30 years of pizza store, 50 years of Mickey's Dairy Twist marked

Frank Toarmina started working at the family business, Mickey's Dairy Twist, when he was 14 years old.

"The best part of the ice cream business is dealing with happy families. They could not have ice cream or buy it cheaper at the store. They're coming here for a family experience," said Toarmina, who owns the original store on Wayne Road south of Avondale in Westland.

Celebrating 50 years, Mickey's was founded by Toarmina's parents Frank and Marie, nicknamed Mickey. All of their eight children worked at the business over the years including another son Lou, who owns Toarmina's Pizza which has its 30th anniversary this year.

Seventh of eight children, Frank Toarmina said that by 1967 his parents had all but their youngest child and a 900-square-foot home in Westland.

"They went to the bank and got a loan to build an upstairs addition to the house. As they were driving by they saw a small building," he said. "They bought it (for the original Mickey's location). My mom said she wasn't comfortable until the loan was paid off — she was afraid the bank would find out they didn't do the addition."

The eight Toarmina children, who all graduated from Wayne Memorial High School, would walk up to Mickey's after school. Their mother walked the couple blocks to the business, too, because she never learned to drive.

Frank and Mickey were looking to retire in 1991, so son Frank and his sister Pam bought the business. The elder Frank died in 1999 but at nearly 92, Mickey continues to live in her family home, which eventually did get its addition.

When Pam retired from the business, Frank carried on as the sole owner of the original location. Another sister, Mary, owns Mickey's Dairy Count Star Rocks as one of the lucky sky watchers during Monday's solar eclipse.

Rocks, who came dressed for the occasion wearing sun and moon earrings, went to the Robert and Janet Bennett Library in Livonia early to snag a pair of solar eclipse glasses. She lucked out and got one of the last pairs.

"I figured there would be a line," the Livonia resident said. "I thought they weren't going to start passing them out until noon."

The festivities surrounding the solar eclipse spurred one of the biggest events at the library, said Karen Smith, a children's librarian. Crowds of people waited outside the library, hoping to snag one of the 600 pairs. The line, she said, was out the door and reached all the way to Livonia City Hall before the library opened at 9 a.m.

gathered Monday in hundreds of cities, towns and parks along a 70-mile-wide "path of totality" as the much-ballyhooed Great American Eclipse began its astronomical march across the nation.

With all the talk about the eclipse, Kevin Pollins said he wasn't too surprised at how many people turned out at the Lyon Township Library to watch the eclipse. A Northfield Township resident, Pollins came with wife Anna and sons Gunnar, 6, and Drake, 9, who attend Salem Elementary School.

The family had made pin-hole viewing devices with boxes and aluminum

Westland police seek suspects in vandalism of home

Police in Westland hope the public can identify several suspects wanted in connection with a string of vandalism at a home.

Police say the individuals are wanted in connection with rash of vandalism complaints at a home near the intersection of Cowan and Farmington. The incidents all took place between July 12 and July 17. The suspects trespassed on the property, and damaged many of the resident's belongings, including vehicles, the home and his barn, police said.

The resident has been the target of vandalism in the past, which resulted in the owner installing security cameras.

Anyone who can identify any of the suspects is encouraged to call Westland police at 734-722-9600.

Twist Too at Venoy and Cherry Hill. Sister Pat opened a Mickey's in South Lyon with friends and later sold her part of the business while brother Peter used to own the Mickey's in Saline.

Despite growing up in the ice cream business, Frank Toarmina had other things in mind after getting a degree in Eastern European studies from the University of Michigan.

"The plan was to be an analyst for the NSA (National Security Agency). I was a voice interceptor in the Army — I would listen to Russian traffic and transcribe it," he said. "But it was the end of the Cold War. By the time I was at the end of my time in the reserves, all they wanted was Farsi. I had a girlfriend — I was all young and in love. She didn't want to (Washington) D.C. My parents want to retire."

For his part, Lou Toarmina studied business at Ferris State University and wanted to go into business for himself. His cousins own Palermo's Pizza in Grand Rapids.

"(His sister) Mary didn't think it would be long-term. My wife says I was going to end up selling chicken nuggets."

Lou Toarmina had a goal of selling the world's biggest pizza and his store is known for its 24-inch pizza, including a deep dish version. The menu offers a guarantee that it's enough to feed the whole family or they'll send more pizza.

"I like serving the customers. It's like my grandma and my mom making people eat when they came over," Lou Toarmina said.

There's a Toarmina's Pizza adjoining the Wayne Road Mickey's Twist, too. A house had to be demolished to make way for the addition. Frank was living there rent-free right up until the bulldozer arrived.

It might seem like Frank Toarmina's got an easier schedule with a seasonal business like ice cream rather than year around pizza.

