Man charged with murder due in court

Probable cause hearing scheduled for Oct. 19

David Veselenak

A Westland man accused of killing his roommate earlier this month will return to a courtroom in October after his lawyers requested more time. Jovica Nikoloski, 22, went Thursday before 18th District Judge Mark McConnell for a probable cause conference in his case, where he is charged with first-degree murder.

His attorney, Mike Smith, had asked McConnell to adjourn the probable cause conference for six weeks so he could collect documents related to the

But McConnell declined and instead sent both the prosecuting attorney and defense counsel to District Judge Sandra Cicirelli's courtroom, as the case was assigned to her. Cicirelli said she would not schedule a probable cause conference that far in advance.

"Not going six weeks out, gentle-men," she said. "Absolutely out of the question."

Instead, Cicirelli adjourned the probable cause conference for Oct. 19. A preliminary examination, which will determine if there's enough evidence for the case to head to trial, will take place Oct. 26. Both hearings will happen in Westland's 18th District Court.

Nikoloski was charged after police were called Sept. 9 to his apartment in the 6500 block of Yale, in the Skygate Apartments complex. There, police found his roommate, 25-year-old Spase Grazhdani, with stab injuries. He died of his injuries.

Police say Nikoloski stabbed Grazhdani in the early morning hours, took a shower and left the apartment for a few hours. He returned around noon and called police then.

Nikoloski faces up to life in prison if convicted. He remains locked up in the Wayne County Jail without bond.

Ron Wells has a big heart and strong legs. He will put both to the test when he joins three other like-minded local runners on a trek from Detroit to Chicago beginning at 9 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 27, at the Spirit of Detroit statue at the foot of Woodward Avenue.

"All four of us - (Wells), Kevin VilleMonte, Scott Molitor and Matt Dalley - have a compassionate heart for people who are hurting or are in need," said Wells, of Plymouth Township. It is the reason he ran 43 miles to celebrate his 43rd birthday while raising $1,100 for his running team charity, World Vision.

After Wells finished completing the IRONMAN Wisconsin in 2015 he was "looking for something else to challenge me even more."

'At the time, I was thinking about what I could do to up my game," he said. "That's when I got the idea of doing something bigger."

Another tip from McConnell, who issued bench warrants for several no-show defendants, was to tell students that, if they did ever end up having to make a court appearance, to make sure they show up. That way, they can avoid being arrested on a warrant if they get pulled over or have some other contact with police, he said.

Asked why he wanted to be a judge, McConnell said he thought being a judge would be a good way to give back to the community after working more than 13 years as a

Westland city prosecutor. "I really like the law, writing and researching. We handle a lot of the same issues, so I was well-prepared for this,"

he said.

"Bigger" certainly describes Steve Spear, the Team World Vision director who ran from Los Angeles to New York in 2013. Spear's run across America was the inspiration behind Wells's decision to run from Detroit to Chicago. 'I have a family, so I can't run across the country, because that would take me a few months," he said. "I could do some-thing a little shorter. I've done the Chicago Marathon a couple of times and Team World Vision, which is the club I run for, is based out of Chicago, so what about a Detroit to Chicago run?"

Early last year, Wells jumped on Google maps and started planning a course between the Motor City and the Windy City.

"I put in Google maps that I wanted to walk it and what they gave me is, basically, the route I am taking," he said. "I had to tweak it a little

It became a "group run" last summer, when Wells was mentioning his plan to a couple of friends. "I was just talking about what I was going to do," Wells said. I was inviting anyone and trying to make this anything more than something I was doing.

And Kevin VilleMonte said that it sounds like fun and volunteered to join me. So I put out an invitation to a few other friends who I know like to run."

VilleMonte and Molitor of Canton, along with Dalley of Plymouth, answered the invitation and will be joining Wells on his run to Chicago.

The four runners began training, with a plan put together by Wells, in January.

The run is not a relay. Each runner will stride the 280 miles from Detroit to Chicago, averaging about 28 miles each day. The first day, Wednesday, Sept. 27, will take them from the Spirit of Detroit to Ypsilanti. The second day will finish near Manchester. They will get to sleep in their own beds those two nights, but the rest of the trip will include nights in either a campground or

They should cross the finish line - Buckingham Fountain in Chicago – on Friday, Oct. 6. But all four say that they are not done at that point. Two days after finishing the Detroit-Chicago run, Wells and Dalley plan to run the Chicago Marathon. Wells also has plans to recover for seven days and then run the Detroit Free Press Marathon on Oct. 15 with Molitor, while VilleMonte plans to run the half-marathon that same day. And anyone interested in running parts of the trip with the foursome is welcome to join them. Those will be what Wells calls "the relay runners." To follow the run and keep track their pro-gress, follow them on the DetChi Facebook page.

World Vision is a Christian humanitarian organization dedicated to working with children, families and their communities worldwide to reach their full potential by tackling the causes of poverty and injustice, including disaster relief. World Vision is the largest non-governmental provider of clean water in the world, reaching more than 4.6 million new people with clean water last year alone.

"We have all run for Team World Vision for several years and the money we raise for this run will be going toward the development piece of World Vision," Wells said. "Scott, Matt and myself are raising money for clean-water projects in Africa. Kevin's money is going towards helping protect vulnerable children in high-risk areas of the world."

In 2013, Wells made a trip to Africa and discovered first-hand the importance of clean water. He learned that a child's chance of survival is doubled with something we in America take for granted.

With at least $300 million invested in wells, dams, pipelines, purification systems and other measures, World Vision runs the largest privately funded water initiative in Africa. "It was life-changing," Wells said of his trip to Africa. "World Vision does an amazing job down there. Clean water is the genesis for getting people out of poverty. "My goal in 2017 is to inspire you to 'Go Far-ther Together' with me, either by pushing your own physical limits or by sacrificially giving for the sake of others.

VilleMonte ran two marathons (Detroit and Chicago) as part of the World Vision team, but wondered if he was doing enough. "More than 115 million children worldwide are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking for commercial sex exploitation and hazardous physical labor and abuse," he said. "And all I do is run a mere 26

He said the run from Detroit to Chicago is a Dalley says he has an "insatiable desire to keep surpassing my last major achievement. "With God, no dream is too big or out of reach. I know what it feels like to run 100 miles. But this adventure will test me in new ways, not to mention the goal to provide clean water for at least 200 people. Six Westland parks to receive improvements

Six major Westland parks are slated for large-scale recreational improvements, thanks in part to funding assistance by the state of Michigan and Wayne

State Rep. Robert Kosowski, D-Westland, announced Aug. 23 that he had secured a $300,000 grant from that state of Michigan for funding of park im-provements at Westland's Voss Park on the city's east side. The Westland City Council has also approved an intergovernmental agreement between Wayne County and the city of Westland to utilize parks millage funding from fiscal years 2015-17 in the amount of $101,050 for park improvements.

