

Neighbors complain about loud music

By LeAnne Rogers Staff Writer

This is the third summer for the outdoor beer garden at Ashley's Beer & Grill in Westland, which also makes this the third summer of complaints from neighbors.

Three residents from Shellye Court — about a half mile northeast from the restaurant's location on Wayne Road east of Westland Shopping Center — came to a recent council meeting to air their unhappiness with the situation. "This is what I have had to listen to in my neighborhood since the summer of 2013," said Richard Graham, playing loud music he described as emitting from Ashley's and recorded on the deck of his home. "It's shameful and disrespectful for the mayor and council to allow this."

His wife Lisa Graham commented, "It feels like such a waste of time, three years complaining about Ashley's. It's just as loud as the first year they had music in the beer garden. Not every citizen can hear it. The city issued the permit without thought for the impact on the neighbors."

Mayor William Wild and council members were sympathetic about the ongoing complaints agreeing to seek a resolution. The city attorney and police are working on the complaints also.

"I know you are extremely frustrated. Throughout this, we have been trying to find a win-win solution," Wild said. "Promises were made, but they

Wayne sells homes for rehab, resale

Wayne is purchasing 23 properties — two commercial sites and 21 residential properties — from Wayne County tax foreclosure.

The residential properties and one commercial site were sold to Global/JSR Funding for $110,250, the amount it cost the city to acquire the properties. It is the same arrangement as in 2014, when the city sold 16 blighted homes to the company for rehabilitation and resale.

gift certificates from Tenpenny Furniture, Scrooge and Barley and Polish Pottery; a gift certificate for hair service to Modello 227; Salad Mates set from Cutco Kitchen; consultation and gift certificate for Nina McClemore; Automobile Day at the Spa from Bill Brown

Ford; plus two will win a one-hour massage or LuXe Facials plus 15-minute Hydro-LuXe massage at Massage-LuXe – Novi or West Bloomfield locations.

Ten others will win Riviera Cinema tickets and a Buddy's Pizza coupon.

So put on those shades, find a magnifying glass and have fun. Deadline to enter is Monday, Aug. 3. "This strengthens wayne's residential neighborhoods," Wayne Community Development Director Peter McInerney said.

Global/JSR Funding recently reported on 16 homes, 14 of which were sold to owner/ occupants. The company agreed to lease one home back to the person who had lost it to foreclosure while the remaining building was a multipleunit building with tenants.

"I'm in real estate. You often see homes sold to companies in China or Phoenix, Arizona," Councilman David James said. "They just let the houses sit there."

"It's an important step to remove blight," Councilman Skip Monit said.

The city is acquiring a longvacant two-story commercial building at 35132 W. Michigan Ave. west of Wayne Road. It's east of the also vacant former Bank of America building.

Owned for six years

"We've owned the frontage for six years. We had hoped to get the companion piece (to the north) so that we could combine it," McInerney said. "The building is in a horrible state of disrepair. It's currently before the dangerous building board."

The city engineer determined the structure is a dangerous, he said, and the hearing officer is to make a determination for a recommendation to the board.

"Wayne Main Street wanted to access the building; I think they wanted to satisfy themselves (about the condition)," McInerney said. "The roof has collapsed. It is dangerous, dangerous."

Agreeing, Wayne-Westland Department of Public Works Director Ramzi El-Gharib said

The students at Schulze received 30 books, while Pro-Literacy got 70.

Wayne Councilman John Rhaesa said he was concerned about preserving the building. "Main Street had an

Concerts return to Wayne's Goudy Park

By LeAnne Rogers Staff Writer

The Wednesday night Concerts in Goudy Park return to Wayne on July

There are five concerts in the series, which is held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays through Aug. 26. The concerts follow the weekly Wayne Farmers Market, also held in Goudy Park, which is behind Wayne City Hall on Wayne Road just north of Sims.

The free concerts will kick off with classic rock performed by Dead in Dog Years. That night will also feature the drawing for the Wayne Goodfellows Camaro raffle at 9 p.m.

Tickets to win the 2010 Chevrolet Camaro are $20 each and a maximum of 3,000 will be sold. Tickets are still available at Henry's Service Center - where the car is on display - Icon Computer Solutions, Wayne City Hall and the Wayne Community Center.

himself, he would work aggressively to find a solution.

Based on discussions with the city attorney, Council President James Godbout said the city has extremely limited options after the permit allowing music in the outdoor beer garden has been issued.

Issued in 2013, the permit allows music Thursday through Saturdays until 11 p.m.

"I don't recall any residents having a big concern or issues with the permit," Godbout said. "Ashley's is on a main road with five lanes and plenty of traffic. No one thought sounds would bounce to a neighborhood half a mile away."

Paul's Players present 'Fiddler on the Roof'

They say it takes a village, and Paul's Players Community Theater is bringing people from many local "villages" together to re-create the small Russian town of Anatevka in their production of Fiddler on the Roof. The musical will be presented at 7:30 p.m. July 30-31 and Aug. 1 at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, 27475 Five Mile Road, Livonia.

Paul's Players is based in Livonia but the cast and crew for this summer's musical hail from numerous surrounding communities, including Garden City, Northville, Plymouth, Redford, Ypsilanti and Westland. One of the missions of Paul's Players summer musical is to give entire families the opportunity to participate in a musical theater experience together.

This year, the Kain family from Livonia –

Rachel (Golde), her husband Mike (Constable) and their sons Ethan and Austin (townsboys) are all on stage in this production. Livonia music teachers Steve Olsen (Tevye) and his wife Marilee (Music Director-Pianist) are spending a big part of their summer vacation working with this show. Rebecca Borsodi of Redford (Yente) and her daughters Sarah (Shprintze) and Abby (Bielke) are cast members, and while Kat O'Donnell (Tzeitel) of Livonia is on stage, her mother Tina works behind the scenes as a production administrator.

Pam Gunderson sings in the chorus, while her mom Joyce designs costumes and helps decorate the set. Even the musicians get into the family act, with Brian Buckmaster playing percussion and his brother Don playing clarinet. Patrick Yee (Lazar Wolf) and Kayla Younkin (Hodel), students from the Eastern Michigan University School of Music "family" also join the production.

Fiddler on the Roof is a wonderful show about families and the value of friendship and community," said Pat Hutchison, artistic director of Paul's Players. "I love having so many families participate in our summer musical. Plus, every time we do a show, we create new families and new communities of people who work together to make it all happen. That's one of the great things about theater.

Tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for seniors/students. Tickets can be reserved by calling 248-347-4134, emailing paulsplayers@gmail.com or visiting Eventbrite.com.

New Beaumont signs reflect Botsford transition

Earlier this summer, the names, color and logo of the four former Oakwood Healthcare hospitals changed to reflect Beaumont Health — the new not-for-profit health care organization formed through an affiliation of Beaumont Health System, Botsford Hospital and Oakwood Healthcare last fall.

Oakwood's green, Beaumont Health System's burgundy and Botsford's blue and rust were recently replaced with a new Beaumont Health blue. Research shows that blue is universally well-liked, is highly visible, and represents trust, dependability and stability to consumers.