"I like having three months off in the winter. I figured out that working seven days a week in the summer, I put in 200-plus days like everyone else. I'm here holidays and weekends," he said. "I like seeing people come up year after year with their kids and grandkids."

THE ULTIMATE SHOUT-OUT

Roof, emotions certain to be raised as Shaw Stadium unveiled

Tim Smith
hometownlife.com

Imagine being a National Football League player, suddenly cut from the roster on the eve of a season. Now imagine that player — in this case Livonia Clarenceville football legend Tim Shaw — finding the time to help out a high school team during practices.

Clarenceville football coach Ryan Irish still can't quite believe that actually happened but, then again, Shaw is one of a kind.

"He said, 'Hey coach, what can I do for you?'" Irish said. "I said, 'I need this, this and this.' Tim was the best coach I ever had for about five days.

"Before he got picked up (by another NFL team), he was here every day, early, setting up. Here's a guy that's playing in the NFL and then showing up for high school football practice because he wants to give back.

"He wasn't feeling sorry about himself. ... I didn't really know Tim all that much until he came out for those five days and the interaction we had, the talks we had, his experience and the things he said to our kids. I'm, like, 'God, this kid's not a real person.'"

Palpable love

And now, Clarenceville gets a chance to give back to Shaw. Fans will undoubtedly come out in droves Saturday night as the Trojans' football home is renamed David B. McDowell Field at Shaw Stadium.

The ceremony will take place at halftime of Clarenceville's season opener against Lutheran North, which starts at 7 p.m. Shaw, a hard-hitting linebacker who went on to stardom at Penn State before playing six years in the NFL, will be back on his old field for the highly anticipated event.

Shaw — struck down in 2014 by amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (a.k.a. Lou Gehrig's disease) — continues to have a love affair with his alma mater and the feeling is mutual. He was a key player on Clarenceville's 2001 team, which reached the state championship game at Ford Field.

"That's why Saturday is such a special day," Irish said. "Tim has always been about Clarenceville and the people there. It's never been about Tim."

True to form, Shaw requested that the game be rescheduled from Friday to Saturday night, to accommodate brothers Peter and Andrew Shaw.

"Again, Tim being Tim, it was because that's when his brothers could get in to be there," Irish said. "Lutheran North is being very gracious on being able to move that game to Saturday for us and it's going to be a great event.

"My thing, with ALS, it's a disease no one can control. And Tim is still Tim. He's not the guy we remember, but his mind is still there. He's funny as anybody. We're really truly doing it for Tim and, hopefully, it's going to be a great night for everybody."

Raw emotion

For sure, the evening will be packed with the kind of emotion displayed by Kristine Baer before a practice last week.

foil, although some had shared a pair of the eclipse glasses with them for a better viewing. Gunnar and Drake agreed they were excited to see it dark during the daytime, which didn't really happen. They were skeptical of their father's story about the eclipse. "There's an old Chinese story that a dragon is swallowing the sun during an eclipse. They make a lot of noise and the sun always returns," Kevin Pollins said.

There were "aahs" and some groans as the eclipse came in and out of view due clouds. With 80-percent coverage locally, there was no darkness or stars, although the library parking lot lights came on during the eclipse. Three cranes seemed undisturbed by the eclipse as they strolled across the library lawn heading for a nearby lake.

At the Lyon Township Library, 160 people signed up for the eclipse program that provided safe viewing glasses and offered several crafts. Another 100 people were registered on the waiting list.

"It's a huge number for us. I think the media made it sound like it was a once-in-a-lifetime event. People were excited to see something out of the ordinary," Lyon Township Youth Services Librarian Jocelyn Levin said. "I really didn't expect anything like this when I started planning it. I was going to do a storytime, but you can't do that with 200 people."

At the Canton Public Library, Jaidyn Pickell and his grandmother, Shari Pickell, were among hundreds of people who watched the eclipse. The library gave out 1,000 pairs of special glasses Monday and during earlier summer library programs, said Laurie Golden, community relations department head.

"It's awesome. It looks like half of the moon and half of the sun," Jaidyn said.

"It's beautiful," his grandmother said. "I really wanted Jaidyn to have this experience."

The total solar eclipse — the moon completely obscuring the sun — started along Oregon's west coast shortly after 10 a.m. PDT, darkening the skies of Salem for just a few minutes in the middle of a sunny day. The eclipse was expected to wrap up along coastal South Carolina before 3 p.m. EDT.

Livonia resident Ken Eskovitz remembers the last total solar eclipse he saw. He drove down to South Carolina to witness it back in 1979. Monday, he brought out some binoculars and a telescope with filters on it to view the rare event.

He said he didn't plan on coming out to the library parking lot originally, but said it was great to see so many people take in the sights — safely, of course.

"It's nice to see the kids getting involved," he said.