Parks to receive updates include: » Voss Park (30600 two of the existing four baseball fields converted into four new little league football practice fields equipped with an equipment storage garage, new spectator bleachers and park sig-nage. The remaining two baseball fields will receive new fencing, foul poles, dugouts, bleachers and updated lighting. The existing basketball court will be removed and re-sited on the south end of the park. All parking lots will also be repaved. This project is being funded by the $300,000 grant from the state.

» Jaycee Park (6200

N. Wildwood) will see improvements including parking lot re-pavement and new baseball diamond fencing all three baseball diamonds and will include new dug-outs, benches, foul poles and safety capping along the outfield fencing. This project was funded with $83,399 of the millage allocation, along with $14,068 from Westland's capital outlay fund. (Work has already begun). » Rotary Park (601 Hanlon Avenue) will see recreational improvements this year with the removal and replacement of the park's cur-rent baseball fencing, dugouts and foul poles. The project will be funded with $55,964 from the city's capital improvement fund.

» Stottlemeyer Park

(4801 Dancy Boulevard) will begin to have its amenities modernized along with repairs for walking paths and the repaying of the existing tennis and basketball courts. The Wayne County millage funding will allocate $17,561 to be used to complete this project, with an additional $68,368 coming from the city's capital improvement fund.

» Cayley Park (33982
Grand Traverse) is scheduled to have a new basketball court installed. Funding for this project is being provided by a CDBG grant in the amount of $45,000.

» Lincoln Field (33800 Grand Traverse) has also received a $100,000 grant from MEDC, which will be applied toward a walking path, pavilion and parking lot repaying services.

"We are excited to have the opportunity to revitalize a major portion of the city's parks portfolio at a time where experts are encouraging parents to keep their children ac-tive," Mayor William Wild said.

Westland buys new cardiac monitors

Westland City Council has approved the purchase of five new cardiac monitor/defibrillators through Physio Control for $159,758. The current Philips monitor/defibrillators were originally purchased from 2008-10.

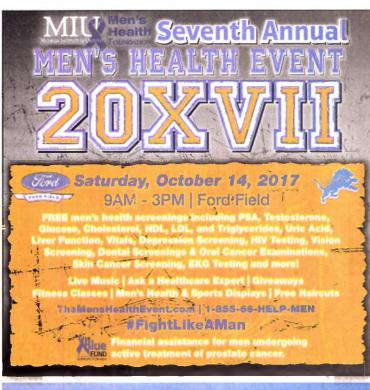

Philips is experi-encing a class 1 recall issued from the FDA concerning battery connection issues that may cause the device from powering up, charging and delivering an electrical shock therapy. The units being replaced are included in the recall and currently Philips has no solution in place to correct these devices, nor is it able to repair current devices. Westland fire had reached out to Zoll Medical and Physio Control for loaner devices and removed from service the affected units while reviewing the situation and awaiting council approval. This purchase is being funded through the capital improvement fund.

"I am very pleased with this purchase and thankful to our city leaders in recognizing and delivering on our current needs, to enable our department to continue to deliver quality care," Fire Chief Michael Stradtner said.

"These new units will help the Westland Fire Department to continue to deliver the patient care our community expects from their professional firefighters," Mayor William R. Wild said. "This was an es-sential purchase to ad-dress any potential issues that could have been experienced with the continued use of the recalled devices.

Molotov cocktails found in garbage

A resident who lives in the 34800 block of Glover called Wayne police Sept. 14 to report a suspicious man in the area.

She said she saw the man walking near her vehicle. She went outside and told him to leave, though he said "nothing is going to happen." He later walked away and disappeared near her garage. She later heard a loud noise and recognized it as her garbage can lid. She went outside and found two glass beer bottles full of gasoline with rags sticking out. She could not locate the man believed to have put them there. Police arrived and gathered the Molotov cocktails as evidence.

88.1 the Park to present 'Vinyl Recall' exhibit

To mark 45 years of broadcasting excellence at 88.1 The Park, WSDP-FM presents "Vinyl Re-call," an exhibit of iconic albums that have influenced the station's sound and its student-staff since 1972.

The exhibit, sponsored by Pat Milliken Ford in Redford, will be held at PARC (Plymouth Arts & Recreation Complex), 650 Church Street. The exhibit, which is free and open to the public, run from Oct. 24 through Nov. 16. Hours are 4-8 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The exhibit will also be open 3-5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 28 and Nov. 4 and 11.

"The exhibit is an opportunity to give back to the community that has supported the station for 45 years," said Bill Keith, WSDP station manager. "We reached out to station alums to help determine the most iconic 45 albums in the station's history. These albums represent the music that has influenced the students who worked at the station, and by extension the music that shaped the Plymouth-Canton community."

The exhibit, which will be housed on the first floor of PARC, in cludes 10 different sections, including The '80s, Hall of Famers, Girl Power, Heavy Rock and more. "The exhibit actu-ally includes 50 albums — there is a bonus section titled Detroit Natives," said June Kirchgatter, a station alum and 1983 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School. Kirchgatter serves on the station's advisory board and is curating the exhibit on behalf of the station. "The music scene in Detroit and Ann Arbor definitely shaped the sound of the station, so we added this section to round out the exhibit," he noted.

There is also an interactive time line of the past 45 years, including key milestones at the station, in the music industry and current events (i.e., Facebook launched). "There is a little bit here for every-one," Keith said. "We want the exhibit to bring back memories of people's time in high school, while also giving people a taste of what the sta-tion is playing today."

For more information, contact Keith at 734-416-7732 or bill.keith@ pccsk12.com.

WORKING TO PUT A DENT IN POVERTY

Accountant addresses need in his own backvard and around the world

KRIS WARTELLE

Each week, this series will introduce you to an exceptional American who unites, rather than divides, our communities. To read more about the American profiled here and more average Americans doing exceptional things, visit onenation.usatoday.com.

Rachid Ouedraogo is making a difference in the lives of homeless people and the poor all over the world.

Originally from Burkina Faso in West Africa, Ouedraogo moved to the United States in 2001. He became an American citizen in 2015.

He came when his father took a job teaching French in Iowa, then Massachusetts, finally landing a position as a French professor at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette.

Ouedraogo went to Lafayette High School, where, at 6-foot-5, he played basketball and helped his team win the state championship. He earned his undergraduate and MBA from UL and now works as an accountant at Lafayette General Health.

One Sunday, Ouedraogo, 27, and his girlfriend headed to the grocery store, bought water and food and proceeded to drive downtown looking for anyone who might need help.

