Defendant in fireworks stabbing enters plea

Victim's mother calls sentence 'slap on wrist'

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

The mother of a 19-year-old woman who was attacked and stabbed at the Westland Summer Festival is furious that one of her daughter's attackers has received "a slap on the wrist."

Debbie Nagle, mother of stabbing victim Jennifer Nagle of Taylor, told the Observer on Tuesday that she is "starting to lose faith" in the justice system.

Her remarks came as Joleen Krueger, 20, of Livonia faces sentencing Oct. 24 after pleading guilty to a reduced charge of attempted assault with intent to do great bodily harm (less than murder).

Krueger will serve three months in jail and be placed on probation for three years, according to a clerk for Wayne County Circuit Judge Craig Strong.

Krueger wasn't holding the knife used in the Fourth of July stabbing, but police said she fought with Nagle after Nagle accidentally bumped into her in a fireworks crowd.

Another defendant, 17-year-old Nicole Harrington of Westland, is accused of stabbing Nagle in the head, back and left hand just as the holiday fireworks show started in Central City Park. The incident happened near Westland City Hall.

Harrington still faces trial on charges of assault with intent to do great bodily harm (less than murder) and felonious assault. If convicted, she could face penalties ranging up to 10 years in prison.

Harrington's trial is scheduled to start on Oct. 25, the day after Krueger's sentencing, according to Strong's clerk.

On Tuesday, Debbie Nagle lashed out at prosecuting and defense attorneys for working out what she considers a lenient sentence for Krueger.

Octagon House has 'friends' in UAW

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

Even as they face thousands of job cuts, Ford Motor Co. workers haven't abandoned their spirit of giving in communities they call home, Westland historians said.

The latest proof: UAW Locals 845 and 900 have donated $1,250 to help continue restoration efforts at the 1800s-era Octagon House in the Westland Historic Village Park, on Wayne Road between Marquette and Cherry Hill.

"I think it's great what they do for the community," Westland historian Georgia Becker said.

Becker and historian Jo Johnson have turned the money over to Mayor Sandra Cicirelli. The city will use it to continue restoring one of the city's oldest buildings.

Historians hope that the eight-sided Octagon House, flanked by two additions, will one day be open for tours and special events, possibly even weddings.

With the city facing a budget crunch, officials have had to rely on help to continue sprucing up the historic house.

Students in the William D. Ford Career Technical Center's construction trades class have helped with labor, and now comes the $1,250 donation from UAW workers.

Historians received the money from UAW Local 900 member Bill Johnson, plant chairman of the Wayne Assembly Plant, and from Ford retiree Roger Caldwell, former president of UAW 845, which represents the Sheldon Road plant in Plymouth.

Johnson and Caldwell raised the money while also promoting a recent "vaudeville show" organized by historians to benefit the Octagon House. The show raised $611, Johnson said Wednesday.

Johnson and Caldwell made the donations in honor of Becker's late husband, Howard Becker, who had garnered a reputation for selling items ranging from coffee mugs to T-shirts to benefit the Octagon House.

In raising the money, Johnson and Caldwell wrote in a letter to historians that they took on the project "in memory of our friend and a friend of Westland's history - Howard Becker."

Anderson: State's economy needs to be more diversified

BY DAVE VARGA
STAFF WRITER

State Rep. Glenn Anderson sees stagnation in Michigan, not only in the economy, but in terms of public policy.

"We still have an issue in Michigan of not being as diversified as we need to be and we need to continue working toward that end," said Anderson, who said that was why he supported a 21st century jobs plan to create investment in new industries and attract more high-tech jobs.

The Westland Democrat, during an interview with the Observer staff, talked about his plans if elected to the 6th District Senate seat, which he is seeking to win over incumbent Laura Toy. The district covers Livonia, Westland, Redford and Garden City. Election day is Nov. 7.

The state still needs to protect and attract auto jobs, while using this jobs fund to help diversify. He credits the

Toy: Lead with strengths to revive state economy

BY DAVE VARGA
STAFF WRITER

State Sen. Laura Toy believes Michigan must drive its economic recovery by using its strengths — research and development, agriculture and tourism.

"I really think we should be leading more with these strengths and pouring dollars as we budget them," said Toy, R-Livonia. "You're not going to want to reinvent the wheel. We don't have time to do that."

Toy, who is seeking re-election to the Senate seat Nov. 7, appeared before Observer staff for an interview. She is being Toy challenged by Democratic state Rep. Glenn Anderson in a district that covers Livonia, Westland, Redford and Garden City.

"Part of this dilemma," she added, "is not only losing our jobs, but how do we retain what we already have? So that's

2 men plead guilty to computer thefts

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

Two Belleville men will be on probation for two years for stealing a city-owned car from the Westland public services yard, crashing it through a gate and escaping with computers stolen from two police vehicles.

Michael Dunstan, 19, and Scott Matthews, 24, also will remain for now on a tether after pleading guilty in Wayne County Circuit Court to their involvement in the July 18 incident.

Other than a short stint in jail after their arrest, Dunstan and Matthews will avoid prison time unless they violate their probation, according to new information from the Michigan Department of Corrections.

The pair also will be subject to drug testing and counseling, and they will remain under orders not to leave Michigan unless they receive permission from authorities.

A third defendant, 18-year-old Rickey Hilton, is awaiting his sentencing, according to police, but he also is expected

ThreeOlBags host writer's workshop

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

The call themselves the ThreeOlBags, three women who have made a name for themselves as writers. Sandra Campbell, Linda Sparkman and Sharon Hegwood, who take their moniker from the travel bags, have been collaborating on travel stories since 1998 when they decided to take a chance on being published authors. Now they're offering the tools they acquired along the way during a weekend Beginning Writers Workshop for Women, which will be held Friday and Saturday, Oct. 20-21.

"They've been thinking about doing one for a year, and they finally talked me into it, I was the one dragging the feet," Hegwood said. "Actually, we're doing it because people have asked us how we do it. It'll be just the basics."

The workshop will be held at Lynn's Bead and Breakfast in Harsens Island. The cost is $50 and includes dinner Friday night and breakfast Saturday morning. A $10 non-refundable deposit is required.

Campbell, a Garden City resident, is the rough-draft writer and researcher of group. She will lead classes focusing on the tools of the trade, which will identify and explain what tools are essential to writers of any genre, "Bare Bones, where good writing begins," will look at finding niche and specialty markets.