Amidst a traffic jam, hundreds made their way to the Canton library and lined up hours before the eclipse started, waiting to get a pair of glasses. Elliott Peshkess, 9, had gotten his glasses earlier.

"It is amazing," he said, looking skyward as he stood next to his father, Adi Peshkess. "This is my very first eclipse and I won't get to see this again for, like, 40 more years."

Friends Maddie Jones

Erin Varilone helps her daughter Iris, 3, with her safety glasses as the two take a look at the solar eclipse Monday at the Lyon Township Library.

Ian Flemming takes a close look at the eclipse. The viewer, built by HometownLife.com photographer Bill Bresler, provides a good view of the solar event.

Seven-year-old Ower Porter got the last pair of 1,000 eclipse glasses available through Livonia's libraries. Owen and sister Allie Porter, 4, are from Canton. They came to the library with their grandparents, Pala Liske and Tom Liske of Livonia.

Nancy Langeneckert uses a pinhole to project an image of the eclipse on the paper at her feet.

and Cindy Chen, both 18, celebrated the eclipse together before heading off to college in separate ways — Jones to the University of Michigan and Chen to Michigan State.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime thing and we wanted to do this together before leaving for college," said Jones, a Salem High School graduate.

Chen said she has been hearing about the eclipse for a couple of years.

"Now it's here and we can finally check it out,"

she said.

Patrons also packed a library room where the eclipse was shown live on a big screen.

SHAW

Baer, busy carrying red Trojans uniform shirts from her SUV into the Clarenceville locker room before practice began, choked back tears while talking about the man and the event.

"I'm going to cry now, because I was here when Tim was here," Baer said. "It just means that Clarenceville appreciates its people sometimes and Tim Shaw is an awesome person."

She helped Irish when he coached the Trojans from 2005-09 and — with Irish back in the fold this season — she was brought back as a "football coordinator" this year.

Her family will be among those cheering and probably crying during the ceremony. On hand will be Jamie (Baer) Liss and her husband Michael Liss. Both are Clarenceville alums and Michael played football with Shaw, Baer said.

"She's like me," Michael Baer said about Jamie. "She went to school with Tim and it's hard to see someone so vibrant then get knocked down. It's hard to see."

According to Baer, Clarenceville people generally are hard-working and unpretentious. Nobody epitomizes that better than Shaw.

To that end, he did not want the football field named in his honor. He made sure the Shaw family will be in the spotlight.

"His brother was here, Peter, he was a teacher," she said. "He was awesome. Andrew Shaw, his other brother, was here, he was a good football player. His mom and dad (Sharon and John) volunteered all the time. They were big in the concessions stands. "I think Tim is ... humbled. I don't think he really wanted it, but he accepted it."

Inspirational

Others with Clarenceville connections are glad he did.

"It's big. He's the biggest athlete to come out of Clarenceville, so it's good that we're doing something for him," said Danny Blacker, a 2011 grad who played varsity baseball. "It's unfortunate what happened to him, but it's good that he is persevering and staying strong for everybody and trying to do as much as he can and (having) a positive impact on as many as he can."

ALUMS TOAST SHAW

Mike Forest (1999 grad): "I graduated with his brother, Steve. The whole family is an amazing unit. Tim was a year or two behind me. I remember a few of his TDs, but his passion, humility and courage continue to inspire. Next time I'm in town, I look forward to seeing a game there, no matter what it's called."

John Burhop (1974): "If not for Tim and the overflowing crowds that came to watch him and the rest of the team, the stadium would not have been built. I saw almost every game he played both home and away (my daughter was a cheerleader). He was the heart and soul of that team, great kid."

"I know he has the (annual Tim Shaw) summer camps and stuff and a lot of people go to those. A lot of kids don't know who he is, but when a guy goes to the NFL, it's something big that people want to follow, follow in his footsteps and show that good things do come out of Clarenceville."

And Shaw will continue to provide inspiration for young athletes as they grow up, perhaps deciding to someday become a Trojan.

"I think it puts them on the map and I think the kids that come up, they get a chance to see that they can do anything that they put their minds to," said Brian Gehan, parent of two Clarenceville student-athletes (Chelsea and Ben). "Looking at an athlete like that, they can aspire to be that themselves. So I think it's really more of an inspiration than anything to the young athletes coming up."

Ron G. Hall (1972): "I graduated in '72, so it does not mean too much. However, he did something no one else at C'ville has ever done. I say, let's do this!"

Chris Munro Mears (1968): "He sure deserves this. ... He made it the farthest in football than any other player and he is a good guy and well-loved."

Cheryl Maki Vita (1969): "Many like myself have tons of memories tied to the stadium. But I never really focused on the name. When I think of the stadium, I see the team playing, the fantastic marching band performing and all the diehard fans cheering, no matter if we won or lost. ... I wish I could have seen Tim Shaw play. It must have been an exciting time at Clarenceville."