As of late June, all eight Beaumont Health hospitals began using the Beaumont name to bring them together under one brand. The hospital names also include the city where the hospital is located: Beaumont Hospital-Dearborn, Beaumont Hospital-Farmington Hills, Beaumont Hospital-Trenton, Beaumont Hospital-Taylor and Beaumont Hospital-Wayne.

To maintain brand connection with their local communities, three of the hospitals will include a campus name on their signs: Beaumont-Dearborn, Oakwood Campus; Beaumont-Farmington Hills, Botsford Campus; and Beaumont-Trenton, Southshore Campus.

Permanent signs will be installed throughout the organization, including hospitals, major medical centers, employed physician offices, outpatient sites and private physician offices, starting later this year and continuing until early next year.

Beaumont Health was chosen as the name for the new, combined organization as part of the affiliation agreement, completed in 2014. That name builds upon the strength of the Beaumont name in the health care market. Beaumont is the most-preferred health system for all health care needs throughout the state, according to research conducted by the National Research Corporation. Beaumont Health consists of eight hospitals with 3,337 beds, 163 outpatient sites of care and nearly 5,000 physicians. With almost 35,000 employees, Beaumont Health is southeast Michigan's largest health care employer.

În 2014, Beaumont Health had $4 billion in revenue with 174,675 inpatient admissions, 16,213 births and 492,073 emergency visits.

Concert series to feature Steve King & the Dittilies

The Music From the Heart outdoor concert series in Livonia continues from 7-9 p.m. Thursday with a performance of oldies music by Steve King & the Dittlies.

All concerts are free for the public to attend and are held on the grounds of City Hall at Five Mile and Farmington roads.

Jimmy John's of Livonia provided free sandwiches to those in attendance at the July 16 concert featuring the Dan Rafferty Band. Summer school ends with show and tell

EDUCATION

By Sue Mason Staff Writer

Aaliyah Al-Mamory held up a plastic slice of watermelon and Tatsean Moore peeked through the hole of a plastic doughnut to show the difference between food you should eat often and food that should be consumed less frequently.

"You can only have a doughnut sometime," said Tatsean, an incoming first-grader at Hamilton Elementary School.

"Watermelon is a fruit and it makes you feel healthy," Aaliyah said.

The youngsters are among 110 students who spent part of their summer at the Westland school getting a head start on the new school year. As incoming students, they spent four weeks in Jump Start, a program designed to give them an academic leg-up on kindergarten.

The first-through fourth-graders were more hands-on in a fiveweek High Tech Academy that focused on math and science and had reading and writing integrated into the course work. Each week, students selected a different aspect of STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics) to focus on. "The kids greatly loved it," site coordinator Kelley Michels said. "STEM for summer school is more hands-on. It kept the program ex-citing. The kids were really enthusiastic."

This is the second year the district has offered Jump Start and High Tech Academy in its four priority schools - Hamilton, Hicks, Hoo-ver and Schweitzer. The schools had been identified as being in the bottom 5 percent of the statewide Top-to-Bottom School Rankings. However, after two years, Hicks is the district's only priority school.

Hamilton moved out of priority status quickly, moving from 2 percent to 26 percent two year's ago, while Schweitzer and Hoover moved out last year. Now the focus is one getting Hicks off priority status.

'We work with Wayne RESA and the state school reform officers, they shake their heads when they see what we're doing," said Jenni-fer Munson, Executive Director of School Improvement and Innovation in the Wayne-Westland Community Schools. "We've gotten a lot of kudos.

The Hamilton staff invited Laura Flaherty (left) and Claire Mueller from the William P. Faust Public Library to participate in the gallery walk.

According to Munson, the "program went over huge last year," and got plenty of good feedback from the parents.

'We have such a solid group of teachers and parapros. Our curriculum is aligned and our assessments are aligned. The goal is to support everybody.'

Some form of summer school is offered at almost every building in the district. MARS is for outgoing fifth-graders through seventh-graders, SMART for non-priority elementary buildings and the Tinkham Center is handling traditional summer school for high schoolers.

Even the Bright Futures and Champions after-school programs have something going on this summer for students and free lunch programs are available for students up to eighth-graders

Thursday was the last day of Jump Start and the High Tech Academy, so students took to the hallways of the school to show off what they had learned to parents with Community Gallery Walks. Aaliyah and Tatsean were talking about healthy foods, while soon-to-be first-grader Anthony Hollowell was showing how far a skateboarding armadillo can

"If you put the ramp on the top bar, it goes fast," he said.

"They start with different predictions if it will stay on or go off the mat," Pinto said. "They try different mats and heights to see if it stops where they think it would."

The youngsters also got to make superhero bookmarks and gather stickers and tattoos at a table manned by Claire Mueller, youth service associate, and Laura Flaherty, youth service librarian, at the William P. Faust Public Library.

"We were invited by the school to come,' Mueller said. "We want to get the kids excited about reading and put library calendars in the hands of parents.'

With the summer reading program ending this week, there's still a children's nonfiction challenge for youngsters to get involved in. They can earn weekly coupons and prizes. It runs Aug. 1-29, and information and challenge sheets are available at the library's youth desk.

Strategies for taking your required minimum distributions

Q: Dear Rick: I will turn 70 later this year. My wife turned 70½ earlier this year. We don't need the money from our retirement account and prefer not to take it. My wife is retired and has an old 401(k) Plan as well as an IRA. I plan to work for another few years. I have three 401(k)s two from old employers and one from my current employer which I continue to contribute. In addition, I also have an IRA.

Do we have to take required minimum distributions from both the 401(k) and the IRA or can we just take it from one? I know there are ways to donate a required minimum distribution to a charity but I would prefer to transfer my retirement account to my kids who can use the money. Is there a way I could do that so I can avoid the required minimum distribution and let the money continue to grow for my children's benefit? I was also told there's a way that you can gift your required minimum distribution into a 529 Plan for your grandchild. How does that work?.

A: Since your wife turned 701/2 this year, she does not have to take a required minimum distribution until April 1, 2016. For your first required minimum distribution you can actually delay it until April 1 of the year after you turn 70½. The downside of that is by delaying your first minimum required distribution, you would be required to take two required minimum distributions in the same year. For most people it works better to take your first required minimum distribution in the year you turn 70%.

In reviewing your situation, you do have to take required minimum distributions from 401(k)s and IRAs. You cannot take the entire distribution from one of those accounts. Therefore, for this year your wife would have to take her required minimum distribution from her IRA and 401(k) Plan.

As to gifting your required minimum distribution or your retirement accounts to your children. That is not possible. The exception is the one you mentioned where you donate your required minimum distribution to a charity. In addition, you cannot donate your required minimum distribution or an IRA into a 529 plan to pay for your grandchildren's college education.

There is, however, an exception to the rule that would benefit you as opposed to your wife. According to our tax laws you can delay a distribution from a 401(k) Plan if you are still working for that company after 701/2 and you own less than 5 percent of the company. Therefore, on the 401(k) Plan for your current employer, you would not have to take a required minimum distribution from that account as long as you stay employed with them and you do not own more than five percent of the company.