'It was hard to tell at first," Ouedraogo explained. "Sometimes you can't tell. But some people were looking in the trash for food. One guy was literally digging in the trash.

"In about 30 minutes, we met 10 people. They were all thankful. ... One told us, 'This made my day,' because he had nothing to eat. If we hadn't given him food, he would not have eaten.

Ouedraogo also volunteers with RE-SULTS, made up of people who use their voices to influence political decisions that will end poverty. "We try to make a difference through legislation," Ouedraogo said. "We set up meetings with legislators to (ask) them to allocate funds for those who need help."

Ouedraogo describes his childhood in Burkina Faso as fairly normal, but says he did witness a lot of poverty. He would like to return to his hometown, to help there as well. But now, his home is in Lafayette, where he believes there is plenty of need right in his own backyard.

"I am an American now, and these are my people," he said. "In America, we have the means to help others. We need to just find the time to do it. I feel like I need to give back. If I can make a difference, we all can.

Rick Bloom MONEY

Q: About five years ago, I co-signed and loaned money to my then daughter-in-law At the time, it was our understanding that she would make all the payments on the loan that I co-signed and, with the money that I loaned her, she was going to repay me in 10 years. This year, my son and daughter-in-law were divorced. As a result, she shut down her business and went back to Spain, where she is from. The prob-lem is, she has stopped making payments to the bank. The bank has notified me that I am responsible for the payments. My belief is, since my son and daughter-in-law were divorced and the divorce settlement says she must continue to make payments on the loan, I should not be held liable. I did talk to a family friend who is an attorney and he told me that I'm responsible. My question to you: Is he right and is there anything that I can do? A: I hate to be the bearer of bad news, but I do agree with the attorney that you are responsible to repay the loan. The fact that in the divorce settlement your ex-daughter-in-law agreed to continue to make the payments has no bearing on the bank. The bank was not a party to the divorce, so it is not bound by the settlement. The bank is the only party that can remove you as a co-signer from the loan. The divorce or even if your daughterin-law had gone into bankruptcy — would have no effect on your responsibility as a co-signer on the loan.

My advice to you is see if you can negotiate something with the bank. In many situations, banks are willing to negotiate to reduce the outstanding balance of the loan. It may pay to have your attorney friend, if he feels qualified, contact the bank to see if it is willing to enter into a negotiation. You have nothing to lose by attempting to deal with the bank. It may surprise you that banks frequently will negotiate in situa-tions such as yours.

Co-signing a loan for family and friends is always tricky. Not only can there be financial implications if something goes wrong, it can also have significant ramifications within the family that may be more difficult to deal with than the financial issues. My advice to anyone who wants to co-sign a loan for a family member or friend is to always proceed with caution. I also tell them that, unless they can afford to repay the loan if there is a default, they need to think twice before co-signing. I recognize everyone wants to help family and friends, but sometimes you have to say no. You also need to consider how family dynamics will be affected if there is a default and you are forced to repay the loan.

If you are loaning money to a family mem-ber or friend, you should have everything put in writing. All too often, there is not a clear understanding that there are responsibilities on the borrower. It is important for the borrower to know that the loan has to be repaid in a timely manner. Putting everything in writing shows the seriousness of the transaction and that repayment is expected. Good luck!

New software trains police on the use of deadly force

Jay Grossman

The driver rolls down his window slowly. He knows why the police officer pulled him over.

"This is about the license plates, right?" he asks. "I just got them in the mail and haven't had time to put them on yet.'

Without warning, the driver pulls out a handgun and shoots multiple rounds directly at the officer

End of scenario. Inside a small room at the Farmington Hills Police Department, officers are honing their skills on a state-of-the-art interactive video simulator that immerses participants in real-time situations involving domestic disputes, active shooters, bank robberies and hundreds of other scenarios. Originally designed for the military, the MI-LO Range Training System allows officers to train with handguns or Tasers that have the weight and feel of a real weapon, but instead fire infrared beams at a large projection screen. The same system also works with live ammunition.

"Reality-based train-ing is absolutely the best training you can provide for officers," Farmington Hills Police Sgt. Brian Bastianelli said. "It's in real time, in real-life speed, and nothing can replicate that. It's one thing to sit in a classroom and learn about the use of force and be given instruction when it's appropriate and not appropriate. It's another thing to actually do it." Farmington Hills, Franklin Village and

partments recently purchased a MILO training system for slightly more than $45,000. The three departments join agencies across the nation that are benefiting from the latest technology in virtual training exer

"It definitely helps in improving an officer's decision-making," Bastia-nelli said. "And it's not just making good decisions on the use of force, but the speed of their decision-making that's so critical.

Training days

In the line of duty, deadly situations unfold without warning. Police officers must decide within seconds how much force is necessary to neutralize a possible threat. The slightest mistake can prove dead-

The National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund's latest statistics on police fatalities indicate there were 65 law enforcement officers killed in the line of duty through June 2017, a 30-percent increase over the same period last year. Ambushstyle killings jumped more than 150 percent between 2015 and 2016.

At the same time, incidents involving police officers using unnecessary force is a recurring storyline that every departments faces - even when the incidents don't involve their officers.

"This system has a camera, so we can film the training session and go over it with the officer," Bastianelli said. "Let's say an officer is making bad use of force decisions - we'll bring them in for retraining and we'll record every session. Hopefully, we'll see improvement. But if the officer doesn't show improvement, we'll follow policy to recommend retraining, up to disciplinary action or dismissal."

Standing in front of a large screen, Farmington Police Officer Scott Brown responds to a domestic dispute involving a man and woman in a cafeteria. Brown repeatedly orders the man to step back, but it's too late. Without any warning, the woman pulls out a knife and stabs the man in the chest

"It's a split-second decision," Bastianelli said. As the instructor handling the software, Bas-tianelli can tweak the scenarios depending on how the officer responds. Actual firearms are not allowed in the training room and all the IR weapons are clearly marked with red bands. The system also has sharpshooting exercises and other

Farmington Hills Po-lice Chief Charles Nebus said the purchase is a bargain value to the taxpayers in several ways three communities split the purchase cost; three departments are enjoying the training; every one benefits from a well-trained police force.

"In a real street situation, a bad decision or shot can result in the death of an innocent person or the police officer," Nebus said. "There are no 'do overs' on the street."

Salem graduate gets chance to pursue two favorite passions, hockey and world travel

Tim Smith

Allie Carter is getting quite a head start on her bucket list.

Not only is the 24-year-old Carter getting to play women's professional hockey, the Salem High School alum is traveling all over Europe as part of the experience.

