 1 a.m. Nov. 26 and that she sneaked out of her parents' house, only to be caught by her father when she returned about 6 a.m.

As he awaits trial, Rose remains free on a personal bond. Police have said the incident marks the first known Westland case in which a minor and an adult had sex after meeting on the Internet.

Four men face criminal sexual conduct charges in the rape of a Detroit woman at a house in Livonia last month.

Sgt. Michael Gould said he saw two couples involved in group sex acts inside Peaches 'n' Cream, a 230 S. Venoy club that police raided and shut down early Dec. 20.

"They were all entwined for several hours. They would take a break every so often. They were pretty hot and heavy," Gould said during a preliminary hearing for 14 sex club defendants.

"There were other couples who were engaging in oral sex," he said.

Gould also described seeing couples move their chairs into a semicircle on a dance floor where he said men and women exchanged oral sex favors.

Some patrons simply watched as others engaged in sex, and some women shed some of their clothing while dancing, Gould said.

"A portion of their clothing had been removed to reveal their breasts," he testified.

Gould also testified that he saw men clad only in their underwear. Gould led off a series of witnesses who provided graphic details of what they said they saw at Peaches 'n' Cream, an Internet-advertised sex club that drew patrons from Westland, Garden City, Redford, Canton and other cities as far away as Flint and Monroe.

Following testimony Friday, Westland 18th District Judge C. Charles Bokos announced that he will rule on June 24 whether 14 men and women - accused of running the club or working there - should stand trial on felony charges.

Outside of the courtroom during a break in testimony, one defendant accused the Observer of reporting only one side of the story, but he then refused an opportunity to tell his side of the story.

One friend of the defendants who wouldn't give his name criticized the way some police officers revealed their guns during the early morning raid.

"It's a wonder somebody didn't get killed," he said. "This was a real cowboy show."

Four suspects accused of running the club could face maximum 20-year prison terms if tried and convicted of conducting a criminal enterprise and keeping a house of prostitution or ill fame. They are Taylor resident William Michael Rice, 49; his wife, Elizabeth Ann Rice, 39; their Westland son, Christopher Avery Rice, 22; and Southfield resident Hikmat Asso Kallabat. 54,

Ten other defendants accused of working at the club could face lesser, five-year prison terms if convicted only on charges of keeping a house of prostitution or ill fame. Gould said the workers carried out duties such as serving beer, acting as security and taking admission of $35 for couples and $25 for singles.

Gould testified that he called ahead for reservations when he and other officers visited Peaches 'n' Cream. He said he was told that patrons could bring liquor and buy mixers at the club, but he also said beer was served.

Gould said he had to fill out paper for a membership during his first visit. He estimated the crowd at 150 people.

Gould said defendants running the club announced rules prohibiting illegal drugs and warning men not to harass women who shunned them.

He testified that the club's doors were locked before patrons arranged their chairs around the dance floor for mostly oral sex acts.

One female Westland police officer sneaked a video'camera inside the club to capture what went on.

The latest hearing occurred after more than 40 patrons pleaded in March to misdeber.

The portable rooms are one of four options now being considered to create more space at Johnson. But it is the one that appears to have the most support in the Johnson community, especially since Livonia Public Schools has agreed to pay $1,000 a month to rent the two portable buildings for the 1999-2000 school year.

"It's the least disruptive option," said Johnson Principal Andrea Oquist.

A transition committee set up to smooth the move to Lowell is expected to pick one of four options by mid-May. Also under consideration are:

Turn the art room into a classroom, and put "art onto a cart" that can be wheeled into each classroom. It would join Johnson's music program, which is now "on a cart" also.

Dismantle the computer lab, shifting computers into both the library and classrooms.

Transfer the 60 or so kindergartners who enroll for the 1999-2000 school year to another school, just for the one year.

The last option is the least popular, Oquist said, because the Johnson community wants to stay together as much as possible during the transition period to Lowell, a former Livonia Public Schools' middle school now leased to Plymouth-Canton schools. The lease expires in June of 2000.

Neither the "art on a cart" or computer move alone would create the two new classrooms needed. Both would have to be done to give the space needed, Oquist said, causing major disruptions to two different programs.

That leaves two portable classrooms as the best option, even though they could greate an area "eyesore" for the school year, she said.

Johnson expects to enroll another 30 students next year. The school's current enrollment is 440. The school is bursting at the seams because of new subdivisions that have gone up in the Hix-Joy area.

Compounding Johnson's problem is the district's decision to Music classes at Johnson now take place in the gym. But this space will not be available in September because of the extra physical education classes, said Paul Derwick, director of elementary education.

Also, instruments can't be stuffed "on a cart" and wheeled around the school. A music room is a necessity, Oquist said.

The Johnson community expects to meet shortly with staff at Livonia's Cooper Elementary, a school in Westland that underwent transition stresses when it moved in the early 1990s from the old Cooper school to a larger middle school across Ann Arbor Trail. The state determined the Cooper school grounds were contaminated.

When the move to Lowell takes place in September 2000, Johnson will go from being one of the most cramped and crowded elementaries to being one of the most spacious. Johnson has 41,000 square feet, Lowell 96,000.

"It's a move fraught with opportunity," Oquist said.

Johnson parents frequently ask why classrooms just can't be added onto Johnson ... like they will be added onto Garfield.

Oquist's answer is that the entire building is too cramped, a space crunch that won't be solved just by adding on more rooms.

"We've outgrown this facility," she said. "When there's an event in the gym, we can't fit the community in there. It's a tiny gym. We need more space all the way around."

School administrators continue to pledge that a closed Johnson will be maintained by the school district and that a new tenant will be quickly found.

"We will not close down and board it." Derwick said. "We can lease it to a private day care. Or to another Jackson Center preschool program, like having a Jackson Center west. Or the county may need space for one of its special needs programs."

If portable buildings are erected, either in the courtyard or near the west side exit door, Oquist made one promise. "They'll be nothing moving around the building on carts."

Nature preserve group wants more tests on landfill

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER kabramcsyk@ce.homecomm.net

Another former landfill along a Rouge River tributary is expected to be covered with a protective barrier.

And once again, the president of the Holliday Nature Preserve in Westland and member of a Rouge advisory council has asked for more groundwater testing and wonders whether the cover will be large enough to contain the trash.

"I don't know how much is 'too much' testing," said Bill Craig of Livonia to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality at a public hearing Thursday in Westland. "I've always believed that these places aren't tested enough.

"I don't think that 26 samples was quite adequate."

About 20 people attended the hearing to discuss plans to cover the former Nankin Township landfill, located approximately 1,200 feet northeast of the intersection of Newburgh and Warren Road. It is a fenced-in field adjacent to Tonquish Creek and the Wilderness Park Apartments.

Wayne County, 3M and Crestwood Development, co-owners of. the site, have proposed to cap a 6-acre fill area with a geosynthetic fabric covered by a 1-foot thick layer of clean soil and 3 inches of topsoil.

Once the site of a environmental "hot spot" cleaned up by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1995, the landfill contains groundwater still contaminated with barium which, oddly enough, meets drinking water standards but not surface water quality standards. Other contaminants remain at the site, but these do not exceed state standards for the site's use.

Westland and Canton that contains the Tonquish Creek. Craig's critique of the landfill plan is similar to one he made in November about another former landfill at Middlebelt Hill in Hines Park, which has been proposed by Wayne County to he capped for recreational use.

Craig pointed out that trees felled in storms last year exposed the trash at the Nankin site. He believed that a ridge area northeast of the mapped site also contains trash.

"I don't believe the 'footprint' Craig leads a group that over- has been adequately defined," sees an adjacent preserve in said Craig. Since the material is barium levels in the groundwanot being removed, it should be covered, Craig said.

> Curt Cramer, an engineer and vice president of the eastern Great Lakes region for ARCADIS, Gerarghty & Miller of Novi, told the audience that electromagnetic and geophysical surveys of the site were completed. ARCADIS, the consulting firm hired by Wayne County, 3M and Crestwood Development, also collected 26 samples.

"What's left is a lot of household trash from the 1950s," Cramer said, including chunks of concrete and rubber tires. The ter meets drinking water standards. Barium, a natural-occurring metal, actually is used in a liquid for gastro-intestinal tests by doctors, Cramer said.

For surface water quality standards, the groundwater exceeds those standards, which has a smaller threshold than drinking water because fish and other smaller animals ingest surface water contaminants at a faster rate than humans.

EDUCATION CAPSULES

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER trichard@oe.homecomm.net

State officials have no end of ideas on how to spend the $8.1 billion pot that tobacco companies are due to pay the Michigan Treasury.

Gov. John Engler was first in line, suggesting in his state of the state address that it be used to pay for Michigan Merit Award Scholarships. Eligible for up to $3,000 would be students who had good scores on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) tests in communications, science, math and social studies.

Democrats; however, say tobacco harms the public's health, and the money should go into public health programs.

Two key Republicans on the Senate Appropriations Committee - John Schwarz of Battle 'Creek and Harry Gast of St. Joseph - offered a compromise. Here's how it would affect twothirds of the first year's $383 million of tobacco money:

Scholarships and Merit Award Commission - $104 million.

Tuition incentive program -$5.3 million.

■ MEAP testing - $13 million. The first three items are in Engler's proposal.

Life Sciences Research Corridor - $50 million. This is a proposed collaboration of the three major research universities (U-M, Michigan State and Wayne State) and the Van Andel Institute for Medical Research in Grand Rapids. "It will link Michigan's best scientists, scholars, inventors and venture-capitalist specialists in such areas as genetics, chemistry, biology, neuroscience and pharmaceutical development," said their news release.

🔳 "Health Michigan Fund" increase - $8.6 million.

K-12 infrastructure revenue bonding - $45 million. Local units would have to put up a 33 percent match.

Local public health grants -$20 million, a 50 percent increase.

M Senior citizen prescription drugs - $30 million, on top of the current $20 million.

