Westland time capsule buried

Event marks city's 50th anniversary of founding

Westland's 50th anniversary celebration ended with a new time capsule being sealed underground to await another 50 years in the city.

Inside the time capsule, a new stainless steel self-sealing model that doesn't require a concrete vault, were a number of electronic items in use today and drawings from local fourth-grade students showing their ideas of what the city will look like in 2066. There was also a copy of a commemorative issue of the Wayne-Westland Observer. Westland Historical Commission chairman Jeff Koslowski organized the items for the time capsule.

"There were donations from residents. I wrote a letter to the mayor in 2066. So did several other officials," Westland Mayor William Wild said. "We mailed them to city hall and didn't open them, so they will have a 2017 postmark."

During the past year, Westland had a number of events to mark the 50th anniversary of voters approving the incorporation of the city from Nankin Township. The year of festivities kicked off on the actual anniversary of the incorporation with a special council meeting, historical displays and a panel featuring Wild and past mayors.

Like its predecessor, the time capsule is buried on city hall grounds. In this case, the city's second city hall is located on Warren Road, east of Central City Parkway.

"(Department of Public Works) did a great job preparing the site. The time capsule is buried by the flag poles at city hall. There will be a tablet marking the spot," Wild said, adding there was water in the initial burial hole which DPS addressed with gravel and

INMATE'S DAD ADVOCATES FOR SUCCESSFUL OUTCOMES

When Alex Letkemann was sentenced to 30 years in prison in 2008 for his role in the death of a Westland man, his father Pete could have done what many family members do in that situation.

He could have melted into the background, gotten lost and struggled with a system that, while trying to improve, still presents a degree of challenge as families try to navigate it.

Instead of giving into the system and watching other families give up, as well, Letkemann, a Westland resident, decided to do something productive.

He's part of a group of people in several organizations trying to change the system, making it easier for families to navigate the morass of red tape and other problems they face in dealing with issues such as visitation.

"People don't like to talk about it," said Letkemann, an engineering manager at Franklin Fastener in Redford. "When a loved one gets in trouble, they tend to close in on themselves. As I learned the system, people would come to me with questions. As I learned, I helped other people out."

It's a system he's been trying to help improve since Alex pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the highly publicized killing in a Canton garage of 26-year-old Daniel Sorensen of Westland. Alex took the plea in exchange for testimony that helped convict Jean Pierre Orlewicz of first-degree murder. Orlewicz, a 17-year-old Plymouth Township resident at the time of the murder, is serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole.

The publicity that trial received — Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy dubbed it a "thrill kill" — eventually helped bring attention to the system, Pete Letkemann said.

"When everything happened with Alex, it sort of blew up ... everyone heard about it," Letkemann said. "It helped us put a human face on it."

Making things better

Alex's experiences in the system have helped galvanize Pete's determination to improve it. Simple things like medical release forms that don't follow transferred inmates from facility to facility, visitation that can be delayed or rescheduled for a variety of reasons not explained to families or incomplete family information packets are all things that make supporting an incarcerated loved one difficult on families.

After a few years, Letkemann decided getting involved with change was infinitely more satisfying than standing on the sideline.

A support group called Citizens for Prison Reform, a grass-roots, family-led initiative designed to engage, educate and empower families, was working with the Michigan Department of Corrections to form a Family Participation Program, designed to reach out to those dealing with

National 'Mail Call' exhibit at Yankee Air Museum

A name is shouted out, and a parcel is handed through the crowd to its eager recipient — mail call is a moment when the front line and home front connect. Letters, news and packages from home unite families, boost morale and in wartime, elevate the ordinary to the extraordinary.

The traveling version of the National Postal Museum's permanent exhibition, "Mail Call" explores the history of America's military postal system, and examines how even in today's era of instant communication, troops overseas continue to treasure mail delivered from home. Organized and circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES), the exhibition tells the fascinating story of military mail and communication — from the American Revolution to current wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The exhibition will debut May 6, at Yankee Air Museum in Belleville, and remain on display through Aug. 6, before continuing on its nationwide tour.

"We are very pleased to bring 'Mail Call' to southeastern Michigan," said Kevin Walsh, executive director of the Yankee Air Museum. "This is the natural encore to our recent project that assembled and mailed nearly 100 care packages to our troops in the Middle East. Yankee Air Museum proudly joins the past with the present as we look to the future."

With the time capsule burial coming a day before Earth Day, a ceremony was held before the time capsule program. A program through Westland's Mission: Green program, Wild announced that the city will offer residents a chance to replace trees lost several years ago to the emerald ash borer.

Mission: Green has $165,000 from the city's tree fund — money paid by developers who are removing trees from their property — to help subsidize the tree replacements. The cost would be $95 to residents, including a tree, professional planting and a one-year warranty. The tree valued at $280, with residents having a choice between a red sunset maple, a Bradford pear or an autumn blaze maple.

"We're asking for the people who lost a tree to the emerald ash borer.

We do have a record of the trees the city took out. Some people took out the trees themselves," Wild said. "Once we satisfy all who lost a tree, we may be able to open it up. It will be 1,000 trees due to the funding."

The trees would have to be planted in the city right-of-way between the street and sidewalk, which is where the removed trees had been located.

ry, the military and postal service have combined forces to deliver mail under challenging—often extreme—circumstances. Mail call forges a vital link with home, whether it takes place at headquarters or in hostile territory, on a submarine or in the desert. On the battlefield and at home, mail has long sustained the vital connections between military service members and their family and friends. With compelling documents, photographs, illustrations and audio stations, "Mail Call" celebrates the importance of this correspondence. Visitors can discover how military mail communication has changed throughout history, learn about the armed forces postal system and experience military mail through interesting objects and correspondence both written and recorded on audiotape. The exhibit offers an appreciation of the importance of military mail and the hard work that has gone into connecting service men and women to their government, community and loved ones at home.

