Police seek motive in woman's stabbing

BY DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Westland police on Wednesday continued to investigate a bizarre incident involving a knife-wielding man who appears to have randomly stabbed a 67-year-old woman as she was walking with her 5-year-old great-granddaughter.

The victim was continuing to recover from the attack that happened at about 5:50 p.m. Saturday near Westgate Tower, on Elmwood northwest of Ford and Wildwood. The woman lives in the high-rise senior apartment building.

There was no motive that we know of," police Sgt. Jeff Trzybinski

The victim was in stable condition after undergoing surgery at an undisclosed hospital, police said.

The woman was stabbed once in the middle of her upper back by an assailant who approached on foot and then fled, Trzybinski said. The greatgranddaughter, a Garden City resident, wasn't hurt.

The victim wasn't robbed, leaving authorities baffled over the attacker's

Police hadn't released the woman's name. The suspect was described as a black male, 30-35 years old, about 5foot-8 with a medium build. He was last seen wearing a dark-colored cap, a dark waist-length jacket, possibly a red T-shirt, and dark-colored jeans.

Police are urging anyone with information about the stabbing to call the Westland Police Department at (734) 722-9600. Also, anonymous tips may be made by calling Crime Stoppers at (800) SPEAK-UP.

One witness who saw the incident from a distance told police it appeared the suspect approached the victim and hit her in the back. The witness soon learned the woman had been stabbed.

The victim was walking toward the entrance of Westgate Tower when she was attacked, according to police. The incident prompted her great-granddaughter to start screaming.

A police dog was brought to the scene but wasn't able to locate a sus-

Tomorrow all eyes will be on the Homecoming Court - seniors Tracey Halaberda, Abby Monit, Brittney Neighbor, Kelsey Baker and Ashley

Sullivan. Students will cast their ballots during the day and at halftime, the fairy tale will come true for one of them when the winner is crowned queen.

A pilot all-day kindergarten program and intra-district schools of choice has helped boost enrollment in the Wayne-Westland Community Schools after several years of decline.

'We're pleased and we're surprised that we did better than expected," said School Superintendent Greg Baracy. "Maybe it's a good thing."

The district counted 13,679 students in the classroom on the state's official count day last Wednesday, up 33 students from the 2005 fall count of 13,646.

The number is unofficial until its checked by the intermediate school district and audited by the state. Once that's completed, 75 percent of the fall count will be blended with 25 percent of the winter count done in February to come up with the district's official enrollment figure. It will be that blended number that will be used to determine how much Wayne-Westland will receive in state school aid. The increase reverses several years of declining enrollment. Last school year it lost more than 200 students, and this year's budget was based on a projected blended enrollment of 13,557 students, down 109 from the 2005-06.

This is the first year the district offered intra-district schools of choice at the elementary level and attracted more than 80 students, about one-third of the new enrollment at the elementary level. The remainder are students who live in the district.

At the elementary level, kindergarten enrollment was up 91 students over last year. The increase, Baracy believes, was due in large part to the pilot all-day kindergarten pro-

Cicirelli: Judicial candidate touts her experience and leadership

Sandra Cicirelli cited her experience as an attorney and her history of community leadership as reasons why voters should elect her as the new Westland District Court judge. "I think I'm the most qualified candidate," she told the Observer during an interview. Cicirelli, in her fifth year as Westland mayor, faces attorney Jennifer Thor for a sixyear term in the Nov. 7 election. The winner will replace retiring Judge Gail McKnight.

The job pays $138,272 a year.

Jennifer Thor cited her courtroom experience, her political independence and her ideas for making Westland District Court more user-friendly as reasons why voters should choose her for a judicial seat.

"I want people to realize they have a qualified choice," she told the Observer during an interview.

Thor, an attorney for 11 years, conceded that she has to overcome the name recognition of her opponent, Mayor Sandra Cicirelli, to win a six-year term in the Nov. 7 election. The winner will replace retiring Judge Gail McKnight and receive a $138,272-a-year salary.

Thor, 36, hopes to convince voters to elect her by campaigning door to door, putting out signs, sending out literature and running an advertising spot on cable television.

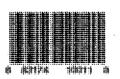

Thor has worked since August 2004 as an associ-

Parkside Dental breaks ground for its new high-tech facility

The earth has been turned over on the northwest corner of West Warren Avenue and Central City Parkway for the new home of the Parkside Dental Team.

A groundbreaking ceremony was held Sept. 7 for a new 5,200-square-foot dental office. Parkside Dental Team is scheduled to relocate its current offices on West Warren Avenue in Detroit to the new Westland office in the summer of 2007.

Mayor Sandra Cicirelli was on hand to welcome the Parkside Dental Team to the city of Westland. Lori Brist, president and CEO of the Westland Chamber, also attended and welcomed the dental group on behalf of the business communi-

"The city of Westland offers a perfect environment to invest in our team's future," said Dr.
Steven Cohen, one of four dentists at Parkside Dental Team.
"During recent years, an increasing number of our patients and their families have moved to the suburban communities.

"We were fortunate to find such a convenient location on which to build a high-tech dental office that will best serve the needs of our patients and team members."

In addition to Cohen, Parkside Dental Team includes Dr. Stuart Felhandler, Dr. Daniel Rogers and Dr. Ricardo Seir.

The office also has 22 dental hygienists, technicians and administrative staff.

Special features of the new office will include a "kids only" waiting room, a "Zoom Room" tooth whitening center, lowradiation digital X rays, television screens in all private hygiene and examination rooms and complimentary shuttle services for patients in need.

Founded in 1959, Parkside Dental Team is recognized as a leading provider of cosmetic dentistry in the Detroit metro area. Its doctors have trained with some of the world most prominent cosmetic dentists.

In addition to cosmetic and general dentistry, Parkside Dental Team also specializes in sedation dentistry and dental implants. The dental team includes a cofounder of the Dream Dentistry Network and is the only provider of the Lock-Tight denture in the state of Michigan.

Sheldon plant on hook as Ford eyes closings

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

Johnson Controls' announcement this week of 250 layoffs is only the latest in a string of downsizing notices by automotive suppliers because of production reductions by the Big 3 automakers.

Last month, Ford Motor Co. announced it would offer buyouts to all 75,000 of its hourly workers. And, as part of its restructuring plan, Ford plans to sell or close all of its 17 plants managed by its Automotive Components Holdings (ACH) subsidiary by 2008, which includes the Sheldon Road facility in Plymouth Township,

United Auto Workers Local 845 President Ed Honsinger Jr., sitting behind a desk at his office in Canton at Joy and Canton Center roads, said many employees aren't even getting 40 hours a week, resulting in smaller paychecks.
"But with everything going

"But with everything going on, 1,200 people still come to work every day and produce the best quality product for Ford Motor Company," said Honsinger, who resides in Canton Township.

Despite what he called a "dark cloud" over ACH's Sheldon Road facility, Honsinger — a second-generation worker at the plant where his father was employed for 31 years — said he believes the operation will be around longer than most people believe. Honsinger said he's signed a confidentiality agreement not to talk about the buyouts and future of the plant, however ...