"On target," said House Minority Leader Michael Hanley, D-Saginaw, usually a sharp critic of the GOP. Hanley praised the proposal for senior . citizen prescription drugs and grants to public health agencies. Meanwhile, state Superintendent of Public Instruction Art Ellis praised the Engler plan for scholarships to students who pass MEAP tests. It gives greater importance and an incentive to take the MEAP, which many suburban students have been skipping.

Using MEAP will guide school districts to teaching the core Murphy's law: The Honsowetzes are searching for their golden retriever mix, Murphy, who jumped a fence.

Couple tries to retrieve missing family pet

BY MARIE CHESTNEY STAFF WRITER mchestney@oe.homecomm.net

More than a week after Murphy jumped a fence and ran away from her dog sitter's house in south Livonia, Debbie and Michael Honsowetz still believe the young golden retriever mix will somehow find her way to her own back yard in Canton Township. If Murphy doesn't make it home, it won't be because the Honsowetzes haven't tried.

After only two days on the slopes, the couple cut short their skiing vacation in Banff, Canada, when Murphy's dog sitter, a Livonia resident, phoned to say the dog jumped a fence near Hillcrest and Merriman roads Monday and disappeared.

By Tuesday, the couple was back in their Canton home, spending the rest of their oneweek vacation organizing a rescue effort.

They listed Murphy on local lost-dog Web site www.petznjam.com; distributed about 3,000 fliers in the Livonia-Westland-Canton area; phoned local police departments daily; walked countless neighborhoods; put a lost-dog ad in the Observer newspapers; and followed up on ; every Murphy-sighting tip they received.

Last week, now back at work,... they still hadn't found their best friend and beloved golden retriever.

"Based on the sightings, we think she is trying to get from Livonia to Canton," Debbie Honsowetz said. "We're talking to., everyone, mail carriers, paper boys, children. We've spent, hours every day trying to find her."

One sighting had Murphyswimming across Newburgh Lake. Another had her in the. Joy-Hix area. Two sightings, Sunday put her in the Cherry. Hill-Newburgh and Lilley and Warren area.

Murphy wears a medium blue collar imprinted with yellow and white flowers. She wears two tags, her Canton Township registration and a bone tag listing. the family's address and phone number.

The family can be reached at (734) 397-8129 (home) and (734) 717-0505 (cell phone).

More C.C. money

Sen. Alma Wheeler Smith, D-Salem, and Gast unveiled a package of bills to provide free tuition to the vast majority of community college students using some of the tobacco money.

Smith's bill would create a supplement to the federal HOPE program called HELP, for Higher Education Learning Promotion. HOPE provides a tax credit for the first two years of college education.

The Smith-Gast package would allow any family that qualifies for HOPE to get state HELP, a state tax credit equal to whatever portion of community college tuition is not already covered by the federal credit.

"Making community college more affordable for young people will make it easier for prospective workers to be trained for the high paying jobs that companies are striving to fill," said Smith in an April 15 news conference. A Gast bill will allow HELP to pay for textbooks with a tax credit equal to 10 percent of tuition. 🗉

'They estimated the HELP program will cost "less than $30million" and aid more than 120,000 students. Eligible would be students from families with incomes lower than $50,000 for an individual filing and $100,000 for a joint filing.

"This will be a perfect complement to the governor's Merit Scholarship program," said Smith.

Nonpublic aid

High school coaches and public school officials are alarmed at a bill to allow students from nonpublic schools and "home schools" to take part in public school sports and activities.

Their anxious question: If they're going to use special education services and take part in extracurricular activities, whynot just go to the public schools?. A problem is that the bill doesn't give public schools any more money to cover nonpublic students' activities.

Sponsor of House bill 4024 is freshman Judson Gilbert II, R-Algonac. It is assigned to the House Education Committee, where chair Jason Allen, R-Traverse City, has yet to schedule a public hearing on it.

But Rep. Patricia Godchaux, R-Birmingham, said the money problem may be addressed in a "supplemental" school aid bill. Godchaux, a member of the House Appropriations subcommittee on school aid, sees a lot of debate ahead because:

Athletic eligibility. How do you determine eligibility with students from two schools with different curricula and standards?

■ Cheating. Suppose a coach suggests to a failing athlete that he be home-schooled in order to be eligible. The athlete's mother does the grading.

School jumping. Suppose a student plays first string on a team for two years and in his third year is beaten out by a transfer from a nonpublic school. The first student's collegiate chances are harmed.

Rep. Bob Brown, D-Dearborn Heights, sees a problem where booster clubs help the athletic program. Suppose the nonpublic school student's parents don't participate in the public school booster club.

But Brown has no trouble with the basic concept of letting nonpublic students take part in pub-lic school activities. "They (par-ents) pay their fair share of taxes. Their kids should be treated exactly the same as public school students."

make sure it doesn't present a. risk to anyone in the future," Cramer said.

ARCADIS reviewed geological and hydrological data of the fill material with saturated sands and silts and concluded that the discharge rate of the groundwater into the creek meet the DEQ's requirement. But actual hydraulic conductivity tests have not been conducted at the site. ARCADIS has suggested that the DEQ review its "mixing zone" proposal.

Cramer also outlined the creek's erosion protection barrier that was to be constructed, along with the exposure barriers of a grass and topsoil cover over a felt-type cover. Trees hanging out over the creek will be removed, while the slope will be pulled back from the creek, so that the fill can be capped further away from the creek.

Cramer said the plan is to create a "structurally stable" slope. The erosion barrier will need. approval from the DEQ and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"The material should be durable so that the bank doesn't break away, yet allow grasses to grow," Cramer said.

Craig hoped the plan will fit the remedial action plan for the Rouge River, which calls for bil; lions spent in the 48 communities in three counties of the watershed to control sewer overflows, stormwater runoff and illicit sewer connections. Monitors are measuring the effectiveness of these measures further downstream. 'We're not removing this material, so we want to get it all under this cover," Craig said. The landfill's RAP calls for no monitoring, Craig pointed out to state officials. "I would call for a monitoring program to prove the success of these programs.

WRONGFUL DEATH

A wrongful death case may involve a person who is severely injured due to the negligence of another, and who lives for a length of time before succumbing to his or her injuries. The survivor of the deceased would be entitled to compensation for any medical costs or expenses that were incurred prior to death. In addition, the survivor could seek dumages for pain and suffering, as well as for reasonable burial expenses. If the injured party were to die immediately (or nearly so), the surviving spouse, child, be commensurate with what the deceased would have provided in the way of economic support. When you have just suffered a death of a loved one because of the or parent could look to the wrongdoer for damages in the amount that would negligence of another, your mind certainly will not immediately be on compensation for the tragedy. Yet, after the shock wears off and financial reality sets in, the consideration of a lost income may suddenly loom large. I can help.

HINT: A surviving spouse may also seek damages for loss of consortium as part of a wrongful death suit.

land cited a map from 3M that. showed trash was sent to the upper area, and echoed Craig's concerns. "I think it's appalling that that property sat for too long without monitoring," Graunstadt said.

Hugh Macdonald, director of special projects for Wayne County Department of Environment, said county employees are being trained to monitor the site and check the exposure barrier.

"We'll check the integrity of the cap and look for animal burrows," Macdonald said. Once the project is completed, the meadow will be a "pleasant amenity" to the nearby apartments, Macdonald said.

The DEQ will take all public comments through May 3, then discuss them among DEQ supervisors and geologists. It may amend the plan with public comments or DEQ suggestions before approval,

The plan is available for public review through May 1 at the reference desk of the William Faust Public Library, 6123 Central City Parkway, in Westland.

Comments should be addressed to Steve Hoin, project manager and geologist, Michigan Department of Environmental_Quality, Environmental Response Division, 38980 Seven Mile Road, Livonia, MI 48152. Hoin can be reached at (734) 432-1296.

Summer is near, it's time to cut the fat s my wife and I get ready for our son's first summer at the beach, we realize it's time to get back into our swimsuits, which seem to have shrunk over the winter. Before we hit the sand, we plan to modify our eating habits to reduce our fat and sugar intake.

Our situation is not uncommon. Americans are looking for healthier ways to eat and for good reason.

One in three or 58 million American adults-age 20 through 74 are overweight. According to data from the third National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, the number of overweight Americans increased from 25 to 33 percent between 1980 and 1991.

We need to think of fat as the enemy. It is a constant battle, you against fat, and right now fat is winning in the United States.

Fight fat one meal at a time. Be aware of what you put in your mouth and keep track of fat calories. No more than 30 percent of the calories in your diet should be fat, even less if you are trying to lose weight.

Making foods that are easy, quick and low in fat will help everyone feel better.

Here are a few recipes that I shared with a Weight Management class at Crittenton Hospital in Rochester. You're sure to enjoy these flavorful dishes that are pleasing to your palate and good for you too.

Like a lot of single parents, Leonard Charla of Bloomfield Township wanted to keep his teenage son close to home.

He wanted his home to be a place where his son Chris, then 15, would feel comfortable bringing friends nome for dinner, or to just hang out.

There was a problem though, Leonard, an environmental attorney, didn't know how to cook or manage a kitchen.

International traditions yield superior Sonoma County wines

Vintner: Marimar Torres at her Sonoma

BAT HEALD

Marimar Torres is the only woman in the fifth generation of the Torres family, famous for its Spanish wines. If Marimar stayed in Spain, she knew she would lose her personal identity. She admitted that "with a father and brothers like mine, there was no room for me." Additionally, Spanish culture and traditions did not grant Marimar the choice she wanted - to become her own person.

In 1975, armed with a degree in business and economics from the University of Barcelona and fluency in six languages, Marimar left Spain for the United States to market Torres wines as president of Torres Wines North wine country, I knew that the Torres name had to be represented here," she said. "It took until 1981 to convince my father that Torres should make an investment in California to make chardonnay and pinot noir, wines that are not made in Spain."

After receiving her father's consent, it took 18 months of careful searching to find the 56acre property that has become the Don Miguel Vineyard, named after her father, and Marimar Torres Estate Winery. There, international traditions have given rise to superior wines from Sonoma County.

The 11,000-square-foot winery is built in the style of a Catalan farmhouse. "This will never be a quantity project," Marimar contended. This is exactly why the Detroit metro-area has only now been supplied with Marimar Torres Estate wines.