"I have been to Europe a handful of times and I realized how much I enjoyed exploring parts of the world that have such a different way of life," said Carter, a goaltender who signed with the DEC Salzburg Eagles of the European Elite Women's Hockey League. "Being able to travel and play hockey at the same time is a dream come true.

Carter — who grew up playing locally for Little Caesars and Victory Honda — went on to play between the pipes at Lake Forest (Ill.) College, where she graduated in 2016 with a degree in economics.

Knowing the "numbers game" the way she does, she quickly realized there might be precious few years in which she could travel Europe and keep her hockey career alive.

'I knew I wasn't ready for my hockey career to be over before I started my senior year in college, so I started reaching out to teams in Europe," Carter

Sofran excited to again be part of Boys Bowl

Sofran is excited to be a part of it.

The Catholic League stalwarts renew their historic gridiron rivalry in the 73rd Boys Bowl classic Sunday at Father Richard Elmer Stadium on the CC campus. Kickoff is set for 1 p.m.

Sofran will experience this year's battle from a different perspective.

Instead of wearing Brother Rice's black and orange, Sofran will be dressed in CC's blue and white.

Sofran, a Brother Rice graduate who went on to coach at his alma mater for 16 years, three years as the head coach, is now an assistant to new Catholic Central head coach Dan Anderson.

Sofran was dismissed as Rice's head coach following the 2016 season, when the Warriors finished with a 7-4 record, losing to neighborhood rival Birmingham Groves in the Division 2 district championship game. He admits it will be a bit strange peering across the sidelines at the school that was such a formidable part of his youth and adult life.

I guess I'm going to be on the other sideline that I'm not used to being on for this game," said Sofran, who grew up in Farmington Hills. "My brother-inlaw went to Catholic Central, my uncle went there and I had a cousin who went there, so even as a player, we played at (Pontiac's) Wisner Stadium. Sometimes my family would sit on the CC side. even though I was playing for Brother

"So the rivalry was even in my own family," he added. "It's one of those things, now the people who were at CC have fully embraced me as being part of the Shamrock family.

Livonia Raptors drive interest in prep team

Lacrosse is growing in popularity by leaps and bounds across Livonia, with a big assist to the Livonia Raptors youth

And hopes continue to abound that a unified Livonia high school lacrosse team could soon get the go-ahead to form a team in the Livonia Public Schools district.

Eric Young, who heads up the Raptors (which have U-9, U-12 and U-14

Raptors spokesperson Paula Young said now is a good time to get something going in Livonia as "boys and our coaches are passionate about lacrosse and hope to continue to play in high school."

Didn't give up

She needed to persevere, of course.

"It was hard to find contacts for teams in Europe, but I did a lot of research to find emails to reach out to," Carter wrote. "I sent emails out to over 20 teams displaying my interest to play in Europe, along with a hockey resume of my stats and accomplishments through the years.

"The teams that did respond said they either already filled their import spots or they weren't looking for a goaltender import.'

That was during sum mer 2016, immediately following her graduation from Lake Forest. Unable to find a 2016-17 team to play for, she was told to stay connected in case something opened up in the near future.

"The assistant coach told me to stay in contact for the next season and they would also be looking for forward imports as well," Carter wrote. "I got the assistant coach in touch with my best friend who I grew up playing on Little Caesars with, Cassidy Tucker (of Plymouth).

"She was going to be a senior forward at Prince-ton University and wanted to play in Europe the following season. Both of us stayed in touch with the coach throughout the (2016-17) year. "At the end of the Salzburg Eagles season, the coach reached out to us and asked if we want ed the spots for the 2017-18 season.

Going for it

Although Carter was working full time as a risk analyst, "I knew this was too good of an opportunity to pass up. I decided to quit my job and sign with the Salzburg Eagles."

Carter moved to Austria about a month ago and began training for the 2017-18 season with practices at Red Bull

And communication hasn't been as much of a problem as one might think

'The new head coach is from Finland and is able to speak Finnish and some English, while most of the girls on the team are fluent in German and English," she continued. "So the coach communicates to all of us in English, since that is the only language everyone can communicate in.

"The language barrier hasn't been as difficult as I thought it would be, but I would like to learn German to be able to say and understand the basics. The native language in Austria is a dialect of German, but German would be the language I would study.

The economics graduate also fully understands that the chance to play women's pro hockey in Áustria, Italy, Germany, Hungary and Kazakhstan is not going to set her up for life.

During her time so far in Europe, Carter has not gotten homesick. Of course, it helps to stay in touch via modern devices such as the iPhone.

I also have friends already planning trips to visit, which gives me some-thing to look forward to Having one of my best friends from home playing on the team with me has helped with being so far from home.

Tough as nails

When Carter is on the ice (she takes after her dad, who also was a goalie, by the way), she is a bulldog competitor who plays bigger than her dimunutive size might suggest.

'Carter is a great competitor and loves hockey," Lake Forest head coach Carisa Wahlig told Natalie Bober for an article in the Chicago Tribune. "She can handle pressure, be counted on by her teammates and is one of the hardest working goalies I've ever had the pleasure to coach.

Road to state finals goes through No. 2 Mercy

Marty Budner

Farmington Hills Mer-cy's volleyball program has been nothing short of sensational this millen-

Since 2000, the Marlins have captured 16 district championships 14 straight since 2004 four regional championships and they have played in two final fours. In 2010, Mercy lost the state championship game to Catholic League rival Bloomfield Hills Marian

Veteran head coach Loretta Vogel, in her ninth season after taking over for Ed Moeller in 2007, believes continuity has keyed the program's success.

"I think what makes us successful is the coaching staff remains fairly consistent," said Vogel, who is assisted by Mallory Kopa, Andrew Thompson, Derek Wililams and Charisse Youmans. "We've all worked together, we know each other and everyone has the same philosophy, so that makes it easy.

'Whether it's our JV or our freshman programs, they are trained with the same concepts.' she added. "I truly believe it creates that success. There is never a surprise. Every year, it's the same thing

A postseason oddity

While the wins keep piling up, there has been a bit of an oddity to Mercy's state tournament lives lately. The Marlins have suffered seasonending losses to the eventual state champion in each of the past three years.