"Mail Call" features a number of items that bring to life the story of military mail. One such highlight is a kit with supplies for "Victory Mail," a microfilm process developed in World War II to dramatically shrink the volume and weight of personal letters. Beginning in 1942, V-Mail used standardized stationery and microfilm processing to produce lighter, smaller cargo—150,000 microfilmed letters could fit in one mailbox. Visitors will also gain access to dramatic firsthand records and heartfelt sentiments through excerpts from letters exchanged between writers on the front line and the home front. The exhibit also explores how the military postal system works today and describes the new ways the men and women of the armed forces are communicating with home.

SITES has been sharing the wealth of Smithsonian collections and research programs with millions of people outside Washington, D.C., for 65 years. SITES connects Americans to their shared cultural heritage through a wide range of exhibitions about art, science and history, which are shown wherever people live, work and play. Exhibition descriptions and tour schedules are available at www.sites.si.edu.

The National Postal Museum is devoted to presenting the colorful and engaging history of the nation's mail service and showcasing one of the largest and most comprehensive collections of stamps and philatelic material in the world. For more information, go to www.postal.museum.si.edu.

Yankee Air Museum is located at 47884 D Street, Belleville, at Willow Run Airport. The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Jury begins deliberations in Zarras shooting trial

David Veselenak
hometownlife.com

A jury of six men and six women will now decide the fate of 19-year-old Livonia resident Ann Zarras after testimony wrapped up in her criminal case Monday.

Zarras

The jury was scheduled to begin deliberations Tuesday (April 25) on the three criminal counts faced by Zarras. Those include assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder, assault with a dangerous weapon and felony firearm. The charges stem from a shooting that took place in her parents' home June 30 in the 15000 block of Richfield.

Closing arguments took place Monday afternoon in the week-long trial, with Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Mary Rubio depicting Zarras as someone who knew what was happening when being questioned by police about what had occurred that morning, which police say involved an argument between the two that eventually led to a gun being introduced in the conflict. Robertson ended up getting shot in the head and continues to receive treatment at a rehab facility in Westland, according to testimony from his mother.

Rubio said it was clear Zarras understood what police were asking her when she was taken to the police station to give a statement after the incident, especially as her demeanor shifted once officers informed Zarras they would give her a form with her Miranda rights. She said the sudden swing from the crying and sobbing to a more put-together attitude once her rights were given to her is just one indication.

"This is straight up Jekyll and Hyde," Rubio said.

Zarras's attorney, Henry Scharg, said the actions by the Livonia Police Department showed its intent to try to get a confession from her the morning of the shooting. He said those signs included a hurried rush to get her down to the Livonia police station to provide a statement and not contacting her parents, who lived in the home but were up north at the time, until several hours had passed.

"They wanted to take her down and try to break her," he said.

If convicted, Zarras faces up to 10 years in prison under the assault to do great bodily harm charge.

LIVONIA POLICE BRIEFS

Man charged in counterfeit bill case

Livonia police say a 60-year-old Detroit man used counterfeit currency earlier this month at Menards, 12701 Middlebelt.

Police say Bobby Lee Mackie was seen April 17 trying to use counterfeit $50 bills to purchase a tool set. He was identified by an employee, who recognized him as someone who had possibly used counterfeit currency at the store previously. He was walking out of the store when he was stopped. Police later arrested him.

He was charged with five counts, including one count of possession of five or more counterfeit pieces of currency and four counts of uttering and publishing counterfeit bills or notes. If convicted, he faces up to life in prison. He was locked up in the Wayne County Jail on a $100,000 cash or surety bond. He's due back in court Thursday morning for a preliminary examination.

Procam retail fraud suspect arrested

Police say a woman has been charged with retail fraud after they say she stole a camera body April 6 from Procam, 34224 Plymouth.

Police say Kelle Hunt, 48, of Westland was charged after being identified as the suspect in the theft from the store. Police say she and another individual entered the store and she selected a Canon Rebel camera body from the shelf. Police say she took the box to another part of the store and removed the camera. An employee found the box later and found it was empty. She was later charged with third-degree retail fraud and given a $4,000/10-percent bond. She's due back in court Thursday morning.

Baby formula theft

An employee at Costco, 20000 Haggerty, came to the police station April 20 to report a theft of baby formula.

The suspects, who were also suspects in a similar theft at the Costco on Middlebelt, were seen entering the store. One suspect allegedly purchased a pack of gum and placed it in her purse to avoid have the receipt checked. The other suspect also walked into the store and selected several cases of baby formula. The suspect was allegedly then seen producing a fake receipt to show the greeter.

Stereo taken from vehicle

Police were called April 19 to Sears, 11850 Sears Drive, on the report of a stereo that had been taken out of a vehicle.

The victim said he had parked the car on the south side of the business. Several hours later, he came back and found the stereo was missing. He noticed pry marks on the side of the door. Police observed fingerprints on the glass and called to have the vehicle processed for evidence.

Al Bologna will hang up the clippers this month after 48 years in the dog grooming business. At left, Karen Miles washes a dog. At right is shop manager Patty Wenner.

Groomer to turn in clippers after 48 years

Al Bologna's clients have come in all shapes, sizes, personality and temperament over the past 48 years.

Happy customers practically "push in the door" of his Garden City salon, eager for their shampoo and cut. The nervous ones cautiously walk in "shaking like crazy," but settle down as the pampering begins. And the aggressive complainers not only bark, but sometimes bite.

"It comes with the job. We've all been in that situation. Luckily it's nothing serious," said Bologna, who has worked at Mister B's Pet Salon for 48 years, 37 as its owner.

Most of his furry customers are happy-go-lucky, playful and often smiling.

"There have been so many really nice dogs," he said. "Then, when they passed, you feel like you lost your own. You feel just as bad because we've worked on those dogs all those years. It's been one heck of a business."

Retirement looms

Bologna will hang up his clippers for good Saturday, April 29, passing the torch to his employee, Michelle Becker, who will take over the dog-grooming business. Although he's retiring, Bologna said he'll be at the salon "in spirit" every day and won't forget his furry customers and their owners.

"It has been a pleasure working in this community so many years," he said. "I've gotten to know so many people. I'm going to miss everybody. It has been great."