Ron Ylitalo (1967): "Tim Shaw did what no other member of the Trojans has ever done. He put Clarenceville on the map during his high school years and continued leaving a mark well into his football career at Penn State and into his pro career. ... He continues to make a difference even today, despite his battle with ALS, by being an advocate in finding a cure for that debilitating disease."

Cramton

Ronald G. age 73, of Detroit, Michigan, a longtime resident of Livonia, passed away on August 8, 2017. He was born October 10, 1943, in Pontiac, Michigan; son of Glenn B. and Ida E. (nee Leppanen) Cramton. He graduated from Cody High School in Detroit and continued his education at Ferris State University. Ronald was united in marriage to Julie Ann Burhans on April 18, 1980; they spent 37 loving years dedicated to each other as husband and wife. Ron was a Vietnam War time veteran, a helicopter repairman, and a die-cutter at a paper factory for over 40 years. He was all of these things and more, but none of these things explain him. They're words people use to put people in categories, they are not the essence of his person. The best that can be shown of the essences of his life are but a few fragments that we have room for in this article. Ron never missed his son's plays, soccer games, or haunted houses. Not once, not ever. Ron had never once been sick for more than 30 years of his life. If he had the sniffles, he declared it his sinuses and kept moving. Ron, in his late sixties with a noticeable limp, saw a man as he was driving home from work who appeared to be lost and have dementia. He helped carry the man to his car and drove him around for hours until they found the correct house. He hurt himself carrying the man, but still did not miss a day of work. Ron worked at the same place with the same exact job for 43 years, without expecting one promotion, because he liked the people he worked with and the work made him happy. Ron convinced his union to threaten to go on strike if the healthcare company did not pay for the best possible surgeries for his son with a cleft palate. Ron wore funny shirts and told jokes to strangers every single day of his life. Ron was diagnosed with Alzheimer's. The doctors warned his family that he might forget them. In the more than three years he had the disease, his body forgot everything including how to swallow food. But he never forgot his family. Not once, not ever. When he was beyond speaking, beyond moving his eyes to look, when his son said, "I love you, Dad," he said, "I love you too, Scott." Ron Cramton was his son's hero and he and many others will miss him. His story is not of the crafty go-getter or the plucky upstart. He was not the underdog who rose up at the end. His life is the story of willpower. It's about being the comic relief. It's about what it takes to know how hard life can be and to help keep others going, even if that means just being a tool to help them get a little bit further and be a little happier. He is survived by his beloved wife, Julie A. Cramton, and his son, Scott. He was preceded in death by his parents and his brother, Lloyd Cramton. A time of gathering will be held Sunday, August 27, 2017, from noon until 3:00 p.m., with a memorial service at 3:00 p.m. at Casterline Funeral Home, 122 W. Dunlap, Northville. Pastor Christopher Fairbairn from St. Paul Lutheran Church will officiate the service. Ron will be laid to rest at Fort Custer National Cemetery in Augusta, Michigan. In lieu of flowers, share Ron's favorite joke. "What are four animals every woman loves? A mink in the closet A jaguar in the garage A tiger in bed And a jackass to pay for it all!"

Trojan Nation on rise again thanks to Shaw

There have been a lot of names to proudly wear the red and gray at Clarenceville High School.

A few come to mind for this 1974 Clarenceville graduate, who dabbled in baseball and football way back when — but could only dream to excel on the field the way guys named Luka, Laird and Saarela did. In more recent times, the names have included Gainer and Hall, among many others.

But truly, only one name really matters in Trojan Nation and rightfully so. It belongs to Tim Shaw.

This Saturday night also will belong to Shaw, a 2002 graduate and former National Football League player who is suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. At halftime of Clarenceville's season opener against Lutheran North, the site of so many wonderful football games in the late 1990s and early 2000s will be christened David B. McDowell Field at Shaw Stadium.

out onto the field for the ceremony, with parents Sharon and John Shaw and brothers Peter and Andrew, the noise will be so loud it will be heard several miles away in places like Northville and Plymouth.

Thanks to the humble athlete who made sure his first name was not part of the stadium moniker, Clarenceville will briefly get back on the sports map the way it was during Shaw's high school career — which culminated with

Fisette signs three-year deal with top three agency Elite Model Management

Whether she's strutting down the runway or setting for one of the top high school volleyball teams in the state, Gabriella Fisette's career has already taken off.

The 15-year-old junior from Northville High School, who sat out last year after transferring from South Lyon, is building her portfolio both as an athlete for the Mustangs and model for one of the three biggest agencies in the world, Elite Model Management.