Hegwood, also a Garden City resident, is the photographer of the trio, and her classes will deal with digital photography, choosing the right camera and working with photos for publication.

Sparkman, who is the "editor" of the ThreeOlBags — "because she tears everything we write apart and makes us redo it," Hegwood said — will explain the who, what, where, why and how of query letters and contacting editors and publishers.

"Our purpose is to encourage women to step out and do something they always wanted," Hegwood said. "Step out, be brave, try something new. Don't be afraid to follow your dreams."

"We'll give them enough knowledge to give them confidence to step outside their comfort zone," Campbell added. "In my case, I have two other OlBags to drag me along."

The women will draw from their experiences. They first got together as a small Bible study and prayer group. When Campbell signed up for a writing class that was canceled after three weeks, Sparkman, already a published writer, stepped in to teach her and Hegwood.

The ThreeOlBags — Sharon Hegwood, Linda Sparkman and Sandra Campbell — found a place they could relate to (the Old Bag Factory) while visiting Goshen, Ind.

They peddled their first article and photographs about Oscoda to the Observer Newspapers.

What they thought was a discussion with the editor about the article turned into a story about the trio and the publication of their first travel piece.

"Afterwards, we went out to the Coney Island and celebrated," Sparkman said. "Was it that easy all the time? No"

The story was so well-received, the trio heard from the owner of a flower shop in Oscoda that at least 30 people had come carrying the article. The ThreeOlBags have gone on to have 15-20 articles published and Campbell has branched out, getting her own work published.

"It gave me enough knowledge and courage to see what would happen," she said. "It's been wonderful, and they've been there to encourage me. They're my cheerleaders."

The women still meet on Tuesday evenings for their prayer group, they do it before any "Bag business," Campbell said they tease each other that their collaboration is their own personal therapy session.

What they have learned working together is what they hope to share with women at the workshop. They hope to have 15 participants.

For more information on the workshop, call Campbell at (734) 427-9585 or e-mail threeolbags@wowway.com.

Aspiring actors, filmmakers needed for 2-day challenge

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA

The creative team at Superhouse is at it again — filmmaking that is.

The Livonia-based independent film company working on a Halloween-timed re-creation of Michael Jackson's Thriller music video has embarked on yet another project this month. The group will participate in the National Film Challenge, part of the 48 Hour Film Project.

A national competition, the event offers 250 teams of filmmakers across the country one frenzied weekend to write, shoot and edit a short film.

SuperHouse — a creative team including Livonia residents Shane Sevo, Joe Wells and Dan Belleville and Plymouth resident Greg Morrison — has participated in the two-day challenge for the past two years. Each time, the group garnered a win in their genre.

"We are looking for interested parties to work on the project and participate with us," said Belleville.

Superhouse is seeking local filmmakers, actors, production assistants and professionals in the fields of audio, lighting, editing, and post audio and video production to work on the project.

The challenge will begin on Friday, Oct. 20, when the group receives its guidelines, which includes a specific character, prop, line of dialogue and the genre required of the short film.

Then, the group goes right to work. The National Film Challenge requires teams to complete an eight-minute short film that incorporates all four challenge elements.

Shooting is scheduled to begin on Saturday, Oct. 21, with music, post production, CGI and editing all finished in time for the short to be submitted at the end of the weekend, Belleville said.

He calls it: "The most fun you can have in 48 hours."

The event kicks off at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 20, and ends with a dinner celebration at 6 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 23, in Livonia.

Anyone with an interest in creating or acting in a short film may send e-mail to Greg@SuperHouseMedia.com or to Shane@SuperHouseMedia.com for more information.

Dunn: Clean water, shrink government

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

As a U.S. Taxpayers candidate who hopes to represent Westland in the state House, Harold Dunn wants to shrink state government, impose tariffs on imports, privatize education and remove fluoride from drinking water.

Dunn, 74, faces Democrat Richard LeBlanc and Republican Sam Durante in the Nov. 7 election. The winner will earn a two-year term, receive a $79,650-a-year salary and replace term-limited state Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Westland.

A retired automotive engineer, Dunn hopes to become the spoiler in a contest with the Democratic and GOP candidates.

"It seems like the Democrats and the Republicans only want power," Dunn told the Observer. "They want to run government and do whatever they want. They don't want to be guided by anything."

"It's really sad," he said. "We are going to lose the U.S. Constitution because these people don't want to obey it."

When asked to cite some of his top priorities, Dunn said he wants fluoride removed from the water supply.

"I'd like to stop poisoning our water system with fluoride," he said. "It's poison, and it builds up in your system. I would like to go one step further and have the state investigate the use of chlorine in water ... and get it out of the water."

Dunn also said he wants to reduce the size of state government by 30-40 percent, saying the system is bloated and costly.

Dunn has run for public office several times before as a Libertarian candidate but lost his earlier bids to become a U.S. representative.

To help create more jobs,

Dunn

Dunn suggested petitioning the federal government to impose tariffs on imports.

"Now with free trade, companies can't compete anymore, so all of our companies are going overseas," he said.

To replace nearly $2 billion a year that will be lost when the state's single business tax expires next year, Dunn called for shrinking state government.

"It should start to shrink by double digits," he said.

Dunn opposes Proposal 5, which would increase funding for education by $565 million and force annual rate-of-inflation increases.

"Money isn't the thing that education needs," he said. "Education needs more discipline. The federal government leaders don't want to teach people. They don't want people thinking for themselves. They want people following what they're told."

Dunn called for people who place their children in private schools to be exempt from paying school taxes.

On Proposal 2, Dunn said he supports a ban on affirmative action programs for public employment, education and contracting purposes.

"If you give a particular race or gender an advantage, then you're putting another people at a disadvantage," he said. "Is that really a fair way to do things?"

As a candidate, Dunn pledged he will not accept campaign contributions from anyone.

If elected, he said, "I will owe only the voters my loyalty."

District's annual report focuses on successes

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

People interested in finding out about the Wayne-Westland community can get the information they're looking for in the district's 2005-06 Annual Report.

The report is divided into two parts, one focusing on the district as a whole and the other on the each of Wayne-Westland's 24 schools, including its Tinkham Alternative High School.