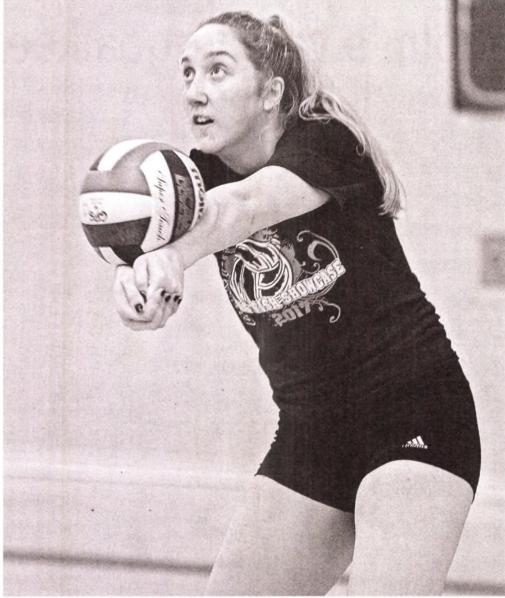

In 2014, Mercy captured the regional crown, but lost in the quarterfinal to Romeo, which went on to defeat Novi in the Class A state title game. The past two seasons, Novi ended Mercy's sea-son in the regional championship game and went on to win back-to-back state titles.

"I guess we like to look at it as they have to get by us," Vogel said. "We've really faced some competitive programs over the years on this side of the state. There's Romeo, Dakota has had a strong program, there's Seaholm and the list goes on. On this side of the state, there are some very successful programs."

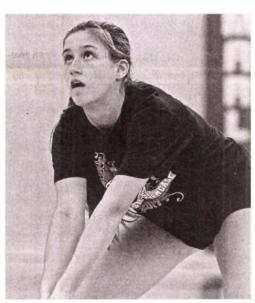

Lauren Hunter, a Milford resident in her fourth varsity season, said Mercy has always played well, but other teams have earned the right to advance.

I think of it as more of a good thing and it's not really frustrating that we lost to those teams," Hunter said. "I feel like (the other teams) won the state championship and they deserved it. I feel like we went out of the tournament to the right team. If we would have beaten them, I think we could have won the state championship."

The Marlins are ranked No. 2 in the state, trailing only Rockford, by the Michigan Interscholastic Volleyball Coaches Association. They own a 15-3 record - two losses to Rockford — and already have scored championship hardware after winning both the Notre Dame Prep and Mercy tournament titles.

"I'm happy where the girls are at right now," Vogel said. "I think the girls really put in the time. We just come in every day at practice and we work on things. We always try to step back and realize what we do in practice today.

Vogel's two seniors are Hunter and Libby Miodonski.

Hunter heads into the 2017 campaign as one of Mercy's top outside leftfront hitters. An honorable mention all-state pick last year. Hunter is also considered a strong on-court leader.

Miodonski missed all of last year because of an ACL injury, but remained close to the program by serving as a team man ager. Vogel is overjoyed to have her back on the Shields (libero) and Jess Mruzik (outside hitter) are a few other players Vogel is counting on. Murzik made third team all-state last year as a freshman.

"Everyone has done some really nice things for us," Vogel said. "The girls are very competitive and I think that's what makes this year special for everyone.
"I think the strength of our team is that we think the game. We have that strong mindset," she added. "We get excited, but it's not a guessing game with us. We have a true thought process.

Looking to improve

Mercy simply looks to improve by the time the Catholic League and state tournaments roll along. The Marlins would love to add a 15th straight district crown to their showcase and challenge for a spot in the final

"I knew we would be good this year, but I am very impressed with the level of play of the new varsity girls this year,' said Hunter, a freshman on the 2014 team that lost in the quarterfinals to Romeo. "They are very mature and they know what's expected of them. They all know how to work hard and do their part.

"I have been playing for the past three years and we have a lot of returning players who were starters coming back. We play well to-gether and we understand each other's per-sonalities. We understand how to motivate one another and we know how to get a lot out of one another. We're a confi-

Assimilated nicely into CC

Over the summer, Sofran accepted the job as Catholic Central's admissions enrollment manager. He later agreed to assist Anderson by serving as quarterbacks and receivers coach.

Sofran has assimilated nicely into the Shamrocks program, although he admits there is still a sentiment for the Warriors players he once coached.

"I feel like it's one of those things, like I've know those kids at Rice so well and there is all positive feelings for the types of kids they are," Sofran said "Yet, at the same time, the staff at CC the community and the players at CC have been amazing at welcoming me into their campus.
"I'm a CC staff member now, so I'm obviously rooting for the Shamrocks to be successful," he added. "But I do have a heart for the guys at Rice, because I've known them since they were freshmen. It should be a great game and, being the Boys Bowl again, it's

The teams enter their annual clash each with a 2-2 record. Oddly enough, the teams have met 61 times over the years and the series is dead even at 30-30-1.

A special game to play

Sofran is well aware of what it's like to both play and coach in the popular Boys Bowl. He said it's a special game to play.

"It's funny. The coaches have joked a little bit with me about being a

Brother Rice alum," he said. "I've kind of jokingly said that, if you just exchanged jerseys on both teams, you really wouldn't notice the difference in the kids because they all work hard, they're coachable and they love playing the

"They're fortunate that they get to play in the game. I get to see it as a coach, but it's great to be part of the game as a player and that's what matters. It's an important game (this year) in the standings for both pro-grams and I know Brother Rice will be prepared and ready and I know we will as well.

"It's good Catholic League football and it is what it is," he added. "It's a great rivalry because it's two great programs and two great schools which have had a lot of tradition.

Catholic Central began the Boys Bowl in 1944, when it hosted Boys Town out of Nebraska The game ended in a 14-14 tie at Briggs Stadium (later Tiger Stadium) in Detroit.

Martin enjoying new life as Seaholm's varsity goalkeeper

Marty Budner

Zachary Martin is making the most of his first year on Seaholm's varsity boys soccer squad.

The Maples had a wealth of goalie talent last season, including seniors Joey Kopmeyer and Matt Roskiewicz. Kopmeyer started the majority of games, led the Maples to the Divi-

and finished his career as an all-state honorable mention selction. Martin waited in the wings, gaining valuable playing time as the junior varsity's starting goalie. Now a senior, Martin has successfully made the jump to varsity and is backstopping the Maples to great results.

Second-year Seaholm head coach Jared Vince said he explained to Martin last year that playing junior varsity might be the best thing for him, since Seaholm already had two established varsity goalies.

"(Kopmeyer) was going to get the lion's share of time on varsity because he deserved it at the time," Vince said. "And I had that conversation with (Martin), because I knew he should have been a varsity player, but he just wasn't going to get any playing time behind Joey and our backup Matthew Roskiewicz, who also was a fantastic goalie.

'Zach was 100 percent OK with being a starter on JV and he was a leader for that team," he added. "He got almost every minute of playing time with the JV and that was the hope, is that he got a lot more experience and playing time so that, when he did get to varsity, he'd have those minutes under his belt. I do think it helped him. It's better to play than to sit and watch."

