Livonia honors fallen police officers

Fifth annual ceremony recognizes their work

Susan Vela Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICHIGAN

Linda Nehasil sometimes wishes she had persuaded her husband to abandon policing.

Those moments vanish because she's convinced her husband's death derailed a crime spree.

Larry Nehasil was pursuing one of two brothers wanted in connection to dozens of burglaries throughout the region when he and the other man died in a Jan. 17, 2011, shootout.

Police officers, along with their friends, family and supporters, gathered Tuesday at Larry Nehasil Park to pay their respects during the fifth annual Livonia Police Memorial Ceremony.

Nehasil's widow attends whenever she can. To her, the memorial means community, the police department and remembering.

"I never want him to be forgotten. He died doing what he loved doing," she said of her husband. "He was good at it. He had a lot of awards for his police work. He was a good man."

Area man takes aim at Nat Geo with long shot

Troy Cini went to great lengths to get the perfect shot.

The Northville native flew to Iceland, rented a car and drove to a remote area along its east coast with the Atlantic Ocean and at the bottom of a mountain range and waited for the weather to clear to capture the northern lights in all their glory.

He has entered the image, titled "Illuminate," in National Geographic's "Your Shot" travel photography contest.

"I knew I wanted to capture the northern lights, it was a challenge with a good reward," Cini, a 2015 Northville High School graduate, said. "Every good photo takes time, this one took a little more to dial everything in."

In Cini's shot, a green glow from the Aurora Borealis, a natural light phenomenon in the sky that occurs when electrons collide in the upper reaches of the Earth's atmosphere, can be seen just above the Vestrahorn mountain, topped and backlit by voluminous stars in the night sky.

Cini's travel buddy Austin Ashley is shown gazing upward with a headlamp casting a small circle of light dwarfed by the heavens' performance, as he stands on the edge of the Stokknes beach. In the foreground, the northern lights are reflected in the ocean, making for a surreal photo that combines perfect elements of land, water and sky.

Cini, who takes more down-to-earth shots of academic and athletics subjects as an in-house photographer for the University of Michigan, said travel photography is a hobby for him.

He went to Iceland from Jan. 22-29 specifically with the northern lights in mind, having researched locations and time of year to best view the phenomenon.

They camped out in their rented SUV and ate peanut butter and jelly sandwiches waiting for bad weather, including snow and a biting wind, to clear.

The photograph was taken close to midnight Jan. 24 with a wide angle lens on a Sony A7SII.

Cini said he knew right away what he had snapped.

"I knew this was the shot, it took my breath away in that moment," he recalled. "The sky lights up, it was not a very full moon, you can still see the mountain range."

"It's not something a lot of people get to see in their lifetime."

How to keep backyard safe from flooding

Ed Wright Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICHIGAN

While it hasn't rained quite enough yet this spring to dig out the blueprints on how to build an ark, the heavens have opened up frequently, sending creeks that snake through subdivisions in Canton and Plymouth perilously close to residents' homes.

Plymouth-based Friends of the Rouge's Matthew Bertrand is widely considered an expert on backyard-flooding prevention.

Although there are no 100-percent guarantees to stop water from rising dangerously close to homes, Bertrand has offered these five tips to aid in combating the problem:

■ Garden to soak up the rain water. Plant rain gardens using native plants, trees and shrubs.

■ Update your home with anti-flood technologies, including permeable pavers and dry wells; disconnect downspouts; and install sump pumps and rain barrels.

■ Keep a natural vegetative buffer between your lawn and any water. Don't mow lawns to the edge of rivers and streams.

■ Find peace with wet grass. Many Rouge neighborhoods were built on wetlands, and will always be wet.

■ Advocate in your community. Understand how new developments can impact your property in terms of water.

After reviewing a photo of a creek that runs through Canton's Sunflower subdivision, Bertrand offered the following observations:

"It looks like exactly what I would expect from a creek flowing through an area where development practices took minimal consideration of the aesthetics, health or safety of local waterways," Bertrand shared. "Intense spring rains flood off of hard surfaces with minimal control, creating flooding threats on streets and in creeks."

"Then, in the dry summer, the water runs low and perhaps even stinky because water in the spring flooded away without soaking into the ground."

What are homeowners doing right?

"I see signs of some new tree plantings along the creek," Bertrand said. "Trees are a great way to control

Big Boy making a comeback in Garden City

Ed Wright Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICHIGAN

Following a string of recent Big Boy restaurant closures in metro Detroit over the past five years — Canton, Plymouth, Livonia, Farmington, Milford, etc. — entrepreneur Al Baydoun is going against the grain by taking the wraps off a new red-and-white-checkerboard-themed eatery at 28340 Ford in Garden City.

The venture is a full-circle life experience for Baydoun, who started working as a dishwasher at a west Dearborn Big Boy when he was 14 years old.

And judging by the establishment's jam-packed parking lot April 29 — approximately one month after the place opened — his decision looks brilliant.