"It's a celebration of our many successes," Sam Barresi said in presenting the report to the school board. "It addresses MEAP, mathematics and reflects the tests required by the No Child Left Behind act."

According to Barresi, assistant superintendent for instruction, the district is required to produce the annual report as part of No Child Left Behind.

The district report looks at such things as graduation and dropout rates. According to 2004-05 figures, the most current information available at the time the report was prepared, 93.32 percent of seniors graduated. The dropout rate for the same period was 3.99 percent.

The report also includes information on the district's adequate yearly progress, also required by the No Child Left Behind act; its MEAP scores; and district-level improvement and accreditation.

Photographs of students fill the covers and pages of Wayne-Westland's two-part annual report.

In presenting the reports to the school board, Barresi highlighted two items — school performance and scholarship money.

According to Barresi, the class of 2006 received more than $2.5 million in scholarships from colleges and universities and in Michigan Merit Awards.

"It's an indication of our academic successes," he said.

Under school performance, the report acknowledges schools like Schweitzer, Elliott, Roosevelt-McGrath and Taft-Galloway elementaries, which have received the Golden Apple Award for improvement over a three-year period, the Encore Award for "continued significant improvement" and the Lighthouse Award given to Madison Elementary for "continued meritorious performance on the MEAP for several years."

The much thicker composite report covers the same information, but on a school-by-school basis.

The district uses the report as a marketing tool, making copies available to local real estate agents.

Barresi received kudos for the report, which Trustee Ed Turner described as "great."

"It has an excellent layout," Trustee Skip Monit said. "You want to get ahead of this report and read it. There's a lot of misinformation out there about MEAP scores and the information is correct right here in black and white."

another big question for today's economy."

Asked about the effectiveness of the Michigan Economic Development Corp., she told of an incident where members wouldn't speak to a commerce committee over an ethanol production plant issue. She also questioned whether the Jeff Daniels commercials pushing Michigan shouldn't be running in other states.

Toy said there is some working together, across the aisle, but it's more prevalent in the Senate, where lawmakers have more experience. Term limits cut that experience and need to be longer, she said, suggesting 12 years.

"I can see where some reps and to some degree some senators have matured, including myself, along the way," she said.

There's a loss of female lawmakers in the wake of term limits, and she said, "I think you need that balance sometimes."

Toy credited the governor for trying to work with lawmakers, including becoming more sensitive on business issues in recent years as "she was getting her feet wet."

Toy, who co-owns Cardwell Florist on Plymouth, said small business owners are job creators, but are burdened by taxes. Besides the Single Business Tax, she listed paying personal property tax, workers' compensation, sales tax, payroll tax, Medicare, Social Security and unemployment tax. The SBT needed to be ended sooner to "put more of a welcome sign out for Michigan."

She believes that lost state revenue can be made up by combining overlapping departments. Communities also need to take "small steps" to collaborate and consolidate in the wake of frozen state revenue sharing dollars. As for replacing lost SBT revenue, she said there's a lot of talk going on.

"We've got to do something to attract and retain business in this state. We're in a crisis situation," she said.

When it comes to education, lawmakers have been willing to spend over the years, Toy said, adding, "we have to put our dollars there" because we're competing with other states.

Toy was proud of sponsoring 20 bills that passed during her term in the Senate, though Gov. Jennifer Granholm twice vetoed legislation to create a regional oversight board for the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department. Among her other work, Toy cited bills to increase sentences of child sex predators and saving an appliance service program for Consumer's Energy to serve low-income consumers. High-speed chase ends with crash, gunshots

A high-speed chase through several communities ended in Livonia late Tuesday with a crash, gunshots and an arrest at the Millennium Park shopping center.

An 18-year-old Dearborn Heights man was taken into custody and turned over to Detroit police for questioning in connection with a homicide investigation, Livonia police Lt. Greg Winn said.

Detroit police started the chase when a man driving a Ford Focus led police west on Ford Road and north on Middlebelt. The suspect was driving at speeds as high as 90 mph on rain-slickened Garden City, Westland and into Livonia.

Livonia officers joined the chase at Joy Road. The Focus crashed into the side of the road in front of the Costco store. Winn said Livonia officers used their vehicles in an attempt to pin the driver inside the car, but the driver escaped out of the passenger door and ran into the shopping center parking lot. The maneuvers damaged the Focus and one Livonia police car.

Officers, Winn said, ordered the man to stop, but he continued running. An officer pulled his gun and fired a few rounds toward the running man. None of the bullets struck the man, but the man stopped running and surrendered to police after he heard the gunfire, Winn said.

Winn added that Livonia police do not anticipate filing any charges against the man since the case originated in Detroit.

Michigan Economic Development Corp. with keeping some jobs here, though there are limits on what the state can do. Officials need to fine-tune the MEDC to do even better in attracting high-tech and life sciences jobs, he said.

Eliminating the state's Single Business Tax was necessary, Anderson said. However, he added: "It was irresponsible what the Legislature did, as far as eliminating the SBT and creating an almost $2 billion hole in the state budget without being honest with people and telling them what cuts were going to be necessary if this money is not replaced."

Anderson believes the state must find a way to replace this money. He urges a top-to-bottom look at revenues, rather than a Republican plan to not replace $400 million in tax revenues or to shift to a sales tax.

Times are tough for people in southeast Michigan, with foreclosures and jobs losses, he said, and "to hit them with additional tax liability I think is just something unconscionable."

Anderson is proud of his legislation on protecting children from bullying in schools, which he believes will be passed.

Asked about the state sending fewer dollars in revenue sharing to the local communities, Anderson suggested leveling out the funding and urged more talk between the state and local officials to figure out ways to change the state law to allow new local revenue.

"I think that you need to give locals some options that maybe they don't currently have," he said, noting he's not in favor of any new taxes. "The state needs to not be one to be obstructionist in letting them help themselves deal with those issues."

Early preschool education needs to be promoted at the state level. "Instead of having K through 12, we need to be looking at prior to K to deal with getting our kids prepared in those earliest years," he said. That would reduce educational costs in the long-term, though he admitted it would increase costs in the short-term.

Anderson said he fought a plan to take $20 million of the school aid fund to spend on other projects around the state.

He also urges finding a better funding mechanism than the sales tax to pay for schools; finding a way to aligning the budget year for the state and to receive probation. Hilton - unlike Dunstan and Matthews - had no criminal history.