Having had the privilege of tasting these wines since their first vintages, 1989 for chardonnay and 1992 for pinot noir, what is most impressive to us is their consistency vintage to vintage. Stylish, gutsy, head-strong, Marimar Torres, a single mother, has succeeded in establishing her own wine style. This is due, in no small measure, to the fact that she planted the Don Miguel Vineyard with a variety of clones: three for chardonnay and five for pinot noir.

1996 Marimar Torres Don Miguel Vineyard Pinot Noir, Russian River Valley will be followed shortly by the 1997 vintage (5,300 cases at about $30 per bottle).

In addition to her instincts about growing and making New World wine, Marimar is an accomplished cook. Her first book, "The Spanish Table" (Doubleday), is a repertoire of authentic recipes from all regions of Spain and a tour of its wineries.

Her second book, "The Catalan Country Kitchen," (Addison-Wesley) is a collection of more than 100 authentic recipes, capturing the flavors of her homeland Catalunya. Gustatory cuisine from this Spanish region has escalated to the top of savvy chefs' menus from coast to coast. Marimar's recipes are easy for the home cook to follow.

Fish a 'reel' nutritious option for dinnertime

BY MELANIE POLK --SPECIAL WRITER

The nutritional benefits of seafood abound, and nutritionists suggest we should enjoy fish . once or twice a week. It's a great alternative to meats high in saturated fat and provides omega-3 fatty acids which are believed to help protect against heart disease and cancer.

Depending on the type of fish, it may also provide varying amounts of vitamin B-12, calcium, phosphorus, potassium and zinc.

As with other foods, it's good to have variety in your seafood meals. Lean fish, such as cod or haddock. can be alternated with fattier fish, like salmon or trout. Fish such as tuna, snapper, soleand grouper fall somewhere in the middle. Cholesterol levels vary among seafood as well: clams, oysters, mussels and scallops are low in cholesterol, while shrimp, lobster and crab contain more.

The total cooking time of most fish is 10 minutes for every inch of thickness. Test by inserting tines of a fork into the center of the fish.

The flesh should be opaque, but if it flakes too much it may be overcooked. This is a common problem, and you can keep fish from drying out by marinating it for up to two hours before cooking.

Try swordfish marinated in a mixture of orange juice, ginger, sesame oil and soy sauce. Keep baked fish moist by topping with n the back of Denise DeRaud's mind, intuition told her something wasn't right despite the pacifying words of several doctors who told her "don't worry.

Siblings hopeful transplant will save sister

How could she not worry when a simple blood test turned up suspect.? The anguish from the loss of her mother, to leukemia, flooded her thoughts. "I was remembering what my mom went through," said DeRaud, "and I was scared." DeRaud, 35, was reminded around Christmas by her husband, Mark, that the annual blood drive at his workplace, Garden City Hospital, was approaching. "I don't know why he kept reminding me about it, but he did and I ended up going, not unlike I had in the past." The Redford resident said it was the nurse at the blood drive who noticed her hematocrit level was low - an indication she may be iron deficient. The nurse could not accept DeRaud's donation and encouraged her to visit her physician to rule out anemia.

biopsy results to a renowned specialist at Wayne State University and to several bone marrow conferences before it was confirmed she had acute --Myelodysplastic syndrome (MDS), a precursor to leukemia.

Myelodysplastic syndrome (a blood disorder) can occur in individuals who have been exposed to cancer-causing agents such as benzene, radiation, certain types of chemotherapy drugs or without any known cause. Of the five identifiable types of MDS, DeRaud suffers from refractory anemia with excess blasts in transformation to leukemia (RAEB-T). Thirty-five to 65 percent of patients with RAEB-T develop leukemia. Ironically, DeRaud's type of leukemia is in no way genetically associated with the form that her mother suffered from and, in fact, she is believed to have contracted the chromosomal abnormality, possibly through exposure to an agent.

Annette Russo of New York and Michele Rice of Canton, were tested to determine if they were a match to supply their ailing sister with healthy bone marrow.

It was Russo, DeRaud's youngest sister, who had exactly six out of six alleles (antigen sites) match on her chromosomes with her older sister. The transplant will be performed May 10 on the BMT Unit at University Hospital, Floor 8A.

Think positively

DeRaud said her physician tried to ease her mind, drew more blood and sent her on her way. "I never expected to hear back," said DeRaud, "but I did."

Based on the results of her bloodwork she was referred to a hematologist/oncologist who ordered a bone marrow biopsy.

"I didn't hear a word they said after that," said DeRaud who was still thinking of her mother who died just four months after she was diagnosed with a rare and aggressive form of leukemia in 1994.

The bone marrow biopsy, a procedure that involves the extraction of bone tissue, is performed to examine marrow cells and analyze chromosomal composition. It can be a painful procedure for the patient. "I was really frightened," said DeRaud, who had seen hundreds of people undergo the procedure when she worked as a histotechnologist at Garden City Hospital.

DeRaud said a diagnosis was hard to ascertain initially and therefore her physician forwarded her

According to the Aplastic Anemia Foundation of America patients frequently "stumble" across the disorder by accident during a routine physical because in the early stages there are often no red flag symptoms. Some of the most common signs include dizziness, fatigue, shortness of breath, anemia and irritability.

Treatment options

Currently, the only known cure for MDS is a bone marrow transplant. The Redford resident said she and her husband considered several transplant centers in the United States and selected the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center in Ann Arbor.

DeRaud's treatment process began immediately as her MDS is acute (advanced) and more fast- progressing than the chronic form. In mid-February, she was admitted to the U-M Hospital for an induction treatment of chemotherapy to destroy the diseased bone marrow and "knock down" the percentage of immature blast cells found in DeRaud's blood.

A person's average blast cell count is 5 percent. DeRaud's was 40 percent at the time of her diagnosis, placing her in the category of a high risk advanced MDS patient.

Because a bone marrow transplant is DeRaud's only valid treatment option, her two sisters, ار اینان از اور دورا در استان از باشه معدی و میشند. مستند و ویشده آن ماینده و بود این ا

Released from the hospital March 23, DeRaud is expected to begin a second round of chemotherapy April 30 to destroy all the bone marrow in her body in preparation for the transplant. Both women are being treated with a drug called Neupogen. DeRaud, who has a line for medication implanted in her chest, receives the drug to stimulate her daily white blood cell count.

The good with the bad

Normal bone marrow has a pool of stem cells that produce simultaneously the different types of blood cells. When one of these stem cells becomes leukemic or malignant, it is unable to proliferate and mature.

The result is that this clone of abnormal stem cells take over and suppresses the growth of normal stem cells. These stem cells can loose their ability to differentiate to more mature stages and continue to multiple in an abnormal fashion giving rise to a lot of immature blast cells (acute leukemia).

"I've learned an awful lot in a short time," said DeRaud, "and the hospital staff has allowed me to ask a lot of questions and be in control of my treatment in as many ways as I possibly can."

The Redford mother says her faith has been a "constant source of support" for her as well'as her husband and two young daughters. "My oldest daughter was very angry when I was first diagnosed because to her, mommies don't get sick."

Clinical trials are ongoing for patients with myelodysplastic syndromes. To learn more about clinical trials, call the Cancer Information Service at (800) 4-CANCER.

Garden City Hospital will host a blood drive in Denise DeRaud's name, Wednesday and Thursday from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. April 28 and 29. Donations will be accepted on a walk-in basis and the public is encouraged to attend.

Crisis brings home what's important in life

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON STAFF WRITER

Annette Russo didn't have much to celebrate Feb. 12 despite it being her birthday.

Not only did the day mark the death of her father, three years prior, but she found herself in Michigan giving blood in hopes of saving her sister's life.

"I said a silent prayer to my father," recalled Russo of New York who was being tested as a possible bone marrow donor for her sister Denise DeRaud of Redford.

Later that evening, Russo, an investment operations manager on Wall Street, received word she was a perfect match.

"I screamed at the top of my lungs when they called. I was overwhelmed with joy but then reality sinks in and you think 'what if it still doesn't work."

In just two weeks, Russo will return to Michigan with her two children and begin preparation for the bone marrow transplant. The 31year-old will first receive Neupogen injections, a medication that spurs bone marrow production so that an abundance "spills over" into her blood stream before it's harvested May 10 during the transplant.

"It's amazing how Denise has tackled this thing with such courage and grace," said Russo. "I'm amazed. I told her last night I don't think I could be this strong if it was me."

The day of the transplant, Russo will undergo a simple procedure that is no more painful than a pin prick. She will have blood drawn intravenously, filtered through a pheresis machine that spins the donation, separates the marrow and through a second intravenous line, returns her blood back to her body.

"You know the saying, 'out of sight, out of mind?' This sheds a whole new light on how much we depend on these people to save our lives. You may never give it a second thought until something like this happens. I'm depending on those doctors to save my sister's life."

Russo said she wonders if things like this aren't "meant to happen."

"It has made us stop and ask ourselves what's important in our life. You take a step back and look at what life has given you."

DeRaud's other sister, Michele Rice of Canton, has taken a family leave from work to help care for DeRaud's children prior to and following the procedure. Russo will fly in from New York May 4, six days before the transplant and remain in Redford another eight days following the procedure to share the responsibility of caring for her nieces while her sister remains hospitalized.

"I'd cut my left arm off to save my sister," said Russo.

Both Russo and DeRaud stressed the importance of not only giving blood but going a step further and becoming a donor with the National Bone Marrow Program (www.marrow.org). The cost for the tissue typing test ranges from $35 to $90, depending on the donor center, the level of testing performed and the laboratory that completes the test.

However, there are alternative methods for being tested. Some donor centers will ask for whole blood or. blood component donations in exchange for the cost of the testing. There also may be funding available, an upcoming drive or a waiting list through the donor center.

Madonna University will be the site of a volunteer bone marrow donor recruitment drive from 12-6 p.m. Monday, April 19, in the science wing. This drive will register donors with the National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP). Anyone between the ages of 18 and 60 who is in good general health and not excessively overweight can be a potential donor.