"I see positive things, and I think Sheldon Road will be around for a long time," Honsinger said. "I think the unions are working with the company, and they recognize it's a different day and age.

"I know they'll sit down at the bargaining table and deliver back to the membership an agreement, and we'll ratify it," he added, referring to negotiations that will begin in the next few months to deliver a contract before the current one ends next September.

Honsinger said it's not only the union workers who have a lot a stake in what happens at the Sheldon Road facility.

"When you close down a Sheldon Road or Wayne Assembly or Wixom (plant), those communities take a hit," Honsinger said. "Plymouth needs a Sheldon Road because our workers invest the money back in the communities.

"They set the tone for the small gift shops in Plymouth," he added. "And, if not them, it's my retirees. If their pensions come under attack, they're not patronizing restaurants and the other stores."

Bob Harper, employed for 43 years at Sheldon Road, is now chairman for the 1,000 Local 845 retirees. Harper remembered the 1950s, when union members were making $2 an hour, and the 1960s, when his federal W-2 forms reflected an annual wage of $9,500

$9,500.

"In the '50s, '60s and '70s we walked the picket lines, fighting for what we thought was right and gaining the little things to benefit our membership in the plants," Harper said. "The thing that bothers me now is it's starting to deteriorate, and these young kids will have to fight again to get at a level where it's livable so they can buy vehicles, houses and send their kids to college. You've got to make more than 10 bucks an hour to do that."

Harper is hopeful that when the economy turns around and the auto companies get healthy, they won't forget the union workers who gave con-

Association asks city to give trees a chance

She and other members of the newly formed Westside Westland Homeowners Association intensified their efforts to block a developer's plans to build 40 single-lot condos on the city's southwest side, on Palmer Road between John Hix and Hannan roads.

Residents from Westland, Canton and Wayne questioned whether attempts to develop the 14-acre site will intrude on a wetlands area, threaten wildlife, cause flooding and hurt property values on larger homes in the area.

Before voting on the project, city leaders have decided to await a report from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality on whether the site qualifies as a protected wetlands area.

City leaders also have warned that a potential lawsuit could arise if they were to block Maida Woods without solid legal standing.

Westland homeowners drew support Monday from such neighbors as Harold Tackett of Canton, who told city officials they shouldn't favor developers over residents.

"It irks me that you'd put their needs and their financial gain (above) your own residents," he said.

The controversy erupted last month, and city leaders listened patiently Monday as the Westside Westland Homeowners Association continued its impassioned efforts to block the Maida Woods development.

Jacqueline Rubasky, Judy Rubasky's adult daughter, noted that Monday marked Gandhi's birthday. She urged city officials to embrace the anti-violence teachings of India's leader and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in their approach to environmental issues.

"Violence can also be about our violence to the environment," she said, adding that when hundreds of trees are cut down for a development, "That's violence."

City leaders have tried to reassure residents that Maida Woods, if cleared by the MDEQ, would be a quality development of single-family condos, each with its own lot. The homes would be 2,500 to 3,000 square feet, Mayor Sandra Cicirelli said Monday.

Although the expected cost of a Maida Woods condo has been scaled back from the original price range of $300,000 to $400,000, Cicirelli indicated that the project still would be high quality.

Council President William Wild has promised to schedule a special study session to discuss Maida Woods once the MDEQ report has been received. He has pledged to publicize the meeting so that residents can attend.

Employees earn Team Effort Award for district move

Livonia Public Schools officials offered a pat-on-the-back gesture to its Summer Relocation Team, a group of more than 70 employees who assisted in the moving activities associated with the closing of seven schools.

"It was a very eventful summer," said Randy Liepa, superintendent. "These folks did an exceptional job."

Employee groups led by Ray Raymond, Joseph Jinnett, Ray Irvine and Jim Fraser were recognized with the district's Team Effort Award earlier this week.

On the technology side, Fraser explained, more than 700 computers were moved in just over three days. New computer labs were established at the upper elementary schools. Rosedale, which re-opened, was completely upgraded with fiber optic cable, electronics, printers and computers. And that was just a small portion of the project.

Custodians served as a district moving crew. Schools like Emerson went through extensive renovation. And Rosedale was repainted and upgraded for its reopening.

"The entire district pulled together," said Hosman. He commended those who assisted in the relocation, and noted how eager teachers were to get into their new classrooms.

Trustee Dan Lessard said when he visited the school buildings during the summer move, he felt an overarching "sense of pride."

LPS count shows fewer K-12 pupils

BY DAVE VARGA STAFF WRITER

Livonia Public Schools was expecting to lose about 1.5 percent of its K-12 students this year as compared to last year, through its steadily declining enrollment. Instead, Supt. them what they wanted and they Randy Liepa said preliminary numbers show the district lost about 2 percent or a little more.

"We'll be down a little bit more than what we thought," Liepa said Thursday.

The state required districts to officially count their students Wednesday. The report isn't due until Nov. 1 to the county intermediate school district, Liepa said. "Believe it or not, it takes that much time to get it done," he said.

Liepa describes the state's pupil counting manual as three inches thick," noting that the count is a complex process that includes more than K-12 students, calculating nonfull-time students such as those in special education, shared time, alternative education and Young Fives pro-meaning fewer students reduces the district's revenue.

In the past year, critics have argued that the district's Legacy Initiative, a controversial realignment plan that closed seven schools to save money, would cause large numbers of parents to withdraw their students.

Those critics noted the departure of 180 students would cost the district as much in revenue (about $1.5 million) as the plan was saving in expenditures.

School officials estimate the district had around 17,000 K-12 students last year. The predicted 1.5-percent decline would be about 255 students. At 2 percent, that number increases to 340 students.

Many factors can be pointed to for the district's student loss increase, Liepa said. Some of it could be from the Legacy Initiative, he acknowledged. "We know anecdotally some people are leaving for private schools and we know anecdotally some people are coming back from private schools," he said. He added that the state's economic problems, as evidenced by manufacturing job losses and growing numbers of home foreclosures, are also forcing people to leave the area.

Last year, the district's blended student count (a combination of 25 percent from winter count and 75 percent for fall) was 18,143 including all programs, such as special education and shared time, according to Lisa Levesque, LPS finance director. Enrollment in programs other than K-12 may actually be increasing, she Levesque said the budget impact won't be clear until the aggregate student count is balanced against an unexpected increase of $10 in per-pupil foundation grant money and special "declining enrollment" funding from the state.

High school pilot program focuses on reading

Livonia Public School teachers are piloting a program to catch students who have fallen through the cracks in reading and comprehension.

"As a high school English teacher, I never thought about teaching kids how to read," said Karla Halvangis, a staff member at Churchill High School.

Judge C. Charles Bokos. "I have a lot of courtroom experience," Cicirelli said.