Learning experience

Martin acknowledged that last year was a tremendous learning experience. He knew he wasn't going to get much action with Kopmeyer between the pipes. "(Kopmeyer) was a very good goalie. I looked up to him and he taught me some stuff," Martin said. "He taught me how to warm up and I just loved watching him. I loved watching how he played and how hard he played. I watched how he was a good leader and I try to be the same way.'

Martin has helped lead Seaholm to a 5-2-4 record this fall, posting four shutouts through the first 11 games and with a .570 save percentage and a 1.36 goals-against average. He's also stopped a couple of penalty kicks.

For his most recent efforts — which included a sensational performance against district rival Groves, when he posted a 10-save shutout — he was voted as the Hometownlife.com Athlete of the Week.

"I had a great game against Groves. They out-possessed us and they were getting a lot of shots on us," Martin said.

"I was lucky that I guessed right and came up with a couple big saves and I was happy with how I performed

"I love the way my defenders have been playing in front of me They have participated in the shutouts, too. It's not just me," he added. "There have been a couple games that we tied that I think we could have done better, but we're looking pretty good right now.'

Vince couldn't be happier with Martin's play. 'Zachary is a leader on the team in so many ways. He's a vocal leader and he's kind of like my second coach on the field," Vince said. "He's a good guy who all the other players look up to. And on top of that, he's a fantastic goalkeeper.

"He has composure and confidence and has come up with some big saves for us so far this vear. He came up with key PK saves against Groves and Harrison and that's just a couple high-lights of a lot of highlights for him. We just count on him out there. "He has a boldness and an awareness which allows him to make saves," he added. "He's quick and agile and doesn't give up. He plays with a ton of confidence."

Another strong season

Seaholm is in the midst of another strong season despite the fact it is returning just four starters from last year's squad, which finished with a 10-3-5 record after falling to Grand Blanc, 2-1, in a very tightly-played regional semifinal game.

Returning seniors Hagen Cunningham, Grant Davis, Ryan Ramaekers and Taylor Ufford have played key roles in helping Seaholm contend for the OAA White Division title this year. The Maples are in a heated battle with North Farmington, Lake Orion and Groves for first place

Cunningham leads Seaholm's offense in total points with five goals and four assists. Ramaekers (four), senior Zachary Ziegler (four) and sophomore Jake Krivan (three) are the Maples' other multiple goal scorers through 11 games.

Davis, Ufford, senior Noah Fritz and junior Nick Nowacki are the defenders who have been so helpful in keeping the opposition from gaining quality scoring chances on Martin

"It's a brand new team in a lot of ways, with a lot of kids new to varsity," Vince said. "We've had a couple injuries with starters who are out for the season, but they are all brothers. They are totally united and they are great with each other on and off the field.

"They have this desire to win and they don't give up," he added. "We're developing, working as a unit together and figuring out where everyone fits. It's been really good so far. I've inherited a good program."

ymouth alums come back to lead Wildcats

Tim Smith

The Plymouth girls swim and dive team is being led by a former standout performer, Emily Weiner.

She takes over the Wildcats' helm, four years after finishing her prep career as captain of Plymouth's swim squad. Weiner, 22, demonstrated leadership capabilities back in high school, too, as a captain for three years.

After high school, she went to Michigan State University, where she earned a degree in education.

In addition, she coached a summer club team in Ann Arbor for five years, helping instruct swimmers between ages 5-17. Another Plymouth alum also joins the new coaching staff as one of Weiner's former Wildcats teammates, Lydia Plencner, is the assistant swim coach. Plencner also was a captain for two years at Plymouth and has coached a summer club team in Canton.

Both are joined by returning dive coach

Allison Turner. Plymouth's roster includes Liz Breda, Vy Nguyen, Abby Boyer, Regan Peregord, Sneha Sundar, Alyssa Yang, Molly Baumgart, Chrissy Brown, Grace Maclellan and Sanjana Nagamangala, who all have had early season success at dual

Livonia United finally gets the green light

After some stops and starts, high school girls in the Livonia Public Schools district finally will get the chance to play prep hockey.

The fledgling girls team will be called Livonia United and will include players from the three high schools in the district — Churchill, Franklin and Stevenson.

A logo is in the works, with McGowan Sport Shop in Livonia to make the uniforms

"I wasn't going to give up or take no for an answer," coach Janine Martinez wrote in a text message. "This is a Livonia team that needs to skate in Livonia to get support from family, friends, younger girl hockey players and classmates.

"This season will be a rough one, but we need to start it now and not wait after 15 years.

Martinez struggled for a couple of years to turn an idea into reality. Soon, that reality will hit the ice as players will begin practices Oct. 30 at Devonaire Ice Arena. Games in the Michigan Metro High School Girls Hock ey League are set to begin in November, with the first home game Nov. 13 at Eddie Edgar Ice Arena. According to Martinez, the complete schedule is still being finalized. There will be fundraisers at Buffalo Wild Wings and Panera, with 20 percent of restaurant sales to go to the team. An email blast also will be sent by Livonia Public Schools.

In an email, Martinez said the team needs as much community support as possible.

"We could use a few more players," she wrote.
"We are making history and hoping (for) many years and success to come.

Plenty of action as Seaholm, Groves play to scoreless tie

Marty Budner

Neither Seaholm nor Groves scored a goal as they renewed their crosstown rivalry on the pitch Thursday, but that didn't mean the game was de-void of action.

Far from it. The teams put on a dazzling display of physical, emotional soccer at Falcons Field before an enthusiastic crowd. The Maples controlled the first part of the open-ing half, while the Falcons finally found their legs later and took over play just before halftime. Groves played most of the second half at Seaholm's end without denting the net.

'It was a fun game of soccer to watch tonight," Groves head coach Jonathan Turner said.

Goalkeepers Zachary Martin from Seaholm and Christion Williams from Groves were simply outstanding.

Following are five takeaways from the en-tertaining Oakland Activities Association White Division battle:

PLAY OF THE GAME

Martin, Seaholm's senior goalkeeper, easily was the star of the game. Martin made the key play by stopping Groves midfielder Alberto Whitmer on a penalty kick seven minutes into the second half. After being taken down in the box, Groves' senior captain was awarded the PK, which he launched to the middle right side of the goal. Martin lunged to his left, reached as far as he could and knocked the ball away. But Martin wasn't

The ball stayed in play up the rebound. Martin picked himself up and blocked a point-blank shot. Again, the ball went to the far right of the field and Martin was forced to make a third save to keep the game scoreless.

"Yeah. I'm pretty good on those (PKs). I just keep the players guess-ing" said Martin, who ing," said Martin, who has now stopped three PKs in a row. "I have to get on my defense to get there if I save it, but sometimes they are just waiting for me to save it. But, I thought I played a good game today and I was happy with my performance.