In addition, you may consider directly transferring your two old 401(k) Plans into your current employer's plan. If your employer allows this, you can move your old 401(k)s into your current 401(k) and avoid required minimum distribution until you retire. Of course, this would not affect your IRA, as you would still have to take required minimum distributions from your IRA; but, you can at least delay it for your 401(k) Plan.

The majority of employer-sponsored plans do allow this; however, it is important that you check with your current plan to confirm. If it is possible, the key is to do a direct transfer. A direct transfer is where money goes from one custodian to another. By doing so there are no adverse tax consequences and there's nothing that you have to report to the IRS.

I recognize there are many seniors who would prefer not to take a required minimum distribution and let the money continue to grow tax deferred. Unfortunately, the law is the law.

Keep in mind that if you have a Roth IRA, required minimum distributions are not required. Therefore, something many people should consider before they turn 70½ is to do a Roth conversion. It can be a great tax saving and financial move.

Good luck.

Snyder: County financial emergency exists

By Eric D. Lawrence michigan.com

Gov. Rick Snyder has agreed with the findings of a state review team about Wayne County's financial situation, and declared a financial emergency exists, meaning the state likely will have some level of say-so in how the county operates.

"After thoroughly reviewing the report of the review team, I concur with their conclusion," Snyder wrote in a letter Wednesday addressed to Wayne County Executive Warren Evans and the Wayne County Commission, one day after the review team wrapped up its work.

Now, the commission gets to choose one of four options for dealing with the emergency: entering into a consent agreement with the state; having an emergency manager; neutral evaluation, which is mediation; or bankruptcy.

It's not immediately clear when the commission will meet on the issue, although a Committee of the Whole meeting is scheduled for Tuesday.

A message seeking comment was left for Commission Chair Gary

Snyder Evans

Woronchak, D-Dearborn. In Michigan, a consent agreement is entered between the state and a local municipality or school district to provide a remedy to local financial problems and create financial stability. Unlike with an emergency manager, a consent agreement allows elected officials to remain in power, though they must adhere to conditions and actions prescribed by the state to alleviate the financial crisis

The City of Detroit entered into a consent agreement in April 2012 and operated under it until filing for Chapter 9 bankruptcy protection in July 2013.

Snyder's letter detailing his decision gives the commission or county executive until 5 p.m. July 29 to request a hearing on the matter. If a hearing is requested, it would be held the following morning before State Treasurer Nick Khouri or his designee.

The Wayne County Building Authority voted to cancel contracts for the firm on the $300-million Wayne County Jail project in Detroit, Thursday, Aug. 15, 2013.

Such a hearing would not be an original factfinding proceeding, according to Snyder's letter.

"Its purpose would be to afford county officials an opportunity to indicate whether the findings of the review team report were supported by competent, material and substantial evidence on the whole record," Snyder wrote.

The governor's decision comes a little over a month after Evans requested that the state review the county's finances. He has said he wants a consent agreement, which would allow him to impose cuts to employee benefits even as the county is in negotiations with its unions.

Evans' spokesman, James Canning, issued a statement reiterating the administration's desire for a consent agreement.

"We maintain the position that a consent agreement is the best option going forward. We will seek a consent agreement that respects the roles of the Wayne County executive and commission, and gives us the tools to focus our efforts on resolving the $52million structural deficit," Canning wrote. in an e-mail, noting that the administration "has been aware and fully transparent about the county's financial challenges."

MICHIGAN.CON

Despite some recent improvements in Wayne County's financial picture, such as an increase in property tax collections and a settlement over retiree healthcare, the state's review team found enough dire news to conclude that a financial emergency exists.

In addition to an underfunded pension system and heavy health care costs, the review team noted that the county underestimated expenditures in three of the last four fiscal years by $16.7 million to $23.7 million, has not identified a resolution for its money-draining unfinished jail and struggles with ineffective communication.

After Snyder's decision was announced, two state legislators weighed in on the county's situation.

Sen. Patrick Colbeck, R-Canton, said the declaration of a financial emergency is no surprise and he hopes the situation can be resolved without the need for an emergency manager or a bankruptcy.

"It's really the balance sheet," Colbeck said. "It's all the stuff we've promised that we simply can't afford."

Colbeck said Evans has been trying to confront the issues head-on and he is hopeful he can do that through a consent agreement.

State Rep. Wendell Byrd, D-Detroit, said the county needs financial help from the state, or Evans would never have asked the state to conduct a review. But an emergency manager is not the answer, Byrd said.

"If you need help, you need help," he said. "But just because you need help doesn't mean you have to give up your rights to govern."

Eric D. Lawrence writes for the Detroit Free Press.

Salem graduate soars to new heights in women's Air Race Classic

By Joanne Maliszewski Staff Writer

You have to believe Amelia Earhart would be proud of Salem High School grad Katie Vena. She and her flying partner placed 11th out of 54 teams in the annual Air Race Classic in June.

Women pilots of all ages got their wings on for the race that began in Fredericksburg, Va., and ended four days and more than 2,100 nautical miles later in Fairhope, Ala., not all that far from the Gulf of Mexico.

Not only did Vena take 11th place, but Western Michigan University, where she is studying flight science in the college of aviation, took fifth place in the collegiate rankings.

Vena's dad, John Vena of Plymouth and a career pilot with Delta Airlines, aptly noted that the race occurred on the second anniversary of her first flight lesson. "I could see the difference in her before and after the race," John Vena said.

Proud? That's an understatement for John and Naoko, Katie's mom. They came to the finish line," Katie said, recalling the race that took her and her partner pilot and instructor Sara Karsten of Rogers City, Mich., 21/2 days to finish.

"I am so proud of what we did. We (she and Kar-sten) split (the flying) half and half," said Vena, who made it clear that Karsten was the lead pilot. "I learned so much about the weather. I also learned how to take care of myself physically. And I learned how to work with a crew."

For Vena, the race and her team's rank is just the beginning of what she plans as a career in aviation. In fact, as her father noted, she signed up for flight lessons the day after she turned 17. "The very next day I went to Ann Arbor Airport,' Vena said.

There she worked with an instructor and obtained her flying license in 50 short days. Her dad was stunned.

When Vena made the decision to be a pilot, the reaction was overwhelming: "My dad was psyched and my mom was happy I found something I loved.'

Vena admits that she hadn't really thought of flying as an option, but she had an opportunity to fly with someone involved in the Experimental Airplane Association. She was hooked. And it led to her decision to major in flight science at WMU, where she could also obtain all necessary licenses on her way to becoming a commercial airline pilot - like her dad.

Sure, there is plenty of course work, but Vena also flies some four to five times a week at college — it has an airport in

Battle Creek - and works as a dispatcher at the facility, which has about 30 planes. A tough program, but she loves it. "I wouldn't say STEM is crucial, but you need basic math," she said. "There is a lot of science, mostly aerodynamics."

Vena is one of the few women in the program and she has had her share of difficulties. "This is definitely a male-dominated field," she said. "Some men are just programmed a certain way about women. There are times I am just not happy with it."

But her mom and dad and siblings have her back. "There's no doubt about it, it's hard because she's a woman (in a maledominated field)," John Vena said.

Her family also has no doubt Vena will succeed - that's just the stuff she is made of. "We love what she is doing. We support her 100 percent," her father said.