Bologna began working at Mister B's as a "go-fer" fetching coffee and running errands, during the summer of his junior year at Bentley High School in Livonia. His uncle Pete Bologna opened the business in 1969 after attending dog grooming school.

"That summer, the building was being finished and we got it set up," Bologna said. "All of my family had dogs. He taught me with my dog and the family's dog. He taught me the fundamentals of grooming and one thing led to another."

You're opening what?

His uncle set up shop in an era when dog owners took their pets to breeders or kennels for grooming. Dog salons were just starting to gain a following. They flourished as owners began to regard their pets as family members.

"It was such a different type of business at the time. He got a lot of ridicule when he put up the building," Bologna said. "You never went to a salon, to a business. You went to where you bought the dog."

Bologna continued to work at his uncle's salon through high school and while studying music and then business at Schoolcraft College. He was 28 when his uncle, who was eager to retire in northern Michigan, offered him the business.

"By then, I had a good 10 years under my belt," he said. "I'm thinking, 'Yeah, I've enjoyed all of it, the customers and the grooming.'"

Like a family

He took over ownership in 1980 and bought the building in 1992. Three of his employees have been with him since the 1970s. A couple of them joined his staff in the 1980s. They form a "family" of staff members that work well together and enjoy what they do.

"These dogs go out looking great," he said. "We're very lucky that a lot of people recommend us. I can send fliers and coupons out, but a person walking down the street with a dog that just got groomed is the best advertisement I can get."

Bologna said Becker will maintain Mister B's high standards and has told customers they won't notice a difference when she takes the reins May 1.

Meanwhile he looks forward to spending time with family and friends. He moved into his childhood home four years ago to care for his father, who recently was moved to a facility for physical rehab. He'll have more time to see his father, his son and two grandchildren.

George's Senate celebrates 80 years

When walking into George's Senate Restaurant on Haggerty Road, a customer is likely guaranteed three things: fresh food, quickly served dishes and a smile from owner George Dimopoulos.

Dimopoulos is still at work every day, often before 4 a.m., to ensure potatoes, dressings, soups and rice pudding are freshly prepared. The work ethic that helped him and his family build a chain of successful family restaurants continues to drive him at an age when most of his peers are retired.

"The people keep me happy," he said. "They keep me going. I love talking to them every day."

His uncle, George Hinaris, started the family business in 1937 by opening a Detroit restaurant on Michigan Avenue called Senate Coney Island, named for its close proximity to the Senate Theater.

In 1969, Dimopoulos immigrated to Detroit from his native Greece and worked in the original Senate Coney Island. He said he quickly learned the importance of working long hours, preparing fresh ingredients and providing a comfortable dining atmosphere.

Senate Coney Island added a second location on Ecorse Road in Taylor in 1972. Dimopoulos brought the chain to Plymouth Road in Livonia in 1985, which is primarily run today by his sons, Niko and Steven.

After the original Detroit restaurant caught fire in 1990 and did not re-open, the family opened a Dearborn location on Greenfield Road in 1994. Then Dimopoulos opened the Haggerty Road location on the Northville-Livonia border in 2005.

While he spends most of his time at the Haggerty Road location, Dimopoulos and his wife Kathy keep a close eye on the other restaurants.

"She goes in all the time to taste the soups all day, to make sure everything is OK and tasting right," he said.

The effort results in a loyal base of customers, such as Lita Hoyer, who started visiting the Taylor location in the 1970s and recently dined at the Haggerty location.

"We love the food, but we love George more," said Hoyer, a West Bloomfield resident. "We have family who live in Chicago and, every time they come to visit, they want to eat at Senate."

The Senate restaurants have been frequented by famed sports figures Gordie Howe, Ernie Harwell, Tomas Holmstrom and Scotty Bowman. Pictures of Dimopoulos with each are Seeking a new Spokester

Michigan First Credit Union has launched its statewide search for its next Young & Free Michigan Spokester, a minimum of a year-long paid role designated to one creative and energetic young adult who will serve as the spokesperson for the credit union's education-focused program aimed at 17- to 25-year-olds.

The winner will become the sixth Young & Free Michigan Spokester, Michigan First President/CEO Michael Poulos said.

As the financial ambassador of the state's millennial generation, the winner will receive a $30,000 salary with the potential for a $5,000 bonus and an extension as the Spokester based upon performance.

Throughout the duration of his/her term, the winner will also be provided with an Apple MacBook Pro, an HD video camera and a smart phone, as well as have access to the Young & Free Michigan car for the year with paid gas and insurance. The selected Spokester will be responsible for creatively promoting smart financial decisions among his/her peers through the management of Young & Free social media channels, daily blog posts, weekly videos and participation in community events.

"At Michigan First, we are keenly aware of how important it is for millennials to not only be knowledgeable about their finances, but also be able to manage them," Poulos said. In an increasingly digital world, the Spokester position provides valuable hands-on experiences and support from a team of industry professionals, as well as a variety of networking opportunities, serving as a great resume builder and platform to create lasting relationships throughout Michigan. Interested applicants can go to YoungFreeMichigan.com to learn more and view previous Spokesters' efforts that have paved the way for successful, long-term careers.

To apply, individuals must be ages 18-25, willing and able to work full time and reside in Michigan from June 2017 to May 2018. Applicants should bring their creativity, personality and passion for helping young adults and the community at-large to a three-minute video showcasing why he/she is the ideal spokesperson.

A public vote May 16-23 will help determine four of the finalists, while the Michigan First team will select another three finalists. Announced May 25, all finalists must be able to attend the "Getting to Know Each Other" event June 7 at Michigan First, where each individual will participate in an on-site interview with a series of activities that the next Spokester will be responsible for carrying out during his/her term. The winner will be announced to the public in mid-June.

Public libraries are key to knowledge

In large parts of Mexico, the idea of a library is quite foreign.

The children may be shown the word, "libreria" in school but often the library they know will be composed of just the few books that the teacher has been able to collect. If they are fortunate their parents may have been able to secure some books for them at home.

The precarious place that the middle class occupies in the United States cannot be compared to what might be referred to as the middle class in Mexico. In some larger cities the multi-class system may putter along, but by and large throughout Mexico there is a two class system, the gots and the not-gots. Some folks call them the rich and the poor, but economic discussions based on those two words cannot be applied by Americans to Mexicans.