"There were a lot of shots," he said. "I thought we played hard. We didn't possess well. They possessed well and tired us out. They got a lot of shots on us but luckily I was able to hold up.

Martin finished the game with 10 saves in registering his third shutout of the season Martin is playing superb in the net in his first varsity season as he's finally getting a chance after the graduation of all-star goalie Joey Kopmeyer. Turner said Martin, who has a 1.37 goalsagainst average, simply turned the game around. "Obviously, the PK you want to get, but their goalie made a great save," Turner said. "(Alberto Whtimer) did a good job and put it to where he needed to put it, but the goalie just made a heck of a save. Kudos to

"We didn't convert on those chances after the PK. That's soccer unfortunately," he added.
"That's why I love soccer and hate soccer at the same time.'

CHRISTION COMES THROUGH

Williams was overshadowed by Martin's excellent performance, but the returning Groves goalie was forced to make a few key saves imself to keep the M ples off the scoreboard.

The biggest save, perhaps, came midway through the second half.

Forward Hagen Cunningham, Seaholm's second-leading scorer this season, made a run down the left side. As he turned the corner into the box, Cunningham snapped a shot that forced Williams into a diving save.

Williams also stopped Cunningham with a sliding save as time expired in the first half.

It was two of four saves he made in the game - two in each half.

"Christion did a great job," Turner said. "For 75 minutes, he didn't see any action, then for, like, one minute he sees something and he had a chance to stand on his head and he did it. Their goalie was a lot busier in the second half.

FRUSTRATING NO DECI-SION

Turner wished his squad could have put home one or two of its numerous scoring oppor-

Groves enjoyed 10 shots on goal compared to Seaholm's four, but the Falcons couldn't dent the net behind Martin. The result left the Falcons with a 4-4-3 record. The Maples are 4-1-3.

We controlled most of the game in the second half and we just didn't find a way to connect at the end," Turner said.

times. They were defi-nitely putting numbers behind the ball and kind of protecting the back there. It was hard for us to kind of find that.'

Groves did kick the ball into the Seaholm net with 11 seconds left in the second half. However, the refs had blown the ball offside and the Maples had obviously let the play go by.
"I think the one at the rithink the one at the end there was pretty close to being onside," Turner said. "It looked close but, either way, that's soccer. One of the hardest things to do in soccer is score a goal and that's what happened tonight.'

YELLOW CARDS ARE PULLED

The aggressive play at both ends of the field resulted in five yellow cards being pulled as the referee maintained control of the game.

Both teams were giv-en one yellow card in the first half. Groves had two yellow cards in the second half — one to an assistant coach on the sidelines — and Seaholm had another.

"When you play a rivalry, things just tend to pick up," Turner said. "These guys know each other and they want to go out there and battle and it just tends to be a little bit more physical, which is part of the game. We expected that.

"I always say the first tackle should be the hardest, because it sets the tone of the game," he added. "Seaholm did a good job. They came out and they were prepared and (Seaholm head coach) Jared (Vince) did a good job. We just didn't find the net tonight. which was unfortuna

HEAT OF THE NIGHT

The unusually warm evening resulted in a number of players cramping up throughout the battle. At one point in the second half, a player from each team had to be attended to for cramping.

USA Hockey looking for new Rushmore

Tim Smith

If this sounds like your idea of fun, USA Hockey Arena needs you!

Can you skate? » Do you enjoy meeting strangers and having conversations with them?

» Do you relish the chance to go out on a limb — er, out on the ice?

» Do you care if you are seen in public wearing a bald eagle costume? » And are you full of energy, have a fun-loving spirit and want to help promote the sport of hockey to new, young and even longtime fans?

If so, you should stop what you are doing and give Connor Small a phone call at USA Hockey Arena in Plymouth.

The arena is on the lookout for a new Rushmore mascot for the 2017-18 National Team Development Program season, but needs interested candidates to step it up by Oct. 1. "At first glance, it seems fun, easy and may-be just a little goofy," said Denise Ronayne, director of sales and marketing for USA Hockey Arena. "You almost think ... who couldn't do that? I mean, you just put on a fuzzy costume and act silly. But it's really much more than that.

"It's hard to really capture or explain the immense value that our mascot brings to each game. The way in which our mascot welcomes and interacts with our fans, especially our youngest fans, is likely the first time a fan has ever had a chance to interact with our brand one-on-one.

"And fans are very smart. They can tell pret-ty quickly if this mascot is true to the team and loves his job."

Ronayne described Rushmore as a "big skat-ing and walking, nontalking representative of our brand. When our players are on the ice, Rushmore's working hard to do what he can to add the memories of coming to a Team USA

ADULT TICKET PACK-AGES: USA Hockey Arena is offering new ticket packages for the 2017-18 NTDP season, it was announced Wednesday.

The Adult Hockey Package is a price-re-duced season ticket package being offered to all USA Hockey registered adult hockey players, while the Youth Hockey Pass is being offered as a $99 season-long pass for registered youth hockey players ages 12 and under. "We want our USA

Hockey family to come experience USA Hockey Arena," said Scott Monaghan, senior director of operations for the NTDP. "These packages offer great value to our USA Hockey community and are a great way to see some of the best young players America has to offer."

The NTDP also has several ticket packages for the general public, including the recently added College Six Pack option that features collegiate match-ups with Michigan, Michigan State, Ferris State, Miami, Adrian and Utica.

The NTDP also offers a full 36-game season ticket package, as well as flexible 36-game, 10game and six-game flex packs.

More information about all NTDP tickets packages is available at the arena box office (14900 Beck Road) or by calling 734-453-8400.

The home opener for the regular season is 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 13, when the NTDP Under-18 team plays Miami University.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Vanderlinden's Air Force experiences Rocky Mountain high

Brad Emons

Ron Vandenlinden's coaching career in college football has spanned nearly 40 years and his iob never seems to get

The Livonia native has worked under some of the game's most legendary coaches, including Bo Schembechler (Michigan); Bill McCartney (Colorado), who was his high school coach at Dearborn Divine Child High; Gary Barnett (Northwestern); and Joe Paterno and Bill O'Brien (Penn State)

Vanderlinden also spent four seasons as Maryland's head coach (1997 through 2000), but his latest stop has proven to be a slice of heaven after he landed in Colorado Springs at the Air Force Academy, which played Saturday at Mich-

His view out his office window is spectacular, to say the least, just three football fields away from the edge of the Rocky Mountains

"I was out here nine years (at Colorado) and it was really a blessing, because I can't imagine a better place to live," said Vanderlinden, who is in his fourth season as the Falcons inside linebackers coach, "It's a gorgeous place and you're working with America's finest young men. And our coaching staff has nine or 10 coaches that are Air Force Academy grads, so such quality group of guys and coach (Troy) Calhoun is a terrific head coach, terrific person. So it's been won derful coaching here and coming back to Colorado. living in the Rocky Mountain State, where there is so much to do and see.