The men had been arrested in July amid accusations they broke into the public services yard on Marquette east of Newburgh, stole computer equipment from two police cars and fled in a 1994 Crown Victoria that belonged to a fire department official.

The case against the three men unfolded after police said Dunstan was caught trying to sell the stolen vehicle to an undercover officer in Washtenaw County. Police Lt. James Ridener had called the investigation "nice police work." According to a state corrections Web site, Dunstan was recently sentenced after pleading guilty to charges of stealing the car and malicious destruction of fire and police property.

Similarly, Matthews pleaded guilty to stealing the car and breaking into a vehicle and stealing items worth $1,000 to $20,000.

According to police Sgt. Steve Borisch, Matthews drove Dunstan and Hilton to the public services yard, where the trio had planned to steal computer equipment out of police cars. While there, Dunstan drove off in the Crown Victoria.

Early on, authorities said Dunstan and Matthews could face penalties ranging up to 10 years in prison, while Hilton could have received a five-year term.

Livonia annual report touts test scores, graduation rates

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER

Livonia Public School officials showed Monday how a commitment to continuous improvement and student learning is more than just part of its mission statement.

The district's latest Annual Report, covering the 2005-2006 school year, detailed improvements in student achievement on standardized tests, a rising graduation rate, changes in core curriculum and higher expectations for teacher quality.

"School improvement is a process of change," said Sheila Alles, director of academic services. "It is driven by our own goals of high student achievement."

Alles said each building has its own School Improvement Team, and those reports of individual school progress are also available to the public.

The district is evaluated using data from several sources, she said. Among those are: The district's own benchmarks, the North Central Accreditation system, as well as standardized tests including the Michigan Educational Assessment Program test, the Stanford OLSAT, and new high school level Explore and PLAN tests.

Last year, Alles noted, the district worked to align to state standards in the areas of high school math, composition and world languages in German and Japanese.

Rob West, coordinator of assessment and evaluation, shared several district-wide test scores - all of which showed students performing above state averages.

Last year marked the first year that the state required all students in grades 3-8 and 11 be tested in both math and English Language Arts using the MEAP test. By combining scores of those who met or exceeded state standards on the exams, West compared district and state performance.

Students in grades 3-8 performed six to 15 points above the state on the English Language Arts exams. And those same students surpassed the state on the Math MEAP by five to 14 points.

At the high school level, West noted, students surpassed state scores on the English exams by about six points, and on the math exam by about seven points.

For those students who took the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the district average was 1160, compared to a national average of 1021. As for ACT, Livonia students averaged a 22 while students nationally performed around 21.

Last year the district implemented the Explore exam in ninth grade. Students earned a 16.7, compared to a national average of 15.6. And high school sophomores took the PLAN test, scoring 18.1 compared to a national average of 16.5.

In addition to the test scores, Livonia Public Schools has seen a slight increase in its graduation rate - from 89.9 percent in 2004 to 91.8 percent in 2005.

The federal requirement under No Child Left Behind is a graduation rate of 80 percent.

"We are significantly above that," said West.

Alles outlined three distinct processes to measure progress in the district:

■ The state's Education Yes! initiative provides an annual School Report Card. Last year the district's schools earned 17 As, 10 Bs and one C.

■ The federal No Child Left Behind legislation requires public schools to meet mandates of Adequate Yearly Progress. All district schools met each of the 30 targets for AYP and the district as a whole met the 100 targets required.

■ North Central Accreditation is an external process of evaluation based on a five-year cycle. Currently 20 elementary schools, four middle schools, three high schools, and the Northwest Skills Center and Livonia Career Technical Center have been accredited.

Alles also sang the praises of staff and parents in the district. She said 100 percent of the high school teaching staff meet future requirements of "highly qualified teachers."

She also credited the district for its high level of parent involvement, with the Livonia PTSA being the largest in the state with more than 12,000 members.

The district's full Annual Report will be available both online, at www.livonia.k12.mi.us, and in hard copy at central office, 15125 Farmington Road, beginning on Monday, Oct. 9.

"How in the hell can anybody who did such a heinous crime as that get three months in jail?" she asked. "I don't understand how that can be acceptable. Those two girls worked together to do this crime, and we've got one that's going to get off with a slap on the wrist."

Krueger had no criminal history, police said, and she has a 5-year-old daughter.

During a preliminary hearing in July, Jennifer Nagle testified that she and Krueger tussled and fell to the ground following a heated exchange of words. She said that's when Harrington intervened with a knife.

On Tuesday, Debbie Nagle

said her daughter is trying to better her life by studying to become a nurse.

"She still has really bad headaches," the mother said. "Jennifer almost lost her life. It took me two days to wash the blood clots out of her hair after she was attacked. She still doesn't have full use of her (left) hand."

Fall into Pumpkin Fest at barn

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER

Fall doesn't officially begin in Livonia until the grounds surrounding Wilson Barn fill with rows of orange pumpkins and the air is tinged with the scent of fresh apple cider.

October at the historic barn is marked by Pumpkin Fest, a month-long celebration of all things autumnal. It's a local must-see destination for families across Wayne County.

Sandra Snyder of Livonia makes a regular stop at the Wilson Barn with her 3-year-old niece Skyler Blyshak of Westland.

Whether they pop in for a weekend craft show or just a quick pony ride, Snyder said, "Kids look forward to it."

Chelsea Kubesh can attest to that.

It's her first year working the event and she's already introduced hundreds of children to the ponies, live animals and the giant pumpkin-shaped inflatable moonwalk.

Pumpkin Fest is more than a tradition to the Anasovich family of Livonia. For 6-year-old Julia Anasovich, it's a special birthday treat.

"We do come here every year on her birthday," said Diane

Birthday girl Julia Anasovich, of Livonia, gets a lift from Chelsea Kubesh so she can ride one of the ponies at Wilson Barn's Pumpkin Fest. The 6-year-old always visits the fall community event on her birthday.

Anasovich, Julia's mother. "She always does the pony rides and the hay ride."

Carrie Rossi brought her children, 3-year-old Kacie Daley and 18-month-old Cameren Daley, to Pumpkin Fest on Monday afternoon, just before naptime. Grandparents Frank and Linda Rossi of Redford joined them.

"It's a nice day," said Carrie Rossi, of Livonia. "We live in the neighborhood. We thought we'd come get some pumpkins."