Alfred Brock

Personally, I cannot imagine life without a public library. I actually find it strange if I go to a place of business, no matter what it is, and find that they don't have at least some small collection of books. When I visit my friends' homes I am interested in what books they might have, but, I must be careful about inquiry because even here in the United States, the information capital of the world, not every house has the resources to supply books to their children.

At least they can go to the public library.

The reality in Mexico is that they cannot. They simply cannot because there isn't one. The idea of having one is absent in many communities, as well. It is as far as out reach as building an opera house or a commercial bank — which were targets of both Mexicans and Americans in the late 19th and early 20th centuries for any community wishing to find respect in the then "modern" world.

In the United States, we were blessed when Mr. Andrew Carnegie came from Scotland and put the steel industry in the fast lane. Our nation was transformed and

Mr. Carnegie became one of the wealthiest men in the world. Then, it seems, he came to realize that the few simple advantages he had been provided while growing up in Scotland did not exist in the United States. He perceived, as few do, what it was that led to his success and he set out to share the opportunities he enjoyed with others.

He built libraries. He built them all over the place in the United States. He left us a legacy of information and knowledge that had been intended by the founders of our nation. He had provided the nation with an operational form of the Jeffersonian ideal of public education.

Our laws were changed and amended and in Michigan the state actually mandates that local governments set up, support and operate a library for public use. It has become so common place and ingrained in our society that it goes without question that we will have a library.

I want you to imagine then a situation where the library becomes a given. It belongs to everyone so everyone is supposed to get one. You've got to have one. The government mandates it. It doesn't have to be a good one. It's just got to be there. You don't even have to visit it. Just sort of know where it is. Maybe you don't have a library card. That's OK, right? You pay taxes, if you want one you can go get one, right?

Well, what if you go to the beautiful library building and were to find the roof leaking, heating and cooling system not operating properly and posing a danger to the few books that are left? That's right — the few books that are left.

Let's say you visit your local library and rather than seeking out the one single book you might need from many, you start to count the empty shelves. Row after row after row.

In the United States, it seems, that the idea of a library is becoming quite foreign to us.

What do you want your library to be?

Wayne resident Alfred Brock is secretary of the Wayne Public Library.

Restore trust with transparency

There are numerous lists one can read about on the Internet, and in the past few years, Michigan has not fared well in many of the rankings. It seems in most categories, education, environment, roads, etc. we tend to rank near the bottom. A big part of the problem is our inability as citizens to know exactly what is going on (or not going on) behind closed doors in our state Legislature and governor's office. Our state ranks 50th, dead last, in a national study of state ethics and transparency laws, partly due to its weak public records law and an absence of laws requiring personal financial disclosures by lawmakers and top state officials.

We have a chance to move out of last place and improve transparency in our state government, but our state Senate needs to hear from us. Incredibly, the state House passed unanimously — that's 100 percent bipartisan support, which is unheard of in recent times — the Freedom of Information Act/Legislative Open Records Act. This would require the Legislature and governor be subjected to the same FOIA requirements as other state agencies.

SB 246 and SB 0247 have bipartisan support in the Senate, but Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (30th District) has been obstructing these bills and doesn't appear willing to budge. We need to put pressure on him and our own state senators to get this package of bills passed as soon as possible. I have called my senator, Mike Kowall, who is on the committee that will take up these bills. I encourage everyone to do the same. This would be a big step forward in restoring people's trust in our state government.

Just stop, Mr. Weber

I found Leo Weber's letter to the editor published April 16 and titled "Liberals are annoying" very disturbing. Please note that my concern is not based on politics but on Mr. Weber's choice to publish such rude and intolerant rhetoric. Name calling of individuals that Mr. Weber deems to be "Liberals" (and therefore apparently his enemy) include such terms as: "pack of wild animals, out of control school brats, big mouths, unreasoning wild dogs, scurrilous folk, etc."

It appears that Mr. Weber is a conservative zealot and will not tolerate that others can or should have opinions that vary from his own, much less that they have the nerve to actually express them. Please note that Mr. Weber has every right to his opinions and to express them. My concern is the hate that oozes from his letter. He exercises his right to free speech and then he belittles others who want to discuss their concerns with an elected official! He even goes so far as labeling these people "vile creatures" because they chose to drive in a snowstorm and stand outside in the cold in order to exercise their Constitutional rights.

Mr. Weber, no one is lucky that you are writing these types of letters now or have been for the last 15 years. You should be ashamed of yourself. Please get some help. Here are some suggestions:

1. I am guessing from your letter that you are a Christian (reference to abortion and sodomy). Please visit your pastor and bring your letter and this response. Consider participation in a bible study. Please pay attention to God's word regarding tolerance and embracing your fellow man.

2. If Option No. 1 is not possible then get professional help. You need it.

3. Consider helping those that are less fortunate than yourself. Volunteer! You obviously have too much time on your hands. Do something positive with it.

4. Take a class at your local community college. Suggestions include U.S. government and U.S. history.

Mr. Weber, if you read this response I am guessing that you will label me as the enemy (a.k.a. a "Liberal"). While I am not interested in sharing my political views in this letter, I will state that I am most definitely not a "Liberal." What I am is an American. My family has bled and died for this country, including service in the Revolutionary War, the Civil War (Union), WWI and WWII. United we stand, divided we fall. Your letter writing promotes the divisive nature of strong-arm politics. You are not making America great, you are hurting this great nation. Please stop!

Take a deep breath

Ah, Mr. Weber. You have outdone yourself this time. I have been reading your frequent letters to the editors and citizens for what seems like so much more than 15 years. Are you really that hateful? Are you really that rigid? Are you incapable of seeing both sides of an argument?

You probably consider me to be one of those hateful liberals, but let's get something straight. While I have some liberal leanings, many of my opinions are very conservative. I prefer to think of myself as a reasonable, independent thinker who is willing to listen to all sides and accept everyone's opinion, even yours. What could be more American than that?