"I worked at Big Boy for several years and I've always worked for somebody else; this is an opportunity for me to get to a point where I can say I've accomplished one of my dreams," Baydoun said. "I'm finally here where I belong."

Among the restaurant's approximately 50 employees are three of Baydoun's six daughters and several of his nieces and nephews.

"Big Boy has always been about family, so I'm so happy I can work alongside my family," he said. "It makes it more special than it already is. Also, the community has been wonderful since we opened. I've had so many people come up and tell me thank you."

"This is Big Boy the way it should be: good food, good service and a good experience for diners."

From the windows to the cooking equipment and everything in between, the restaurant is brand new with the exception of the actual structure, Baydoun said.

The structure was originally built as a Big Boy location in the 1960s. It was closed and transitioned to an eatery called "Toast," which closed in 2016.

The Garden City franchise's opening is just the tip of the iceberg in Big Boy's southeastern-Michigan resurgence, said Big Boy Restaurant Group, LLC CEO David Crawford.

"We're planning to add 20 restaurants in Michigan in the next two years, which will get us back to 100 in the state," Crawford said. "We have three or four more in the books set to open in southeastern Michigan.

"The local restaurants that have closed in the past few years were due to a highest-and-best-use-of-land situation, not because Big Boy wasn't profitable."

One of Big Boy's most appealing attractions is familiarity, Crawford said.

"As many innovations as we try to make, it's still the Big Boy, Slim Jim and buffet that bring people back," he said. "I can do some fun stuff — we have a great research-and-development chef — that we can put together ... but it's really the familiar menu offerings that people want."

The future of Big Boy will not be absent of innovation.

The company has added an Impossible Burger vegan option to its menu and will be testing a "fast-casual" model in Southfield this summer that will allow guests to walk in, order and enjoy a sit-down dinner with no need to tip.

Crawford raved about the Garden City location.

"I love it," he said. "They've only been open a month and it's doing gangbusters, which shows that the emotional connection of Big Boy is there in the community."

Officers

"It's weird to say. I'm proud of how he died. He was ready. His training prepared him for that moment. He did what he was supposed to do."

Those gathered prayed and lit candles to honor the department's fallen officers: Nehasil; Ervin Johnston, who died in 2007; James Kelley, who died in 1992; and Patrolman Sidney Dethloff, who died in 1952.

They also paid tribute to Detroit Police Officer Fadi Shukur, who died after being injured in an August hit-and-run incident; retired Livonia Police Sgt. William Bryant, who died in April; and James McCann, a former Livonia city councilman and longtime district judge, who died Saturday.

"Tonight, we come together to remember the ultimate sacrifice made by four Livonia police officers during their service to our community and one Michigan police officer who died in the line of duty in 2018," Livonia Police Chief Curtis Caid said. "We come here to this beautiful park to pay tribute, to celebrate the lives of the fallen, to offer support to the family, friends and coworkers as they continue forward."

The ceremony included pledges, prayers, presentation of a wreath and a three-volley salute. Those attending applauded police officers' relatives for their own sacrifices.

Former Livonia Police Chief Robert Stevenson was the keynote speaker. Now serving as executive director of the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police, he told the crowd he's frequently asked why anyone would want to become a police officer. He always responds that policing is a great and noble profession.

"I know of no other career that has the excitement, camaraderie and responsibility of policing," he said. "Mix into that the opportunity to solve problems, help others in their time of need and maybe save a life, it adds up to a most rewarding career."

Stevenson also shared the downside, which he contends as negative media coverage, social media attacks, and "riots and protests about police actions that are ultimately judged to be perfectly proper and legal."

Stevenson said a study found that

Linda Nehasil, widow of Larry Nehasil, was a special guest at the ceremony.

Hundreds of community members turned out for the Fifth Annual Livonia Police Memorial Ceremony on Tuesday.

2018 saw an increase of law enforcement officers shot and killed while doing their jobs. And then there are the problems shared throughout the region — too few applicants and not enough women and minorities in the applicant pool.

"It's tough," Stevenson said. "I've hung up my badge, but I can tell you I'm grateful for the men and women in uniform that protect me and my family every day. I'm grateful for all their sacrifices."

He told the crowd about the more than 2,000 people who packed a church on a bitterly cold January 2011 day to honor and celebrate Nehasil's life. Stevenson delivered the eulogy that concluded with a vow to always remember the fallen police officer.

"I sincerely thank all of you for coming out tonight ... to help me keep that vow, not only to Larry but every police officer who gave their own for us," Stevenson said.

Rita Bryant lost her husband, retired Sgt. William Bryant, last month. Surrounded by family members, she was a special guest at the ceremony.

"It was beautiful," she said, "and he would have been honored."

A financial checklist every new parent needs

Money Matters
Rick Bloom
Guest columnist

Last week I became a great-uncle again as my niece, Jennifer, gave birth to a beautiful daughter. It got me thinking that I haven't written an article in a while about what parents of a newborn child should do from a financial and legal standpoint.

When you have a newborn child, one of the first things you should think about is their college education. I recognize that is at least 18 years down the road; however, we all know how ridiculously expensive college has become, and you cannot start saving too soon.