Vena takes pride in a long line of women pilots, including Earhart and others, who began the Air Race Classic. "It has the most amazing history," she said. "It started in 1929 as a Powder Puff Derby. Women in those days were not allowed to race with men.' She stood proudly with the other women pilots for a group photo during the air race in June. The race required the pilots to stay out of the clouds flying was only in the day using visual flight rules. "You plan out however you want to get there (to finish line)," she said. "It was a zigzagged route."

Like most young adults, Vena would one day like a family. She said flying is a perfect career for balance because there are days to fly and days to be at home.

"It can be a tough job at the start," her father said. "But this is a job that with seniority she can make a balance.'

Vena is accustomed to questions of safety, particularly with news of plane crashes and mishaps in the past couple of years. But she is not worried. She knows what she's doing.

"I think it is incredibly safe. The more you learn the more you realize how safe it really is," she said. "Flying is the coolest thing. It is so freeing. It is just a lot of fun and it is rewarding."

World War II radioman was trained for Japanese invasion

World War II veteran Edward James White of Westland was honored as the July Veteran of the Month by the Sons of the American Legion Squadron of the Myron H. Beals American Legion Post 32 in Livonia.

White served in the Navy from 1943 to 1946. Raised in Detroit he graduated from Cooley High School in the spring of 1943. He was drafted in December and decided to join the Navy. He was sent to Great Lakes Navel Base, north of Chicago for basic training. After basic training he was sent to Indianapolis for Radio School where he learned Morse code, radio theory and procedures.

On June 6, 1944, White was about to celebrate his 19th birthday when he heard about the Normandy invasion. The word around the school was that they would be heading to Europe but when his orders came they showed differently. He was then sent to Oceanside, Calif., where he received additional training at the Camp Pendleton Assault Amphibian Battalion. Their training was rigorous and designed to prepare them for the eventual invasion of Japan.

After training he shipped out to Hawaii where he was assigned to JASCO (Joint Assault Signal Company). His unit consisted of eight radiomen, four signalmen and a chief. During the planned initial invasion of Japan, their unit would be part of the initial landing group and would be responsible for setting up communications with ground, air and naval support. Needless to say, White was very nervous about the upcoming invasion and knew they would be in for a rough time.

The invasion date had not been established yet so White was temporarily assigned to FMORU (Fleet Maintenance Ordinance Radio Unit). His group's main function was to repair radio gear for the fleet. While in Pearl Harbor, he witnessed the destruction that two 550-pound bombs can do to a ship. He watched as the USS Franklin Aircraft Carrier limped into Pearl Harbor for repairs. The ship was hit while operating 50 miles off the Japanese coast and sustained major damage with 724 crew killed and 265 wounded. His crew worked to repair the damage to the radio systems. He kept very busy going from ship to ship repairing radio equipment on a daily basis but was always thinking about the day they would leave to invade Japan.

Fortunately for White and the rest of the invasion force, that day never came. Six days after dropping the atom bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan surrendered. White was then sent to San Diego where he was assigned to teletype maintenance school. He was discharged in May of 1946.

Upon returning home White worked as a rough carpenter. In 1962, President Kennedy signed the "Manpower Development and Training Act," authorizing a three-year program aimed at re-Ed vividly recalls the night of May 1, 1950. He was taking a neighborhood friend home and accidentally hit the fender of his friend's sister's car, damaging it quite severely. Turns out he had been wanting to meet her but couldn't come up with a good reason. He apologized the next day and six months later they were married.

Ed and Helen eventually settled down in Inkster and have nine children, three sons and six daughters, 17 grandchildren and two greatgrandchildren. Ed and Helen loved camping with their children and are proud that they are all college graduates.

White was presented a plaque with his picture and service information by members of the S.A.L. Veteran of the Month Committee. An additional plaque was also put on display in the vestibule of the American Legion Hall during the Month of July for all to see.

The S.A.L. invites local residents to attend their monthly meetings to listen to the Veteran of the Month. The public is also encouraged and to nominate veterans to be honored at its meetings. Nomination forms can be picked up at the American Legion Hall, 9318 Newburgh Road, Livonia, MI 48150.

Today's the day to bowl

The Intensity Track Club is hosting a bowling fundraiser at 4 p.m. Sunday at Merri-Bowl Lanes in Livonia (Five Mile near Merriman).

Tickets to bowl will be $20 and there will be a 50/50 raffle, basket raffle and Detroit Lions preseason tickets to be auctioned off.

Money generated by the event will help Intensity, based at Wayne Memorial High School, to make an August trip to the AAU Junior Olympics in Norfolk, Va.

Rams win two

The Michigan Rams broke out early Monday night against the Southfield Lightning at Ford Field in Livonia, scoring three runs in the first inning and four more in the second en route to a 11-1 victory.

Sparking the Rams to the five-inning Livonia Collegiate Baseball League win were Zack McGuire (2-for-3, double, three runs), Westen Price (2-for-3, three runs), Ben Hart (1-for-3, three RBIs) and Nolan Page (1-for-3, three runs).

Other hits were collected by Danny Kerr (1-for-2, two runs), Anthony DiPonio (1-for-3, one RBI), Kevin O'Malley (1-for-3, one RBI) and James Hall (1-for-2).

Josh Bays started and gave up one run before winning pitcher Alex Kinch came on with one out in the third with the Rams up 7-1. He gave up just two hits the rest of the way.

» On Wednesday, Price went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs as the Rams defeated the Storm 6-2, improving to 24-8-1. Also chipping in with multiple-hit games for the victors were Sean Winkelseth (2-for-3, two RBIs), Hart (2-for-4, two runs) and McGuire (2for-3, run). Jared Tobey pitched four shutout innings and got the win; finishing up with three innings of work was McGuire.

Dezelski's getting it done over in Luxembourg

Former CC, Hillsdale standout excels in first season

By Brad Emons Staff Writer

Tim Dezelski wouldn't exactly call it a European vacation, but for the former Novi Detroit Catholic Central High and Hillsdale College basketball standout, it was the next best thing.

The 6-foot-6, 228-pound forward from Farmington Hills landed in the tiny country of Luxembourg playing for Residence Walferdange, a seconddivision team. He averaged more than 17 points and a league-best 15-plus rebounds per game in his inaugural pro season.

Dezelski was stationed five minutes outside the capital city of Luxembourg and helped his team to a 30-3 overall record and an 11-3 mark in the playoffs.

"It was great," Dezelski said. "I was playing in a little village and it awesome. Very nice city and the whole country is beautiful. But Luxembourg city is a really cool place, too."