To be clear, I am not a fan of Mr. Trump. I did not vote for him. Nor do I not trust him — yet. But, I am hopeful. I want him to do well as president, because if he fails we all fail.

Bipartisanship is a good thing for all of us, and should be a part of everyday life in Washington. Apparently our former presidents have grasped the concept as we keep hearing about their friendships that cross party lines. Why can't our current elected officials do the same? (Why can't you?)

I notice that neither President Bush is in a hurry to rush to the White House to show support for Mr. Trump. I worry that they know something we don't, but should.

Time will tell.

Perhaps, in the future, you could step back and take a deep breath before you compose a tirade to share with all of us. Of course, your way is acceptable — it is guaranteed by our Constitution, after all. It's just so easy to get caught up in the media hype of everything, good or bad, that gets reported. Stopping to think something through may soften or change your opinion Mr. Weber. Probably not.

Groups helping to make prison system easier on families

Brad Kadrich
hometownlife.com

When Lois DeMott first got involved with the Michigan Department of Corrections — which came about because of the legal troubles of her then-15-year-old son — she didn't know much about how the prison system worked.

Like many family members of incarcerated loved ones, DeMott had trouble navigating a system she said was fraught with red tape. Getting a simple visitation with her son was difficult.

Inspired by those roadblocks, DeMott is not unfamiliar with the system anymore. In fact, the group she founded based on her early experiences, Lansing-based Citizens for Prison Reform, is working to make it easier for those who've followed in DeMott's footsteps.

According to the CPR website, the grass-roots group engages, educates and empowers family members and loved ones affected by crime and punishment to advance their rights.

"That came out of my own personal experience of never having dealt with the system before and, all of a sudden, being thrown into it," DeMott said. "What we experience — what we go through, some of the hardships — often don't seem real to families."

Family connection

DeMott believed one of the biggest issues involving prisoners and their families was a matter of connectedness. She believed some of the policies within the MDOC made it much harder for the families of inmates to remain connected with their loved ones.

She formed the Citizens for Prison Reform, which began meeting monthly. The group has done educational presentations in the Lansing area every month since 2011.

The goal was to educate families about how the system works. DeMott felt the system's policies often left families in the dark about the health, condition and welfare of their loved ones.

She pointed to a couple of examples that demonstrated there was a need for improvement:

» A family authorization form, which she likened to the form patients fill out when they go to a doctor, wasn't automatically being given to prisoners; it was something the prisoner had to ask for. Without it, DeMott said, families didn't know if their loved one was ill or had been hospitalized. Because of the education effort put in by the CPR, the MDOC is now making that an automatic part of the intake process.

» Another issue was discipline. For example, she said, if a prisoner had received two substance abuse tickets, the director of corrections can take away visits for that prisoner. The problem, as DeMott sees it, is that family members don't know that until they arrive for the visit. Families have lost visitation for years for that reason.

"A lot of these prisoners and families don't know ... I still get calls from families who are in crisis because they don't know enough," DeMott said. "Our point all along has been that if you truly believe family support makes the difference, why are we punishing entire families, including small children who have parents or siblings on the inside?"

Grant helps

DeMott applied for, and received, a Soros Justice Fellowship, a grant that funds projects designed to advance reform and change on a range of issues facing the criminal justice system.

Grant in hand, she began working more directly with MDOC officials because "we had some specific issues and concerns we were seeing," she said.

"We've done a lot of legislative work and that started early on," DeMott said. "We started bringing a lot of attention to capitol hill."

DeMott said the MDOC has been a willing partner in the work the CPR and its support groups, the Family Participation Program and the Family Advisory Board.

Kyle Kaminsky, legislative liaison for the MDOC and its liaison to the Family Advisory Board, said the department is working with the group because it's doing good work.

"The work they do is really helpful," Kaminsky said. "The information flows in two directions. They bring useful information to us so we have better knowledge and we can share information with them that they can then disseminate to families."

The work is helping. Pete Letkemann, a Westland resident whose son Alex is in the system, said the group has effected some change, particularly in areas surrounding visitation.

According to DeMott, some prisons have made enough change that visitation has improved. Families who've traveled fewer than 400 miles, for instance, are guaranteed only a one-hour visit. And the rooms often are small enough, she said, that people have to wait hours for their visit — or don't get in at all.

"Can you imagine driving two or three hours and then having to wait?" DeMott said.

Visitation issues

Letkemann said visitation can be affected by so many things — and so dramatically — that he's heard inmates tell their loved ones the risk of not getting a visit is high enough that the loved ones "shouldn't make the trip."

That's part of the reason, according to Letkemann, that only some 14 percent of inmates get visits. But that is starting to change, he said, because of the work the FAB is doing.

"Sometimes, it feels like you're not doing any good at all," said Letkemann, who recently stepped up to the chairmanship of the Family Advisory Board. "Then you think back on some of the problems we've helped with."

The group has helped with enough that the state has considered making the Family Advisory Board — right now a volunteer group of maybe a half-dozen people — an official part of the system.

State Rep. Stephanie Chang introduced legislation in 2015 that would do just that (she has not reintroduced that bill again this year). Kaminsky acknowledged the bill, if ever approved, would formalize the FAB's standing. He wouldn't say whether he thought it was a good idea — "The department refrains from taking a position on legislation," he said — but acknowledged the group is doing good work.

"The current approach is working pretty well," Kaminsky said. "We're happy with the way it's working right now."

The groups are active now. The Citizens for Prison Reform hosts its sixth Legislative Day on May 11 in Lansing and will use a replica of a solitary confinement cell to educate legislators about what that part of prison life is like. The Family Advisory Board meets quarterly, at the will of the MDOC.

DeMott called the working relationship between the CPR and the MDOC "fabulous." She said officials with the MDOC understand prisoners need "productive, positive things to do with their time," which will make them better citizens when they re-enter society.

"When we make things difficult, has that really helped them when they come out?" she said. "Does that make for a safer neighborhood? Who would you rather have living next door, someone who has been a victim (of the issues in the system) or someone who has been encouraged with family assistance?"