The 5-foot-9 Fisette recently did a photo shoot in Miami and also spent time in New York, where she recently signed a three-year contract with Elite, which discovered many notable models, including Cindy Crawford and

Pallett powers to a pair of junior national crowns

Valadian Pallett attended the recent AAU Junior Olympics at Eastern Michigan University simply wanting to do her best. The young Farmington resident left as a double national champion.

Pallett, competing in the 14-year-old division, won the discus with a personal-record throw of 125 feet, 8 inches and took the shot put with a toss of 47 feet, 10.5 inches. There were more than 60 participants in each event.

The winning shot put effort was the second best in the nation in her age group, trailing only her personal-record toss of 50 feet, 3.5 inches posted at the USATF Region 5 meet in Ohio earlier this year.

Gisele Bündchen, not to mention other well-known supermodel clients such as Tyra Banks, Heidi Klum, Naomi Campbell and Iman.

"I couldn't walk in heels," Fisette said. "I never wore make-up and I was always in leggings and sports shirts. So it was really different and it was interesting to get into, because I'd really never done anything like it. But I do like it. Sometimes it hurts my feet, but it's fun."

Fisette's mother Julie, who happens to be her head coach at Northville, is still trying to process it all after accompanying her daughter on her two summer photo shoots.

"It's been slightly overwhelming, I would say," Julie Fisette said. "It's kind of been this journey. I told her we needed to start a journal because we're meeting and we're going to places that we would never, like, figure that we'd ever been at ... different characters, different world. It's a lot of fun. It's brand new. We really don't know where it's headed. A year ago, we weren't doing any of it and then now we're to the point we're starting to learn the lingo and being able to get her involved. It was quite exciting when Elite Model picked her up before they even started talking to her. I had no idea who they were and had to talk to them to find out that they were one of the top three in the world."

Volleyball practice, meanwhile, has already started and the season opening tournament is just around the corner for the Mustangs, who are coming off a 40-6 season.

Although six senior starters were lost to graduation, the cupboard is far from bare as the Mustangs have restocked their lineup with six returning seniors who gained valuable playing time from a year ago.

Among the returnees are setter Rachel Holmes, right side hitters Christina Valentini and Courtney Gozdor, outside hitters Bri Maccoux and Morgan Rodgers and middle block Jessica Hogan.

Junior libero Hannah Grant, who is already committed to Michigan State, is also back, while sophomore middle blocker Clare McNamara and freshman outside hitter Jenna

LAWRENCE P. GIVENS

Northville volleyball player Gabi Fisette has modeled for shoots in Miami and New York, as well as locally.

Boksha will figure prominently as promising newcomers.

This season, Fisette's role will primarily be as a backup. She'll also team up in a 6-2 (two-setter) rotation on occasion with Holmes.

"Her goal this year is to learn as much as she can from Rachel," Julie Fisette said. "And Rachel has already taken on the responsibility being her big 'sis' and getting her ready, so next year she can step into that leading role."

Adjusting to the life of a model has been a challenge, but Fisette relies on her athletic instincts while learning on the fly.

"In volleyball, you have a base," she said. "And when you're in photo shoots, you always have a base. Then you go from base to another position. But you always have to go back to base. I wasn't understanding at first in my photo shoots, but my mom would say,

'Go back to base, go back to base.' So I said, 'OK' and I knew what to do.

"It's really hard, because you can't do specific poses. Everyone has good sides and bad sides, obviously. So you have to know where to move your head and what side is good for you and what positions are good and what poses are good."

A trip to Twelve Oaks Mall earlier this year sent her on a path to modeling.

"I was at the mall one day with my sister (Mackenzie) and her friends and there is, like, one mother agent - what they call it - people who train you and stuff," she said. "They said, 'Oh, my God, you should model.' I said, 'All right, whatever.' I was at the mall. She looked into it and I just gave it to my mom, looked it up myself and I started taking classes because I didn't even know how to walk in heels."

"There's a bunch of agents. You walk one way and get pictures. You either get signed or you don't get signed. Some people get signed by agents there, then you get your big agent and ... get discovered."

GABRIELLA FISETTE

Fisette then decided to take a leap of faith, but first had to run it by her mother.

"One day, I was in the car with my mom and I said, 'I got to tell you something,'" she said. "And she was so scared. She thought I was going to drop a like bomb on her. I told her, 'I think I want to try it.' She said, 'OK, we're going to try it.'"

Fisette then traveled to New York and auditioned for the International Talent & Modeling Association. It was there she was first discovered.

"It's almost like a competition," she said. "There's a lot of runway. There's a bunch of agents. You walk one way and get pictures. You either get signed or you don't get signed. Some people get signed by agents there, then you get your big agent and it's either way to get discovered."