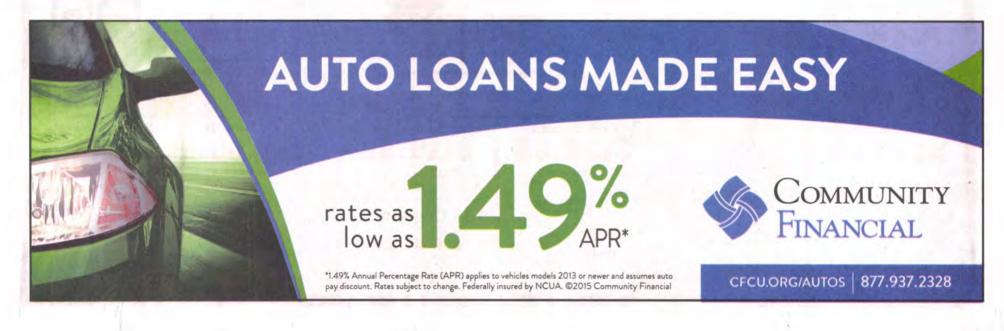

The nine-month experience overseas left nothing but a positive impression in Dezelski's eyes, not to mention the fringe benefits and getting paid

WALKING THE WALK

Fox Hills teaching pro Cairns takes 'par-fect' approach to PGA success

By Tim Smith Staff Writer

With his gray-speckled Van Dyke beard and glasses, Brian Cairns looks more like a college professor than a guy who is about to make his third trek to the PGA Championship.

He sounds like one, too. Well-measured words are spoken in a low voice, but his message is always on point.

That's just how the 51-year-old Walled Lake resident and PGA teaching pro at Fox Hills Golf and Banquet Center in Plymouth approaches the game he excels at enough to be on network television with a galaxy of big-time stars.

Not a long hitter off the tee, Cairns relies on smarts and a penchant to turn potential problems into solutions (he calls them "tide-turns"), as well as his proficiency with irons, wedges and putters.

"You really that good? You really that good to play in the PGA?" Cairns said, responding to a question about what his high school students often ask him these days. "How'd you get into that?' Most of the kids don't fathom the difference between me and those guys."

Cairns then mentioned the names of Jordan Spieth and Tiger Woods, who incidentally are not among approximately 150 golfers competing Aug. 10-16 in the PGA Championship at Whistling Straits Golf Course in Kohler, Wis.

"It's unbelievable how good those guys are,' Cairns said. "And just to kind of be able to walk the same grounds and hit the same shots and feel the same thing they're feeling for a little bit of time is kind of cool.'

At the 48th PGA Professional National Championship, held June 28 through July 1 at the historic Philadelphia Cricket Club, Cairns showed that, yeah, he's pretty good, too.

He registered a fourday tally of 283 (including 69 in both middle rounds) to finish in a tie for fifth place. With that performance, Cairns qualified a third time for the PGA Championship.

He also made the cut in 2011 and 2012, at Atlanta Athletic Club and Kiawah Island, S.C., respectively.

This time around, he figures to be better equipped than the first two times at just focusing on each shot as it comes.

"I won't look around as much, that's for sure," Cairns said during an interview Thursday at Fox Hills. "I definitely looked around, just the mass and size of the event. It's pretty amazing.

"But it's just a golf tournament with all those people. And in '12, I think I competed better because I had Jordan (Young) with me, director of instruction here. I was a lot calmer. But this year, I expect to at least compete right out of the gate and not be so awestruck."

With a knowing nod, Cairns credited Young for enabling him the chance to concurrently enjoy

THE CAIRNS FILE

Who: Brian Cairns, PGA teaching professional at Fox Hills Golf and Banquet Center in Plymouth.

What: The 51-year-old Walled Lake resident will compete Aug. 10-16 in the PGA Championship at Whistling Straits Golf Course in Kohler, Wis. He qualified by finishing in a tie for fifth June 28 through July 1 at the PGA Professional National Championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Third time: He also competed in the PGA Championship in 2011 and 2012.

Honors: Cairns was named the Michigan PGA Player of the Year in 2000, 2011, 2012 and 2013 and was Michigan PGA champion in 1996, 2000 and 2013.

A Champions Tour member in 2014, he also was a National PGA of America Top Ten Player of the Year in 2000, 2012 and 2013 and earned Maxfli National Player of the Year honors in 2000.

careers as a golf instructor and PGA pro.

Double-duty

None of what he is doing now would be possible without that goahead.

'(Young) said you should pursue that, but you still got to be active here a little bit," Cairns said. "But in a few years, I'll have to make up my mind. Kind of hang up the clubs and teach.

"I got a few more years, I think, and if I keep getting better, it's going to be a few more years after that, so Jordan will have to wait." That last sentence was punctuated at the end by a hearty chuckle.

Cairns turned serious again and spoke from the heart.

"It's really hard to let go of it when you get inside those ropes; it's a high," Cairns said. "I can see what those guys on TV feel."

Words of wisdom

Of course, the way things unfold at Whistling Straits won't deter Cairns from using the experience - good or bad - to serve up new lessons for his golf students.

"The best player I have, James Piot, he goes to (Novi Detroit Catholic Central) and lives in Canton," Cairns said. "He is amazed that somebody can kind of slap it around and play in a major.

'You can still impress kids at times with knowledge and not just mechanics. Experience gets you everything in this game."

Then, as softly as he might loft a wedge shot onto the green, Cairns bottom-lined what it really comes down to for golfers of any age, any skill level.

'It takes a lot of work, a lot of reps, a lot of reps at everything - putting, chipping, pitching," he said. "You name it, drivers, woods, irons. There's a lot that goes into it.

"But confidence and being very comfortable with where you are and who you are has a lot to do with it, too."

Piot and others his age might want to heed that message. After all, Cairns is a man in the ultimate comfort zone these days.

tsmith@hometownlife.com Twitter: @TimSmith_Sports

The way things went at the Philadelphia Cricket Club also left Cairns feeling euphoric. Yet he quickly pointed out how things could have played out differently without his trademark even-keeled mindset. On the seventh hole in tne second round, Cairns was faced with another tide-turning scenario. "It was probably the only time I missed the fairway all week," he said. "I hit it (to the) right, then I slashed another one left. The flag was back-right.

"I hit it above the flag stick about 20 feet. The ball stayed up on this hill, so I had this severe downhill putt. And my caddie said, 'Just keep this close and let's move on."

Even better was that the ball rolled into the cup. "And I make it," Cairns said. "I looked at him (the caddie) and said, 'That's the turning point.' From then on, I was good.' Cairns finished that round with a 69 and was well on his way to qualifying once again for the PGA Championship.

It was a momentum swing that went in his favor.

Feeling confident

"And that's how I teach," Cairns said. "I teach how you have to take advantage of your tide-turns. And that was a tide-turn, even my caddie (agreed). That could have been a mess."

The way he performed in Philadelphia will give him extra confidence as he sets his sights on Whistling Straits.

"It definitely gives you a good feeling, that your short game can help when you're not hitting it very well," Cairns said.

In Wisconsin, he intends to play well enough to earn a spot on the pres-tigious PGA Cup Team.

That's something that eluded me; I lost in a playoff at the Cricket Club," Cairns said. "The Cup Team is comprised of the top 10 golf professionals in the United States against the top 10 club professionals in Britain and that's in late September

"I pretty much have to make the cut to make that. It's still a goal. That would be a tall task to make the cut at a major very tall task. (With) my age and my lack of distance, I'd have to play pretty smart.

Cairns will likely need to average in the low 70s to have a shot at making it to the final rounds of the PGA Championship. It helps that he is sporting the best average per 18 of his career — 70.37 strokes.

Area golfers among top 20 at GAM event

A number of Hometownlife.com-area golfers participated in the 24th GAM Women's Championship, which concluded Wednesday in Owosso.