Visitors to the Friends of the Wilson Barn event have their pick of plenty of pumpkins, as well as gourds and cornstalks. Apple cider and doughnuts are for sale, as are pony and hay rides for children.

Pumpkin Fest lasts from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily now through Oct. 30 at Wilson Barn. It is located at the intersection of West Chicago and Middlebelt roads in Livonia.

Frank Rossi of Redford carries his grandson Cameren, 18 months, of Livonia, through a field of pumpkins at the Wilson Barn in Livonia.

The Pumpkin Fest Craft Show will be held at the same location Friday-Saturday, Oct. 14-15. A free Halloween-themed children's craft event is set for noon, 1 p.m., 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 21. And the Haunted Barn, meant for ages 12 and under, will be open 5:30-8 p.m. Friday-Sunday, Oct. 20-22, and Thursday-Monday, Oct. 26-30.

For information, call (734) 558-5506.

Toy: Best choice for state Senate

In the Nov. 7 general election, two veteran lawmakers are squaring off in the 6th Senate District — incumbent Laura Toy of Livonia and state Rep. Glenn Anderson of Westland.

Anderson is a former city councilman and a three-term member of the House of Representatives. Toy has served on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees and Livonia City Council and as Livonia city treasurer and state representative before moving to the Senate.

Both candidates have strong government backgrounds and are qualified, but we believe Toy would be the better choice.

As a small business owner, she understands the need for service and that is what she provides to the residents of the 6th Senate District. Whether it is on the floor of the Senate or in the communities she represents, Toy is working on behalf of her constituents.

During her four years in the state Senate, Toy has had 20 pieces of legislation passed, notably the law that allows local governments to seek reimbursement from jail inmates for the cost of their incarceration, the establishment of school safety zones, prohibiting persons who must register under the Sex Offenders Registration Act from living, working or loitering within 1,000 feet of school property.

Only two of her bills have been vetoed. Both relate to her efforts to regionalize the Detroit water board. She is not put off by the governor's vetoes and plans to press on to revamp and bring a suburban voice to the water board.

When not in Lansing, Toy is in her district, meeting and listening to constituents. She worked with state Rep. Jim Plakas, D-Garden City, to engineer an $800,000 increase in funding for the financially strapped Garden City Public Schools.

Just this past week, she was able to get legislation passed to help Majeske Machining of Livonia take advantage of an industrial tax credit program. The business will now be able to expand and create new jobs.

It is because of efforts like that, that we urge voters to re-elect Laura Toy to the 6th Senate District on Nov. 7. She is the best person to represent Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Redford in Lansing.

Stabenow deserves return to U.S. Senate

Oakland County Sheriff Michael Bouchard has campaigned hard to unseat incumbent U.S. Sen. Debbie Stabenow, who is running for her second, six-year term.

Bouchard has solid support from both the state and national Republican parties, has a long track record of being a "law and order" office holder and is a genuine and likable person.

Still, Bouchard has not proven he would do a better job in the Senate than Stabenow. His campaign has focused too heavily on the aforementioned "law and order" issues, and the outline of his economic policies sounds like it was copied from the national Republican Party's Web site.

For her part, Stabenow has been an advocate for constituent services, has teamed with fellow Democratic U.S. Sen. Carl Levin to stem the flow of trash from Canada into Michigan landfills and has worked hard to make prescription drugs more affordable to the state's seniors and low-income residents.

A top priority in Stabenow's next term should be to work tirelessly in securing sufficient federal dollars to protect the Great Lakes ecosystem.

The Great Lakes are a national treasure, and are vital to not only Michigan's future, but indeed the entire region. Stabenow needs to fight to keep invasive species from continuing to ravage the natural ecosystem and threatening a billion-dollar tourism industry.

Similarly, tough environmental protections must remain in place to keep industrial pollutants out of the waterways. Stabenow has done a good job of focusing on particular issues, gathering support for her positions and pushing through legislation. On many of the homeland security issues that have been the heart of Bouchard's campaign, Stabenow has taken positions that are more conservative than the Democratic leadership.

Bouchard has done a good job of focusing the debate on homeland security, the need to tighten the nation's borders and protecting our children from Internet predators. But Stabenow has broader experience and has demonstrated an ability to work with Republicans on several bipartisan issues, which will be critical in the next six years. We endorse Debbie Stabenow for U.S. Senate in the Nov. 7 general election.

Thanks for coverage

On behalf of the Westland Lions Club and Leader Dogs for the Blind, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your excellent print coverage of the benefit car show held on Aug. 9 at Culver's of Westland. As a result of your article, a huge number of cars came to this event.

With your help, we were able to raise $2,700 to be donated to Leader Dogs for the Blind. This money will, in part, help a blind person regain his/her independence. The cost of raising, training and issuing a Leader Dog is currently $35,000, but the blind person does not have to pay one cent. The cost is covered solely by donations. Thank you again for all of your help.

Homecoming a success

I am writing you to acknowledge all of the hard work and effort that was put forth into making Wayne Memorial High School's Hollywood Homecoming a complete success!

We had hundreds of parents, staff, students and businesses donate their time and products to help make this event so special! I would just like to thank the communities of Wayne and Westland for truly supporting our school. All of the volunteers helped to make Homecoming 2006 and unforgettable night for our students!!

Innocent until proven guilty

I am writing in response to your article in the Sept. 28, 2006, paper about Jeremy Peer.

I am a little bothered by the remark about people e-mailing you about why he is allowed to go to college and get on with his life.

Why should he not go to college and play football? Isn't a person innocent until proven guilty? At least he is trying to better himself.

What gives people the right to judge somebody until they have walked in their shoes? I'm sure the people that have e-mailed you have not gone through what the Peer family has, so maybe they should mind their own business and tend to their own family like the Peer family is.

Easier to do nothing

The non-existent logic found in Diana Fox's response (Aug. 31, "Comments are cruel") to the comments made by Anita Gillman, the daughter of the 82-year-old woman killed by a 90-year-old man, is typical of the laissez faire attitude prominent in aging baby boomers who refuse to get involved in the care of their parents.

When they have to choose between stepping in and taking the keys away from their parents or ignoring the signs and remaining self-absorbed, they'd rather have the public take their chances on the road with their impaired parents.