Bileti and Messina announce that the operation of both companies will continue uninterrupted with the change in ownership.

SCRAPING BY

Bad-breath problems often occur as a result of surplus anaerobic bacteria in the mouth that emit malodorous suffur compounds. These bacteria thrive on protein found in plaque, bacteria thrive on protein found in plaque, food debris, and dead cells. While brushing and rinsing with mouthwashes somewhat help eliminate these problem bacteria, they do very little to get rid of the anaerobic bacteria that tend to gather in colonies at the back of the tongue. This is where tongue scraping comes in. Middle Eastern cultures have used tongue scrapers for centuries, and now dentists in this country are beginning to introduce tongue-scraping appliances to their patients. Scrapers remove the bacteria-laden coating that forms

The report, posted on a financial Web site run by Yahoo (www.yahoo.com/), involved California-based PairGain, a maker. of high-speed access products used by phone companies. When investors clicked the Yahoo link, they were transferred to a new page, formatted to look like a Bloomberg (www.bloomberg.com/) news site.

It ended up at 9.38 at the end of the day after Bloomberg published its own story, denying the bogus feature and quoting an ECI spokesman as saying that company was not in talks to buy PairGain.

A Yahoo official later said that once the portal learned of the bogus story, it was immediately pulled.

"To some extent, a lot of the onus falls on the individual investor," said Mike Riley, senior producer of Yahoo Finance. "We don't, by any means, encourage people to trade based on any one message on a board."

man was charged with fabricating the news story. The suspect, Gary Dale Hoke, 25, turned out to be an employee of PairGain Technologies Inc , He was arrested at his apartment in Raleigh and charged with securities fraud,

The case is the first stock manipulation scheme using the Internet that has ever been filed but it serves as a forerunner of what surely will be many more attempts to influence the market through false reports.

Internet stock fraud isn't the only thing that has the online industry worried. Take computer viruses, for example.

"Melissa is another warning even more quickly and cause significantly more damage," Pethia warned.

The Melissa virus spread over the Internet inside of Microsoft Word documents to thousands of computer users, but did little damage other than clogging email servers and forcing some companies to shut down computers for a short time.

Damage from Melissa was "significantly contained" thanks to warnings from law enforcers and the media that spread almost as fast as the virus itself. said Michael Vatis, head of the FBI's National Infrastructure

Y2K loans available for small businesses

A new loan to help small businesses prepare for the year 2000 (Y2K) has been introduced by Comerica Bank.

This new loan will enable small businesses to prepare for Y2K through the purchase or upgrade of computer equipment.

Unlike regular equipment loans, which generally amortize over three years, the Y2K loan for small businesses is extended over a five-year period.

Comerica Bank developed the Y2K loan as a way to reach out to small businesses regarding their year 2000 preparation.

Another way Comerica is raising awareness about Y2K is by sponsoring a workshop for small business owners. Called "Managing Y2K Risks," the workshop will be held Thursday, April 29, at Comerica's Southfield-based training center.

This loan is believed to be unique to the state of Michigan.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE UPDATE

Alzheimer's disease is the most common dementia (countive and memory decline) in people over the age of 65. It affects approximately 4 million Americans and ranks as the fourth leading cause of death after heart disease, cancer and stroke. The emotional and social impact of this disease is suffered not only by patients, but also the caregivers.

The functional and behavioral decline in Alzheimer's disease result from destruction of the nerve cells that control memory, thinking and behavior. Initially short-term memory fails and there is decreased ability to perform familiar tasks. As the disease gradually robs people from cognitive and social skills; behavioral symptoms such as aggression, disorientation and wandering are seen. Older individuals, especially those with family history of Alzheimer's disease are at high risk. Complaints of social withdrawal, depression and decreased awareness of time along with memory decline require prompt medical attention and early diagnosis."

The future holds promise for effectively treating this "silent epidemic", and current treatments significantly improve symptoms. When given in uncomplicated disease, a new therapy improved cognitive function in 12 weeks. Treatment of early symptoms can help prevent long-term facility placement, preserve dignity and reduce caregiver stress.

Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra

Orchestra devotes year to Ellington

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

Detroit bass player Rodney Whitaker is a passionate musician with an equal passion for the history of his art.

The two interests are neatly dovetailing with his participation as a member of the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, which is devoting this entire year to a celebration of Duke Ellington's centennial.

Edward Kennedy Ellington was born April 29, 1899, in Washington, D.C., and went on to become the most prolific, and many would argue, the most creative composer of the 20th century.

The LCJO under the direction of Wynton Marsalis-brings its Ellington celebration, "America in Rhythm & Tune" to Ann Arbor's Hill Auditorium Friday, April 23, part of a 36-city tour.

"I grew up thinking of Ellington's Orchestra as a dance band. The band had all those hits, 'Take the A Train' and 'Satin Doll,' there were so many," Whitaker said. "But he expanded the tradition of jazz to concert music." Ellington was a musician, band leader and composer. He won initial fame for his songs but soon moved into virtually every form of musical composition including musical theater, suites, movie accres and secred music. "I think, for example, of such What: Lincoln Center pieces as 'The Jazz Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis Tatooed Bride' or Celebrating the 'Harlem,' which Ellington Centenniwe're performing, al." CAPA students also have the chance to perform in Crackin' Up, an improvisational comedy group, and Off Off Broadway, a troupe performing hit songs from musicals. Crackin' Up has performed murder mystery theater at the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford.

"They're never without something to be in," said Mack. "They develop self confidence by the mere fact they have to perform in front of people. They're developing their bodies. All students are required to take dance. They also develop creative problem solving skills."

While Andres is heading for Broadway, students like Amanda Fleming participate in CAPA for the fun of it. She's not into sports, so acting and singing in CAPA productions allows her to socialize during and after school.

"I want to be a history teacher," said Fleming. "Theater is too competitive

The discussion, however, shouldn't be limited to talk about talented Tigers. Norman "Turkey" Stearnes' Babe Ruth-like statistics certainly rate him among the best to play the game. The arm-flapping, home-run gobbling Stearnes played with the Detroit Stars of the Negro baseball league in the 1920s and 1930s.

Unfortunately, because of the color of Stearnes' skin, not'the potency of his bat nor fielding prowess, he has been relegated to the heap of baseball trivia." But the game of recognition for Stearnes and other black players has been pushed into extra innings due to the popular appeal of "Discover Great-

"Almost everyone can relate to baseball," said David M. Egner, exhibitions coordinator at the museum. "The story of baseball is that it provided equal opportunity, the best players shine.".

That's certainly the story since Jackie Robinson crossed the color line in 1947, when he became the first black player in the major leagues. Robinson, a perennial all-star, won rookie of the year, and two years later, was named the league's most valuable player.

But despite popular opinion, the contributions of black players in professional baseball didn't begin with Robinson.

Before Robinson, Larry Doby, Hank Aaron, Ernie Banks, Willie Mays, Don Newcombe and Roy Campanella demonstrated the ludicrous notion of "separate but equal" on the diamond, there was a rich, entertaining history of prodigious feats, daffy nicknames and perseverance amid the ugly prepression of racism.

In photos that document the rise and fall of the Negro Leagues, a bright light is cast on those who played in the anadows of the American pastime.

Many baseball devotees know of the legendary feats of Kristen Mudge, like Andres, is working her way toward the big stage. A CAPA junior, Mudge is instrumental in implementing the collaboration with the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford begun in 1993. As a member of the board, Mudge carries on the Guild's mission of offering students a chance to share the theater and its lighting and staging equipment.

"I'm the connection between the two, finding out when we can use the theater," said Mudge. "The Guild covers all the expenses and receives all the money from ticket sales."

This is Mudge's third year in the CAPA program and she's loving every minute of it. Although she's been acting since middle school, Mudge currently enjoys working with lights and sound, the behind-the-scenes jobs that can make or break a show. She hasn't given up the stage though. Mudge recently played Alexandra in the Theatre Guild's "Little Foxes."

"CAPA's a highly advanced program and you learn more in depth," said Mudge. "I feel working at the Guild is important to experience what it's like to perform in a different theater. The Guild is far more open with the creativeness. In the schools, we're restricted to what we canand can't do. At the Guild we can stay closer to the script."

Theatre Guild president Stephanie Stephan thinks the partnership is essential if the art is to have a future.

"We're trying to promote the art in the school," said Stephan. "By giving the kids a real space to work in, we hope they come back. In a sense we're cultivating our theater people. It's a great way to get people to help with the productions."

"Putting on a play at the Guild makes the students feel more grown up," said Mack. "It excites the kids and anytime you excite the kids it brings a little more energy to the production."

Long time ties

Mack's taught in the CAPA program since 1986 when Seymour Levine first founded and coordinated the curriculum for CAPA. Levine met Mack after watching a play she had been hired to direct at the Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford.

"The Guild was struggling and they were looking for ways to make their program stronger,' said Mack. "Usually with kids in Mack's cast for "The Diary of . a production, you get a bigger audience. The Guild makes money and it's of no cost to us."

Mack's students are learning more than just theater while working on "The Diary of Anne Frank." That's what CAPA is all about.

"Once again, it's a script students can learn from," said Mack. Besides having historical merits, it relays life values. It's led to a lot of discussions on ethnic cleansing and how to keep a positive attitude when things are at their worst."

"In 'Happy Go Lucky Local' there are several solos, most are written, but he was the first and only composer who could write an improvisational phrase and not make it sound corny, Whitaker said. "A lot of classical composers will write an improvisation and and it sounds false."

As part of the LCJO celebration, the orchestra has released a new CD, "Live in Swing City, Swingin' With Duke," on Columbia, which is taken from their upcoming Great Performances presentation on PBS May 12. Whitaker plays a swinging solo on "Happy Go Lucky Local." The other music also swings beautifully with guest appearances by planist Cyrus Chestnut and sax player Illinois Jacquet. The Lincoln Center has also published a commemorative book with essays and photos of Ellington's career, "Jump for Joy," (Paperback Original, $25). In addition to making good use of his soloists, Ellington was also receptive to the influence of others. In addition to his longtime collaboration with arranger Billy Strayhorn, Ellington was also influenced by trumpeter Bubber Miley, who gave the band a New Orleans sound in the '20s, and Clark Terry who came from the Count Basie Orchestra and gave a little of its flavor to Ellington in the '50s, Whitaker said.