One of the best ways to save for college is through a 529 plan. 529 plans allow you to invest money in pre-selected portfolios and that money will grow tax deferred until the child is ready for college.

When the money is withdrawn for college, as long as it is used for qualified education expenses, all withdrawals are tax free. In fact, something parents should consider is that as opposed to people rushing out and buying baby gifts and clothes, a better use of that money would be to add it to the education fund.

In today's world there are many options for 529 plans. Not only does Michigan offer an excellent plan, the Michigan Education Savings Plan (www.mi.saves.com), companies like Fidelity, Charles Schwab and Vanguard also offer low cost 529 plans.

One of the keys to selecting a 529 plan is to make sure you can use it for basically any public or private institution in the country. One of the reasons I strongly recommend the Michigan Education Savings Plan is not only can you potentially write your contribution off your Michigan Income Tax Return, but the plan also has very low costs and minimums.

You can start the Michigan Education Savings Plan for as low as $25.

The second area that new parents should look at is their will. When you have a child, one of the most important responsibilities as a parent is to make sure that if something happens to you, the child is protected. The way you do this is to make sure you have a guardian named in your will.

In naming a guardian, make sure you ask the person if they want to be a guardian. You may be surprised how many people don't want that responsibility.

Another item that you should look at when you have a newborn child is to make sure you have the proper amount of life insurance to protect the child if something happens. I don't believe insurance is an investment, and I don't think you should either. Rather, insurance is a means of risk management, and the question you ask yourself is, if you pass away, is there enough money for the family?

Insurance is one way to make sure your family has the resources to continue on. In that regard, for the great majority of young parents, I would recommend term insurance. Term insurance allows you to actually buy the amount of insurance you need. Some employers have options to purchase insurance at a very affordable price.

Having a newborn child is wonderful and exciting; however, it also comes with a fair amount of legal and financial responsibilities. When you are single without dependents, you can afford to let certain things slide; however, when you're a parent of a newborn, you have much greater responsibilities, and the sooner you begin to tackle them, the better it will be for you and your child.

Good luck!

Canton teen involved in fatal collision

A Canton Township teenager was in stable condition after a fatal collision early Tuesday morning on Belleville Road in Van Buren Township, according to the township's public safety officials.

The 64-year-old man from the township, whose name was not disclosed, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Public safety officials said in a report they were called to Belleville Road, south of Ecorse Road, around 2:30 a.m. because of the crash.

The 17-year-old's vehicle apparently was southbound on Belleville Road when he crossed the center lane and struck the northbound vehicle.

The teen was transported to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

Livonia PD making use of Neighbors by Ring app

Susan Vela Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICH.

Livonia police officers are lauding the potential of a free mobile app creating a virtual neighborhood watch with posts, video and real-time crime alerts.

The Livonia Police Department officially announced its participation in the Neighbors by Ring app last month.

The app makes use of a map with a ring around the target area.

Users can play with filters that include time periods such as 24 hours, seven days and 30 days.

They'll notice various colored dots that indicate reports of crime, strangers, lost pets, safety risks and suspicious activity.

Click on the dots and users receive more information.

"Two of my neighbors' cars were broken into last night on N. Clements," reads an April 26 post. "I checked my cameras but I have nothing.

"Hoping someone else might have got something."

Users can click on the thumbs-up icon or share the post that comes with a locator map. In this case, several comments were left.

"Another neighbor in your area has camera shots of three people roaming the streets right in that area two nights this week," Neighbor 22 wrote. "You guys need to let the police know."

Neighbor24 offered this advice: "I find 99% of these car break ins are cars that are unlocked. Be sure to lock your car, house and garage doors."

The police department stays connected and, on occasion, has asked officers to do follow-up work or check on reported activity because of the digital posts, Lt. Charles Lister said.

It also can issue advisories to the community. Tips shared with police via the app can remain anonymous.

For police, the app is another tool in their crime-fighting toolbox. They still want residents to call 9-1-1.

"So far, so good," Lister said. "There's approximately, I believe, over 2,000 members in our general area. (And) I think it's growing all the time."

"It gives you a chance to connect with people throughout the community."

The Auburn Hills Police Department also recently invited its residents to connect through the Neighbors by Ring app.

Owned by Amazon, Ring is known for its security products.

To learn more about the app, visit shop.ring.com/pages/neighbors.

William Smith Jr.

FARMINGTON HILLS - William B. Smith, Jr. (Bill), father of five and grandfather of eight, passed away peacefully on Saturday, April 27, 2019. Born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania on June 16, 1919, Bill's family soon moved to Detroit. A whip-smart student, Bill skipped 3rd grade and went on to achieve all A's at Catholic Central High School graduating in 1936. In 2014 he was honored as the oldest living alumni and was gifted with a gold watch he proudly wore until the end of his life.

He attended Wayne State University part-time while working full time as an electrician at General Motors until war broke out and duty called. He joined the Army Air Corps, was sent to Italy and flew 23 missions as a navigator in a B-17 over Germany during World War II.