Anita Gillman has tragically earned the right to express her views on her mother's killer. I wonder if Ms. Fox's opinion would be different had the older gentleman plowed into a group of schoolchildren waiting at a bus stop. Being old isn't a way to escape accountability.

Most seniors are driving impaired and that's the cold reality. Yes, it's not nice but neither was the end result in the Meijer parking lot. We hold drunk drivers accountable for the results of their impaired driving, what makes seniors an exception?

I'm appalled that Ms. Fox's only argument is that Ms. Gillman hurt the feelings of seniors. Getting over hurt feelings is a much easier thing to do than getting over the preventable death of a loved one. The Secretary of State should require all seniors to take annual driving tests.

I've had too many near collisions with senior drivers, who clearly should not be on the road, to care whether their feelings will be hurt. My main concern is for my safety and the safety of fellow motorists on the road. It's absurd that Ms. Fox believes the self-esteem of seniors supercedes human life.

My Baby Boomer parents will be seniors one day and I may have to take their keys away. It will be inconvenient and they will be mad, but it's the safe thing to do. Our legal system gives seniors a slap on the wrist solely based on their age. They are held to a different standard, thanks to people with Ms. Fox's attitude. She urges us to think of seniors' feelings but in the same breath, she callously states that not only should we ignore Ms. Gillman's feelings but Ms. Gillman has no right to express them in the first place.

Ms. Fox, in conclusion: It's so easy to do nothing.

Stolen memories

Saturday night our daughter was very excited as she was getting ready for her Homecoming at John Glenn High School. All of her friends and their dates gathered at our home before the dance to capture the memories on film so they would be able to remember this day for years to come.

Little did my daughter know that she would lose these memories that night. As they all left, not once did it cross any of the parents' minds to tell our children to take their purses and cameras with them on the dance floor to prevent their belongings from being stolen. Her digital camera was stolen that night.

As a concerned parent, I went to the high school to speak with the principal regarding the situation. The secretary told me that she was in a meeting and wasn't sure how long she would be, so I asked to see the assistant principal.

As I stepped in her office, I introduced myself and was taken back by the fact that she did not introduce herself to welcome me in her office by a handshake or a warm smile. I explained the situation to her and asked how something like this could happen with all the chaperones and police that were there that night.

I did not receive the reassuring answer I was looking for, instead I received a look of unintelligence. I was hoping that she would reassure me by telling me that they were looking in to what had happened that night and what steps they are going to take to prevent this from happening in the future.

We have raised five honest children who have all attended John Glenn and were all honor students. It saddens me that my hardworking child gets one night to forget about schoolwork and make memories and they were taken away from her. To my knowledge, the school has security cameras. Why weren't they looked at to find out who did this?

As I was walking out of the office, a staff member was walking in and asked to see the principal just after me being there for 10 minutes, and the principal was available to see him. So I then realized that I was being pushed aside and they allowed me to speak to the assistant principal so the principal wouldn't be bothered.

As a concerned parent and an adult, I was mistreated. I am frightened to think that if I was treated this way, how are they treating our children? How can they expect the parents' support throughout the school year when they pay us no respect?

Hastert should resign

Dennis Hastert should resign now or be removed.

His inability to choose ethical action over party politics makes him as criminally culpable as Mr. Foley is. By turning a blind eye to Mr. Foley's egregious actions he has put party politics above all else, including here, morality and the protection of constituent children charged to his care while in Washington.

Now Mr. Hastert has further entrenched and polarized this position by party line wagon circling and paranoid statements of "they (the Democrats) are out to get me."

When a party in power has abused its trust as badly as Mr. Hastert and the Republicans have of late, the ONLY course of action is their removal. Mr. Hastert should, as one of the architects of the Clinton impeachment, know this all too well, and if he doesn't, he needs to be informed.

As a good Republican once said before "...You can't fool all of the people all of the time."

American culture needs a boost in civic-mindedness

There is one import that's not stocked on the shelves at our local grocer or big box store that should be. Problem is, it's perishable. The good news is that, like a sourdough bread starter, it's renewable for a lifetime of good living.

That product is civic-mindedness. Its ingredients label would read: interest, caring, enthusiasm, involvement. The label also would list it as supplying 100 percent of the daily requirements for voting in elections.

Why would a nation founded on democratic principles want to import civic-mindedness? Because we neither grow nor manufacture it anymore. Certainly not like in Costa Rica.

A public TV program Sunday night featured that country in a travel segment, with the host arriving there on the day of national elections. Crowds lined the streets, with people supporting various candidates waving different, multi-colored flags. Vehicles crowded the streets, horns blaring.

There were smiles all around, as citizens got caught up in the excitement — and the fun. There also was a holiday atmosphere, clearly with the bulk of the nation getting involved, although there was no mention on the show of the percentage of those actually voting.

What a contrast with elections in the U.S., where politician is considered a dirty word. The only real hoopla comes during political conventions, which are largely staged. There is little interest in elections, with a low percentage turning out to vote, unless money is involved.

Those who do vote do so out of a sense of duty, not opportunity. Election day is greeted not with enthusiasm, but with a dour "I gotta go vote" and a long face.

If there is one thing we do like to do in this country, it is lay blame — anywhere but on ourselves. Politicians are corrupt, we say, and our vote won't make a difference.

Besides, it may not even be counted properly.

But who is responsible for all that? Ultimately, it is each one of us. Lack of interest and participation in the electoral process allows abuses to happen. Perhaps, it is a chicken-and-the-egg kind of thing.

And like with that sourdough starter, contaminants can kill it off. Without the starter, democracy becomes flat and boring, and the sour taste comes from being co-opted by those who would usurp our civil rights.

That doesn't have to happen. Feed the starter with the yeast of the first-person factor, and it begins to bubble and expand by putting the "I" in interest and involvement.

For years now, we've witnessed how perishable this commodity can be. We've left it up to someone else to watch and replenish the starter and, for many of us, it's no longer in the pantry. This is more than a shame, it is troubling, because civic-mindedness isn't something we can just scribble on the shopping list to pick up on our next trip to the store.

We can, however, procure the yeast to feed it and nurture our young through our schools and by our example in heading to the polls on election day, Nov. 7.

As it now stands, we're starving for optimism about the future.

Some sourdough starters have been known to last a hundred years. Let's hope that somehow, somewhere, we can find the ancestral starter that led to our great democratic experiment, and share it all around.