On the Elite Model website, Fisette is listed as a division development model. In Miami, she did seven photo shoots in five days. She could find herself one day hired for cover print, a magazine or a commercial job for companies like Kohl's, Bon-Ton, Tommy Hilfiger and Coach, Inc., to name a few.

"We did some New York style shoots, which are, like, dark and like very professional," she said. "Miami is more the beach wear, fun, silly stuff. I was in the beach for some and the studio for some."

Fisette, who turns 16 next month, also has done some small modeling assignments around Detroit.

But since the volleyball season has begun and with school starting Sept. 5, she will have limited availability.

"They'll say this person wants you, this is the pay, all the hours," she said. "If I have a volleyball tournament that day and I can't go, I just say no. Or if I want to go, they'll fly me down, then I'll just work and fly back. It's really nice because, obviously, I'm in school."

Elite Model Management is more than willing to work around her schooling, along with her club and high school volleyball commitments.

"Her agent and her agency that she's with now, they're very adamant that she remains a 15-year-old girl, that she doesn't miss anything," Julie said. "Her agent told us if she becomes an adult and misses her childhood that she'll become an incomplete adult. So we want her to experience as much as she would typically experience, but just work this in as just another extracurricular. She told her, if you have to turn us down on a job or you have to do this because of something else that's going on in your life, that's the way it goes. We still want you and we'll still love you. Don't feel you're letting us down."

Gabi is the youngest of Nick and Julie Fisette's three daughters. Mackenzie plays lacrosse at Siena Heights and Bailey is studying physical therapy at Grand Valley State.

"I don't want to get too excited. I hope I can retire early," Julie said with a chuckle. "It's been fun, really exciting, to travel around with her. New York was wonderful because our whole entire family got to go."

Husband Nick has been on board as well.

"He's been always us. It's all girls, three girls and his wife," Julie said. "He doesn't say a whole lot, he doesn't talk a whole lot. We agree our job is just to keep her grounded."

Meanwhile, the word is starting to leak out about Fisette's burgeoning modeling career after some of her photos were posted this summer on Facebook and Instagram.

"My boyfriend's friends, they know, but not everyone knows yet," she said. "I'm just going to go with the flow, whatever works, works. I'm not going to set in stone my whole life on this, because something could happen, you never know. So I'm just going to go with it day by day, just how it all plans out and stuff."

a trip to the 2001 state championship game at Ford Field.

Is this happening?

Yet, those who called the tiny district home will leave the game pinching themselves, wondering if all the attention was real or not.

Clarenceville people (and I know this from personal experience) have always had something to prove. It's the red-haired stepchild of school districts, with a bit of Redford Township, a slice of Farmington Hills and a chunk of Livonia thrown together.

Former superintendent McDowell, whose name has been attached to the football field for a number of years, had plenty to do with the district somehow surviving. Another name from the football history book, Ralph Weddle, was instrumental in keeping sports going strong during some lean years.

It's a shame that Weddle, a longtime football coach and gym teacher at the high school, died in 2016 at age 87. Weddle would have loved to have seen what's about to happen at the unsung school on Middlebelt, between Seven and Eight Mile roads.

Clarenceville now will always shine like a beacon with the name of an NFL player on its stadium.

What's in a name, anyway? Shaw still wants to do whatever he can to lift up his former high school, to create a buzz for the current and future Trojans. He also doesn't want to hog the spotlight.

That's why it is to be named "Shaw" Stadium, not Tim Shaw Stadium. Trojans varsity football coach Ryan Irish isn't surprised.

"Tim wants it to be called Shaw Stadium because all of his brothers, Pete and Andrew, who made major strides and did so much for the community and the football program," Irish said. "It's never been about Tim."

There only are about 540 students currently attending Clarenceville High School. And Irish takes over the helm of a football team that went 3-6 in 2016.

A tune to remember

Somehow, none of that will matter Saturday night.

It will be Tim Shaw's night and also Clarenceville's night. The bleachers will be overflowing with people who want to show their love and admiration for a man who has never forgotten where he came from.

That seems to be a characteristic of many who remain Trojans at heart, even decades after graduating.

But because of the greatness of Shaw, both as an athlete and human being, folks from near and far again will sing the praises of unsung Clarenceville.

The melody promises to be one that won't soon fade away.

Chargers lining up for a big 2017 season

Team healthy again, ready to roll into KLA A Gold era

Tim Smith
hometownlife.com

Bill DeFillippo won't hesitate to put his offensive line up against any in the new-look Kensington Lakes Activities Association as the 2017 season kicks off Friday at Monroe.

The Chargers finished 5-4 in 2016, but the team also had to deal with numerous injuries to the O-line. With youngsters gaining valuable experience and everybody else seemingly healthy, DeFillippo is optimistic that good things are about to happen.