A former teacher, Cicirelli earned her bachelor's degree in education from the University of Michigan-Dearborn and her law degree from Wayne State University. She served 12 years on the Westland City Council before she was elected mayor in 2001. In the only political race she has ever lost, Cicirelli was defeated in 1994 when she ran against Bokos for a judicial seat.

against Bokos for a judicial seat.
"Being a judge has always been my goal," she said.

Cicirelli conceded that she worried about how local residents would perceive her decision to run for judge after just starting her second four-year term as mayor this year.

"I certainly was a little concerned, and that weighed heavily on my mind when I made the decision to run," she said. But she pledged to work as hard for the community as a district judge as she has as a council member and mayor.

As a judge, Cicirelli vowed she would treat those who appear before her with courtesy and respect, and she pledged she would be fair in her decisions.

When appropriate, she said she would encourage people and their attorneys to negotiate settlements among themselves without having a decision imposed on them.

A few years ago, a proposal surfaced to consolidate Westland and Wayne district courts, but it quickly fizzled. While Cicirelli said she believes there will be efforts to combine courts, she said Westland handles enough cases that it should retain a courthouse.

While some district courts lose money, she said, "Westland District Court has always been self-sufficient."

Cicirelli has been long active in the community, supporting such programs as Youth Assistance and D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education). If elected as judge, she said, "I will still be active in the community."

When asked for ways the court could be improved, Cicirelli said she would support educating the public by airing information on the city's cable channels. She also said she would consider same-day sentencing programs for nonviolent offenders to streamline the court

Cicirelli also indicated she would adopt a rehabilitative approach toward nonviolent, first-time drug defendants, helping them keep their record clean as long as they turn their lives around.

Cicirelli estimated she will spend about $20,000 on her judicial campaign. She said she has had one fund-raiser.

If elected, she said residents will see a judge who has a strong work ethic.

"I think people expect me to do a good job as judge," she said. dclem@hometownlife.com | (734) 953-2110

She also has worked as a staff attorney for the United Auto Workers-General Motors Corp. legal services plan, handling real estate transactions and litigation, estate planning and family and consumer law.

Thor also worked as a prehearing attorney for the Michigan Court of Appeals, doing legal research and writing, and preparing reports and draft opinions.

Thor cited her trial experience in both district and circuit courts as giving her the background she would need to replace McKnight. She also said she has negotiated numerous settlements for clients.

"I know how to be fair and impartial to all," she said.

Thor has served as an attorney for clients involved in misdemeanor and felony cases, she said, and she also did work as a court-appointed lawyer in Wayne. She said she has been involved in jury trials, plea agreements and preliminary hearings.

In non-criminal cases, she said she would encourage opposing parties to resolve their issues on their own when possible, rather than having her impose a decision.

Thor earned her bachelor's degree in international relations from the James Madison College of Michigan State University. She received her law degree from the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law.

She was a teacher intern at Osborn High School in Detroit, where she said she taught criminal law to high school students. She also serves as secretary for the city of Westland's Brownfield Redevelopment Authority, which helps pave the way for redeveloping such sites as the former Cooper School property.

On the issue of the possible consolidation of district courts, Thor said Westland — regardless — should retain a court because it already handles a busy docket.

Thor also cited ideas she has for improving the court. One of her goals, if elected, would be improving the court's online services, so that people could conduct business more easily or review court dockets.

Thor portrayed herself as more independent than Cicirelli due to the fact that she hasn't been in the political arena.

"I'm not beholden to anyone," she said.

Thor hopes to continue what she said has been a well-run district court.

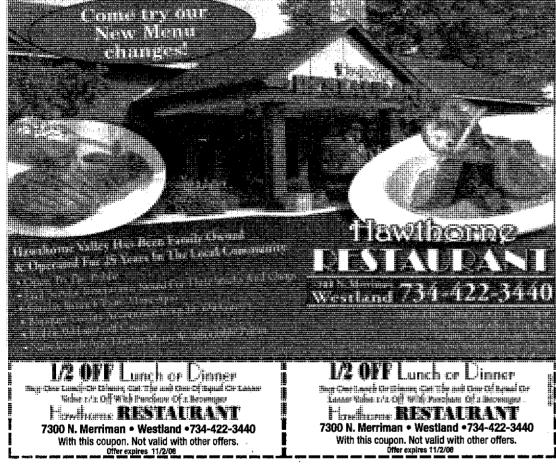

"Westland has been very fortunate to have Judge McKnight and Judge (C. Charles) Bokos on the bench," she said. Thor estimated she will spend about $20,000 on her campaign, and she said she had one fund-raiser.

On the campaign trial, Thor said residents have been willing to listen to her ideas.

"It's been a positive experience," she said.

Candy shop finds a way to beat faltering economy

Observer & Eccentric | Thursday, October 5, 2006

In a faltering post-9/11 economy, Denise Picard knew keeping her House of Fudge candy shop in downtown Plymouth a viable business would be a matter of con-

For Picard, who has owned the candy shop across from the Cozy Café for six years, it was a matter of survival. "After 9/11, we held through Christmas very well," said Picard, who has owned the House of Fudge, across from the Cozy Cafe, for about six years. "But after Christmas, things just dropped.

"People used to just walk in, but nowadays they just don't have the disposable cash," she added. "Candy is more of a luxury item."

Picard, who admits to seeking a little divine intervention, decided it was time to think out of the box and branch out.

"I just thought, 'We need more business or I'm going to close," Picard said. "I sent letters and samples to about a hundred cider mills and basket companies, and we had a 10-percent return, which was really good. We're doing OK with it."

Not only is Picard doing business with the popular Franklin Cider Mill, she was also able to acquire an account with the famous Zehnder's Bavarian Haus in Frankenmuth.

"Zehnder's took off about nine weeks ago, and the cider mills just opened a month ago," she said. "A lot of them are open through Thanksgiving, and we're also selling to the basket companies. We're also seeing a little movement in the corporate business gifts."

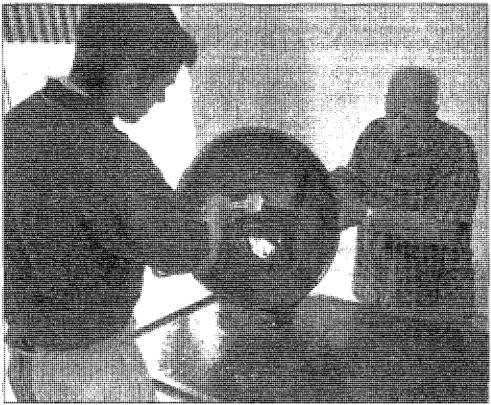

Business has been good enough for Picard to begin a night shift, though she admits it's usually just her making fudge for the increased number of orders.

"If you're selling it, you don't mind," Picard said.

Picard, 40, has been at the House of Fudge since she began working part time as a 16-year-old. When the previous owners decided to retire, Picard decided to buy

"I like my job, it's been fun, and I've never hated going to work," Picard said. "Most of the time people are in a really good mood when they come here. And I have really good help."

Along with the 17 varieties of fudge -Picard said chocolate and chocolate walnut are the best sellers — her store also sells homemade chocolates and bulk candy items. Picard said even she sometimes has a difficult time staying away from all the sweets.