"It takes a lot of humility to allow other musicians to help define your sound," Whitaker said.

Whitaker, 31, developed his sound while growing up in Detroit. He began playing violin when he was 8 and took up the contra bass in junior high school. But it was a neighbor who turned him on to jazz.

"I had a neighbor who was heavy into jazz," he said. "I had played violin and switched to bass when I was in the eighth grade. He saw me coming home with the bass and he gave me 10 records to listen to. Almost all of them had Paul Chambers on group 4-Sight and now with the LCJO. He has also taught at the University of Michigan and Michigan State.

He's developed a deep respect for LCJO leader, trumpeter Wynton Marsalis.

"Before I started playing with him I had one impression. I thought of him as a conservativeperson, but after, I started to see a different person," Whitaker said. "He could be conservative, but he believed what he believed. He was willing to work at a high level and put in the time. I've never seen anyone with his work ethic."

As composer in his own right, Whitaker said he was impressed with how Marsalis would squeeze in time to compose and work on arrangements. Marsalis recently created arrangements of Ellington's music for a joint appearance of the LCJO and the New York Philharmonic on "Live from Lincoln Center" on PBS.

Whitaker said being on the road he and other musicians are always scouting out new music.

"After every tour, I come home and I'll have five or six compositions," Whitaker said.

Wonderful event

"The Michigan Youth Arts Festival is a rich, wonderful event," said Alexander-Frank, vice president of Detroit Area Film & Television, a nonprofit educational organization dedicated to promoting visual literacy through film and video. "How often do students have the opportunity to get feedback from their peers. It's truly a celebration of the arts. How many opportunities do these kids have to screen their work. It's magical to have your work up on the screen. A lot of these kids are quiet. They're not singers or dancers and they're able to hear the favorable comments from people their own age."

Teachers' Association string chamber music competition, the quartet has performed at the Great Lakes Chamber Music Festival. The group was founded in 1995 and coached by Detroit Symphony Orchestra cellist Debra Fayroian.

"They're a wonderful quartet," said Martha Ilgenfritz, chair of the Michigan American String Teachers Association. "As first prize winners they were given the opportunity to play at the Michigan Youth Arts Festival. The festival is important to perpetuate music among kids and give them the opportunity to play. They have the chance to share everything from film to dance. Everything is showcased." Among other local high school students participating in the Michigan Youth Arts Festival are Lindsay Noechel, Livonia Churchill and Katherine Palms, Carolyn Assarian and James Bonsall, Bloomfield Hills Lahser, creative writing; Francis Reade, Berkley, drama and creative writing; Kaitlyn Jarzembowski, Maureen McDonald, Allena

"The festival was awesome last year because there were people in plays, musicians and people who made films performing throughout the weekend," said Bresler. "The master classes meant being exposed to different styles of modern dance. It's also an experience to perform on that size of stage."

Chambers, who played with John Coltrane's quartet, grew up in Detroit, as well, and graduated from Cass Tech High School. "I said I want to be Paul Chambers. He's my hero," Whitaker said.

Whitaker has made a name for himself on the local and national jazz scene. He's played with many of the top names in the music, recording as a band leader, with Roy Hargrove, with the young parolee, but "when Gil sees Luke James swing the bat he believes, believes in the game and a God who intends men to play it." Luke is a natural. With him on board, the team can't lose.

Whitaker is optimistic about the Detroit jazz scene, though he said he'd like to see area musicians playing in concert situation rather than just the club scene.

But there's another cost to winning - a financial one. Uniforms, travel expenses and equipment don't come cheap. And the team's sponsor isn't contributing much these days. So it's up to Gil to make up the difference from his modest income as a steel sales rep. Ironically, his aging Jewish immigrant father, who dislikes sports and made certain his son had a "proper" career, is inadvertently financing the team. With power of attorney, Gil can draw on his father's bank account, no questions asked. That's OK, provided the old man doesn't linger too long.

The coach isn't the only one with a passion to win. There's also Ben Mercer, who "loves the game ... the dance of the infield practice and the pop of the ball in the catcher's mitt, the flicker of signals from the catcher with a man on second, and the lean of a ballplayer as he rounds third base."

In fact, Ben is even more enamored with the game than with Emily, an Ann Arbor history of art major whose front door sign, "Property is Theft," belies her willingness to spend the considerable commissions Ben earns as stockbroker. Once a player in the major leagues, Ben is the star pitcher for his team. But lately, his arm has been acting up. What will happen when ice work? Does he have the guts to do whatever it/takes to win, like throwing illegal spitters loaded with Vaseline?

Lasser's approach to story telling is like a summer breeze: soft and beguiling. We move easily from the conflict-ridden baseball diamond to the sterile order of a nursing home to a student ghetto described as "a magical place where bicycles hang from trees, refrigerators rest on porches ... and paint chips float in the wind." Plot construction is seamless, as events seem to unfold naturally, effortlessly.

The same for Lasser's characters. They are sympathetic, and it's easy to identify with their goals and frustrations; the competitive spirit is, after all, universal. And like us, they are flawed. Rationalizing less-thanacceptable behavior has become a way of life.

Literature that is judgmental or draws straight lines between cause and effect is not longer fashionable. Yet it's hard to read Lasser's first novel outside the context of a morality tale. "Battle Creek" shows us what the price of winning - at any cost can be. As the story suggests, all too often an innocent victim rather than the perpetrator pays the price.

"Battle Creek" will be available in local bookstores in May.

Batado Inglanda (

by former Cranbrook and University of Michigan graduate Scott Lasser. It takes us back to baseball as it should be played; for the love of the game, without million-dollar contracts, artificial turf and pricey box seats. Koch & Sons Class A Amateur Baseball Club of Pontiac has made the finals four years in a row. A "dynasty" in its own right, it has spawned more bigleague players than any other amateur team. Yet each year, when the national championship is held in Battle Creek, the Michigan players lose.

Coach Gil Davison swears it won't happen again. This year he'll be hard. No more keeping "two-fifty hitters who play all positions adequately but none exceptionally." The normally soft-hearted coach is determined that his team will win, no matter what the cost.

And cost it does, although the price originally seems small. Gil Davison is encouraged to recruit Luke James, a rookie who spent five years in prison for a crime of . passion. Cautious by nature, Davison is reluctant to meet the packs and pain killers no longer . (248)644-1314.

Martha Raye had local roots

Take it From the Big Mouth: The Life of Martha Raye

By Jean Maddern Pitrone (The University Press of Kentucky, $25)

> This hit-and-miss biography tells the story of Margy Reed, the granddaughter of a Michigan smelter, who was born to hard-scrabbling vaudevillians at a charity hospi-VICTORIA tal in Butte. DIAZ Montana, in the early days of this century. Her brother, Buddy, was born literally backstage at a Grand Rapids theater when she was still a toddler. Both were groomed for the stage almost before they could walk. Margy would go on to fame and fortune, and change her name to Martha Raye. Buddy would die in obscurity in his early 20s of alcohol-related problems, a would a younger sister, Melodye.

Martha Raye made her stage debut at age 3-1/2, singing a spirited version of the pop tune "Jada," as her mother, Peggy, accompanied her on the piano. The little girl's initial performance drew so much applause that her parents, always looking for ways to acquire more and better bookings, incorporated her immediately into their vaudeville act. Soon, Buddy took his first bows onstage, and not long after, the talented brothersister team "adapted themselves to ... starring roles."

While the children's appeal to audiences brought the family a measure of financial success they had never enjoyed before, it came at a price that would affect. Martha Raye permanently, The nature of the vaudeville circuit in its heyday required that performers travel almost constantly from city to city. In fact, it was unusual if entertainers found more than about three days. Education for school-age performers often fell by the wayside, and consequently, she was only marginally literate for the rest of her life, according to this biography.

By the time her brother and sister died, Raye was an established screen star, stage performer and nightclub entertainer. Eventually, she would make a name for herself in television. also, hosting "The Martha Raye Show" in the early '50s, and making numerous guest appearances on other shows alongside such stars as Bob Hope, Milton Berle and Steve Allen.

But her professional success was nearly always shadowed by what her friend Milton Berle called "personal disaster," She was married seven times - the first shortly after she arrived in Hollywood, to makeup master Bud Westmore; the last to Mark Harris, a "fan" 33 years her junior. Perhaps none of her marriages, though, were quite as unhappy as the distant, rather cold relationship she had with her only child, Melodye, who, obviously if we are to believe this biography, played second fiddle to her mother's all-important career.

Readers who will remember Raye chiefly as the "take-it-fromthe-big-mouth" spokesperson for Polident's television commercials may not be aware of the true extent of her singular devotion to her favorite audience, the American military, until they have read this book. Beginning in World War II, Raye would visit and entertain some of the most remote outposts on her own, even helping out as a "nurse" at field hospitals and extending invitations to the soldiers to visit her when they returned home (many took her up on the invitation). Eventually, she received the Presidential Medal of Freedom. On her death, she was laid to rest at Fort Bragg military themselves at one location for cemetery, the only civilian so honored by the famed Special Forces Unit, the Green Berets.

In her research, Michigan writer Pitrone has uncovered several events in Raye's life that will hold special appeal for Detroit-area readers. Among them: the week of Aug. 7, 1937, when the entertainer broke all admission records at Detroit's glittery Michigan Theater; the night in 1940 when she opened at the Cass Theatre with Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler in "Hold on to Your Hats"; and her sometimes rowdy appearances at Hamtramck's hot night spot "The Bowery" during the booming post war years.

Prizefighter Rocky Graziano said of Raye's performances that she "burned up more energy than a guy in a 15-round fight." And those of us who have never witnessed Raye perform in any medium will remember her rapid-fire speech, her exaggerated mannerisms, her special talent for the zippy ad lib. Even if we were not diehard fans of Martha Raye, few in an audience would complain that she lacked verve.