"We were very young up front," said DeFillippo, entering his fifth season at the Churchill helm. "We had a couple of those guys have season-ending injuries. And so we probably started 10 different kids the whole year."

One of the players who is back from injury is 6-1, 208-pound senior Steve Darichuk.

"Last year we had a lot of injuries, a lot of people weren't able to be playing together," said Darichuk, a left tackle who missed the last four games with a broken arm. "We have that this year, so hopefully the chemistry will help us."

Darichuk is one of the co-captains, but so are three other key members of the offense.

One of them happens to be 5-10, 220-pound center Colin McCusker, a player not bitten by the injury bug in 2016. Just like last year, McCusker will be snapping the football to quarterback and co-captain Drew Alsobrooks, a southpaw entering his junior season.

"We know each other well; we have good chemistry," McCusker said about teaming for the second straight year with Alsobrooks.

Darichuk, McCusker, right tackle Ethan Gyurnek (who started seven games last year as a sophomore), returning right guard Joe Neimeister and senior Hunter Templin will hopefully provide plenty of time for Alsobrooks to find a running seam or spot an open receiver.

"I should have lots of time this year to throw the ball," Alsobrooks said. "We should be able to run the ball on teams, pass the ball on teams."

A talented core of running backs will benefit from the cohesive front line. One of them is senior fullback Mike Parrish (also a co-captain). Senior Tyrese Williams and junior Darrell Mason look to wreak havoc on opponent's defenses.

When Alsobrooks

throws the ball, it likely will go in the direction of starting wide-outs Martell Dooley and Avery Grenier, a senior and junior, respectively.

Playing catch during Sunday evening's practice is Livonia Churchill junior quarterback Drew Alsobrooks.

On defense, the Chargers will roll out a lineup featuring Parrish (linebacker), junior Andrew Greff (linebacker), spur players Mason and Williams and senior Jake Hastings (safety). Grenier and junior Josh Moeyer also will contribute in the defensive backfield.

New challenges

Meanwhile, DeFillippo said his team is ready to move from the KLA A South to the KLA A Black, necessitated by the downsizing of the conference from 24 to 14 teams.

"It will be an adjustment over the next couple years," DeFillippo said. "But the bottom line is, our schedule is still tough every week. We open up our first three weeks on the road, Monroe, Northville, (Livonia)

Stevenson.

"And then we got Franklin for our first home game. We got a lot of good teams, a lot of rivalries in the first half of the year. Every week, we got to be ready.

"Even with the change, it's the first year Canton's off our schedule, but we get Grand Blanc. ... There's quality teams all over and you got to be ready to play every week."

The new challenges have Parrish excited to get started: "I'm looking for more wins, more competitive teams to beat. We're just trying to ball-out this year."

NOTE: Churchill athletic director Marc Hage announced Monday that the Chargers' season opener, originally slated for Thursday night in Monroe, has been moved to 7 p.m. Friday.

Junior Olympics national championship to her credit. In 2015, she took first place in the discus as a 12-year-old.

"My goal is always to throw well and get a PR (personal record) and I was hoping to get a top three," said Pallett, who participated in her seventh AAU national meet. "I wasn't necessarily cheering for first. I just wanted to do the best I could. "I was really excited about winning," she added. "I knew it was a possibility (to win both national titles), but it was whether or not I could do it on the day and how other people did on the day."

A huge summer season

The East Middle School graduate and two-time Oakland County middle school shot put champion has enjoyed a successful season.

At the Michigan High School Indoor Championships this past winter, Pallett finished eighth in the shot put and was the only middle school representative in the competition and the only non-senior or junior to place.

At the USATF Michigan Open/Master's competition, she won the open women's division in the shot put. At the USATF Junior Olympics held in Lawrence, Kan., Pallett was second in the shot put (46-9.5) and third in the discus (104-6) while competing in the 13-14 division.

Pallett also competes in the javelin, placing sixth overall at this year's AAU Junior Olympics. It marked the fourth straight year she's medaled in all three events at the nationals.

Tobias Pallett, Valadian's father, threw the shot and discus in high school at Muskegon Reeths-Puffer and added the javelin to his repertoire in college at Michigan Tech. He still competes in various masters and senior level track meets and was instrumental in getting his daughter started as a thrower.

"Val is a very hard worker. Not many kids, especially kids her age, are willing to spend most of their summer evenings working on their craft," said Tobias, who has coached Valadian through the junior ranks. "She's also very coachable. Not every change in technique comes with an immediate improvement in distance. She's willing to trust that some changes will result in a short-term reduction, but will pay off in the long term."

"Most of all, though, is that she gets what track is all about," he added. "While there is competition for medals, the biggest 'competition' we all face is our previous best self. Track is all about constantly working to improve and set new PRs."

Ambitious high school goals

Pallett said she enjoys both events, but right now is happy with the way she's throwing the shot put.