Thanks to the G.I. Bill, he attended the University of Michigan and graduated in 1947 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Mechanical Engineering. He embraced college life and maintained his relationship with his Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity brothers attending many Alumni events in the Detroit area well into his 90's.

After graduation, Bill went to work for Fisher Body in Hamilton, Ohio. His co-worker set him up on a blind date with his wife's younger sister, Joanne Schloss of Grand Rapids, who swept him off his feet and they married on June 18, 1949. With the arrival of his first child, Christopher, they moved to Detroit and Bill began his career at Ford Motor Company in Product Development. As their family expanded with a second child, Gretchen, they moved to Farmington Township and had three more children, Michelle, Brian and Carol.

Bill and Joanne enrolled their children at the Our Lady of Sorrows Parish school where family, church, and social life were intertwined. For decades there was always a "Smith kid" at Sorrows. Bill happily served the church as an usher helping out whenever needed which made him a familiar face well into his 90's.

Determined his kids would see many National Parks, the family hit the road in the latest model Ford station wagon with a trailer in tow to traverse the country. Eventually a new tradition began - an annual trek to Camp Michigan on Walloon Lake where he learned to sail but especially loved competing in the tennis tournament. His passion for the sport continued and he was a long-time member of the Farmington Tennis Club.

In his 50's, while still working full-time for Ford in Dearborn, his focus on education lured him "Back to School" at his beloved University of Michigan. Unlike Rodney Dangerfield, Bill was a serious student and earned his Masters Degree in Business Administration in 1976. As proud alumni, Bill and Joanne held season tickets and cheered on the Wolverines at the Big House for many decades.

Bill and Joanne were active members of the Farmington Democratic Club and he was very proud of Joanne's rise from Councilwoman to Mayor of Farmington Hills. They made many close friends working together and supporting both local and national campaigns. After retiring from a 44 year career at Ford at age 77, Bill and Joanne traveled the world with the Nomads and U of M Alumni Club to Europe, Asia, Australia, South American and Africa.

After 59 years in Farmington Hills, Bill and Joanne moved to The Rivers Grosse Pointe to be near their daughter, Michelle. Although Joanne passed away in 2017 after 67 years of marriage, Bill still believed in living each day to the fullest. He enjoyed Tai Chi, chair yoga, bingo and, of course, ice cream socials and music concerts. Bill's day always ended in his recliner watching the world news followed by "All in with Chris Hayes." In his final days, he was pleased to know "Middle-Class Joe" had entered the 2020 race.

Bill's greatest joy was his family. A man ahead of his time, he was a "hands on" parent and always available to help with homework, fix a bike tire, play catch in the backyard or give Joanne a break and take the kids on an errand or out for ice cream. This pattern continued with the grandchildren whether it be building a fort from a cardboard box, taking his turn on the Slip n' Slide, or treating the kids to an outing at Marvin's Marvelous Mechanical Museum. He was their biggest fan at concerts, plays, dance recitals and sporting events. For a kid from the east side of Detroit who made it through the Depression, Bill felt fortunate to not only put his five kids through college but also live long enough to celebrate each grandchild earning a bachelor's degree.

Bill Smith was a good man whose zest for life, perseverance, and kindness may explain why you could often find him singing his favorite tune "On the Sunny Side of the Street."

Bill is survived by his children, Christopher Smith; Gretchen Woodward (David); Michelle Smith; Brian Smith (Camille); Carol Smith (Allan Paschke); grandchildren, Elizabeth Woodward Iles (Zack); Katherine Woodward; Christopher Peplin (Katy); Erica Peplin; Scarlett Smith (Max French); Spencer Smith; Kathryn Papoulias; William Papoulias and his dear sister, Marie Mack. He was predeceased by his parents, William and Marie Smith; brother John J. Smith; sister Ellen Frele; and many loving relatives.

His family will receive visitors at the Heeney-Sundquist Funeral Home, 23720 Farmington Road, Farmington on Sunday, May 19 from 3:00 - 7:00 with Prayers and Remembrances at 6:00 p.m. A Funeral Mass will be held at Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, 23815 Power Road, Farmington on Monday, May 20, at 10:30 a.m. (visitation at 10:00 a.m.).

Donations may be made to the Capuchin Soup Kitchen at cskdetroit.org or Catholic Central High School in Novi at catholiccentral.net.

Long shot

He marvels in the memory: He and Ashley were the only ones on the beach at that moment in time.

Now, he is excited to share that moment with the world, through National Geographic. The "Your Shot" contest "seeks to honor photography that inspires, surprises, challenges, and reveals the world around us."

Thousands of entries are submitted from around the world in each of three categories: nature, cities and people.

People's Choice voting takes place from May 13-17 and all entries can be viewed at www.national-geographic.com.

Two independent photographers and one staff editor judge all entries and award first, second, and third prizes for each category. One image is selected as the grand prize winner. Winners will be announced in early June.

Cini knows the competition is fierce and he is just grateful for the opportunity.

"It has just been so neat to see interaction (from readers)," he said. "I just hope that conversation continues."