"You get used to it, and it can be weeks before I'll touch anything," she said. "And then, for a week straight, I'll graze."

Not unlike her own start in the fudgemaking business, Picard said she likes to hire high school students who stay with her through college, and come back to help through the holidays. One of the perks is getting to test the sweets.

"When the kids come in and start working, I always let them eat what they want," Picard said. "In fact, I encourage it because it's hard to sell what you don't

Sean McEvilly, 18, of Canton Township – who visited the shop as a young boy has been a fudge maker the past four

"When I first started, I just wanted to eat everything, and you tend to," said McEvilly, whose favorite is peanut butter fudge. "Now, I pace myself a little better and have willpower being around it. It's a candy shop, so you can't help but have fun surrounded by all the chocolate."

McEvilly said he's gotten used to people peering through the store window, watching him make a batch of fudge, which takes about an hour or so from start to fin-

"There's always people walking by on the street, or in to watch for a couple of minutes," he said. "After a while, you get used to it after making so many batches."

Jeannette Brevik of Northville has been visiting House of Fudge for about as long as Picard has been working there, calling it her "home away from home." In fact, Picard said the triple-dipped chocolate pecan snapper -- consisting of caramel, pecans and three layers of dark chocolate was made specifically for Brevik.

'That's my addiction of choice," Brevik said. "For years I've been getting three pounds a week, and I would eat every one of them. I should be 500 pounds, but I'm

"My husband would bring me flowers, but I told him just to bring the snappers," she added. "Godiva chocolate doesn't hold a candle to them."

Finding the alternatives

Canton business will be one of dozens in state featured in national solar tour

BY KURT KUBAN

With energy prices soaring during the last couple years, there is a growing movement that is stressing the importance of investing in alternative energies. The issue has been a hot topic during this political season, as everyone from Gov. Jennifer Granholm down to candidates at the local level have been saying Michigan must be a future leader in the production of non-traditional energy sources.

But for consumers looking for relief from the skyrocketing cost of heating and powering their homes and businesses, the future is now, according to the organizers of the National Solar Tour, which will show off homes and businesses across the country that are already using alternative energies.

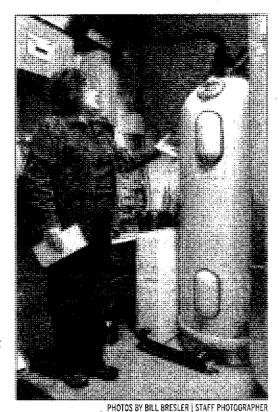

The National Solar Tour, sponsored mainly by the American Solar Energy Society, is from 10 a.m to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 7. There will be dozens of stops in Michigan, including a number in the Metro Detroit area. One of those stops is Mechanical Energy Systems in Canton. Not only does the company sell solar powered devices to consumers, it is also housed in a building that utilizes solar and other forms of alternative, renewable energies.

Alexis King, an energy consultant at Mechanical Energy Systems, said most people know little or nothing about the ways they can utilize solar power in their homes, which is why she thinks the National Solar Tour is such a great opportunity for people who are curious about alternative energies.

"Alternative energy is a big thing these days. People need to know how to find out about them," King said. "Visitors will be able to walk through our building and see how solar works and understand the practical need for it."

The National Solar Tour is a free, self-guided tour, though there will be people at each stop to explain how they have utilized alternative energies.

Mechanical Energy Systems is one of the few retailers that will be on the tour. King said not only will they show off their products, including solar powered hot water tanks and other devices, they will also offer advice on how people can do simple things at home to reduce energy costs. They will also discuss how people can take advantage of federal tax credits to heat and power their homes.

"Educating the public is the main emphasis of our company," King said.

OUR VIEWS

Cicirelli is best choice for judge

The next few years will be filled with change at Westland's 18th District Court with the departure of Judges Gail McKnight, who decided not to seek a fifth term, and C. Charles Bokos, who is closing in on the mandatory retirement age.

The change starts with the Nov. 7 general election when residents will decide who will replace McKnight. Sandra Cicirelli and Jennifer Thor are campaigning for the six-year term.

There is much to like about Cicirelli and Thor. Both candidates possess the legal expertise to be a judge. They know their way around the courtroom, having worked on civil, misdemeanor and felony cases at the district and circuit court levels. They have the experience necessary to handle the cases that would come before them as a district judge and be fair and impartial in their decisions. We also believe it's important for district court judges to be a part of — not apart from — the communities they serve, and that is where Sandra Cicirelli holds the edge in this election. She is involved with her community.

Yes, she has served on the city council and is currently mayor of the city, but it is her support of the city's Youth Assistance and D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) that we like. Cicirelli is keenly aware that both programs are the ounce of prevention that can stop crime before it gets started and are important tools in helping children and youths avoid or abandon behaviors that could bring them into the legal system.

We also like her plan, if elected, to adopt a rehabilitative approach toward nonviolent, first-time drug defendants, helping them keep their record clean as long as they turn their lives around, and her consideration of same-day sentencing programs for nonviolent offenders to streamline the court docket.

That said, we believe that she is the best candidate for 18th District Court judge and urge residents to vote for Sandra Cicirelli in the Tuesday, Nov. 7, general election.

Good service earns Land a second term

When Republican Terri Lynn Land ran for Secretary of State four years ago, she campaigned on a promise to improve customer service.

Since taking office, she's streamlined and automated the state's most visible department, building on the excellent record of her Republican predecessor, Candice Miller. Land successfully consolidated redundant offices; implemented the requirements of the Help America Vote

Land

Act, making it easier for everyone to vote and assuring the integrity of their vote; and introduced new technology to every aspect of the state's licensing procedures. We believe Terri Lynn Land has earned another term as Secretary of State and we enthusiastically endorse her re-election. Land is being challenged by Democratic Macomb County Clerk Carmella Sabaugh, who raises good questions about Land's co-chairing George W. Bush's 2004 reelection campaign in Michigan. We agree that the person who oversees the state's elections should not be chairing a campaign, but we also note that no irregularities were reported in Michigan's election.

We also acknowledge Sabaugh's concerns that requiring voter photo ID may inhibit voters. But we also believe that protection of the ballot is an equally compelling concern. Unlike Southern states, Michigan doesn't have a recent history of denying the vote to minorities. And Land has proposed a trial method that would use a driver's license or its equivalent on a voluntary basis, combined with an instantly accessible computer database of all voters.

This is just one of the many intriguing ideas that Land is proposing to encourage greater voting participation, expand on technological advances in access to data and improve campaign finance reporting.

Anyone who has had to visit the Secretary of State's office in recent years knows that lines move more quickly and business is handled more professionally and politely. Even better, with online and kiosk services, there is considerably less need to stand in line at all.

We believe Terri Lynn Land has earned a second term.

Tax outsourcing

I as an American citizen believe that taxes on outsourcing should be ended because it only encourages outsourcing.