Linden's Julie Guckian, a golfer at Grand Valley State University, carded a two-round total of 139 on the par-71 Owosso Country Club to capture top honors. Jennifer Elsholz of Grand Rapids, the defending champion, shot a final round of 66, but still fell two shots short of Guckian with 141.

Ashley Crain (Bloomfield Hills) and Katie

GREG JOHNSON Julie Guckian, a Grand Valley State University golfer who hails from Linden, captured top honors in the 24th GAM Women's Championship.

Childers (Northville) were the top area performers, as they each finished at 151 and were part of a five-way tie for 14th place. Crain shot 78 Tuesday and followed with 73 Wednesday for her 151, while Childers went 77-74.

South Lyon's Caroline Harding also placed in the top 20 among the field of 80 players with 152 (81-71).

Canton's Kelsey McDougall tied for 41st with 162 after consecutive rounds of 81. Elizabeth Harding (South Lyon) tied for 64th at 174 (89-85) and Priscilla Harding (South Lyon) tied for 70th at 179 (93-86).

PWBA BOWLING

PWBA tour headed Aug. 27-30 to Canton

Super Bowl in Canton next month will will be the host of a stop on the inaugural tour of the new Professional Women's Bowling Association.

The Detroit Open will take place Aug. 27-30 with a field of some of the best women bowlers in the country. Qualifying rounds will take place Friday, Aug. 28, then match play Saturday, Aug. 29, culminating in Step-Ladder Finals that evening at 6:30 p.m.

A Pro-Am will also take place with sessions Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, providing an opportunity for local bowlers, women, men and youth, to bowl with the pros.

This will be a fun 9 Pin No-Tap event, giving the bowlers a chance to meet the pros, get autographs and possibly some tips for their bowling. Pro-Am participants will also receive a souvenir bowling pin and have many chances to win great prizes. All this for just $35 per adult or $30 per youth.

As a closing event on this stop on the tour, the PWBA will present a youth clinic Sunday, Aug. 30, open to all youth bowlers for just $20. Entries into this clinic are limited.

The PWBA opened its new tour with an overflow of entries in the tournament in Sacramento, Calif., last week and an enthusiastic crowd to cheer them on. The tour will continue to work its way across the country, arriving in metro Detroit at the end of August on the way to the East Coast for the last two events of this season.

"We're expecting a full turnout of both the professional bowlers as well as the spectators for this exciting event," said Mark Voight, owner of Super Bowl. "Detroit is still the bowling capital of the country and a big supporter of bowling, as both a sport and recreation.'

Entries are available to participate in the Pro-Am, which is open to women, men and youth. Tickets to watch the competition are also available with proceeds to support Strike Force Youth Bowling in this area.

Instead, he rears back and delivers a mix of tantalizing breaking pitches, slow, slower and slowest. Regardless of what happens after that, it's still a slice of heaven to Springer, even though on a particular Friday night against the Yankees in a 45-plus league matchup he got shelled.

"It used to be a fastball, change-up and curve," Springer said during a pregame interview. "Now it's more like a slow ball, change-up and a curve. I can't throw nearly as hard as I used to. I'm lucky if I get it over the plate.

"It gets over the plate on the fly and that's all I worry about. At this age, you just change speeds and try and keep them off-balance. I don't worry about radar guns anymore; that's for the younger guys."

Still loves it

But for Springer, results matter less than being out with baseball-loving friends, playing the game they've been around for years.

REMEMBERING WIDZINSKI Widzinski's legacy carries over

By Brad Emons Staff Writer

A childhood friend of the late David Widzinski since the third grade, Ed Szczypka said the Detroit Catholic Central High weight room was the perfect place to dedicate and honor his name.

"Whenever you needed to find him, just go look in the weight room and he'd be there," Szczypka said. "It's good they named it after him.

Widzinski, a promising sophomore linebacker for the Shamrocks who made a team-high 15 tackles in the 2012 MHSAA Division 1 state championship game in a 36-21 loss to Detroit Cass Tech, was only 16 when, just days later, he tragically died in his sleep due to natural causes Dec. 3, 2012.

Hundreds, including his parents Paul and Barb, along with brother Stephen and sister Emily, were joined by other family members, friends and classmates who recently just inside the weight room, where a brief dedication ceremony was held in Widzinski's honor.

A special plaque was unveiled and the entrance to the weight room bears his name as well.

Widzinski, who grew up in Northville, would have been a graduating senior in 2015. Dan Collins of CC's alumni association made the opening remarks.

"We are here to remember David, to make sure his family knows that we remember him and we'll remember him forever, to make sure that they know that he will continue to motivate and inspire the men of Catholic Central forever," Collins said. "This is more than just a name outside a door that we've done to this room. It bears David's name, but he inspired and continues to inspire us. There are words around this room that David would be proud of. I know he continues to be proud of all of you.

One long inscription on the left wall quotes the New Testament Bible passage from Phillippians 4:13: "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."

There will also be a golf outing in Widzinski's honor Sunday, Sept. 6, at Tangle-wood Golf Course, 53503 W. 10 Mile Road, South Lyon.

handsomely as well.

"I loved every second of it," he said. "Luxembourg is a pretty wealthy country and I really didn't have much of a transition issue because there's a lot of English spoken there. All my practices were in English. All my teammates spoke English, so as far as that goes, that was relatively easy.

"The people there were super-friendly and they're used to Americans coming over and playing there every year, so they're really welcoming and will help you out with whatever you need. If there was a little problem with my apartment and my car, it was easily handled and they were willing to help me out.

New lifestyle

"The two Americans on the team were the only two professionals," Dezelski said. "And then everybody else either worked or went to school. That was kind of like their high school and college basketball. They'd come all day from working or at school and come to basketball. I thought it was really a test of my professionalism, because we really wouldn't work on defense or discipline or anything like that. You just had to

Dezelski

It was interesting. It was a lot less intense than college basketballwise, that's for sure. It was an adjustment from that aspect." And the import players find themselves more under the microscope.

"The year before I got there, (Residence Walferdange) were in the first division and they had six different Americans in one year. Dezelski said. "They shuffled them out because, as a professional, a lot is expected of you. And if you don't get along with the team, they can just send you home at any time. There's a little pressure from that standpoint.

and also hanging out with the guys," he said. "We've had this team (Mudville) since 2011 and I've played with these guys since 2008.'

Asked about how long he hoped to continue playing in the adult rec baseball circuit, Springer looked up.

"Until they won't put a number on my back," he said. "Until no one wants to have me on a team.'

That might take a few years, because Springer isn't about to stop doing what he loves

Springer, who played high school and college baseball near Pittsburgh, still enjoys getting into the batter's box and swinging the lumber. Unlike adult softball leagues. DMSBL players swing wood bats.

In his first at-bat against the Yankees, he laced a line drive to left-center to score a run. A half-hour before game time, he talked about the joy of hitting.

"When you can't feel the bat hit the ball and it goes out there, that's the best feeling in the world," Springer said.

The real deal

Before the contest began, Springer loosened his left arm by throwing a "heavy ball." Watching the pitcher get warmed up was another teammate, 47-year-old Marc Baron of Livonia.