"My favorite switches all the time, but right now my favorite is the shot put. At the moment, I'm probably the best in shot put," she said. "Last year was my first year training in shot and I'm still trying to work that out. This year, my spin has gotten a lot better and I've improved a lot technically and that's really helped me."

Pallett will enter Farmington High School, where she will throw for highly respected track and field throw coach Kim Adams, who was recently inducted into the Spring Arbor University Hall of Fame. Pallett has some ambitious goals to reach as a freshman.

"I want to set the discus record for Farmington as a freshman," Pallett said. "And I also want to set the shot put record, eventually."

All kinds of goals at Balconi preseason tourney

Community donates state-of-the-art soccer goals to P-CEP; Catholic Central rolls to title

The annual Gary Balconi Soccer Tournament had a fresh look Saturday, specifically sparkling new goal cages stationed at each end of the varsity soccer pitch at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

Expertly breaking in one of the white metal cages — donated to P-CEP by the Canton Soccer Club and its affiliated Canton Cup Tournament — was Novi Detroit Catholic Central's David Turner, who boomed a high, 35-yard shot that surprised the Walled Lake Northern goalie and shook the top left corner of the net late in the first half.

That put the Shamrocks up 1-0 in the championship game against the Knights; CC went on to win 3-0 and earn the Balconi trophy for the second time in three years.

"It's awesome to be able to use state-of-the-art technology; they look beautiful out here," said Shamrocks assistant boys soccer coach Mike Stratton, who formerly was a coach at Salem. "It's been a long time coming. Thanks to the Canton Soccer Club for doing that."

Drake Midgley doubled the CC lead to 2-0 in the second half and the Shamrocks cruised from there. The Shamrocks earlier defeated Saline and Salem, both by a 2-0 score.

With some of the state's best teams getting a final round of scrimmages in before the regular season begins this week, Stratton said the Balconi tourney is a perfect sendoff to what the Shamrocks hope will be a big year.

"It's a great challenge for the boys to have those top teams here," Stratton said. "I've been at CC for 14 years and we've been part of it all 14 of those years. We look forward to it every year. It's great."

The team's goal is to "win the Balconi and win every game we play. But it starts with game one (Monday against Dearborn Divine Child)," he added.

The games throughout the tournament were hard-fought, with the championship contest the only one with a three-goal margin.

New and improved

Fans and players alike were treated to the first use of the professional-quality goals, which were unveiled before the first Balconi game. The set of goals is worth about $10,000.

According to Canton Cup tournament director Darryl Noel, the donation showed the outstanding teamwork and collaboration between the club and P-CEP varsity soccer programs at Canton, Plymouth and Salem high schools.

"It's the presidents of the (school) booster clubs, the Canton Soccer Club and the Canton Cup coming together to do something good for the students at the Park," Noel said. "It benefits all six teams (including the varsity boys and varsity girls squads)."

"It really works out for everybody. We make these donations, just like we did in the very beginning when the Canton Soccer Club helped build the varsity field."

Noel added that the Canton Soccer Club and Canton Cup "like to see good things over there. So this donation really fits into our community partnership that we basically brand our club on."

Noel added that the club also included P-CEP in its goal rotation program, to upgrade equipment used at other Park soccer fields.

Also earning double winner status was Farmington's Valadian Pallett in the girls 14 six-

Other top eight girls 17-18 finishers were Jessica Mercier (White Lake), pole vault (11-11.25); Kierra Crockett (Farmington Hills), high jump, tied for third (5-3); and Arianna Allman (Farmington Hills), high jump (5-1).

In the girls 15-16, Lakeland High's Grace Stark (White Lake) was the 100 hurdles champion in 13.86, while South Lyon's Miranda Meyers finished third in the 3,000 (11:22.51). Meyers was also a member of the WAZA Track Club's ninth-place 3,200 relay team (10:45.25).

Novi's Brown first

Incoming Novi High freshman Miles Brown, representing the Str8 Smokin Track Club of Southfield, was the boys 14 800-meter champion with a time of 1:58.68.

Last spring, Brown set Novi Middle School records in both the 200 and 400 dashes.

Among the area placers in the boys 15-16 were Jackson Ramsay (Livonia), sixth, pole vault (11-5.25); Jonathan Boland (Westland), sixth, 2,000 steeplechase (6:47.31); and Luke Pohl (Canton), 3,000 (9:24.18).

Novi's Brendan Ireland also took ninth overall in the boys 15-16 decathlon (4,673 points), highlighted by second in the long jump (19-6.75), third in the 100 (11.81) and sixth in the 400 (54.66).

In the boys 17-18, Canton's Nathan Pohl placed fourth in the 2,000 steeplechase with a time of 6:11.41.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