Perhaps, for that very reason, one wishes that the writing of this initial biography contained more liveliness. While "Take It from the Big Mouth" includes a substantial amount of revealing information and Pitrone seems to have taken special pains to present it fairly and objectively, the writer's style seems slightly dry and remote, tending to make us feel rather distanced from her subject, rather than drawing us closer. Quite often, "Take It from the Big Mouth" reads almost like a mere listing of events in Raye's life, rather than the unfolding of what could have been on these pages a highly dramatic story.

Voltaire's "Candide" is a story of youth.

So it is only appropriate that the University of Michigan's Musical Theater Department should produce an effervescent, rollicking, giddy and, yet, beautiful staging of Leonard Bernstein's dashing musical pastiche. "Candide" has some of Bernstein's most haunting, reflective, beautiful melodies in the context of what is essentially a slapstick operetta. But Arthur Sullivan would also twine beautiful melodies around and through W.S. Gilbert's hilarious spoofs. And this is definitely Bernstein in a Gilbert & Sullivan mode and going them one better at times.

The City of Plymouth has Richard Wilbur's lyrics (with additional verse from Stephen Sondheim and John LaTouche) aren't quite as biting or politically specific as Gilbert, but they are amusing and U-M director Brent Wagner has taken the cue to add some elements inspired as much by The Three Stooges and the Marx Brothers as by the book. Except for some missed lighting cues, most of the staging was flawlessly funny.

It is the young performers who rise to the occasion here, mugging, pratfalling and preening with abandon but being true to Bernstein's music as well.

Candide is the naive young student of the blissfully optimistic Dr. Pangloss. His other students are Candide's love object Cunegonde, her brother Maximilian and the saucy Paquette. They discover in a worldwide adventure that this may not be the "best of all possible worlds."

David Reichard's Candide has a sweet, blank face that he manipulates into several funny faces. He also has a light but expressive voice.

Jessica Murphy gets to display both vocal range and a sense of comic timing on the showy "Glitter and Be Gay," as Cunegonde. She captures both the musical complexity and the inherent wit of the song and the character.

Brittany Brown's Paquette is a lively flirt with a touch of steel. Joe Harrell drew hoots of laughter as the self absorbed Maximilian, especially when forced to appear in drag.

Courtney Balan does a broad Yiddish theater routine as the Old Lady and has the audience with her throughout.

Barrett Foa is our genial guide as Voltaire and a mugging ham as the effusive Pangloss.

Musical director Ben Whitely has the student orchestra performing excellently, drawing out all the rich beauty of Bernstein's romantic score.-Several choral sections, especially the Auto-da-Fe, are performed with panache.

Contrary to the images of an idyllic, leisurely game, there's a potent parable of the struggles of racial tolerance surrounding America's favorite pastime.

Until the U.S. Supreme Court the exhibit and a former decision, Plessy v. Ferguson in 1892, blacks and whites played on the same teams. With "sepa-rate but equal" written into law, a "gentleman's agreement" among baseball owners restrict-

Consequently, black teams began to barnstorm towns, challenging local semi-pro teams and eventually established their own league.

"People who've gone through the exhibit have said that they remember their grandparents talk about these players," said Lester. "They thought these players were just folk tales."

Indeed, there is a sense of the mythic and an enchanted folk history in the photos of old ball parks, buses with the sign of the team emblazoned the side and Dissecting the histories of the anecdotes of Herculean feats on the diamond.

82 consecutive games to Josh 'Gibson hitting more than 1,000 home runs.

Yet there's no turning away from the most compelling part of the exhibit.

Before Brown v. Board of Education and the Civil Rights Act, there was the graceful Robinson establishing a new standard for both white and black players. While Michael Jordan might have reinvented the notion of "celebrity athlete," Robinson embodied "social justice" every time he took the field.

"Baseball was breaking barriers before anyplace else," said Lester. "Americans saw white and blacks coming together for a common cause.

"When teammates hug each other, they're not thinking about the color of their skin."

Ironically, the demise of the Negro Leagues commenced with the integration of the major leagues. By 1960, all that remained of the league were occasional scrimmages among old-timers.

"Their ultimate victory was integration," said Lester. "Fans wanted to see the best --whether black or white."

Rimless frames make eyeglasses almost invisible

I hate glasses. Funny, but I don't think that I'm the only person who feels that way. Personally, when I was 40, I had to get "reading" glasses. Remember - it took me 40 years to pick up my first pair of specs. At 41, when I went back to my optometrist at Roland Optics, I had an eye examination and I needed bifocals!

JEFFREY

"It's a Commie/Pinko plot," I screamed. "How could I need glasses after 40 years, and bifocals the following year?" My optometrist quite patiently replied, "Jeff, it has to do with, how can I put this gently, age."

Gently? Gently?

Now I have always been honest with and about myself. The hair gone. The body — still passes. The teeth — all my own. But my eyes?

They've always been my best feature. What a downer, I thought! I did not want to have them covered, especially since everything else was going to ... become more sophisticated!

So I have been wearing glasses for the past 12 years. My vision has not reached the point where contact lenses are a viable option. Can you imagine wishing for worse vision? So I have been wearing the hated "accessory" and seeing better. After all, isn't that the general idea?

' In any case, I decided to speak with my optometrists in Southfield and Rochester to ask a few questions that my clients have asked me over the years.

Optometrists Mickey Weishaus and lay Gotteeman own Roland Optics in Southfield Weisman and Optometrists in Rochester. There are no other people I would trust more with my eyes, and I felt they would be the ones with the answers. Can anyone wear contact lenses? The answer was a qualified yes. The gualification - people whose vision is very dry cannot, but even in their cases there is a possibility. Newest innovation --- disposable bifocal contacts!

Comfort zone: Anne Klein's spring suiting coupled comfort with style at a show held Thursday at Saks Fifth Avenue.

Anne Klein offers wearable, elegant apparel for spring

BY NICOLE STAFFORD SPECIAL EDITOR

nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

Color mania has driven many spring and summer fashion collections, but women won't find the obsession reflected in Anne Klein's wearable and stylish offerings this season.

Instead, they'll encounter glimpses of color - subdued periwinkle, metallic gray with lavender undertones and a sophisticated pale blue the company calls "rain."

Anne Klein also offers women an easy-to-swallow alternative to basic black - midnight, navy, graphite and ink.

The clothing company's spring 1999 collection was presented Thursday evening by its design team, Isaac Franc and Ken Kaufman, at Saks Fifth Avenue, Somerset Collection in Troy. The show benefited the Beaumont Comprehensive Breast Care Center, honored six local women and paid tribute to Joan Helen Emde, a local community leader who recently passed away from breast cancer.

But wearable color isn't the only characteristic of Anne Klein's spring collection likely to appeal to local women.

Skirt lengths varied from above-theknee to floor-length; most stopped just below with knee with side slits that returned elegance and sophistication.

Roomy rayon pants - most had wide bottoms - were paired with comfortable tank shells or camisoles and both subdued and shiny fabrics.

Cargo and drawstring pants made a significant appearance, but clam dig gers and other cropped, form-fitting and perhaps all-to-revealing - pant styles were kept to a minimum.

The result - a wearable collection of sophisticated, elegant clothing that neither skirted the trends nor was dominated by them.

"And, that's what we're trying to do," said Franco upon presenting the collection. "We're trying to keep the clothes simple, clean, modern and luxurious."

🔳 Will an astigmatism affect my ability to wear contact lenses?

ŕ

Absolutely not. A new innovation is the Toric lens. This is a weighted lens specifically created for astigmatic eyes. (That's my problem, and I look forward to being a Toric devotee.)

What about Lasik surgery? How do I know if I'm a candidate? What are my options?

This is the newest and best type of corrective laser surgery say the optometrists. There are no needles, no pain, and the procedure only takes seven to 10 minutes. The recovery period is 48 hours.

What are the latest trends in eyewear?

For this question, I spoke with the diva of style, Phyllis Moore. This is a woman I would not only trust with my eyes but also my life. She has an uncanny ability to match the face with frame, and beautifully so.

"Rimless glasses are quite popular, as are the metal rims," says the diva.

"Also, plastic frames are making a comeback. These frames would have fashion tints in the lenses to add to the total look," she said.

Interestingly, rimless glasses seem to "float," rather than "be there" onthe face. Plastic rims, on the other hand, are a definite fashion statement. There's no mistaking their existence. The choice is yours.

Personally, as a makeup artist, I prefer the "no-glasses-at-all" look. To me, there is nothing worse than someone dressed in flawless formal wear at, say, a wedding, and they're wearing glasses! It just does not work. But the rimless numbers do sound like they would do the trick.

Yours truly has been invited by Weisman Optometrists in Rochester to do a free lecture/demonstration and seminar with the optometrists, and Phyllie Moore, on Sunday, May 23. There will also be refreshments and a question and answer session.

Reservations are extremely limited (it is free, after all), and the number to call is (248) 651-7986. I look forward to "seeing" you and your friends there.

Designer team stresses silhouettes over bold colors

Anne Klein's designer team of Isaac Franco and Ken Kaufman was in town to present its spring 1999 collection. We caught up with the designers at the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham and asked them about style and trends for the season.

Q: Characterize the styles for the cropped pant. 1999 spring and summer season.

Franco: It's a combination of many different things. It starts from fabrication (of) the colors that we have this season ... and then it goes into the silhouettes. We have a wide range of silhouettes this season, (just with) our skirt lengths - they go from below the knee and to the knee and to the midcalf, then we have the floor-grazing skirts.

Kaufman: I think there's a sense of ease, a sense of luxury. It's very wearable and understandable, yet luxurious, elegant.

Q: What is the most important trend of the season?

Franco: It might be the long skirt or the Capri pant or more of a clamdigger kind of pant.

Kaufman: Something shiny, something iridescent, something lustrous. ... Can't live without a sweater set.

Q: Which of the season's trends are most likely to carry over to the spring and summer styles for 2000?