"It's more about sharing something beautiful."

Plymouth-based Friends of the Rouge's Matthew Bertrand said steps can be taken to prevent flooding along this creek in Canton. ED WRIGHT/HOMETOWNLIFE.COM erosion, reduce storm water runoff, and cool the surrounding environment.

"They also tend to raise property values. Southeast Michigan communities generally need to do a lot more tree planting. We lost so many trees to disease and pests."

What improvements can be made?

"Fifteen feet away from the creek on either side, replace turf grass with native plants (a riparian buffer). This helps reduce erosion at the stream edge, and reduces pollution to the creek," Bertrand advised. "Your neighbors should do all they can to soak storm water into their home landscape rather than letting it flood away."

"They'll be helping to save all the people who live downstream from flooding, and they'll be modeling for everyone upstream the practices that will in turn help save them from flooding."

PREP FOOTBALL

Harrison coach Herrington to receive award

Andrew Vaillencourt
Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICHIGAN

Legendary Farmington Hills Harrison football coach John Herrington will receive the Sparky Anderson Community Excellence Award during the CATCH Golf Prelude Party on July 14 at the MGM Grand Detroit.

Herrington finished his career at Harrison High School, which is closing in June, with a 443-112-1 record — making him the winningest coach in state history.

He also set a record for state titles with 13.

CATCH is a charity founded by Anderson in 1987, when he was manager of the Detroit Tigers, to raise funds for items and services that help improve the quality of life for sick, injured and needy pediatric patients at Children's Hospital and Henry Ford Hospital. Since its founding, CATCH has provided more than $7.5 million toward that mission.

The CATCH party, which serves as an entertaining prelude to the charity's annual Golf Classic the following day at Meadowbrook Country Club, begins at 5:30 p.m. and features food and beverage stations, raffles, silent and live auctions and a chance to mix and mingle with a variety of sports, media and business personalities.

FOX2 Detroit News Anchor Amy Andrews will again serve as MC.

Partygoers will have a chance to bid on a variety of unique auction items, including a spot for two people to play in the Lexus Champions for Charity National Tournament — a 54-hole event in December with rounds at Pebble Beach

LIVONIA STEVENSON POUNDS PLYMOUTH

Andrew Vaillencourt
Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICHIGAN

After his team finished off an 11-2 blowout win against reigning league champion Plymouth, one would think Livonia Stevenson coach Rick Berryman would be happy with the way his team played.

However, the veteran coach was quick to say what his team needed to do better going forward: bunting.

"It was very frustrating. We worked on it all week," Berryman said. "We've got to get the bunt down or it'll be a disaster. We missed on some early scoring opportunities and let them come back."

He added that it will continue to be a focus moving forward.

Stevenson improved to 11-5 overall with the win, and remains atop the KLAA East standings. Plymouth has struggled in recent weeks, and has slipped to fourth place in the KLAA West.

It was a close contest through five innings. The Spartans attempted a handful of sacrifice bunts, with only one a success.

That lack of success provided some entertaining and humorous moments on the field as Berryman voiced his displeasure.

The Grand Valley State club hockey team was the Division 3 national runner-up earlier this year, cruising through the ACHA playoffs before falling to Sault College.

The tournament was played in Frisco, Texas.

It's the first time the team has ever made the ACHA finals. More than a dozen members of the team hail from the Hometown Life area, including the team's senior goalie, Andrew Rozenbaum, of Livonia.

"Nationals was an experience the team and I will never forget," Rozenbaum told gvsuclubsports.com. "Being able to go up against that competition and to spend more time with the team was awesome. The experience means more than words can describe for our team. Even though the tournament didn't end how we wanted, the whole team will have memories that will last a lifetime."

The local members of the team are:

- Brendan Olepa, freshman, Canton
- Easton Schlatterbeck, freshman, Livonia
- Nick Salisbury, sophomore, Livonia

Plymouth boys win park championship

Andrew Vaillencourt
Hometownlife.com
USA TODAY NETWORK — MICHIGAN

The Plymouth boys lacrosse team secured its second straight park championship Monday.

The Wildcats defeated rival Canton, 19-4, improving their record to 12-3 on the season and 7-2 in the KLAA.

Plymouth came out strong, scoring the first five goals; however, Canton battled back with three consecutive goals narrowing the gap to 5-3 in the first quarter. The Wildcats responded throughout the rest of the game and were able to dominate possession, making it challenging for Canton to get scoring opportunities.

The Wildcats defeated both Canton and Salem to earn the park title.

Plymouth's offense was led by Carson Miller (three goals, two assists), Harrison Albano (four goals, one assist), Ethan Rottell (two goals, two assists) and Griffin Connell (two goals, two assists).

Brendan Allen and Ian Gozdor each had two goals and an assist. David Brace, Gavin Roach, Michael Izzi and Grant Caswell each scored once, while Sam Peterson tacked on an assist.