It's unfair to the worker that has slaved away at a job for many years then all of a sudden gets cut away from pay because a company begins to outsource that person's job, therefore, the company pays less money and the person is now left without a job, to be broke and left to fall within the hardships of poverty.

Here in America we try to strive to be a strong country yet not even our pens are made in America? It's terrible that corporations get tax cuts of outsourcing even though an old employee of theirs is left without anything because they were fired in order for the outsourcing to happen.

Where is the justice in any of this? Tina Donall

Exhibit morality

If President Bush wishes to be able to speak with "moral authority," he should exhibit some morality!

Do not change what our constitution and our experiences have shown us to be right. Unlawful detention, secrecy and torture should not be used, or condoned, and most certainly cannot be made legal. Our legal system and bill of rights exist because humanity needs to be reminded of what is right and humane.

Bush and his methods make me ashamed of my country.

Breast cancer awareness

This year the American Cancer Society (ACS) estimates that 212,920 new cases of female breast cancer will be diagnosed, and 40,970 women will die from the disease. In fact, breast cancer is the most common cancer among American women, other than skin cancer and is the second leading cause of cancer death in women, after lung cancer. Mammography is the best way to detect breast cancer in its earliest, most treatable stage — an average of I to 3 years before a woman can feel the lump. Mammography also locates cancers too small to be felt during a clinical breast examination.

In responding to this important health issue, I am joining with mayors across the country to promote National Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October and to observe the third Friday in October (Oct. 20) as National Mammography Day.

We are calling upon everyone in our communities - employers, physicians, churches, clubs, social service agencies and other organizations — to encourage about screening and mammography and to seek appropriate services. Our efforts are part of the Mayors' Campaign Against Breast Cancer, of which I am a member, that the United States Conference of Mayors is conducting under a cooperative agreement with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Since women comprise approximately half the employees in the United States, the workplace provides an optimum environment for increasing breast cancer awareness and screening. It is critical that all other employers in Westland join with me and similarly involve their employees in National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, one of our nation's most important health initiatives

Let me also add that men can be at risk for breast cancer. While the statistics are not as stark for men, they are significant. ACS estimates that an estimated 1,720 new cases of male breast cancer will be diagnosed in 2006, and that about 460 men will die of the disease. Men should discuss their risk for breast cancer with their physicians, public health officials and advocacy organizations, such as ACS, and

Doesn't understand diversity

Last week Dick DeVos said he knew the importance of diversity because his four children are just so different.

Give me a break! This proves how out of touch DeVos really is with the problems real citizens face everyday. How can he support diversity when he doesn't even understand what it is?

Gov. Granholm knows the importance of diversity and is fighting to ensure the MCRI doesn't have a chance to destroy the progress our civil rights leaders have made in the last century.

New direction in Congress

It was with great interest that I read the letters to the editor on Thursday, Sept. 28. Some letter writers expounded on the virtues of Congressman Thaddeus McCotter. One writer spoke of very positive personal interactions with the congressman. This assistance is a small, although important function for our congressman to engage in.

However, I would guess that most constituents don't have a need for this personal assistance; they just want their congressman voting for their interests in Congress. Unfortunately, this is where Mr. McCotter has failed the 11th district.

Another letter writer spoke in generalities about how the congressman worked hard to "preserve and promote opportunities for Michigan workers." What specifically he has done to do this is unknown. Apparently the writer thinks he's "worked to preserve programs geared toward companies to enhance their employee's skills." Again, what specifically the Congressman has done is unknown.

What is known about Mr. McCotter is that he voted in favor of the Iraq war debacle. This war, as it has been shown by the recent NIE report, has raised the level of international terrorism, and has made the U.S less safe.

He's continued to vote for war funding without any accountability. We are spending over $8.4 billion every month in Iraq. So far, more than $300 billion has been spent on this war. Just think of what that kind of money could do for our schools, our infrastructure, or our health care system. His support for Bush's "stay-thecourse" plan in Iraq has lead to the death of nearly 3,000 brave young Americans; it's lead to life-changing injuries for 15,000 young Americans.

What is also known about Mr. McCotter is that he voted against the bill to provide funds for stem cell research. This was a bill which had 70 percent approval in public opinion surveys. Nowadays, I think it would be hard to get 70 percent of the American public to agree that the sky is blue. Nonetheless, Mr. McCotter did not vote his constituents interests on this bill. To rub salt into the wound, Mr. McCotter voted to uphold the presidential veto of this bill, the only presidential veto by George Bush.

This November, we have the opportunity to change the misguided direction of this country. We have the opportunity to end the "culture of corruption" in Washington. We have the opportunity to take our country back. To accomplish this, Mr. McCotter and his fellow Republican cohorts must be sent home. We need fresh ideas, a new direction, a new Congress!

I am shocked, disgusted, and outraged that a "deal" has been struck by a committee of senators to allow torture to continue and to make it somehow legal. I do not want my tax dollars going to pay for these "professional" torturers, as the Torturer in Chief recently called them.

What arm-twisting tactics were used to convince Sen. John McCain and others to allow this government to continue to tor-

Republicans are now the Torture Party and Bush is the Torturer in Chief. He and his corrupt friends have been fighting to legalize torture for four years and it seems they have finally succeeded. This is a terrible day for America and for the world.

The Torturer in Chief must be impeached for war crimes and receive, at minimum, a long and unpleasant stay in a maximum security prison.

"When I was in the academy, they were the elite team. I thought it was so cool. I wanted to be a part of that. That was what I did."

Jason Brasgalla about the Detroit Police Detroit's Special Response Team which is featured in Detroit SWAT tonight

Faith communities must support affirmative action

Crash is one of those movies that not only won an Academy Award but will be watched over and over for decades. Whether it portrays the current level of anger among racial, religious, and other groups, or it makes a statement portending what's on the horizon, it is a powerful presentation of human relations in our country.

One of Crash's themes is frustration at the lack of progress for women and minority groups. So many well-intended governmental programs since the 1960s have not succeeded, either because of poor funding, poor execution or both. When we examine what has failed and what has worked, only three clear-cut successes quickly come to mind: (1) legal remedies for segregated facilities; (2) the Head Start preschool program; (3) affirmative action providing women and minorities with equal access to jobs, contracts and educational

H. Krichbaum

The Rev. Daniel opportunities. Unfortunately, affirmative action is on the defensive now in many states including Michigan with the November ballot issue. With language posturing it as pro-civil rights (Michigan Civil Rights Initiative), the ballot issue would ban opportunities related to governmental employment, educational recruitment and admission programs and governmental contracts for women and minorities. What's even worse, the ballot issue sends a signal to the private sector that diversity and affirmative action in the workplace and in our communities is not a value to be pursued. A number of business, civic, union and political leaders have stepped up to the plate and are opposing the ballot initiative. The leadership of these groups in itself is major progress from the civil rights days of the '60s when business leaders, in particular, were reluctant to involve themselves in the fray. Businesses and other current leaders have taken this stand because affirmative action works; it sends a positive signal to customers and creates a more productive work force and improved bottom line. Regrettably, a major leadership segment from the Civil Rights era — religious leaders — has not led the incremental progress achieved in recent decades. Their previous involvement was a powerful expression of the moral imperative for equal and fair treatment of all peo-

Forty years ago in metro Detroit, suburban and urban faith leaders, women and men from Christian, Jewish and Muslim perspectives locked arms, developed programs and led demonstrations to indicate that fairness and opportunity in education, employment, health, and housing must be for everyone or eventually it will exist for only a privileged few. While some religious leaders continued that struggle, unfortunately, many moved to other priorities.