Franco: I think it's still going to be the experimentation with the length of pants, definitely. I think that it might not be the Capri pant the way we've seen it for spring or the clamdigger pant. It might be a wider,

Kaufman: I definitely think we smell and feel the walking short coming up on the horizon. It will definitely be important for us as we go forward.

Q: What one piece of apparel would you recommend women purchase for their spring and summer wardrobes?

Franco: I hate to limit it to one. The long pleated skirt is one of my favorite pieces for the season, especially in a light shade of blue, or we have a beautiful shade of platinum, or the sweater set.

Kaufman: I think accessories are exciting for the season. ... The belt, the handbag changes, the total look.

Q: What do you think will most excite women about Anne Klein's spring and summer collections?

Franco: I think the strategic placement of color. ... Ken and I don't believe in tons and tons of color. It's just the strategic placement of color, matching cardigans or jackets, all in

Replacing black: Anne Klein showed navy as a color alternative to basic black in key pieces like a tank shell and long skirt.

It's not this bright color that's jolting and shocking. I think it still has to be very sophisticated.

Kaufman: It's color that lets women's personality and self shine through, rather than the color of the garment. I think it's very well placed the right color, it's "grayed out" color. color, it's handsome color. It accentuates the woman, rather than overpowers her. It's a fine balance to do that, and we've been having fun doing that for spring, as well as going into fall.

Plymouth, England, writer shares her hometown best

(Editor's note: We received an e-mail from Melanie McDonagh telling us about a new book by writers from Plymouth, England, and their interest in other Plymouths here in the United States. We suggested a travel story on what it's like in the other Plymouth.)

BY MEL MCDONAGH SPECIAL WRITER

My name is Mel and I live in Plymouth, England. I belong to a local writing group, and when I contacted The Observer & Eccentric about our first publication I was asked to write a bit about my home city which could be printed alongside some photographs.

Plymouth (pop. approximately. 250,000) is the main seaport for the southwest of England in the county of Devon. We have a busy Naval Dockyard and a commercial port for the cross channel ferry to France and Spain. Steeped in history, it is a city with much to offer to its inhabitants and tourists from all over the world. I will tell you a little about my favorite places.

The Hoe is the waterfront area with sea water swimming pools, public gardens and large expanses of grassy hills and greens. The Hoe is always busy in summer with crowds of swimmers. strollers, sunlovers and loving couples enjoying the beautiful views over Plymouth Sound to the Breakwater and Drakes Island, Surprisingly you will also find that The Hoe is also fairly busy in winter with locals embracing an ozone laden breeze as they walk their dogs or children on a dry afternoon or men enjoying a pint of good English beer in a pub with a view.

Sir Francis Drake spotted the Spanish Armada's approach whilst playing bowls on The Hoe. He finished his game before going on to defeat their ships and stop an invasion, thus saving us from a lifetime of paella and sangria.

The Barbican was the original point of entry or departure for the city and was home to many rich merchant men. Today it is a shopping area for locals and tourists alike and a National Marine Aquarium has recently been built upon the site of the old fish market as a new and much improved fish market is now being used by the local fishing fleets. Here, Lawrence of Arabia stopped to have tea with family friends not far from the oldest street in Plymouth, ludicrously named New Street and an old Seaman's Bethel is now The Barbican Theatre, home to the Waterfront Writers who meet every week. The theater is recently refurbished but still has many of its original features. The famous Mayflower Steps where the Pilgrim Fathers left for the Americas are also here now, but now only lead to the decks of small boats that run sightseeing trips or water taxis.

Dartmoor is a large area of natural beauty which borders Devon and Cornwall. Sometimes windswept and desolate and often dangerous it is home to. Dartmoor ponies, Buckland Abbey (once the home of Sir Francis Drake), the infamous Dartmoor Jail and many delightful country inns with thatched roofs, home cooking and log fires (I know few people who could resist stopping a least once, for a sniff of the barmaid's apron at one of these hostelries).

Also it is said that Dartmoor was the inspiration for the Sherlock Holmes mystery, "The Hound of the Baskervilles," after Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made one of his many visits to Plymouth.

The Royal Albert Bridge spans the River Tamar. Built in 1859 and at the cost of many lives, it was the last thing to be engineered by Isambard Kingdom Brunel as he became very ill. Although the general opinion at the time was that it would be unable to withstand the weight of the engines, on completion, Brunel insisted on being the first person to cross the Tamar in a railway engine. Now over a hundred years later it still carries the railway line from Cornwall to Devon although it is now joined by the Tamar Road Bridge. The road bridge is now the main escape route from Cornwall to Devon and, interestcrossing the border into Devon.

thriving shopping area by day and a sailor's paradise by night. Now most of the shops have moved into the town center leaving only Doc Price's Tattoo Parlour, still a strong attraction to many a brave hardy serviceman or civilian.

The Red Light district around Union Street is now more of a pale pink, but there are still many pubs and clubs and at 2 a.m. "The Strip" is the place to be for the serious people watcher with transport as taxis are rarer than sobriety in this part of town as closing time!

Of course, a special mention ingly, a toll is only charged when - must ge to Cap'n Jaspers which is praised far and wide as a catering establishment of merit.

plies huge bacon butties and steaming mugs of tea to those willing to brave the Westcountry weather. A perfect place to eat. drink and watch Plymouth go by.

We have many local food delicacies in Devon. Clotted cream is my favorite and I think probably the most famous. This is a spreadable cream with an edible ' yellow crust. Wonderful with anything!

The Pasty was originally eaten by Cornish miners but has now crossed the border to become Devon's favourite take-away meal. It was originally a pastry crust containing half sweet and half savoury filling with a thick Terrace, Laira, Plymouth, U.K. crimped edge which wasn't eaten when hungry would become mischievous and troublesome!

So this is my view of Plymouth, England, and I hope you have found it of interest. As a writer I feel that out surroundings affect creativity and I have certainly come to look at Plymouth with new eyes since writing this article. The Waterfront Writers anthology gives other writers' views of the city, both serious and humorous and is' available for £2 (approximately. $3.74) plus £1.50 (approximately. $1.80) post and packaging (sterling).

Forsmore information, contact Mrs. Melanie McDonagh, 3 Riga or e-mail at mel@mcdonaghmj.

Magic claims title

BY BRAD EMONS SPORTS WRITER bemons@ce.homecomm.net

The Westland John Glenn girls soccer team put on its scoring shoes Friday night, posting a 9-1 victory at Livonia Franklin.

Glenn is now 1-2-1 overall, while Franklin drops to 0-2-1.

The Rockets offensive assault was led by sophomore Sarah Pack, who scored twice and had three assists.

Sophomore midfielder Lacey Catarino chipped in with two goals and one assist, while Katie Krause also scored a pair of goals.____

Val Kurzynski, Julie Turner and Becky Jensen added the other Glenn goals.

Franklin, which has only three seniors on its roster, got a first-half goal from junior Alexis Bowman. Sophomore Deby Carlin had the assist as Franklin trailed 5-1 at halftime.

Glenn rebounded from Wednesday's 7-0 loss to Plymouth Salem (1-2-1).

"That's the way it goes in this league (Western Lakes)," Glenn coach Jerry Poniatowski said. "It's tough win or lose.

"Was I a little surprised? Yes, because the last time we played Franklin it was a 3-2 game.

"But our girls stepped up tonight and played a good game."

Pack and Catarino were the catalysts.

"They're Premier League players and its nice to have players like that," Poniatowski said. "We have a shallow bench, but a team like Salem has almost a full roster of those kind of players."

Glenn goalkeeper Jade Fukuda also stood out in the win.

"She was out all of last year with a torn ACL (anterior cruciate ligament) and she's getting her confidence back; Poniatowski said. "She's well trained and she's fearless. It takes guts to come back from an injury like that." For Franklin coach Mary Kay Hussey, the plan is to improve as the season goes along. Her roster is domi-

Wayne, Glenn hit links for 1st time

BY BRAD EMONS SPORTS WRITER bemons@oe.homecomm.net

Talk about getting your feet wet. Four high school girls golf teams braved chilly, rainy conditions Friday afternoon at Fellows Creek's West Course in a quad match that was called after five complete holes.

The abbreviated final team standings read: Southgate Anderson (107), Wayne Memorial (118), Dearborn (120) and Westland John Glenn (136).

"The weather was unbelievable, it was raining sideways," Wayne coach Dennis Chall said.

Three players tied for medalist honors - Wayne sophomore Allison Murphy, Mary Beth Brazell of Dearborn and Jen Dailey of Southgate - each shooting 25s.

Rounding out Wayne's contingent was junior Erin Scott, 29; freshman Annie Phillips and senior Tamara Hubbard, 32 each; sophomore Kayla Slezak, 38; junior Kristina Tsvetkoff, 43; and senior Jennifer Fortson, 54.

The Zebras, who lost 224-303 to Ypsilanti in their first-ever varsity match earlier in the week, are now an even 2-2 on the season.

Chall, who also serves as the Wayne boys coach, is literally starting from scratch with his girls squad. His wife Paula serves as an assistant coach.

"A lot of them have never touched a club before and I've been working on an individual basis with them since January," he said. "We're just really breaking ground and were working really hard so we can compete with the older, more established schools.

"We've had wonderful support from the Superintendent of Schools (Greg Baracy), along with the principal and the board of education to make this happen."

Glenn, making its varsity girls golf debut, was led by freshman Ann Sanford, who shot a 30.

She was followed by senior Michelle Merandi (31), sophomore Katie Provot (37), senior Nikki Steinhilb (38) and freshman Nicole Ziegler (44).

Coach Tom Nakamoto will also rely this season on senior Laura Engebretson, sophomore Michelle Powers, along with freshmen Amanda Fannin and Jennifer McDermott-this season.

"We gave it a pretty good shot today" considering the conditions," Nakamoto said. "This is pretty nice. It just adds another opportunity for girls to participate in athletics.

"We have a full schedule and we hope to have fun and enjoy the game."

Wayne Memorial picked the right time to gain its first baseball victory of the year.