The Plymouth defense was led by Josh Montroy, Tyler Schewe, Brayden Goebel, Jae Yoon, Cenzi DeFelice, Ben Zwarka, Grant Caswell, Cooper Zale, Zac Lowder, Mike Mathias, Ben Wetzler, Jackson Wernstrom, Blake Nowicki, and Cam Bump. Nick Schoen was excellent at the face-off X winning 76% of the face-offs.

Plymouth was scheduled to play in the KLAA Championship against Hartland on Wednesday at Hartland High School, after deadline.

Stevenson

He says he's always been a proponent of bunting, especially in high school games where kids are more prone to errors and misplays.

"In high school baseball, you're making kids field it. You're putting pressure on them and the other pitcher. We want to play for a lead early," Berryman said. "This isn't Earl Weaver and the three-run homer. The air is dead here, it doesn't carry. I've always been an advocate of bunting. In big games that are close, if you watch a lot of high school baseball, it always comes down to who bunts better in the end."

Senior catcher, and the team's No. 3 hitter, Bobby Cavin, laid down the team's only sacrifice. He also added two singles and a double.

"A lot of people think it's crazy to have me bunt, or any of the big hitters, but when it comes down to it, if your bunt gets down, you have to trust the person behind you to get the run in," Cavin said. "In college, you have to know how to bunt or you're not going to hit, everybody bunts no matter if you're the first hitter, fourth hitter or ninth hitter."

Cavin is signed to play baseball at Oakland University next season.

He wasn't just a standout at the plate against the Wildcats. He also threw out a runner attempting to steal and caught the entire game. Junior Nate Waligora started on the mound for Stevenson, and was solid. He lasted five innings and allowed just two runs while striking out seven.

"He hasn't pitched in so long because of all the rain-outs," Berryman said. "You try to get your bullpens in, but now we're throwing back inside. He battled. Not his best stuff, but he battled and that's what's nice to see."

Waligora was brilliant through three innings, allowing only two batters to reach base. He allowed both his runs in the fourth, before tiring in the fifth with three walks.

"He never gives up, he's always a dog, even when we went 'down' 2-2," Cavin said. "He kept on fighting, he kept us in the game. The thing I love about Nate the most is that he never gets down on himself, he always makes sure the team is up, that's how we rallied and got that win."

He helped himself out at the plate too, with two hits and three RBIs. Nick Olsen had three RBIs as well for the Spartans. Their lineup has had a knack for putting up huge numbers all season long.

"It's a real blessing (being in this lineup)," Cavin said. "I love all my boys, this is my senior year, so it's my last year with them. From top to bottom, all we do is hit the ball. We do what we have to do for the team to get a run."

The Spartans blew the game open in the sixth, when they scored eight runs.

They batted around and chased two different Plymouth pitchers.

Kai St. Germaine was the lone bright spot for Plymouth. He pitched four innings and allowed two runs while connecting for a two-run single at the plate.

Stevenson hasn't won a KLAA division title since it won the Central in 2013, but the school hasn't won a division and played for a conference championship since it did so in 2011. Both Berryman and Cavin think this team could snap the streak.

"They're getting there," Berryman said. "They've worked very hard. Granted, they don't do everything right, but I'm also very demanding. They have the skill and talent to win the division."

Cavin added that it'd be a huge accomplishment for the team and that the formula is simple: keep playing quality baseball. The Spartans have big-time games next week, when they face Livonia Franklin, one of two teams right on their heels.

"I think we have enough pitching that can get us to the top," Cavin said. "Everybody hits and if we keep on doing what we have to do as a team, quality hits, quality pitching, quality defense, I believe that we can be at the top of the division when it comes down to it."

Credit card chips are effective but threats remain

Matthew Frankel
The Motley Fool

Over the past few years, chip-based credit cards have become almost universally issued in the U.S., so if you're reading this and have a credit or debit card, there's a good chance that it has a chip in it.

Technically, these credit cards with chips are known as EMV cards. This originally stood for "Europay, Mastercard and Visa," which were the companies that developed the standard for the technology.

In a nutshell, EMV chips have a small microprocessor that generates a one-time code for every transaction. In other words, instead of a magnetic stripe encoded with your credit card number, expiration date and other personal information, an EMV card never sends the same information twice.

The idea is that if a hacker obtains payment information from an EMV card, it will be information that was unique to a past transaction, and therefore would be of no use for future theft.

Is your credit card chip safe?

The short answer is yes, but only when it comes to one specific category of credit card theft. Evidence has shown a significant decline in credit card fraud in countries where EMV card technology has been implemented on a wide scale.

Having said that, the reality is a bit more complex. While EMV chips have cut down on overall credit card fraud, that doesn't mean they're 100% effective.

With that in mind, here's a rundown of the major benefit of chip credit cards, as well as some of the shortcomings of the technology.

■ Your card is more difficult to replicate. One common form of credit card theft throughout the past couple decades involves a thief essentially cloning your credit card. They obtain your credit card number and other information through a data breach, via a skimming device, or through some other means and encode the information on the magnetic stripe of another card. They then could use the cloned card to pay for purchases, which then would be billed to your account.