Not senator material

I worked with Glenn Anderson at Ford for many years and he is a very nice person and he was a good council person as Cheryl Graunstadt stated.

As a state representative, he has done nothing. Look at his record in Lansing for six years. He is on the Committee for Car and Home Insurance and we are paying more than ever. He tried to stop gerrymandering, but when his own party and the Republicans got after him, he ran off and hid. We need a fighter! What has he ever done for seniors?

We don't need a nice guy. I disagree with Cheryl on Glenn's qualifications for senator. Don't vote for someone just because he or she is your friend. We will get more done if we vote bipartisan. What are Glenn's commitments and his platform?

Glenn, I hope we don't part over this, but I don't feel you are senator material.

Trupiano is best choice

Just about every other day I read about a layoff or buyout in the domestic auto industry. People I've worked with and consider my friends are suffering.

A lot of this is the fault of the auto companies themselves, but the current government policies don't help, either. For example, Ford and GM have to struggle with a cost penalty of more than $1,000 per car because of health care and retirement costs, compared to the transplants or imports, and this is not being addressed.

I get the idea that George Bush's American auto industry consists of the transplants in Kentucky, Alabama or other places that voted Republican, the same transplants that enjoy that cost advantage. Meanwhile, Bush ignores the CEOs of GM, Ford and DCX.

Anyone who works for the Detroit auto companies, or sells parts to them, or makes machines that they use should consider, while voting, that George Bush is costing us our jobs. We cannot vote against Bush any more, but we can take congressional votes away from his policies.

For example, my congressman in the 11th District, Thaddeus McCotter, votes with Bush about 90 percent of the time. Our best interest will be served by the Democrat, and for me, that's Tony Trupiano.

John Slampyak

McCotter's tough on terrorists

When it comes to winning the war on terror, the Republican Party is head-and-shoulders above the Democratic Party. Locally, our congressman, Thaddeus McCotter, has been to Iraq twice in the past year (four times since being elected to Congress almost four years ago) and has met with our troops as well as elected representatives from Iraq and Afghanistan.

He has introduced legislation to provide more funding for body armor for our troops; legislation that prohibits lobbyists from being employed by governments sponsoring terrorists; legislation that creates a select committee to investigate the money spent in Iraq and Afghanistan; and legislation that funds our first responders.

Congressman McCotter's motto has always been "I work for you." I, for one, believe him.

Granholm is out of touch

LETTERS

It is very interesting how Gov. Jennifer Granholm blames our economic woes in Michigan on President Bush and his policies. While I am conservative, I am honest enough to admit that these problems were not created by Bush or Granholm.

However, I have a major problem with the way Granholm has reacted to these problems and being virtually nonsupportive of legislation and other actions that could help businesses in this state. As Frank Beckmann stated on his radio program on WJR-AM (760), "if Granholm blames Michigan's economic problems on Bush's policies, then she should credit these same policies for creating economic growth in the 49 other states in the country."

We are in a single-state recession. This woman is out of touch, out of time, and hopefully, out of office in November. We need a leader, not a blamer.

Listen to the people

The talk of an imminent attack against Iran has me outraged. This president should not be allowed to make the decision to attack Iran or any other country for that matter without Congressional approval. This insane idea that we can resolve international disputes only by pre-emptive military means must be countered by rational thought.

President Bush is not the only elected person to decide the fate of this nation and others; he is in office because of the people — and he must begin to listen to them.

Support Proposal 2

Your Sept. 21 editorial entitled "Rights proposal is cynical, divisive" urges a "no" vote on the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative (Proposal 2) because, you say, the proposal is "misguided and cynical." Proposal 2, if passed, will amend the Michigan Constitution to prohibit state and local governments from discriminating against, or granting preferential treatment to, any individual or group based on race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin in the areas of public employment, public contracting, and public education. Why is this "misguided and cynical?" Other than engaging in some additional name-calling, your editorial does not provide a clue.

In fact, if anything is "misguided and cynical," it is the present system of preference-based affirmative action, which Balkanizes this country by separating people into racial groups. This categorization, of course, is becoming increasingly hard to implement as interracial marriages increase. To make sure that we get it right, do you suggest that we adopt the South African apartheid definitions of races? Or perhaps, you would suggest that we look to Hitler's Nuremberg Laws for guidance?

Far from being "misguided and cynical," Proposal 2 will change a system of affirmative action that has morphed from a highly desirable one of ensuring fair consideration of everyone, into a system that gives preferences based, not on merit, but on the basis of a person's appearance. The present system has become protected by a wall of political correctness, and anyone who questions the system, as do the backers of Proposal 2, is attacked as being "misguided and cynical" or worse.

I believe that, in November, Michigan voters will be guided by their conscience and not by name-calling editorials; will decide that people should be judged by who they are, not what they are; and will overwhelmingly pass Proposal 2.

Tigers leave fans cheering Cox: Efforts to help consumers warrant another term

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Lifetime Detroit Tigers fan Jim Rembacki of Livonia has been waiting for a successful local team. Rembacki, a banker with Charter One, attended the Friday and Saturday games against the New York Yankees with his daughter, Elizabeth, an Aquinas College junior.

"It was electric," he said. "The crowd was enthusiastic, well-behaved, and the stadium actually physically shook in the seventh inning of the Friday game."

He's been waiting years for his team to be strong again. "It makes you proud to be a Tigers fan that they fought through adversity, they worked hard," Rembacki said.

Comerica Park was rocking this past weekend as the Detroit Tigers defeated the New York Yankees for a chance to play in the American League Championship Series.

Like many fans, Rembacki doesn't want to get ahead of himself with the league championship series with the Oakland A's under way, but he knows a World Series victory isn't an impossibility with the team's strong pitching.

"They have a chance to win every game they play," he said.

On Tuesday, the Tigers got off to a good start in the ALCS with a 5-1 victory over the A's.

Fan Mary Buist was at work Tuesday morning at the Fan Zone at Westland Shopping Center, where Tigers merchandise was flying off the shelves. "The jerseys are selling very well and the jackets," the saleswoman said. "Of course, everything we've got is selling. Everybody's so up and ready for them. It's been 19 years since anything like

When Mike Cox looks back on his first term as Michigan's attorney general, he said he hopes state residents will remember his consumer protection efforts.