The Zebras, snapped an 0-5 season start with a 7-6 victory Wednesday over Ypsilanti in the Mega Conference White Division opener for both teams.

Jon Judd started the game-winning rally by walking in the seventh. Courtesy runner Shawn McDaniel went to second on a fielders choice by Gary Stevens, who also reached base safely on the bunt. Both runners moved up on a balk. George Rodriguez then was intentionally walked, loading the bases.

McDaniel came home on a wild pitch for the game-winning run.

.CANTON 5, STEVENSON 3: Plymouth Canton, scoring all five runs in the fourth inning to erase a 3-0 deficit, ran its record to 6-1 overall with a WLAA crossover victory Wednesday against host Livonia Stevenson.

Losing pitcher Roy Rabe, who gave up six hits and five walks while fanning six in seven innings, took the loss. Four of the five runs were unearned.

Canton starter Ben Tucker worked the first 6% innings for Canton, allowing three runs on eight hits. He struck out five in raising his season record to 3-0. Joe Cortellini came on to earn the save.

Rabe had two hits, including a double and RBI single for Stevenson. Dave Stando and Brandon Gajda each contributed RBI singles as the Spartans feil to 0-1.

.N. FARMINGTON 5, CHURCHILL 4: In a WLAA crossover Wednesday, host North Farmington (1-0) tailled the game-winning run in the bottom of the eighth to beat Livonia Churchill (1-2).

Matt Kelmigian reached base on an error and scored on another Churchill error for the game-winning run.

Paul Mercier, in relief of starter Justin Draughn (who worked the first four innings), took the loss.

Mike Barnett, one of four North pitchers, earned the victory in relief. He also had two hits.

Rick Strain led Churchill with two hits. Eric Lightle, Brad Bescoe and Tim Greenleaf also knocked in runs for the Chargers.

•REDFORD CC 5-10, DeLaSALLE 0.6: Redford Catholic Central senior Anthony Tomey threw his first career no-hitter Wednesday, highlighting a doubleheader sweep over host Warren DeLaSalle.

Tomey's no hitter came in the Shamrocks' 5-0 victo ry in Game No. 1, CC completed the sweep with a 10-6 win in the nightcap.

Tomey, who has signed with Eastern Michigan University, had six strikeouts and walked three.

Senior catcher Chris Woodruff continued to solve DeLaSalle pitching, hitting a two-run double in the first Inning. He hit four of his six home runs last year against the Pilots.

Senior Casey Rogowski, who was 4-for-5 with four walks in the double-header, added a solo home in the fifth.

The Shamrocks added two insurance runs, both unearned, in the seventh against the Pilots' ace, who recorded 10 strikeouts.

In the second game, the Shamrocks scored six runs in the third and led 8-0 at one point before the Pilots rallied to make it close.

Starting pitcher Dan Duffey had a strange fifth inning, getting the Shamrocks into and out of trouble.

After experiencing control problems, Duffey was pulled with CC leading 8-2 and the bases loaded with no outs in the fifth.

The Pilots scored four runs to cut the deficit to 8-6 and threatened more but Duffey, who was moved to right field after being lifted from the mound, caught a fly ball and threw a DeLaSalle runner out at the plate to compete a double play.

"It was a great throw," Salter said. "He had been wild pitching, but from outfield he threw a strike home."

Senior left-hander Mark Cole, who relieved Duffey, wasn't scored upon in the sixth and seventh innings to earn the save. All of the DeLaSalle runs were charged to Duffey.

Rogowski had two doubles and a pair of RBI for the Shamrocks in the nightcap. Senior Dave Lusky also collected two hits and two RBI.

The Shamrocks played both games without star Bob Malek in centerfield, Malek was relegated to designated hitter duties after being hit by a pitched ball on his throwing elbow against Detroit Country Day Tuesday. He had one hit in the double header.

The win improved the Shamrocks to 4-0 overall, 2-0 in the Catholic League Central Division.

Whalers harpooned by London in series finale

BY DUNCAN E. WHITE STAFF WRITER dwhite@oe.homecomm.net

For those of you who missed Game 7 Thursday in the Plymouth Whalers' second-round Ontario Hockey League playoff series against the London Knights, it went a little something like this:

'Eh-hemm. Na, na, na, na; Na, na, na, na; Hey, hey, hey, gooood-bye!'

At least, that's what will be ringing in the Whalers' ears as they recall the final moments of their season — their impressive, promising season — following a 10-3 drubbing at the hands of the Knights.

Players and coaches were left to wonder what happened in this series as the Knights took over the ice with timely goal-scoring and thundering checks to pull off the series upset.

"I don't think there's a guy in this room that didn't expect our season to go into the later rounds of the playoffs," said Whalers head coach and general manager Pete DeBoer. "Obviously, they're disappointed and there is nothing to say to them. There's no way to make this easier. All they can do is learn from it.

"There are a lot of guys in here that will go on to play for professional hockey clubs and learning from this is all they can do."

If there ever was a good time to break into a house in London, Ontario, Thursday was the night, with a good portion of the town in Plymouth for the deciding game.

The only evidence of home-ice advantage for Plymouth was. perhaps, the property deed.

The announced attendance of 4,186 was a bipartisan crowd (one London player said as many as 1,900 fans made the trip from Canada), but the Knights' fans easily won the noise contest.

OHL PLAYOFFS

anthem louder, drowning out the young singer's performance. It was a loss on all fronts for the American hosts.

At one point late in the game, Plymouth was penalized for too. many players on the ice. Most likely, the referee would have caught the infraction anyway, but it was the London fans who made sure he noticed, yelling and pointing with six fingers raised.

Knights head coach Gary Agnew, who now holds a 3-1 career coaching record in Game 7s, thought the fan turnout definitely contributed to his team's dominating play.

"The core fans have been great all year," he said. "But this just started to go crazy in early February or late January when we started to get on a bit of a roll, and they've been following us ever since."

Even DeBoer noticed the clamor coming from the London cheering sections.

"I thought it was a great atmosphere with the two sets of fans going back and forth with each other," he said. "I think it was the best atmosphere we've had in this rink in the three years we've been here.

"We had a good crowd in here for Game 5, and I think it's starting to catch on. People are starting to appreciate how entertaining (OHL hockey) is."

London wasted no time finding the net as Tom Kostopoulosscored for the Knights just 29 seconds into the game.

Plymouth defenseman Paul Mara evened the score with a hard slapshot from the high-slot area just 48 seconds later, but Jay LeGault, Richard Pitirri, Krys Barch and Adam Saffer recorded the next four goals of London fan favorite, added his first goal to cap the scoring and Plymouth's season.

Kostopoulos, the game's first star, finished with two goals and two assists while teammate Pitirri (second star) had two goals and one assist.

Harold Druken, who was tied for the league lead in playoff goals with nine entering the game (and was the OHL's leading goal-scorer in the regular season), finished with just one assist for Plymouth.

Holsinger, who recorded the lowest goals-against average in OHL history during the regular season, also finished the year on a downturn and was pulled from the net after the second period in each of the last two games. Plymouth was outscored 18-5 over that stretch.

Even with a big lead Thursday, Agnew was well aware of Plymouth's offensive capabilities.

"Any team that has five or six first-round draft picks on it, you know they have lots of firepower, and they're capable of getting back in any game," he said.

DeBoer knew the Knights simply had what they needed to win the series: Heart.

"I don't think there was anything we could have done differently in terms of playing our systems that would have made a difference," he said. "London is a good team, and I think they were just bigger and stronger than we were."

Correct those swing problems at Venturi

BY DAVE SAUNDERS STATT WRITER

Rochester teaching golf professional Gregg Wysocki said he isn't in a cutthroat business because golf courses are crammed with golfers in need of lessons.

"One inside joke we have is. Don't worry about the competition. There's enough lousy golfers to go around for everyone." said the 35-year-old owner of Ken Venturi Indoor Golf Academy.

Wysocki's golf academy is like the Bally's of golf.

"We have members who need constant help," he said.

Wysocki opened one of the first membership-based golf schools 3.5 years ago. The Ken Venturi method has been copied by other schools because it is a concept where golfers can work on straightening out their slice all year long.

"In fact, golf training is the fastest growing aspect of the golf industry," said Wysocki.

"We welcome the competition because it tells us we have merit and our method works. We're • pretty much the innovators of it. Imitation is the best form of flattery."

Golf lessons have progressed since the days when the teaching professional stood with his student and watched the student's swing. His school and many other schools have computerized swing analyzers. The computer measures the swing, such as the angle of the face of the club on impact. A computer analyzer board reads the path the club came through the ball, plus the club head speed. It also calculates where the ball will go.

The Academy also has a golf hole simulator, which gives you a real-life feel of a golf course. A school will use it for lessons and entertainment.

Many such simulators are popping up in the area, such as at ing out that many hand shakes Great Lakes Crossing - the recently-opened outlet mall off I-75 in Auburn Hills.

lot of pressure off the pro, because you don't have to watch in full speed," Wysocki said. "You can break the swing down frame-by-frame."

Wysocki said that while a lesson or two may help a golfer get the kinks out of swing, it may be only temporary.

"The top golfers are always out there with a coach. The guys on TV, they're never out there practicing alone. There is always something you can improve," Wysocki said.

There are about a half-dozen membership golf schools in the Detroit area now. And golf stores and pro shops also offer lessons.

"People are realizing that you can spend $1,000 a year on a new set of clubs and they're not going to help if you don't invest in training. It's better to invest the money in training as opposed to new clubs," Wysocki said.

Word of mouth has been his school's best advertisement. In the three years they have been in business, more than 1,000 people have owned memberships at one time or another. Memberships cost about $400 for three months and $1,000 annually, which includes five lessons a month and all the balls you can hit.

Golf has become a big business in the last five years, Wysocki said.

"It's gone nuts. Tiger Woods has had a lot to do with that. He's not your typical pro and has gotten the kids excited about golf. Before Tiger, golf was more of an elitist sport. Now the middle class and lower middle class has gotten interested.

"Tiger Woods isn't the only reason, but the big reason. Golf has also become business oriented, a real form of entertainment for clients," Wysocki said, point-