Baron, who played high school baseball at Redford Bishop Borgess, echoed Springer and others about what drives them to still put on the spikes.

"Love to be able to play baseball, that's why I come out as much as I can," Baron said. "I like it a lot better than softball, it's still fastball-curveball; it's real baseball."

Springer's check mark also goes into the baseball column.

"I played softball for a few years after I moved here, but it just wasn't the same," Springer said. "The fact that, being a pitcher, that's the big difference, pitching (in) softball and baseball.

After pre-game tuneups, Bill Springer wraps his arm to keep it warm.

ABOUT THE SERIES

What: "Rec-king It' is a series about adult recreation that will be published as space permits in the Observer as well as hometownlife.com

Who: Looking for adults (age 21 or older), who have a potential story to tell. They can detail their leagues, activities or other recreational pursuits. Why: High school and college athletes get heavy coverage and that is understood. It would be nice to spotlight older people and what they do to remain healthy and active.

Contact: Email sports editor Tim Smith at tsmith@hometownlife.com with a thumbnail overview about the athlete and rec activity or sport. Include a phone number for any follow-up contact.

"Stealing 90-feet bases rather than 60-feet bases, outfield dimensions, you have three (outfielders) rather than four. It's just a much different feel."

Of course, middle-aged men have to deal with middle-age issues. For Baron, it was tearing his Achilles' tendon last summer. He now is getting back into gear following surgery and physical therapy.

Injuries for any of the players could happen on any pitch, any swing, any attempt to to go first-to-third on the bases.

Having fun

But the possibility of that happening doesn't dim their enthusiasm one bit. Playful banter common in their boyhood years still resonates around the dusty diamond.

"Go get him kid," first baseman Baron yelled to Springer during the Yankees game.

When a Springer pitch sailed well out of the strike zone, Baron barked a Bob Uecker impersonation: "Just a bit outside.

One base runner later, Baron implored his teammates to go for a double play: "Twist it boys, twist it.

Even though the Yankees wound up routing Mudville, it was still a great night for Springer and his teammates, just because they were playing baseball.

"It's nice to get out on a summer night and play a game that you played for a while and compete," said Springer, who is a partner at Conrad Insurance Agency in Canton.

Baseball with his buddies also provides exercise, as well as a way to let off steam from day-to-day issues.

For their friend

Still, real life is hard to shut out for guys in their 40s, 50s and 60s. Cancer struck Mudville teammate Mike Gordon of Pleasant Ridge, who just had surgery.

During good games or bad, Mudville players are thinking about Gordon as he begins his long road ahead.

And soon, a reminder of Gordon will be there with them at every game. Batting helmets will sport decals with Gordon's uniform No. 7.

"We have already dedicated the season to him," Springer said.

Somehow that mission will enable Mudville players to maintain perspective as they ward off errors, injuries and slumps

After all, life - and baseball - changes fast, especially for guys who just don't move all that quickly these days.

During his down time, Dezelski stayed occupied outside of basketball, trying to soak up as much of Europe as possible while keeping in contact with his family.

"Luxembourg is awesome because it's pretty much the center of Europe, so I could drive 30 minutes to Germany, France or Belgium, so I was able to do a decent amount of traveling and see different cities," he said. "That was one thing I really enjoyed doing, too. I'd go to Amsterdam and a couple of the other bigger cities in Germany just to see. Every city has beautiful, old architecture and it's pretty cool stuff to see.

"There was a lot of Skype and phone calls home. There was a lot of Netflix watching. I was a finance major, so I was able to follow the markets. The time difference messed me up a little bit because it was six hours ahead, but I tried to keep my brain activated. I was reading books and following the markets and stuff, too. Not just watching Netflix all day, just a couple of hours

As a senior at Hillsdale, Dezelski was an NCAA Division II third team All-American. He averaged 22.9 points and 9.6 rebounds per game while shooting 57 percent from the field

During his four-year career with the Chargers, he ranked ninth in career rebounds (713) and fifth all-time in singleseason total points (617).

Star teammate

With Residence Walferdange, Dezelski shared the spotlight with the Luxembourg-Total League's leading scorer Everage Richardson, a 6-3 guard from Coastal Carolina who averaged nearly 29 points per game.

"(Richardson) is amazing." Dezelski said. "He was really great to play with. He shot 50 percent from (beyond the arc) and hit 10 threes a game.'

The basketball culture in Luxembourg, however, was the biggest shock, something that he had to get acclimated

New destination

While Richardson plans to return for his second season with Residence Walferdange, Dezelski will be headed elsewhere in 2015-16. He hopes to learn within the next couple of weeks.

"I really wanted to go back, but it just didn't work out,' Dezelski said. "My negotiations for my second year kind of fell through, so now I'm waiting for my agent to get me something else. I'll be in the same area probably, but I don't know exactly where. The last I heard from my agent was either Germany or the Netherlands, somewhere around there. Hopefully, I have another job. I'm planning on it. We'll see how long I can keep it going."

After playing 43 games, which included 10 during the preseason, Dezelski made sure he got plenty of rest after returning home before resuming his summer workouts at Lifetime Fitness in Novi.

"The body is holding up, but when you come back, you have to take a little time off because pretty much it's nine months of straight basketball over there, every day," he said.

Dezelski, a 2009 CC grad, played his final game in Luxembourg on May 2 and flew home immediately the following day.

"Obviously, my family and my girlfriend I miss the most, but food-wise ... coney islands for sure," Dezelski said. "I think I might have gone straight to a coney island. The food over there is good, but not quite the same. Been getting in my Buffalo Wild Wings fix and stuff like that."

POM CAMP'S A KICK!

Canton, Plymouth programs share Grand Champs honors at Davenport University-hosted camp

By Tim Smith Staff Writer

Literally getting a leg up on the competition during the recent Mid American Pom Camp at Davenport University were the Canton and Plymouth pom squads.

The Chiefettes and Wildcats displaying uncanny athleticism and synchronicity, along with artistic flair - each were named Grand Champs both in the varsity and junior varsity competitions.

It marked the first time two Plymouth-Canton Educational Park pom programs shared top honors at the prestigious event, held July 9-12.

To earn Grand Champs status, a team must finish first in all three categories - speed learning, kick line and original routine (which teams began perfecting prior to going to Davenport).

With the success, both teams will send large con-tingents to the Mid American Pompon All-Star team and travel to Hawaii in December to perform in the Pearl Harbor Memorial Parade. "The girls worked very hard, grew closer as a team and had a great time," Canton pom coach Jenny Kesler said. This was a great start to our year and it will motivate the team to continue to reach our goals and vision for the remainder of the season."

Taryn Holowicki, director of the Plymouth pom program, said earning Grand Champs honors "is not an easy task and takes a lot of hard work and focus, both ahead of time and especially during the four days of camp

'Maintaining a positive atmosphere as a team both in and outside of practice is what really makes a difference in the strength of a team," Holowicki added. "Our teams (varsity and JV) think of themselves like family first and as coaches we can really see that reflected in the way they perform when they get on the floor."

Canton and Plymouth also scored big in other categories, such as the senior kick competition. Abby Crippes and Micala Tafelski of the varsity Chiefettes finished first in the kick event, with the Wildcats taking second.