"The biggest issue we're working to address is the connectedness and the support of families ... how we can have better family connectedness," DeMott added. "The department is working with us, but it's a very big department. It's a huge ship to get turned around."

incarceration.

The idea was to create a place where families feel supported and get the tools they need to have a more positive experience.

CPR was founded by Lois DeMott, who got the group started after the experiences of her own son.

"I contacted (DeMott) and told her I've been stumbling through this for five years," Letkemann said. "I thought maybe I could help."

Letkemann has done just that, both with the Family Participation Program and its sister program, the Family Advisory Board. Letkemann has recently assumed the chairmanship of that board, made up of a half-dozen or so family members, former inmates and ex-Michigan Department of Corrections officers.

Hard on families

Letkemann said the system can be very hard on family members, some of whom have to travel for hours or even days to get to the prisons. Letkemann himself has to drive to the Upper Peninsula to see Alex at Kinross Correctional Facility.

Such visits can be cut short, delayed or even cancelled for a variety of reasons, ranging from health problems the family members didn't know about to a lock-down due to some factor inside the prison walls.

Those kinds of problems, Letkemann points out, are partially responsible for the low number of family visits to prisoners. Letkemann said only some 14 percent of inmates across the state get visits from the outside.

"We see best practices and suggest to MDOC ways to streamline," Letkemann said. "They recognize the importance of (inmates having) contact with good people on the outside. It has an effect on re-entry (into life). It's a measurable fact."

Kyle Kaminsky, the MDOC's legislative liaison who also serves as a liaison for the department to the Family Advocacy Board, said the work that group is doing is "helpful" and added having someone like Letkemann on the board is an asset.

"I think it's important there are people like (Letkemann) out there," Kaminsky said. "He's a constructive guy, he's trying to find constructive solutions. He understands some of the limitations faced by (MDOC)."

"Pete isn't looking to make it better just for his son," he added. "He's looking at making it better for everybody. He can see the complexity of a lot of these issues and works through it to try and offer useful advice on how to make it better."

He's made himself useful enough to DeMott to convince her to step back a little bit. She said part of Letkemann's true value is his ability to avoid the pitfalls most families face — "A lot of people end up bitter and angry," she said — and view the group for what it is: an opportunity to help, not unlike herself, who formed CPR in 2011.

"Pete has been a godsend," DeMott said. "I turned my anger into passion and purpose and that's exactly what Pete has done. It's a life-changing experience and it can be very painful. Pete has done a remarkable thing to turn that into being able to help a lot of people."

It's not all sunshine and roses — "Sometimes it feels like you're not doing any good at all," Letkemann said — but when he looks back at what his group has been able to accomplish, there's a sense of satisfaction.

"You do get past this ... it doesn't have to be the end of the world," Letkemann said. "As long as you can see past it, you can see your way through to the end."

Wayne hosts Chocolate Walk for Mother's Day

Wayne Main Street's second annual Mother's Day Chocolate Walk will take place from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 6, in downtown Wayne. Last year's Mother's Day Chocolate Walk was a successful, sold out event. Wayne Main Street anticipates a sold out event this year with more than 100 people and 12 downtown businesses participating.

The Chocolate Walk will begin at the Wayne Historical Museum at 1

Town Square. Participants will be provided a chocolate box and a map of participating businesses. Participants will be invited to walk around downtown Wayne and pick up their individual chocolates at the participating businesses.

"This is a great event for the family because, once you're done with the walk, you'll have a box of chocolates to give to mom for her special day," said Juan Bradford, Wayne Main Street board president. Tickets are $10 advance and $15 day of (if available) the event and can be purchased at www.eventbrite.com/e/chocolate-walk-tickets-32924848107. More information is available at downtownwayne.org.

Launched in 2011, Wayne Main Street has evolved into one of the largest civic organizations in Wayne. Last year, WMS volunteers contributed more than 2,700 service hours to the community. In 2014, the organization was recognized by the Michigan Main Street Association as a Select-Level Main Street community. Wayne Main Street employs the four-point Main Street approach by promoting downtown Wayne as the heart of the community, furthering the commitment to historic preservation, creating programming that draws people to downtown Wayne and producing premier events.

displayed on the walls of the Haggerty Road location.

The careful attention to fresh dishes and customer service helped grow the business, but the Dimopoulos family has made extraordinary efforts to give back to the community. They made many donations to churches, schools, non-profit organizations and needy families for decades.

His effort to provide free meals to hundreds of people who are alone each Thanksgiving garnered national media attention in recent years. Dimopoulos said his personal experience moves him to provide these meals.

"When I was young in Greece, I lived alone," he said. "So when somebody talked to me or did something for me, it meant a lot to me, so I wanted to give back to others."

The Livonia Chamber of Commerce recognized the Plymouth Road location as its outstanding small business of the year in 2010. The chamber and city officials plan a special ceremony in May to celebrate the 80th anniversary of Senate Coney Island.

"George is a legend in this town," chamber president Dan West said. "He is a model we can all admire for how to run a successful business with good relationships, loyalty to customers and dedication to the community."

To recognize the 80th anniversary of the Senate restaurants, each location will offer coney dogs for $1 throughout the month of May. "This is a way," Dimopoulos said, "to show how much we appreciate the support we've received from all the communities and people throughout the years."

Jimmy John's proves freaky successful for family

hometownlife.com

It took a visit to Kalamazoo for Dan Doelker to get a taste for Jimmy John's.

The Livonia Stevenson High School and Madonna University alumnus said he had got to the western Michigan city for a Model United Nations event in high school 15 years ago. He heard about the sandwich shop and gave it a shot.

"Somebody was, like, 'You gotta go to Jimmy John's,'" the Canton resident said. "We'd never been there. So we walked a mile there and then it was as soon as we got back, we said, 'You guys have to try this.'"

So he told his parents, Jeff and Cheryl Doelker, who were both working in medical sales at the time, to give the restaurant chain a try the next time they were in Ann Arbor. They did and later decided bringing the "freaky fast" sandwiches to Livonia was the next right career move. The couple then traveled to Jimmy John's headquarters in Illinois to learn more about the business and talked with other franchise owners. Shortly after returning home from visiting Wisconsin, they had gotten the approval needed.