Thus, in many faith communities today that earlier commitment and resolve has diminished. New moral imperatives are attracting attention. Many faith groups are more concerned about spiritual and congregational growth and self-help strategies to heal individual wounds - all important concerns — but not a moral issue as imperative as that expressed by our country's Founders when they wrote of certain inalienable rights including "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Now, the nation needs and Michigan needs to be clear and stand unified on the moral imperative of ending racism and sexism by continuing to offer fair chances and increased opportunities for women and people of color too long denied the promise of the Founders.

Affirmative action is important because it helps create more diverse groups at work, in educational settings, at tables where contracts are signed. And greater diversity can lead to inclusivity, where all people have their ideas, their contributions and talents recognized and taken seriously. Inclusivity, in fact, is a moral value that runs throughout the sacred writings of all major faith groups — every person understood, respected, and valued. So, it is incumbent upon faith leaders to once again exert their moral leadership and defeat Proposal 2 on this fall's ballot and thereby preserve affirmative action in Michigan.

Major players from business, unions, civic and governmental organizations, along with some religious leaders, urge defeat of the anti-affirmative action ballot initiative. But many people still wonder, where do the members of faith groups stand? This is the elephant in the room.

This is why clergy leaders can play such an important role in this election. Bishops and executives of religious institutions can and should lead from the top, but it is the ongoing, caring relationships in every congregation that lend weight to the moral imperative of fairness and equal opportuni-

So, the defeat of this ballot initiative will continue the meaningful progress for which affirmative action is responsible. And no one can make as great a difference as the thousands of faith leaders, lay and clergy, in congregations across Michigan. They have the greatest opportunity and the strongest moral claim to stand for fairness and equal opportunity for all women and people of color. The nation promised no less 300 years ago and breaking covenants has no standing among serious communities of faith.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel H. Krichbaum is president and CEO The National Conference for Community and Justice of Michigan.

Vote down Prop 2

Have you noticed the letters to the editor about Proposal 2, the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative? Proponents' objections to affirmative action center squarely on race. Gender isn't even mentioned though most governmental affirmative action initiatives focus on gender.

Affirmative action programs are still quite necessary. Women continue to earn significantly less than men in many fields even when levels of education and experience are comparable. The future of American prosperity lies in technology, yet females remain discouraged from entering science heavy

By the mandate of Proposal 2, public universities would be prohibited from targeting women to take science strong curriculums. Why would we as a society choose to neglect half the potential pool needed for the work of tomorrow? It makes no sense.

We are living during a period of transition where equal opportunity still doesn't exist for certain categories of people. Until women and minorities are proportionally represented at the highest levels of government and business, affirmative action is needed. The same holds true for income. wealth, home ownership, college degrees, business ownership and access to health care.

Put another way, good old boys have run this country since its inception and for the most part they still do. Affirmative action is a useful tool for admitting everybody into Proposal 2 is a knee jerk reaction to complicated social inadequacies and injustices. It paints all forms of public affirmative action as undesirable. This is preposterous!

For example, we already have a shortage of nurses and this problem is getting worse as the baby boom generation enters retirement age. Fewer than one in 10 nurses are men. Shall we prevent government from designing campaigns to attract men into nursing?

Proposal 2 is ripe for unintended consequences and litigation. It is poor policy.

Scott Heinzman

Vote no on Prop 5

There must be several good reasons why Proposal 5 (K-16 education funding) is opposed by Democratic Gov. Jennifer Granholm, Republican Dick DeVos, the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, the Michigan Municipal League, the Police Officers Association of Michigan and many other organizations listed on www.stopthespendingmandate.com.

If Proposal 5 passes, with guaranteed budget increases for K-12 and higher education, Michigan taxpayers will either have to_ pay substantially greater taxes with no accountability by the education lobby or suffer huge cutbacks in critical state services like police protection, health care for the 1.5 million people receiving Medicaid, etc.

Where does the primary backer of Proposal 5, the Michigan Education Association (teachers' union), think Michigan taxpayers will come up with the extra $565 million for education that Proposal 5 immediately requires be paid? Given the economy, who can afford to pay for Proposal 5's "annual funding increases equal to the rate of inflation for public schools, intermediate school districts, community colleges, and higher education (includes state universities and financial aid/grant programs)."

Under Proposal 5, a special formula is used to send extra state funds to school districts with declining enrollments such as Detroit which just lost an estimated 25,000

Proposal 5 will also, "Reduce and cap retirement fund contribution paid by public schools, community colleges and state universities" and will "shift remaining portion to state."

All at a time the state budget will decline by over $1 billion due to the repeal of the anti-business SBT.

Education needs to be supported. But Proposal 5 does nothing for education other than provide a huge windfall for personnel at the expense of already hard-pressed Michigan taxpayers. Vote no on Proposal 5.

Quit being used

It is become obvious to me your newspaper is being used to smear the good name of our Congressman Thaddeus McCotter. I have had many dealings with the congressman and his staff over the past couple years and have found both to be extremely responsive and helpful. Quite a different picture than the one being painted by previous letter writers, which begs the question: Are these dissenters willing to go to any length to win an election?

I used to think letters to the editor were - in good because they spurred healthy debate. It's sad to see you've gone away from that.

A CONTRACTOR OF CONTRACT OF THE STATE OF THE

Challenger touts law enforcement experience in battle with Cox

BY ALEX LUNDBERG STAFF WRITER

Amos Williams wants to be the next attorney general for the state of Michigan.

And that's not all. Amos also wants Michigan residents to know what the position entails: Top cop, top law enforcement officer and the state's No. I legal counselor.

A decorated soldier, former police officer and practicing attorney, Williams is running as a Democrat against Republican incumbent Mike Cox.

Williams said the decision to run for office was made in much the same way he's made other plans in his life: it seemed to be a natural progression. That's not to say it didn't take him a while to warm to the idea.

"There were some other lawyers discussing it and asked if I were interested," he said. "I wondered why I would want to do that, but then thought about it."

While it's a state office, he said the state of the nation today requires more of the person who is "the top cop, top law enforcement officer and chief legal counsel to the legislator and governor."

He said the administration in Washington D.C. is taking the American people into uncharted waters and Michiganians need their attorney general to stand up for them.

"The kind of malignancy coming from the top these days will infect everything," Williams said. "I believe the best way to protect the civil rights of people in Michigan is from the attorney general level."

He said he'd use the position to expand crimefighting efforts in the realms of drugs, Internet predators and corporate crime, as well as use the office to protect Michiganians' civil rights. People should get more from their No. I police officer.