After spending 13 seasons at Penn State Calhoun gave Vanderlinden an unexpected call and asked: "Are you interested in coming to Air Force?"

Without hesitation, Vanderlinden said, "Ab solutely. I didn't need much encouragement."

After playing under McCartney for Detroit Catholic League power-house Divine Child, Vanderlinden spent four seasons as the starting center at Albion College, where he made aAll-MIAA twice and helped the Britons to a perfect 9-0 record in 1976.

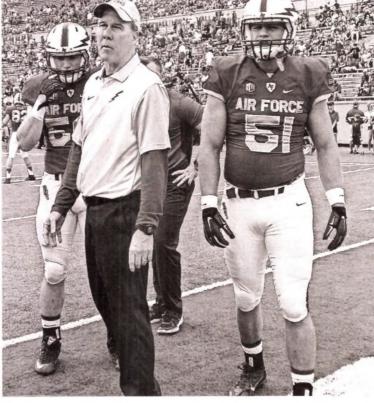

After graduating from Albion in 1978, Vanderlinden got his coaching start as a graduate assistant at Bowling Green, where he earned his master's degree before moving to U-M in 1979-80 as a graduate assistant.

"It was such a neat experience growing up in Livonia and being a fan and having a chance to work for somebody I respected and such a legend," Vanderlinden said of Schembechler. 'Just an awesome experience. My high school coach Bill McCartney was the defensive coordinator and that even enhanced the whole experience

Vandenlinden was hired as a full-time coach at Ball State (1981-82) before reuniting with McCartney for a third time when he served as a defensive assistant at Colorado from 1983-91 The Buffaloes captured the 1990 national championship, along with three straight Big Eight championships. From 1992-96, Vanderlinden served as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at Northwestern, where he played a part in the reversal of fortunes of a struggling football program into a two-time Big Ten champion. Northwestern led the nation in scoring defense in 1995 and played in the its first Rose Bowl since 1936 against Southern Cal.

In 1997, he was hired at Maryland, a team without a bowl game and only one winning season since 1990. In both the Maryland improved significantly during Vanderlinden's tenure, winning more games in 1999 than the previous two years combined.

FORCE ATHLETICS

His staff also recruited players who would be instrumental in the team's meteoric rise in 2001 to an ACC championship, a Bowl Championship Series game and a top 10 final ranking, but after four seasons and a 15-29 record, he was relieved of his duties in College Park and was off to Penn State. Better known as "Linebacker U," it was there he developed a vaunted linebacker unit that included 2005 Butkus and 2005-06 Bednarik Award winner Paul Posluszny, a consensus All-American, along with 2006 All-American and 2007 Bednarik Award winner Dan Connor.

Also part of that talented linebacker corps was Livonia Clarenceville High's Tim Shaw. who played six seasons in the NFL (before being diagnosed in 2014 with "This is my 40th year and I feel very, very fortunate to have worked for not only outstanding football coaches - because you can make an argument for any one of them because they're a Hall of Famers - but they're also outstanding human beings," Vander-linden said. "And coach Calhoun is the same, so I've been really fortunate to work for ethical, really good people who are also outstanding football coaches."

Vanderlinden has witnessed the transformation of college football in many different regards during his lengthy career, starting with the elimination of preseason two-a-day practices.

It's not the grind it used to be," Vanderlinden said. "And I think television has influenced the game greatly with all the start times and stop times. Instant replay has changed the game - and I think in a positive way. Finding and recruiting changed dramatically during his coaching career.

"Everything is about prospects has also

facilities in recruiting," Vanderlinden said. "And I think the sportsmanship has taken a back seat in some regards to just the whole bragging and recruiting part of it.

Meanwhile, defending opposing new-age offenses also presents its own unique challenges, with the passing game and running quarterbacks.

"We're an option team, but so there are so many spread teams - out of the shotgun - that run the quarterback effectively and make you defend it," Vanderlinden said. "And now the run-pass option part of the game - we refer to it as the RPOs where it's a run called, but it's the quarterback's discretion whether he wants to throw it or hand it off. That has really changed the game defensively, as well. If you watched the Ohio State and Oklahoma game, they were throwing that ball down the field. But they were running a run play, but the quarterback (Baker Mayfield) was just slinging it. So it really makes it hard to defend that.'

Calhoun, in his 11th season at Áir Force, is 78-53 overall. He is an Air Force grad who also spent time in the NFL as an assistant at both Denver and Houston. The Falcons are coming off an 10-3 season and bowl win in 2016.

Air Force won its season opener Sept. 2 over VMI, 62-0.

The 61-year-old Vanderlinden isn't contemplating retirement just yet. The view out his office window is just too good to pass up.

"I still enjoy the game, the young people and it's a great place," he said. "I take it day-to-day.

PREP ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

ZACHARY MARTIN

BOYS SOCCER SENIOR BIRMINGHAM SEAHOLM MAPLES

WHAT HE DID: In his first year as a starting goalie, Martin helped Seaholm salvage a 0-0 deadlock against district rival Groves on Sept. 14 with a sensational 10-save performance that included a dramatic stop of a second-half penalty kick. Counting a recent shutout of Oxford, Martin now has four shutouts on the season with a 1.37 goals-against average.

Readers came out in droves to vote for their favorite prep athletes. With the highest vote total this year, Seaholm's Zachary Martin received 20,066 votes to edge out Northville volleyball player Hannah Grant with 17,575 votes.

WHAT HE SAID ABOUT BEING NAMED AOW: "My family was really excited and they were all really going hard on the voting. They were excited to see my name up there so they voted a lot, and the same for our school. They tweeted it out and I got a lot of votes and I'm happy about that. It's an exciting honor." Martin also credited his teammates, especially his defenders, in helping him register the shutout.

ave you had to bounce around a bit? Worried your recent job history will appear a bit erratic to potential employers? Though job hopping is becoming less and less stigmatized, and more and more employers and recruiters are sensitive to the particular challenges of the marketplace and the current economy, there are still some situations where it's best to downplay all your job activity.

Here are six ways to handle employment gaps on your

1. Summarize

If you don't already have a summary paragraph at the top of your resume, now's the time to add one. Use it to define yourself and then to guide the recruiter through the bullet points and information she's about to take in. Use it to show how best to interpret your multiple recent job changes, and what narrative to take away from that. Giving a recruiter a greater narrative should stick with him or her.

And, if you're worried that recruiters might think you'd be a flight risk, emphasize in your summary that you are looking for a long-term position, or to be somewhere for the long haul. Get out in front of