Now, it's not impossible to obtain your personal information from an EMV credit card, but it's much more difficult. In a data breach, for example, credit card information obtained from EMV cards would be of no use to a criminal. Cloning an EMV credit card would require extremely sophisticated methods and expensive equipment and generally is impractical to do.

Meanwhile, a card skimmer can be made with basic materials and at a bare minimum of expense.

■ Scanning devices still can steal your credit card data. It also is important to realize that thieves can steal your credit card's data even if your card doesn't leave your pocket if your credit cards are RFID (contactless-payment) enabled. There are devices that allow thieves to steal your credit card information through the air, even if your credit card is in your wallet.

Some thieves can even do this with their smartphones, not requiring a specialized device.

■ Having a chip does nothing to prevent your physical card from being stolen. The fact that there is a chip in your credit card doesn't prevent a thief from stealing your card and using it to make purchases. EMV transactions don't require a PIN, so if a criminal gets their hands on your card, they could make purchases with your card by simply inserting your chip and signing your name.

The bottom line

How safe are credit card chips? They are certainly safer than magnetic stripe technology, but there still are several ways thieves could potentially commit credit card fraud. The point is that just because you have a wallet full of chip-based credit cards doesn't mean you shouldn't take additional steps to protect yourself.

True data security means being proactive about keeping your information safe and detecting when your credit card data may have been compromised.

Spring cleaning: Declutter gadgets

Jennifer Jolly
Special to USA TODAY

Thanks to decluttering diva Marie Kondo, spring cleaning is expected to hit an all-time high this year. A recent survey by the American Cleaning Institute shows a record 77% of households plan to clean up, clear out, and address the mess of our modern lives.

Since e-waste is the world's fastest-growing trash stream and April is Earth Month, there's an even stronger sense of renewed responsibility to declutter your e-clutter.

Clear out before you clean up

One of the key trademarks of the "KonMari" method is to start by clearing out everything unwanted and unused. Think about how much tech junk you have — that drawer full of dusty cell-phones, charging cable chaos and old earphones you haven't touched since you used them with your '80s Walkman. Pile them up, sort them and then sell, trade or recycle them.

There are dozens of ways to do this — but Gazelle has long been my go-to. It takes electronics from smartphones to laptops and everything in between and gives you cold, hard cash in return. The service is stellar, and after you fill out the online forms to send an old device, they send you a prepaid mailer right away.

Gazelle works hand-in-hand with ecoATM, a high-tech kiosk network that gives you cash on the spot as well. Go online to find a nearby ecoATM kiosk. There are thousands of them across the United States, including in many large chain stores such as Walmart. Once you get to a kiosk, put your old phone into the machines' testing area, and the ecoATM handles the rest. It examines your device and then offers you a price based on its condition. If you agree, you get cash right then and there. It even takes severely broken devices off your hands.

If you have a gadget bound for the trash heap, do the planet a favor and recycle it instead. Best Buy is one of the nation's largest retail recyclers of used electronics and appliances, and takes all kinds of used tech, regardless of where you bought it, how old it is or who made it. That's huge because, by 2021, the annual e-waste total is predicted to surpass 60 million tons — the equivalent of 12 million elephants (or 321 Golden Gate Bridges).

App-hoarding help

Most of us are totally overwhelmed by the number of apps on our devices. Analytics company App Annie says the average person has as many as 90 apps on their smartphone but only uses about nine of them per day.

Start by ditching any apps you know you don't use. On iPhones, go to iPhone Storage through your general settings to see a list of apps that take up the most data and when you last used them. On Android devices, Google offers a similar tool called Files. When you see apps you've never used, or haven't used in the last three to six months — get rid of them!

Next, look for apps that solve more than one problem and put them front and center. Facebook Messenger is a great example because it's packed with features you might use several separate apps for, such as sending money, video chatting and sharing photos.

Once you identify how to get the most out of the multitasker-friendly apps you already have, ditch all the apps you just made obsolete and clean up your home screen in the process.

Deep clean your gross gadgets

Now that you've purged and sorted, it's time to deep clean. You've heard by now that your smartphone is seven times dirtier than your toilet — and riddled with about 17,000 different types of bacteria — right? I use two specific gadgets to keep my go-to tech tools pristine.

The HÄNS Swipe-Clean ($15) comes pre-loaded with tech-friendly cleaning solution, so you can just wipe down your smartphone, tablet or other gadgets with cleaner, and then flip the HÄNS over and use the other end to dry and polish. It takes mere seconds but leaves everything squeaky clean.

To go even further, I use the PhoneSoap Go (around $80), a portable, battery-powered UV sanitizer that bathes your smartphone in ultraviolet light that eliminates 99.99% of household germs in 10 minutes. Stick your phone in the PhoneSoap box and the wavelengths of the UV light break down and destroy such germs as E. coli, salmonella, influenza and even the rhinovirus, which is responsible for the common cold.

Spare your air

You know what else is pretty yucky? Our indoor air quality. The EPA warns that concentrations of some pollutants are up to five times higher inside our own homes. The average person spends roughly 90% of their time inside, so shouldn't your air be squeaky clean, too?