"In the past, it was believed that Republicans are not supposed to care much about consumer protection, but I think we've proved that wrong," Cox said.

He said he's expanded the role of the attorney general's office, with fewer staffers and a smaller budget. The Livonia Republican said his office collected $38.8 million in consumer refunds and state settlements. These efforts include penalties against Wal-Mart for not placing price tags on enough products, cell phone companies for slamming and cramming complaints, and casinos for not paying out advertised prizes.

"We collected about two-and-a-half times in revenue compared to the Granholm term — and we still haven't completed a full term yet," Cox said. Gov. Jennifer Granholm served as attorney general from 1998-2002.

The former assistant Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney is looking for a second four-year term in next month's election against Grosse Pointe Democrat Amos Williams and Grand Rapids Libertarian Bill Hall.

In addition to his consumer protection initiatives, Cox boasts his office has motivated more child support payments. By working with credit reporting agencies and Friend of the Court officials, he said the number of Michigan children not receiving any child support payments had dropped to 606,000 this year from 651,000 in 2002.

"If they had a favorable credit rating, they were able to get loans and that's how we were able to make sure more dead-beat parents made payments,"

Cox said. "The drop is not huge, but we're moving in the right direction."

The attorney general's office is directing part of a $52.5 million health care fraud settlement with Livonia-based Specialized Pharmacy Services and its parent company Omnicare Inc. toward a state Web site (www.michigandrugprices.com) that enables Michigan consumers to compare prices for prescription drugs.

"We have 1.1 million people in this state without prescription drug coverage and this will enable them to shop for the best deal and save money," Cox said.

He admits some lessons he learned over the past four years. He acknowledges he needs to be more patient and diplomatic.

"I've learned that a frontal assault isn't always the best method," Cox said.

He survived a high-profile controversy last fall when he hastily called a press conference to admit an extramarital affair. Cox said the admission stemmed from an investigation into alleged illegal campaign finance activities by attorney Geoffrey Fieger, who was never charged with a crime and called on Cox to resign.

The situation provided a media firestorm for about two months, but the issue subsided from public light last winter.

If elected to a second term, Cox wants to continue his focus on consumer protection, child support and senior citizen issues, but he also wants to intensify his efforts on Internet crime investigations and public education.

"I want to help parents monitor their children's computer habits so they don't fall victim to an adult predator," Cox said. "We've taken up fights that no one else will take up, and we've done it without costing the taxpayers extra money."

Libertarian, U.S. Taxpayers candidates offer alternatives

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

With unhappiness in the two major political parties near an all time high, 11th District congressional candidates John Tatar and Charles Tackett believe they offer voters an alternative.

Tatar, a Livonia Stevenson High School government teacher from Livonia, is the Libertarian candidate. He has run for state representative three times, but this is his first run for Congress.

Tackett, a Belleville businessman, is the U.S. Taxpayers/Constitution Party candidate.

They are running against Republican incumbent Thaddeus McCotter and Democratic challenger Tony Trupiano.

JOHN TATAR

Tatar says being a Libertarian is about taking back control from the government.

"My interest is that the government controls everything that goes on around us and we need to take it all back," he said. "We are sovereign citizens and government has that all backwards."

He said the Democrats limit freedom by controlling financing and spending and

Republicans limit freedom with socially restrictive laws. "My attitude is they shouldn't be controlling us in either way," he said. "We are more intelligent than they are in terms of spending our money and deciding what we should do in our lives."

Tatar said he doesn't think voters should have to choose between "the lesser of two evils" and that he offers a legitimate third choice. He is especially concerned about government spending and the mounting national deficit and debt.

"The deficit is the biggest problem we have. I remember Reagan running and saying if we get to a trillion dollars (in public debt), do you realize how much that is and we are way past that. The deficit means inflation," he said.

As a Libertarian, Tatar believes that government needs to provide the basics outlined in the Constitution, but needs to stop wasteful spending on pork barrel projects and a costly war in Iraq.

"A basic function of government is to secure our liberty. If we have a war on terror, go get the terrorists in Afghanistan and what the heck are we doing in Iraq? It has been proven that there are no weapons of mass destruction," he said.

As a former military man, with 31 years in the Army rising to the rank of lieutenant colonel, Tatar said the United States should have learned from Britain and stayed out of the Middle East.

"I blame the Congress. It's really not Bush's fault, it's Congress' fault. Congress rubberstamped Bush's programs," he said.

He said the No Child Left Behind program is a "joke."

"It's not the teachers' problem. The teachers work hard every day; I do. I don't think No Child Left Behind is a logical or a reasonable plan," he said.

CHARLES TACKETT

Tackett said he felt "called" to run for office. He said religion is a big part of his life and of the conservative party that he is representing in the election.

"That's a conservative party.

First and foremost, they believe Jesus Christ is God and creator," he said. "They're very founded in the Constitution of the United States and, as a result, they don't believe in an evolving Constitution, which doesn't mean they don't believe in the ability to amend. But they feel we should walk the guidelines that our founders set forward for us."

Tackett said the party believes that government has gotten too big and that the middle class is being hurt by recent legislation.

Tackett knows he's a dark horse in the race, but he believes he has a chance to win.

He said he's voted for McCotter.

"McCotter has disappointed me," he said. "He went down there and acted like he checked his brain at the door."

A veteran of the war in Vietnam, Tackett said he learned from the United States' involvement there that in a civil war "you can't prevail." He said the same situation exists in Iraq.

"We're naive to think that a democratic republic will ever prevail there," he said.

"Democracy doesn't just mean you have a vote and the majority vote wins. That doesn't mean it will be a good democracy. Realistically, they'll never know the democracy that we have."

He said the war is draining our resources. He said he supports maintaining artillery, the Air Force and special forces in Iraq and pulling out the regular Army.

Tackett said he supports maintaining tax cuts for those earning less than $100,000. But he said the "real rich" understand that "the money could be used better in another rung of society" and are less bothered by taxes than some believe.

He said Republicans used "terrorist tactics" by trying to protect the estate tax by tying it to an increase in the minimum wage. The bill was defeated.

"Bill Clinton is the best Republican we've had," Tackett joked. "Nobody argues about it. Our economy went well for eight years. He was smart. He and (former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan) Greenspan were in sync."

Tackett said he is sick of hearing about how other nations hate us. He said a moratorium on aid might change their views.