"The attorney general's office is a public service office," he said. "(Attorney General) Cox just hasn't done a good job."

Williams said crime has risen in the state since the beginning of Cox's tenure in state office, something Williams attributes to inexperience with law enforcement.

"He's shown no aptitude for fighting crime, he's never been a law enforcement officer," Williams said. "The choice is between a candidate with law enforcement experience and one that doesn't, which are you going to choose?"

For all of the power he says there is in the attorney general's office, Williams said not only are most people not aware of the functions of the position, a good portion of them aren't even thinking about the election in general.

With the fight going on between Gov. Jennifer Granholm and her Republican challenger businessman Dick DeVos, you can't hear much else.

"The television coverage is on the high-profile races now," he said. "It's the governor against a man with infinitely deep pockets. They're spending millions each, so that's who people are going to see."

Clerk faces uphill battle to unseat Land

BY ALEX LUNDBER STAFF WRITER

Macomb County Clerk Carmella Sabaugh said she signed on to run against incumbent Secretary of State Republican Terri Lynn Land because the state Democratic Party asked her.

Sabaugh is currently in her fourth term as the Macomb County clerk. Before that, she was alternately an employee of the city of Warren, its clerk and a member of the city council.

Citing a quarter-century of experience in elections and more than 30 years in public life, she said she wants to work to expand voters' rights and serve the citizens of Michigan as its next secretary of state. Sabaugh said Michigan is ahead of the national curve on elections, citing former Secretary of State Richard Austin's advocacy of motor voter initiatives, and should stay that way.

"We need to have same-day voter registration," she said. "A lot of people don't think about an election until 10 days before they go to vote. We should also give out absentee ballots to whoever wants them."

She said the idea of requiring a driver's license or other photo identification to vote sounds OK, but on closer analysis doesn't further the cause of residents voting.

"There is a constitutional right to vote, it's not a privilege," Sabaugh said. "Why make it harder? We should be making it easier to vote."

What the state needs, she said, is a database of Social Security numbers that local clerks can check at polling stations.

What Michigan voters don't need, she said, is a chief election officer who is beholden to a race in progress. Sabaugh said it was wrong for Land to be the co-chair of the Michigan effort to re-elect President George W. Bush in 2004. She doesn't allege any misconduct, but said there should be no perception that the secretary of state has a dog in the fight when votes are tallied.

With the November general election closing in, she knows she's got an uphill battle.

"It's going to take a lot of money and I'm the underdog," Sabaugh said. "Land has a lot of money."

She said she's working with the state Democratic Party to put together a grass-roots, doorto-door campaign to get her name into people's heads when they go to vote next month.

McCotter splits with Bush Democrat Trupiano says it's on war progress and trade time for 'dynamic change'

STAFF WRITER

U.S. Rep. Thaddeus McCotter (R-Livonia) says he isn't surprised by a New York Times/CBS poll that shows only 25 percent of Americans approve of the job that Congress is doing.

"I expect it in a turbulent time, when Congress or the administration don't particularly lay out the times in which we live or seem to be addressing them," he said in a meeting Sept. 25 with Observer editors. "We've seen this at other times in the nation's history. In the final analysis, you have to be sure that you don't add to that perception and try to work within the Congress to do what it's supposed to do.'

The low rating comes at a time when McCotter is seeking his third term to the U.S. House of Representatives. He is facing a strong challenge from Democrat and former radio talk show host Tony Trupiano to represent Michigan's 11th District. Also on the ballot are Libertarian candidate John J. Tatar of Livonia and U.S. Taxpayers candidate Charles Tackett of Belleville.

The ongoing war in Iraq and Michigan's economic problems are at the top of voter concerns. McCotter has been a supporter of the war in Iraq, but has been highly critical of the Bush administration's prosecution of the war. He says he's frustrated.

"For three years I've continued to say that the reconstruction phase was flawed, fatally flawed with a top-down approach," he said.

McCotter said the Bush administration instituted a strong central government rather than working up from local groups.

"What the Iraqis are doing now is breaking down the process because they don't trust a strong central government," he said. "They favor a decentralized, weak government because it can't kill them or oppress them."

He said the real base of the country is in the town councils, tribal elders and religious organizations. He said Bush should have learned from America's history, which had its democratic roots in town hall meetings and local and state governments before the Constitution was written.

The irony is you'll hear people say that the federalized system will lead to civil war. I would argue that it will go in the opposite direction. I would argue they are going back to where they should have been in the first place," he said.

McCotter is skeptical of a conclusion in the National Intelligence Estimate, first reported Sunday, Sept. 24, that the war in Iraq has fueled international terrorism rather than lessened it. He said he hadn't read the report and would need to study it, but he said he has heard the argument before. He said he couldn't see how bringing down the secular Iraq government of Saddam Hussein could incite more Islamic jihadist terrorism than going to war against the Taliban in Afghanistan following the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. McCotter has been criticized by Trupiano for voting "present" on a resolution on the global war on terror.

McCotter said he couldn't in good conscience vote yes on the resolution.

"I've never believed we should just stay the course in Iraq," he said, "I believe we should win in Iraq and it is my responsibility to the men and women over there serving not to take the easy way out and sign on a resolution that doesn't call al-Qaeda and the insurgents our enemy and does not put forward to the American people the plan we have for winning once it comes to the floor."

HANDLING DETAINEES

On Sept. 27, McCotter joined the Republican House majority in approving new rules for handling detainees suspected of terrorist activities that would give the president greater authority to work outside the rules of war prescribed by the Geneva Conventions. Congressional action was taken in response to a Supreme Court decision against Bush administration programs. McCotter said the Supreme Court erred in applying the

In a year wheu support for a Republican-dominated Congress and a Republican administration are at a historic low, Democrat Tony Trupiano believes he has a fighting chance of beating 11th District GOP incumbent U.S. Rep. Thaddeus McCotter.

"I believe it's time for dynamic change in this country," he said in a meeting Sept. 27 with Observer editors. "I'm more convinced than ever after being at this for a year. I've knocked on doors, called a lot of people. We find ourselves in a difficult position globally and now we see how that's had an effect on our local economy."

Trupiano said recent polling shows that the district is a "swing" district with a nearly equal number of potential voters identifying themselves as Democrats or Republicans.

"Our strategy has been to come in contact with soft Republicans and independents. I've spent 98 percent of my time on soft Republicans and independents and we find he is vulnerable," Trupiano said. "In areas he thought he was safe, like Livonia, he isn't

I don't believe that Thad McCotter has the kind of vision, the kind of leadership ability, that it takes to lead this district. IRAQ TOP ISSUE

At the top of the agenda, and a major campaign issue for Democrats, is the war in Iraq and its impact on global security. Trupiano said he has always opposed the war in "My plan is to continue to protect the troops that are there, but we need to have a phased withdrawal through 2007, though I'm not tied to 2007. But I think we need a plan to start bringing our troops home," he said.

Trupiano said it was important to honor the sacrifice of American troops, but it was also important to begin getting the United Nations more involved in Iraq.