For this, you might need to bring a new gadget into your home, so it's perfect for after you purge and clean. I've been using the much-buzzed-about Molekule ($799), which claims to eliminate microscopic air pollutants. It uses a two-stage filter that traps both larger airborne nasties including pollen and pet hair and destroys the much smaller pollutants that standard filters typically miss. It's been working miracles in our rented home that doesn't have a fan in the kitchen and gets smoky every time we cook on the stove. Not only is the smoke gone, but all my coughing at the dinner table has disappeared, too.

The Blueair Blue Pure 211 ($299) is another solid choice, especially on a budget. It scrubs the air of 99% of "fine particles," including smoke, dust and mold, and uses an activated carbon filter to remove nasty odors for up to six months before needing a new filter. We reviewed this one during the Northern California fires last fall.

Cut cord-cutter chaos

Power cables are one of the biggest culprits of tech clutter in every household. So — round 'em up, purge, label and give them a home.

I use TwistieMag (around $20), magnetic, reusable twist ties and rubber bands to keep cables and cords nice and neat. I also use a label maker to mark each cord, then stash everything that goes with each gadget into a baggie. Each tidy baggie then goes into Twill drawer organizer bins ($5-$13) that I pick up at the Container Store. They look quite fashionable sitting on my desk or tucked away in a drawer or on a shelf.

Charging stations are great, too. I use one large, nice-looking leather docking station to put all of our family gadgets on at night — which helps get them out of bedrooms, too (so they don't disturb our sleep). The MobileVision station ($42.95) has multiple slots for several smartphones, tablets and even a laptop.

When it comes to our professional lives, most of us have a clear hierarchy of needs, including a viable salary, acceptable benefits, and responsibilities that align well with our abilities. After all, we spend so much of our lives at work (nearly 90,000 hours over our lifetimes, according to a recent Business Insider article) that it stands to reason that our core needs and wishes should be met in order to make it all seem worthwhile.

But all too often, having a healthy and productive environment doesn't make the list of priorities when we think about what's really important for us to be satisfied at work—and that's a real miss when thinking about your overall career happiness. Need some convincing? Forbes recently reported that "a toxic workplace environment will overtake the culture of any organization, interfering with employee performance, destroying relationships and demotivating top performers. It is important to understand your organization's exposure to such an environment so that strategies are implemented to either eradicate or mitigate its effects."

The question that likely remains for many of you is this: Am I stuck in an unhealthy work environment? Good question—and don't be ashamed if you don't have a clear answer. The truth is, it can be hard to tell what's unhealthy and what's normal and acceptable in a high-pressure, high demand modern workplace, in which "doing more with less" is the new normal. But don't worry, we're here to help you figure out what side you're currently on. Use the following indicators to determine if you're currently in an unhealthy workplace.

GETTY IMAGES

Monitor the avoidance factor

Do you find yourself regularly going out of your way to avoid both people and situations at work? If so, then chances are you're working in an environment with some real unhealthy elements. These can include everything from toxic coworkers to an unsavory and insincere corporate culture that's misaligned with reality. The effects are similar: you dread going to work in the morning and can't wait to leave at the end of the day. Many folks tend to take a "bare minimum" approach to their jobs when in this sort of unhealthy environment—they do just enough to squeak by and stay under the radar. The result? They often deny themselves the ability to evolve in their positions. Staying in a job like this is not a formula for career satisfaction and positive growth.

Do a regular office 'mood check'

Most of us make it a point to check the weather each day before we head out to work, but not nearly enough of us stay on top of our "mood temperature." An unhealthy work environment often has an unfortunate trickle-down effect on people's moods, which makes it a great diagnostic tool for determining if your workplace has problems.

Everyone from top management to their direct reports on down through the organizational chart can feel the impact of an unhealthy environment. If the overall mood of your colleagues (or a few key personnel who have a significant impact on others) is more "doom and gloom" than "happiness and sunshine," you better believe that this has a significant impact on the company's productivity, employee turnover, and long-term success.

Beware of negative spillover into your personal life

The unfortunate reality is this: what happens at work doesn't always stay at work. On top of encroaching on your personal time (if you choose to spend more hours working than you're required to), the effects of an unhealthy workplace can spill all over the rest of your life.

According to a recent Psychology Today article, "If you are so miserable at work that you find yourself miserable at home, in your relationships and with your hobbies than your toxic professional life is seeping into every other aspect of your life. You may find yourself constantly talking about work and complaining about your boss when you should be enjoying your time off. Eventually, your loved ones will become tired of your negative talk and complaining, and your personal life will take a major hit."

If this sounds all-too-familiar to you, then you're likely in an unhealthy work situation and may warrant taking a closer look. If you're curious about whether or not you're currently in an unhealthy work environment, do a serious self-assessment using the information provided here to help diagnose your workplace. If you find more negative than positive, consider taking active steps towards either improving your satisfaction and happiness at work, or finding a new job that will meet your needs.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