"By that Monday, we got a phone call from the corporate offices saying we'd been approved to do this," Cheryl Doelker said.

In 2002, they opened the first Jimmy John's franchise in Wayne County, operating a store at 37671 W. Six Mile, just west of Newburgh, in Livonia. It opened to humongous fanfare from those who went to college in cities like Ann Arbor and Lansing.

"When we opened that store on Six Mile, we were getting people from Canton, Plymouth, Novi, Northville. People were driving to our store because we made the right decision," Dan Doelker said. "Because every kid that went to college in the Midwest wanted Jimmy John's when they came home."

They've grown since opening that first store: They now operate nine franchise restaurants in Livonia, Northville Township, Plymouth and Canton. Combined, the stores employ more than 200 people in Wayne County.

They've taken on a few stores operated by other franchise owners outside of Livonia and are in the process of relocating their second store across Plymouth Road into a standalone facility in the nearby shopping center. Construction is currently taking place on the building and the family hopes to have it open by this summer.

The store will have a new design, with only a few others in Michigan having the same design as well.

"It's a little bigger and it'll have a drive-through," Cheryl Doelker said. "We need a little bit bigger space."

"It just seems like a good move at a timely point in our lease."

And the Doelkers hope business keeps chugging along. They attribute the success to staying in their lanes: each family member has a defined role and they stick to it.

"That's the key to family business success, I think," Cheryl Doelker said. "We each know what we're supposed to do, and we don't step on each other's toes. We know what each other is good at, and we build on our strengths and help each other with our weaknesses."

Chargers bowl, bond with Special Olympians

Tim Smith

Livonia Churchill football players love to score touchdowns.

They also love to touch hearts of kids who maybe aren't as big, strong or fast as they are.

But for those Chargers who shared laughs, strikes and spares April 8 with Special Olympians at Plaza Lanes in Plymouth, they found out why they gravitate to the gridiron rather than the bowling alley.

"Just about everyone there was bowling better than I was," Brennan Mikel said. "They're absolutely amazing and so much fun to watch. And they're very, very talented."

It was the sixth year that the Chargers participated in the Special Olympics Area Bowling Tournament, assistant football coach Allen Feigel said.

"Our football program does quite a bit of community outreach," said Feigel, Churchill's offensive line coach.

Mikel is glad that Feigel continues to schedule the team for such events.

"They're all there to have as much fun as they can," Mikel said. "So just being there and helping cheer them on, their faces just light up and it's just amazing to see."

"A couple of us went up to Special Olympics basketball and reffed for them. It was about six of us. It's the same thing. No matter what sport they're doing, they're just happy to be doing it. They love

Run and fun, that's what the annual Livonia Franklin Patriot Relays are all about as boys and girls from 12 area high schools mixed and matched their abilities with the unique track and field invitational.

Garnering first place among boys teams were the host Patriots, who edged city rival Livonia Stevenson by a 80-78 score. On the girls side, Plymouth prevailed with 98 points, while Franklin came up just short with 94 points.

"We haven't been at the top of the heap in a few years, so it's good to be back up there," Franklin head boys coach Aaron Moran said. "It's always good to protect the house, if you will, but it's even better to, in front of our fans, be able to have a good showing and both the boys and girls have had a good showing today."

Moran noted the continuing strong performances from seniors Brandon Smiley, Christian Bagnall, Khalil Pasha and Jacob Clark.

"They all have done a wonderful event," Moran said. "They've won every event they've been in so far. It's different; our kids are competing."

He said the format of the Patriot Relays rewards teams with a lot of depth and versatility.

"The different type of events allows us to get different kids to see what they actually have," Moran said. "Some kids we don't get to see in dual meet format because it's regimented, you get to see your top three, but you don't get to

Garden City takes 9-1 victory over Livonia Stevenson in annual 'Under the Lights' game

The weather Friday evening might have been chilly, but the lights hovering above Garden City High School's softball field were white hot.

And the host Cougars were ready for the prime time contest against Livonia Stevenson, quickly erasing an early deficit with three runs in the first inning and going on to post a 9-1 victory.

The Spartans only briefly had the upper hand, scoring in the top of the first when Kelly Newman spanked the first of three base hits in three official trips to the plate against Garden City junior pitcher April Rudolph.

But heading hall of fame coach Barry Patterson's mantra to always "win the inning," Alicia Ascencio ripped a two-run triple over the right fielder's head and scored on a subsequent sacrifice fly by Shelby Casey and the rout was on.

"I think it's very important," said Ascencio, who collected five RBIs for the night, later coming up with run-scoring hits in the fourth and fifth innings against

The visiting Chiefs scored twice in the top of the sixth to go up 5-3 and senior pitcher

Tyler Newsom made it stand up as he retired the Spartans with little trouble over the final two innings.

"We played a crisp, clean game," said Canton head coach Mark Blomshield, whose team improved to 11-5 overall.

His Stevenson counterpart, Rick Berryman, struck a similar key.

"When we play Canton, it's always a good game, it's competitive, just good high school baseball," Berryman said. "Sometimes they win, sometimes we win."

Berryman lamented getting only one run out of a bases-loaded situation in the bottom of the first, against Canton sophomore starting pitcher Ben Spencer.

But then the Chiefs took a 3-1 lead in the third, with the help of walks, a wild pitch and a two-out, two-run single to right by senior first baseman Lou Baechler.

"(Baechler) had a big two-it."

In the pocket

Ja'Vante Van Buren said the Special Olympian he partnered with (each Churchill player had a bowling buddy for the day) knocked over more pins and good-naturedly knocked him down a peg in the process.

"I mean, I didn't believe he was going to beat me, but he did," Van Buren said. "He got more strikes than I did."

But as far as the Special Olympians were concerned, the Churchill players all were just perfect from the line — for no other reason than they were spending time with them.

"I got mauled," Van Buren said. "The kid told me he was thankful I came to help him. A football player came to help him."

He noted that, to the youngsters in Special Olympics (who have various intellectual disabilities), it seemed inexplicable and out of the realm of possibility that high school football players actually would be there for them.