"The UN can act in a police, security capacity. We need to have security," he said. "As we look at what we've already tried to do, the money we've paid to Halliburton and Brown and Root (private contractors working on reconstruction), the billions of dollars we've spent only to abandon these projects because it's not safe to be there. I can't honestly say we can put a timeline on it."

He said it was time for the Iraqi government to handle its own security and affairs.

Last year, McCotter voted with the majority in the House on an immigration bill that emphasized security. The Senate approved a bill that would provide a method for long-term illegal aliens to earn citizenship. The two sides have not been able to work out a compromise.

"Whether there is a compromise or not. I will oppose an amnesty which means people who come here illegally get to stay here legally," McCotter said.

He said he favors reducing social services to illegal aliens, cracking down on employers who provide jobs for aliens, strengthening border security and letting aliens know there will be no "amnesty."

"We can't compromise on the principle that someone who comes here illegally should not be allowed to legally stay," he said.

He added that the United States should provide immigration for political refugees, not economic refugees, and that allowing people to come for economic reasons will only create greater economic problems in their native lands.

ECONOMIC CONCERNS

On Michigan's economic problems, McCotter has taken a position against the Bush administration on trade agree-

"Our problem with Bush is that he believes in competition," he said. "We believe in competition, too, but fair competition."

He said he has voted with the Michigan delegation, Republicans and Democrats, against what he sees as unfair trade agreements such as CAFTA (Central American Free Trade Agreement) and trade agreements with Thailand and China.

"We need to apply human rights to China," McCotter said. "His (Bush) attitude is any competition is good, our position is that unfair competition is bad. It's very difficult to convince him otherwise, but we continue to try." McCotter said that energy was a major concern in bringing Michigan up to the national economic level.

"I support a two-track approach to get off foreign oil increase domestic output while aggressively moving to alternative energy, high tech," he said. "Anything we can do to diminish reliance on foreign

McCotter said the current partisan polarization in the Congress is a "destructive environment rather than creative."

to figure out what the Iraqi government wants to be. We may find the Iraqi government wants to be something the we don't want them to be," he said.

Trupiano said the release of part of the National Întelligence Estimate last week showed that we have been lied to and "at some level we should all be offended."

'We don't have a plan to get out and this stay the course mentality, whether it's not taking a position on supporting the troops by voting present on a resolution, or it's this president who can't seem to grasp the reality that people are dying all over the world now. Now we see that terrorism has been lifted to some jihadist problem that we don't seem to be able to identify with and we created it. At what point do we accept culpability for what we do?" he said.

DISREGARD FOR LAW

Trupiano said a bill passed last week to give the president more authority in dealing detainees suspected of terrorist activity is a "clear and blatant disregard for the law by this administration.

Trupiano said he is concerned about free trade agreements that put the United States at a disadvantage.

"Free trade has been a disaster," he said. "Free trade agreements were supposed to lift the economies of other countries and it's not done that. Other countries are not playing by the rules." He said the key to improving

Michigan's economy is education. He said more needs to be done to educate young people in the biosciences and health fields. Trupiano was critical of No Child Left Behind. He said is has some merit, but it hasn't been fully funded and has punished some schools that are still viable.

"I don't think the federal government should have any say in education except to provide funds. I think state and local governments should decide how to educate in their communities," he said.

AGAINST 'AMNESTY'

Immigration has become a major campaign issue over the last year and Trupiano said his position may have changed over time. He said he doesn't support "amnesty" and believes that immigration is a real problem.

"I've spent time with families that are hurting and the immigration issue is real and we need reform," he said. "I don't believe we can kick every illegal out of the country. We just couldn't afford to do that."

He said he would favor some kind of "work visa" to begin funneling some illegal aliens into the system. "Why are people coming here? They can get free health care and free education. If you are ever in San Diego, you see the devastation that illegals do," he said.

He added that the National Guard needs to be patrolling our borders instead of fighting in Iraq.

"I take national security very seriously," he said.

Trupiano said he is a "fiscal conservative" and actually favors tax cuts.

"First thing, get rid of the alternative minimum tax," he said. "Get rid of the employee paid part of Social Security. Return to the Clinton tax scheme. Lower taxes for those making less than $200,000 and let those who can bear the burden they should."

He said elimination of the employee contribution to Social Security could be replaced by raising the amount of taxable income for Social Security from $90,000 to $150,000.

He said it was also important to cut spending, such as Congressional earmarks for local projects.

Seminar delves into effects of job loss

BY STACY JENKINS STAFF WRITER

Job loss. You'll never know how tough it is, until you've experienced it, said Bob Tubek, who has been out of work since July 1.

The Farmington Hills husband and father of two boys is struggling to make ends meet. His is an all-too-common story of survival, stemming from the vulnerable automotive manufacturing industry.

"It's affected our family, our children," said Tubek, who was laid off from a contractor service for General Motors at the Willow Run plant. "You get to the point where you have to start making decisions on which bills to pay and how much you'll be able to eat."

Tubek, who was a senior HVAC maintenance supervisor, said he may get a job out of state and leave his family in Farmington Hills until his son. ages 12 and 17 graduate from high school.

"I've talked to recruiters and they said if things continue the way they are, you will not be able to buy a job in southeast Michigan," he said.

Tubek has 25 years experience in the manufacturing industry and is a manufacturing manager by trade. As a hobby, and a side job, he is a videographer.

"But, because of the economy, I haven't had any work in two months," he said. "It just comes at you from every direction and you have to make decisions that affect every member of your family and it's very hard."

Tubek's wife works at Michael's craft store, but she can't get a full-time schedule there. Tubek collects unemployment, but it will run out in a few months. Governor's Awards for Arts & Culture. Both fashion designers will be named International Achievement Award recipients, and are slated to attend the ArtServe awards banquet Thursday, Nov. 16 at the Detroit Opera House.

Anna Sui, formerly of Dearborn, is considered fashion's rebellious rocker chick. Sui taps into all decades and motifs equally. In the early refreces editors fell for Sui's charming and theery designs. After her debut on the runway in 1991, her business boomed and the following year she opened a flagship on Greene Street and then launched a successful beauty line.

Tracy Reese, formerly of Detroit, has found great success with her namesake label Tracy Reese along with another line, Plenty by Tracy Reese.

The Tracy Reese look has been described as ultra-feminine and vintageinspired. Recently she combined her lavish clothing lines and home design with the opening of her flagship boutique in Manhattan.

Both designers currently live in New York, and are scheduled to fly in and accept their awards in person.

The ArtServe Michigan Governor's Awards for Arts & Culture are the oldest and most prestigious honors that recognize statewide and international leaders in arts and culture in the state.

Today the awards continue the tradition of recognizing distinguished achievement and meritorious work in arts and culture by organizations, businesses and individuals.

Tickets for the ArtServe Michigan Governor's Awards for Arts & Culture Gala are $50-$300 and benefit ArtServe programs and services. Call (248) 557-8288, ext. 21 or visit www.ArtServeMichigan.org.