Awards were given out daily per category, with overall trophies presented at the camp's conclusion.

The Canton varsity team also won the overall Peppy Pom award for "being the most spirited and cheering other teams on at camp," said Kes-ler, assisted by Gabby Cayao. Canton's JV, coached by

Brandee Amick and Nikki Battaglia, captured Peppy Pom, Knock Your Socks Off and Showmanship awards. For Plymouth's varsity

(coached by Lauren Fisher and Christie Wilde), senior Ryan

Fisher won the Smile, Sparkle, Shine Award. Meanwhile, the JV Wildcats (coached by Ho-lowicki and Jillian Covault) came away with overall Peppy

Pom and Team Unity awards. Programs from all over the state participated, including Livonia Franklin.

'GO BLUE' FOR P-CEP BAND AT KELLOGG PARK IN PLYMOUTH

By Sharon Dargay Staff Writer

Stop by Kellogg Park in Plymouth this Thursday, close your eyes, listen and you'll swear you're at Michigan Stadium on a Saturday afternoon in Ann Arbor. You'll hear a marching band that will have you cheering, "Let's Go Blue!" and "Hail to the Victors." The beat of a drum line will get you to your feet. And that familiar-sounding voice? That will be Carl Grapentine, public address announcer for the Michigan Marching Band and Wolverines' football program, calling the action. "The real rock star is Carl Grapentine. He has a marvelous bass voice that energizes everyone,' said John Stewart, the Plymouth Township resident and attorney who suggested pairing Grapentine with the Plymouth-Canton Educational Park (P-CEP) Marching Band, the Plymouth Fife & Drum Corps and Plymouth Community Band in a free concert, 7 p.m. July 30 at the park in downtown Plymouth. "Let's Go Blue" aims to raise awareness of the P-CEP band, garner financial support for its appearance next year in the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, Calif., and to entertain the 1,500-2,000 visitors Stewart hopes will be drawn to the park to hear the legendary announcer and local bands.

"People aren't thinking of Jan. 1 yet ... it will be five months and those kids will be marching 5.5 miles. Those are Michigan children that you and I will be watching on New Year's Day morning. The P-CEP Marching Band, with more than 200 members, is the first Michigan band in more than 12 years to march in the parade. Estimated cost for the trip is approximately $500,000. "The band parents will tactfully hand out offering envelopes. It's a free concerts but if you want to donate to the band, bring your checkbook and put a little in an envelope." Stewart said the marching band will perform on stage in concert formation. In addition to the three bands, which will play the pregame music to U-M football games, and Grapentine's announcing, the concert will include an appearance by Matt Cloutier, University of Michigan Marching Band drum major and the P-CEP Marching Band drum line.

"They will get everyone's attention," Stewart said, referring

GUEST COLUMN

On the job: Appliance technician's role gets racy, unpredictable

S ome 25 years ago, I began writing this column and I can still remember the thrill of it all. Not having any education in the field of journalism, you can't even imagine the guidance I received from editors with this paper. I must have been listening because I'm still here and love to hear from so many of you.

But I'm going to switch the format a bit, to give you honest-togoodness true stories that happened in my lifetime as an appliance technician. I expect you will let me know whether they're educational, funny or too serious in nature. I will start with the

I could hear about five or six bolt locks being opened and the door opened to reveal a very beautiful young lady inviting me in. We sat at the kitchen table as she gave me details on the refrigerator and how it changed colors from white to almond. She had purchased the product from a longtime Amana

SUDDEN BACK PAIN

For a doctor, any patient over age 70 with sudden back pain represents an emergency. Unless the patient has experienced a sudden fall, the two most important causes are 1) an insufficiency fracture or 2) a cancer, most likely one that has metastasized from its original location.

Patients who have a slipped disk and are feeling the first pangs of sciatica are readily separated as sciatic pain radiates down a leg. The sudden pain I am discussing is a sharp unrelenting pain that remains in the back or moves about in a small area, likely one or two vertebrae up or down, between the shoulder blades, or next to the spine initially feeling the pain.

If the pain came on with a trivial movement such as bending over to pick up a newspaper, or bending forward slightly to put a key into a door lock, then the most likely cause is an insufficiency fracture sometimes called a mini-fracture. Another feature of this type of vertebral fracture is that the pain radiates not down the leg but back to front. The fracture may be so small an x-ray of the back will not reveal it.

A fracture associated with a cancer usually does not come on so suddenly. The person previously felt a discomfort that then suddenly intensified. Another feature is that the back pain lessens when going to bed but returns in the middle of night sufficiently severe to awaken the person. Arising from bed and walking about clears the pain to allow the person to go back to sleep. In this case, x-ray of the back may show an area of density in the back that indicates the presence of the tumor.

A physician's approach to sudden back pain illustrates how important history is to diagnosis.

Food allergies can cause nutrition gaps

he first mission in cre-ating safe meals for children with food allergies is avoiding the offending ingredient. But there can be a downside to diets that miss out on the nutritional value found in foods kicked off the menu, according to Carolyn O'Neil, a registered dietitian and nutrition adviser to Best Food Facts.

A study in The Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics cautions that such diets can induce vitamin and mineral deficiencies, anemia and other symptoms affecting a child's growth and nutritional status.

"Food allergies and intoler-ances are on the rise," said registered dietitian Vandana Sheth, representative for the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics. "But it's important that we identify that kids are actually allergic (through proper testing) before we avoid those foods unnecessarily.'

Common food allergies

The eight foods that account for more than 90 percent of childhood cases of food allergies include milk, eggs, soy, peanuts, tree nuts (such as walnuts, almonds, pecans), wheat, fish and shellfish. Food intolerances such as lactose and gluten add even more children to the at-risk list for nutrient deficiencies.

"A parent should always offer a variety of different foods within a food group," said registered dietitian Cheryl Orlansky, president of the Greater Atlanta Dietetic Association. Gluten-free grains include rice, corn and quinoa. If a child is allergic to peanut butter, substitute sunflower seed butter, advised Sheth.

"If you skip dairy you skip its nine essential nutrients,' said registered dietitian and author of The Greek Yogurt

Kitchen Toby Amidor. "Studies show people with lactose intolerance may tolerate up to a cup of fluid milk, which has 12 grams of lactose. Cheeses, Greek yogurt and cottage cheese are much lower in lactose."

Mind the gap

The food allergy study in JAND measured the benefit of dietary counseling in preventing and correcting nutrient deficiencies in children with food allergies. Results from the multi-center study in Italy showed that advice on what foods to eat to help fill in the gaps helped kids get enough calories, protein and other needed nutrients.

"I think it's fascinating," said Sheth. "They showed that dietary counseling really helped and growth patterns were improved." Sheth added, "A lot of kids outgrow allergies to eggs and milk by age 16. But other allergies such as nuts may be lifelong." Her knowledge comes firsthand, as her own son was diagnosed with over 20 food allergies as a child.

"Now he's a healthy JV football player. He's down to four or five allergies, including all nuts. I always feed the team so I can keep an eye on what he's eating."

When parents are equipped with the proper knowledge of common food allergies, they can help their kids enjoy a healthier childhood. To learn more about food allergies, visit www.bestfoodfacts.org. Courtesy of Family Features