"That's what they thought," that the Chargers wouldn't take the time, Van Buren explained.

But after an afternoon of fun, friendship and camaraderie, he added that "They want to play football now."

Churchill's Drew Alsbrooks said the team really enjoys hanging out with the Special Olympians, too.

"We've been helping out with Special Olympics the past couple years and we've had a lot of fun," Alsbrooks said. "The athletes there really love having us there, cheering them on and helping them out."

"Some of them actually are pretty good bowlers, too."

Coming together

There were 24 Chargers players who volunteered for the outreach and just seeing how their bowling buddies responded to their participation was more than enough reason to do the event.

Yet the team gets a different kind of benefit for doing community service.

"Helping out with this event really brings our team together and creates a bond," Alsbrooks said.

Concurring was Van Buren, who said Churchill's football team can't help but become tighter on and off the field.

"This is a group," Van Buren said. "We didn't have to do this, but we chose to do this because we're one big family."

"We just decided we should go up there and give back. It was good, you know?"

Their efforts were applauded by Terry Jobbitt, competition and volunteer director for Area 23 of Special Olympics.

"I think it is great how these young men take time out of their day off to spend time with our athletes," Jobbitt wrote in an email to the Observer. "It makes our event be a success as too many people today do not want to volunteer."

"The Churchill boys did a fabulous job and were very hands-on and encouraged our special athletes. I always enjoy watching these young men step up. It is a very rewarding day for the Churchill students, too, as they can see how our much our athletes enjoy this event and learn that life is not always about winning."

"Special Olympics' oath is: 'Let me win, but if I can not win, let me brave in the attempt.'"

Giving back

Jobbitt added that Churchill athletes aren't the only ones from area schools who go the extra mile to help Special Olympics.

He noted that Livonia Franklin has hosted Special Olympics spring games for more than a quarter-century. This year it will begin at 8:30 a.m. May 5.

Plymouth High School boys and girls basketball players volunteer each February for a Special Olympics basketball tournament and, each March, Northville students chip in to help with a regional hoops tourney.

According to the Special Olympics website, there are more than 4.7 million athletes in 169 countries with intellectual disabilities.

That term is used to describe those "with certain limitations in cognitive functioning and other skills, including communication and self-care. These limitations can cause a child to develop and learn more slowly or differently. Intellectual disability is the most common developmental disability."

Spartans starting pitcher Sarah Mesack. "You always want to try to win the inning, whether it's one run, two runs or even five runs. You always want to try to one-up them."

Ascencio also said the Cougars came out with zest for the annual night game against Stevenson. "This is a game everybody always looks forward to, playing underneath the lights," she said.

Patterson said the Ascencio triple in the bottom of the first turned out to be a game-changer for his team, now 4-1 entering a Saturday tournament.

"That gave us the momentum and we just carried that through," Patterson said. "We had a couple big swings. (Aleea) Montgomery had a big double up the gap in a big situation."

Montgomery's liner to right in the fourth keyed a five-run inning, which also included RBI hits by Brittany Radtke (of the infield variety) and Ascencio.

And with Rudolph fanning batters and also having strong defense behind her when needed, Garden City never really was threatened after breaking out in front early.

"Normally, she's not a big strikeout pitcher," Patterson said about Rudolph. "But today, her change-up was effective and her drop had some nice snap on it."

Ascencio also said when a pitcher is on her game, it makes fielders more alert and ready to make plays.

"She's always out there doing her job and relying on us to do our job, which is to get the outs," she said.

Stevenson head coach Kevin Hannigan, whose team dropped to 3-3, tipped his cap to Rudolph.

"She did a great job pitching," Hannigan said. "She had a good change-up today, which I think threw our girls off a little bit."

Hannigan, however, said his team just had too much rust from a week off — much of that down time due to rainouts.

"We haven't played in about a week and it showed," Hannigan said. "We just weren't focused. I don't know if it was the (chilly) weather or being off a week."

"That's on us as coaches. We got to get them ready to play."

And the task doesn't ease up anytime soon "because we play state-ranked Canton on Monday and then we have a doubleheader against Novi."

Hannigan said the bright spot was first baseman Newman's three-hit performance: "She's a good senior, a good captain."

RELAYS

see what you have after that."

Plenty to like

Plymouth head girls coach Ricky Styes saw plenty of positives, beginning with high jumpers Gabby Chouinard, Kennedy Chastang and Amanda Radke, who finished 1-2-3.

"Our distance kids ran really well today. They took second place in all the distance events with a lot of good splits and PR times," Styes said. "We've scored in every event except the sprint medley relay."

More than results, however, coaches agreed that the Patriot Relays are good to take part in because of the variety of events usually not on the menu at traditional meets.

"We like the format of the meet," Styes said. "It's a little different, with all the relay events vs. the normal regional format. So the kids get to have more fun here — the co-ed relay, the throwers relay, just changing it up in the middle of the season."

Concurring was Franklin first-year girls head coach Megan Wilson, who also ran the Patriot Relays during her high school career a decade ago.

"This meet is very unique and the events they do, the shuttle hurdles, co-ed relay, throwers relay ... they don't have that in most invitationals," Wilson said. "So it's really fun to kind of mix things up."

Wilson added that her athletes "exceeded my expectations in almost every event. Everyone was PRing. I think they're really getting into it."

Chance to shine

Livonia Stevenson head boys coach Scott Shaw, whose team finished third with 80 points, likes the format because younger team members get a taste of varsity competition.

"I like the relay event part of it," Shaw said. "So all the kids, the high jumpers all the scores are combined, the long jump and throws, all that kind of stuff. It lets us get a little bit more of the younger kids involved."

One of the Spartan veterans also was on the mark, too.

"Ian Knoph, our high jumper, did pretty well today, he went 6-4," Shaw said. "And our relays are getting better. Today really is the first day we started putting together some true varsity relays. They're looking a little better than we have the last couple dual meets."

Meanwhile, athletes like Plymouth sophomore Malcolm Caldwell also enjoyed the meet. "It's a lot of fun because it's all about teamwork, everyone has to work together to place really high."
